and beholding that veritable world within a world,<sup>b</sup> lifted up his voice. "King of gods and men," he 170 cried, "so then Thou dost not disregard the nation of the Jews, nor do they misreport Thy Providence, but all who say that they do not find in Thee a Champion and Defender, go astray from the true creed. I am a clear proof of this, for all the acts which I madly committed against the Jews I have suffered myself. I allowed them to be robbed 171 of their possessions by giving free licence to the plunderers. For that I had taken from me my heritage from father and mother and all I received by way of benefactions and gifts and other possessions which do not fall under this head. I cast on them the 172 slur that they were foreigners without civic rights, though they were inhabitants with full franchise, just to please their adversaries, a disorderly and unstable horde, whose flattery, to my sorrow, deceived me, and, therefore, I have lost my rights and have been driven in exile from all the habitable world to be shut up here. Some I marched into the theatre 173 and ordered them to be maltreated before the eyes of their bitterest enemies unjustly, and, therefore, justly was I maltreated in my miserable soul rather than in my body, with the utmost contumely; I was not indeed marched into one theatre or one city but was paraded through all Italy to Brundisium and through all the Peloponnese to Corinth and past Attica and

<sup>b</sup> The thought occurs also in De Abr. 159 and De Praem.
41. Cf. De Aet. 4.

PHILO

- 174 τῶν νήσων ἄχρις Ἄνδρου, τῆς ἐμῆς εἰρκτῆς. καὶ πέπεισμαι σαφῶς, ὅτι οὐκ ἔστιν ὄρος οὗτος τῶν ἐμῶν κακοπραγιῶν, ἀλλ' ἐφεδρεύουσιν ἕτεραι πρὸς ἐκπλήρωσιν ἀντίρροπον ὧν εἰργασάμην. ἀνεῖλόν τινας καὶ ἀναιρεθεῖσι πρὸς ἐτέρων οὐκ ἐπεξῆλθον· κατελεύσθησάν τινες καὶ ζῶντες οἱ μὲν ἐνεπρήσθησαν, οἱ δὲ διὰ μέσης κατεσύρησαν ἀγορᾶς, ἕως
- 175 ὅλα τὰ σώματα αὐτοῖς ἐδαπανήθη. τούτων οἶδ' ὅτι ἀναμένουσί με αἱ Ποιναί, καὶ οἱ ἀλάστορες ὡσπερ ἐπὶ βαλβῖσιν ἐστᾶσιν ἤδη καὶ φωνῶντες ἔγκεινται, καὶ καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν, μᾶλλον δὲ ὥραν, προαποθνήσκω πολλοὺς θανάτους ὑπομένων
- 176 ἀνθ' ἐνὸς τοῦ τελευταίου." πολλάκις δὲ ἐδειματοῦτο καὶ διεπτόητο καὶ φρίκη μὲν τὰ μέλη καὶ μέρη τοῦ σώματος κατεσειέτο, φόβῳ δ' ὑπότρομον εἶχε τὴν ψυχὴν ἄσθματι καὶ παλμῶ τινασσομένην, ἅτε τοῦ μόνου παρηγορεῖν τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον ἐκ φύσεως δυναμένου στερόμενος, χρηστῆς ἐλπίδος.
- 177 ὄρνις αἰσιος οὐδεὶς αὐτῷ προυφαίνετο· πάντες δυσοιώνιστοι, κληδόνες παλίμφημοι, ἐπίπονος ἐγρήγορσις, περιδεῆς ὕπνος, ἢ μόνωσις θηριώδης. ἀλλ' ἠδιστον αὐτῷ τὸ ἀγελαῖον; ἀηδέστατον αἱ |
- [543] κατὰ πόλιν διατριβαί· ἀσφαλὲς ὄνειδος ἢ κατ' ἀγρὸν ἐρημία; σφαλερόν, ἀδυσώπητον. ὁ ἡρέμα προσιῶν
- 178 ὑποπτος· "βουλεύεται τι" φησὶ "κατ' ἐμοῦ· ὁ θᾶπτον βαδίζων οὐ πρὸς ἕτερόν τι σπεύδων ἔοικεν, ἀλλ' ἐμὲ διώκει<sup>1</sup>. ὁ ἡδὺς ἐνεδρεύει, ὁ παρησιαστῆς καταφρονεῖ· σιτία μοι καὶ ποτὰ καθάπερ
- 179 τοῖς θρέμμασιν ἐπὶ σφαγὴν δίδονται. μέχρι τίνος ὁ

<sup>1</sup> This sentence is punctuated differently in other editions ὁ ἡρέμα προσιῶν ὑποπτος. "βουλεύεται τι" φησὶ "κατ' ἐμοῦ ὁ θᾶπτον βαδίζων· οὐ πρὸς ἕτερόν τι σπεύδων ἔοικε," κτλ.

FLACCUS, 174-178

the islands to Andros my prison. And I have a clear 174 conviction that this is not the limit of my misfortunes but there are others in reserve to complete the sum and counterbalance all that I did. I killed some and when others killed them took no steps to punish the murderers. Some were stoned, some while still alive were burnt to death or dragged through the middle of the market-place till nothing at all was left of their bodies. That their avenging furies await me 175
I know full well. The ministers of punishment are already as it were standing at the barriers and press forward eager for my blood; every day or rather every hour I die in anticipation and suffer many deaths instead of the final one." He often became frightened 176 and scared and while the limbs and members of his body shivered and shuddered, his soul shaken with his pantings and palpitations quailed with dread.
For the one thing which is naturally capable of consoling human life, the comforter hope, he had lost.
No favourable omen was vouchsafed to him, only all 177 of evil omen, sinister sounds and voices, his waking hours spent in weariness, his sleep full of terrors, his solitude as the solitude of the beasts of the field.
Then was life in the crowd what he craved for most?
No, staying in a city was most hateful of all. Did his lone rural life, a slur though it was, bring safety?
No, danger menacing with shameless insistence.
Someone approaches quietly, he suspects him:
"He is plotting something against me," he says. 178
"This one who comes walking fast surely has no other purpose for his hurry than to pursue me. This bland agreeable person is laying a snare. This frank talker is showing his contempt. My food and drink are given to me as to animals to keep them for the σιδηροῦς πρὸς τοσαύτας ἀντέχω συμφοράς; οἶδ' ὅτι μαλακίζομαι πρὸς θάνατον, ἐξ ἐπηρείας δαίμονος οὐκ ἐπιτρέποντός μοι τὴν ἀθλίαν ζωὴν συντόμως ἀπορρηῆξαι διὰ τινος ὑπερβολὰς ἀνηκέστων κακῶν, ἃ κατ' ἐμοῦ θησαυρίζομενος χαρίζεται τοῖς δολοφονηθεῖσι."

PHILO

- 180 XXI. Τοιαῦτα ἀναπολῶν καὶ σφαδάζων ἐκαραδόκει τῆς εἰμαρμένης τὸ πέρασ· καὶ τοῦ μὲν αἰσυνεχεῖς ὀδύναι τὴν ψυχὴν ἀνεκύκων καὶ ἀνέστρεφον. Γάιος δὲ τὴν φύσιν ὠμόθυμος ὢν καὶ ἀκόρεστος ἐν ταῖς τιμωρίαις οὐχ ὥσπερ ἔνιοι μεθίετο τοὺς ἅπαξ κολασθέντας, ἀλλ' ἀτελεύτητα μηνιῶν αἰεὶ τινα καινὴν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἐμεγαλουργεῖ συμφορὰν· τὸν δὲ Φλάκκον καὶ διαφερόντως ἤχθαιρεν, ὡς καὶ τοὺς ὁμωνύμους ἀλλοτριώσει τῆς
- 181 κλήσεως ὑποβλέπεσθαι. καὶ πολλάκις αὐτὸν μετανοια εἰσήει, διότι κατέγνω φυγὴν, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ θάνατον, καὶ τὸν παράκλητον αἰδούμενος ὅμως ἠτιᾶτο Λέπιδον, ὥστ'<sup>1</sup> ἐκεῖνος ἀπηγόρευσε φόβῳ τῆς καθ' αὐτοῦ τιμωρίας· ἐδεδίει γάρ, ὡς εἰκός, μὴ παραίτιος ἄλλῳ γενόμενος κουφοτέρας δίκης βαρυτέραν αὐτὸς ἐνδέξεται. μηδενὸς οὖν ἔτι τι τῶν εἰς παραίτησιν λέγειν θαρροῦντος, ἀμειλίκοις καὶ ἀφέτοις ἐχρήτο ταῖς ὀργαῖς, αἶ, χρόνῳ δέον ἀμαυροῦσθαι, παρεθῆγοντο μᾶλλον καθάπερ αἱ ἐν τοῖς σώμασιν ὑποτροπιάζουσαι νόσοι· τῶν γὰρ προτέρων
- 183 εἰσὶν ἀργαλεώτεραι. φασὶν οὖν, ὅτι νύκτωρ ποτὲ διαγρυπνῶν εἰς ἔννοιαν ἤλθε τῶν ἐν τέλει φυγάδων, ὀνόματι μὲν ὑποπτευομένων ἀτυχεῖν, βίον

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ὡς.

<sup>a</sup> Or perhaps "desisted from pleading."

FLACCUS, 179-183

slaughter. How long shall I steel my heart against 179 all these misfortunes? Yet I know that I do not boldly face death. For my destiny in its malignancy does not permit me to cut abruptly the thread of my wretched life, because there is still a huge stock of deadly ills which it treasures against me as boons to those whom I treacherously murdered."

XXI. Such were the wild thoughts that he re- 180
volved as he waited anxiously for the fated end.
And continual pangs kept his soul reeling in confusion. But Gaius, naturally ruthless and never satisfied with the revenges he had taken, did not like some others show clemency to those who had been punished once, but always in his unceasing anger was preparing some great new blow to inflict upon them. He hated Flaccus especially, so much so that in his dislike of his name he looked askance at all who shared it with him. He was often seized with regret 181 that he had condemned him to exile instead of death and censured his intercessor Lepidus, in spite of the respect which he had for him, so that Lepidus was prostrate<sup>a</sup> with fear of finding himself punished. For he naturally dreaded that by helping to lighten the sentence of another he would himself incur one still more severe. So as no one had any longer the courage 182 to plead for mercy Gaius allowed his fierce passions to range unsoftened and unbridled, passions which were not blunted, as they should be, by time, but grew still more sharp-edged like relapses in bodily disease, which are more severe than those which preceded them. And so they say that one night as he lay awake 183 his thoughts turned upon the exiles of high rank, how though nominally they were supposed to be people in misfortune they had really secured a life

PHILO

δ' ἀπράγμονα καὶ ἡσυχάζοντα καὶ ἐλεύθερον ὄντως 184 περιπεποιημένων. μετετίθει δὲ καὶ τὴν κλῆσιν ἀποδημίαν προσαγορεύων· “ ἀποδημία γάρ τις ἐστίν ” ἔφασκεν “ ἢ τῶν τοιούτων ἔλασις ἐχόντων ἄφθονα τὰ ἐπιτήδεια καὶ σὺν ἀπραγμοσύνη καὶ εὐσταθείᾳ ζῆν δυναμένων· οὓς ἄτοπον εἶναι τρυφᾶν ἀπολαύοντας εἰρήνης, βίον καρπουμένους φιλόσο-185 φον.” εἶτα προστάττει τοὺς ἐπιφανεστάτους καὶ ὦν πλείστος ὁ λόγος ἀναιρεθῆναι, γραφὴν δούσ ὀνομάτων, ἧς ἠγείτο Φλάκκος. ἐπεὶ δ' ἤκον εἰς “ Ἄνδρον οἷς κτείνειν διείρητο, Φλάκκος μὲν ἐτύγχανεν ἀγρόθεν εἰς ἄστὺ παραγινόμενος, οἱ δ' ἐκ τοῦ
 [544] λιμένος ὑπηγντίαζον, | καὶ πόρρωθεν ἀντιπροεῖδον
 186 ἀλλήλους. ὅθεν συναισθηόμενος ἐφ' ὃ σπεύδουσι—μαντικώτατον γὰρ ἢ ἐκάστου ψυχῆ, καὶ μάλιστα τῶν ἐν κακοπραγίαις—ἐκτραπόμενος τῆς ὁδοῦ διὰ τραχείας ἔθει φεύγων, ἐπιλεησμένος ἴσως, ὅτι νῆσος ἀλλ' οὐκ ἠπειρός ἐστίν, ἐν ἧ τί ὄφελος ὠκυτότος, περικλειούσης θαλάττης; ἀνάγκη γὰρ δυοῖν θάτερον, ἢ προσωτέρω χωροῦντα κατὰ τοῦ πελάγους ἐνεχθῆναι ἢ συλληφθῆναι πρὸς αὐτὸ τὸ 187 πέρασ ἦκοντα. βέλτιον ἄρ' ἐν συγκρίσει κακῶν ἢ κατὰ γῆν τῆς ἐν πελάγει φθορά, ἐπειδήπερ ἀνθρώποις καὶ πᾶσι χερσαίοις οἰκειότατον ἢ φύσις χωρίον ἀπένειμε γῆν, οὐ μόνον ζῶσιν ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀποθανοῦσιν, ἢ ἢ αὐτὴ καὶ τὴν πρώτην ὑποδέχεται γένεσιν 188 καὶ τὴν ἐκ τοῦ βίου τελευταίαν ἀνάλυσιν. οἱ δ'
 400

FLACCUS, 183-188

of release from business, of tranquillity and true liberty. He proposed also to change the title from 184 exile to residence abroad, "for," said he, "the banishment of such people is a sort of residence abroad where they have abundance of necessaries and can exist released from business and in general well-being and it is preposterous that they should luxuriate in the enjoyment of peace and the advantages of the philosopher's life." He then ordered that the 185 most distinguished and those who were held in the highest account should be put to death and gave a list of the names headed by that of Flaccus. When the persons appointed to execute him arrived at Andros, Flaccus happened to be passing from the country to the town, and the party from the harbour came forward to meet him. When they were at some 186 distance they saw him and he saw them and thence inferred the purpose which was urging them on. For the soul of every man is highly prophetic, particularly in distressing circumstances. He struck out from the road and raced away from them through the rough ground forgetting, perhaps, that Andros is not the mainland but an island in which speed is no use since it is enclosed by the sea. For there are only two possible alternatives, to go on farther and fall into the sea or to be caught on arriving at the very edge. And surely if we compare two evils it 187 were better to perish on the land than in the sea, since nature has assigned the land to men and all the creatures that dwell on it as the most appropriate place not only in their lifetime but at their death; it received them when they first came into existence, it should also receive them when they finally depart from life. The assassins never lost a moment 188

PHILO

- ἀπνευστὶ διώκοντες καταλαμβάνουσι· καὶ οἱ μὲν εὐθὺς ὄρυττον βόθρον, οἱ δὲ πρὸς βίαν εἶλκον ἀφηνιάζοντα καὶ κεκραγότα καὶ διαπαλαίοντα· ὧν χάριν καὶ σύμπαν κατετρώθη τὸ σῶμα καθάπερ τὰ
- 189 θηρία ταῖς πληγαῖς ἐπιτρέχων. ἐμπλεκόμενος γὰρ καὶ τῶν κτεινόντων ἔλλαμβανόμενος, νῦν μὲν ἐπιφέρειν τὰ ξίφη κωλυομένων, ἐγκαρσίους δὲ πληγὰς καταφερόντων, αἴτιος ἐγένετο βαρυτέρων ἑαυτῷ συμφορῶν· διατμηθεὶς δὲ καὶ διακοπεῖς χεῖρας, βάσεις, κεφαλὴν, στέρνα, πλευράς, ὡς ἱερείου τρόπον κρεουργηθῆναι, ἔκειτο, τῆς δίκης σφαγὰς ἰσαριθμούς τοῖς φόνοις τῶν ἐκνόμῳς ἀναιρεθέντων Ἰουδαίων ἐνὶ σώματι βουληθείσης ἐργάσασθαι.
- 190 καὶ ὁ μὲν τόπος ἅπασ αἵματι κατερρεῖτο διὰ πλειόνων φλεβῶν, αἱ κατὰ μέρος διεκόπησαν, κρουνηδὸν ἐκχεομένῳ<sup>1</sup>· συρομένου δ' εἰς τὸν ὄρωρυγμένον βόθρον τοῦ νεκροῦ τὰ πλεῖστα μέρη διελύετο, τῶν νεύρων κατεσχισμένων, οἷς ἡ κοινω-
- 191 νία συνεδεῖτο πᾶσα τοῦ σώματος. τοιαῦτα καὶ Φλάκκος ἔπαθε γενόμενος ἀψευδεστάτῃ πίστις τοῦ μὴ ἀπεστερηῆσθαι τὸ Ἰουδαίων ἔθνος ἐπικουρίας τῆς ἐκ θεοῦ.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐκχεομένων.

FLACCUS, 188-191

in pursuing him. When they caught him some of them at once dug a pit while others violently dragged him along, resisting and screaming and struggling hard, the result of which was that as wild beasts do, he ran upon the blows and had his whole body pierced with wounds. For, as he clutched hold 189 of the slaughterers and was so entangled in the scramble with them that they had no room to apply their swords directly but dealt their blows downwards and sideways, he caused himself to suffer more severely, and with hands, feet, head, breast and sides slashed and cut to bits, he lay carved like a sacrificial victim. For it was the will of justice that the butcheries which she wrought on his single body should be as numerous as the number of the Jews whom he unlawfully put to death. The whole place 190 was flooded with the blood which poured out like a fountain from the many veins which one after the other were severed, while as his corpse was dragged into the pit which had been dug, most of the parts fell asunder as the ligaments which bind the whole body together in one had been rent. Such was the 191 fate of Flaccus also,<sup>a</sup> who thereby became an indubitable proof that the help which God can give was not withdrawn from the nation of the Jews.

<sup>a</sup> i.e. as well as Sejanus? See Introd. p. 295 note a.

HYPOTHETICA
(APOLOGIA PRO IUDAEIS)

INTRODUCTION TO EXTRACTS FROM THE HYPOTHETICA

WE have no information about the two extracts which are here reproduced beyond what Eusebius tells us, namely that the first is taken from the second book of a work entitled by Philo "Hypothetica," in which the author is writing a defence of the Jews, and that the second comes from the "apology for the Jews," while in his history (ii. 18) when giving a list of the works of Philo he mentions one Περὶ Ἰουδαίων. The general assumption is that these three are one and the same.<sup>a</sup>

Of the second extract, which describes the Essenes, nothing need be said here, as some remarks on its relation to Philo's other account of these communities will be found in the Appendix. The first extract is divided into two main parts and both of these again have two sub-divisions joined together by the phrase μετὰ βραχέα φησίν. Very little discussion so far as I can learn has been devoted to it, though in many ways it is very curious and interesting.<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Certainty of course is not attainable. Though the title given to the second extract expresses what he says is the substance of the contents or part of the contents of the first, surprise may still be felt that the titles should be different.

<sup>b</sup> The longest discussion known to me is in Bernays' Gesammelte Abhandlungen, pp. 261-282. This principally deals with the meaning of the name "Hypothetica," and with certain phrases, particularly ἄ τις παθεῖν ἐχθαίρει, μὴ ποιεῖν

PHILO

The opening part gives the impression that he wishes to meet the hostile criticism of the Gentiles by giving a rationalistic version of the history. The Exodus is described as the movement of an increasing population seeking a fresh living-room and inspired by a yearning for their own natal land of which the Pentateuch knows nothing. The divine influence is indeed admitted but has been given through dreams and visions, a strange way of treating the visitations described in Exodus. The divine mission of Moses is kept very much in the background and the observer is invited to choose between natural explanations of the fact that he led the people successfully through the wilderness. When we come to the occupation of Palestine any appeal to the miraculous victories of Joshua is definitely set aside, and outsiders are left to choose between two possibilities, one that it was due to superior force, the other that the virtues of the incomers won the αὐτόν and ἃ μὴ κατέθηκε μηδ' ἀναιρεῖσθαι (7. 6) and with the Buzygia (7. 8). Heinemann in his Bildung, pp. 352-358, discusses some aspects of the description of the Mosaic laws in the Hypothetica, particularly the glaring differences between it and the Spec. Leg., such as the indiscriminate assignment of death as a penalty. It is interesting to note that he says these differences had led Cohn to express a doubt as to the genuineness of the fragment. Heinemann himself does not actually repudiate this suspicion, but says that he does not consider it convincing, largely because of the inconsistencies in Spec. Leg. itself. It certainly seems to me that the style as well as the substance of this part of the first extract is rather unlike Philo, but while it is no doubt possible to deny the genuineness of the first extract without impugning that of the second, the pieces which Eusebius describes as from the Hypothetica must stand and fall together, and the concluding piece on the Sabbath seems to me, as I say below, thoroughly Philonic.

HYPOTHETICA

respect and submission of the native population. I find it difficult to understand the motive of Philo in this treatment of the story, or of Eusebius in recording it, for Eusebius's purpose is to give an account of the Mosaic constitution as it is depicted by the two most distinguished Jewish writers, and on this it has no bearing.<sup>a</sup>

The second part of the extract, which does describe this constitution, is at least in the first subdivision curious in another way. We naturally compare it with the vastly longer and fuller account in the four books on the Special Laws and the De Virtutibus. The scope of the two is so hugely different that we should not expect more than the smallest fragment of the great Exposition in these few pages. The strange thing is that they contain so much which is ignored in the Exposition. There we hear little about the subjection of women, or of the inviolability of dedicated offerings or of the ways of obtaining release from these on which so much stress is here laid, or of the minor duties of supplying water, fire and burial. Humanity to animals is stressed in both, but the one law bearing on this which is mentioned here is not noticed there. The contrast no doubt is partly accounted for in the words where he states his intention to note the unwritten as well as the written, but only partly to my mind.

<sup>a</sup> There seems to me to be a remarkable similarity between the Hypothetica and the Contra Apionem on many points. See notes. I do not know whether this has been taken into account by scholars in discussing Josephus's possible indebtedness to Philo. Thackeray, who notes resemblances in his preface to the translation of the Antiquities (see note in vol. vi. of my Philo, p. xvii), says nothing about it in his few lines of preface to the Apion.

PHILO

The second subdivision of this second part on the other hand, which deals with the observation of the sabbath, does not contradict anything that we find elsewhere in Philo. The account of the meetings in the Synagogue is much the same as that given in his description of the Essenes in the Quod Omn. Prob. and of the Therapeutae in the De Vit. Cont. and of the nation as a whole in Spec. Leg. ii. 62, and the stress laid on the sabbatical year both as a tribute to the land itself and an act of charity to the poor is thoroughly in his spirit.

The meaning of the title is obscure. The theory of Viger that it means "suppositions," between which those addressed are invited to choose, only fits the opening sections, and was superseded by that of Bernays, who suggested that it meant exhortations or directions on conduct. Bernays shows that not only is ὑποθήκαι often used in this sense but the ὑποθετικὸς λόγος is a technical term for a discourse with this object. The examples he quotes show that the hypothetical discourse has a close connexion with the protreptic, the term which Philo so often uses, and that in one case at least it is to be distinguished from the latter as the summary of counsels which closes the discourse.<sup>a</sup> Still this does not seem to agree with the nature of the treatise so far as we can judge it from the specimens which Eusebius records. A hortatory discourse is a very different thing from a defence, at least, a defence of this kind. Bernays indeed quotes a passage in which the closely connected if not identical protreptic is stated on the one hand to show the high worth of virtue and on the other hand to convict those who deny or accuse or otherwise defame philosophy.<sup>a</sup> But this does not apply to the opponents whom Philo is refuting. They do not attack the philosophy of the Law as he represents it, but either deny or are not aware that the Jews have any such philosophy.

<sup>a</sup> ἐπεισενεκτέον τὸν ὑποθετικὸν λόγον, δι' οὗ τὰς πρὸς τὴν ἀσφάλειαν καὶ τὴν ὀρθότητα τῆς ἐκάστου χρήσεως ὑποθήκας ἐπιτομαῖς ἔξουσι (Bernays, p. 267).

HYPOTHETICA

The text of these extracts is not included in the Editio Maior of Cohn. As here printed it is that of the Editio Minor. It is not stated who is responsible for this, and there is no Apparatus Criticus. I have however carefully compared the text with those of Heinichen 1842, Dindorf 1867, and Gifford 1903, in their editions of the Preparatio. Gifford has such an apparatus, and in his introduction gives a full account of the manuscripts of which he obtained collations. I am not aware of any later edition.

The following is an analysis of the two extracts :

FIRST EXTRACT, viii. 6. 1-9, 7. 1-20

Part I. The first subdivision (6. 1) gives a short account of the causes which led to the Exodus from Egypt. The second subdivision (6. 2-9) suggests for consideration different explanations of the success of Moses in leading the people through the wilderness (2-4) and of the conquest of Palestine (5-8) and ends with an emphatic assertion of the devotion of the people through all the centuries to Moses and the Law (9).

<sup>a</sup> τοὺς ἀνασκευάζοντας ἢ κατηγοροῦντας ἢ πως ἄλλως κακοηθισμένους τὴν φιλοσοφίαν ἀπελέγχει.

PHILO

Part II. The first subdivision (7. 1-9) gives a general sketch of the Mosaic constitution, contrasting its severity with the laxity of Gentile law and practice (1-3), particularly dwelling on the inviolability attached to vows and dedications (3-5). Other laws and customs are mentioned largely dwelling on duties of charity and mercy (6-9). The second subdivision (7. 10-20) describes the Sabbath as an institution intended mainly to provide opportunities for studying the law, gives a short account of the meetings and commends the universal knowledge of the Law which they effect (10-14). It then passes on to the sabbatical year, described as a proper relaxation for the land itself (15-18) and as a charitable institution, because the fruits which grew from it untilled were at the service of the poor and needy (19-20).

SECOND EXTRACT, viii. 11. 1-18

This is merely another description of the Essene communities, a general description (1-2), the mature age required for admission (3), their simple and communal life (4-5), their industry and practice of every kind of innocent activity (6-9), how the proceeds are put into a common bank (10-11), even clothes being held in common (12), their care for the sick and aged (13), their repudiation of marriage and exclusion of women, with some of their reasons for so doing (14-18). A final eulogy (18).

The references to chapters in the eighth book are those in all editions of the Preparatio. The references to sections with the chapters are those in Cohn's Editio Minor. Sections are also numbered in

HYPOTHETICA

Heinichen's edition, but do not correspond to these. Gifford has no such sections, but gives the pages of Viger's edition with subdivisions a, b, c, d. I have noted these pages but not the sub-divisions. I have also noted the pages in Mangey, vol. ii. They are to be distinguished from the others by the square brackets.

ΥΠΟΘΕΤΙΚΩΝ

(ΥΠΕΡ ΙΟΥΔΑΙΩΝ ΑΠΟΛΟΓΙΑΣ)

355

[626]

Euseb. Praep. Evang. viii. 5. 11. Φέρε λοιπὸν καὶ τὸ πολίτευμα τῆς κατὰ Μωυσέα νομοθεσίας ἐκ τῶν παρὰ τοῖς ἀνδράσι διαφανῶν θεασώμεθα. πρῶτα δὲ θήσω Φίλωνος τὰ περὶ τῆς ἀπ' Αἰγύπτου πορείας τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἣν πεποιήνται Μωυσέως ἡγουμένου, ἀπὸ τοῦ πρώτου συγγράμματος ὧν ἐπέγραψεν Ὑποθετικῶν, ἐνθα τὸν ὑπὲρ Ἰουδαίων ὡς πρὸς κατηγοροὺς αὐτῶν ποιούμενος λόγον ταυτὰ φησιν·

6. 1. Τὸν μὲν παλαιὸν αὐτοῖς πρόγονον ἀπὸ Χαλδαίων εἶναι, τὸν δὲ λαὸν ἀναστῆναι τοῦτον ἐξ Αἰγύπτου μετωκισμένον ἀπὸ Συρίας τὸ πάλαι, μυριάσι τε ἀμυθήτοις πλήθοντα καὶ τῆς γῆς οὐκ οὔσης ἱκανῆς, πρὸς δ' ἔτι καὶ νεότητι φρονημάτων ἐντεθραμμένον μεγάλως καὶ ἅμα τοῦ θεοῦ διὰ φασμάτων καὶ ὄνειράτων ἕξοδον αὐτοῖς δηλοῦντος, καὶ οὐδενὸς ἦττον εἰς πόθον κατὰ δαίμονα ἐμπε-
[627] σόντας τῆς πατρίου καὶ ἀρχαίας γῆς· | ὅθεν δὴ καὶ τὸν πρόγονον ἐκείνον αὐτοῖς κατελθεῖν εἰς Αἴγυπτον, εἴτε τῷ θεῷ δὴ δόξαν εἴτε προνοίᾳ τινί, <καὶ>

<sup>a</sup> Eusebius follows this extract with another from Josephus, c. Apion. ii. 163-228, to the same effect.

<sup>b</sup> As the sequel shows that Jacob, not Abraham, is intended, Mangey wished to emend this to Canaanite. But Moses himself is said by Philo to be a Chaldean by race (Mos. i. 5).

HYPOTHETICA

(APOLOGY FOR THE JEWS)

Euseb. Praep. Evang. viii. 5. 11. Let us proceed to survey the constitution established by the legislation of Moses as described by authors<sup>a</sup> held in high honour among the Jews. I will begin by quoting Philo's account of their journey from Egypt under the leadership of Moses from the first book of the work which he entitled Hypothetica, where, while speaking in defence of the Jews as against their accusers, he says as follows :

6. 1. Their original ancestor belonged to the Chaldeans,<sup>b</sup> but this people who had emigrated from Syria to Egypt in past time removed from Egypt partly because of the vast size of the population for which the land was insufficient. Also it was due to the high spirit of enterprise in which they had been bred and to the revelations of God made by dreams and visions bidding them go forth, and what influenced them as much as anything was that they had providentially<sup>c</sup> been seized by a yearning for their ancient fatherland. It was from there that this ancestor of theirs had passed over into Egypt either because God had so decreed or through some prevision of his own.

<sup>c</sup> κατὰ δάιμονα, as L. & S. says, in ordinary usage means little more than τύχη, with which it is sometimes coupled, but in Philo's mouth perhaps something more, though hardly so much as Gifford's "under divine inspiration."

PHILO

πάντων εὐδαιμονῆσαι μάλιστα, ὡς ἀπ' ἐκείνου μέχρις εἰς τὸ παρὸν τό τε ἔθνος αὐτοῖς καὶ γεγενῆσθαι καὶ διαμένειν καπὶ τοσοῦτον ὑπερβάλλειν εἰς πολυανδρίαν.

6. 2. Καὶ μετὰ βραχεία φησίν·

Ἄνῆρ γε μὴν αὐτοῖς ἠγγεῖτο τῆς τε ἐξόδου καὶ τῆς πορείας εἰς οὐδέν τῶν πολλῶν, εἰ βούλει, διάφορος· οὕτω καὶ ἐλοιδόρουν γόητα καὶ κέρκωπα λόγων. καλῆς μέντοι γοητείας καὶ πανουργίας, ἐξ ἧς τὸν γε λαὸν ἅπαντα ἐν ἀνυδρία καὶ λιμῶ 356 καὶ τῶν ὁδῶν ἀγνοία καὶ ἀπορία τῶν συμπάντων οὐ μόνον εἰς τὸ παντελές διεσώσατο [καὶ] ὥσπερ ἐν εὐθηνία πάσῃ καὶ παραπομπῇ τῶν μεταξὺ κειμένων ἔθνων, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς ἀλλήλους ἀστασιάστους αὐτοὺς καὶ πρὸς ἑαυτὸν μάλιστα εὐπειθεῖς διεφύλαξε. 6. 3. καὶ ταῦτα οὐκ ὀλίγον δήπου χρόνον, ἀλλ' ὅσον οὐδ' οἰκίαν ἐν ὁμοφροσύνῃ συμμεῖναι μετὰ πάσης εὐθηνίας εἰκός ἐστιν. καὶ οὐ δῖφος, οὐ λιμός, οὐ φθορὰ σωμάτων, οὐχὶ φόβος περὶ τῶν μελλόντων, οὐκ ἀγνοια τῶν συμβησομένων, ἐπὶ τὸν γόητα ἐκείνον ἐπήρε τοὺς ἐξαπατωμένους καὶ περιφθειρομένους λαοὺς. 6. 4. καίτοι τί βούλει; φῶμεν ἐκείνω τινὰ εἶναι τοσαύτην

<sup>a</sup> Probably this refers to the abusive terms used by Molon, etc., cf. Jos. c. Apion. ii. 145 γόητα καὶ ἀπατεῶνα, rather than to the murmurers in the wilderness, though the imperfect ἐλοιδόρουν rather suggests this. The next sentence shows that he persists in ignoring any rebellion.

<sup>b</sup> For the ironical use of καλῆς cf. Flacc. 157.

<sup>c</sup> The punctuation and exact meaning of the following section is not clear. The translation supposes that there are three alternatives: (1) the extraordinary virtues of Moses; (2) the docility of the people; (3) divine influence. In this

HYPOTHETICA, 6. 1-4

There he had prospered to an unequalled degree so that from his time to the present day their nation has existed and survives and is so exceedingly populous.

6. 2. Shortly afterwards he says :

Their departure and journey was made under the command of one who nothing differed from the ordinary run of men. So you may say if you like : indeed there were people also who abused him as an impostor and prating mountebank.<sup>a</sup> Well, that was a fine <sup>b</sup> kind of imposture and knavery which enabled him to bring the whole people in complete safety amid drought and hunger and ignorance of the way and lack of everything as well as if they had abundance of everything and supplies obtainable from the neighbouring nations, and further to keep them free from internal factions and above all obedient to himself. 6. 3. And observe that these conditions lasted not for a little while but for a space of time during which even a household living in all comfort could not be expected to remain in unanimity. Yet neither thirst nor hunger nor bodily decay, nor fear of the future, nor ignorance of the course which events would take roused these deluded and perishing masses of men against that impostor. 6. 4. <sup>c</sup> How will you explain this ? Shall we say that he had some case ἢ γὰρ is hardly intelligible and Bernays, who translates the section, corrects to ἢ ἄρα. Gifford, who puts colons instead of question marks after ἔχω and ἐπιστατεῖν, translates ἢ γὰρ, κτλ., by "For either we must admit," etc. This suggests that the double ἢ introduces a dilemma which is the logical consequence of accepting the high estimate of Moses, but I do not understand the logic. A minor point is that he punctuates the opening words as τί βούλει φῶμεν; ἐκείνω, κτλ., which seems to me very possible.

PHILO

τέχνην ἢ δεινότητα λόγων ἢ σύνεσιν, ὡς τῶν τοσοούτων καὶ τοιούτων ἀτόπων καὶ πρὸς ὄλεθρον ἅπαντας ἀγόντων ἐπικρατεῖν; ἢ γὰρ τὰς φύσεις τῶν ὑπ' αὐτὸν ἀνθρώπων οὐκ ἀμαθῶς οὐδὲ δυσκόλως, ἀλλ' εὐπειθῶς καὶ τοῦ μέλλοντος οὐκ ἀπρονοήτως ἔχειν; ἢ τούτους μὲν ὡς μάλιστα κακοὺς εἶναι, τὸν δὲ θεὸν τὰς δυσκολίας αὐτῶν πρᾶνναι καὶ τοῦ παρόντος καὶ τοῦ μέλλοντος ὡσπερ ἐπιστατεῖν; ὅπερ γὰρ σοι μάλιστα ἂν ἐκ τούτων ἀληθὲς εἶναι δόξῃ, πρὸς ἐπαίνου καὶ τιμῆς καὶ ζήλου περὶ αὐτῶν συμπάντων ἰσχύειν φαίνεται.

6. 5. Καὶ τὰ μὲν τῆς ἐξόδου δὴ ταῦτα. ἐπειδὴ δὲ εἰς τὴν γῆν ταύτην ἦλθον, ὅπως μὲν ποτε ἄρα ἰδρῦθησαν καὶ τὴν χώραν ἔσχον, ἐν ταῖς ἱεραῖς ἀναγραφαῖς δηλοῦται. οὐ μὴν ἔγωγε δικαίῳ μᾶλλον καθ' ἱστορίαν ἢ κατὰ τινα λογισμὸν περὶ αὐτῶν τὰ εἰκότα ἐπεξελεθῆιν. 6. 6. πότερον γὰρ ποτε βούλει τῷ πλήθει τῶν σωμάτων ἔτι περιόντας, καίπερ εἰς τέλος κεκακωμένους, ὅμως δ' ἰσχύοντας<sup>1</sup> [628] καὶ τὰ ὄπλα ἐν χερσὶν ἔχοντας, εἶτα | κατὰ κράτος ἐλεῖν τὴν χώραν, Σύρους τε ὁμοῦ καὶ Φοίνικας ἐν αὐτῇ τῇ ἐκείνων γῆ μαχομένους νικῶντας, ἢ τοὺς μὲν ἀπολέμους καὶ ἀνάνδρους εἶναι καὶ παντελῶς ὀλίγους ὑποθῶμεθα καὶ τῶν εἰς πόλεμον παρασκευῶν ἀπόρους, αἰδέσεως δὲ τυχεῖν παρὰ τούτοις

<sup>1</sup> Mangey and Heinichen ὅμως δὲ δυσχύνοντας. Gifford ὅμως δὲ (δυσχυρίζοντας) with a note “δὲ (δυσχυρίζοντας) Mangey?” But I cannot find any support of this in Mangey, nor any trace of the active δυσχυρίζω elsewhere.

<sup>a</sup> Or “praise and honour and admiration for them all.” So Gifford, Mangey and Bernays. Still on the whole I prefer the rendering of ζήλος given above for the following reasons:

HYPOTHETICA, 6. 4-6

kind of skill or eloquence or intelligence great enough to surmount so many strangely different circumstances which were carrying them all to perdition? Otherwise we must suppose that either his subjects were naturally not stupid nor discontented but docile and gifted with some prevision of the future or else that they were thoroughly bad though God softened their discontents and kept their present and their future state as it were in his charge. Whichever of these views you consider to be the truth it appears to redound mightily to his praise and honour and zeal for them all.<sup>a</sup>

6. 5. So much for the story of the migration. But when they came to this land the holy records show clearly how they established themselves there and occupied the country. Yet in discussing the probable facts of this occupation I think it better to go not so much by the historical narrative as by what our reason tells us about them. 6. 6. Which alternative do you prefer? Were they still superior in the number of their fighting men though they had fared so ill to the end, still strong and with weapons in their hand, and did they then take the land by force, defeating the combined Syrians and Phoenicians when fighting in their own country? Or shall we suppose that they were unwarlike and feeble, quite few in numbers and destitute of warlike equipment, but won the

(1) Philo's use of the word as shown in some twenty-five examples in the index suggests not admiration in the abstract, but "zeal," i.e. admiration followed by emulation or passion; (2) one of the alternatives mentioned, i.e. that they were thoroughly bad, but "softened" by God, does not seem to demand praise and honour for them; (3) in this section we are more concerned with the praise of Moses than of the nation.

PHILO

καὶ τὴν γῆν λαβεῖν παρ' ἐκόντων, ἔπειτα δ' εὐθύς οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν τὸν τε νεῶν οἰκοδομησαὶ καὶ τὰλλα εἰς εὐσέβειαν καὶ ἀγιστείαν καταστήσασθαι; 6. 7.

357 δηλοῖ γάρ, ὡς ἔοικε, ταῦτα καὶ θεοφιλεστάτους αὐτοὺς ἀνωμολογήσθαι καὶ παρὰ τοῖς ἐχθροῖς· ἐχθροὶ γὰρ ἦσαν ἐξ ἀνάγκης, ὧν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν ἐξαίφνης ἦλθον ὡς ἀφαιρεσόμενοι.

6. 8. παρὰ τούτοις δ' οὖν αἰδέσεως καὶ τιμῆς τυγχάνοντες πῶς οὐχ ὑπερβάλλειν εὐτυχία τοὺς ἄλλους φαίνονται; τίνα δὲ τὰ δεύτερα ἐφεξῆς ἢ τὰ τρίτα πρὸς τούτοις λέγωμεν; πότερον τὸ τῆς εὐνομίας καὶ εὐπειθείας αὐτῶν ἢ τῆς ὁσιότητος καὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ εὐσεβείας; ἀλλὰ τὸν μὲν ἄνδρα ἐκείνον, ὅστις ποτὲ ἦν ὁ τοὺς νόμους αὐτοῖς θεῖς, οὕτω σφόδρα ἐθαύμασαν, ὡς ὁ τι δήποτε ἔδοξεν ἐκείνῳ καὶ αὐτοῖς. 6. 9. εἴτε οὖν λελογισμένος αὐτὸς εἴτε ἀκούων παρὰ δαίμονος ἔφρασε, τοῦτο ἅπαν εἰς τὸν θεὸν ἀνάγειν, καὶ πλειόνων ἐτῶν διεληλυθότων, τὸ μὲν ἀκριβὲς οὐκ ἔχω λέγειν ὅποσα, πλείω δ' οὖν ἢ δισχίλιά ἐστι, μηδὲ ῥῆμά γε αὐτὸ μόνον τῶν ὑπ' αὐτοῦ γεγραμμένων κινήσαι, ἀλλὰ καὶ μυριάκις αὐτοὺς ἀποθανεῖν ὑπομεῖναι θάπτον ἢ τοῖς ἐκείνου νόμοις καὶ ἔθεσιν ἐναντία πεισθῆναι.

6. 10. Ταῦτ' εἰπὼν ἐπιτέμνεται τὴν ἐκ τῶν Μωυσέως νόμων καταβεβλημένην τῷ Ἰουδαίων ἔθνει πολιτείαν γράφων οὕτως·

---

<sup>a</sup> The literal translation "straightway" seems incompatible not only with the history but with οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν.

HYPOTHETICA, 6. 6-10

respect of their opponents who voluntarily surrendered their land to them and that as a direct consequence<sup>a</sup> they shortly afterwards built their temple and established everything else needed for religion and worship?

6. 7. This would clearly show that they were acknowledged as dearly beloved of God even by their enemies. For those whose land they suddenly invaded with the intention of taking it from them were necessarily their enemies.

6. 8. And if they got credit and honour in the sight of their enemies surely it shows that they exceeded all in good fortune. What qualities shall we put in addition to this good fortune in the second and the third place? Shall we give the preference to their respect for law and loyal obedience or to their religion and justice and piety? Whichever you choose the fact remains that so great was their veneration for that man who gave them their laws, whatever view we take of him, that anything which approved itself to him approved itself also to them.

6. 9. So whether what he told them came from his own reasoning powers or was learnt from some supernatural source they held it all to come from God and after the lapse of many years, how many I cannot say exactly, but at any rate for more than two thousand, they have not changed a single word of what he wrote but would even endure to die a thousand deaths sooner than accept anything contrary to the laws and customs which he had ordained.

6. 10. After these remarks he gives the following summary of the constitution laid down for the nation in the laws of Moses.

---

The use of εὐθύς for what follows as a logical consequence is common in Philo, e.g. De Op. 3.

PHILO

7. 1. Ἐὰν τί τούτων ἢ τούτοις προσόμοιον παρ' ἐκείνοις ἐστί, πρῶτον εἶναι δοκοῦν καὶ τιθασὸν καὶ δικῶν εἰσαγωγὰς<sup>1</sup> καὶ σκῆψεις καὶ ἀναβολὰς καὶ τιμῆσεις καὶ πάλιν ὑποτιμῆσεις ἔχον; οὐδέν, ἀλλὰ πάντα ἀπλᾶ καὶ δῆλα. ἐὰν παιδεραστῆς, ἐὰν μοιχεύῃς, ἐὰν βιάσῃ παῖδα, ἄρρενα μὲν μηδὲ λέγε, ἀλλὰ κἄν θήλειαν· ὁμοίως ἐὰν σαυτὸν καταπορνεύῃς, ἐὰν καὶ παρ' ἡλικίαν αἰσχρὸν τι πάθῃς ἢ δοκῆς ἢ μέλλῃς, θάνατος ἢ ζημία. 7. 2. ἐὰν εἰς δοῦλον σῶμα, ἐὰν εἰς ἐλεύθερον ὑβρίζῃς, ἐὰν δεσμοῖς συνέχῃς, ἐὰν ἀπάγων πωλῆς, ἐὰν βέβηλα ἐὰν ἱερὰ παρακλέπτῃς, ἐὰν ἀσεβῆς, οὐκ ἔργῳ μόνον
 358 ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐὰν ῥήματι τῷ τυχόντι, εἰς μὲν θεὸν αὐτὸν (ἕλωσ ἡμῖν ὁ θεὸς καὶ αὐτῆς τῆς περὶ τούτων [629] ἐννοίας γένοιτο) οὐδὲ | ἄξιον λέγειν, ἀλλ' εἰς πατέρα ἢ μητέρα ἢ εὐεργέτην σαυτοῦ θάνατος ὁμοίως, καὶ οὗτος οὐ κοινὸς οὐδ' ὁ τυχών, ἀλλὰ δεῖ κατα-

<sup>1</sup> So Cohn. Other editions and apparently all mss. ἐπαγωγὰς. See note b.

<sup>a</sup> Philo has evidently in a part omitted by Eusebius given proofs that Gentiles allowed all sorts of evasions of the penalties prescribed in their laws. So Jos. c. Apion. ii. 276 contrasts the Jewish strictness with the διαλύσεις or διαδύσεις ("evasions") provided by the legislators themselves.

<sup>b</sup> See note 1. The mss. ἐπαγωγὰς is translated by Gifford "solicitations of justice" (?), by Mangey "intentiones

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 1-2

7. 1. Do we find any of these things <sup>a</sup> or anything similar among the Jews ; anything which so savours of mildness and lenity, anything which permits of legal proceedings <sup>b</sup> or extenuations or postponements or assessments of penalties and reductions of assessments ? <sup>c</sup> Nothing at all, everything is clear and simple. <sup>d</sup> If you are guilty of pederasty or adultery or rape of a young person, even of a female, for I need not mention the case of a male, similarly if you prostitute yourself or allow or purpose or intend any action which your age makes indecent the penalty is death. 7. 2. So too if you commit an outrage on the person of a slave or a free man, if you confine him in bonds or kidnap and sell him. So too with larceny of things profane and sacred, so too with impiety not only of act but even of a casual word and not only against God Himself (may He forgive the very thought of such a thing which should not even be mentioned), but also against a father or mother or benefactor of your own the penalty is the same, death and not the common ordinary death : the offender in words only litium." In the sense of "chicanery" I see no great difficulty about it, and all of the first three accusatives at any rate should perhaps be taken with δικῶν.

<sup>c</sup> Or "self-assessments" (L. & S.). These of course would suggest mitigation of penalties. Philo has used the word in the general sense of "excuse" or "extenuation" in Spec. Leg. iii. 157.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. all the offences that follow are stated in the law to be capital crimes. This is true of παιδεραστία (Lev. xviii. 22, xx. 13), of μοιχεία (Lev. xx. 10), for kidnappers and selling men (Ex. xxi. 16), for reviling a parent (Ex. xxi. 17), (לֹא יִקְלָל אֶת אָבִיו וְאֶת אִמּוֹ, R.V. "curseth"), for rape (under certain circumstances) (Deut. xxii. 23 ff.). But I do not think that either Philo in Spec. Leg. or the law itself suggests death for stealing in general, or that the punishment for reviling a parent extends to reviling a benefactor.

PHILO

λευσθήναι τὸν εἰπόντα μόνον ὡς οὐ χείρονα ἀσεβείας πράξαντα. 7. 3. ἄλλα δ' αὖ πάλιν ὁποῖά τινα· γυναικας ἀνδράσι δουλεύειν, πρὸς ὕβρεως μὲν οὐδεμιᾶς, πρὸς εὐπειθειαν δ' ἐν ἅπασι· γονεῖς παίδων ἄρχειν ἐπὶ σωτηρίᾳ καὶ πολυωρίᾳ· τῶν ἑαυτοῦ κτημάτων ἕνα ἕκαστον κύριον εἶναι, μὴ θεὸν γε ἐπιφημίσαντα αὐτοῖς μηδ' ὡς τῷ θεῷ ταῦτα ἀνίησιν· εἰ δὲ λόγῳ μόνον ὑποσχέσθαι προσπέσοι, ψαῦσαι καὶ θιγεῖν αὐτῶν οὐκ ἔστιν, ἀλλ' εὐθὺς ἀπάντων ἀποκεκλείσθαι.

7. 4. μή μοι τὰ τῶν θεῶν ἀρπάζειν μηδ' ἀποσυλᾶν ἑτέρων ἀναθέντων· ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν οἰκείων, ὥσπερ ἔφην, προσπεσόν τι καὶ λαθὸν αὐτὸν ῥῆμα ἐπ' ἀναθέσει, εἰπόντα δὲ<sup>1</sup> πάντων στéρεσθαι· μετα-γινώσκοντι δὲ ἢ ἀπαρνούμενῳ τὰ λελεγμένα καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν προσαφαιρείσθαι. 7. 5. καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὣν κυριεύει ὁ αὐτὸς λόγος. εἰ ἐπιφημίση τροφήν γυναικὸς ἀνὴρ ἱεράν εἶναι, τροφῆς ἀνέχειν· εἰ πατὴρ υἱοῦ, εἰ ἀρχων τοῦ ὑπηκόου, ταῦτόν. καὶ ἔκλυσις δὲ ἐπιφημισθέντων ἢ μὲν τελειοτάτη καὶ μεγίστη τοῦ ἱερέως ἀποφή-

<sup>1</sup> The sentence as it stands is ungrammatical. Mangey omits δέ.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "as (being) no worse having committed (i.e. if he has committed) impieties"—an extraordinarily awkward construction.

<sup>b</sup> Gifford, who translates ὡς θεῷ by "as to God," explains the construction as an "abrupt transition" and quotes Heinichen "ἀνίησι sequitur quasi praecessit εἰ μὴ ἐπιφημίξει." This is only a way of saying that the sentence is ungrammatical. I think it is best explained by taking ὡς=ὅτι as introducing oratio obliqua and governed by ἐπιφημίσαντα.

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 2-5

must be stoned to death. His guilt is as great as if he were the perpetrator of impious actions.<sup>a</sup>

7. 3. Other rules again there are of various kinds: wives must be in servitude to their husbands, a servitude not imposed by violent ill-treatment but promoting obedience in all things. Parents must have power over their children to keep them safe and tend them carefully. Each individual is master of his possessions unless he has solemnly named the name of God over them declaring that he has given them to God.<sup>b</sup> And if he has merely made a chance verbal promise of them he must not touch or handle them, but hold himself at once debarred from them all.

7. 4. I need not consider the case of his robbing what belongs to the gods<sup>c</sup> or plundering what others have dedicated; even with his own, I repeat, a chance word of dedication spoken unawares deprives him of them all and if he repents or denies his promise his life is forfeit also.

7. 5. The same holds of any other persons over whom he has authority. If a man has devoted his wife's sustenance to a sacred purpose he must refrain from giving her that sustenance; so with a father's gifts to his son or a ruler's to his subjects. The chief and most perfect way of releasing dedicated property is by the priest refusing it, for he

This verb can be followed either by a noun or a clause as below ἐπιφημίση τροφήν . . . ἱερὰν εἶναι. See examples in lexicon. The combination of the two constructions is awkward but not ungrammatical.

<sup>a</sup> In using the plural Philo may have in mind Ex. xxii. 28 (LXX "thou shalt not revile the gods"), a text on which both he (Mos. ii. 205, Spec. Leg. i. 53) and Jos. (c. Apion. ii. 237) base the prohibition of speaking evil of the heathen gods. But it is hardly necessary to bring this in here. He would naturally deny the possibility of his people committing sacrilege in any temples.

PHILO

σαντος· ὑπὸ γὰρ τοῦ θεοῦ κύριος οὗτος δέξασθαι· καὶ μετὰ ταύτην δέ<sup>1</sup> ἢ παρὰ τῶν μᾶλλον αἰεὶ κυρίων
ὁσία ἴλεω τὸν θεὸν ἀποφαίνειν, ὡς μηδὲ ἐπάναγκες τὴν ἀνάθεσιν δέχεσθαι. 7. 6. μυρία δὲ ἄλλα ἐπὶ τούτοις, ὅσα καὶ ἐπὶ ἀγράφων ἐθῶν καὶ νομίμων κὰν τοῖς νόμοις αὐτοῖς· ἃ τις παθεῖν ἐχθαίρει, μὴ ποιεῖν αὐτόν· ἃ μὴ κατέθηκεν, μηδ' ἀναιρεῖσθαι, μηδ' ἐκ πρασιᾶς μηδ' ἐκ ληνοῦ μηδ' ἐξ ἄλωνος· μὴ θημῶνος ὑφαιρεῖσθαι μέγα ἢ μικρὸν ἀπλῶς μηδέν· μὴ πυρὸς δεηθέντι φθονεῖν· μὴ νάματα ὑδάτων ἀποκλείειν· ἀλλὰ καὶ πτωχοῖς καὶ πηροῖς τροφήν ἐρανίζουσι πρὸς τὸν θεὸν εὐαγῶς ἀνέχειν. 7. 7. μὴ ταφῆς νεκρὸν ἐξείργειν, ἀλλὰ

<sup>1</sup> This redundant δὲ is, I think, very unusual, if not unique, in Philo.

---

<sup>a</sup> While the Pentateuch (Num. xxx. 1-3, Deut. xxiii. 21-23) more or less bears out the strict obligation of a vow, it says nothing about any penalty (much less death) for failure to keep it, or on the other hand of ways of absolution. See App. p. 539.

<sup>b</sup> The construction is difficult. The translation assumes that ἢ agrees with ἐκλυσις, and ὁσία ἀποφαίνειν="holy enough to declare" (or perhaps, "make") God propitious. But I have not found any example of such an infinitive following ὁσιος. Possibly ἢ may agree with the noun ὁσία and ἀποφαίνειν depends on κυρίων. But the order of the words is somewhat against it.

<sup>c</sup> The nearest text to this in the O.T. is, I suppose, Lev. xix. 18 "thou shalt love thy neighbour as thyself," which is adopted in the N.T. as well as the positive form of that given here "whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them," Matt. vii. 12. On this Wetstein gives abundant illustration from ancient literature both in the positive and negative form, beginning with Herodotus iii.

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 5-7

is empowered by God to accept it or not.<sup>a</sup> Next to this, that given by those who at the time have the higher authority may lawfully declare that God is propitiated<sup>b</sup> so that there is no necessity to accept the dedication.

7. 6. Besides these there is a host of other things which belong to unwritten customs and institutions or are contained in the laws themselves. What a man would hate to suffer he must not do himself to others.<sup>c</sup> What he has not laid down he must not take up<sup>d</sup> either from a garden or a wine press or a threshing floor. He must not filch anything great or small from a stack. He must not grudge to give fire to one who needs it or close off running water.<sup>e</sup> If the poor or the cripple beg food of him he must give it as an offering of religion to God.<sup>f</sup> 7. 7. He must not debar dead bodies from

142. 3 ἐγὼ δὲ τὰ τῷ πέλας ἐπιπλήσω, αὐτὸς κατὰ δύναμιν οὐ ποιήσω. The nearest in form to this is from Isocrates ἀ πάσχοντες ὑφ' ἐτέρων ὀργίξεσθε ταῦτα τοὺς ἄλλους μὴ ποιείτε.

<sup>a</sup> This also, as Bernays points out, is not found in this short form in the O.T., nor indeed in any nearer form than Deut. xxii. 1-3, where the finder of a lost animal or garment is bidden to restore it to the owner. On the other hand it is a famous piece of moralizing in Greek, ascribed to Solon (Diog. Laert i. 57), and described by Plato, Legg. xi. 913 c, as κάλλιστος νόμος. Jos. (c. Apion. ii. 208) follows Philo in declaring it to be a recognized principle of Judaism, and that it was so recognized is suggested by Luke xix. 21, where αἶρεις δ' οὐκ ἔθηκας is the reproach made by the unprofitable servant to his master.

<sup>e</sup> So too Jos. c. Apion. ii. 211.

<sup>f</sup> ἀνέχω seems to be used in the somewhat rare sense of offering sacrifices or prayers, unless πρὸς τὸν θεόν can, like πρὸς τοὺς ἄρχοντας, etc., mean "in the presence of" or "before God." The duty of giving charity to the poor is enjoined by Philo from the Law in De Virt. 82-87. It is to be found more definitely in other passages outside the Law, e.g. Prov. xix. 17 and Ps. xli. 1 ff. and still more in Tobit iv.

PHILO

καὶ γῆς αὐτοῖς ὅσον γε εἰς τὴν ὁσίαν προσεπι-359 βάλλειν· μὴ θήκας, μὴ μνήματα ὄλως κατοικο-[630] μένων κινεῖν. | μὴ δεσμά, μὴ κακὸν μηδὲν πλέον τῶ ἐν ἀνάγκαις προσεπιφέρειν. μὴ γονὴν ἀνδρῶν ἐκτέμνοντας, μὴ γυναικῶν ἀτοκίους καὶ ἄλλαις μηχαναῖς ἀμβλοῦν· μὴ ζώοις ἔμπαλιν ἢ κατέδειξεν εἴτ' οὖν ὁ θεὸς εἴτε τις καὶ νομοθέτης προσφέρε-σθαι· μὴ σπέρμα ἀφανίζειν· μὴ γέννημα δολοῦν.<sup>1</sup>
 7. 8. μὴ ζυγὸν ἄδικον ἀνθυποβάλλειν, μὴ χοῖνικα ἄμετρον, μὴ νόμισμα ἄδικον. μὴ φίλων ἀπόρρητα ἐν ἔχθρᾳ φαίνειν. ποῖ δὲ πρὸς τοῦ θεοῦ ἡμῖν τὰ Βουζύγια ἐκεῖνα; ἄλλα δὲ πρὸς τούτοις ὄρα· μὴ παίδων διοικίξειν γονέας, μηδ' ἂν αἰχμαλώτους ἔχῃς, μὴ γυναῖκα ἀνδρός, κἂν νομίμως ἐωνημένος ἦς δεσπότης. 7. 9. ἦ που σεμνότερα καὶ μείζω ταῦτα, ἄλλα δὲ μικρὰ καὶ τὰ τυχόντα· μὴ νεοττιάν φησι κατοικίδιον ἐρημοῦν· μὴ ζώων

<sup>1</sup> Other editions δολοῦν. But δολοῦν seems to have good mss. authority. See note c.

<sup>a</sup> So also Jos. l.c. The duty is acknowledged in Tobit i. 17 ff.

<sup>b</sup> So Jos. c. Apion. ii. 213 "He permitted only the lawful use of them (i.e. animals), and forbade all others." Thackeray refers this to the prohibition of working animals on the sabbath. But Philo at least must, I think, have something more than this in mind.

<sup>c</sup> The suggestion given by the translation, which must be regarded as merely tentative, is that it forbids the castration of animals, which Jos. l.c. 271 seems to treat as a crime, and taking away the offspring prematurely. Perhaps we might translate "destroy not the seed (referring to the story of Onan); frustrate not the thing which might be born." This would be distinguished from μὴ γονήν, κτλ., above as being the action of the man himself. In this case a full stop should be put after προσφέρεσθαι. But it is strange that
 428

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 7-9

burial,<sup>a</sup> but throw upon them as much earth as piety demands, nor disturb in any way the resting places and monuments of the departed. He must not by fettering or any other means worsen the plight of him who is in hard straits; he must not make abortive the generative power of men by gelding nor that of women by sterilizing drugs and other devices. There must be no maltreatment of animals contrary to what is appointed by God or even by a law-giver<sup>b</sup>; no destroying of their seed nor defrauding of their offspring.<sup>c</sup> 7. 8. No unjust scales, no false measurements, no fraudulent coinage must be substituted.<sup>d</sup> The secrets of a friend must not be divulged in enmity.<sup>e</sup> What need in heaven's name have we of your Buzyges<sup>f</sup> and his precepts? There are other matters to be noted: children must not be parted from their parents even if you hold them as captive, nor a wife from her husband even if you are her owner by lawful purchase.

7. 9. These no doubt are more important and serious matters, but there are others, little things of casual occurrence. Do not render desolate the nesting the vague statement about the treatment of animals should separate two such closely connected injunctions. The other reading δουλοῦν is translated by Gifford "enslave not thy offspring," but such a command seems very unnecessary and pointless.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Prov. xi. 1, xvi. 11, Lev. xix. 35, Deut. xxv. 13-16.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. when they quarrel or become enemies. It is more clearly expressed by Jos. § 207 "We must conceal nothing from our friends, nor divulge secrets, ἐὰν συμβῆ τις ἕχθρα."

<sup>f</sup> Buzyges, a hero of Athens, who first yoked oxen to the plough (Hesychius), was commemorated at a festival of Demeter, where one of his family repeated various imprecations against those who refused fire and water and did other uncharitable actions. For an abstract of Bernays' full note on the subject see App. p. 539.

PHILO

ἰκεσίαν οἶα ἔσθ' ὅτε προσφευγόντων ἀναιρεῖν, μὴ εἴ τι τῶν τοιούτων ἡττόν ἐστίν. οὐδενὸς ἄξια ταυτὰ γε εἶποις ἄν· ἀλλ' ὅ γε ἐπ' αὐτοῖς νόμος ἐστὶ μέγας καὶ πάσης ἐπιμελείας αἴτιος, καὶ αἱ προρρήσεις μεγάλαι καὶ ἄραϊ κατὰ τε<sup>1</sup> ἐξωλείας, καὶ ὁ θεὸς αὐτὸς ἐπόπτης τῶν τοιούτων καὶ τιμωρὸς ἀπανταχοῦ.

7. 10. Καὶ μετὰ βραχέα φησὶν·

“Ὀλην δὲ ἡμέραν, εἰ τύχοι, μᾶλλον δὲ οὐδὲ μίαν ἀλλὰ πολλὰς, καὶ ταύτας οὐκ εὐθύς ἐφεξῆς ἀλλήλαις, ἀλλ' ἐκ διαλειμμάτων, καὶ τούτων δὲ παρ' ἐπτὰ, κρατοῦντος ὡς εἰκὸς αἰεὶ τοῦ παρὰ τὰς βεβήλους ἔθους, μηδὲν ἄν παραβῆναι τῶν προστεταγμένων οὐ θαυμάζεις; 7. 11. ἄρ' οὐ πρὸς ἀσκήσεως μόνον αὐτοῖς τοῦτο ἐγκρατείας ἐστίν, ὡς ἐξ ἴσου καὶ δρᾶν τι πονοῦντας καὶ ἀνέχειν ἰσχύειν ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων, εἰ δέοι; οὐ δῆτα. ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς ἔργου μεγάλου καὶ θαυμαστοῦ τινος ὤθηθαι δεῖν ὁ νομοθέτης αὐτοὺς μὴ τᾶλλα μόνον ἱκανοὺς εἶναι δρᾶν καὶ μὴ δρᾶν ὡσαύτως, ἀλλ' ἔτι καὶ τῶν πατρίων νόμων καὶ ἐθῶν ἐμπείρως ἔχειν. 7. 12. τί οὖν ἐποίησε; ταῖς ἐβδόμαις

<sup>1</sup> I should prefer to omit τε. As it stands the phrase is awkwardly coupled with μεγάλαι.

<sup>a</sup> Or “the nest under thy roof” (Gifford). But the allusion is clearly to Deut. xxii. 6, where anyone who finds a bird's nest “in the way or on a tree or on the ground” may take the eggs, but not the mother bird.

<sup>b</sup> So Jos. § 213 “creatures which take refuge in our houses like suppliants he has forbidden us to kill.” I do not understand what is meant. See App. p. 540.

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 9-12

home of birds<sup>a</sup> or make the appeals of animals of none effect when they seem to fly to you for help as they sometimes do.<sup>b</sup> Nor commit any lesser offence of the kind. These things are of nothing worth, you may say, yet great is the law which ordains them and ever watchful is the care which it demands. Great too and appalling<sup>c</sup> are the warnings and imprecations which accompany it. And such deeds are everywhere surveyed and avenged by God Himself.

7. 10. <sup>a</sup> Shortly afterwards he says :

Is it not a marvel that for a whole day they should have kept from transgressing on any occasion any of the ordinances, or rather for many days, not one only, days too which did not follow straight on each other but only after intervals, and intervals of seven during which habits belonging to the secular days naturally hold the mastery? 7. 11. You may ask : Is not this merely a case of practising self-control so that they should be capable of abstaining from toil if necessary no less than of toilsome activity? No, it was a great and marvellous achievement<sup>e</sup> which the law-giver had in view. He considered that they should not only be capable of both action and inaction in other matters but also should have expert knowledge of their ancestral laws and customs. 7. 12. What then did he do? He required them to

<sup>c</sup> More literally "threatening destruction." Cf. Spec. Leg. iv. 34 for this Demosthenic phrase.

<sup>d</sup> The part here omitted by Eusebius contained no doubt an account of the strict rules enforced on the sabbath.

<sup>e</sup> Gifford translates πρὸς ἔργου "at the cost of great and extraordinary pains." I understand πρὸς as = "belonging to" like πρὸς δίκης or πρὸς λόγου and indeed πρὸς ἐπαίνου καὶ τίμης in 6. 4 above.

PHILO

ταύταις ἡμέραις αὐτοὺς εἰς ταῦτὸν ἡξίου συν-ἀγεσθαι καὶ καθεζομένους μετ' ἀλλήλων σὺν αἰδοῖ
 καὶ κόσμῳ τῶν νόμων ἀκροᾶσθαι τοῦ μηδένα 360 ἀγνοῆσαι χάριν. 7. 13. καὶ δῆτα συνέρχονται μὲν αἰεὶ καὶ συνεδρεύουσι μετ' ἀλλήλων· οἱ μὲν πολλοὶ σιωπῇ, πλὴν εἴ τι προσεπευφημῆσαι τοῖς ἀναγνωσκομένοις νομίζεται· τῶν ἱερέων δέ τις ὁ
 παρῶν ἢ τῶν γερόντων εἰς ἀναγνώσκει τοὺς | [631] ἱεροὺς νόμους αὐτοῖς καὶ καθ' ἕκαστον ἐξηγεῖται μέχρι σχεδὸν δειλῆς ὀψίας· καὶ τοῦδε ἀπολύονται τῶν τε νόμων τῶν ἱερῶν ἐμπείρως ἔχοντες καὶ πολὺ δὴ πρὸς εὐσέβειαν ἐπιδεδωκότες. 7. 14. ἀρά σοι δοκεῖ ταῦτα ἀργούντων εἶναι καὶ οὐ παντὸς ἔργου μᾶλλον ἀναγκαῖα αὐτοῖς; τοιγαροῦν οὐκ ἐπὶ θεσμοδούς ἔρχονται περὶ τῶν πρακτέων καὶ μὴ διερωτῶντες οὐδὲ καθ' ἑαυτοὺς ὑπ' ἀγνοίας τῶν νόμων ῥαδιουργοῦσιν, ἀλλ' ὄντινα αὐτῶν κινεῖς καὶ περὶ τῶν πατρίων διαπυθάνη, προ-χείρως ἔχει καὶ ῥαδίως εἰπεῖν· καὶ ἀνὴρ γυναικὶ καὶ παισὶ πατὴρ καὶ δούλοις δεσπότης ἰκανὸς εἶναι δοκεῖ τοὺς νόμους παραδιδόναι. 7. 15.
 καὶ μὴν περὶ τοῦ γε ἔτους τοῦ ἐβδόμου ῥάδιον ὡσαύτως λέγειν, οὐ μὴν ταῦτὸν ἴσως. οὐ γὰρ αὐτοὶ τῶν ἔργων ἀφεστᾶσιν, ὥσπερ ταῖς ἐβδόμαις ἐκείναις ἡμέραις, ἀλλὰ τὴν γῆν ἀργῆν ἀφιάσιν εἰς

<sup>a</sup> Or persons who make a profession of enunciating moral and legal opinions? The words θεσμοδός and θεσμοδέω are only cited by Stephanus from this passage and De Som. i. 193, and L. & S. (revised) has nothing to add except a reference to one inscription. In both cases θεσπι- has been proposed, and in the sense of making divine or prophetic assemble in the same place on these seventh days, and sitting together in a respectful and orderly manner hear the laws read so that none should be ignorant of them. 7. 13. And indeed they do always assemble and sit together, most of them in silence except when it is the practice to add something to signify approval of what is read. But some priest who is present or one of the elders reads the holy laws to them and expounds them point by point till about the late afternoon, when they depart having gained both expert knowledge of the holy laws and considerable advance in piety. 7. 14. Do you think that this marks them as idlers or that any work is equally vital to them? And so they do not resort to persons learned in the law <sup>a</sup> with questions as to what they should do or not do, nor yet <sup>b</sup> by keeping independent transgress in ignorance of the law, but any one of them whom you attack with inquiries about their ancestral institutions can answer you readily and easily. The husband seems competent to transmit knowledge of the laws to his wife, the father to his children, the master to his slaves. 7. 15.

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 12-15

Again with regard to the seventh year one can without difficulty use much the same though perhaps not identical words.<sup>c</sup> For here it is not they themselves who abstain from work as on those seventh days, but it is the land which they leave idle against the days utterances would be suitable enough in De Som., but hardly here. If the word is right, the termination would seem to have lost its force.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "relying on themselves," i.e. they learn from each other.

<sup>c</sup> Philo's remarkable insistence on the sabbatical year has been shown several times, Spec. Leg. ii. 86-109, iv. 215-217, De Virt. 97, 98, De Praem. 154-157.

PHILO

τὰ μέλλοντα αὐθις εὐθηνίας χάριν· πολὺ γὰρ διαφέρειν αὐτὴν ἀνάπαυλαν λαβοῦσαν, εἶτα δὲ εἰς νέωτα γεωργεῖσθαι καὶ μὴ τῇ συνεχείᾳ τῆς ἐργασίας κατεξάνθαι. 7. 16. ταῦτὸν δὲ καὶ περὶ τὰ σώματα ἂν ἴδοις συμβαῖνον εἰς ῥώμην· οὐ γὰρ δὴ πρὸς ὑγείαν μόνον διαλείμματα καὶ τινὰς ἀναπαύλας ἀπὸ τῶν ἔργων τοὺς ἰατροὺς προστάττοντας· τὸ γὰρ συνεχὲς καὶ μονοειδὲς αἰεὶ, μάλιστα δὲ ἐπ' ἔργων, βλάβπτει ἔοικε. 7. 17. σημεῖον δέ· τὴν γὰρ αὐτὴν ταύτην γῆν εἴ τις ἐπαγγέλλοιτο αὐτοῖς ἐξεργάσεσθαι πολὺ μᾶλλον ἢ πρόσθεν τὸ ἔβδομον ἔτος τουτὶ καὶ τῶν καρπῶν πάντων συμπαρᾶχωρήσειν ὅλων, οὐκ ἂν οὐδαμῶς δέξαιντο· οὐ γὰρ αὐτοὶ τῶν πόνων ἀνέχειν οἴονται δεῖν μόνοι—καίτοι κἂν εἰ τοῦτ' ἐποίουν, οὐδὲν ἂν θαυμαστὸν ᾦν—, ἀλλὰ τὴν χώραν αὐτοῖς ἀνεσὶν τινα καὶ ῥαστώνην εἰς ἀρχὴν ἑτέραν τῆς αὐθις ἐπιμελείας καὶ γεωργίας λαβεῖν. 7. 18. ἐπεὶ τί ἐκώλυε πρὸς τοῦ θεοῦ ἐπὶ τοῦ παρελθόντος ἔτους αὐτὴν προεκδοῦναι καὶ παρὰ τῶν ἐργαζομένων ἐκείνων τὸν<sup>1</sup>

361 φόρον τοῦ ἔτους ἐκλέγειν; ἀλλ', ὡσπερ ἔφην, κατ' οὐδένα τρόπον οὐδὲν τῶν τοιούτων προνοία μοι δοκεῖ τῆς χώρας ἐκδέχονται. 7. 19. τῆς δὲ φιλανθρωπίας αὐτῶν καὶ τοῦτο μέγα ὡς ἀληθῶς σημεῖον· ἐπεὶ γὰρ αὐτοὶ τῶν ἔργων ἐκείνου τοῦ ἔτους ἀνέχουσι, τοὺς γινομένους καρποὺς οὐκ οἴονται δεῖν συλλέγειν οὐδ' ἀποτίθεσθαι μὴ ἐκ τῶν οἰκείων πόνων περιόντας αὐτοῖς, ἀλλ' ἅτε τοῦ θεοῦ παρεσχηκότος αὐτοῖς, ἀνιείσης ἀπ' αὐτομάτου τῆς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. τὸν ἐκείνων, and so Dindorf. Gifford τὸν ἐκείνου.

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 15-19

to come hereafter to give it fertility, for they believe that it gains much by getting a respite and is then tilled in the next year without being exhausted by unbroken cultivation. 7. 16. You may see that the same treatment of our bodies tends to strengthen them. Physicians prescribe some intermissions and relaxations not merely when health has to be restored.<sup>a</sup> For monotony without a break, particularly in work, is always seen to be injurious. 7. 17. Here is a proof that their object is as I describe. If anyone offered to cultivate this same land during the seventh year much more strenuously than before and to surrender to them the whole of the fruits they would absolutely refuse. For they do not think that it is only themselves who should abstain from work, though if they did so it would be nothing to wonder at, but that the land should gain at their hands a respite and easing off to make a fresh start in receiving renewed attention and husbandry. 7. 18. For what in heaven's name was to hinder them from letting out the land during the year<sup>b</sup> and collecting the produce of that year at its end from the others who tilled it? But, as I have said, they entirely refuse anything of the kind, doubtless out of consideration for the land. 7. 19. We have a truly great proof of their humanity in the following also. Since they themselves abstain from labour during that year, they think that they should not gather or lay by the fruits produced which do not accrue to them from their own toil, but since God has provided them, sprung from the soil by its own action, <sup>a</sup> i.e. they prescribe it for people who are perfectly well.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "during the past year," i.e. the year which will be past when the fruit is gathered.

PHILO

γῆς, τοὺς βουλομένους ἢ δεομένους τῶν τε ὁδοι-
 [632] πόρων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀξιούσι μετὰ ἀδείας χρῆσθαι. |
 7. 20. καὶ περὶ μὲν τούτων ἄλις σοι· τὸ γὰρ ταῖς ἐβδόμαις ἤδη τὸν νόμον αὐτοῖς στήσαι ταῦτα οὐκ ἂν ἐμὲ ἀπαιτήσαις, ἴσως πολλῶν πολλάκις καὶ ἰατρῶν καὶ φυσιολόγων καὶ φιλοσόφων ἀκηκοῶς περὶ τούτου πρότερον, ἦντιν' ἄρα δύναμιν ἔχει πρὸς τε τὴν τῶν συμπάντων καὶ δὴ πρὸς τὴν ἀνθρωπείαν φύσιν. οὗτος ὁ τῆς ἐβδόμης λόγος.

11. 1. Μυρίους δὲ τῶν γνωρίμων ὁ ἡμέτερος νομοθέτης ἤλειψεν ἐπὶ κοινωνίαν, οἱ καλοῦνται μὲν Ἑσσαῖοι, παρὰ τὴν ὁσιότητά μοι δοκῶ τῆς προσηγορίας ἀξιωθέντες. οἰκοῦσι δὲ πολλὰς μὲν πόλεις τῆς Ἰουδαίας, πολλὰς δὲ κώμας καὶ<sup>1</sup> μεγάλους καὶ πολυανθρώπους ὀμίλους. 11. 2. ἔστι δ' αὐτοῖς ἢ προαίρεσις οὐ γένει—γένος γὰρ ἐφ' ἔκουσίοις οὐ γράφεται—, διὰ δὲ ζῆλον ἀρετῆς καὶ

<sup>1</sup> κατὰ?—Though accepted without comment by Mangey and Gifford, the construction οἰκεῖν ὀμίλους seems hardly possible.

---

<sup>a</sup> The following extract is made by Eusebius at a later point in the same book of the Praeparatio. He introduces it by saying that the Jewish nation is divided into two sections, (1) the multitude which Moses intended to be guided by the literal meaning (ρήτῃ διάνοια), and (2) the philosophers who can rise from the literal to the higher meaning. As an example of the second class he reproduces Philo's two

HYPOTHETICA, 7. 19—11. 2

they should grant them to be used freely by wayfarers and others who desire or need them. 7. 20. You have now had enough on this subject, for you will not require me to show that these rules for the seventh days are established firmly among them by the law. Probably you have often heard ere now from many physicians, scientists and philosophers what influence it has over the life of all things and of mankind in particular. This is what I have to say about the seventh day.

<sup>a</sup> 11. 1. Multitudes of his disciples has the lawgiver trained for the life of fellowship. These people are called Essenes, a name awarded to them doubtless in recognition of their holiness. They live in many cities of Judaea and in many villages and grouped in great societies of many members. 11. 2. Their persuasion <sup>b</sup> is not based on birth, for birth is not a descriptive mark of voluntary associations,<sup>c</sup> but on their zeal for accounts of the Essenes, one from the Quod Omn. Prob. (see pp. 54-63), and the following which he quotes from "The Apology for the Jews." See for this title Introduction, p. 407, and for remarks on the two accounts App. p. 514.

<sup>b</sup> Or "vocation." Cf. De Vit. Cont. 2, and see App. p. 514.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. when we define the principles or considerations on which a voluntary association is based, birth or family is not among them. But Gifford may be right in translating more simply "family descent is not ranked among matters of choice," though I am not sure that γράφεται ἐπι can mean this, or what the point of the remark is.

PHILO

φιλανθρωπίας ἴμερον. 11. 3. Ἐσσαιῶν γοῦν κομιδῇ νήπιος οὐδεὶς, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ πρωτογένειος ἢ μειράκιον, ἐπεὶ τά γε τούτων ἀβέβαια ἦθη τῷ τῆς ἡλικίας ἀτελεῖ συννεωτερίζοντα,<sup>1</sup> τέλειοι δ' ἄνδρες καὶ πρὸς γῆρας ἀποκλίνοντες ἤδη, μηκέθ' ὑπὸ τῆς τοῦ σώματος ἐπιρροῆς κατακλυζόμενοι μηδ' ὑπὸ τῶν παθῶν ἀγόμενοι, τὴν ἀψευδῆ δὲ καὶ μόνην ὄντως ἐλευθερίαν καρπούμενοι. 11. 4. μάρτυς δὲ τῆς ἐλευθερίας αὐτῶν ὁ βίος. ἴδιον οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν ὑπομένει κτήσασθαι τὸ παράπαν, οὐκ οἰκίαν, οὐκ ἀνδράποδον, οὐ χωρίον, οὐ βοσκήματα, οὐχ ὅσα ἄλλα παρασκευαὶ καὶ χορηγίαι πλούτου· πάντα δ' εἰς μέσον ἀθρόα καταθέντες κοινὴν καρποῦνται τὴν ἀπάντων ὠφέλειαν. 11. 5. οἰκοῦσι δ' ἐν ταυτῷ κατὰ θιάσους ἑταιρίας καὶ συσσίτια πεποιημένοι καὶ πάνθ' ὑπὲρ τοῦ κοινωφελοῦς πραγματευόμενοι [633] διατελοῦσιν. 11. 6. ἀλλ' ἑτέρων | ἕτεραι πραγματεῖαι, αἷς ἐπαποδύντες ἀόκνως διαθλοῦσιν, οὐ κρυμόν, οὐ θάλπος, οὐχ ὅσα ἀέρος νεωτερίσματα προφασιζόμενοι· πρὶν δ' ἡλίον ἀνασχεῖν ἐπὶ τὰ συνήθη τρεπόμενοι δυομένου μόλις ἐπανίασι χαίροντες οὐχ ἦττον τῶν ἐν τοῖς γυμνικοῖς ἐξεταζομένων ἀγῶσιν. 11. 7. ὑπολαμβάνουσι γὰρ ἅττ' ἂν ἐπιτηδεύωσιν εἶναι βιωφελέστερα καὶ ἡδίω ψυχῇ

<sup>1</sup> Other editions συννεωτερίζονται. One ms. has —τα, which accords better with Philo's general if not universal rule of using the singular verb with a neuter plural subject. (But see note in vol. viii. p. 445.) On the other hand if ἀβέβαια is predicate its position is strange.

HYPOTHETICA, 11. 3-7

virtue and desire to promote brotherly love. 11. 3. Thus no Essene is a mere child nor even a stripling or newly bearded, since the characters of such are unstable with a waywardness corresponding to the immaturity of their age, but full grown and already verging on old age, no longer carried under by the tide of the body nor led by the passions, but enjoying the veritable, the only real freedom. 11. 4. This freedom is attested by their life. None of them allows himself to have any private property, either house or slave or estate or cattle or any of the other things which are amassed<sup>a</sup> and abundantly procured by wealth, but they put everything together into the public stock and enjoy the benefit of them all in common. 11. 5. They live together formed into clubs, bands of comradeship with common meals, and never cease to conduct all their affairs to serve the general weal. 11. 6. But they have various occupations at which they labour with untiring application and never plead cold or heat or any of the violent changes in the atmosphere as an excuse. Before the sun is risen they betake themselves to their familiar tasks and only when it sets force themselves to return, for they delight in them as much as do those who are entered for gymnastic competitions. 11. 7. For they consider that the exercises which they practise whatever they may be are more valuable to life, more pleasant to soul and body and more <sup>a</sup> παρασκευή πλούτου may mean what prepares or procures wealth. But it is better taken as = "what wealth procures," the word often carrying with it the idea of affluence or luxury both in quality and quantity. Thus τῆς ἀφθόνου παρασκευῆς of Pharaoh, De Sac. 48, τῶν περιττῶν καὶ ἀκαθάρτων παρασκευῶν Leg. All. iii. 147, and τὴν παρασκευὴν of the sumptuous banquet in De Vit. Cont. 53.

PHILO

καὶ σώματι τὰ γυμνάσματα καὶ πολυχρονιώτερα τῶν ἐν ἀθλήσεσι, μὴ συναφηβῶντα τῇ τοῦ σώματος ἀκμῇ. 11. 8. εἰσὶ γὰρ αὐτῶν οἱ μὲν γεηπόνοι τῶν περὶ σπορὰν καὶ φυτουργίαν ἐπιστήμονες, οἱ 380 δὲ ἀγελάρχαι, παντοδαπῶν θρεμμάτων ἡγεμόνες, ἔνιοι δὲ σμήνη μελιττῶν ἐπιτροπεύουσιν. 11. 9. ἄλλοι δὲ δημιουργοὶ τῶν κατὰ τέχνας εἰσὶν, ὑπὲρ τοῦ μηδὲν ὦν αἱ ἀναγκαῖαι χρεῖαι βιάζονται παθεῖν, οὐδὲν ἀναβαλλόμενοι τῶν εἰς πορισμὸν ἀνυπαίτιον. 11. 10. ἐκ δὴ τῶν οὕτως διαφερόντων ἕκαστοι τὸν μισθὸν λαβόντες ἐνὶ διδόασι τῷ χειροτονηθέντι ταμία, λαβῶν δ' ἐκεῖνος αὐτίκα τὰπιτήδεια ὠνεῖται καὶ παρέχει τροφὰς ἀφθόνους καὶ τᾶλλα ὦν ὁ ἀνθρώπινος βίος χρειώδης. 11. 11. οἱ δ' ὁμοδαῖοι καὶ ὁμοτράπεζοι καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν εἰσὶ τοῖς αὐτοῖς ἀσμενίζοντες, ὀλιγοδείας ἐρασταί, πολυτέλειαν ὡς ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος νόσον ἐκτρεπόμενοι. 11. 12. κοινὴ δ' οὐ τράπεζα μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐσθῆς αὐτοῖς ἐστι· πρόκεινται γὰρ χειμῶνι μὲν στιφραὶ χλαῖναι, θέρει δ' ἐξωμίδες εὐτελεῖς, ὡς εὐμαρῶς ἐξεῖναι τῷ βουλομένῳ ἢ ἂν ἐθελήσῃ λαβεῖν, ἐπειδὴ καὶ τὰ ἐνὸς ἀπάντων καὶ τὰ πάντων ἔμπαλιν ἐνὸς ὑπείληπται. 11. 13. καὶ μὴν εἴ τις αὐτῶν ἀσθενήσειεν, ἐκ τῶν κοινῶν νοσηλεύεται θεραπευόμενος ταῖς ἀπάντων ἐπιμελείαις καὶ φροντίσιν. οἱ δὲ δὴ πρεσβῦται, κἂν εἰ τύχοιεν ἄτεκνοι, καθάπερ οὐ πολὺπαιδες μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ σφόδρα εὐπαιδες, ἐν εὐτυχεστάτῳ καὶ λιπαρωτάτῳ γήρᾳ τὸν βίον εἰώθασι καταλύειν, ὑπὸ τοσοῦτων προνομίας ἀξιούμενοι καὶ τιμῆς ἐκουσίῳ γνώμῃ μᾶλλον 440

HYPOTHETICA, 11. 7-13

lasting than those of the athlete in as much as they can still be plied with vigour when that of the body is past its prime. 11. 8. Some of them labour on the land skilled in sowing and planting, some as herdsmen taking charge of every kind of cattle and some superintend the swarms of bees. 11. 9. Others work at the handicrafts to avoid the sufferings which are forced upon us by our indispensable requirements and shrink from no innocent way of getting a livelihood. 11. 10. Each branch when it has received the wages of these so different occupations gives it to one person who has been appointed as treasurer. He takes it and at once buys what is necessary and provides food in abundance and anything else which human life requires. 11. 11. Thus having each day a common life and a common table they are content with the same conditions, lovers of frugality who shun expensive luxury as a disease of both body and soul. 11. 12. And not only is their table in common but their clothing also. For in winter they have a stock of stout coats ready and in summer cheap vests,<sup>a</sup> so that he who wishes may easily take any garment he likes, since what one has is held to belong to all and conversely what all have one has. 11. 13. Again if anyone is sick he is nursed at the common expense and tended with care and thoughtfulness by all. The old men too even if they are childless are treated as parents of a not merely numerous but very filial family and regularly close their life with an exceedingly prosperous and comfortable old age; so many are those who give them precedence and honour as their due and minister to them as a duty voluntarily and deliberately ac-<sup>a</sup> Or " tunics," cf. De Vit. Cont. 38.

PHILO

ἢ φύσεως ἀνάγκη θεραπεύειν ἀξιούντων.

11. 14. ἔτι τοίνυν ὅπερ ἢ μόνον ἢ μάλιστα τὴν κοινωनीαν ἔμελλε διαλύειν ὀξυδερκέστερον ἰδόντες γάμον παρητήσαντο μετὰ τοῦ καὶ διαφερόντως ἀσκεῖν ἐγκράτειαν. Ἐσσαίων γὰρ οὐδεὶς ἄγεται γυναῖκα, διότι φίλαυτον ἢ γυνὴ καὶ ζηλότυπον οὐ μετρίως καὶ δεινὸν ἀνδρὸς ἦθη παλεῦσαι καὶ συν-[634] γὰρ θῶπας λόγους καὶ τὴν ἄλλην | ὑπόκρισιν ὡσπερ ἐπὶ σκηνῆς, ὅψεις καὶ ἀκοὰς ὅταν δελεάσῃ, διηπατημένων οἷα ὑπηκόων τὸν ἡγεμόνα νοῦν φενα-κίζει. 11. 16. παῖδες δ' εἰ γένοιτο, φρονήματος ὑποπλησθεῖσα καὶ παρρησίας ὅσα κατ' εἰρωνείαν πρότερον ὑπούλως ὑπηγνίτετο, ταῦτα ἀπ' εὐ-381 τολμοτέρου θράσους ἐκλαλεῖ καὶ ἀναισχυντοῦσα βιάζεται πράττειν ὧν ἕκαστον κοινωνίας ἐχθρόν.
 11. 17. ὁ γὰρ ἢ γυναικὸς φίλτροις ἐνδεθεὶς ἢ τέκνων ἀνάγκη φύσεως προκηδόμενος οὐκέτι πρὸς ἄλλους ὁ αὐτὸς ἐστίν, ἀλλ' ἕτερος λέληθε γεγονώς,<sup>1</sup> ἀντ' ἐλευθέρου δούλος.

11. 18. Οὕτως γοῦν ὁ βίος ἐστὶν αὐτῶν περι-μάχητος, ὥστ' οὐκ ἰδιῶται μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ μεγάλοι βασιλεῖς ἀγάμενοι τοὺς ἀνδρας τεθήπασι καὶ τὸ σεμνὸν αὐτῶν ἀποδοχαῖς καὶ τιμαῖς ἔτι μᾶλλον σεμνοποιοῦσι.

<sup>1</sup> Other editions γέγονε λεληθώς.

<sup>a</sup> Cf. ἔριδες ἐκ πάθους γυναικείου, ζηλοτυπίας Spec. Leg. i. 108. This diatribe must not, I think, be taken as Philo's definite opinion, but rather as what might be plausibly argued by the Essenes.

HYPOTHETICA, 11. 13-18

cepted rather than enforced by nature.

11. 14. Furthermore they eschew marriage because they clearly discern it to be the sole or the principal danger to the maintenance of the communal life, as well as because they particularly practise continence. For no Essene takes a wife, because a wife is a selfish creature, excessively jealous<sup>a</sup> and an adept at beguiling the morals of her husband and seducing him by her continued impostures. 11. 15. For by the fawning talk which she practises and the other ways in which she plays her part like an actress on the stage she first ensnares the sight and hearing, and when these subjects as it were have been duped she cajoles the sovereign mind. 11. 16. And if children come, filled with the spirit of arrogance and bold speaking she gives utterance with more audacious hardihood to things which before she hinted covertly and under disguise, and casting off all shame she compels him to commit actions which are all hostile to the life of fellowship. 11. 17. For he who is either fast bound in the love lures of his wife or under the stress of nature makes his children his first care ceases to be the same to others and unconsciously has become a different man and has passed from freedom into slavery.

11. 18. Such then is the life of the Essenes, a life so highly to be prized that not only commoners but also great kings look upon them with admiration and amazement, and the approbation and honours which they give add further veneration to their venerable name.

ON PROVIDENCE
(DE PROVIDENTIA)

INTRODUCTION TO DE PROVIDENTIA

As stated in the Preface the fragments from the De Providentia recorded by Eusebius stand on a different footing from the extracts from the Hypothetica, in that not only they but the whole treatise of which they are a part exist in an Armenian version.<sup>a</sup> It consists of two books, both cast at any rate originally in the form of a dialogue between Philo who maintains the belief that the world is governed by Providence and one Alexander who puts forth his doubts and difficulties. This Alexander may be taken with fair certainty to be Philo's nephew Alexander Tiberius, who afterwards apostatized from Judaism.

As Eusebius's extracts are all drawn from the second book we need not trouble with the much shorter first book. It will be enough to record Wendland's verdict without necessarily accepting it entirely. It amounts to this. It has been worked over by a clumsy hand which has destroyed the interlocutory setting, and torn the thoughts away from their essential order; it includes two large Christian interpolations, but otherwise is genuinely Philonic. The second book, which is twice the length, has no such difficulties. The dialogue is clearly maintained throughout. There is nothing which suggests interpolation and the parallelism both of thought and language, at any rate in the part of which the original is preserved by Eusebius, gives overwhelming evidence of its genuineness. This is particularly true of the first part of the second fragment. It is very remarkable therefore that it is more devoid of traces of Judaism than even the Quod Omn. Prob. and the De Aet. There are no allusions to the O.T., and no mention of Moses; the one and only fact which suggests that the writer is a Jew is the personal allusion to his visit to Jerusalem via Ascalon (§ 64). This has naturally raised doubts in the minds of critics who have not made themselves thoroughly familiar with Philo's thoughts and diction, but Wendland's<sup>a</sup> searching analysis and collection of the parallels can hardly fail to carry conviction to the most sceptical, and even without this any fairly careful reader of Philo will constantly feel, as he goes through the Greek of the De Providentia, that he has seen something like this before though he cannot exactly say where it is to be found.

<sup>a</sup> The Armenian version was translated into Latin by Aucher in 1822, together with another, De Animalibus. It is this Latin translation which is always quoted by commentators and editors of Philo.

PHILO

Eusebius has recorded something like two-thirds of Philo's answers to Alexander's argument but of the argument itself only the first section of this text, and even this he represents as if it were a statement by Philo himself of the objections which opponents might adduce—there are occasional uses of a second person singular but otherwise there is hardly anything to suggest a dialogue.

The omission of the opponent's case is not seriously felt either in the short extract given here as Fragment (1), or in the long answer to the argument that Providence, if it exists, treats the good too badly and the bad too well. For this is a difficulty felt in every age and probably found in every literature from Job and Asaph onwards. Philo was able to manipulate, even if he did not entirely invent, the part which Alexander plays, and he does not seem to have treated his opponent fairly in making him quote as examples of the good fortune of the wicked Polycrates, who was finally impaled, and Dionysius, whose life of perpetual anxiety was proverbial. In the second part of this extract things are rather different and the suppression of Alexander's difficulties makes the discourse seem disjointed. The references for instance to the country of the Cyclopes, to the habits of swallows, snakes and crocodiles seem a chaotic ramble until we turn to the argumentation to which they are an answer.

<sup>a</sup> Philos Schrift über die Vorsehung, 1892.

ON PROVIDENCE

For the full understanding of this part of the extract the earlier part of the Armenian version is invaluable. What is its value in the part where the Greek and Armenian stand side by side? As a translation, not much, nor would it be very much, even if Aucher's Latin was always intelligible, or if we were sure that he had always rendered the Armenian accurately. But in deciding the text it has a value which seems to have been ignored by the editors of the Praeparatio.<sup>a</sup> Where the Latin <sup>a</sup> I do not see in the editions of either Gaisford or Gifford, who give a critical apparatus, any allusions to the readings of the Armenian, nor in either Heinichen's or Dindorf's edition any sign that they have been taken into account, though Aucher's translation was available to them all. None of them probably knew any Armenian, and Wendland, who as far as I can ascertain, was the first to make use of it corresponds closely to the Greek there is often some word or phrase which clearly points to a variant from the text of all or most of the mss. of Eusebius and constitutes an important independent authority. Several examples of this will be found in the notes.

PHILO

What was said in the introduction to Quod Omn. Prob., that it may probably be ascribed to an earlier stage in Philo's spiritual life when his mind was more occupied with Greek philosophy and he had not yet settled down to his great task of interpreting the Pentateuch in the light of that philosophy, may be said of this treatise and also of the De Aet. if that is his work.

The following is an analysis of the extracts :

First fragment—The Divine artist in creating the Cosmos may be held to have accomplished what human artists aim at, namely, to use exactly the right amount of matter.

Second fragment—Alexander says that the wicked as a rule fare best and the good fare worst and that this shows that human life is not governed by Providence (1). Philo replies that if God does not at once punish the wicked it is on the same principle as that a father does not at once cast off a profligate for this purpose, tells us that he was equally ignorant of it, but he had great help from Conybeare, who was a distinguished Armenian scholar.

An Armenian version also exists for several treatises in the six volumes of Cohn and Wendland and is frequently cited by them, and these citations have been occasionally noted in this translation, though I do not remember many places except in the De Vit. Cont. where it has had much influence on them. They had, I suppose, no authoritative version of the Armenian like Aucher's to assist them.

ON PROVIDENCE

son (2-6). Also that the wicked are never really happy (7-8). The external goods valued by men are not valued by God or by the wise (9-10). Gold and silver are but lumps of earth though we fight for their possession (10-12). So with clothes, so with reputation (13). Bodily strength (14). Beauty (15). All these the true philosopher despises (16). The physician who is called in to attend a king does not waste time in admiring the royal trappings but goes straight to his patient (17). So, too, the physician of the soul should treat spiritual maladies and not be dazzled by external things or misled by the judgement of the evil world (18-20). It is no wonder therefore that the sages defied poverty (21) and the ill-treatment they receive is a necessary consequence of the moral atmosphere around them, even as the rain falls upon the just and the unjust (22-23). Alexander has cited the cases of Polycrates and the elder Dionysius. Polycrates' ultimate fate and his life of anxiety is an answer to this (24-25). And so too with Dionysius—witness the stories of his suspicions of his wife (26-28) and of Damocles (29-30). This is followed by general reflections on the mental sufferings sustained by such as these (30-32). The fate of the Phocian leaders who robbed the temple at Delphi shows that Heaven sometimes sends an immediate punishment for sin (33-34). And if tyrants sometimes remain unpunished we must remember first that God's judgement of their deserts are surer than ours (35-36) and also that they may be ministers sent to purge a sinful land, just as he sends pestilence and the like for the same purpose (37-42).

In the second part of this discourse he deals first with the disasters caused by natural phenomena, such as storms. All these are explained on the theory of "attendant circumstances" on the primary works of nature which are rightly regarded as providential (43-46). At the same time these attendant circumstances may be indirectly useful and illustrations of this are given (47-50). Phenomena which we do not understand, at any rate give an opportunity for research which is in itself valuable (51-52). The same applies to earthquakes and pestilences which are not to be regarded as Divine judgement (this seems to contradict 41). And that some even of the just should suffer from them is as inevitable as their participation in the dangers of a storm (53-55). Other points which Alexander has raised are then dealt with.<sup>a</sup> The existence of savage beasts is no reflection on Providence. Hunting them develops courage and the less courageous can easily guard against them if they are reasonably careful (56-58). Reptiles if generated from putrefaction may be classed as "attendant circumstances" (59), if generated in the ordinary way they may be accounted for on the grounds that their poisons are useful in compounding drugs and also it is suggested that they are sent as ministers of punishment (60-61). Alexander had also made a point of their hiding in houses, which Philo denies. At any rate if they sometimes do so it is the accumulation of rubbish which brings them (62). He also asked why Providence made the swallow frequent houses while the birds which we eat keep away. Philo replies that the swallows know that men will not hurt them, and illustrates this by the habits of the pigeons at Ascalon where they may not be eaten, and the crocodiles in parts where they are held in honour by the Egyptians (63-65). Alexander contrasted the fertility according to Homer of the land of the unjust Cyclopes with the barrenness of Greece, the country of the wise. The story of the Cyclopes, says Philo, is a fable and the dry climate of Greece though bad for the vegetation is good for intellect (66-68). Again he asks, why should Providence create animals and scents, both of which pander to luxury? Philo replies that we need not eat animal flesh and that scents of flowers have other uses (69-71). He concludes by saying that he thinks he has given a satisfactory answer to Alexander's difficulties.

PHILO

<sup>a</sup> The objections raised by Alexander, which are indispensable for understanding the latter part of the treatise, are for convenience stated again more fully in the notes to the text.

ON PROVIDENCE

DE PROVIDENTIA

(EUS. PRAEP. EVANG. VII. 21, 336 b—337 a)

[625] Περὶ δὲ τοῦ ποσοῦ τῆς οὐσίας, εἰ δὴ γέγονεν ὄντως, ἐκείνο λεκτέον. ἔστοχάσατο πρὸς τὴν τοῦ κόσμου γένεσιν ὁ Θεὸς αὐταρκεστάτης ὕλης ὡς [626] μήτ' ἐνδέοι μήθ' ὑπερβάλλοι. καίγαρ | ἄτοπον ἦν τοῖς μὲν κατὰ μέρος τεχνίταις, ὅποτε τι δημιουργοῖεν, καὶ μάλιστα τῶν πολυτελῶν, τὸ ἐν ὕλαις αὐταρκες σταθμῆσασθαι, τὸν δ' ἀριθμούς καὶ μέτρα καὶ τὰς ἐν τούτοις ἰσότητας ἀνευρηκότα μὴ φροντίσαι τοῦ ἱκανοῦ. λέξω δὴ μετὰ παρρησίας, ὅτι οὗτ' ἐλάττωνος οὔτε πλείονος οὐσίας ἔδει τῷ κόσμῳ πρὸς κατασκευὴν, ἐπεὶ οὐκ ἂν ἐγένετο τέλειος, οὐδ' ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς μέρεσιν ὀλόκληρος· εὖ δὲ δεδημιουργημένος ἐκ τελείας οὐσίας ἀπετελέσθη· πανσόφου γὰρ τὴν τέχνην ἴδιον, πρὶν ἄρξασθαι τινος κατασκευῆς, τὴν ἱκανὴν ἰδεῖν ὕλην. ἄνθρωπος μὲν οὖν κἂν εἰ τῶν ἄλλων τὴν ἐπιστήμην διαφέρῃ, μὴ δυνάμενος κατὰ τὸ παντελὲς ἐκφυγεῖν τὴν συγγενῆ τῶν θνητῶν πλάνην, ἀπατωτο

---

<sup>a</sup> The context of this fragment (Aucher, pp. 78-82) is as follows : Alexander has asked why, if God created the world, was just this amount of matter used and why just four elements taken. Philo, conceding for the sake of argument that matter may have been unoriginate, argues that this

ON PROVIDENCE

(FRAGMENT I)<sup>a</sup>

As to the quantity of the substance assuming that it<sup>b</sup> was really created what we have to say is this. God estimated for the creation of the world just sufficient matter that there should be neither deficiency nor excess. For it would be monstrous to suppose that while particular craftsmen when framing something, especially anything costly, estimate what material is just sufficient, He who invented numbers, measures and equality in them had no thought for what was adequate. I will say indeed with all confidence that the world needed neither less nor more substance for its construction, since otherwise it would not have been made perfect nor complete in all its parts, whereas actually it was made excellently out of a perfect substance. For it is a characteristic of a complete master of his art to see before he begins any constructive work that he has sufficient material. Now a man even if superior to everyone in knowledge may perhaps, as he cannot escape the errors congenital to mortals, be deceived as to the quantity of would not exclude the work of Providence in shaping it into the Cosmos.

<sup>b</sup> Presumably the οὐσία. But I do not understand the clause, for the assumption on which he is arguing is that it was not created by God. See App. p. 541.

PHILO

ἂν ἴσως περὶ τὴν ποσότητα τῆς ὕλης, ὅποτε τεχνιτεῖοι· τότε μὲν ὡς ἐλάττονι<sup>1</sup> προστιθέναι, τότε δὲ ὡς περιττῆς ἀφαιρεῖν· ὁ δὲ πηγὴ τις ὢν ἐπι-στημῶν, ἐνδέον ἢ περιττεύον οὐδὲν ἔμελλεν ὑπο-βάλλεσθαι, μέτροις ἄτε χρώμενος εἰς ἀκρίβειαν 337 ὑπερφυῶς πεπονημένοις ἅπασιν ἐπαινετοῖς. ὁ δὲ βουλόμενος ἄλλως ὑθλεῖν οὐκ ἂν φθάνοι καὶ τὰ πάντων ἔργα τῶν τεχνιτῶν ἀντία<sup>2</sup> τιθέμενος, ὡς ἄμεινον τῆς κατασκευῆς ἐπιλαχόντα προσθέσει τινὸς ἢ μειώσει τῶν ἐν ὕλαις, ἀλλὰ γὰρ σοφιστείας μὲν ἔργον εὐρεσιλογεῖν, σοφίας δὲ ἕκαστα διερευνᾶν τῶν ἐν τῇ φύσει.

<sup>1</sup> mss. ἔλαττον εὐρεσιλογεῖν.

<sup>2</sup> So Viger, Heinichen and Gifford for mss. αἴτια. I should myself prefer to retain αἴτια with Gaisford and Dindorf but insert ἂν after ἄμεινον = they are sure to bring it against the work of craftsmen as a whole that it might have been improved by using less or more, i.e. no human work uses an absolutely perfect amount of material and the same may be material needed when he practises his craft. He may sometimes find it too little and have to add, sometimes excessive and have to take away. But He who is as it were the fountain head of all knowledge was sure to provide nothing deficient or superfluous, since the standards which He employs are all to be extolled as elaborated with absolute accuracy. A person who wishes to waste his time in foolishness is sure <sup>a</sup> also to confront us at once with the works of all other craftsmen as having improved their construction by adding to or diminishing the material. But we leave futile argument for the sophist: the task of wisdom is to investigate all that nature has to show.

ON PROVIDENCE, 1

<sup>a</sup> For this idiomatic use of οὐκ ἄν φθάνοι, to express an immediate or inevitable action, see lexicon.

---

true of the Cosmos. The Armenian seems to have read αἴτια ("cunctorum opera artificum accusabit"), though what follows seems widely different from the Greek.

DE PROVIDENTIA

(EUS. PRAEP. EVANG. VIII. 14, 386—399)

[634]

1

Κατασκευάζει δὲ τὸν λόγον τοῦτον τὸν τρόπον·

Πρόνοιαν εἶναι λέγεις ἐν τοσαύτῃ τῶν πραγμάτων ταραχῇ καὶ συγχύσει; τί γὰρ τῶν κατὰ τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον διατέτακται; τί μὲν οὖν οὐκ ἀταξίας γέμει καὶ φθορᾶς; ἢ μόνος ἀγνοεῖς, ὅτι τοῖς μὲν κακίστοις καὶ πονηροτάτοις ἄφθονα ἐπικωμᾶζει τὰ ἀγαθὰ, πλοῦτος, εὐδοξία, τιμαὶ παρὰ τοῖς πλήθεσιν· ἡγεμονία πάλιν, ὑγεία, εὐαισθησία, κάλλος, ἰσχύς, ἀπόλαυσις ἡδονῶν ἀκώλυτος, διὰ τε παρασκευῶν περιουσίαν καὶ διὰ τὴν εἰρηνικωτάτην σώματος εὐμοιρίαν; οἱ δὲ φρονήσεως καὶ ἀρετῆς ἀπάσης ἐρασταί τε καὶ ἀσκηταὶ πάντες εἰσὶν, ὀλίγου δέω φάναι, πένητες, ἀφανεῖς, ἄδοξοι, ταπεινοί;

2 Ταῦτα εἰς ἀνασκευὴν καὶ μυρία ἄλλα πλείω τούτων εἰπών,

<sup>a</sup> See Introduction, p. 448.

<sup>b</sup> Alexander goes on to enlarge on all these injustices and to argue that they cannot be the work of a just providence. He then mentions specific cases, Polycrates and the elder Dionysius, both of which are later answered by Philo. He also says that the fall of the son of Dionysius is not to the point, for a just ruler does not punish the children for the guilt of the father (see § 55). He then speaks of the martyrdoms of Socrates, Zeno and Anaxarchus (cf. Quod Omn. Prob. 106 ff.). Philo in his reply does not deal with these.

ON PROVIDENCE

(FRAGMENT 2)

THIS is the method in which he conducts this discussion. <sup>1</sup> Alexander says “:

“ Do you maintain the existence of providence amid this vast welter and confusion of things? For what part of human life is subject to order, nay, what is not brimful of disorder and corruption? Or are you alone ignorant that to the worst and vilest of men good things in abundance come crowding in, wealth, high repute, honours paid to them by the masses, again authority, health with efficiency of the senses, beauty, strength, unimpeded enjoyment of pleasures through the abundance of their resources and the bodily well-being free from all disturbance which they possess, while the lovers and practisers of wisdom and every virtue are almost universally poor, obscure, of little repute and in a humble position? ”

After stating these and a host of others <sup>b</sup> on the negative <sup>2</sup>

---

In fact Alexander is represented as more or less answering himself. For he says of Zeno that by his endurance he earned high praise and of Anaxarchus that he could not really suffer affliction, “ qui divinae partis dignus est factus.”

The first part of Philo's reply is not given by Eusebius. In it in answer to Alexander's assertion of the poverty of the just, he points out that Democritus and Anaxagoras voluntarily resigned their property (cf. De Vit. Cont. 14 and 15, where a somewhat different view of their conduct is taken).

PHILO

ἐξῆς ἐπιλύεται τὰς ἀντιθέσεις διὰ τούτων.

Οὐ τύραννος ὁ Θεός, ὠμότητα καὶ βίαν καὶ ὅσα [635] δεσπότης ἀνημέρου | ἀρχῆς ἔργα ἐπιτετηδευκώς, ἀλλὰ βασιλεὺς ἡμερον καὶ νόμιμον ἀνημμένος ἡγεμονίαν, μετὰ δικαιοσύνης τὸν σύμπαντα οὐρα-3 νόν τε καὶ κόσμον βραβεύει. βασιλεῖ δὲ οὐκ ἔστι πρόσρησις οἰκειότερα πατρός. ὁ γὰρ ἐν ταῖς συγγενείαις πρὸς τέκνα γονεῖς, τοῦτο βασιλεὺς μὲν πρὸς πόλιν, πρὸς δὲ κόσμον ὁ Θεός, δύο κάλλιστα φύσεως θεσμοῖς ἀκινήτοις ἀδιαλύτῳ ἐνώσει ἀρμοσά-4 μενος, τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν μετὰ τοῦ κηδεμονικοῦ.
 καθάπερ οὖν τῶν ἀσώτων υἰέων οὐ περιορῶσιν οἱ τοκέες, ἀλλὰ τῆς ἀτυχίας οἶκτον λαμβάνοντες περιέπουσι καὶ τημελοῦσι, νομίζοντες ἐχθρῶν ἀσπόνδων ἔργον εἶναι κακοπραγίαις ἐπεμβαίνειν, φίλων δὲ καὶ συγγενῶν ἐπελαφρίζειν τὰ πταίσματα.
 5 πολλάκις δὲ καὶ τούτοις μᾶλλον ἢ τοῖς σῶφροσιν ἐπιδαιψιλευόμενοι χαρίζονται, σαφῶς εἰδότες, ὡς ἐκείνοις μὲν ἄφθονος εἰς εὐπορίαν ἀφορμὴ πάρεστιν ἢ σωφροσύνη, τοῖς δ' ἐλπίς μία οἱ γονεῖς, ἧς εἰ 6 σφαλεῖεν, ἀπορήσουσι καὶ τῶν ἀναγκαίων. τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ ὁ Θεός, λογικῆς συνέσεως πατὴρ ὢν, ἀπάντων μὲν τῶν λογισμοῦ μεμοιραμένων 387 κῆδεται, προμηθεῖται δὲ καὶ τῶν ὑπαιτίως ζώντων, ἅμα μὲν καιρὸν εἰς ἐπανόρθωσιν αὐτοῖς διδούς, ἅμα δὲ καὶ τὴν ἴλεων φύσιν αὐτοῦ μὴ ὑπερβαίνων,

---

<sup>a</sup> ἀνασκευή is the regular term for a destructive argument. Cf. Quintilian ii. 4. 18 "opus confirmandi destruendique eas (i.e. narrationes) quod κατασκευή et ἀνασκευή vocatur." κατασκευή (-άζω) can be used in a more general way as above.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 2-6

side <sup>a</sup> he next proceeds to refute the objections as follows.

God is not a tyrant who has made a practice of cruelty and violence and all the deeds committed by a despot who rules by ruthlessness, but a king invested with a kindly and law-abiding sovereignty who governs the whole heaven and earth with justice. Now for a king there is no fitter name than father, <sup>3</sup> for what the father in family life is to the children the king is to the state and God is to the world,<sup>b</sup>—God who under the immutable laws of nature has joined in indissoluble union two things most excellent, governorship and guardianship. Now parents do <sup>4</sup> not lose thought for their wastrel children but, in pity for their unhappy state, bestow on them care and attention, deeming that it is only mortal enemies who take advantage of the miseries of others to trample on them, while friends and kinsmen should lighten their downfall.<sup>c</sup> Often too they lavish their <sup>5</sup> kindness on the wastrels more than on the well behaved, knowing well that these have in their sober disposition a plentiful source of prosperity while the wastrels' one hope is in their parents, and if this fail them they will lack the very necessities of life. In the same way God too the Father of reasonable <sup>6</sup> intelligence has indeed all who are endowed with reason under His care but takes thought also for those who live a misspent life, thereby giving them time for reformation and also keeping within the bounds of His merciful nature, which has for its attendant ἧς ὁπαδὸς ἀρετὴ καὶ φιλανθρωπία γέγονεν, ἐπαξία τὸν θεῖον περιπολεῖν κόσμον.

<sup>b</sup> Eusebius at this point has omitted some words "and therefore in the greatest of poets, Homer, Zeus is called the father of gods and men."

<sup>c</sup> On the line of thought taken in this section see App. p. 541.

PHILO

7 Ἐνα μὲν δὴ λόγον τοῦτον, ὧ ψυχῇ,<sup>1</sup> δέξαι τέως αὐτοῦ παρακαταθήκην, ἕτερον δὲ συνωδὸν καὶ ἐναρμόνιον αὐτῷ τοιόνδε. μὴ τοσοῦτόν ποτε ψευσθείης τῆς ἀληθείας, ὡς εὐδαίμονά τινα τῶν φαύλων εἶναι νομίσαι, κἂν πλουσιώτερος μὲν ἦ Κροίσου, Λυγκέως δ' ὄξυωπέστερος, ἀνδρειότερος δὲ τοῦ Κροτωνιάτου Μίλωνος, καλλίων δὲ Γανυμήδους, “ὄν καὶ ἀνηρέψαντο θεοὶ Διὶ οἰνοχοεῦειν, κάλλεος εἵνεκα οἴο.”

8 τὸν γοῦν ἴδιον δαίμονα, λέγω δὲ τὸν ἑαυτοῦ νοῦν, μυρίων ὄσων δεσποτῶν δούλον ἀποφήνας, ἔρωτος, ἐπιθυμίας, ἡδονῆς, φόβου, λύπης, ἀφροσύνης, ἀκολασίας, δειλίας, ἀδικίας, οὐκ ἂν εἶναί ποτε δύναιτο εὐδαίμων, κἂν οἱ πολλοὶ σφαλλόμενοι κρίσεως ἀληθοῦς νομίζωσι, δεκασθέντες ὑπὸ κακοῦ διδύμου, τύφου καὶ κενῆς δόξης, δεινῶν παλεῦσαι καὶ παραγαγεῖν ἀνερματίστους ψυχάς, περὶ ἃ
9 κηραίνει γένος τὸ πλεῖστον ἀνθρώπων. εἰ μέντοι

<sup>1</sup> The Armenian seems to have read ψυχῇ (“in animum accipe”), which certainly seems more appropriate to a dialogue. On the other hand such an address to the soul or mind in general is thoroughly Philonic, cf. De Cher. 29, De Sac. 20; and in these sections 6-18 he is so seriously pursuing one of his favourite doctrines that we may well believe him to have cast aside for a moment the thought of a dialogue.

<sup>a</sup> Or perhaps “traverse,” i.e. leave no part unvisited, as virtue and loving kindness well fitted to keep watch as sentry <sup>a</sup> around God's world.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 6-9

Here is one thought. Receive it, O soul, and ponder <sup>7</sup> it awhile as a trust committed to thee by Him, but receive also another in harmony and agreement with it. It is this. Mayst thou never be so led astray from the truth as to think that happiness is the lot of any of the wicked though he excel Croesus in wealth, Lynceus in keen sight, Milo of Croton in muscular strength and Ganymede in beauty,

He who was for his beauty by the gods
Caught up to be the cupbearer of Zeus.<sup>b</sup>

Surely <sup>c</sup> if he has brought the ruler of his lot,<sup>d</sup> that is <sup>8</sup> his mind, into slavery to a host of masters, love, lust, pleasure, fear, grief, folly, incontinence, cowardice, injustice, happiness can never be his lot, however much it seems so to the multitude led astray from true judgement, seduced by the twofold pest, vain pomps and vain imaginations which are so highly skilled to cajole and mislead unballasted souls and are the source of disaster <sup>e</sup> to most of the human race. If <sup>9</sup>

God's scouts observing the needs of all. Hardly "pervade," as Gifford.

<sup>b</sup> Il. xx. 234.

<sup>c</sup> Philo's γοῦν can rarely be translated (as by Gifford here) by the traditional "at least." It generally serves to introduce an example or illustration and may be given by "thus." Here it introduces a definition of the φάυλος which shows his essential κακοδαιμονία.

<sup>d</sup> For τὸν ἴδιον δαίμονα cf. τὸν οἰκείον δαίμονα Flaccus 168. The force of the adjective in both cases is to mark that δαίμων here indicates the genius or personified fate of the individual and not a demon or supernatural being in general. (So perhaps rather than as in note on p. 394.)

<sup>e</sup> Or "of anxiety." On Philo's use of this phrase see App. p. 542.

PHILO

- [636] τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς | ὄμμα τείνας βουληθείης περιαθρήσαι
 Θεοῦ πρόνοιαν, ὡς ἔνεστιν ἀνθρωπίνῳ λογισμῶ, τρανωτέραν τὴν τοῦ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀγαθοῦ λαβὼν φαντασίαν, γελᾶσθαι τὰ παρ' ἡμῖν, ἃ τέως ἐθαύμαζες.
 αἰεὶ γὰρ ἀπουσία τῶν κρειττόνων τιμᾶται τὰ χείρονα, τὴν ἐκείνων κληρονομοῦντα τάξιν· ἐπι-φανέντων δὲ ὑποστέλλει, δευτερείους ἄθλων ἀρκού-10 μενα. καταπλαγεῖς οὖν τὸ θεοειδὲς ἐκείνο ἀγαθόν τε καὶ καλόν, πάντως ἐννοήσεις, ὅτι παρὰ Θεῶ τῶν εἰρημένων πρότερον οὐδὲν καθ' ἑαυτὸ τῆς ἀγαθοῦ μοίρας ἠξίωται, διότι τὰ μὲν ἀργύρου μέταλλα καὶ χρυσοῦ γῆς ἐστὶ ἡ φαυλοτάτη μοῖρα, τῆς πρὸς καρπῶν ἀνειμένης γένεσιν ὄλω καὶ τῷ 11 παντὶ λειπομένη. οὐ γάρ ἐστ' ὁμοιον τροφῆς, ἥς ἄνευ ζῆν ἀδύνατον, εὐπορία<sup>1</sup> χρημάτων. μία τούτων ἐστὶ βάσανος ἐναργεστάτη λιμός, ᾧ τὸ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀναγκαῖον καὶ χρήσιμον δοκιμάζεται· θησαυροὺς γὰρ τοὺς πανταχοῦ πάντας ἀντικατἀλλάξαιτ' ἂν τις βραχείας ποτὲ τροφῆς ἄσμενος.
 12 ὅταν δὲ ἡ τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἀφθονία, μυρίῳ φορᾶς <καὶ> ἀκατασχέτῳ πλήθει ῥυεῖσα, κατὰ πόλεις ἀναχέηται, τοῖς τῆς φύσεως ἀγαθοῖς ἐντροφῶντες, 388 ἐπ' αὐτῶν μόνων οὐκ ἀξιοῦμεν ἴστασθαι, κόρον δ' ὑβριστὴν ἠγεμόνα τοῦ βίου ποιησάμενοι, ἀργύρου τε καὶ χρυσοῦ κτήσεσιν ἐπαποδύντες, ἅπασι, παρ' ὧν ἂν τι κερδανεῖν ἐπελπίσωμεν, κονιόμεθα

<sup>1</sup> Gifford following Mangey reads εὐπορία <καὶ> χρημάτων, believing that ὁμοιος cannot be followed by a genitive. But cf. De Vit. Cont. 41. If emendation is required rather τροφῆ, cf. the Armenian "non est similis cibo . . . opum possessio."

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 9-12

indeed you would strain the soul's eyes to contemplate the providence of God as far as human reason can do so, you will gain a clearer vision of the true good and laugh to scorn what here are reckoned as goods which hitherto had your admiration. For in the absence of the better things worse are always held in honour and succeed to the position which belongs to the better, but when these return the worse withdraw and have to be content with the second prize. Then 10 awestruck at that divine revelation, so good and excellent, you will surely recognize that none of the things mentioned above ranks of itself in the sight of God as a good ; for mines of silver and gold are the most worthless portion of the earth, utterly and absolutely inferior to that which is given up to the production of fruit. For there is no likeness between 11 abundance of money, and the food without which we cannot live. The one clearest proof of this is famine, which tests what is truly necessary and useful. For anyone would gladly exchange all the treasures in the world for a little food. But when the lavish supply 12 of necessaries spreads in a vast resistless flood from city to city we enjoy the luxury of these good gifts of nature but are not content to confine ourselves to them. We take insolent satiety <sup>a</sup> as our guide in life and prepare ourselves for the task of acquiring gold and silver, armed <sup>b</sup> with every means by which we may hope to get some gain, like blind men whose mind

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Flacc. 91 and see note on De Virt. 162.

<sup>b</sup> Both ἐπαποδύεσθαι and κοιέσθαι are favourite words of Philo (cf. Flacc. 128, Hyp. 11. 6 and Flacc. 104). When they occur together as here and in Quod Det. 32 and De Abr. 256 they presumably indicate the preliminary and the final stage in the preparation for any action, the stripping preceding the powdering.

PHILO

- καθάπερ τυφλοί, μηκέτι τῇ διανοίᾳ βλέποντες ὑπὸ φιλαργυρίας ὅτι γῆς εἰσὶν ὄγκοι, περὶ ὧν ἐκ μὲν
- 13 εἰρήνης συνεχῆς καὶ ἀδιάστατος πόλεμος. ἐσθῆ-τές γε μὴν προβάτων εἰσὶν, ὡς οἱ ποιηταὶ που φασίν, ἄνθος, κατὰ δὲ τὴν δημιουργὸν τέχνην, ὑφαντῶν ἔπαινος. εἰ δέ τις ἐπὶ δόξῃ μέγα φρονεῖ, τὴν παρὰ τῶν φαύλων ἀποδοχὴν ἀσπαζόμενος, ἴστω μὲν καὶ αὐτὸς φαῦλος ὧν· τὸ γὰρ ὅμοιον
- 14 χαίρει τῷ ὁμοίῳ. εὐχέσθω δὲ καθαρσίων μεταλαχῶν ἰαθῆναι τὰ ὦτα, δι' ὧν αἱ μεγάλαι ψυχῆ νόσοι κατασκήπτουσι. μαθέτωσαν δὲ καὶ ὅσοι ἐπ' εὐτονία πεφύσηνται μὴ ὑψαυχενεῖν, ἀπιδόντες εἰς τὰς τῶν ἡμέρων καὶ ἀτιθάσων ζώων ἀμυθήτους ἀγέλας, αἷς ἰσχὺς καὶ ῥώμη συγγεγένηται. τῶν γὰρ ἀτοπωτάτων ἐστὶν ἐπὶ θηρίων ἀρεταῖς, καὶ ταῦτα παρενημερούμενον ὑπ' αὐτῶν, ἄνθρωπον
- 15 ὄντα σεμνύνεσθαι. διὰ τί δ' ἂν τις εὖ φρονῶν ἐπὶ σώματος εὐμορφία ἀγάλλοιτο, ἢν βραχὺς
- [637] καιρὸς ἔσβησε, πρὶν ἐπὶ μήκιστον ἀνθῆσαι, | τὴν ἀπατηλὴν αὐτῆς ἀκμὴν ἀμαυρώσας, καὶ ταῦθ' ὄρων ἐν ἀψύχοις περιμάχητα καλλιγράφων ἔργα καὶ πλαστῶν καὶ ἄλλων τεχνιτῶν, ἐν τε ζωγραφήμασι, καὶ ἀνδριάσι, καὶ ὑφασμάτων ποικιλίαις, ἐν Ἑλλάδι καὶ βαρβάρῳ κατὰ πόλιν ἐκάστην
- 16 εὐδοκιμοῦντα; τούτων οὖν, ὅπερ ἔφην, οὐδὲν παρὰ Θεῷ τῆς <του> ἀγαθοῦ μοίρας ἠξίωται. καὶ τί θαυμάζομεν εἰ μὴ παρὰ Θεῷ; οὐδὲ γὰρ παρὰ ἀνθρώποις τοῖς θεοφιλέσι, παρ' οἷς τὰ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀγαθὰ καὶ καλὰ τετίμηται, φύσεως μὲν εὐμοίρου λαχοῦσι, μελέτῃ δὲ μετ' ἀσκήσεως τὴν φύσιν ἐπικοσμήσασιν, ὧν ἡ ἄνοθος φιλοσοφία

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 12-16

through covetousness has lost the power to see that it is for lumps of earth that we forfeit peace and wage a constant and persistent war. As for clothes, they are 13 but what the poets call the flower of the sheep<sup>a</sup> and on the craftsman's side a credit to the weavers. And if anyone prides himself on his prestige and welcomes with open arms the approval of the worthless he may be assured of his own worthlessness, for like delights 14 in like. Let him pray to get purging medicine for his ears, through which pass heavy maladies to strike the soul. And all who puff themselves up on their bodily strength must learn not to be proud necked but turn their eyes to the myriad kinds of animals tame and wild, in which bodily strength and muscle are congenital. It is a monstrous absurdity for a human being to pride himself on excellencies which belong to savage beasts when actually he is outdone in these by them. And why should anyone of good 15 sense glory in bodily beauty which ere it has flowered for its full span is brought to extinction by a brief season which dims the brightness of its delusive prime?—particularly when he sees exhibited in lifeless forms the much prized work of painters, sculptors and other artists, in portraits, statues and cunning tapestry work, works which are famous in every city throughout Greece and the outside world. None of these as 16 I have said is ranked in God's sight as a good. And why should we wonder that God does not accept them as goods?—since neither do godly men accept them, who honour things truly good and excellent, men who have been blest with a gifted nature and by study and exercise have further beautified that nature, men who have been made what they are by genuine <sup>a</sup> Cf. Il. xiii. 599 and elsewhere οἶος ἄωρον.

PHILO

17 δημιουργός. ὅσοι δὲ νόθου παιδείας ἐπεμελήθησαν, οὐδὲ τοὺς ἰατροὺς ἐμιμήσαντο τὸ δούλον ψυχῆς σῶμα θεραπεύοντας, οἱ τὴν δέσποιναν ἐπιφάσκοντες ἰᾶσθαι. ἐκείνοι μὲν γάρ, ἐπειδὴν τις εὐτυχῆς νοσήσῃ, κἂν ὁ μέγας ἢ βασιλεύς, πάνθ' ὑπερβάντες τὰ περίστωα, τοὺς ἀνδρῶνας, τὰς γυναικωνίτιδας, γραφάς, ἄργυρον, χρυσόν, 389 ἄσημον, ἐπίσημον, ἐκπωμάτων ἢ ὑφασμάτων πλήθος, τὸν ἄλλον τῶν βασιλέων αἰοίδιμον κόσμον, ἔτι δὲ τὸν οἰκετικὸν ὄχλον, καὶ τὴν φίλων ἢ συγγενῶν, ὑπηκόων τῶν ἐν τέλει θεραπείαν ἐάσαντες,<sup>1</sup> [τῶν σωματοφυλάκων],<sup>2</sup> ἄχρι τῆς εὐνῆς ἀφικόμενοι, καὶ τῶν περὶ αὐτὸ τὸ σῶμα ἀλογήσαντες, οὐθ' ὅτι κλίνας λιθοκόλλητοι καὶ ὀλόχρυσοι θαυμάσαντες, οὐθ' ὅτι ἀραχνοῦφείς ἢ λίθῳ γεγραφημέναι<sup>3</sup> στρωμαί, οὐθ' ὅτι ἐσθημάτων ἰδέαι διάφοροι, προσέτι δὲ τὰς περὶ αὐτὸν χλαίνας ἀπαμφιάσαντες,

<sup>1</sup> mss. ἄξαντες, which Gaisford and Dindorf retain. See App. p. 542.

<sup>2</sup> The sentence cannot stand as it is, but I doubt whether Gifford and others are right in regarding τῶν σωμα. as a gloss. The picture seems to have passed from τις εὐτυχῆς to the Great King, and that beside the friends and courtiers he should have bodyguards round his bed is natural enough. I should prefer to read <διά> τῶν σωμα. The Armenian is translated by "per custodes corporis." Also perhaps καὶ should be inserted after συγγενῶν.

<sup>3</sup> The phrase, for which some mss. have λιθογραφημένοι, is justly suspected both because of λιθοκόλλητοι just above and because jewels do not fit well with bedding or with γράφω or γραφέω. Mangey, who asks "why not λίνον for λίθος?", goes on to suggest λινορραφεῖς or λινορραφούμεναι (so Dindorf). But is there any serious objection to the formation of philosophy.<sup>a</sup> But those whose study has 17 been in a spurious culture do not even follow the example of the physicians who treat the body which is the servitor of the soul, though they claim to be healing the mistress. For those physicians of the body, when a man favoured by fortune is sick, even though he be the Great King himself, take no notice of the colonnades, of the men's apartments, of the ladies' bowers, of the pictures, of the silver and gold whether coined or uncoined, of the accumulation of goblets or tapestry work and the rest of the magnificence which adorns kingship. They care not for the multitude of serving men or the friends or kinsmen or subjects in high positions who are in attendance,<sup>b</sup> but make their way to his bed and taking no account of the surroundings of the body itself nor noting with admiration that the beds are inlaid with jewels and of pure gold and that the bedding is of spider-web silk or brocaded, or the coverlets<sup>c</sup> of different kinds of beauty, they go farther and strip the wrap-

<sup>a</sup> Or perhaps better "which (i.e. μελέτη and άσκησις) are produced by genuine philosophy," though philosophy cannot properly be said to create the study. But cf. Quod Omn. Prob. 160.

<sup>b</sup> Or possibly ὄχλον may be governed by ὑπερβάντες and θεραπείαν εάσαντες = "omitting to pay their respects" (to the great people). This would emphasize the antithesis between these physicians and the false physicians of the soul who render homage (προσεκύνουν) to the courtiers (see § 19).

<sup>c</sup> Or "his clothes," and χλαίνας "blankets" (so Gifford).

---

λινογραφέω? That it is not known from elsewhere matters little in Philo. The meaning will be the same as that of ἀνοβαφεῖς De Vit. Cont. 49. Wendland suggests ἡνογραφημέναι, cf. De Op. 138. The Armenian has "lapillis descriptum."

PHILO

ἄπτονται χειρῶν, καὶ τὰς φλέβας προσπιεζοῦντες ἀκριβοῦσι τοὺς παλμούς, εἰ σωτήριοι· πολλάκις δὲ καὶ τοὺς χιτωνίσκους ἀναστειλαντες, εἰ περιπληθῆς ἐσθ' ἡ γαστήρ ἐξετάζουσιν· εἰ πεπυρωμένος ὁ θώραξ, εἰ ἄτακτα ἡ καρδία πηδᾷ· κᾶπειτα τὴν οἰκείαν προσφέρουσι θεραπείαν.

- 18 ἔδει δὲ καὶ τοὺς φιλοσόφους ἰατρικὴν ὁμολογοῦντας ἐπιτηδεύειν τῆς φύσει βασιλίδος ψυχῆς, καταφρονεῖν μὲν ἀπάντων ὅσα αἱ κεναὶ δόξαι τυφοπλαστοῦσιν, εἴσω δὲ προσιόντας ἄπτεσθαι διανοίας αὐτῆς, εἰ ὑπ' ὀργῆς ἀνισοταχεῖς καὶ παρὰ φύσιν κεκινημένοι παλμοί, ἄπτεσθαι καὶ γλώττης, εἰ [638] τραχεῖα καὶ | κακῆγορος, εἰ πεπορνευκυῖα καὶ ἀταμίευτος, ἄπτεσθαι καὶ γαστρός, εἰ ἀπλήστω σχήματι<sup>1</sup> ἐπιθυμίας διώδηκε· καὶ συνόλως παθῶν καὶ νοσημάτων καὶ ἀρρωστημάτων, εἰ κεκρᾶσθαι δοκεῖ, διερευνᾶν ἕκαστον, ἵνα μὴ διαμαρτάνωσι
- 19 τῶν προσφόρων εἰς τὸ σώζειν. νυνὶ δὲ ὑπὸ τῆς τῶν ἔξω περιαιγασθέντες λαμπρότητος, ἅτε νοητὸν φῶς ἰδεῖν ἀδυνατοῦντες, πλαζόμενοι διετέλεσαν εἰς τὸν αἰῶνα, πρὸς μὲν τὸν βασιλέα λογισμὸν φθάσαι μὴ δυναθέντες, ἄχρι δὲ τῶν προπυλαίων μόλις ἀφικνούμενοι, καὶ τοὺς ἐπὶ θύραις ἀρετῆς, πλοῦτόν τε καὶ δόξαν καὶ ὑγείαν καὶ τὰ συγγενῆ

<sup>1</sup> See note a. Mangey suggested φυσήματι or ρέυματι. But I should like to read ἀπλήστω θρέμματι ἐπιθυμία, cf. De Vit. Cont. 74, Spec. Leg. i. 148, iv. 94. The regular association of this Platonic phrase with the belly makes it very suitable here. I do not know that the change of letters involved is very promising, but it is a remarkable coincidence that in De Mut. 105 the mss. have σχημάτων, which has been with general acceptance corrected to θρεμμάτων. But see App. p. 543.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 17-19

pings off him and take hold of his hands and squeezing the veins mark carefully the pulsations to see whether they are healthy. And often they draw up the under-vest and make an examination to see whether the belly is over-loaded or the chest inflamed, or the heart-beats irregular, and then they apply the appropriate treatment.

So too the philosophers who 18 profess to practise the art of healing that queen of Nature's making, the soul, should despise all the vain inventions of idle opinion, and passing within take hold of the mind itself, to see whether anger makes its pulsations run at an irregular rate and with unnatural excitement: so too with the tongue to see whether it is rough and evil speaking or bawdy and licentious: so too the belly to see whether it is swollen by an insatiable form of lust<sup>a</sup>; and in general if there appear to be a complication of passions, distempers and infirmities to investigate each of them so as not to miss anything which may serve to restore it to health. As it is, dazzled by the brilliance 19 of external things, because they are unable to see the spiritual light, they have continued to wander for ever, never able to reach King Reason, only just managing to make their way to his portal where, struck with admiration for those who wait at virtue's doorstep, riches, reputation, health and their kin, they <sup>a</sup> Namely gluttony. So rather than as Gifford "some insatiable form." As Philo has dealt with the particular vices of which the tongue is the instrument, so now with the belly. Possibly λαιμαργία or its equivalent has fallen out. But σχήματι itself is open to suspicion. Philo does not seem to use it=form in the sense of "kind." When it is not used in a literal or geometrical way, it="guise" or "appearance," whether external as De Vit. Cont. 30 or moral as in Flacc. 126. For possible corrections see note 1.

PHILO

- 20 τεθραυμακότες, προσεκύνουν. ἀλλὰ γὰρ ὡς ὑπερβολὴ μανίας χρωμάτων κριταῖς χρῆσθαι τυφλοῖς, ἢ κωφοῖς τῶν κατὰ μουσικὴν φθόγγων, οὕτω καὶ φαύλοις ἀνδράσι τῶν πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἀγαθῶν. καὶ γὰρ οὗτοι τὸ κυριώτατον τῶν ἐν αὐτοῖς διάνοιαν πεπήρωνται, ἧς βαθὺ σκότος ἀφροσύνη κατέχεεν.
- 21 εἶτα νῦν θαυμάζομεν, εἰ Σιωκράτης
- 390 καὶ ὁ δεῖνα ἢ ὁ δεῖνα τῶν σπουδαίων ἐν πενίᾳ διετέλεσαν, ἄνθρωποι μηδὲν πρόποτε τῶν εἰς πορισμὸν ἐπιτηδεύσαντες, ἀλλὰ μηδ' ὅσα ἢ παρὰ φίλων πολυχρημάτων ἢ παρὰ βασιλέων δωρεὰς μεγάλας προτεινόντων [παρῆν]<sup>1</sup> λαβεῖν ἀξιώσαντες, ἔνεκα τοῦ μόνον ἀγαθὸν καὶ καλὸν τὴν τῆς ἀρετῆς κτήσιν ἠγείσθαι, περὶ ἣν πονοῦμενοι τῶν ἄλλων
- 22 ἀγαθῶν πάντων ἠλόγουν; τίς δ' οὐκ ἂν ἀλογήσαι νόθων ἔνεκα προνοίας τῶν γνησίων; εἰ δὲ σώματος θνητοῦ μεταλαχόντες, καὶ κηρῶν γέμοντες ἀνθρωπίνων, καὶ μετὰ τοσοῦτου πλήθους ἀδίκων ζῶντες, ὧν οὐδ' ἀριθμὸν εὐρεῖν εὐπορον, ἐπεβουλεύθησαν, τί τὴν φύσιν αἰτιώμεθα, δέον τὴν τῶν
- 23 ἐπιθεμένων κακίζειν ὠμότητα; καὶ γὰρ εἰ ἐν ἀέρι γεγένητο λοιμικῶ, πάντως ὄφειλον νοσησαὶ καταστάσεως δὲ λοιμικῆς μᾶλλον, ἢ οὐχ ἦττον, φθοροποιός ἐστιν ἢ κακία. ὡς δ' ὁπόταν ὑετοῦ μὲν ὄντος, ἀνάγκη τὸν σοφόν, εἰ ἐν ὑπαίθρῳ διάγοι, καταβρέχεσθαι, Βορέου δὲ ψυχροῦ καταπνέοντος ῥίγει πιέζεσθαι καὶ ψυχεῖ, θέρους δ' ἀκμάζοντος ἀλεαίνεσθαι (ταῖς γὰρ ἔτησίοις τροπαῖς τὰ σώματα rendered homage to them.<sup>a</sup> But to take the judgment of the bad as to what is truly good is as grossly insane as to take that of the blind on colours or the deaf on musical sounds. For the bad have lost the use of their most dominant part, their mind, over which folly has shed profound darkness.

<sup>1</sup> παρῆν is bracketed by most editors, including Dindorf; Gifford's Apparatus Criticus indicates that it is omitted by most if not all mss. If retained as by Mangey translate "all that they might have received."

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 20-23

Can we then still wonder that Socrates<sup>b</sup> and any virtuous person you like to name have continued to live a life of poverty, never having practised any method of gaining wealth, refusing indeed to take anything from wealthy friends or kings who offered them great gifts, because they considered that there is nothing good or excellent save acquiring virtue, for which they laboured neglecting all the other goods? And who with the thought of the genuine before them would not disregard the spurious for its sake? But if possessed of a mortal body and brimful of the plagues which beset mankind and living amid the unjust, a multitude so great that it cannot even be easily counted, they become the victims of malice, why do we accuse Nature when we should reproach the cruelty of their assailants? For if they had been living in a pestilential atmosphere they would have been bound to take the disease, and vice is more or at least no less destructive than pestilential surroundings. And as the wise man must needs get drenched if he stays in the open air when it is raining or suffer from the rigour of the cold when the north wind's blast is chilly, or get heated in the summer, since it is a law of nature that our bodily feelings correspond

<sup>a</sup> i.e. as courtiers in attendance (see examples in lexicon) rather than gate-keepers.

<sup>b</sup> Perhaps in allusion to Alexander's remark (Aucher, p. 50), though there it is the unjust condemnation, not the poverty of Socrates, which is cited.

PHILO

σμπάσχειν νόμος φύσεως), τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον τὸν ἐν τοῖς τοιούτοις χωρίοις ἐνοικοῦντα, “ ἔνθα φόνοι λιμοὶ τε<sup>1</sup> καὶ ἄλλων ἔθνεα κηρῶν,” ἐναλλάττεσθαι τὰς ἀπὸ τῶν τοιούτων τιμὰς ἀναγκαῖον.<sup>2</sup>

24 Ἐπεὶ Πολυκράτει γε, ἐφ’ οἷς δεινοῖς ἠδίκησε
[639] καὶ ἠσέβησε, χορηγὸς ἀπήντησε, χείρων | μὲν ἢ τοῦ βίου βαρυδαιμονία· πρόσθε δ’ ὡς ὑπὸ μεγάλου βασιλέως ἐκολάζετο, καὶ προσηλοῦτο, χρησμὸν ἐκπιπλάς. Οἶδα, ἔφη, κάμαντὸν οὐ πρὸ πολλοῦ θεωρῆσαι<sup>3</sup> δόξαντα ὑπὸ μὲν ἡλίου ἀλείφεσθαι, λούεσθαι δ’ ὑπὸ Διός. αἱ γὰρ διὰ συμβόλων αἰνιγματώδεις αὐταὶ φάσεις, ἀδηλούμεναι τὸ πάλαι, τὴν διὰ τῶν ἔργων ἀριδηλοτάτην ἐλάμβανον 25 πίστιν. οὐκ ἐπὶ τελευτῇ δὲ μόνον, ἀλλὰ παρὰ πάντα τὸν ἐξ ἀρχῆς βίον, ἐλελήθει πρὸ τοῦ σώ-ματος τὴν ψυχὴν κρεμάμενος. αἰεὶ γὰρ φοβούμενος καὶ τρέμων τὸ πλῆθος τῶν ἐπιτιθεμένων ἐπτόητο, σαφῶς ἐξεπιστάμενος ὅτι εὖνους μὲν ἦν οὐδεῖς, ἐχθροὶ δὲ πάντες δυσπραξία ἀμείλικτοι.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. φόνοι τελοῦνται καὶ, which Gaisford and Dindorf retain.

<sup>2</sup> Eusebius here has missed out a sentence which is given by Aucher (p. 63) thus: “ nullatenus ergo decet eos felices putare, qui paulo ante memorati sunt, etsi fortuna iuvare eos videatur.” This explains the ἐπεὶ . . . γε which begins the next sentence.

<sup>3</sup> Dindorf ἠωρῆσθαι. See App. p. 543.

<sup>a</sup> Quoted from Empedocles, though the line runs φόνος τε κῶτος τε. See App. p. 543.

<sup>b</sup> χείρων may possibly mean that the punishment was worse than the offence, but the addition of μὲν followed by πρόσθε δέ suggests that the βίου βαρυδαιμονία was worse than the impalement, and this is brought out in what follows.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 23-25

to the annual changes of the season, so also he who lives in places

Where murder's rife and famine too and tribes of other ills<sup>a</sup> must submit to the penalties which they successively impose.

For as for Polycrates, in requital for his terrible acts<sup>24</sup> of injustice and impiety he encountered his rewarder in the shape of lifelong misery. Add to this a lesser ill,<sup>b</sup> that he was punished by the Great King and impaled, thus fulfilling an oracle. "I know," he said, "that I saw myself not long ago anointed as it seemed by the sun and washed by Zeus."<sup>c</sup> For the riddle thus symbolically stated, though at first obscure, received very clear attestation from what actually occurred. But it was not only at the end but through<sup>25</sup> all his life from the first that his soul, though he knew it not, was in the same suspense which later befell his body.<sup>d</sup> For he lived in perpetual fear and trembling, scared by the multitude of his assailants and knowing well that none was friendly to him, but all had been turned by their misery into implacable enemies.

<sup>c</sup> I have translated the sentence as punctuated in the editions, but I see no point in the οἶδα or καί in κάμαντόν. I should prefer to punctuate the sentence, χρησμόν ἐκπιπλᾶς οἶδα, ἔφη, κάμαντόν, κτλ. and translate: "I recognize that I have fulfilled an oracle, and that it was myself that I saw who appeared to be anointed," etc., i.e. he dreamt that he saw somebody being anointed, etc., but did not recognize that it was himself. This is I think quite in accordance with the phenomena of dreams. In any case the story differs from Her. iii. 124, where it is the daughter of Polycrates who sees the dream. On the Armenian version see App. p. 543.

<sup>d</sup> Or "even more than in his body." Cf. the same phrase in § 56, where order in value rather than in time seems to be indicated. And so also, I think, in Flacc. 2.

26 Τῆς δὲ ἀνηνύτου καὶ συνεχοῦς<sup>1</sup> εὐλαβείας μάρτυρες 391 οἱ τὰ Σικελικὰ συγγράψαντες, οἳ φασιν, ὅτι καὶ τὴν θυμηρεστάτην ὑποπτον εἶχε γυναῖκα. σημεῖον δέ· τὴν εἰς τὸ δωμάτιον εἴσοδον, δι' ἧς φοιτήσῃ ἔμελλεν ὡς αὐτόν, ἐκέλευσε στορεσθῆναι σανίσιν, ἵνα μὴ λάθῃ ποτὲ παρεισερπύσασα, ψόφῳ δὲ καὶ κτύπῳ τῆς ἐπιβάσεως προμηνύῃ τὴν ἀφίξιν· εἶτ' οὐκ ἀνείμονα μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς μέρεσι γυμνήν, ἃ μὴ θέμις ὑπ' ἀνδρῶν ὀράσθαι, παρἔρχεσθαι· πρὸς δὲ τούτοις, τὸ συνεχές τοῦ κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν ἐδάφους εἰς τάφρου γεωργικῆς εὐρος καὶ βάθος διακοπῆναι, κατὰ δέος μὴ τι πρὸς ἐπιβουλήν ἀφανῶς ἐπικρύπτηται, ὅπερ ἢ ἄλμασιν ἢ μακραῖς 27 διαβάσεσιν ἔμελλε διελέγχεσθαι. πόσων ἄρα κακῶν ὁ ταῦτα παρατηρῶν καὶ τεχνάζων ἐπὶ γυναικός, ἢ πρὸ τῶν ἄλλων ὠφείλε πιστεύειν, μεστὸς ἦν;
 ἀλλὰ γὰρ ἐώκει τοῖς δι' ἀπορρῶγος ὄρους ἐπὶ τῷ τὰς ἐν οὐρανῷ φύσεις ἀριδηλοτέρας κατανοῆσαι κρημνοβατοῦσιν, οἳ μόλις φθάνοντες ἄχρι προνενευκότος αὐχένος, οὐτ' ἄνω χωρεῖν<sup>2</sup> ἔτι δύνανται, πρὸς τὸ λειπόμενον ὕψος ἀπειρηκότες, οὔτε καταβαίνειν θαρροῦσι, πρὸς τὴν ὄψιν τῶν χασμάτων 28 ἰλιγγιῶντες. ἐρασθεῖς γάρ, ὡς θείου πράγματος καὶ περιμαχήτου, τυραννίδος, οὔτε μένειν οὔτε ἀποδιδράσκειν ἀσφαλές εἶναι ὑπελάμβανε. μένοντι

<sup>1</sup> It seems quite necessary to insert here Διονυσίου, though no ms. nor the Armenian translation has it.

<sup>2</sup> mss. ἀναχωρεῖν.

<sup>a</sup> Or "anxiety," so rather than "caution," though the noun usually carries a favourable sense in Philo as in other writers. Philo however sometimes uses the verb in a more general sense, e.g. Flacc. 145.

<sup>b</sup> The same story is told of Dionysius in Cic. Tusc. Disp.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 26-28

The endless and continual fear<sup>a</sup> shown by Dionysius 26 is attested by the historians of Sicily, who tell us that he suspected even his dearly beloved wife.<sup>b</sup> This is proved by his ordering that the entrance to the chamber through which she had to pass to join him should be covered with boards so that she should never creep in unawares but should give notice of her arrival by the creaking and rattling made by her stepping on them. Also she had to come not merely undressed<sup>c</sup> but with the parts naked which it is indecent for men to see. Further he had the continuous line of the floor along the passage broken by a gap as deep and broad as a ditch in the farmland, so that if, as he dreaded, some secret attempt to do him a mischief were made in the darkness it would be detected by the visitors jumping or striding across the gap. How vast a burden of ills was his who 27 watched so craftily over the wife whom he was bound to trust above all others. Indeed he resembled the climbers who scale a precipitous mountain to get a clearer view of the heavenly bodies,<sup>d</sup> and when they manage with difficulty to reach some outstanding cliff cannot go any higher because their heart fails them before the height which still remains, nor have they courage to descend as their heads swim at the sight of the yawning chasms below. For enamoured 28 as he was of tyranny as something divine and much to be coveted he did not consider it safe either to stay as he was or to flee. If he stayed he was sure

v. 59, though there Dionysius has two wives treated thus. So also the story of Damocles, ibid. 61 f. <sup>c</sup> See App. p. 544.

<sup>d</sup> Or more accurately "heavenly beings"—a common phrase for the stars conceived of as alive. Cf. e.g. Quod Det. 88, and the description of sun and moon as θεῖαι φύσεις below, § 50, also De Aet. 47.

PHILO

μὲν γὰρ ἀλλεπάλληλα ἐπέρρει κακὰ ἀμύθητα· βουλομένῳ δ' ἀποδιδράσκειν ὁ περὶ τοῦ ζῆν ἐπ-[640] εκρέματο κίνδυνος, ὠπλισμένων, | εἰ καὶ μὴ τοῖς σώμασιν, ἀλλὰ τοι ταῖς διανοίαις κατ' αὐτοῦ.

29 δηλοῖ δὲ καὶ τὸ ἔργον, ᾧ πρὸς τὸν μακαρίζοντα τὸν τῶν τυράννων βίον φασὶ χρήσασθαι Διονύσιον. καλέσας γὰρ αὐτὸν ἐπὶ λαμπροτάτου καὶ πολυτελεστάτου δείπνου παρασκευήν, ἐκ μηρίνθου πάνυ λεπτῆς προσέταξεν ἠκονημένον ὑπεραιωρηθῆναι πέλεκυν. ἐπεὶ δὲ κατακλιθεὶς εἶδεν αἰφνίδιον, οὗτ' ἐξαναστήναι θαρρῶν διὰ τὸν τύραννον, οὗτ' ἀπολαῦσαί τινος τῶν παρεσκευα-σμένων διὰ δέος οἷός τε ὦν, ἀφθόνων καὶ πλουσίων 30 ὄψεις ἐκαραδόκει τὸν οἰκεῖον ὄλεθρον. συνεῖς δ' ὁ Διονύσιος, Ἄρ' ἤδη κατανοεῖς, ἔφη, τὸν αἰοίδιμον καὶ περιμάχητον ἡμῶν βίον; ἔστι γὰρ τοιοῦτος, εἰ μὴ βούλοιτό τις ἑαυτὸν φενακίζειν, ἐπειδὴ περιέχει παμπληθεῖς μὲν χορηγίας, ἀπόλαυσιν δ' 392 οὐδενὸς χρηστοῦ· φόβους δ' ἐπαλλήλους, καὶ κινδύνους ἀνηκέστους, καὶ νόσον ἐρπηνώδους καὶ φθινάδος χαλεπωτέραν, ἀθεράπευτον αἰεὶ φέρουσαν 31 ὄλεθρον. οἱ δὲ πολλοὶ τῶν ἀνεξετάστων ὑπὸ τῆς λαμπρᾶς φανερότητος ἀπατώμενοι, ταῦτόν πε-πόνθησι τοῖς ἀγκιστρευομένοις ὑπὸ τῶν εἰδεχθῶν ἑταιρίδων, ἃ τὴν δυσμορφίαν ἐσθῆτι καὶ χρυσῶ καὶ ταῖς τῆς ὄψεως ὑπογραφαῖς ἐπισκιάζοντα, γνησίου κάλλους ἀπορία, νόθον ἐπ' ἐνέδρα τῶν

---

<sup>a</sup> Or "by painting under (i.e. pencilling) their eyes," and probably this is what is intended here. But strictly speaking the singular ὄψιν, which Philo also uses, Leg. All. iii. 62,

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 28-31

to meet a torrent of innumerable evils in constant succession. If he wanted to flee, his life was menaced by danger from those whose minds at least if not their bodies were armed against him. Another 29 proof is the way in which he is said to have treated a person who asserted the felicity of the tyrant's life. Having invited him to a dinner which had been provided on a very magnificent and costly scale he ordered a sharp-edged axe to be suspended over him by a very slender thread. When after taking his place on the couch the guest suddenly saw this, he had neither the courage in the tyrant's presence to rise and remove himself nor the power in his terror to enjoy the dishes provided, and so regardless of the abundance and wealth of the pleasures before him, he lay with neck and eye strained upwards, expecting his own destruction. Dionysius perceived this and 30 said: "Do you now understand what this glorious and much coveted life of ours really is?" This is the sort of thing it is in the eyes of anyone who does not wish to deceive himself. For it includes wealth supplied in full abundance but not the enjoyment of anything worth having, only terrors in constant succession, dangers unescapable, a malady more grievous than the creeping and wasting sickness, bringing with it destruction that knows no remedy. But the 31 thoughtless multitude deluded by the brilliant outward appearance are in the same condition as men ensnared by unsightly courtesans who disguise their ugliness with fine raiment and gold and the paint upon their faces,<sup>a</sup> and so for lack of the genuine beauty

De Sac. 21, De Fug. 153, must mean "face." Cf. also of the male prostitutes Spec. Leg. iii. 37 τὰς ὄψεις τριβόμενοι καὶ ὑπογραφόμενοι.

PHILO

- 32 θεωμένων δημιουργεί. τοιαύτης γέμουσι βαρυνδαιμονίας οἱ λίαν εὐτυχεῖς, ἧς τὰς ὑπερβολὰς αὐτοὶ δικάσαντες παρ' ἑαυτοῖς οὐ στέγουσιν, ἀλλ' ὥσπερ οἱ τὰ ἄρρωστήματα<sup>1</sup> ὑπ' ἀνάγκης ἐκλαλοῦντες, ἀφιασι τὰς ἐκ πάθους ἀψευδεστάτας φωνάς, ἐπὶ συνουσίᾳ τιμωριῶν καὶ παρουσῶν καὶ προσδοκωμένων ζῶντες, καθάπερ τῶν θρεμμάτων τὰ πρὸς ἱερουργίαν παινόμενα. καὶ γὰρ ταῦτα τῆς πλείστης ἐπιμελείας ἐπὶ τῷ σφαγῆναι τυγχάνει διὰ πολύκρεων εὐωχίαν.
- 33 Εἰσὶ δ' οἱ καὶ περὶ χρημάτων<sup>2</sup> ἀσεβῶν οὐκ ἀδήλους ἀλλὰ φανεράς ἔδοσαν δίκας, ὧν τὰ πλήθη καταλέγεσθαι περιττὸς πόνος, ἀπόχρη δ' ἔν ἔργον παράδειγμα πάντων ἐστάναι. λέγεται τοίνυν ὑπὸ τῶν ἀναγεγραφότων τὸν ἱερὸν πόλεμον<sup>3</sup> ἐν Φωκίδι, νόμου κειμένου τὸν ἱερόσυλον κατακρημνίζεσθαι ἢ καταποντοῦσθαι ἢ καταπίμπρασθαι, τρεῖς συλήσαντας τὸ ἐν Δελφοῖς ἱερὸν, Φιλόμηλον καὶ Ὀνόμαρχον καὶ Φάυλλον, διανείμασθαι τὰς τιμωρίας. τὸν μὲν γὰρ διὰ λόφου τραχέος καὶ λιθώδους ραγείσης πέτρας κατακρημνισθῆναί τε create the spurious to entrap those who behold them. Such is the misery which fills to the brim the life of 32 those greatly favoured by fortune, misery whose extent measured by the judgement of their own hearts is more than they can contain, and like those who are forced to proclaim their maladies<sup>a</sup> they utter words of absolute sincerity wrung from them by their sufferings. Surrounded by punishments present and expected they live like beasts who are fattened for a sacrifice, for such receive the most careful attention to prepare them for the slaughter, because of the rich feast of flesh which they supply.

<sup>1</sup> Or ἄρρητα, which is read by one good ms. and is adopted by Mangey and Dindorf. It was also read by the Armenian (Aucher, p. 67) "sicut illi, qui arcana quae silere vellent, tamen coacti tormentis exponunt," and gives a more natural sense.

<sup>2</sup> The Armenian (Aucher, p. 67) "sunt qui illico impietatis non occultas sed potius manifestas poenas luant" evidently reads παραχρήμα τῶν ἀσεβῶν, which Wendland believes to be the true reading. And though "for impious gains" suits the examples which follow quite well, the form is rather strange, and the next paragraph suggests that the im-

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 31-33

There are some who have been punished not 33 obscurely but conspicuously for sacrilegious robbery, a numerous body which it would be superfluous labour to name in full. It will suffice to let one case stand as an example of them all. The historians who have described the sacred war in Phocis state that whereas there was a law enacted that the temple robber should be thrown from a precipice or drowned in the sea, or burnt alive, three persons who robbed the temple at Delphi, Philomelus, Onomarchus and Phayllus, had these punishments distributed between them. The first fell over a rugged and stony crag and as a piece of rock broke off he was killed both from the fall from the height and from the weight of piety punished is not restricted to sacrilege, but includes all violence.

<sup>a</sup> Or "disclose what should be kept secret." See note 1.

---

<sup>3</sup> All other editions insert τὸν without any ms. authority. Gifford is, I think, quite right in arguing that when one attribute has been given between the article and the noun, a second attribute may follow the noun without a repetition of the article.

PHILO

- καὶ καταλευσθήναι· τὸν δέ, ἀφηνιάσαντος τοῦ
 [641] κομίζοντος ἵππου | καὶ μέχρι θαλάσσης καταβάντος, ἐπιδραμόντος τοῦ πελάγους, εἰς ἀχανῆ βυθὸν αὐτῷ ζῶω καταδῦναι· Φάυλλον δὲ φθινάδι νόσῳ (διττὸς γὰρ ὁ περὶ αὐτοῦ λόγος) συντακῆναι, ἢ ἐν τῷ ἐν 34 Ἄβαις ἱερῷ συνεμπρησθέντα ἀπολέσθαι. ταῦτα γὰρ φιλονεικότατον λέγειν ἀποβῆναι κατὰ τύχην.
 εἰ μὲν γὰρ τινες ἢ ἐν διαφέρουσι καιροῖς ἢ ἑτέραις ἐκολάσθησαν τιμωρίαις, εἰκὸς ἦν τὸ ἄστατον τῆς τύχης προφασίζεσθαι· πάντων δ' ἀθρόως καὶ ὑφ' ἓνα καιρὸν καὶ μὴ ἑτέραις τιμωρίαις ἀλλὰ ταῖς περιεχομέναις ἐν τοῖς νόμοις κολασθέντων, εὐλογον 35 φάσκειν ὅτι Θεοῦ δικάσαντος ἐάλωσαν.
 393 Εἰ δέ τινες τῶν ὑπολειφθέντων βιαίων, καὶ τοῖς πλήθεσιν ἐπαναστάντων, καὶ δουλωσαμένων οὐ μόνον δῆμους ἑτέρους ἀλλὰ καὶ πατρίδας τὰς ἑαυτῶν, ἀτιμώρητοι διετέλεσαν, θαυμαστὸν οὐδέν.
 πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ οὐχ ὁμοίως ἄνθρωπος δικάζει καὶ Θεός, διότι τὰ μὲν φανερά ἡμεῖς ἐρευνῶμεν, ὁ δὲ ἄχρι μυχῶν ψυχῆς εἰσδυόμενος ἀψοφητί, καθάπερ ἐν ἡλίῳ λαμπρὰν διάνοιαν ἀυγάζει, ἀπαμπίσχων μὲν τὰ περιάπτα, οἷς ἐγκατείληπται, γυμνὰ δὲ περιαθρῶν τὰ βουλήματα, καὶ δια-γινώσκων εὐθὺς τὰ τε παράσημα καὶ δόκιμα.
 36 μηδέποτ' οὖν τὸ οἰκείον δικαστήριον τοῦ θείου προκρίναντες, ἀψευδέστερον αὐτὸ καὶ εὐβουλό-

<sup>a</sup> So cf. Diodorus xvi. 30 ἑαυτὸν κατεκρήμνισε, Pausanias x. 2 ρίπτει ἑαυτὸν κατὰ ὑψηλοῦ καὶ ἀποτόμου κρημνοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> Pausanias x. 2 gives a different version of this: φεύγων . . . καὶ ἐπὶ θάλασσαν ἀφικόμενος ἐνταῦθα ὑπὸ τῶν στρατιωτῶν κατηκοντίσθη τῶν οἰκείων, who ascribed their defeat to his cowardice and blundering.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 33-36

the stone.<sup>a</sup> In the case of the second the horse on which he was riding got out of control and rushed down to the sea and under the onrush of the tide both rider and horse sank in the deep gulf.<sup>b</sup> As for Phaÿllus, there are two versions of his story, one that he wasted away in consumption, the other that he perished in the flame which consumed the temple at Abae.<sup>c</sup> To assert that these events are due to chance 34 is pure contentiousness. No doubt if people had been punished at different times or by other penalties it would be sensible enough to ascribe them to the caprice of fortune. But when all were punished together about the same time and by penalties not of another kind but those contained in the laws, it is reasonable to assert that they were the victims of divine justice.

And if some of the men of violence still left un- 35 mentioned, insurgents who seized power over the populace and enslaved not only other peoples but their own countries, continued unpunished, why should we wonder? For in the first place the judgements of men and God are not alike. For we inquire into what is manifest but He penetrates noiselessly into the recesses of the soul, sees our thoughts as though in bright sunlight, and stripping off the wrappings in which they are enveloped, inspects our motives in their naked reality and at once distinguishes the counterfeit from the genuine. Let us never then 36 prefer our own tribunal to that of God and assert that it is more infallible and wiser in counsel, for that <sup>c</sup> The first version is given by both Diodorus and Pausanias, l.c. Pausanias x. 35 mentions the burning of the temple at Abae by the Thebans, together with the Phocian refugees within it. .

PHILO

τερον εἶναι φῶμεν· οὐ γὰρ ὅσιον. ἐν ᾧ μὲν γὰρ πολλὰ τὰ σφάλλοντα, ἀπατηλαὶ αἰσθήσεις, πάθη ἐπίβουλα, κακιῶν ὁ βαρύτατος ἐπιτειχισμός, ἐν ᾧ δὲ οὐδὲν μὲν τῶν ἐπ' ἑξαπάτη, δικαιοσύνης δὲ καὶ ἀλήθεια, αἷς ἕκαστον βραβευόμενον ἐπαινετῶς ἐξορθοῦσθαι πέφυκεν.

37 Ἐπειτ', ὧ γενναῖε, μὴ νομίσης ἀλυσιτελὲς ἐπικαιρον εἶναι τυραννίδα. οὐδὲ γὰρ ἡ κόλασις ἀλυσιτελὲς, ἀλλὰ τιμωρίας διδόναι τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς ἢ ὠφελιμώτερον ἢ οὐκ ἀποδέον. οὐ χάριν ἐν ἅσασι μὲν τοῖς ὀρθῶς γραφεῖσι παρείληπται νόμοις· οἱ δὲ γράψαντες ὑπὸ πάντων ἐπαινοῦνται. ὅπερ γὰρ ἐν δήμῳ τύραννος, τοῦτ' ἐν νόμῳ κόλασις.

38 ἐπειδὴν οὖν ἔνδεια μὲν καὶ σπάνις δεινὴ καταλάβῃ τὰς πόλεις ἀρετῆς, ἀφθονία δ' ἀφροσύνης ἐπιπολάσῃ, τηνικαῦτα ὁ Θεός, ὥσπερ ρεῦμα χειμάρρου τὴν φορὰν τῆς κακίας ἀποχετεῦσαι γλιχόμενος, ἵνα καθάρῃ τὸ γένος ἡμῶν, ἰσχὺν καὶ κράτος [642] δίδωσι | τοῖς τὰς φύσεις ἀρχικοῖς. ὡμῆς γὰρ δίχα 39 ψυχῆς οὐ καθαίρεται κακία. καὶ ὅνπερ τρόπον αἱ πόλεις ἐπ' ἀνδροφόνους καὶ προδόταις καὶ θεοσύλαις δημίους ἀνατρέφουσιν, οὐ τὴν γνώμην ἀποδεχόμενοι τῶν ἀνδρῶν, ἀλλὰ τὸ τῆς ὑπηρεσίας χρήσιμον ἐξετάζουσιν, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ ὁ τῆς μεγαλοπόλεως τοῦδε τοῦ κόσμου κηδεμών, οἷα δημίους κοινούς ἐφίστησι τοὺς τυράννους ταῖς πόλεσιν, ἐν αἷς ἂν αἰσθηταὶ βίαν, ἀδικίαν, ἀσέβειαν,

<sup>a</sup> Literally "more profitable or not less so," i.e. than the absence of any punishment for offences. But the sentence is obscure. The translation above makes the best sense, but we should expect either δίδοσθαι or τοὺς ἀδίκους as subject to religion forbids. Ours has many pitfalls, the delusions of the senses, the malignancy of the passions and most formidable of all the hostility of the vices; while in His there is nothing that can deceive, only justice and truth, and everything that is judged according to these standards brings praise to the judge and cannot but be settled aright.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 36-39

Secondly, my friend, do not suppose that a temporary tyranny is without its uses. For neither is punishment useless, and that penalties should be inflicted is actually profitable to the good or at any rate not detrimental.<sup>a</sup> And therefore in all properly enacted laws punishment is included, and those who enacted them are universally praised, for punishment has the same relation to law as a tyrant has to a people. So when a dire famine and dearth of virtue takes possession of states, and folly unstinted is prevalent, God, desiring to drain off the current of wickedness as if it were the stream of a torrent, gives strength and power to men naturally fitted to rule in order to purify our race. For wickedness cannot be purged away without some ruthless soul to do it. And just as states maintain official executioners to deal with murderers and traitors and temple robbers, not that they approve of the sentiments of these persons, but with an eye to the usefulness of their service, so the Governor of this great city of the world sets up tyrants like public executioners over the cities which He sees inundated with violence, in*διδόναι*. The straightforward translation "it is more profitable to the good to be punished," i.e. because punishment however unjust brings out heroism, seems out of place here. Another possibility "it is more beneficial to give the power of punishing to the good (than to a tyrant)" does not suit οὐκ ἀποδέον. The two could hardly be put on a par.

PHILO

- 40 τὰ ἄλλα κακὰ πλημμύροντα, ὅπως ἤδη ποτὲ στάντα 394 λωφήσῃ. τηνικαῦτα καὶ τοὺς αἰτίους, ὡς ἐκ δυσκαθάρτου καὶ ἀνηλεοῦς ψυχῆς ὑπηρετήσαντας, ἐφ' ἅπασι, ὥσπερ τινὰς κορυφαίους, ἀξιοὶ μετέρχεσθαι. καθάπερ γὰρ ἡ τοῦ πυρὸς δύναμις, ὅταν παραβληθεῖσαν ὕλην ἀναλώσῃ, τελευταῖον αὐτὴν ἐπινέμεται, τοῦτον τὸν τρόπον καὶ οἱ ἐπὶ τοῖς πλήθεσι δυναστείας εἰληφότες, ὅταν δαπαινῆσαντες τὰς πόλεις κενὰ ἀνδρῶν ἐργάσωνται, τὰς ὑπὲρ 41 ἀπάντων τίνοντες δίκας ἐπιδιαφθείρονται. καὶ τί θαυμάζομεν, εἰ διὰ τυράννων ὁ Θεὸς κακίαν ἀναχθεῖσαν ἐν πόλεσι καὶ χώραις καὶ ἔθνεσιν ἀποδιοπομπεῖται; πολλάκις γὰρ μὴ χρώμενος ὑπηρεταῖς ἄλλοις αὐτὸς δι' ἑαυτοῦ τοῦτ' ἐργάζεται, λιμὸν ἐπάγων ἢ λοιμὸν ἢ σεισμὸν καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα
 θεήλατα, οἷς ὄμιλοι μεγάλοι καὶ πολυάνθρωποι καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ἀπόλλυνται, καὶ πολλὴ μοῖρα τῆς οἰκουμένης ἐρημοῦται διὰ προμήθειαν ἀρετῆς.
 42 Ἰκανῶς μὲν οὖν εἷς γε τὰ παρόντα περὶ τοῦ μή τινα τῶν φαύλων εὐδαιμονεῖν, ὡς οἶμαι, λέλεκται· δι' οὗ μάλιστα παρίσταται τὸ εἶναι πρόνοϊαν. εἰ δὲ μηδέπω πέπεισαι, τὸν ἔθ' ὑποικουροῦντα ἐνδοιασμὸν εἰπέ θαρρῶν· ἀμφότεροι γὰρ ἦ τάληθές ἔχει συνδιαπορήσαντες εἰσόμεθα.

43 Καὶ μεθ' ἕτερα πάλιν φησίν·

Ἐνέμων καὶ ὑετῶν φορὰς οὐκ ἐπὶ λύμῃ τῶν

---

<sup>a</sup> There is a considerable interval between these two parts of Philo's argument. In this interval Alexander, in response to the invitation given in the preceding sentence, alleges various facts about the construction of the universe, which seem to serve no purpose which can be ascribed to Providence. Philo has answered many of these difficulties as justice, impiety and all the other evils, in order that they may be at last brought to a standstill and abate. Then too it seems good to Him to crown the punishment of all by bringing to justice those who have carried it out. For knowing that their services were the outcome of an impious and ruthless soul He treats them as in a sense the capital offenders. For just as the force of fire after devouring all the fuel supplied to it finally consumes itself, so too those who have seized dominion over the populaces when they have exhausted the cities and emptied them of all their men pay the penalty due for all and perish as well. And why should we wonder that God uses tyrants to sweep away the wickedness which has spread through cities and countries and nations. For often instead of employing other ministers He effects this by Himself by bringing famine or pestilence and earthquake, and all the other divine visitations whereby great bodies of people perish in huge numbers every day and a large part of the world is desolated for His purpose of promoting virtue.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 39-43

Enough then I think has been said for the present on the theme that none of the wicked has happiness, and this is a very strong proof that providence exists. But if you are not yet convinced, fear not to tell me your still lingering doubts, for by combining our efforts we shall both get to know where the truth is to be found.

Later again he says <sup>a</sup>:

Storms of wind and rain were made by God, not as they arise, and among these is that recorded by Eusebius in another connexion (see Frag. I). The others he deals with in his final answer, which is given by Eusebius in the sections which follow.

PHILO

πλεόντων, ὡς ἐνόμιζες, ἢ γεωργούντων, ἀλλ' ἐπ' ὠφελεία τοῦ παντός ἡμῶν γένους ὁ Θεὸς ἐργάζετο.
 ὕδασι μὲν γὰρ τὴν γῆν καθαίρει, τὸν δ' ὑπὸ σελήνην ἅπαντα χῶρον πνεύμασιν· ἀμφοτέροις δὲ ζῶα καὶ 44 φυτὰ τρέφει, καὶ αὔξει, καὶ τελειοῖ. εἰ δὲ τοὺς μὴ ἐν καιρῷ πλωτῆρας ἢ γεωπόνους ἐστὶν ὅτε βλάπτει, θαυμαστὸν οὐδέν· βραχὺ γὰρ οὗτοι μέρος, ἢ δ' ἐπιμέλεια τοῦ παντός ἀνθρώπων γένους.
 ὡσπερ οὖν τὸ ἐν τῷ γυμνασίῳ ἄλειμμα τίθεται μὲν ἐπ' ὠφελεία, πολλάκις δ' ὁ γυμνασίαρχος ἔνεκα πολιτικῶν χρειῶν ὥρας τῆς ἐν ἔθει μετέθηκε
 [643] τὴν τάξιν, δι' ἧς | ὑστέρησαν ἔνιοι τῶν ἀλειφομένων· οὕτω καὶ ὁ Θεός, οἷα πόλεως τοῦ παντός ἐπι-μελούμενος κόσμον, θέρη χειμαίνοντα καὶ χειμῶνας ἐαρίζοντας εἴωθε ποιεῖν ἐπὶ τῇ τοῦ παντός ὠφελεία, κἂν εἰ ναύκληροί τινες ἢ γῆς ἐργάται μέλλοιεν ταῖς 45 τούτων ἀνωμαλίαις ζημιουῖσθαι. τὰς οὖν τῶν στοιχείων εἰς ἄλληλα μεταβολάς, ἐξ ὧν ὁ κόσμος ἐπάγη καὶ συνέστηκεν, εἰδὼς ἀναγκαιότατον ἔργον, 395 ἀκωλύτους παρέχεται· πάχνη δὲ καὶ χιόνες καὶ ὄσα ὁμοιότροπα ἀέρος ἐπακολουθεῖ καταψύξει, καὶ πάλιν προσαράξει καὶ παρατρίψει νεφῶν, ἀστραπαὶ τε καὶ βρονταί· ὧν οὐδὲν ἴσως κατὰ πρόνοιαν,

<sup>a</sup> Alexander has been represented (Aucher, p. 100) as describing the injuries caused by rain and wind and adding that while rain may be often useful, hail, snow, thunder and lightning are quite useless.

<sup>b</sup> Or perhaps "the anointing is appointed" or even "the oil is placed," and below "those who are being anointed," and the importance in the next section attached to the oil favours this. But πολιτικάι χρεῖαι, whatever that exactly means,

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 43-45

you supposed,<sup>a</sup> to do grievous harm to voyagers and husbandmen, but to benefit our race as a whole. For He purges the earth with water and the whole sub-lunary region with breezes. And with both He gives sustenance, growth and maturity to animals and plants. If these sometimes harm persons who travel 44 by sea out of season or tillers of the land there is nothing wonderful. They are but a small fraction and His care is for the whole human race. So then as the course of training in the gymnasium is drawn up <sup>b</sup> for the benefit of the pupils, but the gymnasiarch sometimes to suit civic requirements makes a change in the arrangement of the regular hours whereby some of those under training lose their lesson, so too God having the charge of the whole world as though it were a city is wont to create wintry summers and spring-like winters for the benefit of the whole, even though some skippers and workers on the land are bound to suffer loss through the irregular way in which they occur. The interchanges of the elements 45 out of which the world was framed and now consists He knows to be a vital operation and produces them in unimpeded succession. But frost and snow and similar phenomena are circumstances attendant <sup>c</sup> on the refrigeration of the air as thunders and lightnings are on the clashing and friction of clouds. And none of these we may suppose is by providence, but while could hardly affect the mere act of anointing, unless that was necessarily the prelude to instruction. The functions of the ἀλειπτῆς were a good deal wider than merely anointing.

<sup>c</sup> The terms here used, ἐπακολουθεῖν and παρακολουθεῖν, ἐπισυμβαίνειν, ἐπιγίνεσθαι below all express the Stoic doctrine, which accounts for evils such as diseases, etc., as not primary (προηγούμενα) works of nature but incidental consequences. See App. p. 545.

PHILO

ἀλλ' ὑετοὶ καὶ πνεύματα ζωῆς καὶ τροφῆς καὶ αὐξήσεως τοῖς περὶ γῆν αἴτια, ὧν ταῦτα ἔπακο-46 λουθήματα. οἶα, γυμνασιάρχου φιλοτιμίαις πολλάκις ἀνειμένας ποιουμένου δαπάνας, ἀνθ' ὕδατος ἐλαίῳ καταιονοῦμενοί τινες τῶν ἀπειροκάλων εἰς τοῦδαφος ῥανίδας ἀποστάζουσιν, ὁ δ' ὀλισθηρότατος αὐτίκα γίνεται πηλός· ἀλλ' οὐκ ἂν τις εὖ φρονῶν εἴποι, τὸν πηλὸν καὶ τὸν ὀλισθον προμηθεῖα τοῦ γυμνασιάρχου γεγονέναι, παρηκολου-θηκέναί δὲ ἄλλως τῇ ἀφθονίᾳ τῶν χορηγιῶν ταῦτα.
 47 ἴρις δὲ καὶ ἄλλως καὶ ὅσα ὁμοιότροπα πάλιν ἐστὶν αὐγῶν<sup>1</sup> ἐγκριναμένων τοῖς νέφεσιν ἔπακολουθήματα, οὐκ ἔργα φύσεως προηγούμενα, φυσικοῖς δ' ἐπισυμβαίνοντα ἔργοις· οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ παρέχει τινὰ καὶ ταῦτα χρεῖαν ἀναγκαίαν τοῖς φρονιμωτέροις· νηνεμίας γὰρ καὶ πνεύματα, εὐδίας τε καὶ χειμῶνας 48 ἀπὸ τούτων τεκμαιρόμενοι προλέγουσι. τὰς κατὰ πόλιν στοὰς οὐχ ὄρας; τούτων αἱ πλείους πρὸς μεσημβρίαν νενεύκασιν, ὑπὲρ τοῦ τοὺς ἐμπεριπατοῦντας χειμῶνι μὲν ἀλεαίνεσθαι, θέρους δὲ καταπνεῖσθαι. παρακολουθεῖ δέ τι καὶ ἕτερον, ὃ μὴ τῇ γνώμῃ τοῦ κατεσκευακότος ἐπιγίνεται.
 τί δὲ τοῦτ' ἔστιν; αἱ ἀπὸ τῶν ποδῶν ἐκπίπτουσαι σκιαὶ τῇ ἡμετέρᾳ πείρᾳ διασημαίνουσι τὰς ὥρας.<sup>2</sup> 49 καὶ μὲν δὴ τὸ πῦρ φύσεως ἀναγκαιότατον ἔργον·

<sup>1</sup> mss. αὐτῶν.

<sup>2</sup> So Mangey, Gifford and Heinichen. On the other hand Gaisford and Dindorf τὰ μέτρα διασημαίνουσι ταῖς ὥραις. See App. p. 545.

---

<sup>a</sup> According to Wendland this refers to the ablution after the exercise. I understand provisionally that the ἀπειρό-
 490

rainstorms and breezes are causal to the life and sustenance and growth of terrestrial things they have these others for their attendant circumstances. Similarly a gymnasiarch prompted by ambition may often provide on a lavish scale and some vulgarly extravagant people wash themselves with oil instead of water and let the drops drip to the ground, so that at once we have some slippery mud <sup>a</sup>; yet no sensible person would say that the slipperiness and the mud were due to the purposive design of the gymnasiarch or anything but mere concomitants to the munificent scale of the supply. Again a rainbow and a halo and all similar phenomena are attendant circumstances caused by rays mixing with clouds, not primary works of Nature but happenings consequent upon her works. Not but what they often render essential service to the more thoughtful who from the evidence which they give predict the presence or absence of wind and fine or stormy weather. Observe the porticoes in the cities. Most of them have been built to face the south so that persons who walk in them may enjoy the sun in winter and the breeze in summer. But they also have an attendant circumstance which does not arise through the intention of the builder. What is this? The shadows cast at our feet indicate the hours as we find by experience. Fire too is a most essential work of nature and smoke καλοι seeing an abundance of the valuable article use it for a purpose for which it is not suited. For the word cf. De Vit. Cont. 52, and also De Ios. 205 of the "tasteless display" which Joseph avoided by not providing a sumptuous banquet in famine time. Gifford's note is "the unrefined, being accustomed to bathe only in water and shake off the drops, do the same with the oil which is meant to be rubbed in."

<sup>b</sup> Or "for our experience."

PHILO

ἐπακολούθημα δὲ τούτου, καπνός· ἀλλ' ὅμως παρἔχεται τινα ὠφέλειαν ἔστιν ὅτε καὶ αὐτός. ἐν γοῦν ταῖς μεθημεριναῖς πυρσεῖαις, ἥνικα τὸ πῦρ ὑπὸ τῶν ἡλιακῶν καταλαμπόμενον αὐγῶν ἐξαμαν-50 ροῦται, καπνῶ μηνύεται πολεμίων ἔφοδος. οἷός γ' οὖν ἐπὶ τῆς ἱριδος, τοιοῦτος καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἐκλείψεων ὁ λόγος· θείαις γὰρ φύσεσιν ἡλίου καὶ σελήνης ἐπακολουθοῦσιν ἐκλείψεις· αἱ δὲ μηνύματά εἰσιν ἢ βασιλέων τελευτῆς, ἢ πόλεων φθορᾶς· ὁ
 [644] καὶ | Πίνδαρος ἠνίξατο γενομένης ἐκλείψεως διὰ
 51 τῶν πρόσθεν εἰρημένων. ὁ δὲ δὴ τοῦ γάλακτος κύκλος τῆς μὲν αὐτῆς οὐσίας τοῖς ἄλλοις ἄστροις μετέσχηκε, δυσαιτιολόγητος δ' εἴπερ ἔστι, μὴ ἀποκνείψωσαν οἱ τὰ φύσεως ἐρευνᾶν εἰωθότες.
 396 ὠφελιμώτατον γὰρ ἢ εὔρεσις, ἥδιστος δὲ καὶ καθ' 52 αὐτὸ τοῖς φιλομαθέσιν ἢ ζήτησις. ὥσπερ οὖν ἡλιος καὶ σελήνη προνοία γεγόνασιν, οὕτω καὶ τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ πάντα, κἂν ἡμεῖς τὰς ἐκάστων φύσεις τε καὶ δυνάμεις ἰχνηλατεῖν ἀδυνατοῦντες ἡσυχά-53 ζωμεν. σεισμοί τε καὶ λοιμοί, καὶ κεραυνῶν βολαί, καὶ ὅσα τοιαῦτα, λέγεται μὲν εἶναι θεήλατα, πρὸς δ' ἀλήθειαν οὐκ ἔστι (Θεὸς γὰρ οὐδενὸς αἴτιος κακοῦ τοπαράπαν), ἀλλ' αἱ τῶν στοιχείων μεταβολαὶ ταῦτα γεννῶσιν, οὐ προηγουμένα ἔργα φύσεως, ἀλλ' ἐπόμενα τοῖς ἀναγκαίοις, καὶ τοῖς 54 προηγουμένοις ἐπακολουθοῦντα. εἰ δέ τινες τῶν

<sup>a</sup> See on § 27. The point of the phrase here is that though divine they are part of nature.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 49-54

is a circumstance attendant to it, yet smoke too itself is sometimes helpful. Take for instance beacon signals in the daytime: when the fire is deadened by the rays of the sun shining on it, the enemy's approach is announced by the smoke. Much the same may be 50 said about eclipses as about the rainbow. The sun and moon are natural divinities,<sup>a</sup> and so these eclipses are concomitant circumstances, yet eclipses announce the death of kings and the destruction of cities as is darkly indicated by Pindar on the occurrence of an eclipse in the passage quoted above.<sup>b</sup> As for the 51 belt of the Milky Way<sup>c</sup> it possesses the same essential qualities as the other stars, and though it is difficult to give a scientific account of it students of natural phenomena must not shrink from the quest. For while discovery is the most profitable, research is also a delight to lovers of learning. Just then as the sun 52 and moon have come into being through the action of providence so too have all the heavenly bodies, even though we, unable to trace the natures and powers of each, are silent about them. Earthquakes, pestilence, 53 thunderbolts and the like though said to be visitations from God are not really such.<sup>d</sup> For nothing evil at all is caused by God, and these things are generated by changes in the elements. They are not primary works of nature but a sequel of her essential works, attendant circumstances to the primary. If some 54

<sup>b</sup> Aucher, p. 97. See App. p. 546 for what can apparently be made of the Armenian version of this passage from Pindar.

<sup>c</sup> Alexander (Aucher, p. 101) has mentioned the various explanations given of this and suggested the only use of it is to provide philosophers with something to dispute about.

<sup>d</sup> On the discrepancy between this and § 41 see App. p. 546.

PHILO

χαριστέρων<sup>1</sup> συναπολαύουσι τῆς ἀπὸ τούτων βλάβης, οὐκ αἰτιατέον τὴν διοίκησιν. πρῶτον μὲν γάρ, οὐκ εἴ τινες ἀγαθοὶ παρ' ἡμῖν νομίζονται, καὶ πρὸς ἀλήθειάν εἰσιν, ἐπειδὴ τὰ Θεοῦ κριτήρια τῶν κατὰ τὸν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν πάντων ἀκριβέστερα· δεύτερον δέ, τὸ προμηθὲς ἐπὶ τὰ τῶν ἐν κόσμῳ συνεκτικώτατα ἐφορᾶν ἀγαπᾶ, καθάπερ ἐν ταῖς βασιλείαις καὶ στραταρχίαις, ἐπὶ τὰς πόλεις καὶ τὰ στρατόπεδα, οὐκ ἐπὶ τινα τῶν ἡμελημένων,

55 καὶ ἀφανῶν ἓνα τὸν προστυχόντα. λέγουσι δέ τινες, καθάπερ ἐν ταῖς τυραννοκτονίαις καὶ τοὺς συγγενεῖς ἀναιρεῖσθαι νόμιμόν ἐστι ὑπὲρ τοῦ μεγέθει τῆς τιμωρίας ἐπισχεθῆναι τὰ ἀδικήματα, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον κὰν ταῖς λοιμώδεσιν νόσοις παραπόλλυσθαι τινὰς τῶν μὴ ὑπαιτίων, ἵνα πόρρωθεν οἱ ἄλλοι σωφρονίζωνται, δίχα τοῦ ἀναγκαῖον εἶναι τοὺς ἐμφερομένους ἀέρι νοσῶδει νοσεῖν, ὥσπερ καὶ τοὺς ἐν νηϊ χειμαζομένους κινδυνεύειν

56 ἐξ ἴσου. τὰ δ' ἄλκιμα τῶν θηρίων γέγονεν (οὐ γὰρ ὑποσιωπητέον, εἰ καὶ τῶ δεινὸς εἰπεῖν εἶναι προλαβὼν τὴν ἀπολογίαν διέσυρες)

<sup>1</sup> The word seems very strange. Gifford gives "the more refined." But why should they be particularly mentioned? Mangey gives "probos," Aucher "bonos" from the Armenian, and so Gaisford. But no example is forthcoming of any such general use of the word. Mangey in his Addenda suggests χρηστοτέρων.

<sup>a</sup> See note 1. A possible explanation might be that the persons of a finer character<sup>a</sup> participate in the damage which they cause, the blame must not be laid on God's ordering of the world, for in the first place it does not follow that if persons are considered good by us they are really such, for God judges by standards more accurate than any which the human mind employs. Secondly providence or forethought<sup>b</sup> is contented with paying regard to things in the world of the most importance, just as in kingdoms and commands of army it pays regard to cities and troops, not to some chance individual of the obscure and insignificant kind. Some declare that just as 55 when tyrants are put to death it is justifiable to execute their kinsfolk also, so that wrongdoings may be checked by the magnitude of the punishment,<sup>c</sup> so too in times of pestilence it is well that some of the guiltless should perish also as a lesson extending further to call all others to a wiser life. Apart from this they point out that persons who move in a tainted atmosphere must needs take the sickness just as in a storm or on board a ship they share the danger equally. The stronger kinds of wild 56 animals were made in order to give us practice in warlike contests, for I feel bound to mention this point though you as a skilful advocate anticipated word is used with some irony. The visitations even affect the superior people, who think themselves exempt from anything of the kind. But this is not in Philo's manner.

<sup>b</sup> In the first example τὸ προμηθεὺς refers to divine providence, but passes in the second to forethought in general.

<sup>c</sup> This seems to be intended as a reply to Alexander's remark (Aucher, p. 49) that the fall of the younger Dionysius could not be regarded as justifying Providence in leaving the father unpunished. Philo does not actually accept the view that such executions are justifiable. Indeed he has strongly argued against it in Spec. Leg. iii. 164 ff.

PHILO

- ἀσκήσεως ἕνεκα τῆς πρὸς τοὺς πολεμικοὺς ἀγῶνας.
 τὰ γὰρ γυμνάσια καὶ αἱ συνεχεῖς θῆραι συγκροτοῦσι καὶ νευροῦσιν εὖ μάλα τὰ σώματα, καὶ πρὸ τῶν [645] σωματίων τὰς ψυχὰς ἐθίζουσιν ἐχθρῶν ἐξαπιναίαις
 57 ἐφόδους τῷ καρτερῷ τῆς ῥώμης ἀλογεῖν. | τοῖς δὲ τὰς φύσεις εἰρηνικοῖς ἕξεστιν, οὐ μόνον τειχῶν ἐντὸς ἀλλὰ καὶ κλισιάδων θαλαμευομένοις, ἀποζῆν ἀνεπιβουλεύτως, ἔχουσιν εἰς ἀπόλαυσιν ἀφθονω-397 τάτας ἡμέρων ἀγέλας, ἐπειδὴ σῦς, καὶ λέοντες, καὶ ὅσα ὁμοιότροπα, ἐκουσία φύσει χρώμενα, μακρὰν ἄστεος ἀπελήλαται, τὸ μηδὲν παθεῖν 58 ἀγαπῶντα τῆς ἀνθρώπων ἐπιβουλῆς. εἰ δέ τινες ὑπὸ ῥαθυμίας ἄοπλοι καὶ ἀπαράσκευοι ταῖς καταδύ-σεσι τῶν θηρίων ἀδεῶς ἐνδιαιωῦνται, τῶν συμβαινόντων ἑαυτοὺς ἀλλὰ μὴ τὴν φύσιν αἰτιάσθωσαν, διότι φυλάξασθαι παρὸν ὠλιγώρησαν. ἤδη γοῦν καὶ ἐν ἵπποδρομίαις εἶδόν τινες εἴξαντας ἀλογιστία, οἷ, δέον ἐγκαθέζεσθαι καὶ σὺν κόσμῳ θεωρεῖν, ἐν μέσῳ στάντες, ὑπὸ τῆς ῥύμης τῶν τεθρίπων ἀνωσθέντες, ποσὶ καὶ τροχοῖς κατηλοήθησαν, ἀνοίας τὰπίχειρα εὐράμενοι.
- 59 Περὶ μὲν οὖν τούτων ἀπόχρη τὰ λεχθέντα. τῶν
 δ' ἐρπετῶν τὰ ἰοβόλα γέγονεν οὐ κατὰ πρόνοιαν, ἀλλὰ κατ' ἐπακολούθησιν, ὡς καὶ πρότερον εἶπον.
 ζωογονεῖται γάρ, ὅταν ἡ ἐνυπάρχουσα ἰκμὰς μετα-

---

<sup>a</sup> Alexander, after speaking of the ravages of wild beasts (Aucher, p. 102) which do not attack those whom they know to be practised huntsmen, but only peaceful cultivators of the soil, adds that even if it can be pleaded that they seem to give practice in bodily courage, nothing of the kind can be said about poisonous animals. By "through being skilful at speaking" Philo means that Alexander has shown this defence and tried to discredit it.<sup>a</sup> For the training in gymnastics and constant hunting expeditions weld and brace the body admirably and affect the soul even more than the body by inuring it in the starkness of its strength to meet unconcernedly sudden onsets of the enemy. And people of peaceful nature<sup>b</sup> can live sheltered within the walls of their cities and even of their chambers without fear of attack with abundance of different kinds of animals for their enjoyment, since boars and lions and the like following their natural inclination are banished to a distance from the town, preferring to be immune from men's hostility. And if some persons are so careless that they do not fear to resort unarmed and unprepared to the lairs of these beasts they must lay the blame of what happens on themselves and not on Nature, since they have neglected to take precautions when they could. Thus in chariot races too I have seen people giving way to thoughtlessness who, instead of sitting in their places as they should as orderly spectators, stood in the middle of the course and pushed over by the rush of the chariots were crushed under the feet and wheels, a proper reward for their folly.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 56-59

Enough has been said on these matters. As for reptiles the venomous kinds have not come into being by direct act of providence but as an attendant circumstance as I have said above. For they come to life when the moisture already in them changes to himself an accomplished rhetorician. Anticipation of an argument was a recognized device, technically known as προκατάληψις.

<sup>b</sup> This is said to counter the suggestion of Alexander that the fact that wild beasts are allowed to attack such persons tends to disprove Providence.

PHILO

βάλη πρὸς τὸ θερμότερον. ἔνια δὲ καὶ σῆψις ἐψύχωσεν, ὡς ἔλμινθας μὲν ἢ περὶ τροφήν, φθειρας δ' ἢ ἀπὸ τῶν ιδρώτων. ὅσα δ' ἐξ οἰκείας ὕλης κατὰ φύσιν σπερματικὴν καὶ προηγουμένην ἔχει 60 γένεσιν, εἰκότως ἐπιγέγραπται πρόνοιαν. ἤκουσα δὲ καὶ περὶ ἐκείνων διττοὺς λόγους, ὡς ἐπ' ὠφελείᾳ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου γεγονότων, οὓς οὐκ ἂν ἐπικρυφαίμην.
 ἦν δ' ὁ μὲν ἕτερος, τοιοῦδε· πρὸς πολλὰ τῶν ἰατρικῶν ἔφασάν τινες τὰ ἰοβόλα συνεργεῖν, καὶ τοὺς μεθοδεύοντας τὴν τέχνην, εἰς ἃ δεῖ καταχρωμένους αὐτοῖς ἐπιστημόνως, ἀλεξιφαρμάκων εὐπορεῖν, ἐπὶ τῇ τῶν μάλιστα ἐπισφαλῶς ἐχόντων ἀπροσδοκίῳ σωτηρίᾳ· καὶ μέχρι νῦν ἔστιν ἰδεῖν τοὺς μὴ ραθύμως καὶ ἀμελῶς ἰατρεῦειν ἐπιχει-ροῦντας ἐν ταῖς συνθέσεσι τῶν φαρμάκων κατα-61 χρωμένους ἐκάστοις οὐ παρέργως. ὁ δ' ἕτερος λόγος οὐκ ἰατρικός, ἀλλὰ φιλόσοφος ἦν, ὡς ἔοικε.
 τῷ γὰρ Θεῷ ταῦτ' ἔφασκεν ἠὺτρεπίσθαι κατὰ τῶν ἁμαρτανόντων κολαστήρια, ὡς στρατηγοῖς καὶ ἡγεμόσι ὕστριχας ἢ σίδηρον· οὐ χάριν, ἠρεμοῦντα τὸν ἄλλον χρόνον ἀνερεθίζεσθαι πρὸς ἀλκὴν ἐπὶ τοῖς κατακριθείσιν, ὧν ἡ φύσις ἐν τῷ ἀδωροδοκίῳ 62 δικαστηρίῳ ἑαυτῆς κατέγνω θάνατον. τὸ δ' ἐν ταῖς οἰκείαις πεφωλευκέναι μᾶλλον, ἐστὶ μὲν ψεῦδος·
 398 ἔξω γὰρ ἄστεος ἐν ἀγρῷ καὶ ἐρημίαις θεωρεῖται, |

<sup>a</sup> The same phrase is used in Spec. Leg. iii. 52 and 121. By ἑαυτῆς he means perhaps the "court which is herself," i.e. Nature is both court and judge. Cf. De Vit. Cont. 27, and similar phrases, e.g. De Ebr. 165 καθίσας οὖν ὁ νοῦς ἐν τῷ ἑαυτοῦ συνεδρίῳ.

<sup>b</sup> Alexander has said (Aucher, p. 103) that the useful animals, i.e. those good to eat, such as roes (capri), deer (cervi) and hares, have been kept far away from mankind,

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 59-62

a higher temperature. In some cases putrefaction breeds them. For instance putrefaction in food and in perspiration breed respectively worms and lice. But all kinds which are created out of their proper substance by a seminal and primary process of nature are reasonably ascribed to providence. As to them I have heard two theories, which I should be sorry to suppress, to the effect that they are made for the benefit of mankind. One of them was as follows. Some have said that the venomous animals co-operate in many medical processes, and that those who practise the art scientifically by using them with knowledge where suitable are well provided with antidotes for saving unexpectedly the life of patients in a particularly dangerous condition. And even to this day we may see those who take up the medical profession with care and energy making use of every kind of these creatures as an important factor in compounding their remedies. The other theory clearly belongs not to medicine but to philosophy. It declares that these creatures were prepared by God as instruments for the punishment of sinners just as generals and governors have their scourges or weapons of steel, and therefore while quiescent at all other times they are stirred up to do violence to the condemned whom Nature in her incorruptible assize <sup>a</sup> has sentenced to death. But the statement that they hide themselves chiefly in houses <sup>b</sup> is false, for they are to be seen in the fields and desolate places outside the town, avoiding man as while the poisonous snakes lurk in houses. (The argument is surprising from a Jew, as hares at any rate were forbidden.) He uses the same argument about edible birds, as opposed to swallows, and this is dealt with in the sequel.

PHILO

- [646] φεύγοντα ὡς δεσπότην τὸν ἄνθρωπον. οὐ μὴν ἄλλ', εἰ καὶ ἀληθές ἐστιν, ἔχει τινὰ λόγον. ἐν γὰρ μυχοῖς σεσώρευται φορυτός, καὶ σκυβάλων πλήθος, οἷς εἰσδύεσθαι φιλεῖ, δίχα τοῦ καὶ τὴν κνίσαν ὀλκὸν
- 63 ἔχειν δύναμιν. εἰ δὲ καὶ χελιδόνες ἡμῖν συνδιατῶνται, θαυμαστὸν οὐδέν· τῆς γὰρ τούτων θήρας ἀπεχόμεθα. σωτηρίας δὲ πόθος ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς οὐ λογικαῖς μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀλόγοις ἐνίδρυσται. τῶν δὲ πρὸς ἀπόλαυσιν οὐδὲν ὁμοδιαιτον διὰ τὰς ἐξ ἡμῶν ἐπιβουλὰς, πλὴν παρ' οἷς ἢ τῶν τοιούτων
- 64 χρήσις ἀπηγόρευται νόμῳ. τῆς Συρίας ἐπὶ θαλάττῃ πόλις ἐστίν, Ἀσκάλων ὄνομα· γενόμενος ἐν ταύτῃ, καθ' ὃν χρόνον εἰς τὸ πατρῶων ἱερὸν ἐστελλόμεν, εὐξόμενός τε καὶ θύσων, ἀμήχανόν τι πελειάδων πλήθος ἐπὶ τῶν τριόδων καὶ κατ' οἰκίαν ἐκάστην ἔθεασάμην. πυνθανομένῳ δέ μοι τὴν αἰτίαν, ἔφασαν οὐ θεμιτὸν εἶναι συλλαμβάνειν· ἀπειρησθαι γὰρ ἐκ παλαιοῦ τοῖς οἰκήτορσι τὴν χρῆσιν. οὕτως ἡμέρωται τὸ ζῶον ὑπ' ἀδείας, ὥστ' οὐ μόνον ὑπωρόφιον ἀλλὰ καὶ ὁμοτράπεζον αἰεὶ
- 65 γίνεσθαι, καὶ ταῖς ἐκεχειρίαῖς ἐντρυφᾶν. ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ δὲ καὶ θαυμασιώτερον ἰδεῖν ἔστιν. τὸ γὰρ ἀνθρωποβόρον καὶ θηρίων ἀργαλεώτατον ὁ κροκόδειλος, γεννώμενος καὶ τρεφόμενος ἐν τῷ ἱερωτάτῳ Νεῖλῳ, τῆς ὠφελείας, καίτοι βύθιος ὢν, ἐπαισθάνεται. παρ' οἷς μὲν γὰρ τιμᾶται πληθύνει μάλιστα· παρὰ δὲ τοῖς λυμαινομένοις οὐδ' ὄναρ φαίνεται, ὡς τῶν πλεόντων ὅπου μὲν καὶ τοὺς

---

<sup>a</sup> Or perhaps somewhat stronger "which we indulge in"; cf. § 69. Philo there, as elsewhere, e.g. Spec. Leg. ii. 20, treats all meat-eating as a luxury.

though he was their master. Not but what if it really is true there is some reason for it. For rubbish and a great quantity of refuse accumulate in the corners of houses, into which the creatures like to creep, and also the smell has a powerful attraction for them. If swallows live with us there is nothing to be 63 wondered at for we do not attempt to catch them, and the instinct of self-preservation is implanted in irrational as well as in rational souls. But birds which we like to eat<sup>a</sup> will have nothing to do with us because they fear our designs against them except in cases where the law forbids that their kind should be used as food. There is a city on the sea coast of 64 Syria called Ascalon. While I was there at a time<sup>b</sup> when I was on my way to our ancestral temple to offer up prayers and sacrifices I observed a large number of pigeons at the cross roads and in each house, and when I asked the reason I was told that it was not lawful to catch them because they had been from old times forbidden food to the inhabitants. In this way the creature has been so tamed by its security that it not merely lives under their roof but shares their table regularly and takes delight in the immunity which it enjoys. In Egypt you may see a 65 still more wonderful sight, for the man-eating crocodile, the most dangerous of wild animals, which is born and bred in the holiest of rivers the Nile, understands the benefit of this though it is a deep water creature. For among the people who honour it, it is found in great numbers, but where men try to destroy it not a glimpse of it is to be seen, so that in <sup>b</sup> So, rather than "the time" as Gifford. Philo does not imply that this was a solitary or even a rare visit to Jerusalem.

πάνυ θρασεῖς μηδ' ἄκρον ἐπιτολμᾶν καθιέναι δάκ-τυλον, ἀγεληδὸν ἐπιφοιτῶντων· ὅπου δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἄγαν δειλοὺς ἐξαλλομένους νήχεσθαι μετὰ παιδιᾶς.

66

χώρα<sup>1</sup> δ' ἡ Κυκλώπων, ἐπειδὴ τὸ γένος
 αὐτῶν ἐστὶ πλάσμα μύθου, δίχα σπορᾶς καὶ γεω-πόνων ἀνδρῶν ἡμερος καρπὸς οὐ φύεται, καθάπερ οὐδ' ἐκ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος τι γεννᾶται. τῆς Ἑλλάδος οὐ κατηγορητέον, ὡς λυπρᾶς καὶ ἀγόνου· πολὺ γὰρ κὰν ταύτῃ τὸ βαθύγειον. εἰ δ' ἡ βάρβαρος διαφέρει ταῖς εὐκαρπίαῖς, πλεονεκτεῖ μὲν τροφαῖς, ἐλαττοῦται δὲ τοῖς τρεφομένοις, ὧν χάριν αἱ τροφαί.

[647]

399

μόνη γὰρ ἡ Ἑλλάς ἀψευδῶς ἀνθρωπογονεῖ, φυτὸν
 οὐράνιον καὶ | βλάστημα θεῖον ἠκριβωμένον, λογισμὸν ἀποτίκτουσα οἰκειούμενον ἐπιστήμη. τὸ δ' αἴτιον· λεπτότητι ἀέρος ἢ διάνοια πέφυκεν ἀκονᾶ-67 σθαι. διὸ καὶ Ἡράκλειτος οὐκ ἄπο σκοποῦ φησίν, “οὐ γῆ<sup>2</sup> ξηρή, ψυχὴ σοφωτάτη καὶ ἀρίστη.” τεκμηριώσαιτο δ' ἂν τις καὶ ἐκ τοῦ τοὺς μὲν νήφοντας καὶ ὀλιγοδεεῖς συνετωτέρους εἶναι, τοὺς δὲ ποτῶν

<sup>1</sup> The sentence is an anacoluthon. If emendation is required the simplest would be χώρα (= χώρα) δὲ Κυκ.

<sup>2</sup> mss. αὐγῆ (a form of the saying which is found elsewhere, see App. p. 546). οὐ γῆ is required here by the sense and is supported by the Armenian “in terra sicca animus est sapiens ac virtutem amans.” Gaisford and Dindorf retain αὐγῆ.

<sup>a</sup> Alexander (Aucher, p. 105) has quoted Od. ix. 106-111 to the effect that the arrogant and lawless Cyclopes neither sow nor plough, “trusting to the immortal gods,” yet everything grows there, wheat and barley and vines. On the contrary “pietatem colentibus nihil fere remanet,” and Greece is thin-soiled and barren and the barbarians have to supply it with everything. The answer has a certain dry humour rare in Philo.

some places people sailing on the Nile do not venture, even the very boldest, to dip the tip of a finger in the water as the crocodiles resort thither in shoals, while in other places quite timid people jump out and swim and play about. As to the land of the 66

Cyclopes,<sup>a</sup> since that race is a mythical fiction, it is not the case that cultivated fruit is produced without seed being sown or husbandmen tilling it, on the principle that from what does not exist nothing is generated. Greece must not be accused of being a sour unproductive land. For it too has plenty of deep rich soil, and if the world outside excels in fruitfulness its superiority in foodstuffs is counterbalanced by inferiority in the people to be fed for whose sake the food is produced. For Greece alone can be truly said to produce mankind, she who engenders the heavenly plant,<sup>b</sup> the divine shoot, a perfect growth, even reason so closely allied to knowledge, and the cause of this is that the mind is naturally sharpened by the fineness of the air.<sup>c</sup> And so Heracleitus aptly says 67
 "where the land is dry the soul is best and wisest." One may find evidence for this in the superior intelligence of the sober and frugal, while those who cram

<sup>b</sup> From Timaeus 90 A, cf. Quod Det. 85, De Plant. 17. In Plato the heavenly plant is mankind, and in the passages cited Philo recognizes this. I think it may be possible (1) to take both φυτόν and βλάστημα as governed by ἀνθρωπογονεῖ or rather as in apposition with ἀνθρώπων implied, and (2) ἡκριβωμένον as agreeing with λογισμόν. Even if (1) is impossible, (2) seems to me preferable. ἡκριβ. is an epithet more suitable to λογισμόν than to βλάστημα. So the Armenian translator, p. 117 ("certam veramque intellegentiam procreans"), though he goes wrong in taking φυτόν and βλάστημα in apposition with Ἑλλάς.

<sup>c</sup> Mangey quotes Cic. De Fat. 4 "Athenis tenue caelum, ex quo etiam acutiores putantur Attici."

PHILO

ἀεὶ καὶ σιτίων ἐμπιπλαμένους ἤκιστα φρονίμους, 68 ἄτε βαπτίζομένου τοῖς ἐπιούσι τοῦ λογισμοῦ. διὸ κατὰ τὴν βάρβαρον ἔρνη μὲν ταῖς εὐτροφίαις καὶ στελέχη περιμήκιστα, καὶ ζώων ἀλόγων σφόδρα τὰ γονιμώτατα, νοῦν δ' ἤκιστα γεννᾷ, διότι τὸ ὑψωθῆναι ἐξ ἀέρος αἰτίου<sup>1</sup> αἱ γῆς καὶ ὕδατος ἐπάλ-ληλοι καὶ συνεχεῖς ἀναθυμιάσεις κατεκράτησαν.
 69 ἰχθύων δὲ καὶ ὀρνίθων καὶ χερσαίων γένη ζώων οὐκ ἔστιν ἐγκλήματα φύσεως ἐφ' ἡδονὴν παρακαλοῦσης, ἀλλὰ δεινὸς ψόγος τῆς ἡμῶν αὐτῶν ἀκρασίας. ἀναγκαῖον μὲν γὰρ ἦν εἰς τὴν τοῦ ὄλου συμπλήρωσιν, ἵνα γένηται κόσμος ἐν ἐκάστω μέρει, φύναι ζώων ἰδέας ἀπάντων· οὐκ ἀναγκαῖον δὲ ἐπὶ τὴν τούτων ἀπόλαυσιν ὀρμησαί τὸ σοφίας συγγενέστατον χρῆμα τὸν ἄνθρωπον, 70 μεταβαλόντα εἰς ἀγριότητα θηρίων. διὸ καὶ μέχρι νῦν, οἷς λόγος ἐγκρατείας, ἅπαξ ἀπάντων ἀπ-ἔχονται, λαχανώδει χλόῃ καὶ καρποῖς δένδρων προσοψήμασιν ἡδίστη ἀπολαύσει χρώμενοι. τοῖς δὲ τὴν τῶν εἰρημένων θοίνην ἡγουμένοις εἶναι κατὰ φύσιν ἐπέστησαν διδάσκαλοι, σωφρονισταί,

<sup>1</sup> So apparently all mss. All editors except Gifford αὐτοῦ. If αἰτίου is retained, the sense must be as in the translation. But αἴτιον in this sense is strange without some clearer indication of what it causes. Mangey suggested τὸ μὴ ψυχωθῆναι ἐξ ἀέρος αὐτοῦ, οὐ, and I am inclined to think that ψυχωθῆναι is right. In this case the objection to αἰτίου is removed, for the air is the cause of vitalization. Cf. De Som. i. 136 τὰ ἐν ἐκείνοις οὗτος ἐψύχωσεν, where ἐκείνοις is earth and water and οὗτος is air. This is supported by the Armenian "mens nusquam nascitur ob frigefactionem et gelationem." The translator, who often duplicates, may easily have taken ψυχοῦσθαι in the sense which it sometimes bears, though not in Philo, of "being refrigerated." See App. p. 547.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 67-70

themselves with food and drink are most wanting in wisdom, because the reason is drowned by the stuff that is brought in. And therefore in the world outside Greece the plants and trunks are so well nourished that they grow to a great height and it is exceedingly productive of the most prolific animals but very unproductive of intelligence, because the continual and unceasing exhalations from the earth and water overpower it and prevent it from rising out of the air which is its source. The various kinds of fishes, birds and land-animals do not give grounds for charging Nature of inviting us to pleasure, but they constitute a severe censure on our want of restraint.<sup>a</sup> For to secure the completeness of the universe and that the cosmic order should exist in every part it was necessary that the different kinds of living animals should arise, but it was not necessary that man the creature most akin to wisdom should be impelled to feast upon them and so change himself into the savagery of wild beasts. And therefore to this day those who have thought for self-restraint abstain from every one of them and take green vegetables and the fruits of trees as a relish to their bread with the utmost enjoyment. And those who hold that feasting on these animals is natural have had placed over them teachers, censors and lawgivers who in <sup>a</sup> Alexander has argued (p. 106) that if self-denial and temperance, as the philosophers say, are acceptable to God and gluttony and the like are not, Providence, if it existed, would not have created animals of this kind to minister to men's appetites. Philo is unkind to his opponent in putting the argument into his mouth, since above he was bringing it against Providence that it kept these animals at a distance from mankind. See on § 62.

PHILO

νομοθέται κατὰ πόλεις, οἷς ἐμέλησε τὴν ἀμετρίαν τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν στείλαι, μὴ ἐπιτρέψασι τὴν χρῆσιν
 71 ἀδεᾶ πᾶσι πάντων. ἴα<sup>1</sup> δὲ καὶ ρόδα καὶ κρόκος, καὶ ἡ ἄλλη τῶν ἀνθέων ποικιλία, πρὸς ὑγίειαν, οὐ πρὸς ἡδονὴν γέγονεν. ἄπλετοι γὰρ τούτων αἱ δυνάμεις, καὶ καθ' αὐτὰς διὰ τῶν ὁσμῶν ὠφελούσιν, εὐωδίας πάντας ἀναμιπλάσαι, καὶ πολὺ μᾶλλον ἐν ταῖς ἰατρικαῖς συνθέσεσι τῶν φαρμάκων. ἔνια γὰρ ἀναμιχθέντα τὰς ἑαυτῶν δυνάμεις ἀριδηλοτέρας παρέχεται, καθάπερ εἰς ζώου γένεσιν ἡ ἄρρενος καὶ θήλεος μίξις, ἰδίᾳ ἑκατέρου μὴ
 72 πεφυκότος ποιεῖν ἄπερ ἄμφω συνελθόντα. ταῦτ' ἀναγκαίως λέλεκται πρὸς τὰ λοιπὰ τῶν ὑπό σου 400 διαπορηθέντων, ἱκανὴν πίστιν ἐργάσασθαι δυνάμενα τοῖς μὴ φιλονείκως ἔχουσι περὶ τοῦ τὸν Θεὸν τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων ἐπιμελεῖσθαι πραγμάτων.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. εἰ. See App. p. 547.

---

<sup>a</sup> The same argument had been applied to the scents of flowers, particularly as an accompaniment of banquets. Philo elsewhere does not appear insensible to the beauty of flowers, but neither this nor their fragrance seem to him to come under the head of sensual pleasure, which is what he means by ἡδονή here.

ON PROVIDENCE, 2. 70-72

the different cities make it their business to restrain the intemperance of their appetites by refusing to allow all people to use them all without restriction.

Violets, roses, and crocuses and the 71 other flowers in their manifold variety were made to give health not pleasure.<sup>a</sup> For their properties are infinite; they are beneficial in themselves by their scents, impregnating all with their fragrance, and far more beneficial when used by physicians in compounding drugs. For some things show their virtues more clearly when combined with others, just as the union of male and female serves to engender animal life while neither of them is qualified to do separately what they can do when combined.

This is the best answer I can make<sup>b</sup> to the rest of 72 the points raised by you, and it is enough to create in the mind of those who are not contentiously inclined solid grounds for believing that God takes care of human affairs.<sup>c</sup>

<sup>b</sup> For this sense of ἀναγκαίως cf. Spec. Leg. iii. 4, Quod Det. 160, and note on the latter, vol. ii. p. 497.

<sup>c</sup> This is not actually the end of the treatise. Philo goes on to invite any other questions, but Alexander politely declines further discussion for the present.

APPENDIX TO QUOD OMNIS PROBUS LIBER SIT

§ 2. "Walk not on the highways." The form given here is almost the same as that in the latest edition of Diogenes Laertius, viz. τὰς λεωφόρους μὴ βαδίσειν. But another reading is ἐκτὸς λεωφόρου μὴ βαδίσειν. This has been emended to ἐντὸς, but does it not rather point to a variant assigning a quite different and more obvious meaning to the maxim?

§ 3. Super-law. Or "divine ordinance." Cf. De Op. 143 νόμος ὁ τῆς φύσεως ὀρθὸς λόγος, ὃς κυριωτέρα κλήσει προσονομάζεται θεσμός, νόμος θεῖος ὢν. In the same way the Ten Commandments are in a true sense θεσμοί, Quis Rerum 168. Besides being more divine the θεσμός has a wider scope and is like a general principle. So the Ten are θεσμοί τῶν κατὰ μέρος ἀπείρων νόμων γενικὰ κεφάλαια, De Cong. 120. It is a pity that these examples from Philo have not been used in the lexica. For though L. & S. remarks that θεσμός properly applies to ancient laws supposed to be sanctioned by the gods, it cites no examples which bring out the distinction from νόμος. Stephanus too after quoting the θεσμοί of Draco and the νόμοι of Solon, which may be merely traditional titles, only cites Plato, Er viii. 355 B, where after an exhortation to set the ἀρετή of the soul above that of the body, and that again above money, he says ὁ ταῦτα ἀπεργαζόμενος θεσμός νόμος ἂν ὀρθῶς ὑμῖν εἴη κείμενος, which points to a sort of distinction as that quoted above from De Cong.

§ 5. The puppet show. Though probably this is suggested by the words quoted in the footnote, those do not mean what is stated here. Plato does not mean that the prisoners in the cave mistake the realities for θαύματα. The phrase comes in incidentally to indicate that the wall behind which move the persons who carry the objects the shadows of which are reflected is like the screen behind which the θαυματοποιοί stand when exhibiting their show. Elsewhere Plato uses the figure (Laws 644 D, 804 B) to describe human conduct, mankind being the puppets whose strings are worked by some higher power, a figure which Philo also uses, De Op. 117, De Fug. 46.

PHILO

§ 10. Highly connected. Or more exactly "highly connected on both sides." Philo has ἀμφιθαλής twice elsewhere, De Cong. 132, where Moses is said to be καὶ τὰ πρὸς πατρός καὶ τὰ πρὸς μητρός ἀμφιθαλής, and Legatio 93, where Hermes, Apollo, and Ares are μείζονες καὶ ἀμφιθαλεῖς as compared with Dionysus and Heracles, presumably because Semele and Alcmena were mere women. This is a natural extension of the meaning in Il. xxii. 496 and Plato, Laws 927 D, viz. a child who has both parents alive. So here cf. πρὸς ἀνδρῶν καὶ πρὸς γυναικῶν below.

§ 15. (The hiatus παιδεία ἀναθεῖναι.) Cohn in Hermes, li. (1916), pp. 172 ff. propounds a theory that the hiatus here is justified on the principle that Philo does not avoid it between the verb and its noun or adjective, which are so grammatically connected as to form a sort of unity. In the same way he accounts for ἰση ἀντιτιμηθέντες εὐνοία (§ 42) and φόβω ἐκκλίνει (§ 159), and notes similar examples in other treatises. On the other hand εὐτονία κραταιοτάτη ἰσχύος (§ 40), θεοῦ ἐλευθέρους (§ 42) and σὺν εὐτολμία εὐθυβόλον (§ 124) have no such justification. Accordingly the first of these remains "suspect" (though one would have thought κραταιοτάτης was an easy correction), the second is corrected to τῶν θεῶν, and the third has μετ' εὐτολμίας suggested in a footnote. This new law of justifiable exceptions is a big extension of the principle laid down by Jessen and Cumont (see my note in vol. viii. p. 428), by which familiar conjunctions like ἐτήσιοι ὄραι are declared acceptable. There are no such familiar conjunctions in the instances quoted from §§ 42 and 159.

Wendland in his essay on De Providentia written several years earlier points out (p. 146) Philo's general avoidance of the hiatus in that treatise, but notes a few exceptions, ἀδιάλυτῳ ἐνώσει ἀρμოსάμενος (§ 3), εὐμορφία ἀγάλλοιτο (§ 15), ἀπατηλαὶ αἰσθήσεις, πάθη ἐπίβουλα (§ 36), and there are some others which he has not observed. He then makes a remark which seems to me worth quoting: "We must not forget that avoidance of the hiatus is a matter of feeling only, not of anxious calculation, and there were very few writers in whom this feeling was so finely developed that it was not exposed to fluctuations and caprices." This is not quite the same as the view suggested in the note above mentioned, namely that he avoided it generally but not when the avoidance would hamper his expression, but it leads to the same practical conclusion. When the tradition, Wendland continues, does not present any difficulty or any other cause for alteration, the editor of a writer like Philo will do well not to introduce any alteration merely on account of the hiatus.

APPENDICES

§ 15. New vessels, etc. Cohn quotes Quintilian i. 1. 5 "natura tenacissimi sumus eorum quae rudibus annis percepimus, ut sapor, quo nova imbuas, durat." The parallel will be still clearer if we adopt the correction "quo nova imbuas <vasa>." As Quintilian in the sentence before has quoted Chrysippus, Περὶ παιδῶν ἀγωγῆς, it seems probable that the illustration in both cases comes from a Stoic source.

§ 28. (Insertion of οὕτως.) Though not grammatically necessary it certainly appears to be Philo's invariable usage when a comparison begins with a relative conjunction to introduce the main clause with an adverb οὕτως or τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον. So in this treatise §§ 15, 30, 45, 49, 51, 130, 140. And so in De Prov. §§ 3, 6, 20, 23, 39, 40, 52, 55. If the comparison begins with the main clause as in § 155 the rule naturally does not apply, nor always if the relative clause does not contain a separate verb as in De Prov. 32. Otherwise I have found no exceptions either in these two treatises or in De Praem., in which I have tested it.

§ 70. Wholefruits. Or "wholly fruits." In this digression induced by a favourite text, Deut. xxx. 14, and the favourite interpretation of mouth, heart, hands by words, thoughts, actions, we have something more akin to the Philo of the Commentary than we find anywhere else in this treatise. The meaning is that while in the natural garden the fruit only comes in the final stage, in the spiritual life all is fruit. As a matter of fact ὀλοκαρπώματα occurs only three times in our text of the Pentateuch and then only as a variant for ὀλοκαυτώματα. But the form ὀλοκάρπωσις is more frequent, occurring three times in Gen. xxii. in the story of the sacrifice of Isaac, and also in Gen. viii. 20, where Noah took of every clean beast and every clean fowl and offered them for a ολοκάρπωσις. On this passage, where perhaps he read ολοκάρπωμα for ολοκάρπωσις, Philo has a special meditation in Quaest. in Gen. ii. 52. The point of this is that the pure beasts are "sapientis sensus" and the pure fowls "intellectus cum cogitationibus in mente agitatis" and that they must be offered as "integer fructus." The thought is perhaps much the same as in the stanzas of Rabbi Ben Ezra beginning "Not on the vulgar mass."

PHILO

§ 73. οἱ ἐτύμως ἐπτά σοφοὶ προσονομασθέντες. I find that the view taken in the footnote that the appellation is ἔτυμον because ἐπτά is akin to σέβας and σεμνός is thought to be a hard saying; and I am asked why it should not mean that they were called σοφοί because they were truly wise. I think that that explanation not only slurs the πρός but is entirely contrary to Philo's use of ἐτύμως and ἔτυμος. That word in classical use is an epic or lyric word, in the ordinary sense of "true," but with the grammarians came to mean the true or original form of the root from which other words spring, and thence the name "etymology" for the science of these ἔτυμα. Thus (De Op. 127) the Latin "septem" is said to be ἐτυμώτερον than the Greek ἐπτά because it preserves the original σ of the etymon.

As stated shortly in the note in vol. iv. p. 556, the examples of ἐτύμως in the index bear this out.

Names are said to be given ἐτύμως:

(1) De Op. 36. στερέωμα to "heaven," because it is σωματικός (as opposed to νοητός), and σῶμα is στερεόν.

(2) Ibid. 126. φωνήεντα to the vowels, because ἐξ ἐαυτῶν φωνοῦνται.

(3) Ibid. 133. παμμήτωρ and like names given by the poets to γῆ, because it is the source (αἰτία) of γένεσις.

(4) De Conf. 137. θεός to God, because ἔθηκε τὸ πᾶν.

(5) Mos. i. 17. Moses so called, because he was drawn from the water and the Egyptian for water is μῶν.

(6) Ibid. 130. "Dog-fly" from its persistence, because the dog and the fly are the most shameless creatures in earth and air.

(7) Mos. ii. 105. θυματήριον given to the altar of incense, because ἀναθυμιάσεις τηρεῖ.

(8) Ibid. 149. τελειώσεως to the rams by which the sacrificers were admitted to the τελεταί.

APPENDICES

(9) Spec. Leg. i. 88. λογείον to the breastplate symbolizing heaven, because heaven is governed by λόγος.

(10) Ibid. 93. ροῖσκοι to pomegranates παρὰ τὴν ῥύσιν.

(11) Ibid. 147. σιαγόνες to the jaws, because they shake (σειώω).

(12) Ibid. 183. πρωτογεννημάτων to Pentecost, because τὰ πρῶτα τῶν γεννημάτων are then offered. So also De Dec. 160.

(13) Spec. Leg. ii. 188. "Trumpet-feast" to the ιερομηνία, because it is the custom to sound the trumpet.

In this volume, besides the words under discussion, we have (14) De Vit. Cont. 2, the Therapeutae, so called because θεραπεύουσι ("worship" or "heal").

(15) De Aet. 54. κόσμος to the world, because it exhibits κόσμος ("order").

Many of these are explanations of a term rather than what we should call derivations or etymologies, but they all have this in common, that the ἐτυμότης does not consist in the appropriateness of the term in itself, or of its application in the particular case, but in its relation to some other word or in (15) to some other sense of the same word. None of them suggest that a person could be called ἐτύμως σοφός because the adjective σοφός could be justly applied to him. The ἐτυμότης therefore I believe belongs to ἐπτά, and the words of De Op. 127 explain in what it consists.

I should add that in the note, vol. iv. p. 556, I suggested that σοφός also was traced to σεβασμός, but this, I think, has no foundation.

§ 74. πρεσβευταὶ λόγων καὶ ἔργων. Or πρεσβεύεται λόγων ἔργα? In support of the latter it is worth noting that Strabo xv. 1. 59 cites Megasthenes as saying of the Brachmanes (on whom see next note) ἐν ἔργοις γὰρ αὐτοῦς κρείττους ἢ λόγοις εἶναι. That Philo in his account of the Gymnosophists and Calanus had Megasthenes in mind is at least very probable.

§ 74. Gymnosophists. What did Philo understand by the Gymnosophists? Is it simply another name for the caste of the philosophers, i.e. the Brahmins, or for a specially ascetic type among them and possibly other castes? They are mentioned in the same vague way as here by Strabo xvi. 2. 39 coupled with the Magi and the μάντιες of other nations. So too Plut. ii. 322 v eulogizes the γυμνήτις σοφία of the Indian sages.

When Strabo xv. 1. 39 ff. describes from Megasthenes the seven castes, of which the philosophers are the first, he does not use the term Gymnosophist or indicate any especial asceticism. Further on, ibid. 59, Megasthenes is stated to classify the philosophers as Brachmanes, i.e. presumably Brahmins, and Garmanes, by whom experts appear to understand Buddhists, and it is these Garmanes or some of them who seem best to exemplify the asceticism implied in the name of Gymnosophists, though nakedness is not actually mentioned. Again, ibid. 70, the Brachmanes are distinguished from the Pramnae and it is as applied to some of these last that we first meet the term.

PHILO

On the other hand Arrian, who also is supposed to be quoting Megasthenes, definitely says of the philosophical caste that as a whole they live (διαιωῶνται) naked, and when Plutarch (Alexander 64) applies the name Gymnosophists to the philosophers who had stirred up national feeling against the invader (§ 59), presumably he means the caste as a whole. I leave the experts to disentangle these conflicting statements. I suspect that the legend as Philo received it included (1) a belief that the philosophers were a caste, (2) that some of them were believed to practise a special asceticism, without aiming at anything more exact.

§ 75. Essenes. This note does not attempt to digest the many theories propounded about the Essenes but merely to summarize what Philo says about them and compare it with Josephus. In Quod Omn. Prob. Philo gives the following account of them : (1) They do not sacrifice animals ; (2) they live in villages ; (3) they work industriously at various occupations, not military nor commercial ; (4) they keep no slaves ; (5) their study is on morals and religion, particularly the allegorical meaning of the Scriptures ; (6) they pursue and exhibit every kind of virtue ; (7) this includes refusal to swear oaths and ceremonial purity ; (8) they hold goods and clothing in common ; (9) they provide for the sick and aged. To this is added an account of their sabbatical meetings, but this does not materially differ from that given of the Therapeutae in the De Vit. Cont. and of the nation as a whole in the Hypothetica.

Of these the Hypothetica mentions in much the same strain (3), (6), (8) and (9) and adds (10) that only adults are admitted to the order and (11) that they eschew marriage and have a poor opinion of women.

Josephus's account is given in B.J. ii. 8. 2-13, with some additions in Ant. xviii. 1. 5. It confirms practically all the points mentioned by Philo but goes far more into detail. Thus he describes fully the terms and process of admission to the order and also their refusal to take oaths in ordinary life and their ceremonial ablutions, points indicated by Philo only by the single words ἀνώμοτον and ἀγνεία. Interesting additions which he gives are that they regard the use of oil as a defilement, wear white garments, keep the sabbath with extraordinary strictness and show a feeling of reverence for the sun and sunrise which reminds us somewhat of De Vit. Cont. 27 and 89. Elsewhere he credits them with the power of predicting the future, also he gives us, what Philo entirely omits, some information about their doctrines, that they believed in the immortality of the soul though not of the body and in future rewards and punishments.

APPENDICES

(Sections 89 to 91.) I have not seen any notice of the historical statements made in these sections and this note must be regarded as a tentative inquiry. I feel little doubt that Philo is referring in the first instance to Herod, who, according to Jos. Ant. xv. 10. 5, treated the Essenes with special friendship and thought of them as something higher than human (μείζον τι φρονῶν ἐπ' αὐτοῖς ἢ κατὰ τὴν θνητὸν φύσιν). This friendship is traced by Josephus originally to the predictions made by the Essene Manahem to Herod, first in his boyhood when Manahem prophesied that he would be a king who at first would govern righteously but afterwards would commit crimes for which he would be punished. When he became king Herod asked Manahem how long he would reign and was told that for at least thirty years, but no other limit was given, which answer appears to have satisfied Herod.

We have no other evidence, I think, as to how the Essenes were treated by any other ruler in Palestine. But we may ask who are these ferocious or treacherous potentates here alluded to. Apart from the wild statement of Pliny, N.H. v. 17 that the Essenes had flourished in Palestine "per millia saeculorum," the only allusion to their existence in earlier times is in Jos. Ant. xiii. 5. 9, where he mentions them as existing in the times of Jonathan the high priest, i.e. about 150 B.C. But this does not of course show that they did not exist at a considerably earlier date, and Philo might well have had Antiochus Epiphanes in mind. One would hardly think that any of the Hasmoneans would appear in this light to Philo, though both Aristobulus and Alexander Jannaeus are credited with some barbarity. Archelaus at the other end, who also (B.J. ii. 7. 3) listened to the prediction of an Essene, would fit, but his date is too late, at any rate if the Quod Omn. Prob. is an early work of Philo.

PHILO

§ 96. (Death of Calanus.) This is described by Strabo (xv. 1. 68), who says that while the historians differ on some minor points they agree that he accompanied Alexander and when in his seventy-third year he fell ill for the first time he burnt himself to death in Alexander's presence. Strabo adds that Megasthenes denied that suicide was enjoined by the philosophers, who regarded it as showing a reckless disposition.

Ibid. (Text of the letter.) Cohn in the article in Hermes mentioned in the note on § 15 observes that it contains four instances of hiatus, which however need not concern us, as Philo though avoiding it himself does not trouble himself to correct them in quotations. Cohn would not therefore raise this objection to my proposed insertion of ἀραιὰ ἡμῖν.

§ 99. "Burn me, consume my flesh," etc. I am rather surprised that Nauck, T.G.F. p. 525, lists this quotation as from the Syleus. Is not its juxtaposition with the Syleus in this one of the four places where it occurs sufficiently accounted for by the fact that Heracles plays a part in both? But the attitude which it represents seems very different from the boisterous behaviour in the Satyric play.

§ 100. (The Syleus.) Who speaks the last four lines of the first quotation and the three of the second? Cohn, following Nauck, T.G.F. p. 526, says Syleus. Subject to correction from those who know the ways of Satyric drama better than I do, I should reconstruct the situation as follows. Hermes brings Heracles to market much as Diogenes is brought in § 123, and one of the possible purchasers asks the question whether he is φαῦλος. The auctioneer emphatically denies this, and then turning to Heracles says "Do try and look more like the sort of servant that people like to have." Heracles then accommodates himself somewhat and is bought by Syleus, who finds out too late what a bad bargain he has made. Even if we assume that Cohn and Nauck are so far right that the last four lines from οὐδεις to ἐμβολήν are to be detached from the other four, I should still prefer to ascribe them to one of the ἀνητικῶς ἔχοντες, who declined to buy anyone so dangerous, rather than to Syleus.

APPENDICES

§ 127. Theodorus. An account of this follower of Aristippus about the end of the fourth century is given by Diog. Laert. ii. 98-102, who mentions his important book Περὶ θεῶν and his denial of much of the popularly accepted morality. According to Diogenes Laertius he did not take refuge with Lysimachus on his expulsion from Athens but with Ptolemy, who sent him on an embassy to Lysimachus. Another saying attributed to him by Cicero and others is that when Lysimachus threatened to crucify him he replied that it was a matter of indifference to him whether he went to corruption in the earth or in the air.

§ 134. Ion. A contemporary of the great Tragedians and sufficiently eminent for Longinus to say that though he was faultless, polished and elegant no one in his senses would match all his tragedies taken together with one of Sophocles. Little has been preserved of his, and of the sixty-eight fragments listed by Nauck many are single words, few as long as this and only one longer.

§ 140. The Venerable Goddesses. Cohn's statement that these are Demeter and Persephone seems rather rash. He adduces Ar. Thesm. 294 δούλοις γὰρ οὐκ ἔξεστ' ἀκούειν τῶν λόγων, and though this line has been suspected as a gloss the preceding words, σὺ δ' ἄπιθ', ὦ Θράττ', ἐκποδών, show that the slave girl was excluded. But it does not follow that this was the only cult from which slaves were excluded. Though no doubt the epithet σεμναὶ θεαί might be applied to Demeter and Persephone, its regular connotation is the Eumenides. The procession in honour of the Eumenides is alluded to by Aeschylus at the end of the play and is mentioned by other writers as including the carrying of sacred cakes (see Pfühl, De Atheniensium pompis sacris, pp. 92 ff., a reference given me by Dr. Cook). Pfühl accepts without question that it is this to which Philo refers.

Also it would seem prima facie unlikely that the procession at the Thesmophoria would include men as well as women or that the cakes would be prepared by the Ephebi, though I do not know that there is positive evidence about this.

APPENDIX TO DE VITA CONTEMPLATIVA

(Title and sub-title.) The main title as here printed is that used by Eusebius himself, first when making his famous disquisition on the Therapeutae, Hist. Eccl. ii. 17, and again in his list of Philo's writings in the next chapter. There can therefore be no doubt of its authenticity, but it is difficult to see why Philo substituted ἰκετῶν for θεραπευτῶν. It does not occur in the treatise itself and though as Conybeare shows there are many passages where ἰκεταί and θεραπευταί are coupled, they are not exactly the same and ἰκεταί does not suit the sense of healing which he gives as an alternative meaning for Therapeutae.

As for the sub-title, the "fourth (part or book) of the virtues" has no authority from Eusebius but appears to be given in all the mss. The title of Περὶ ἀρετῶν is given by Eus. ii. 18 to the treatise of which the Legatio as we have it is a part, and he says in ii. 5 that this had five books and in ii. 6 speaks of the sufferings of the Jews in Alexandria as being described in the second book. The sub-title, therefore, affirms that the De Vit. Cont. was the fourth book of this treatise. We may be sure at any rate that Eusebius had no idea of this. But this, being part of the wider question what the complete Περὶ ἀρετῶν consists of and what is the meaning of the title, may be postponed until the Legatio is translated.

§ 2. προαίρεσις. This word occurs again five times in this treatise, §§ 17, 29, 32, 67, 79, and twice elsewhere in this volume, Quod Omn. Prob. 89 and Hyp. 11. 2. The uses in Philo, all springing from the sense of choice or purpose, may be divided into those which describe the purpose or motive of some particular action and those which indicate the motives and principles which regulate a lifetime or a career. To the first class belong §§ 29 and 79 as I understand the passage, and § 32 might be taken in the same way. In the other passages it is used in the second sense. In §§ 2, 17 and Hyp. 11. 2, where it is applied to the Therapeutae or the Essenes, it may be thought that it simply = the sect itself. So indeed Gifford translates it in the latter passage and L. & S. recognizes this use of the word. But it seems to me better in the Philonic passages to take it as the beliefs and principles held by the sects, thus including both a creed and a rule of life. The various attempts made in this volume to translate it, i.e. "persuasion," "vocation," "creed" and "rule of life," are none of them, perhaps, quite adequate.

APPENDICES

§ 3. (Hephaestus and Poseidon.) So Cornutus (§ 19) says of Hephaestus ἐκ τοῦ ἡφθαί ὀνομασμένος. In the same chapter he, like Philo in De Dec. 54, identifies Ἥρα with ἀήρ, but does not suggest a common derivation. For Poseidon cf. Corn. 4, where he identifies him with ἡ ἀπεργαστικὴ τοῦ ἐν τῇ γῆ καὶ περὶ τὴν γῆν ὑγροῦ δύναμις and adds εἶτ' ἀπὸ τῆς πόσεως οὕτω κέκληται. This is followed by two alternative suggestions, cf. Philo's τάχα.

§ 17. ῥαψωδίας. Conybeare, scolding Lucius, who saw in this reference to the thirteenth rhapsody the mark of later authorship, says that the division into rhapsodies was the work of Zenodotus and Aristarchus, 250 years before Philo. He does not give his authority for this. As to the use of the word in this sense the lexica do not give any certain evidence. L. & S. (old and revised) gives "portions of an epic poem fit for recitation, etc., e.g. a book of the Iliad or Odyssey, Plut. 2, 186 E, Lucian, D. Mort. 20. 2 and Cont. 9." In this they are really repeating Stephanus. In the first of the Lucian passages the greater Homeric personalities when in Hades are described as τὰ κεφάλαια τῶν ῥαψωδιῶν. In the second Homer in Charon's boat was sea-sick and vomits his rhapsodies. Plutarch is more definite. Alcibiades asks the teacher for a rhapsody of Homer and when the teacher says he has no Homer gives him a box on the ears. In the Life of Alcibiades 7 Plutarch repeats this story, substituting βίβλιον for ῥαψωδίαν. It is both curious and regrettable that this passage of Philo which so definitely establishes the use of the word for the Homeric books as we have them has not found its way into the lexicon.

§ 25. μοναστήριον. On this word Conybeare states that it does not exist elsewhere in any Greek document until the end of the third century, when it has acquired the sense of a building or establishment for a single monk or hermit (for which he gives references from Athanasius and other patristic writers) or for several monks together. The statement that it does not occur earlier is confirmed by L. & S. revised, which, apparently ignoring the patristic use, quotes this passage but nothing else earlier than the sixth century. It translates it here by "hermit's cell," which does not seem to me a happy phrase. It indicates simply a room in a house, into which no one else is allowed to enter. The familiar "closet" of Matt. vi. 6, though the R.V. has replaced it by "inner chamber," seems to me to carry the same idea.

PHILO

Ibid. (End of section.) τὰ ἄλλα presumably refers to writings of some kind. But the words may refer to the συγγράμματα mentioned in § 29, or to the other books of scripture besides those indicated above. So Wendland, who quotes the Canon given by Josephus, Ant. i. 8, i.e. the Law, the Prophets (including the historical books), and the four books of the psalms and precepts of human life, i.e. Psalms, Proverbs, Ecclesiastes and Cantica. If Philo means this, τὰ ἄλλα will be the last three. But unless other evidence is forthcoming this seems very conjectural.

§ 36. λιπαίνουσιν. Wendland, like Conybeare, takes this word to mean "anoint" in the literal sense. He does not translate the passage, but as he thinks that τὰ θρέμματα is figuratively used and cites several passages where Philo uses the word to represent the senses or body as cattle under the guidance of the shepherd, the mind, he presumably would translate it "releasing as it were the animal side from its labours." He also takes the passage to be a reminiscence of Plato, Menexenus 238 A, where oil is spoken of as πόνων ἀρωγὴν, cf. De Aet. 63. With all due deference to two such high authorities, I still hold to the interpretation given in the translation that the relaxation of abstinence on the sabbath is to the Therapeutae what release from labour is to the beasts of burden. The Therapeutae have not endured the labour for which oil is a relief nor is λιπαίνω the natural word for anointing. Wendland certainly makes a point when he remarks that the indicative ἀνίασι would be expected rather than the participle. But the construction may, I think, be explained quite easily by understanding λιπαίνουσι. When he asks if they only eat bread and salt on the sabbath, what did they do on the other days, the natural answer is that on the sabbath they did not fast for the whole day or even until sunset. It is, I think, worth noting that according to Josephus, B.J. ii. 8. 3, the Essenes abstained altogether from the use of oil. Though it is not a decisive point it is a little surprising to find the Therapeutae making a sabbatical luxury of the indulgence which the less ascetic Essenes refuse.

APPENDICES

§ 49. τρίκλινα. "Sets of three couches" is one of the meanings given in L. & S. revised for τρίκλιος (the more usual form) and τρίκλιον which appears to be found occasionally. Conybeare gives "couches for three to recline upon." Whatever the exact meaning is the point is, as he says, that they are large articles of furniture and therefore it shows extravagance to make them of very expensive material.

§ 58. (Xenophon's Symposium.) Philo's description of this is very superficial. The amusements mentioned chiefly appear at the beginning and end of the banquet and he does not justice to the mixture of banter and seriousness (ἀναμιξέσκωψάν τε καὶ ἐσοῦδασαν) which characterizes most of the talk, nor to the real seriousness in Socrates' longer speech, while, on the other hand, he ignores the fact that the acceptance of the feature in Greek sentiment so strongly denounced in §§ 60-62 is as prominent here as in Plato's Symposium.

§ 59. (Plato's Symposium.) Philo's criticisms of this are not very creditable to him. In the first place his equating πάνδημος ἔρως with παιδεραστία is entirely wrong. The essence of πάνδημος ἔρως as represented in Pausanias's speech, where the phrase principally appears, is that it is περὶ σώματος. It is concerned with women as much as with boys (181 B) and the passion of a male for a younger male plays a greater part in οὐράνιος ἔρως. But more important than this is the error of dismissing the οὐράνιος ἔρως as merely a secondary adjunct brought in to give a touch of humour or wit. Such a description indeed would be appropriate to Aristophanes' fable of the original third sex which Philo takes so seriously in § 63, but it does not apply to the rest, and much of the picture ascribed by Socrates to Diotima is very much after Philo's heart. Indeed, he himself uses the word ἔρως in the same idealistic way, e.g. De Ebr. 136.

Philo, of course, is not the only person who has been shocked by the acceptance in some parts of the Symposium of παιδεραστία as a normal feeling and still more by the apparent callousness of Socrates as described by Alcibiades in the last part. It was perhaps with reference mainly to this that Athenaeus xi. 506 c declares that what Plato says about Alcibiades in the Symposium is not fit for repetition οὐδ' εἰς φῶς ἄξιον λέγεσθαι, and that, as every Cambridge student learnt in an earlier generation, Paley in the Evidences, part ii. 2, says that Socrates himself was more than suspected of the foulest impurities. Philo makes very little use of the Symposium himself. The only definite reminiscence listed by Leisegang is that noted on p. 232 of this volume, though perhaps the thought of the preference of the Therapeutae for the immortal rather than mortal children in De Vit. Cont. 68 may have in mind Symp. 209.

PHILO

§ 65. δι' ἑπτὰ ἑβδομάδων. Wendland rejects Conybeare's view almost entirely on the ground that the word cannot yield this sense. He is wrong, I believe, in saying that the words in themselves cannot mean "after seven weeks." διὰ in this sense indicates the interval between two events, but whether this interval occurs only once or recurs regularly depends on the context. Here, as stated in the footnote, since weekly sabbaths have been mentioned, "every seven weeks" is the natural meaning. But admitting that Philo has expressed himself carelessly if he means seven weeks after the Passover, is it likely that the Therapeutae, who appear to have been orthodox Jews, discarded the religious calendar of Moses and arranged a new system of festal days which one would have thought would have been difficult in itself? For since periods of fifty days do not fit into the year, this great feast would recur seven times in one year and eight times in another and in different months from year to year.

Wendland does not notice μεγίστης ἑορτῆς, which is not without its difficulties on Conybeare's hypothesis but much more perplexing on his. In what sense is every fiftieth day which follows the Symposium on the forty-ninth called the greatest feast and what happened on it? Nor does he notice τὸ μὲν πρῶτον. Conybeare understood this to mean that they first meet on the eve for the banquet, the religious meeting on the day itself for worship being taken for granted. By translating it "first of all" I suggest that he does not rule out other cheerful convivial meals but takes this as the most notable, cf. § 40.

APPENDICES

Ibid. The chief feast. Conybeare, p. 313, gives the following as reasons why Philo describes the Pentecostal meal in preference to the Paschal. The Passover was a domestic feast celebrated more austere than Pentecost, which was also a day prescribed by the Law for rejoicing; also it occurred in a season more suited to remaining all night in the open air. These are perhaps satisfactory reasons for his selection of the feast for description, but not for his calling it the greatest feast, and Conybeare is mistaken when he says, p. 300, that Philo uniformly refers to Pentecost as the greatest of the feasts. Philo I think only mentions Pentecost three times, De Dec. 160, Spec. Leg. i. 183, ii. 176 ff. In the third of these he remarks that it is a greater feast than the Sheaf which he has just described. In the second he calls it δημοτελεστάτη, i.e. especially national or generally celebrated, while in the first he speaks of the Passover and Tabernacles as the greatest feasts. However this inconsistency is not greater than many of those to be found in Philo's writings.

§ 67. (Genuineness of ἀλλ' ἔτι κομιδῇ νέους παίδας.) In Hermes, 1916, p. 179, Cohn gives as an additional reason for expunging these words that they make no sense, and that not they but ἀλλὰ τοὺς ἐκ πρώτης . . . φιλοσοφίας are the antithesis to τοὺς πολυτετεῖς καὶ πολιοῦς. This last is true, but the sentence contains another antithesis, viz. πρεσβυτέρους and νέους παίδας. This may be awkward, but is perfectly intelligible. Conybeare says "Armenio plane desunt, non tamen omittenda esse videntur."

§ 78. Reminding. I think this should be taken as an allusion to the Platonic doctrine that learning is recollection (Meno 81). The knowledge is latent in the mind and the teacher only brings it into consciousness, cf. De Praem. 9.

Conybeare discussing this thinks that the employment of ὑπόμνησις instead of ἀνάμνησις is against it. But surely if learning is recollection, teaching is reminding. He considers that Spec. Leg. iv. 107 is still more against it, but this seems to me irrelevant. There Philo says that, when the lesson is over, the pupil, by chewing the cud, i.e. by using his memory to call up what the teacher has told him, stamps a firm impression of them on his mind.

PHILO

§ 80. (The hymns.) That the Jewish churches in the Hellenistic world should have hymns and that they should be composed in metres familiar to Greeks is perfectly natural, and I presume it was knowledge of such hymns that led Josephus to make the fanciful statement (Ant. vii. 12. 3) that David arranged the Psalms, some in trimeters and others in pentameters, and also that Moses composed both his longer and shorter hymns in hexameters (ii. 16. 4, iv. 8. 44), but I have seen no illustration of this statement of Philo which seems curiously elaborate, particularly its enumeration of Greek metres. Among these προσodίων (or, at least the variant προσοδιακῶν) and στασίμων are recognized metrical terms. But παραβωμίων and παρασπονδείων are not cited elsewhere, at least as applied to hymns or lyrics, and χορικῶν appears to be a general term for any choral hymn.

APPENDIX TO DE AETERNITATE MUNDI

§ 12. Ocellus. The work attributed to Ocellus consists of four chapters. The first argues the indestructibility of the Cosmos and it is in this that the analogies to the De Aet. are mostly to be found. The most striking is in the eleventh section where he argues that the destroying cause must come either from within or from without and both of these are impossible. This is to the same effect as De Aet. 20-24 and in one place there is a certain similarity of language, ὁ κόσμος ἀγει τὰ πάντα μέρη § 22, beside ἀγεται τὰ ἄλλα πάντα ὑπὸ τοῦ παντός of Ocellus. It has far less detail than Philo and in fact is more a statement than an argument. Again i. 9 makes much the same point as De Aet. 70, namely that the world causes other things to exist and therefore causes itself to exist. Thirdly, §§ 12-13 describe shortly the transmutation of elements and there is a considerable analogy to De Aet. 107-110 and in both we have the same phrase κύκλον ἀμείβειν. The second chapter deals with γένεσις and is largely a reproduction of Aristotle, De Generatione et Corruptione. The third short chapter asserts the existence from everlasting of the human race, arguing to much the same effect as Critolaus in De Aet. 55. Chapter four is ethical; the view that the generation of mankind is from the first from mankind and not from the earth is declared to demand sexual purity and continence.

A curious point about the book is that the quotations from it in Stobaeus are in Doric while our manuscripts are in ordinary Greek. The presumption is that it was originally written in Doric, probably to give it the appearance of a heritage from the early days of Pythagoreanism, and afterwards translated into ordinary Greek to make it more acceptable to the general reader.

§ 13. Gods sprung from gods, etc. Archer-Hind (who translates "Gods of gods") and others take this as an intensive expression like κακά κακῶν and ἄρρητ' ἄρρήτων in Sophocles, but these do not seem to me quite analogous. The other rendering however is also very difficult. The words which follow in the mss. of Plato ὦν ἐγὼ δημιουργὸς πατήρ τε ἔργων ἃ δι' ἐμοῦ γινόμενα ἅλτα ἐμοῦ γε μὴ ἐθέλοντος are rendered by Archer-Hind "whose creator am I and father of works which by me coming into being are indissoluble save by my will." Philo omits not only ὦν but ἃ δι' ἐμοῦ γινόμενα.

PHILO

Bernays held that these words are a gloss in Plato, and I see that the Loeb edition and apparently others omit them, quoting Philo as their authority. I do not think that the omission by Philo is a strong argument for their spuriousness. The translation given above making ὦν ἔργων = ἔργων ἃ would of course be impossible with the ordinary reading.

I think it is an alternative possibility that Philo did omit ὦν but actually wrote ἃ before ἅλτα which has fallen out. In this case he may have taken the words as "Gods, of gods I am the maker (cf. θεοπλάστην below) and father of works which," etc.

The μὴ δεθὲν for δὴ δεθὲν is of course a mere scribe's blunder. The same uncertainty between θέλοντος and μὴ θέλοντος is found in the mss. both of Plato and Philo, but I cannot feel with Archer-Hind that the sense is as good with the positive as with the negative.

§ 21. Opposite extremes. The use of ἐναντιότης for a pair of opposites or for one member of such a pair, or for the condition of such a member, is too well supported by Philo's use of it, particularly in Quis Rerum, to allow us to take the phrase ταῖς ἄλλαις ἐναντ. as = "the other hostile forces." So too Ocellus in chapter two of his treatise taken, as stated in the last note, from Aristotle, De Gen. et Corr. Here the ἐναντιότητες or at least the primary ones are hot and cold, wet and dry. Fire is hot and dry, air hot and wet, water wet and cold, earth dry and cold. When one opposite overcomes the other, e.g. the wetness of water overcomes the dryness of fire, fire changes to air, and it is the overcoming of one opposite by the other which brings about the transmutation of the elements described by Philo, §§ 107 ff., but this conversion of one element into another is quite distinct from the causes of destruction of the world. Philo clearly has in mind the passage from the Timaeus translated in § 26. I suspect that he thought that when Plato follows "hot things and cold" by "all that have strong powers" he refers to the other ἐναντιότητες: if so I think he misunderstood Plato.

APPENDICES

§ 23. (Transposition of the text.) Between ἄδεκτον ἔσται and κατὰ τὸ παντελές the mss. insert a mass of sections from § 53 ὑποστήναι καθ' ἑαυτὸν to § 77 νέος ἦν συνεπιγραφάμενος. This no doubt happened because the leaves containing these sections were torn off and then replaced wrongly. The result was confusion at all three places, §§ 23, 53, 77. ἄδεκτον ἔσται ὑποστήναι καθ' ἑαυτὸν, κτλ., τὸ μηδέ χρόνον τῷ δόγματι, κτλ. and συνεπιγραφάμενος κατὰ τὸ παντελές, κτλ. are all equally unintelligible. Mangey of course perceived this but supposed that at each place words had dropped out which would have supplied the necessary connexion. Bernays' discovery that the confusion was caused by the displacement of these sections was a brilliant feat of scholarship and is incontrovertible. The words fit in exactly where they are now placed and nothing needs to be added. In this way the transposition stands on a different footing from that made by Cohn in De Vit. Cont. p. 144 of this volume, where several words have to be added to make the passage coherent.

§§ 25 and 38. (Text of quotations from Plato.) In § 25 besides a few minor differences there are as stated in the footnotes three departures of some importance in the mss. of Philo from the accepted text of Plato. In the first, ὡς τὰ τῷ for ὡς συστάτῳ, it must be noted that συστάτῳ though accepted by recent editors is a correction. The mss. for the most part have συνιστὰς (-άν) τῷ σώματι, out of which Stallbaum produced ἃ συνιστᾶ τὰ σώματα. If συστάτῳ is accepted the accommodation of τὰ τῷ to this is justifiable, since that makes no sense and cannot have been written by Philo. The second case of λυπεῖ for λύει is different, for λυπεῖ makes good sense. But there is no reason to doubt that Plato wrote λύει or that Philo meant to reproduce Plato's words as exactly as possible. He often indeed does not reproduce quotations exactly, but the substitution of λυπεῖ for λύει is as likely to be due to a scribe as to him, and it seems to me a doubtful point whether we should not make the correction here as Mangey and the earlier editions did. Bernays indeed supports λυπεῖ on the grounds that it gives a preferable meaning, but surely that is irrelevant unless he means that the text of Plato should be emended accordingly. In the third case of θεός for ἐν we have in θεός an interpolation which Philo might naturally make by mistake, and though ἐν is of some importance as echoing πρὸς δὲ τούτοις ἐν above this might easily escape notice, and the text is best left as it stands. In § 38 the change of the three masculines, αὐτὸς . . . παρέχων . . . πάσχων, to the corresponding neuters is necessitated by the neuters in the last sentence. But the addition of ἄλλων is perhaps unnecessary and is not accepted by Cumont and Bernays.

PHILO

§ 48. ιδίως ποιόν, etc. Zeller, Stoics and Epicureans, p. 100, says of ποιόν that it "comprises all those essential attributes by means of which a definite character is impressed on otherwise indeterminate matter. If the definite character belongs to a group or class it is called a common form κοινῶς ποιόν, or if it be something peculiar and distinctive it is called a distinctive form ιδίως ποιόν." There are a good many passages quoted in S.V.F. which contain the phrase, though they do not I think throw much light on the meaning. To them we may add Diog. Laert. vii. 138, where one definition of the Cosmos is ὁ ιδίως ποιὸς τῆς τῶν ὄλων οὐσίας, which Hicks translates the "individual being qualifying the whole of substance" (perhaps rather "the substance of the all"). I do not feel that either this or Zeller's "distinctive form" conveys to me any clear meaning. On the formula stated here that "two ιδίως ποιόι or ποιά cannot exist on the same substratum," Zeller says that it follows as a matter of course since ιδίως ποιός distinguishes a thing from every other. As to the argument based on it Bernays in the dissertation which precedes his commentary says frankly that we cannot expect to understand it, but in the commentary itself he does give an explanation which I do not understand. We can see however that, assuming as in the typical case that Theon is destroyed when Dion's foot is amputated, the application which Philo makes is logical or at least intelligible. The Cosmos is a composite being with body and soul, the soul being Providence. In the conflagration when the Cosmos loses its bodily part it is on the same analogy not the Cosmos which is destroyed but its soul.

It may possibly help us to compare the similar argument in Plutarch Comm. Not. chapter 36, 1077 B where we have the Cosmos, identified with Zeus, as the whole man with Providence for its soul. What happens at the conflagration according to the Stoics is that Zeus alone among the gods is not destroyed, cf. De Aet. 81, and passes over or withdraws (ἀναχωρεῖ = ἀνέδραμε here) into Providence and they (i.e. the Cosmos and Providence) being brought together (ὁμοῦ γενομένους) both continue to exist on the single οὐσία of ether (does this mean that as in the διακόσμησις the Cosmos was the ιδίως . . . ποιὸς τῆς οὐσίας τῶν ὅλων now that τὰ ὅλα are resolved into ether, this has both Zeus and Providence for its ιδίως ποιός?), and this is supposed to contradict the doctrine of δύο ιδίως ποιά, etc. The only thing I can claim to gather with certainty from the two passages is that the Peripatetics argued that the Stoic doctrine of the ἐκπύρωσις contradicted their own doctrine of δύο ιδίως ποιά, etc.

APPENDICES

Two minor points are: (1) the mss. reading εἰδοποιούς is retained by Bernays though he clearly takes it as equal to ιδίως ποιούς. He curiously says that this is not to be put down to the scribes, but shows that the source is Peripatetic, since Aristotle uses the term as = "specific." (2) The treatise Περὶ αὐξανόμενων is not mentioned in Diogenes Laertius's catalogue of Chrysippus's writings. The subject no doubt is what Plutarch 1083 B calls ὁ λόγος περὶ αὐξήσεως and deals with the relation of increases and diminutions to identity of personality. Plutarch represents the Stoics as holding that these changes are wrongly called in familiar language increase and diminution and are rather γενέσεις and φθοραί.

§ 127. Fire . . . lame. This allegorical interpretation of the post-Homeric story that Hephaestus became lame when thrown from heaven to earth comes originally from Heraclitus according to a scholiast on Il. i. 590. It is also alluded to by Plutarch, De facie in orbe lunae 922 A and Cornutus 19, who says that fire cannot advance ἄνευ ξύλων nor a lame man ἄνευ ξυλάδους βάκτρον (see quotations in Cohn). Cumont's emendation given in the footnotes is ingenious in the sense that Ἡφαιστος might easily have been lost before ἢ φασι, and Διὸς σκηρ. corrupted to διὸ σκηρ., but is surely impossible. He cites the passage from the scholiast to support it, but this only mentions Zeus to equate him with the heavenly fire which is contrasted with the earthly. He also declares that ἐξ ἑαυτοῦ would be καθ' ἑαυτὸν if taken as Bernays and the translation take it, but see § 20 above, and De Vit. Cont. 4 and 5. νομῆν ("feeding on") for μονήν is also unnecessary and indeed less suitable to the context.

PHILO

§ 129. Free their heads. So I think rather than "lift their heads." ἀνακύπτω in the common sense of emerging from water suggests coming up to breathe, cf. ἀνανήξασθαι Spec. Leg. iii. 3. The snakes might conceivably, even though crushed by the elephants, still have their heads free, and it is this that is negatived here.

§ 143. (ἐρωτάω="state a proposition.") Another example of this use, which may be much commoner than the lexicon suggests, occurs in the passage of Plutarch mentioned in the note on ἰδίως ποιόν above, ὁ περὶ αὐξήσεως λόγος . . . ἠρώτηται ὑπ' Ἐπιχάρμου.

Sections 147 ff. I take the opportunity of pointing out a serious omission in the notes in vol. vi. In De Abr. 1 Philo says that the Book of Genesis tells how fire and water wrought the greatest destructions on what is on the earth. In Mos. ii. 53, speaking of the punishment of the wicked, he says that the most forceful elements in the universe, fire and water, fell upon them, so that as the times revolved some perished by water, others by conflagration. He then mentions the deluge itself and continues "at a later time when the race sprung from the remnant had again become very populous, he determined to destroy them by fire," and we then have a short account of the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah. I did not at the time perceive the close connexion of these passages with the Timaeus and the Laws. The connexion is clearer still in Mos. ii. 263, where we are told that the men had lost count of the sabbath by reason of the constant destructions by fire and water. Philo evidently considers the deluge and the destruction of Sodom and Gomorrah as examples of the destructions described by Plato. Whether he supposed that they were only examples, as the last passage suggests, and that other unrecorded visitations had occurred, we cannot tell. At any rate he would hold that what truth there was in Plato's story came from Moses.

APPENDIX TO IN FLACCUM

§ 1. Sejanus. According to Eus. Hist. Eccl. ii. 5, Philo related in his "Embassy" that "Sejanus, who had the greatest influence with the Emperor, was zealous to destroy utterly the whole Jewish nation." In Legatio 160 he says that Sejanus brought charges against the Jews in Rome, the falsity of which was recognized by Tiberius after Sejanus's fall and execution. Sejanus had invented these calumnies because he knew that the Jews would defend the Emperor against his treason. I have not seen elsewhere any support of these statements.

§ 10. (Tiberius Gemellus.) Gemellus was the son of Drusus, Tiberius's son who had died in A.D. 23. He was therefore one of the γνήσιοι while his cousin Gaius was the son of Germanicus, Tiberius's nephew, who had been adopted (θετός) into the Gens Julia. The story of the murder of Gemellus, or, more strictly speaking, his enforced suicide, is told by Philo in Legatio 22-31. Philo is somewhat inaccurate in speaking of him as κοινωνός τῆς ἀρχῆς here and in Legatio 23, 28. Tiberius had left his property to the two equally, but had said nothing about the succession to the principate. This, however, might be taken to imply that he wished the two to share the sovereignty, and Gemellus's partisans, no doubt, claimed that this was his rightful position. Indeed, though Gaius obtained from the senate the cancellation of the will, he according to Philo declared his wish that Gemellus should ultimately be his partner, but that as he was a mere child (he was actually 17 or 18, and only seven years younger than Gaius), he needed to be educated for this and he therefore made him his adopted son.

There seems to be another inaccuracy in the statement that Gaius's mother, Agrippina, was put to death. She and her son, Nero, had been condemned and exiled in A.D. 33. The statement made by both Tacitus and Suetonius that she starved herself to death seems to be generally accepted, though Tac. Ann. v. 25 suggests that possibly food was refused her.

PHILO

§ 20. Dionysius. Dionysius is presumed to be identical with the Gaius Julius Dionysius or Dionysius son of Theon, mentioned in the recently discovered letter of Claudius, see the text with translation and commentary in H. I. Bell's Jews and Christians in Egypt, pp. 23 ff. The letter was written in answer to the embassy sent by the Alexandrians, primarily to congratulate Claudius on his accession, but also to present their defence for the recent anti-Jewish disturbances. Dionysius is named among the ambassadors and also the zeal with which he pleaded his case is especially mentioned.

Our knowledge of Isidorus and Lampo is not confined to the activities described by Philo, see Introduction, pp. 299 f. They reappear in another interesting document. This is a fragment of what Bell calls the Alexandrian Propagandists' Literature, known as the "pagan acts of the martyrs." This fragment probably belongs to some twelve years later. It appears that Isidorus, now gymnasiarch, and Lampo are still the protagonists of the Greek cause. They have brought charges against Agrippa the Second, but have lost their case and are themselves put to death. In this literature the arch-rogues and villains have become the true patriots who withstand the pernicious influence of the Jews and the tyranny of Rome.

In another fragment, apparently of the same type, described by Box, p. lvi, Dionysius appears with Isidorus as having an interview with Flaccus, in which they procure from him a permit to leave the country. This does not appear to do more than confirm Philo's statement that Dionysius was one of Isidorus's leading supporters.

§ 25. Agrippa. Agrippa the First is a subject of a long biographical notice in Jos. Ant. xviii. 6 and other notices elsewhere, but he is also well known to multitudes, who have never heard of Josephus, from Acts xii. He is the Herod who figures there as persecutor of the early church and dying miserably. A grandson of Herod the Great, his early life was one of extravagance, and when reduced to destitution he had on a visit to Alexandria borrowed a large sum from

APPENDICES

Philo's brother, the alabarch Alexander. This visit is mentioned by Philo in § 28, though he discreetly says nothing of the circumstances. At Rome he had made friends with Gaius but got into trouble with Tiberius and was imprisoned. But Gaius on his accession released him and gave him as Philo tells us the territory which Philip had ruled as tetrarch as well as the title of king. Philip, the "best of the Herods," had died three years before and Tiberius had annexed the tetrarchy to the province of Syria, but under the condition that the revenues should be kept separate, and these presumably fell into Agrippa's hands. Josephus adds that Gaius gave him at the same time the tetrarchy of Lysanias, and, finally, after Gaius's death, Claudius gave him also Judea and Samaria, so that he held all the dominions over which his grandfather had ruled. Agrippa's loyalty to his nation appears again in Legatio 261-332, where Gaius while praising his candour blames him for his complaisance (ἀρέσκεια) to his fellow nationals, thus agreeing with the author of the Acts when he tells us how Agrippa slew James the brother of John with a sword, and because he saw that it pleased (ἀρεστον εἶσσι) the Jews proceeded further to take Peter also.

§ 45. (κατάλυσις.) Up to this point we should think that the overthrow or destruction consisted in the desecration caused by the installation of the images. But in § 53 this is expanded into "Flaccus seizes them without even leaving them their name." And in Legatio 132 the Alexandrians, thinking that Gaius would approve their action, destroy and burn all the synagogues in which the Jews did not make an effective resistance and installed the images in the others. How are we to reconcile these statements? I should suggest as most probable that Flaccus had merely ostentatiously abstained from interfering when the Alexandrians tried to install the images by force. These attacks resulted in riotous conflicts in which many synagogues actually were destroyed, and the statement quoted above from § 53 merely means that the Jews felt that they had lost their holy houses and considered that Flaccus was ultimately responsible. On the other hand, H. I. Bell in Cambridge Ancient History, vol. x. p. 310, takes the statement in § 53 more literally and says that Flaccus forbade the Jews the exercise of their religion, closing the synagogues. See also note on § 54.

§ 48. (Footnote a, p. 328.) When I wrote this note I had not sufficiently considered Box's translation and note. He translates "they have no sacred precincts in which they could set forth their gratitude" and gives as a note "the Jews of the Diaspora had no temples," i.e. the προσευχαί are not ἱεροὶ περίβολοι, whereas I understand Philo to say that they are holy until they are desecrated. His explanation has the great merit that he gets rid of the difficulty mentioned in my footnote, but it seems to me to raise other difficulties. It is true that the synagogues were not temples, that is to say sacrifices could not be offered in them, but that they were ἱεροὶ περίβολοι is implied by the very fact that they could be desecrated. Box seems also to suggest a distinction between the pagan temples and the synagogues in that inscriptions to benefactors could not be placed in them, and loyalty could only be shown by dedications and emblems in honour of the imperial power. I dare say he may have evidence of this, but it seems rash to assume that the phrase ἐνδιθήσονται τὸ εὐχάριστον would not apply to dedications and emblems. If it does not, then neither were the Jews deprived of the means of showing their loyalty, for they never had it. I still prefer my view and explain the μόνοι ἀπεστεροῦντο to mean that the Jews were the only people who would be deprived of their places of worship by the introduction of images and thus also be deprived of the means of showing their gratitude. It is badly and obscurely expressed, but so is much in these sections.

PHILO

§ 54. (The edict.) The purport of this is obscure and I can do little more than record some recent suggestions on the subject. Box, p. xliv, looks upon it as a pronouncement that the Jews would retain only legal rights assured by a competent authority, and that every merely prescriptive right or concession would be withdrawn. Among these were the right to live in other quarters than the one originally granted, and the privilege of being beaten by blades, mentioned in § 78. Balsdon, The Emperor Gaius, p. 132, says that the Alexandrians pleaded that the Jews had no right to live in Alexandria at all and that what Flaccus did was to lay down that this right was limited as above. I do not know what evidence he has that the Alexandrians proposed anything so extreme. Both these views imply, I suppose, that when Philo says that the edict deprived the Jews of their political rights in general, it is merely a rhetorical exaggeration.

APPENDICES

The fact that the edict was issued a few days after the demand for desecrating the synagogues suggests that the two things are connected. Accordingly Bell in Cambridge Ancient History, vol. x. p. 310, says that Flaccus welcomed the proposal and on the inevitable refusal by the Jews branded them as aliens and intruders. This hint started the pogrom, the blame for which Flaccus cast on the Jews and in consequence closed the synagogues. Box and Balsdon, so far as I can judge, would hold that these two things were separate though practically simultaneous attacks organized by the Alexandrians.

Another possibility, more or less favoured by Bell, in his Jews and Christians, p. 16, is that at the bottom of both, but kept in the background by Philo, is a claim made by the Jews of full citizenship. This may have been formally made by the Jews or formally repudiated by the Alexandrians; if so, the edict is exactly what it stated, a specific answer to a specific question. The Jews are aliens and incomers and, as Claudius worded it some years afterwards, live in a city "which is not their own." It need not, though it may have added, "but there are certain ancient privileges which they may retain." In this case, the two things have the very close connexion, that the Alexandrians strengthened their case by bringing out the disloyal refusal of the Jews to give the honours to the Emperor which the true citizens give.

§ 56. Drusilla. The mourning for Drusilla is not the ordinary tribute to the death of a royal person. She was especially beloved by Gaius, who was believed to live incestuously with her, and on her death he proclaimed a iustitium, during which it was a capital crime to laugh, bathe, dine, with parents or wife or children (Suet. Gaius 24).

§ 130. Great expenses of the office. "The gymnasiarch had to maintain and pay the persons who were preparing themselves for the games and contests in the public festivals, to provide them with oil and perhaps with the wrestlers' dust, also to adorn the gymnasium or the places where the agones took place" (Dict. of Ant.). This is said of Athens, but the statement here and the particular expense of the oil mentioned in De Prov. 46 show that much the same held in Alexandria. Bell (Camb. Anc. History, vol. x. p. 299) says that in the capitals of each nome in Egypt the Roman rule established a superior class known as the Gymnasium Class and "only members of this were entitled to that education in the gymnasium which was as much the hall-mark of social superiority as a public school education has been in England." If this is to be extended to Alexandria, we can understand that the official who catered for so select a body would naturally feel bound not to skimp the expenses. Lampo's protest is perhaps to his credit.

PHILO

§ 131. (εἰσάγων ὡς or εἰσαγωγέως.) Mr. Box is too modest over this emendation; textually it is obviously satisfactory, getting rid of a serious, if not a fatal, difficulty, at a minimum cost. In his note in Class. Quart. 1935, he refers to papyri for the use of the term εἰσαγωγεύς. I am not sure that these help him as far as the functions are concerned, but they show, at any rate, that the word was in use in Egypt, and if so it is only natural that the persons who εἰσάγουσι τὰς δίκας should be called εἰσαγωγεῖς. He quotes also a parallel from Lucian, which is worth quoting for itself, though since Lucian does not actually use the word εἰσαγωγεύς it does not strengthen his case. Lucian, Apol. 12, says that he at one time held a post in Egypt, which was important, lucrative, and likely to lead to high promotion. In this he introduced the cases (εἰσάγει τὰς δίκας), assigned the order, taking minutes of the proceedings (ὑπομνήματα τῶν πραττομένων καὶ λεγομένων γράφεισθαι), arranged (ρυθμίζειν) the speeches of the pleaders, preserved the decisions of the magistrates, clearly, faithfully and accurately, and transmitted them to be kept for ever.

§§ 136, 137. (κλίνη and κλιναρχης.) On the question of the exact meaning of these terms, the lexicon speaks with uncertain sound. The original L. & S. gives for the second "one who takes the first place," with reference to this passage. The revised repeats this misleading, indeed, erroneous entry, but adds (for κλιναρχος) "president of an Isiac fraternity." For κλίνη the original edition noted "ἱερά κλίνη, the lectisternium or pulvinar deorum of the Romans," and the revised while repeating part of this has added the example κλίνη τοῦ κυρίου Σαράπιδος, and finally κλίνη is used "generally for a banquet." Under πρωτοκλιναρχος, a word unknown to the original edition, it gives "president of a κλίνη, i.e. a religious association." This and the other references added by the revised are all from papyri or inscriptions. Stephanus gives nothing on the subject; Box adds more references from similar sources. The natural conclusion seems to be that originally the couch is that on which the divine image is laid (cf. the couch of Adonis in the fifteenth Idyll of Theocritus), and the extensions to the festal meeting and further to the associates themselves are quite intelligible. The present passage suggests that the religious side was often left very much in the background. The words are untranslatable, "couch" is meaningless, and the substitution of "divan" on the grounds that the word connotes both a couch and a collection of people is perhaps not much improvement.

APPENDICES

§ 138. (ἀλειφόβιος.) A rare word of which only one other example from a fragment of Aristophanes is cited. Hesychius explains it as πένης. L. & S. regards it as a contemptuous term for ἀλειπτής or the menial serving an ἀλειπτής, and so Bekker's Anecdota 382. 17 τὸν περὶ παλαιστραν ἀναστρεφόμενον καὶ ὑπηρετοῦντα.

§ 139. (Anapaests.) It certainly seems that this term may be applied to verse which is not anapaestic in the regular sense, though it does not follow that it connotes ribald verse in general. The Greek ear could find in certain metres and rhythms, as in music, something undignified and suited to burlesque, and these are called anapaestic, presumably because anapaests often predominated in them. So Demetrius, De Eloc. 189, speaks of σύνθεσις ἀναπαιστική καὶ μάλιστα εὐκυνία τοῖς κεκλασμένοις καὶ ἀσέμοις μέτροις. So it is applied to the parabasis in the Old Comedy even to the parts which are not anapaestic (see several examples in Stephanus). L. & S. revised notes its special application to "ribald and satirical" verse and cites two examples. The first, Plut. Per. 33, consists of regular anapaests. In the second, from Dion Cassius 65. 8, the Alexandrians taunt Vespaasian; and, though Titus appeases his anger somewhat, still continue. Their first refrain is ἐξ ὀβόλου προσαίεις and the second συγγινώσκομεν αὐτῷ· οὐ γὰρ οἶδε καισαρεῦεν. Here only the first words of the second piece are anapaestic, but Vespaasian is said to have been enraged not only by the substance of what they said, but ἐκ τοῦ κατακεκλασμένου καὶ ἀναπαίστου. Here κατακεκλασμένου, like κεκλασμένοις in the quotation from Demetrius, indicates something lacking the proper seriousness and dignity. Cornutus 30 seems to equate the "anapaestic" with the iambic, which also often indicates a lampoon. He derives θρίαμβος from θροεῖν and ιαμβίξειν and then adds ὅθεν καὶ ἐν τοῖς κατὰ τῶν πολεμίων θριάμβοις πολλοῖς ἀναπαίστοις σκώπτοντες χρῶνται.

PHILO

§ 141. (Subject of προσαναμάττεσθαι.) The use of these compounds of -μάττομαι is somewhat uncertain. The only one listed by Leisegang is ἐναπομάττομαι. Of his ten examples of this seven are middle in the sense of "receiving the impression," but three, namely, Quod Deus 43, Mos. ii. 76 and Spec. Leg. i. 47, have an active sense of "giving the impression." In other compounds I have noted ἀναμάττομαι De Virt. 24 and De Aet. 2, both in the sense of receiving, also ἀπομάττομαι De Virt. 207. L. & S. gives our word as "besmirch in addition," clearly taking ἀγνωμοσύνην as subject. No doubt this is possible, but the mass of evidence as far as I can judge is in favour of τοῦνομ'.

§ 162. (σφαδάζειν.) A favourite word with Philo. It is badly dealt with in Leisegang's index, which though frequently missing an example or two is generally near enough to completeness to enable one to decide how Philo uses the word. Here he has listed five examples, namely, De Cher. 36, De Mig. 156, De Abr. 257, De Virt. 128 and Quod Omn. Prob. 39. In addition to these I have noted eight, some from Siegfried, and probably there are others, possibly many. For the use of other students I give the references: De Ebr. 121, Mos. i. 170, Spec. Leg. iv. 81, De Virt. 30, De Praem. 140, and in this volume besides this passage Flacc. 18 and 180, also Legatio 184. Only in De Praem. 140 is bodily struggling necessarily implied and in most of them it would be grotesque.

APPENDIX TO HYPOTHETICA

§ 7. 5. (Absolution from vows.) On this Edersheim (The Temple, its Ministry and Services, p. 69) says that release from a vow which affected the interests of others might be obtained from one sage or from three persons in the presence of him who had been affected by the vow. He does not state the authority for this and it seems strange that in treating the subject he does not refer to this passage in Philo. In the same connexion he remarks that all laws were limited by higher obligations: according to the Mishnah a man could not vow what of his fortune he owed to others nor his widow's portion. Philo's statement that a man by vowing his wife's τροφή could bind himself not to support her agrees with the practice denounced in Mark vii. 10 ff., but is contrary to the principle described by Edersheim, and it is strange to find Philo apparently approving it.

§ 7. 8. (Precepts of Buzyges.) The rare passages alluding to these are collected by Bernays (see Introd. p. 407 note b). The Paroemiographer, p. 233, has ὁ γὰρ Βουζύγης Ἀθήνησι ὁ τὸν ἱερὸν ἄροτον ἐπιτελῶν ("instituted the sacred rite of the plough") ἄλλα τε πολλὰ ἀρᾶται καὶ τοῖς μὴ κοινηνοῦσι κατὰ τὸν βίον ὕδατος ἢ πυρός, ἢ μὴ ὑποφαίνουσιν ὁδὸν πλανωμένοις. A scholiast on Soph. Ant. 255 mentions the saying that Buzyges cursed those who left a corpse unburied. Clem. Alex. Strom. ii. 503 says that those who bid others do what they judge to be not profitable to themselves οὐκ ἂν ἐκφύγοιεν τὴν Βουζυγίαν ἀράν. Though the name of Buzyges is not mentioned, there is clearly an allusion to the same in a fragment of Diphilus where refusals of charity are said to be denounced in the "curses." Cicero, De Off. iii. 54 f., speaks of refusing to show the way as denounced "Athenis execrationibus publicis" and interprets it to include those who allow a purchaser to be defrauded by a mistake.

PHILO

Bernays notes that three of the specific things here mentioned, the duty of showing the way, allowing free use of fire and water, and giving burial are all mentioned by Philo. Bernays does not give any quotation for the statement that the curses are repeated by a descendant of Buzyges at a feast of Demeter.

§ 7. 9. (Appeal of animals.) The statement seems to me remarkable and I should like to meet with some illustration of it or comment on it particularly in the form given it by Josephus. When is it that animals enter our houses as suppliants? The only thing in the law which suggests helping animals in trouble is the command in Deut. xxii. 4 to help to raise up a fallen beast and there really the point is helping the owner.

Philo in De Virt. 125-147 has insisted earnestly on the duty of kindness to animals, but it is remarkable that of the points which he mentions, namely the prohibitions against (1) separating the mother and offspring before seven days, (2) killing the two in the same day, (3) seething the lamb in its mother's milk, (4) muzzling the treading ox, (5) yoking different kinds of animals together, none is mentioned here, at any rate definitely, though (1) may be alluded to in § 7. On the other hand the one which precedes this here is omitted there.

APPENDIX TO DE PROVIDENTIA

FRAGMENT 1

Really created. In the preceding paragraph, if the Latin translation of the Armenian version is to be trusted, Philo has declared that he is ready to concede "universum ingenitum et sempiternum esse," a belief which he ascribes not only to Parmenides and Empedocles but also to Zeno and Cleanthes. But still of the "ingenita materia" some part may be created and destroyed ("generetur et corrumpatur"), sometimes by providence, sometimes in the course of nature. He goes on to compare this with the work of a statuary and other craftsmen. According to this hypothesis God did not create eternally the primal matter but used matter to shape the Cosmos. And even if we go a step farther and suppose that the Cosmos itself as well as matter was uncreated ("etsi una cum materia mundus ingenitus supponatur") there is still room for providence in directing it. In this case the analogy is with the Ephors at Sparta, which they rule though they did not build it. I cannot fit εἰ δὴ γέγονεν ὄντως into this. I should understand it better if for ὄντως we substituted οὐτως = "assuming that this is the method of its genesis." This is not quite satisfactory, since properly speaking if it is ἀγένητος it has no genesis.

The Armenian has "materiae specialiter factae," of which Aucher says that the translator read τῆς ὕλης εἶδος. Is it not simpler to suppose that he took εἰ δὴ as a single word and unable to make anything of the rest omitted it?

FRAGMENT 2

§ 4. The thought here is very striking. Wendland cites for it from Sen. Ep. lxxvi. 26-27. Here we have "num quis tam iniquam censuram inter suos agit, ut sanum filium quam aegrum magis diligit? . . . quoniam quidem etiam parentium amor magis in ea, quorum miseretur, inclinatur." But this is not quite the same. For as the sequel "virtus quoque opera sua, quae videt affici et premi, non magis amat, sed parentium bonorum more magis complectitur ac fovet" shows, it is pity for the sufferings of the good and not a yearning for those who have gone astray which Seneca means. Philo's words come nearer to the spirit of the story of the Prodigal Son than anything I have seen elsewhere in ancient philosophy.

PHILO

§ 8. περὶ ἃ κηραίνει. This phrase is here given in Gifford's translation by "about which . . . are anxious"; in Mangey's by "quorum in cupiditate . . . contabescit," and L. & S. revised, connecting it with κῆρ and citing a very similar passage to this (De Dec. 153), has "be sick at heart or anxious." But the evidence of Philo's use of the phrase points to the meaning given in the translation, i.e. "incurring disaster" or "getting into trouble in connexion with something." Leisegang has eight examples of it, to which add this passage and perhaps De Virt. 31. In none of these is "suffering disaster" impossible and in some "being anxious" is impossible. Thus in Spec. Leg. i. 81 the body of the would-be priest must be scrutinized ἵνα περὶ μηδὲν ἀτύχημα κηραίνῃ; ib. 260 the bodies of the victims sacrificed must be without flaw and the souls of the offerers must κηραίνειν περὶ μηδὲν πάθος; De Praem. 29 the defectiveness of human reason is shown by ὁ λογισμὸς περὶ πολλὰ κηραίνων. In De Ebr. 164 Lot περὶ ταῦτα μάλιστα κηραίνει, where ταῦτα is explained as the fact that Lot had only daughters and therefore could breed nothing masculine or perfect.

§ 17. (Footnote 1, ἄξαντες.) I do not know what sense Dindorf and Gaisford supposed this to have. Gifford, clearly taking it from ἄγνυμι, says that "if it is retained the meaning will be 'having broken through,'" but no such meaning of ἄγνυμι is known, and even if it were possible it would still be necessary to follow it with διά. Nor can any meaning be obtained by taking it from ἄγω. But it is not quite so impossible that it should be the participle of αἰσσω, though the picture of the physicians being so eager to reach the royal bed that they dart or rush through the bodyguard is, like "breaking through," somewhat grotesque. In this case we should print ἄξαντες <διά> (though the mss. would have it without the iota subscript) and ὄχλον and θεραπείαν would be governed by ὑπερβάντες. Wendland suggests as alternatives ἐξ ἐναντίας or ἀντικρῦ or ἀμελήσαντες.

APPENDICES

§ 18. σχήματι. Something is to be said for Mangey's proposal to correct this to ρεύματι. This is supported by Wendland, but it should be pointed out that in this case the word would be used in the medical sense of a flux or discharge. Galen and Dioscorides both speak of a ρεῦμα γαστρὸς or κοιλίας in this sense. The Armenian has a word which Aucher translates by "laxitate" and it is possible that it is some medical term which might indicate discharges or as we should say "looseness" of the bowels, but is διώδηκε a word which would be joined with ρεῦμα in this medical sense?

§ 23. (The quotation from Empedocles.) Two lines of this are quoted by Synesius

“ ἔνθα φόνος τε κότος τε καὶ ἄλλων ἔθνεα κηρῶν αὐχμηραὶ τε νόσοι καὶ σήμιες ἔργα τε ρευστά.”

Another line quoted by Clement

“ κλαυθὰ τε καὶ κώκυσα ἰδὼν ἀσυνήθεα χῶρον”

is no doubt rightly supposed to precede the two. The correction of φόνοι τελοῦνται to φόνοι λιμοὶ τε is apparently due to Stephanus, but I feel as Dindorf evidently did that it is somewhat arbitrary. There is no great similarity between τελοῦνται and λιμοὶ τε and nothing very strange in Philo quoting the first two words, then inserting the verb, and then quoting the conclusion of the line. Nor is hunger to the point. The places spoken of are those in which not physical evils but human cruelty predominates. The Armenian no doubt had τελοῦνται, for the Latin is “ubi caedes aliaeque huius modi pravae gentium consuetudines vigent.”

§ 24. (Footnote 3, ἠωρήσθαι.) This correction of Dindorf for θεωρήσαι, which is not noticed in Gifford's later edition, is clearly based on the fact that in Her. iii. 124 Polycrates' daughter dreamt that her father ἐν ἠέρι μετέωρον ὄντα was washed by Zeus and anointed by the sun. Mangey had suggested μετεωρίζεσθαι. The correction leads up well to κρεμάμενον.

§ 24. The Armenian version of this section as it appears in Aucher's translation is very curious. Wendland dismisses it as corrupt, but much of it admits of some interesting interpretation. It does not give the name of Polycrates at all, and Aucher in a note says that the translator seems to have read πολὸν κρατεῖ γε, which he rendered by a phrase which Aucher represents by "per multum temporis tenet." This no doubt he tacked on to the clause about fortune given in the footnote as omitted by Eusebius. He made a full stop then and continued with what Aucher represents by "con-digne iis quae patrauerat inique impieque ut eorum promotor et auctor sortitus est deterioris vitae infortunium, atque iussu magni regis diu tortus et clavis compressus crudeliter consummatus est." That is to say he took χορηγός as = "promoter and author" and as subject to ἠδίκησε καὶ ἡσέβησε. At the end of the sentence his "crudeliter consummatus est" seems to represent what he read for χρησμών ἐκπιπλᾶς or perhaps χρησμών ἐκπιπλᾶς οἶδα. The Latin then proceeds "illa vero dimiserunt eum quae non multis ante horis gloriae speciem ferebant ante solem ungi et a Iove lavari." The words ἔφη κάμαντόν of the received text are to some extent conjectural, for almost all the mss. divide them otherwise such as ἔφηκ' ἔμαντόν or ἀμαντόν, and if the Armenian by a slight change got ἀφήκεν αὐτόν it will explain "dimiserunt eum." I suspect therefore that he read ἀφήκεν αὐτόν τὰ οὐ πρὸ πολλοῦ ἐκτιμήσαι (or some similar word which he substituted for θεωρήσαι) δόξαντα, and the translation will run "He was sent out of life by the things which seemed a short time before to have promised him high honour, namely being anointed," etc. If the similar word is θεῶ ἐικάσαι "to liken him to a god," we should have something which would make admirable sense and be textually fairly satisfactory, but not well represented by "gloriae." His version, I am afraid, cannot be accepted in face of the violent changes from the mss. involved, but it is a much more sensible version. It avoids the pointlessness of putting these words into the mouth of Polycrates and also the contradiction of Herodotus's story. If we had no access to the Greek and had to choose between his account and that in the translation no one would hesitate to choose the former.

PHILO

§ 26. ἀνείμωνα. For this word see note on De Som. i. 99 (vol. v. p. 599), where this example should have been noted as well as Spec. Leg. i. 83. In all these cases Philo uses this apparently rare word in the sense of without the upper covering and contrasted with γυμνός. The contrast is obvious both here and in Spec. Leg., where it is explained as—"in short tunics," almost as obvious in De Som. i. 99, where the phrase κοιμάσθαι ἀνείμωνα means sleeping with inadequate covering. In that note I suggested that Philo had Od. iii. 348 in mind, but if so he misunderstood the meaning, for there the ἀνείμων is not a person who sleeps uncovered but a host who is unable to supply proper covering to himself or his guest. But the misunderstanding is shared by L. & S. which translates it as—"unclad." I also commented on L. & S. revised being, like Stephanus, still unable to supply an example of the word except that in the Odyssey. In the Addenda however two examples are given, one from a fragment of Callimachus in a papyrus and our Spec. Leg. passage (which however should be given as Ph. 2. 225—not 355).

APPENDICES

§ 45. For the Stoic doctrine of "incidental consequences" as distinguished from the "primary works of nature" cf. Gellius vii. 1. 7 "existimat (sc. Chrysippus) non fuisse hoc principale consilium ut faceret homines morbis obnoxios . . . sed cum multa, inquit, atque magna gigneret pareretque aptissima ac utilissima alia quoque simul agnata sunt incommoda, eaque non per naturam sed per sequelas quasdam necessarias facta dicit quod ipse appellat κατὰ παρακολούθησιν." This dictum of Chrysippus applies primarily to diseases but the latter part gives it the same general application as Philo gives it here. See Zeller, Stoics and Epicureans, p. 179 (Eng. trans.). Zeller adds that the Stoics also pointed out that things ordinarily regarded as evil may be of the greatest service, and illustrates this from a saying of Chrysippus quoted by Plutarch that bugs do us good service by preventing us from sleeping too long. Cf. for this the incidental uses pointed out by Philo in §§ 47-51.

§ 48. (Footnote 2.) I have allowed what may be called the generally received text to stand but further investigation since the translation was made makes me think that Gaisford and Dindorf were almost certainly right. Gaisford's App. Crit. seems to indicate that he found τὰ μέτρα or τὰ ἡμέτερα μέτρα in his mss. with one exception and found πείρα in none. Gifford in the two mss. which he relied on for this part of the Praeparatio found the same. Also ταῖς ὥραις, not τὰς ὥρας, appears to be universal. On the other hand τῆ ἡμετέρα πείρα goes back to Viger, 1688 and possibly (though I have had no opportunity of verifying it) to Stephanus in 1544. How then did Viger or Stephanus get it? The clue seems to be that the one exception noted by Gaisford has τῆ ἡμετέρα πέτρα. Assuming that Viger or Stephanus found this, the correction to πείρα would be very natural. But if μέτρα is right, ἡμέτερα, which appears in nearly all mss., must either be dismissed as a dittography or amended to ἡμέρινα (or ταῖς ἡμερίναις . . . ὥραις?). Wendland, quoting the Armenian, "diei mensuras notat et horas," suggests τῆς ἡμέρας, but the adjective used in its common antithesis to νυκτέρινος seems to me preferable.

PHILO

Wendland also notes that the Armenian has "quae de columnis cadunt umbrae," and suggests that παστάδων should replace ποδῶν.

§ 50. (Quotation from Pindar.) The quotation here alluded to occurs in that part between the two divisions of the second fragment which was omitted by Eusebius. It is undoubtedly from the beginning of a fragment of Pindar preserved in Dionysius of Halicarnassus, De Vi Dem. 6. It is listed among the fragments of Pindar as 107 or 74 (Schröder, p. 427), in Sandys's Loeb translation, p. 548 as Paeon 9. The Latin version in Aucher has enough resemblance to show the identity, but otherwise is sheer nonsense and does not even suggest the general sense, which is that the sun is asked why by this darkening it threatens the world with evil. A version supplied by Conybeare, from which Schröder quotes various bits, would probably explain it better. But it certainly seems that the Armenian who could manage Philo with general accuracy was unable to tackle Pindar. The continuation as given by Dionysius does not suggest the death of kings or the destruction of cities, but war and faction, abnormal storms and floods and through these the destruction of mankind. Some lines however seem to be missed out in the continuation, which may have been more specific.

§ 53. The inconsistency between this and the view expressed in § 41 may perhaps be explained by supposing that though earthquakes, pestilences, etc., are in themselves incidental consequences they may still be employed by God as a means of chastisement.

§ 67. οὐ γῆ ξηρή, κτλ. Zeller in Presoc. Phil. vol. ii. pp. 80-81

APPENDICES

(Eng. trans.) has a long discussion on this Heracleitean saying. It is quoted by numerous writers, Stobaeus, Musonius, Plutarch, Galen, Clement and others in various forms and the variation extends to different mss. of these authors. The chief variants are αῦη ψυχῆ, αὔγη ξηρῆ ψυχῆ, ξηρῆ ψυχῆ. Zeller thinks that αὔγη ξηρῆ can hardly be the original form, largely on the ground that there is no such thing as a wet beam. The form οὐ γῆ ξηρῆ does not appear in any of these quotations, though one variant in the mss. of Musonius has αὐ γῆ ξηρῆ, but Zeller has no doubt that this is a true reading in our passage, though his remarks, which are transcribed by Gifford, are oddly worded and not very logical. "Philo," he says, "ap. Eus. Praep. Evang. viii. 14. 67 has οὐ γῆ ξηρῆ, κτλ., and that this is the true reading . . . is clear from the passage in Philo, De Prov. ii. 109 'in terra sicca,' etc., i.e. Zeller, unless the translator has misrepresented him, and Gifford certainly, were not aware that Philo ap. Eus. and Philo, De Prov. were the same, and that what he is quoting is only the Latin translation of the Armenian translation of the same passage. What the words in Aucher show beyond doubt is that the Armenian found οὐ γῆ in his text, for he is not likely to have had the acumen to make the correction independently, and they thus give a very convincing support to what we might otherwise have supposed to be an emendation of Stephanus or Viger.

§ 68. (Footnote 1.) The Armenian also presumably read αἰτίου. The full sentence is "mens tamen nusquam nascitur ob frige factionem gelationemque, quoniam aer, terra et aquae in causis sunt simul, et frequentes exhalationes densae supereminent." I imagine that he read or translated as if he read ἐξ ἀέρος αἰτίου καὶ γῆς καὶ ὕδατος instead of αἰ γῆς.

§ 71. ia. So Wendland from the Armenian "viola vero et rosa crocusque"; this is perhaps the best example of the value which the Armenian occasionally has, see Introd. pp. 449 f. The common reading εἰ does not give any good sense. The rendering which I had given, "though roses, etc., exist they exist for health not pleasure," lays a difficult stress upon γέγονεν and Gifford's "roses, etc., are meant, if for health, yet not all for pleasure" misplaces the "if" and gives no clear meaning.

PHILO
THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS

TRANSLATION BY F. H. COLSON

INDICES TO VOLUMES I–X
J. W. EARP

HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS
CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
LONDON, ENGLAND

Copyright © 1962 by the President and Fellows of Harvard College
All rights reserved

Reprinted 1971, 1991

ISBN 0-674-99417-5

*Printed in Great Britain by St Edmundsbury Press Ltd, Bury St Edmunds, Suffolk, on acid-free paper.
Bound by Hunter & Foulis Ltd, Edinburgh, Scotland.*

CONTENTS

INTRODUCTION TO THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS	ix
INTRODUCTION TO THE INDICES	xxxiii
LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS	xxxvii
ON THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS (THE FIRST PART OF THE TREATISE ON VIRTUES)	1
INDICES TO VOLUMES I-X	189

INTRODUCTION TO THE DE LEGATIONE

THE treatise generally known by this somewhat misleading name is a very lively and powerful invective against the Emperor Gaius. One part of it, in which he gives an account of the ineffectual design of Gaius to introduce his statue into the temple of Jerusalem, supplementing and in many places differing from Josephus's account of the same incident, is of considerable value in the history of Judaism. Otherwise it adds little or nothing to our knowledge of the reign of Gaius or to the accounts given in the regular historians of his follies and vices. It does not repel by its vindictiveness to the same extent as the Flaccus, though perhaps if we possessed the "Palinode" which is promised at the end, this opinion would have to be modified. It has some difficult problems peculiar to itself which are discussed later in this introduction. Meanwhile I give the following analysis of its contents.

It opens with a few introductory remarks, on which see p. xx (1-7), and then proceeds to describe the splendid prospects with which Gaius's reign opened and the world-wide delight and hope which his accession aroused (8-13), then the deep disappointment and sorrow which his serious illness caused, followed by renewed rejoicing for his recovery (14-21). From this recovery dates the revelation of Gaius's true character: and there follows a full account of the compulsory suicide of Tiberius Gemellus (22-31) and of Macro, prefaced by a long description of the services he had rendered to Gaius before his accession and his attempts to keep him in the straight path after his accession and the resentment felt by him at his admonitions (32-64); also the murder of his father-in-law Silanus (62-65). Public opinion indeed was shocked by these atrocities; yet it still clung to the hope that Gaius was not really depraved, and found some measure of justification for them (66-73).

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

Having thus freed himself from all rivalry and restraint Gaius proceeded to his crowning wickedness, his claim to divinity. This occupies the next forty sections and is developed with very powerful rhetoric. He held that he was as far above other men as a shepherd is above his sheep (74-76); so he assumed the insignia of the demigods Heracles, the Dioscuri and Dionysus, but his actions were the complete reverse of the beneficent labours of the first, the brotherly affection of the second and the gift of wine bestowed by the third (77-92). Worse still, he assumed the part of the full-blown deities Hermes, Apollo, Ares. What a contrast was his life to the pacific mission of the herald's staff of Hermes, to the work of Apollo as physician and prophet, and to the function of the true Ares which is to protect the weak! (93-113).

Hitherto the treatise has dealt entirely with the general depravity of Gaius culminating in his assumption of godship, and the Jews have not been mentioned since the introductory sections. From this point onwards it is his hostility to the Jews and their sufferings traceable to it which occupy the treatise. The connecting link between the two is that this hostility is supposed to be due to the Jews alone refusing to acknowledge his godship (114-119). The Alexandrians knew his resentment of this, and made it an opportunity for the great pogrom of A.D. 38 which is described in 120-131. In this description we traverse much the same ground as in the Flaccus, though there is no suggestion that Gaius's resentment had anything to do with it, while on the other hand the active connivance of Flaccus, which was there a leading feature, is only just hinted here. There are many differences but no substantial contradiction between the two accounts. But in this treatise the pogrom is followed by the attack made upon the synagogues by introducing the images of Gaius (132-136) and here the differences are numerous. In the Flaccus, the violation of the synagogues precedes the pogrom and nothing is heard of the wholesale destruction by fire or demolition nor of the effective resistance by the Jews in neighbourhoods where they were in considerable force. That the motive of the Alexandrians was not really loyalty to the emperor is shown because no such attempt was made by them during the reigns of previous sovereigns, neither of the Ptolemies nor yet of Tiberius nor Augustus, though if Gaius deserved such honours, how much more did they, and this is followed by a glowing and possibly sincere panegyric on Augustus (137-151). Why then did the Alexandrians make no attempt during these two reigns to force the Jews to admit their images into the synagogues? It was because they knew that Augustus would tolerate no such violation and that in fact in various ways he showed his careful consideration and respect for Jewish institutions (152-158). The same in general may be said of Tiberius in spite of certain troubles which were entirely due to Sejanus's evil influence (159-161).

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

Gaius however was so deluded as to believe that the adoration of the Alexandrians was genuine, and their influence helped to excite him against the Jews (162-165). Others who worked in the same direction were the Egyptian courtiers headed by Helicon, who was particularly intimate with the emperor and employed his gift of satire to prejudice him against the Jews in the way which Philo describes at length (166-177). At first the Jewish Embassy hoped to conciliate him, but when they found this impossible they determined to address the emperor directly, but it was in vain (178-180). Gaius indeed greeted the envoys in a friendly manner, but this was hypocrisy as Philo suspected at the time (181-183), and this was proved when while waiting for the summons they heard the terrible news of the proposed violation of the temple at Jerusalem (184-188). The horror caused by the news and the perplexity of the envoys as to what should be their next step are fully described (189-196), and we pass on to the full story of the proposed introduction of the statue into the temple, which occupies two-fifths of the treatise. The first part of this is supposed to be told by the persons who brought the tidings, but it glides imperceptibly into a narrative by Philo himself. There are five main stages: (1) the Jamneian incident, the destruction by the Jews of the rude altar set up by the Jamneians, the anger of Gaius when this was reported to him by Capito, and his consequent order to

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

Petronius the governor of Syria that a colossal statue of himself should be introduced into the Temple (197-206); (2) Petronius while seeing the danger of the proposal makes an unsuccessful attempt to reconcile the Jewish authorities to the inevitable (207-224); (3) a vast assembly of Jews from all parts comes to supplicate Petronius saying that they would rather die than live to see such sacrilege. Meanwhile they demand to be allowed to send an embassy to the emperor (225-242); (4) Petronius though much moved by their appeal cannot accept this demand but sends a diplomatic letter to the emperor pleading for or rather apologizing for delay (243-253). Gaius though much enraged postponed taking any measures against Petronius, but merely bade him get the statue made and set up as soon as possible (250-260); (5) meanwhile Agrippa appears on the scene and hears from Gaius the story of what has happened. He collapses utterly and remains in this state for some days (261-275). On his recovery he writes a long epistle to Gaius, appealing for consideration for the Jewish nation, the city of Jerusalem and the Temple, and with regard to this last he expatiates on the honour which has been paid to it by Gaius's ancestors and predecessors (276-329). The emperor yields to this appeal and countermands his orders for the time, but Philo declares that he not only nullified the concession by threatening to punish any Jews who did violence to any altar or statue dedicated to himself outside Jerusalem, but really intended to carry out his previous intention in the course of the coasting voyage which he proposed to make to Egypt (330-338). To this story is appended some denunciations of his treachery, capriciousness, and cruelty in other matters, stressing especially his hatred of the Jews and the sin of intending to violate the Temple itself (339-348). The rest of the treatise is an account of the scene in which the ambassadors were summoned to Gaius's presence to lay before him their political claims whatever they were. It is one continuous scene, in the first part of which they are carried about in the company of the emperor who is engaged in inspecting some houses, and have a few contemptuous remarks flung at them not bearing on the subject (349-362). In the second part they are treated a little more seriously and are actually invited to state their case, but no real hearing is given to them and they are finally dismissed with the verdict that they are not so much knaves as fools (363-367). The sense of hopelessness with which they depart is described (368-372) and the treatise breaks off with the promise of the Palinode (373).

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

The title Περὶ ἀρετῶν is mysterious. It is given in all the mss. used by Reiter save one, and the majority have the addition of ἀ. It is vouched for as the title assigned by Philo himself in two passages of Eusebius, in one of which he says that the name was given by Philo to his description of Gaius's blasphemous impiety (θεοστρυγία) "facetiously (or whimsically) and ironically" (μετὰ ἠθους καὶ εἰρωνείας), i.e. it really means "On the wickedness of Gaius and his gang."

No one I think has ever taken this explanation of Eusebius seriously, yet perhaps we should note that in this treatise we do find ironical phrases which do not appear elsewhere as well as I can remember in his writings, e.g., his description of Gaius's "wise and excellent advisers," and the "aristocratic" Helicon (203), his application of σεμνός to the animal worship of Egypt (163) and the "affability and kindness" of Gaius's greeting to the ambassadors in § 352. We may remember that the treatise belongs to a totally different kind of literature from all the other serious works of Philo except the Flaccus, and is written in a different vein even from that, which does claim to be a continuous historical narrative. It is perhaps just possible that Philo may have extended this peculiar gift of sarcasm to the title itself but it is only just possible.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

Passing over the suggestions that it refers to the virtues of the Greek gods (93-113) or those of the persecuted Jews, we have the far more satisfactory explanation given by Reiter.<sup>a</sup> According to him the ἀρεταί are those of God. He points out that in inscriptions we sometimes find the term indicating not an attribute of the God but a particular act of intervention. Further it is suggested that the word ἀρετάλογος, the meaning of which has been disputed, means a person who describes or proclaims the ἀρεταί, i.e. the miracles of the god.<sup>b</sup> Philo then gives this title to a work which shows how God ultimately saves or rewards his people. Special examples are the working of providence in §§ 220, 336 and 367. The crowning example no doubt would have been the death of Gaius.

This explanation has the great merit that though the examples of God's ἀρεταί in this sense are not a prominent feature in the treatise as we have it, it harmonizes with the note struck in the introduction that the events of his time proved that God takes thought for men and particularly for Israel. There are only two considerations which may make one hesitate to accept it. The title must originally have been as Reiter himself says Περὶ ἀρετῶν θεοῦ and it is difficult to see how this vital addition should have dropped out before the time of Eusebius. Secondly Philo constantly speaks of the ἀρεταὶ θεοῦ, often coupled with δυνάμεις, but there is no indication, but rather the contrary, that this means anything more than the excellencies, i.e. the attributes of God, or that he conceives of any particular action as being an ἀρετή, as according to Reiter's theory it must be. If this explanation is rejected we should have to set it down as a mistake of Eusebius, who perhaps confused the name of this treatise with the other Περὶ ἀρετῶν, which is a part of the Exposition of the Laws and is given in vol. viii. of this translation, and that from Eusebius it found its way into the mss.

<sup>a</sup> In Ἐπιτύμβιον Η. Swoboda dargebracht, pp. 228-237.

<sup>b</sup> e.g., Σαράπιδος ἀρετή ἢ περὶ Συρίωνα τὸν κυβερνήτην.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

A far more important question concerns the structure of the treatise. The concluding words show that Philo wrote or intended to write what he calls the Palinode, that is an account of or reflections on the terrible end of Gaius. But apart from this we have to consider whether what we have is a continuous part of a longer whole, or selected portions of a longer and mutilated work, or whether on the other hand what we have is apart from the Palinode all that he actually wrote. The subject has been discussed both by Schürer, who held that the Legatio as we have it is the fourth in a series of five books; by Massebieau, who finds four books within the compass of our Legatio but postulates two great lacunae, and by Cohn in a somewhat vaguer statement suggesting that pieces out of four books have been compressed into the existing book. All three agree in holding that the Palinode was the fifth book in the series and that apart from this much has been lost. This opinion seems to be generally accepted, not only by the three writers mentioned but by Reiter and Delaunay and also quite recently by Goodenough, Box and Bell; and indeed I had myself taken it for granted; however it now seems to me, to say the least of it, unproved, and though I can hardly hope to carry conviction I feel bound to ask for a fresh consideration of the evidence.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

The foundation on which all the three scholars mentioned primarily rest is the following passage in Eusebius, Hist. Eccl. ii. 5 :

Philo has narrated in five books what happened to the Jews in the time of Gaius. He combines in this work a full description of the insanity of Gaius as shown by his announcing himself as a god and perpetrating innumerable outrages in his government, of the miseries of the Jews in his time, of the embassy which he himself conducted to the city of the Romans on behalf of those of his own race in Alexandria, and of how when he appeared before Gaius on behalf of his ancestral laws he received nothing but laughter and ridicule and narrowly escaped risking his life.<sup>a</sup>

Leaving this for future examination, we have to consider what Eusebius says about the treatise elsewhere. After quoting Josephus's version of the interview of the ambassadors with Gaius, he goes on :

Philo himself in the Embassy which he wrote gives a carefully detailed account of what he did at the time. I shall pass over the greater part and cite only those points which plainly demonstrate to readers the misfortunes which came upon the Jews in consequence of their crimes against Christ <sup>a</sup> In this and the other passages cited from the Hist. Eccl. I have used Kirsopp Lake's version in the Loeb translation with some minor and some more important alterations.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

both at the same time <sup>a</sup> and shortly afterwards. In the first place he relates that in the time of Tiberius in the city of the Romans Sejanus, who of the men of that time had most influence with the emperor, seriously concerned himself <sup>b</sup> to effect the destruction of the whole race, and in Judaea Pilate, in whose time the crime against the Saviour was perpetrated, made an attempt on the temple still standing in Jerusalem contrary to what was lawful to the Jews and stirred them to the greatest frenzy.

With this compare the following entry in the Eusebian Chronicle (Jerome's version) :

Seianus praefectus Tiberii, qui aput eum plurimum poterat, instantissime cohortatur ut gentem Iudaeorum dealeat. Filo meminit in libro legationis secundo.

Then passing on to Gaius's reign Eusebius quotes Legatio 346 and then proceeds :

Philo in the second <sup>c</sup> of the books which he entitled On the Virtues narrates innumerable other atrocities perpetrated on the Jews in Alexandria in the same reign and Josephus confirms him, showing in the same way that the universal misfortunes of the nation date from the time of Pilate and the crimes against the Saviour.

On the mention of Sejanus and Pilate in the second of these quotations Cohn and the others build a theory that the treatise originally included a book or a large part of a book describing the persecutions

<sup>a</sup> i.e. as the Crucifixion ; cf. (in Chronicle) " scribit autem (Josephus) quod eodem anno [as the Crucifixion] Pilatus praeses secreto noctis imagines Caesaris in templo statuerit, et haec prima seditionis et turbarum Iudaeis causa exstitit."

The disturbances caused by Sejanus are apparently dated in the Chronicle two years later.

<sup>b</sup> Or " took energetic steps."

<sup>c</sup> I follow Cohn in reading δευτέρῳ συγγράμματι ὧν ἐπέγραψε for φ. This is not a correction as it is the reading of two mss. and Rufinus's translation. Kirsopp Lake's objection that it would require the article is sufficiently disproved a few lines lower down by ἐν δευτέρῳ τοῦ Ἰουδαϊκοῦ πολέμου suffered under those two persons. Is it really necessary to look beyond the passage about Sejanus in Legatio 154 f. and the story of Pilate bringing images into Jerusalem in Legatio 299 ff. ? These scholars all ignore the obvious fact that Eusebius is not here concerned to give an account of Philo's writings, which he does somewhat confusedly in the eighteenth chapter, but to support his conviction that the troubles of the Jews date from the Crucifixion, and were a retribution for it.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

The passage about Sejanus is very short but it is good enough to prove that Philo supports this view and Eusebius here follows his words pretty closely, while his entry in the Chronicle to judge from Jerome's version is closer still. As to Pilate, if we had this passage alone it might well be argued that the reference is to something outside our existing Legatio, for the attempted outrage is said to be against the temple, whereas in Legatio 299 ff. not only is there no such suggestion but the point is made that unlike Gaius's proposed sacrilege it was not against the temple (302). But in the Demonstratio Evangelica viii. p. 403 Eusebius cites Josephus as stating that Pilate brought the images of Caesar by night into the temple and continues : " to this Philo testifies saying that Pilate set up by night the royal ensigns of Caesar in the temple, which was the beginning of factions." Now I think there can be no reasonable doubt in spite of the discrepancy between shields and ensigns <sup>a</sup> that the incident here mentioned as being described by Josephus and testified to by Philo is the same as <sup>a</sup> It should be added that Philo in Legatio does not say that the shields were brought in by night, though he does not deny it.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

that described by Agrippa in Legatio 299.<sup>a</sup> But Eusebius states that both Josephus and Philo made the temple the scene of the outrage.<sup>b</sup> Now we know that Josephus does not do so in either of the two accounts<sup>c</sup> which he has written and that Philo does not in the account which has come down to us. Which is the more natural supposition? That Philo in some other version of the incident lost to us contradicted himself or that Eusebius made the same mistake about Philo as he did about Josephus? If we say the latter, the natural conclusion is, that when he speaks in the History of an attempt on the temple mentioned by Philo he refers to the same incident. And in view of this there seems to me to be no more necessity to postulate a fuller account now lost of Pilate's activities than of those of Sejanus.

In addition to this supposed necessity Cohn and Massebieau rely on the number of lacunas which they think are evident in the existing treatise. The first of these lies between the first and second chapters. The γάρ with which the second opens has, they say, no logical connexion with the preceding chapter. I think this is a misapprehension of Philo's regular method. The essence of the introductory chapter is in the first three or four sections. Men judge blindly by the present (1, 2) and yet the events which have happened should convince them of the reality of providence, especially its care for Israel (3, 4). At this point he goes off into a thoroughly Philonic

<sup>a</sup> I observe that Reiter, though he accepts the mutilation theory, gives on Legatio 299 a reference to Dem. p. 403, and that Heikel on Dem. p. 403 gives a reference to Legatio 299.

<sup>b</sup> He ascribes the same statement to Josephus in the Chronicle. See citation, p. xviii.

<sup>c</sup> Ant. xviii. 3. 1, Bell. Jud. ii. 9. 2.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

ramble : (a) Israel means he who sees God, (b) to see God is the highest gift, (c) for reason in itself cannot apprehend God nor even His powers, (d) the powers mean His punitive as well as His beneficial powers. Now I confess I am surprised that in introducing the treatise Philo has allowed himself to ramble into a train of ideas which belong to the Commentary, where all four frequently reappear, particularly as he keeps clear of anything of the kind in the rest of the book. But I am not surprised, that when after the introduction he starts to work, he harks back to what is the essence of the introduction. It is quite in his way to go back to the main point after a rambling parenthesis, often as here with a logical connexion which ignores the parenthesis.<sup>a</sup> And if this is understood what better proof of the blindness of men could be found than the joy and hopefulness which greeted Gaius's accession and recovery ?<sup>b</sup> Though indeed the γάρ goes further than this. It suggests that the story which begins with this blind rejoicing will also illustrate the belief expressed in § 4 that providence watches over Israel and overthrows the oppressor. Should we expect him to put this into words at this point and anticipate the Palinode by mentioning the fate of Gaius, an event presumably quite recent and common knowledge to all his readers ?

Of the other three lacunas registered in Reiter's

<sup>a</sup> For such resumptive conjunctions after a longer or shorter parenthesis see, e.g., (γάρ) Spec. Leg. i. 6, iv. 101, (οὖν) Leg. All. i. 77 and iii. 211, (ὡστε) De Fug. 64, (οὕτως) De Cong. 135. The resumption of Gaius's vices in § 339 of this treatise, after the parenthetical disquisition on Alexandria, is much the same, though μῆτροι does not imply the same causal connexion, cf. also note on § 292.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. § 21.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

text two are discussed in the notes on §§ 180 and 292. Before we come to the fourth we have Cohn's complaint that the Embassy is suddenly introduced in § 174 without any account of how it came to be sent, which therefore must have dropped out. This seems to me to mistake entirely the nature and object of the treatise. It has acquired the title of the Embassy naturally enough because all that Philo tells us about himself is connected with the Embassy, but there is no sign that Philo himself gave it that title. In fact throughout it is a "Philippic,"<sup>a</sup> an invective against Gaius and to a minor extent his satellites, and nothing else. Hardly anything<sup>b</sup> is mentioned which does not reflect on these, either directly or indirectly by extolling his predecessors or his honest servants like Petronius. The Embassy only appears in the story when Philo gives us his personal experiences of the enemy. It first appears when the machinations of Helicon in fostering Gaius's hostility are described. Then comes the first meeting with Gaius and Philo's conviction that his friendly greeting was only hypocrisy. There follows the scene in which they hear of the proposed outrage. In his long story of this attempt Philo is throughout at pains to emphasize the Jewish feeling of horror and he inevitably begins with the sensations and perplexities of his own party. At this point the story passes on to scenes and personages far away from the ambassadors and while it is proceeding we hear no more of them. Then comes the actual interview. Surely, says Delaunay, he must have described how this interview came to be conceded. Possibly if his subject was the Embassy, not if it is Gaius. I cannot feel that there is any strong reason for placing a lacuna at § 311.

<sup>a</sup> Though the analogy is of course very rough, one cannot help observing how Cicero in the Second Philippic leaves a vast number of less relevant matters unexplained. Philo is not likely to have read Cicero, but he did read Demosthenes, and may have got something of the same lesson from his attacks on Aeschines. The story in Eus. ii. 18, that he read the Περὶ ἀπερῶν or part of it to the whole senate in Rome does not sound very probable but does represent a feeling that the treatise was of the epideictic Oration type.

<sup>b</sup> The one thing which strikes me as irrelevant to the invective is the mention of the memorial in § 179.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

Cohn and Delaunay might possibly have replied that my view that the treatise is essentially a Philippic and not a sober history of the Embassy is not only unacceptable to them, but is contradicted by Eusebius when he says that Philo gives a carefully detailed account of what he did at that time. Different opinions may be held about this, but it seems to me that what we have in the treatise would be felt by Eusebius to justify his statement. For the scenes in which the ambassadors appear, particularly the last, are described with the vividness of detail which deserves the epithets τὰ κατὰ μέρος ἀκριβῶς and I do not think he would have troubled himself about the abruptness of the introduction. Moreover the phrase "the things done by him" is used with a looseness which forbids taking it very seriously. For he says that of these "doings" he will omit most and cite—what? the troubles caused by Sejanus and Pilate, which on no supposition can be parts of his doings.

So far then I can find no sign that apart from the Palinode the Legatio ever extended beyond what we still have. But what about the Five Books? Can we pack them or even four of them into the existing 372 sections? If not, it may reasonably create a suspicion that something has been lost.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

The description given by Eusebius of the scope of the five books agrees quite closely with what we have. It may suggest that more was said about the Embassy, but as it confines itself to the events of Gaius's reign it certainly does not support the idea that events of Tiberius's reign like the persecutions of Sejanus and Pilate were given at any length. As no titles are given we cannot rule out the possibility that the Flaccus was one of the five, since it certainly describes one of the matters mentioned in the list. But the phrase πέντε βιβλίοις does not fit in very well with a five made up of four books of Legatio plus a totally distinct work like the Flaccus. The Legatio, if judged by the sense, naturally splits up into four parts: (1) 1-113, where Gaius's degeneration and his three murders of Gemellus, Macro and Silanus and his blasphemous assumption of godship are the subject, and the Jews are never once mentioned after the introductory sections; (2) 114-161, giving the troubles of the Jews in Alexandria and the contrast of their treatment under former emperors, and it is significant that the two matters mentioned by Eusebius as belonging to the second book of the Embassy or Virtues both fall within these limits<sup>a</sup>; (3) 162-348, events outside Egypt and the whole story of Gaius's proposed outrage on the temple; (4) 349 to the end, the interview, and if we add as all the others do the Palinode we get the required number. I indeed feel very doubtful whether Eusebius included this among the Five or knew of its existence, for surely he would have added such a leading matter as the <sup>a</sup> i.e. the sufferings of the Alexandrian Jews "in the second of the books which he entitled On the Virtues"; Sejanus "in the second book of the Legation" (Chronicle).

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

retribution on the blasphemer to his list of subjects. I should prefer to get a five-fold division rather than a four-fold from the 372 sections, but I do not find it easy. A good break indeed is made at § 73, but this would bring the two matters definitely stated as being in the second book into the third. Possibly the inordinately long third division might have been re-divided at the appearance of Agrippa at § 261, but such an arrangement would not be very logical as the story of the statue is a continuous whole which does not admit of any real break. But let us take the easier course, and assume that the 372 sections made up four books. Can it be objected that βιβλίον is too big a word for such divisions? I do not know of any grounds for thinking so. Or that the mss. tradition has no knowledge of such divisions as separate books except the inscription Περὶ ἀρετῶν α' at the beginning which may have held on when β' and γ' and δ' were lost? The argument may have some force, but surely will apply with much more force to the schemes of the advocates of the mutilation theory. Or that the length of the third division and the brevity of the fourth are objections? I think that the first may have some weight but not the second. The De Specialibus Legibus i. with 350 sections is divided in the mss. into six separate treatises, the first of which is only eleven sections and the other, De Virtutibus, includes one separate heading On repentance which is only twelve.

Altogether, even if the statement about the five books creates some difficulty, the possibilities<sup>a</sup> connected with it are so many, that we cannot build on it without that support from internal evidence which to my mind is entirely wanting. However I quite feel the weight of the body of opinion which asserts the contrary, and do not forget the Cromwellian adjuration "to believe that it is possible that I may be mistaken."

<sup>a</sup> Among these may perhaps be included the possibility that a single letter ε' was put by mistake for some other numeral letter.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

The Embassy is not the subject of the treatise, but we have to consider what we learn about it from incidental hints.

It had two distinct objects, and was sent to plead two distinct causes (ὑποθέσεις). These two are vaguely indicated in describing the memorandum (179) as our sufferings or experiences (ὧν ἐπάθομεν) and our claims (ὧν τυχεῖν ἠξιούμεν). But they are more clearly defined in §§ 191 ff. where it appears that one was concerned with the synagogues (προσευχαί) and the other with their πολιτεία. As to the first, the envoys remark that if Gaius does not shrink from desecrating the Temple he will not listen to any appeal against the desecration of the synagogues. As to the other, we learn that it consists in "showing that we are Alexandrians." When we come to the actual reception (349 ff.), how many months after we do not know, the envoys are invited to state their claims as to πολιτεία, this only, and the other is not mentioned.<sup>a</sup> For the opening passage of arms, in which Gaius reproaches the Jews for refusing to admit his deity and is backed up by Isidorus's statement that they neglected to sacrifice, a charge which the envoys indignantly deny, has really nothing to do with the complaint that the synagogues have been desecrated. The claim which they are invited to discuss is represented (350) as a plea to retain rights which have never been questioned in the four centuries during which Alexandria has existed, and it is alleged (371) that an adverse decision would be a disastrous blow to the whole of the Dispersion and would put the Jewish population in every city at the mercy of the hostile Gentiles, who would destroy the synagogues and take away the privileges which they had enjoyed. Whether this claim was one for full Alexandrian citizenship, as the phrase "showing that we are Alexandrians" suggests, or to specific rights to independence asserted by the Jews and denied by the others,<sup>a</sup> is a question which I do not feel competent to answer, and I doubt whether in the absence of other evidence it can be answered with any certainty.

<sup>a</sup> This is curious. Had there been meanwhile a change of conditions in Alexandria, which made the plea unnecessary? or was it thought more politic not to start a question which by its similarity might stir up Gaius's resentment at having been driven to make the concession to Jerusalem, which I assume him to have made before the interview?

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

A further very difficult question is the chronological. Did this Embassy, of which are we only told that it set out in mid-winter, arrive in Italy in A.D. 39 or 40?

We have the following certain data to work upon: we know that the troubles at Alexandria which gave rise to the Embassy took place in the summer of A.D. 38, that Gaius was away from Italy in Gaul and Germany from September 39 to at least May 40,<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> That is to say, πολιτεία=πολίτευμα or membership of a πολίτευμα, i.e. of a "corporation formed by membership of race or community domiciled in a foreign state." This perhaps would give more body to the prophecies of the disasters to be anticipated from an adverse decision.

<sup>b</sup> See Balsdon, Journal of Roman Studies, vol. xxiv. pp. 17 and 21.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

and that he was killed on 24th January 41. Now clearly Gaius was in Rome when the ambassadors first met him, and in the south of Italy when they first heard of the proposed violation of the Temple, and in Rome when they had their interview with him. We have therefore to place each of these incidents either before September 39 or after May 40.

Now if we took Josephus's (Ant. xviii. 261-308) account, we should place them all at the later date. According to him Gaius had written to Petronius cancelling the order for the statue before he received Petronius's apologetic letter, but this enraged him so much that he sent a violent reprimand which being delayed on the way did not reach Petronius till two months after the assassination, i.e. in March 41. Mr. Balsdon<sup>a</sup> arguing for the arrival of the ambassadors in 40 gives careful calculations to show, that if we accept this story, the whole of the correspondence from the first report to Gaius of the Jamneian incident to the final letter to Petronius can be got in after his return in May 40, though this perhaps is unnecessary for his purpose, since part of it might have been carried on while Gaius was in the north, though it only became known to Philo after his return.<sup>b</sup> Is there anything in Philo's account which conflicts with the view that the Embassy arrived in 40? Apart from the general probability that it would be undertaken as soon as possible after Flaccus's arrest in September 38 and not be postponed for more than a

<sup>a</sup> Journal of Roman Studies, vol. xxiv. p. 19.

<sup>b</sup> Mr. Balsdon assumes that the order had just been given, when Philo heard of it at Puteoli. It seems to me more natural to suppose that the news travelled to him from Palestine, and that the matter may have been far advanced before he heard of it.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

year, there is only one serious fact to be reckoned with. While Josephus speaks of the recalcitrant Jews as neglecting their tilling though it was the season for sowing, Philo says that Petronius, after receiving the order and spending some considerable time in trying to talk over the chief Jews and in meeting the great body of the people, proceeded to write his letter recommending postponement of the installation of the statue and gave as one of his reasons that the sown crops were now ripe and he feared that the Jews might ravage them as well as the fruit trees later. That is to say this letter was written between April and June. Mr Balsdon meets this by suggesting that the crops are the spring sown crops. I do not know whether this is agriculturally sound, but I think that anyone who reads through the second book of the Special Laws with its account of the ripening of the crops and fruits and their adjustment to the various feasts will find it difficult to believe that Philo meant by what he calls τὰ θέρη anything but the autumn sown crops. At any rate this is what his readers would inevitably infer. If this is so, and if Petronius's letter was written not later than June,<sup>a</sup> the order must have been given some time earlier while Gaius was still in the north. This does not prove that the ambassadors did not arrive in the spring of 40, but at any rate the suggestion that the whole of the affair can be concentrated into the eight months between Gaius's return and his death must be given up.

<sup>a</sup> Philo is, I think, the better authority. He need not have had any authentic knowledge of Petronius's correspondence, but he would hardly put into his mouth a statement conflicting with dates which were known to him by personal experience.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

I suggest as an alternative the following scheme for consideration. The ambassadors sailed in the winter of 38–39, arrived at Rome in the spring, and after looking about them for some time were met and greeted by Gaius and later heard the story of the proposed outrage before he left Italy. Meanwhile he had heard of the Jamneian incident, had sent his first order to Petronius but was not aware of the opposition till he got the letter pleading for delay. He replied to this acquiescing in some delay though maintaining his purpose. When was it that Agrippa intervened? If Josephus is to be believed, it would be before Gaius left Italy, since he says that Agrippa was then staying at Rome, though as far as Philo's story is concerned it might have been while he was at Lyons at the end of the year.<sup>a</sup> It was after his return in the next May or later that he granted the interview to the ambassadors.<sup>b</sup>

For it seems to me that the most certain point in the controversy is that the interview occurred after the whole of the affair of the statue had died down. If we are to give any weight to Philo's account I cannot conceive that the conference should have taken the form described and that Gaius should have merely censured the Jews for their refusal to acknowledge his deity and their offering sacrifices

<sup>a</sup> The statement of Dio lix. 24. 1 that people at Rome were disturbed to hear that Agrippa was in Gaius's company (συνείναι) seems to apply to the time of his absence from Italy.

<sup>b</sup> The statement about the sacrifices (356) points, I think, to the same. If they were carried out at Jerusalem (see note to § 356), this would most likely be when the expedition was well afoot. And even if it was somewhat earlier, time must be allowed for the ambassadors to know that they had been offered.

INTRODUCTION TO DE LEGATIONE

for him and not to him, if he was boiling with rage at the threat of a national insurrection, or that he should have dismissed them with the comparatively kindly remark that they were more fools than knaves. And if so we can hardly find time for the interview before Gaius's departure in September 39. That there should have been a delay of many months was natural in any case, since the Jews at any rate would not during the crisis press their case, in which, as Philo himself says, §§ 190 ff., they would be at a hopeless disadvantage, but it became inevitable from the simple reason that Gaius was inaccessible.

Of course this scheme involves throwing Josephus over. If it is right, he was mistaken, not only in placing the crisis at seed time instead of harvest, but also in bringing the events into so close a connexion with the death of Gaius. This is certainly a serious and some may think a fatal objection and therefore I only put it forward for consideration; the question is one, I think, on which certainty is unobtainable.

INTRODUCTION TO INDICES

I HAVE tried to make it as easy as possible for the reader to find what he wants. In this the Editors and the Printer have given me every assistance. Some of the abbreviations used for Philo's treatises are confusing for those not familiar with his works, and so I have adopted ones which will, I hope, be readily understood. It is likely that many will wish to use the Index who do not possess a set of the Loeb edition of Philo, and so I have given the references to chapters, rather than to pages. Roman numerals indicate the Loeb volume, the "n" or "nn" stands for "footnote(s)," the capital "N" or "NN" for the additional notes given by the Translators at the end of the volume. To give an example :

V. Mut. 63f, Som. i. 192, ii. 70 & N, VI. Abr. 12 & n, 57, 73nn means Loeb Philo volume V, De Mutatione Nominum, chapters 63 and 64, De Somniis, First Treatise, chapter 192, Second Treatise, chapter 70 and the Additional Note thereto, Volume VI, De Abrahamo, chapter 12 and the footnote thereto, chapter 57, and the footnotes to chapter 73. I have avoided "ff" as much as possible, since in Philo that might stand for two chapters or twenty. Occasionally round brackets have been placed round a reference to indicate that there is no direct allusion in those chapters or that it is too trivial to be studied.

INTRODUCTION TO INDICES

In the Scripture Index the alignment of chapters and verses has been designed to help the reader's eye. Where there is a divergence in numeration between the Septuagint and the English Versions, this has been indicated ; the reader is warned, however, that the Translators were not consistent and that there will sometimes be a discrepancy between their references and mine.

In compiling the Index to Names and Places in Philo's text I have had in mind the reader who recalls a passage without remembering where it occurs. To trace some such recollections in an author like Philo might take hours, even days ; I have therefore given a summary of what Philo has to say about the commoner figures or places. Sometimes this may contribute something new to the understanding of Philo's interpretations, but the summaries are deliberately concerned with Philo's language more than with the philosophical background of his thought, and I hope that scholars will not expect more from them than that.

In the Index to the Translators' Notes I have marked with an asterisk those names that also occur in the text of Philo and therefore in the Index of Names. There is no need to distinguish them there, since references to notes are included. I had thought of compiling a fourth index to comprise all notes concerned only with the text adopted ; but I have decided to include this in this third index. The reader who wishes to study textual readings will find that these have been included under the names of the several previous editors of Philo—Yonge, Mangey,

INTRODUCTION TO INDICES

Cohn and Wendland, Heinemann, etc.—and, for the Loeb edition, s.v. Translators. Mr Colson himself listed the Translators' own readings in Supplements at the end of vols. V (for I-V) and VI ; for subsequent volumes the reader is referred to what I have listed, but my list includes not only new readings adopted by the Translators but also the many more tentative suggestions made by them in the footnotes or Additional Notes.

Finally, I know very well that these indices cannot be exhaustive, and I should welcome notice of any mistakes or omissions, so that these may be corrected in any later edition.

ABBREVIATIONS

- Abr.* = De Abrahamo
Aet. = De Aeternitate Mundi
Agr. = De Agricultura
Cher. = De Cherubim
Conf. = De Confusione Linguarum
Congr. = De Congressu Eruditionis gratia
Decal. = De Decalogo
Det. = Quod Deterius Potiori insidiari solet
Ebr. = De Ebrietate
Flacc. = In Flaccum
Fug. = De Fuga et Inventione
Gig. = De Gigantibus
Hyp. = Hypothetica
Jos. = De Josepho
Leg. = De Legatione ad Gaium
Leg. All. i, ii, iii = Legum Allego-riarum
Mig. = De Migratione Abrahami
Mos. i, ii = De Vita Mosis
Mut. = De Mutatione Nominum

INTRODUCTION TO INDICES

- Op.* = De Opificio Mundi
Plant. = De Plantatione
Post. = De Posteritate Caini
Praem. = De Praemiis et Poenis
Prov. = De Providentia
Quis Her. = Quis rerum divinarum Heres sit Quod Deus = Quod Deus sit Immutabilis
Quod Omn. Prob. = Quod omnis Probus liber
Sac. = De Sacrificiis Abelis et Caini
Sob. = De Sobrietate
Som. i, ii = De Somniis
Spec. Leg. i, ii, iii, iv = De Specialibus Legibus
Virt. = De Virtute
Vit. Cont. = De Vita Contemplativa

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

SHOWING THEIR DIVISION INTO VOLUMES IN THIS EDITION

VOLUME

- I. On the Creation (De Opificio Mundi)
Allegorical Interpretation (Legum Allegoriae)
- II. On the Cherubim (De Cherubim)
On the Sacrifices of Abel and Cain (De Sacrificiis Abelis et Caini)
The Worse attacks the Better (Quod Deterius Potiori
insidiari solet)
On the Posterity and Exile of Cain (De Posteritate Caini)
On the Giants (De Gigantibus)
- III. On the Unchangeableness of God (Quod Deus im-mutabilis sit)
On Husbandry (De Agricultura)
On Noah's Work as a Planter (De Plantatione)
On Drunkenness (De Ebrietate)
On Sobriety (De Sobrietate)
- IV. On the Confusion of Tongues (De Confusione Lin-guarum)
On the Migration of Abraham (De Migratione Abrahami)
Who is the Heir (Quis Rerum Divinarum Heres)
On the Preliminary Studies (De Congressu quaerendae Eruditionis gratia)
- V. On Flight and Finding (De Fuga et Inventione)
On the Change of Names (De Mutatione Nominum)
On Dreams (De Somniis)
- VI. On Abraham (De Abrahamo)
On Joseph (De Iosepho)
Moses (De Vita Mosis)

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

VOLUME

- VII. On the Decalogue (De Decalogo)
On the Special Laws Books I-III (De Specialibus Legibus)
- VIII. On the Special Laws Book IV (De Specialibus Legibus)
On the Virtues (De Virtutibus)
On Rewards and Punishments (De Praemiis et Poenis)
- IX. Every Good Man is Free (Quod Omnis Probus Liber sit)
On the Contemplative Life (De Vita Contemplativa)
On the Eternity of the World (De Aeternitate Mundi)
Flaccus (In Flaccum)
Hypothetica <sup>1</sup> (Apologia pro Iudaeis)
On Providence <sup>1</sup> (De Providentia)
- X. On the Embassy to Gaius (De Legatione ad Gaium)
GENERAL INDEX TO VOLUMES I-X

SUPPLEMENT

- I. Questions and Answers on Genesis <sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin)
- II. Questions and Answers on Exodus <sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Exodum)
GENERAL INDEX TO SUPPLEMENTS I-II

<sup>1</sup> Only two fragments extant.

<sup>2</sup> Extant only in an Armenian version.

ON THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS
(THE FIRST PART OF THE TREATISE ON VIRTUES) (DE VIRTUTIBUS PRIMA PARS, QUOD EST DE LEGATIONE AD GAIUM)

ΦΙΛΩΝΟΣ ΑΡΕΤΩΝ ΠΡΩΤΟΝ Ο ΕΣΤΙ
ΤΗΣ ΑΥΤΟΥ ΠΡΕΣΒΕΙΑΣ ΠΡΟΣ ΓΑΙΟΝ

[545] I. | Ἄχρι τίνος ἡμεῖς οἱ γέροντες ἔτι παῖδές
<sup>1</sup> ἔσμεν, τὰ μὲν σώματα χρόνου μήκει πολιοί, τὰς δὲ ψυχὰς ὑπ' ἀναισθησίας κομιδῇ νήπιοι, νομίζοντες τὸ μὲν ἀσταθμητότατον, τὴν τύχην, ἀκλι-νέστατον, τὸ δὲ παγιώτατον, τὴν φύσιν, ἀβεβαιο-τατον; ὑπαλλαττόμεθα γὰρ καθάπερ ἐν ταῖς πεττεῖαις τὰς πράξεις μετατιθέντες, οἴομενοι τὰ μὲν τυχηρὰ μοιμώτερα εἶναι τῶν φύσει, τὰ δὲ <sup>2</sup> κατὰ φύσιν ἀβεβαιοτέρα τῶν τυχηρῶν. αἴτιον δὲ τὸ τὰ παρόντα βραβεύειν ἄπροοράτως τῶν μελλοντων ἔχοντας, αἰσθήσει πεπλανημένη χρωμένους πρὸ διανοίας ἀπλανοῦς· ὀφθαλμοῖς μὲν γὰρ τὰ ἐν φανερῷ καὶ ἐν χερσὶ καταλαμβάνεται, λογισμὸς [546] δὲ φθάνει καὶ πρὸς τὰ | ἀόρατα καὶ μέλλοντα, οὗ τὴν ὄψιν ὀξυωπεστέραν οὔσαν τῆς δι' ὀμμάτων σώματος ἀμαυροῦμεν, οἱ μὲν ἀκράτῳ καὶ πλη-σμοναῖς ὑποσυγγέοντες, οἱ δὲ τῷ μεγίστῳ τῶν <sup>3</sup> κακῶν, ἀμαθία. πλὴν ὁ παρῶν καιρὸς καὶ αἰ κατ' αὐτὸν κριθεῖσαι πολλαὶ καὶ μεγάλαι ὑποθέσεις, κἂν εἰ ἄπιστοι γεγόνασί τινες τοῦ προ-

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps read θεραπεύειν as Mangey suggests. See note a.

ON THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS

(THE FIRST PART OF THE TREATISE ON VIRTUES)

I. How long shall we the aged continue to be <sup>1</sup> children grown grey in our bodies through length of years, but infants in our souls through want of sense, holding fortune, the most unstable of things, to be the most unchangeable, nature, the most constant, to be the most insecure? For we change our actions about from place to place as on a draught board, and fortune's gifts seem to us more permanent than nature's, nature's more insecure than fortune's. The reason is that, having no forethought for the <sup>2</sup> future, we are ruled<sup>a</sup> by the present, following erratic sense-perception rather than unerring intelligence. For the eyes of the body discern what is manifest and close at hand, but reason reaches to the unseen and the future. Reason's vision, which is keener than the vision of the bodily eyes, we bedim and confuse, some with strong drink and surfeiting, others with that worst of evils, ignorance. And yet <sup>3</sup> the present time and the many important questions decided in it are strong enough to carry conviction even if some have come to disbelieve that the Deity <sup>a</sup> This use of βραβεύειν is doubtful, since when transitive it is usually applied to contests, suits and the like. If θεραπεύειν is read ἐχόντας is of course the subject.

PHILO

νοεῖν τὸ θεῖον ἀνθρώπων, καὶ μάλιστα τοῦ ἱκετικοῦ γένους, ὃ τῷ πατρὶ καὶ βασιλεῖ τῶν ὄλων καὶ πάντων αἰτίῳ προσκεκλήρωται, ἱκαναὶ [τοῦ] πείσαι 4 αὐτούς. τοῦτο δὲ τὸ γένος Χαλδαῖστί μὲν Ἰσραὴλ καλεῖται, Ἑλληνιστὶ δὲ ἐρμηνευθέντος τοῦ ὀνόματος “ὄρων θεόν,” ὃ μοι δοκεῖ πάντων χρημάτων ἰδίων
 5 τε καὶ κοινῶν εἶναι τιμιώτατον. εἰ γὰρ πρεσβυτέρων ἢ ὑψηγητῶν ἢ ἀρχόντων ἢ γονέων ὄψις κινεῖ τοὺς βλέποντας πρὸς αἰδῶ καὶ εὐκοσμίαν καὶ σώ-φρονος βίου ζῆλον, πόσον τι νομίζομεν ἀρετῆς ἔρμα καὶ καλοκαγαθίας ἀνευρήσειν<sup>1</sup> ἐν ψυχαῖς, αἱ τὸ γενητὸν πᾶν ὑπερκύψασαι τὸ ἀγένητον καὶ θεῖον ὄραν πεπαιδεύονται, τὸ πρῶτον ἀγαθὸν καὶ καλὸν καὶ εὐδαιμον καὶ μακάριον, εἰ <δὲ> δεῖ τάληθές εἰπεῖν, τὸ κρεῖττον μὲν ἀγαθοῦ, κάλλιον δὲ καλοῦ, καὶ μακαριότητος μὲν μακαριώτερον, εὐδαιμονίας δὲ αὐτῆς εὐδαιμονέστερον, καὶ εἰ δὴ τι τῶν εἰρη-6 μένων τελειότερον. οὐ γὰρ φθάνει προσαναβαίνειν ὁ λόγος ἐπὶ τὸν ἄψαυστον καὶ ἀναφῆ πάντη θεόν, ἀλλ’ ὑπονοστεῖ καὶ ὑπορρεῖ κυρίοις ὀνόμασιν ἀδυνα-τῶν ἐπιβάθρα χρῆσθαι πρὸς δῆλωσιν, οὐ λέγω τοῦ ὄντος—οὐδὲ γὰρ ὁ σύμπας οὐρανὸς ἔναρθρος φωνῆ γενόμενος εὐθυβόλων καὶ εὐσκόπων εἰς τοῦτο ἂν εὐποροίη ῥημάτων—ἀλλὰ τῶν δορυφόρων αὐτοῦ δυνάμεων, κοσμοποιητικῆς τε καὶ βασιλικῆς καὶ προνοητικῆς καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσαι εὐεργετίδες τε

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀνεύρεσιν.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 3-6

takes thought for men, and particularly for the suppliants' race which the Father and King of the Universe and the Source of all things has taken for his portion. Now this race is called in the Hebrew 4 tongue Israel, but, expressed in our tongue, the word is "he that sees God" and to see Him seems to me of all possessions, public or private, the most precious. For if the sight of seniors or instructors or 5 rulers or parents stirs the beholders to respect for them and decent behaviour and the desire to live a life of self-control, how firmly based is the virtue and nobility of conduct which we may expect to find in souls whose vision has soared above all created things and schooled itself to behold the uncreated and divine, the primal good, the excellent, the happy, the blessed, which may truly be called better than the good, more excellent than the excellent, more blessed than blessedness, more happy than happiness itself, and any perfection there may be greater than these. For reason<sup>a</sup> cannot attain to 6 ascend to God, who nowhere can be touched or handled, but subsides and ebbs away unable to find the proper words by which it may approach to expound, I do not say the God who is, for if the whole Heaven should become an articulate voice, it would lack the apt and appropriate terms needed for this, but even for God's attendant powers. Such are the creative, the kingly, the providential, and of the others all that are both beneficial and punitive, <sup>a</sup> i.e. those who infer the existence of God and His Powers from His created works have an apprehension inferior to the higher intuition of the Israel-soul. Cf. De Praem. 40-46 and Leg. All. iii. 97-99. Mangey understands λόγος as language (sermo), which is perhaps more in accordance with the words that follow, but not so Philonic in thought.

PHILO

7 καὶ κολαστήριοι, εἰ<sup>1</sup> καὶ τὰς κολαστηρίους ἐν εὐεργέτισι τακτέον, οὐ μόνον ἐπειδὴ νόμων καὶ θεσμῶν εἰσι μοῖραι—νόμος γὰρ ἐκ δυοῖν συμπληροῦσθαι πέφυκε, τιμῆς ἀγαθῶν καὶ πονηρῶν κολάσεως,— ἀλλ' ὅτι καὶ ἡ κόλασις νουθετεῖ καὶ σωφρονίζει πολλάκις μὲν καὶ τοὺς ἀμαρτάνοντας, εἰ δὲ μὴ, πάντως γοῦν τοὺς πλησιάζοντας· αἱ γὰρ ἐτέρων τιμωρίαὶ βελτιοῦσι τοὺς πολλοὺς φόβῳ τοῦ μὴ παραπλήσια παθεῖν.<sup>2</sup>

8 II. Τίς γὰρ ἰδὼν Γάιον μετὰ τὴν Τιβερίου Καίσαρος τελευταίην παρειληφότα τὴν ἡγεμονίαν πάσης γῆς καὶ θαλάσσης ἀστασίαστον καὶ εὐνομον καὶ πᾶσι τοῖς μέρεσιν ἡρμοσμένην εἰς τὸ σύμφωνον, ἑώοις, ἑσπερίοις, μεσημβρινοῖς, ἀρκτικοῖς—τοῦ [547] μὲν βαρβαρικοῦ γένους τῷ | Ἑλληνικῷ, τοῦ δ' Ἑλληνικοῦ τῷ βαρβαρικῷ, καὶ τοῦ μὲν στρατιωτικοῦ τῷ κατὰ πόλεις, τοῦ δὲ πολιτικοῦ τῷ στρατευομένῳ συμφρονήσαντος εἰς μετουσίαν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν εἰρήνης—οὐκ ἐθαύμασε καὶ κατεπλάγη τῆς ὑπερ-
9 φυοῦς καὶ παντὸς λόγου κρείττονος εὐπραγίας, ἐξ ἐτοίμου τὰγαθὰ ἀθρόα σωρηδὸν κεκληρονομηκότα, παμπληθεῖς θησαυροὺς χρημάτων, ἄργυρον καὶ χρυσόν, τὸν μὲν ὡς ὕλην, τὸν δὲ ὡς νόμισμα, τὸν δὲ ὡς προκόσμημα<sup>3</sup> δι' ἐκπωμάτων καὶ τινων ἐτέρων ἃ πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν τεχνιτεύεται, παμπληθεῖς δυνάμεις, πεζάς, ἵππικάς, ναυτικάς, προσόδους ὥσπερ ἐκ πηγῶν ἀενάῳ τινὶ φορᾷ χορηγουμένας, <sup>1</sup> A has εἰ μὴ (so Mangey), but as ὅσα . . . τε has already identified the two, the doubt expressed in εἰ μὴ is out of place. Cf. note a.

<sup>2</sup> Reiter here notes a lacuna. See Introd. pp. xxii.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 7-10

assuming that<sup>a</sup> the punitive are to be classed among 7 the beneficial, not only on the ground that they are a part of laws and statutes, since no law can be complete unless it includes two provisions—honours for things good and punishment for things evil, but because the punishment of others often admonishes offenders and calls them to wisdom, or, certainly at any rate, their neighbours. For penalties are good for the morals of the multitude, who fear to suffer the like.

II. For who that saw Gaius when after the death 8 of Tiberius he succeeded to the sovereignty of the whole earth and sea, gained not by faction but established by law, with all parts, east, west, south, north, harmoniously adjusted, the Greek in full agreement with the barbarian, the civil with the military, to enjoy and participate in peace—who I say was not filled with admiration and astonishment at his prodigious and indescribable prosperity? He found 9 ready in hand a mass of accumulated goods, gold and silver, which he had inherited, some in bullion, some in specie, some as ornaments in the form of drinking-cups and other things which craftsmanship produces for display; vast forces of infantry, cavalry, ships, revenues supplied like a perennial stream flowing from a fountain; a dominion not confined to the 10

<sup>a</sup> Cf. De Conf. 171 δυνάμεις ἀρωγοὺς καὶ σωτηρίους τοῦ γενομένου πάσας, αἷς ἐμφέρονται καὶ αἱ κόλαστήριον ἔστι δὲ καὶ ἡ κόλασις οὐκ ἐπιζήμιον, ἀμαρτημάτων οὐσα κώλυσις καὶ ἐπανόρθωσις.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. προβόσκημα.

PHILO

- 10 ἀρχὴν οὐχὶ τῶν πλείστων καὶ ἀναγκαιοτάτων μερῶν τῆς οἰκουμένης, ἀ δὴ καὶ κυρίως ἂν τις οἰκουμένην εἴποι, δυσὶ ποταμοῖς ὀριζομένην, Εὐ-φράτῃ τε καὶ Ῥήνω, τῷ μὲν ἀποτεμνομένῳ Γερμανίαν καὶ ὅσα θηριωδέστερα ἔθνη, Εὐφράτῃ δὲ Παρθυηνὴν καὶ τὰ Σαρματῶν γένη καὶ Σκυθῶν, ἅπερ οὐχ ἦττον ἐξηγγρίωται τῶν Γερμανικῶν, ἀλλ', ὡς εἶπον ἦδη, τὴν ἀφ' ἡλίου ἀνιόντος ἄχρι δυομένου τῆν τε ἐντὸς ὠκεανοῦ καὶ ὑπερωκεάνιον; ἐφ' οἷς ὁ τε Ῥωμαίων δῆμος ἐγεγῆθει καὶ πᾶσα Ἰταλία
- 11 τὰ τε Ἀσιανὰ καὶ Εὐρωπαϊα ἔθνη. ὡς γὰρ ἐπ' οὐδενὶ τῶν πρόποτε γενομένων αὐτοκρατόρων ἅπαν-τες ἠγάσθησαν, κτῆσιν καὶ χρήσιν ἰδίων τε καὶ κοινῶν ἀγαθῶν οὐκ ἐλπίζοντες ἕξειν, ἀλλ' ἔχειν ἦδη νομίζοντες πλήρωμά τινος εὐτυχίας, ἐφεδρευ-
- 12 ούσης εὐδαιμονίας. οὐδὲν γοῦν ἦν ἰδεῖν ἕτερον κατὰ πόλεις ἢ βωμούς, ἱερεῖα, θυσίας, λευχειμονοῦντας, ἐστεφανωμένους, φαιδρούς, εὐμένειαν ἐξ ἰλαρᾶς τῆς ὄψεως προφαίνοντας, ἐορτάς, πανηγύ-ρεις, μουσικούς ἀγῶνας, ἵπποδρομίας, κώμους, παννυχίδας μετ' αὐλῶν καὶ κιθάρας, τέρψεις, ἀνέσεις, ἐκεχειρίας, παντοίας ἡδονὰς διὰ πάσης αἰ-
- 13 σθήσεως. τότε οὐ πλούσιοι πενήτων προύφερον, οὐκ ἔνδοξοι ἀδόξων, οὐ δανεισταὶ χρεωστῶν, οὐ δεσπότηαι δούλων περιῆσαν, ἰσονομίαν τοῦ καιροῦ διδόντος, ὡς τὸν παρὰ ποιηταῖς ἀναγραφέντα Κρονικὸν βίον μηκέτι νομίζεσθαι πλάσμα μύθου διὰ τε τὴν εὐθηνίαν καὶ εὐετηρίαν τό τε ἄλυπον καὶ ἄφοβον καὶ τὰς πανοικίας ὁμοῦ καὶ πανδήμους

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "the most and most necessary." For this frequent coupling of πλείστα with another superlative see note on Flaccus 46 (vol. ix. p. 326).

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 10-13

really vital parts which make up most<sup>a</sup> of the inhabited world, and indeed may properly bear that name, the world, that is, which is bounded by the two rivers, the Euphrates and the Rhine, the one dissevering us from the Germans and all the more brutish nations, the Euphrates from the Parthians and from the Sarmatians and Scythians, races which are no less savage than the Germans, but a dominion extending, as I said above, from the rising to the setting sun both within the ocean and beyond it. All these things were a joy to the Roman people and all Italy and the nations of Europe and Asia; not so much had they all exulted over any of his imperial predecessors. It was not now a matter of hoping that they would have the possession and use of good things public and private; they considered that they had already the plenitude as it were of good fortune with happiness waiting in its train. Thus nothing was to be seen throughout the cities but altars, oblations, sacrifices, men in white robes and crowned with garlands, bright and smart, their cheery faces beaming with goodwill, feasts, assemblages, musical contests, horse races, revels, nightlong frolics with harp and flutes, jollification, unrestraint, holiday-keeping, every kind of pleasure ministered by every sense. In these days the rich had no precedence over the poor, nor the distinguished over the obscure, creditors were not above debtors, nor masters above slaves, the times giving equality before the law. Indeed, the life under Saturn, pictured by the poets, no longer appeared to be a fabled story, so great was the prosperity and well-being, the freedom from grief and fear, the joy which pervaded households and people,

PHILO

μεθ' ἡμέραν τε καὶ νύκτωρ εὐφροσύνας, αἱ μέχρι
 [548] μηνῶν ἑπτὰ τῶν πρώτων ἄπαυστοι καὶ συνεχεῖς |
 14 ἐγένοντο. τῷ δὲ ὀγδόῳ κατασκήπτει βαρεῖα νόσος τῷ Γαῖῳ τὴν πρὸ μικροῦ δίαιταν, ὅτε ἕξῃ Τιβέριος, εὐκολωτέραν καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ὑγιεινότεραν οὖσαν εἰς πολυτέλειαν μεθαρμοσαμένῳ. πολὺς γὰρ ἄκρατος καὶ ὀψοφαγίαι καὶ ἐπὶ πλήρεσι τοῖς ὄγκοις ἀπλήρωτοι ἐπιθυμίαι θερμο-λουσίαι τε ἄκαιροι καὶ ἔμετοι καὶ εὐθύς πάλιν οἰνοφλυγίαι καὶ ἔφεδροι γαστριμαργίαι, λαγνεῖαι διὰ παίδων καὶ γυναικῶν, καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα καθαιρε-τικὰ ψυχῆς καὶ σώματος καὶ τῶν ἐν ἑκατέρῳ δεσμῶν συνεπέθετο. τὰ δὲ ἐπίχειρα ἐγκρατείας μὲν ὑγεία καὶ ἰσχύς, ἀκρασίας δὲ ἀσθένεια καὶ νόσος γειτνιῶσα θανάτῳ.

15 III. Διαγγελείσης οὖν τῆς ὅτι νοσεῖ φήμης, ἔτι πλοῦτων ὄντων—ἀρχὴ γὰρ ἦν μετοπώρου, τελευ-ταῖος πλοῦς τοῖς θαλαττεύουσιν, ἀπὸ τῶν πανταχόθεν ἐμπορίων εἰς τοὺς οἰκείους λιμένας καὶ ὑποδρόμους ἐπανιοῦσι, καὶ μάλιστα οἷς πρόνοια τοῦ μὴ διαχειμάζειν ἐπὶ ξένης ἐστὶ—μεθέμενοι τὸν ἀβροδίατον βίον ἐσκυθρώπαζον, συννοίας τε καὶ κατηφείας πᾶσα οἰκία καὶ πόλις γεγένητο μεστή, ἰσορρόπῳ λύπῃ τῆς πρὸ μικροῦ χαρᾶς ἀμφικλινοῦς 16 γενομένης. τὰ γὰρ μέρη πάντα τῆς οἰκουμένης αὐτῷ συνενόσησε, βαρυτέρα νόσῳ χρησάμενα τῆς κατασχούσης Γάιον· ἐκείνη μὲν γὰρ σώματος ἦν αὐτὸ μόνον, ἡ δὲ τῶν πανταχοῦ πάντων, ψυχικῆς εὐσθενείας, εἰρήνης, ἐλπίδων, μετουσίας καὶ ἀπο-

17 λαύσεως ἀγαθῶν. ἀνεπόλουν γὰρ ὅσα καὶ ἡλίκα

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 13-17

night and day, and lasted continuously without a break through the first seven months.

But in the eighth month Gaius was struck down by 14 severe sickness. He had exchanged the recent more homely and, therefore, healthier way of life which he had followed while Tiberius was alive, for one of extravagance. Hard drinking, luxurious feeding and appetites still unsatisfied when the cavities were stuffed full, hot baths, ill-timed, and acting as emetics, followed at once by renewed toping and gormandizing in its train, lasciviousness venting itself on boys and women, and everything else that can destroy soul and body and the bonds in both which keep them together, joined in the assault. Self-restraint is rewarded by strength and health, incontinence by infirmity and sickness bordering on death.

III. The news of Gaius's illness travelled every- 15 where, since the time still made navigation possible. For it was the beginning of autumn, the close of the sailing season when the mariners return from their trading ports everywhere to their own harbours and roadsteads, particularly those who take care not to winter in a foreign country. So people abandoned their luxurious life and became dismal. Every household and city was filled with anxiety and dejection, their recent joy being counter-balanced by a grief no less intense. For every part of the habitable world 16 shared his sickness, and theirs was a sickness more grievous than that which overcame him. His was of the body only, theirs was felt by all and everywhere, affecting the well-being of the soul, their peace, their hopes and participation and enjoyment of every good thing. Thoughts of the many great evils which 17

PHILO

κακὰ ἐξ ἀναρχίας φύεται· λιμόν, πόλεμον, δενδροτομίας, δηώσεις χωρίων, στερήσεις χρημάτων, ἀπαγωγάς, τοὺς περὶ δουλείας καὶ θανάτου φόβους ἀνηκέστους, ὧν ἰατρὸς ἦν οὐδεὶς, μίαν ἐχόντων

- 18 θεραπείαν τὸ ῥωσθῆναι Γάιον. ὅτε γοῦν ἤρξατο λωφᾶν ἢ νόσος, ἐν βραχεὶ καὶ οἱ μέχρι περάτων συνήσθοντο—φήμης γὰρ οὐδὲν ὠκύτερον—, καὶ μετέωρος πᾶσα πόλις ἦν ἀκοῆς ἀεὶ διψῶσα βελτίονος, ἕως διὰ τῶν ἐπιφοιτώντων παντελῆς ῥώσις εὐηγγελίσθη, δι' ἣν πάλιν ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς ἐπὶ τὰς αὐτὰς ἐτρέποντο θυμηδίας, ἰδίαν ἑαυτῶν νομίζουσαι σωτηρίαν πᾶσαι μὲν ἡπειροὶ πᾶσαι δὲ
- 19 νῆσοι. μέμνηται γὰρ οὐδεὶς τοσαύτην μιᾶς χώρας ἢ ἐνὸς ἔθνους γενέσθαι χαρὰν ἐπὶ σωτηρίᾳ καὶ καταστάσει ἡγεμόνος, ὅσην ἐπὶ Γαίῳ συμπάσης τῆς οἰκουμένης καὶ παραλαβόντι τὴν ἀρχὴν καὶ
- 20 ῥωσθέντι ἐκ τῆς ἀσθενείας. ὥσπερ γὰρ ἐκ νομάδος βίου καὶ θηριώδους νῦν πρῶτον ἀρχόμενοι μετα-
- [549] βάλλειν πρὸς τὸ σύννομον καὶ | ὁμοδίαιτον καὶ ἐξ ἔρημίας καὶ σηκῶν καὶ ὑπωρειῶν εἰσοικίζεσθαι πόλεσι τειχῆρεσι καὶ ἐξ ἀνεπιτροπεύτου ζωῆς ὑπὸ ἐπιτρόπῳ τάττεσθαι νομεῖ τινι καὶ ἀγελάρχη τῆς ἡμερωτέρας ἀγέλης ἐγεγήθεσαν ἀγνοία τῆς ἀλη-
- 21 θείας· τυφλώττει γὰρ ὁ ἀνθρώπινος νοῦς πρὸς τὴν τοῦ συμφέροντος ὄντως αἴσθησιν εἰκασία καὶ στοχασμῷ μᾶλλον ἢ ἐπιστήμῃ χρῆσθαι δυνάμενος.
- 22 IV. Εὐθύς γοῦν οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν ὁ σωτὴρ καὶ εὐεργέτης εἶναι νομισθεὶς καὶ τινὰς ἀγαθῶν πηγὰς νέας ἐπομβρήσειν Ἀσία τε καὶ Εὐρώπῃ πρὸς εὐδαιμονίαν ἀκαθαίρετον, ἰδίᾳ τε ἐκάστῳ καὶ πᾶσι spring from anarchy occupied their mind: famine, war, ravaging, devastation of estates, loss of property, abductions, fears of enslavement and death, so deadly that no physician could cure them and the only remedy lay in the recovery of Gaius. So when the 18 sickness began to abate, in quite a short time it was known even to the inhabitants of the ends of the world, for nothing is more speedy than rumour, and every city was on edge, ever craving for a better report until the good news of his complete recovery was announced by the travellers who arrived. At this every continent, every island, returned once more to its former happiness, for they felt that they personally shared in his preservation. For no one 19 remembers any single country or single nation feeling as much delight at the accession or preservation of a ruler, as was felt by the whole world in the case of Gaius, both when he succeeded to the sovereignty and when he recovered from his malady. They felt 20 as if they were beginning for the first time to change a nomadic and brutish for a social and gregarious life, or were passing from desolate life in pens and huts on a mountain side to be settled in a walled city, or from an existence unprotected by a guardian, to take their place under a guardian, a shepherd of the civilized flock. Such was their joy but they did not know the truth. The human mind in its blindness 21 does not perceive its real interest and all it can do is to take conjecture and guesswork for its guide instead of knowledge.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 17-22

IV. So it was with Gaius. He who had been 22 recently regarded as a saviour and benefactor, who would pour new streams of blessings on Asia and Europe, giving happiness indestructible to each singly κοινῇ, τὸ λεγόμενον δὴ τοῦτο “ ἀφ’ ἱερᾶς ἤρξατο ”<sup>1</sup> μεταβαλὼν πρὸς τὸ ἀτίθασον, μᾶλλον δὲ ἦν συν-εσκίαζεν ἀγριότητα τῷ πλάσματι τῆς ὑποκρίσεως 23 ἀναφήνας. τὸν γὰρ ἀνεψιὸν καὶ κοινωνὸν ἀπο-λειφθέντα τῆς ἀρχῆς καὶ οἰκειότερον αὐτοῦ διάδοχον

PHILO

 —ὁ μὲν γὰρ θέσει υἱωνὸς ἦν, ὁ δὲ φύσει Τιβερίου—κτείνει προφασισάμενος ἐπιβουλήν, μηδὲ τῆς ἡλικίας χωρούσης ἔγκλημα τοιοῦτον· ἄρτι γὰρ ἐκ 24 παίδων εἰς μειράκιον ὁ δύστηνος μετῆι. καὶ ὡς γέ φασί τινες, εἰ βραχὺν ἐπεβίω χρόνον Τιβέριος, ὁ μὲν ἂν ἐκποδὼν ἐγεγένητο Γάιος, δι’ ὑποψιῶν κεχωρηκῶς ἀνηκέστων, ὁ δὲ γνήσιος υἱωνὸς μόνος ἀπεδέδεικτο ἡγεμῶν καὶ κληρονόμος τῆς παππίας 25 ἀρχῆς. ἀλλ’ ὁ μὲν ὑπὸ τῆς εἰμαρμένης ἔφθη συναρπασθεῖς, πρὶν ἐπὶ τέλος ἀγαγεῖν τὰ βουλευμάτα· Γάιος δὲ τὴν ἐκ τοῦ παραβαίνειν τὰ πρὸς τὸν κοινωνὸν δίκαια διαβολὴν ἐνόμιζεν ἀποδράσασθαι 26 καταστρατηγῶν. τὸ δὲ σόφισμα τοιοῦτον ἦν· συναγαγὼν τοὺς ἐν τέλει, “ βούλομαι μὲν,” ἔφη, “ τὸν γένει μὲν ἀνεψιὸν εὐνοία δὲ ἀδελφόν, ἐπόμενος καὶ τῇ τοῦ τετελευτηκότος Τιβερίου γνώμῃ, κοινοπραγεῖν τῆς αὐτοκρατοῦς ἐξουσίας· ὁρᾶτε δὲ καὶ αὐτοὶ νήπιον ἔτι ὄντα κομιδῇ καὶ χρήζοντα ἐπιτρόπων καὶ διδασκάλων καὶ παιδα-27 γωγῶν. ἐπεὶ τί ἂν ἦν μείζον ἀγαθὸν ἢ τὰ τοσαῦτα βάρη τῆς ἡγεμονίας μὴ μίαν ψυχὴν ἢ σῶμα ἐν ἐπιχθίσθαι, ἀλλ’ ἔχειν τὸν δυνησόμενον ἐπελαφρίζειν καὶ συνεπικουφίζειν; ἐγὼ δέ,” ἔφη, “ παιδα-γωγούς καὶ διδασκάλους καὶ ἐπιτρόπους ὑπερ-

<sup>1</sup> Reiter “ ἀφ’ ἱερᾶς ” ἤρξατο. But ἤρξατο appears to be part of the proverbial phrase.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. “ began from the sacred line.” This line is the last

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 22-27

and all in common, at once "ran amuck" as they say,<sup>a</sup> changing to savagery, or rather revealing the brutality which he used to disguise under the mask of hypocrisy. His cousin, who had been left to share the 23 sovereignty and was more entitled by kinship to the succession, since Gaius was the grandson of Tiberius by adoption while the other was by blood, he put to death on the pretext of conspiracy, though his age in itself precluded such an accusation. For the poor youth was just emerging from boyhood into adolescence. And according to some, if Tiberius had 24 survived a little longer, Gaius would have been put out of the way, lying as he did under fatally damaging suspicions, and his real grandson would have been appointed sole ruler and heir to his grandfather's sovereignty. But Tiberius was snatched away by 25 fate before he had consummated his plans, while Gaius thought that by strategy he would escape the odium which dereliction in his duty to his partner would excite.

He employed the following 26 artifice. Having summoned the chief officials he said, "In accordance with the will of the deceased Tiberius I wish the imperial authority to be shared by him who is my cousin by birth but my brother by affection, though you see yourselves that he is still a mere child and needs guardians and teachers and tutors. For what greater boon could there be than 27 that a single soul or body should cease to be laden with the heavy burden of sovereignty and should have one who would be able to relieve and lighten them? And I," he continued, "will be more than a guardian, a tutor and a teacher. I will appoint line of a chessboard, and the actions of anyone who went beyond it would naturally be all "at sea."

PHILO

[550] βαλὼν ἔμαυτὸν μὲν ἤδη γράφω πατέρα, υἷὸν δὲ
 28 ἐκεῖνον.” V. | τούτοις καὶ τοὺς παρόντας ἀπατήσας καὶ τὸ μειράκιον—δέλεαρ γὰρ ἦν ἡ θέσις οὐκ ἐλπιζομένης ἡγεμονίας, ἀλλ’ ἀφαιρέσεως ἧς εἶχεν ἤδη—τῷ συγκληρονόμῳ καὶ κοινωνῶ<sup>1</sup> δικαίῳ μετὰ πολλῆς ἀδείας οὐδενὸς ἔτι πεφροντικῶς ἐπεβούλευεν. ἢ γὰρ υἱοῦ παντελῆς ἐξουσία κατὰ τοὺς τῶν Ῥωμαίων νόμους ἀνάκειται πατρί, δίχα τοῦ καὶ ἀνυπεύθυνον ἀρχὴν εἶναι τὴν αὐτοκράτορα, μηδενὸς ἐπὶ τοῖς ὀπωσοῦν πεπραγμένοις 29 λόγον ἀπαιτεῖν τολμῶντος ἢ δυναμένου. τοῦτον μὲν δὴ καθάπερ ἐν τοῖς ἀγῶσι ἐφεδρον ὑπολαβὼν εἶναι καταπαλαίει, μήτε συντροφίας μήτε οἰκειότη-τος μήτε ἡλικίας οἴκτον λαβῶν, δύστηνον, ὠκύ-μορον, συνάρχοντα, συγκληρονόμον, τὸν ἐλπισθέντα ποτὲ καὶ μόνον αὐτοκράτορα διὰ τὴν πρὸς Τιβέριον ἐγγυτάτῳ συγγένειαν· υἱῶν γὰρ πατέρων ἀποθανόντων ἐν υἱῶν τάξει παρὰ πάπποις καταριθ-30 μοῦνται. λέγεται δὲ ὅτι καὶ κελευσθεῖς αὐτοχειρία κτείνειν ἑαυτὸν, ἐφεστώτων ἑκατοντάρ-χου καὶ χιλιάρχου, οἷς εἴρητο μὴ συνεφάσασθαι τοῦ ἄγους, ὡς οὐκ ἐξὸν αὐτοκρατόρων ἀπογόνους πρὸς ἑτέρων ἀναιρεῖσθαι—νόμων γὰρ ἐν ἀνομίαις καὶ ὀσιότητος ἐν ἀνοσιουργίαις ἐμέμνητο κατειρωνεύομενος τὴν φύσιν τῆς ἀληθείας—, ἀπείρως ἔχων—οὐδὲ γὰρ ἕτερόν τινα κτεινόμενον εἶδεν οὐδὲ ἡσκητό πω ταῖς ὀπλομαχίαις, αἱ μελέται καὶ προγυμνάσματα παίδων ἐφ’ ἡγεμονία τρεφομένων εἰσὶ διὰ τοὺς ἐνισταμένους πολέμους—τὸ μὲν πρῶτον τοὺς ἦκοντας παρεκάλει τὸν αὐχένα προτείνας ἀνελεῖν.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. κοινωνῶν.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 27-30

myself to be his father and him to be my son.”

V. With these words he deceived both 28 the audience and the lad. The adoption was a snare to assure not the sovereignty which he expected, but the loss of that which he held already. And Gaius proceeded to plot against his fellow-heir and true partner with full security and disregard of all opposition, for the Roman laws assign absolute power over the son to the father, not to mention his irresponsible authority as emperor, since no one had either the courage or the power to call him to account for his actions of any kind. As the victor in the arena throws to the 29 ground the one remaining champion, so dealt he, without pity for their fellowship in breeding, their kinship or his youth, with this unhappy lad, and sent to an early grave his co-regent, his co-heir who had been expected to be sole emperor as most nearly related to Tiberius, for grandsons when their fathers are dead hold the rank of sons in the eyes of their grandparents.

It is said, too, that the 30 boy was ordered to kill himself with his own hands under the superintendence of a centurion and a chiliarch, who had been instructed to take no hand in the sacrilege on the grounds that it was unlawful that the descendants of emperors should be slain by others. For amid his lawless and unsanctified deeds Gaius remembered law and sanctity, a travesty of their true nature. But the lad lacked skill to do the deed, for he had never seen anyone else killed and had not yet been practised in the martial exercises which in view of the imminent prospect of war are used to give preliminary training to those who are being brought up to rule. So at first he stretched out his neck to the emissaries present and bade them

PHILO

- 31 ὡς δ' οὐχ ὑπέμενον, αὐτὸς λαβὼν τὸ ξίφος ἐπυνθά-νετο τὸν καιριώτατον τόπον ὑπ' ἀγνοίας καὶ ἀηθείας, ἵνα εὐσκόπῳ πληγῇ τὴν ἀθλίαν ζωὴν ἀπορρήξῃ. καὶ οἱ μὲν οἶα διδάσκαλοι κακοδαι-μονίας ὑφήγοῦντό τε καὶ ἐδείκνυσαν τὸ μέρος, ᾧ χρὴ τὸ ξίφος ἐπενεγκεῖν· ὁ δὲ πρώτην καὶ ὑστάτην μάθησιν ἀναδιδαχθεὶς ἀνδροφόνος αὐτὸς αὐτοῦ γίνεται βιασθεὶς, ὁ δύστηνος.
- 32 VI. Ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ πρῶτος καὶ μέγιστος ἄθλος οὗτος Γαίῳ κατέιργαστο, μηδενὸς ἔτι λειπομένου (κοινωνοῦ) τῆς ἡγεμονίας πρὸς ὃν ἀποκλινοῦσί τινες τῶν ἐθελοκακούντων καὶ ἐν ὑποψίαις ὄντων, ἐπὶ δεύ-τερον εὐθύς ἐκονίετο τὸν Μάκρωνος, ἀνδρὸς εἰς [551] πάντα αὐτῷ | συναγωνισαμένου τὰ τῆς ἀρχῆς, οὐ μόνον ἀποδειχθέντι ἡγεμόνι—κολακείας γὰρ ἴδιον τὰς εὐπραγίας θεραπεύειν—ἀλλὰ καὶ πρότερον εἰς 33 τὸ τυχεῖν τῆς ἡγεμονίας. ὁ γὰρ Τιβέριος φρονήσει βαθείᾳ χρώμενος καὶ τῶν κατ' αὐτὸν ἀπάντων δεινότατος ὢν ἀφανὲς ἀνθρώπου βούλημα συνιδεῖν καὶ ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον συνέσει διενεγκῶν, ἐφ' ὅσον καὶ εὐτυχία, πολλάκις ὑπεβλέπετο τὸν Γάιον ὡς κακό-νον μὲν ἅπαντι τῷ Κλαυδίῳ οἴκῳ, προσκείμενον δὲ μόνῳ τῷ μητρώῳ γένει—καὶ ἐδεδίει περὶ τοῦ 34 υἱοῦ, μὴ νέος ἀπολειφθεὶς παραπόληται—, πρὸς δὲ ἀρχὴν καὶ τοσαύτην ἀνεπιτηδεῖως ἔχοντα διὰ τε τὸ τῆς φύσεως ἄμικτον καὶ ἀκοινωνήτον καὶ τὴν τῶν ἡθῶν ἀνωμαλίαν· ἀλλόκοτα γὰρ αὐτῷ καὶ ἐπιμανῇ κατεφαίνετο, μηδεμιᾶς σωζομένης ἀκολου-

<sup>a</sup> §§ 32-65. For a very short account of Macro's services to Gaius and his subsequent fall see Flaccus 12-15.

<sup>b</sup> As Gaius could claim through his mother, who was the

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 30-34

dispatch him, and when they could not bring them- 31 selves to do it, he took the sword himself and in his ignorance and inexperience asked them what was the most vital spot so that by a well-aimed blow he might break the thread of his miserable life. And they playing the part of preceptors in misery gave their instructions and showed him the part to which he should apply the sword, and having received this first and last lesson he was forced to become his own murderer, poor boy!

VI. <sup>a</sup> When Gaius had won this first and principal 32 bout and no partner in his sovereignty was still left to divert the allegiance of ill-wishers and suspects, he at once prepared for a second effort, this time against Macro, who had been throughout his ally in establishing his power, not only after he was appointed emperor (for flattery never fails to pay court to success) but also earlier in helping him to get the sovereignty. For Tiberius, who always acted with 33 profound prudence and was clever above all his contemporaries in divining a man's secret wishes, and as much distinguished for shrewdness as for good fortune, often looked on Gaius with disfavour as being ill-disposed to the whole Claudian house and attached only <sup>b</sup> to his mother's family, and he feared for his grandson that if he was left alone when young he might be made away with. Moreover he 34 doubted his fitness for an office of such magnitude, both because of his unsociable and unfriendly nature and also because of his erratic temperament, for he showed abnormal and crazy tendencies and main-daughter of Julia the daughter of Augustus, descent by birth from Augustus, this might be supposed to weigh with him more than his descent by adoption through his Claudian father Germanicus.

PHILO

35 θίας, μήτε ἐν λόγοις μήτε ἐν ἔργοις. ἂ παντὶ σθένει κατὰ τὸ παρεῖκον<sup>1</sup> ὁ Μάκρων ἐθεράπευε, τὰς μὲν ὑπονοίας τοῦ Τιβερίου καὶ ἐν οἷς μάλιστ' ἔδοκει τὴν διάνοιαν ἐλκοῦσθαι διὰ τὸν ἄληκτον ἐπὶ 36 τῷ υἰώνῳ φόβον ἐξιώμενος. εὖνον γὰρ καὶ πειθαρχικὸν ἀπέφαινε τὸν Γάιον καὶ σφόδρα ἡττημένον τοῦ ἀνεψιοῦ, ὡς ἔνεκα φιλοστοργίας καὶ μόνῳ ἂν ἐθελῆσαι τῆς ἀρχῆς ὑπεκστῆναι· τὴν δὲ αἰδῶ μὴ λυσιτελῆσαι πολλοῖς, ὑφ' ἧς καὶ Γάιον 37 ἀπλοῦν ὄντα ποικίλον νομίζεσθαι. καὶ ὁπότε μὴ πείθῃ τὰ εἰκότα διεξιῶν, τὴν ἀπὸ συνθηκῶν <πίστιν> ἐπέφερεν, “ἐγγυῶμαι,” λέγων, “ἀξιόχρεώς εἰμι πρὸς πίστιν· ἱκανὰς ἀποδείξεις δέδωκα τοῦ φιλόκαισαρ ἰδίως καὶ φιλοτιβέριος εἶναι, τὴν ἐπί-38 θεσιν<sup>2</sup> καὶ καθαίρεσιν ἐγχειρισθεὶς Σηιανοῦ.” καὶ συνόλως δὲ ἱκανὸς ἦν ἐν τοῖς εἰς Γάιον ἐπαίνους, εἰ δεῖ καλεῖν ἀξίως<sup>3</sup> ἐπαίνους<sup>4</sup> τὰς ἀπολογίας, αἱ
 πρὸς τὰς ἐξ ὑπονοιῶν αἰτίας καὶ κατηγορίας ἀδήλους καὶ ἀσαφεῖς<sup>5</sup> ἐγίνοντο· συνόλως γὰρ ὅσα περὶ ἀδελφῶν εἶποι τις ἂν ἢ υἰῶν γνησίων ἐγκώμια, τοσαῦτα καὶ ἔτι πλείω Μάκρων ὑπὲρ Γαΐου διεξήγει 39 πρὸς Τιβέριον. αἴτιον δέ, ὡς ὁ τῶν πολλῶν λόγος, οὐ μόνον τὸ ἀντιθεραπεύεσθαι πρὸς αὐτοῦ τὸν Μάκρωνα, πλείστον ἢ καὶ σύμπαν ἐν τῇ ἡγεμονίᾳ δυνάμενον, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἡ Μάκρωνος γυνὴ διὰ σωπωμένην αἰτίαν, ἢ καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ἤλειφε καὶ συνεκρότει τὸν ἄνδρα μηδὲν ἀνιέναι σπουδῆς καὶ βοηθείας τῆς ὑπὲρ τοῦ νεανίσκου.

<sup>1</sup> MSS. παρήκον.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ὑπόθεσιν.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. ἀξίας.

<sup>4</sup> MSS. ἐπαίνου.

<sup>5</sup> MSS. σαφεῖς.

<sup>a</sup> According to Dio lviii. 28 and Tac. Ann. vi. 45, Macro connived at her seduction.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 34-39

tained no consistency in word or deed. These faults 35
Macro strove with all his might to remedy as opportunity offered and also to eradicate the suspicions of Tiberius on the subject which owing to his ceaseless fear for his grandson seemed to fester most in his mind. Macro represented him as well-disposed and 36 docile and so exceedingly devoted to the service of his cousin that family affection would make him willing to retire and leave him sole emperor. Modesty, he said, in many cases was a disadvantage, and it was his modesty which caused the simple-minded Gaius to be considered cunning. And when 37 the plausibility of his arguments failed to convince Tiberius he would pledge his credit for their truth. "I guarantee it," he said, "I have earned the right to be believed. I have given sufficient proof that I am in a special sense a friend of Caesar, a friend of Tiberius, when the task of attacking and destroying Sejanus was placed in my hand." And in general 38
he was successful with his eulogies of Gaius, if eulogies is a suitable name for the defences directed to meet the vague charges and accusations based on suspicion. For in general the terms in which one might speak in commendation of brothers or sons in the full sense were used in equal or even greater measure of Gaius by Macro, when pleading his cause to Tiberius.

This was due, according to what most 39 people said, not merely to the fact that Gaius in return courted the favour of Macro as possessing a predominant and, indeed, all-powerful influence in the government, but to Macro's wife, though the charge against her was not mentioned. She every day incited and worked upon her husband not to abate his zeal and assistance of the young Gaius."

PHILO

- δεινὸν δὲ γυνὴ γνώμην ἀνδρὸς παραλῦσαι καὶ παραγαγεῖν, καὶ μάλιστα μαχλὰς· ἔνεκα γὰρ τοῦ 40 συνειδότος κολακικωτέρα γίνεται. ὁ δὲ τὴν διαφθορὰν μὲν τοῦ γάμου καὶ τῆς οἰκίας ἀγνοῶν, [552] τὴν | δὲ κολακείαν εὖνοϊαν ἀκραιφνεστάτην εἶναι νομίζων, ἀπατᾶται καὶ λανθάνει τοῖς στρατηγήμασι τοὺς ἐχθίστους ὡς φιλτάτους προσιέμενος.
- 41 VII. Εἰδὼς οὖν, ὅτι παρὰ μικρὸν ἐλθόντα μυ-ριάκις αὐτὸν ἀπολέσθαι διέσωσεν, ἀνυπούλοις καὶ πεπαρρησιασμέναις ἐχρήτο ταῖς νουθεσίαις· ἐβού-λετο γάρ, ὡς ἀγαθὸς δημιουργός, ἀκαθαίρετον διαμεῖναι τὸ οἰκεῖον ἔργον, μήτε ὑπ' αὐτοῦ δια-42 λυθὲν μήτε ὑφ' ἑτέρου. ὁπότε οὖν ἢ καταδαρθόντα<sup>1</sup> ἐν συμποσίῳ θεάσαιτο, περιανίστη στοχαζόμενος ἅμα μὲν τοῦ πρέποντος ἅμα δὲ καὶ τῆς ἀσφαλείας —εὐεπιβούλευτον γὰρ ὁ κοιμώμενος—, ἢ τινὰς ἐκμανῶς ὀρχηστὰς ὀρῶντα ἢ ἔστιν ὅτε συνορχού-μενον ἢ ἐπὶ μίμοις αἰσχροῦν καὶ σκωμμάτων μὴ ὑπομειδιῶντα σεμνότερον ἀλλὰ μεिरακιωδέστερον καγχάζοντα ἢ κιθαρῳδῶν ἢ χορῶν τῆς ἐμμελείας ἠττώμενον, ἔστιν ὅπου καὶ συνάδοντα, ἔνυττε πλησίον καθεζόμενος ἢ κατακεκλιμένος καὶ ἐπέχειν 43 ἐπειράτο. πολλακίς δὲ καὶ ἐπικλίνας πρὸς οὓς, ἵνα μὴ κατακούοι τις ἕτερος, ἡσύχῃ καὶ πράως ἐνουθέτει φάσκων· “οὐδενὶ τῶν παρόντων ἀλλ’ οὐδὲ τῶν ἄλλων ἀνθρώπων ὁμοιον εἶναί σε δεῖ, οὔτε ἐν θεάμασιν οὔτε ἐν ἀκουσμασιν οὔτε ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν ὅσα κατὰ τὰς αἰσθήσεις, ἀλλὰ προ-φέρειν ἐπὶ τοσοῦτον ἐν ἐκάστῳ τῶν περὶ τὸν βίον, 44 ἐφ’ ὅσον καὶ ταῖς εὐτυχίαις διενήνοχας. ἄτοπον

<sup>1</sup> MSS. καταδαρθέντα.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 39-43

A wife has great power to paralyse and seduce her husband<sup>a</sup> and particularly if she is a wanton, for her guilty conscience increases her wheedling. The 40 husband, unaware of the corruption of his marriage and household, and thinking that her wheedling is benevolence pure and simple, is deceived and little knows that her artifices are leading him to take his worst enemies to be his dearest friends.

VII. Knowing then that he had saved Gaius over 41 and over again when within an ace of destruction, he gave his admonitions frankly and without disguise, for like a good builder he wished his handiwork to remain proof against destruction or dissolution either by himself or another. So whenever he saw Gaius 42 asleep at a banquet he would wake him up with the double object of preserving propriety and his personal safety, since a sleeping man is an easy target for conspiracy. Or if he saw him frantic with excitement at the sight of dancers and sometimes joining in the dance, or greeting a nime of scandalous scenes and broad jesting with a loud youngster's guffaw, instead of a subdued or sedate smile, or fascinated by the music of harpers or choric singers and occasionally accompanying them, he would sit or lean back at his side and nudge him and try to restrain him. Often, 43 too, bending down to his ear so that no one else should listen, he would admonish him gently and quietly. "As a spectator," he would say, "or listener, or using any other of your senses, you ought not to be like those around you or anyone else at all. In every side of life you ought to be as far above these as you have surpassed them in your good <sup>a</sup> δείνον . . . παραλῦσαι read like part of an hexameter.

PHILO

γὰρ τὸν ἡγεμόνα γῆς καὶ θαλάττης νικᾶσθαι πρὸς ὤδῃς ἢ ὀρχήσεως ἢ χλευαστικοῦ σκώμματος ἢ τινος τῶν ὁμοιοτρόπων, ἀλλὰ μὴ αἰεὶ καὶ πανταχοῦ μεμνήσθαι τῆς ἡγεμονίας, καθάπερ ποιμένα τινὰ καὶ ἐπιστάτην ἀγέλης, τὰ πρὸς βελτίωσιν ἀπὸ παντὸς οὔτινοσοῦν ἐφ' ἑαυτὸν ἔλκοντα καὶ λόγου 45 καὶ πράγματος." εἶτα ἔφασκεν· "ὅταν παρατυγ-χάνῃς σκηنيκοῖς ἀγῶσιν ἢ γυμνικοῖς ἢ τοῖς κατὰ τὰς ἵπποδρομίας, μὴ σκόπει τὰ ἐπιτηδεύματα, ἀλλὰ τὴν ἐν τοῖς ἐπιτηδεύμασι κατόρθωσιν, καὶ 46 λάμβανε τὸν τοιοῦτον λογισμόν· εἰ τὰ μηδὲν ὠφελοῦντα τὸν ἀνθρώπινον βίον, τέρψιν δὲ καὶ ἡδονὴν αὐτὸ μόνον παρέχοντα θεαταῖς, ἐκπονοῦσιν οὕτω τινές, ὡς ἐπαινεῖσθαί τε καὶ θαυμάζεσθαι καὶ γέρα καὶ τιμὰς καὶ στεφάνους μετὰ κηρυγμάτων λαμβάνειν, τί χρὴ πράττειν τὸν τῆς ἀνωτάτω καὶ μεγίστης 47 τέχνης ἐπιστήμονα; μεγίστη δὲ καὶ ἀρίστη τέχνη πασῶν ἐστὶν ἡ ἡγεμονία, δι' ἧς πᾶσα μὲν ἡ ἀγαθὴ καὶ βαθεῖα πεδιάς τε καὶ ὄρεινὴ γεωργεῖται, πᾶσα δὲ θάλαττα φορτηγοῖς ὀλκάσιν ἀκινδύνως διαπλεῖται κατὰ τὰς ἀντιδόσεις ὧν ἀλλήλαις ἀγαθῶν ἀντεκτίνουσιν αἱ χῶραι κοινωνίας ἡμέρω, τὰ μὲν
 [553] ἐνδέοντα λαμβάνουσαι, ὧν δ' ἄγουσι περισσίαν |
 48 ἀντιπέμπουσαι. φθόνος γὰρ οὐδέποτε πᾶσαν τὴν οἰκουμένην ἐκράτησεν, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ τὰς μεγάλας αὐτῆς ἀποτομάς, ὅλην Εὐρώπην ἢ ὅλην Ἀσίαν· ἀλλ' ἰοβόλου τρόπον ἐρπετοῦ φωλεύει βραχέσιν εἰσερπύσας χωρίους ἀνδρὶ ἐνὶ ἡ οἴκῳ ἐνὶ ἡ, εἴ ποτε

---

<sup>a</sup> I understand κατόρθωσις as used in the Stoic sense of the moral state which produces κατορθώματα, i.e. τὰ κατ' ἀρετὴν

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 43-48

fortune. For it is not to be thought of that the 44 sovereign of earth and sea should be overcome by a song or dancing or ribald jesting or anything of the kind, instead of always and everywhere remembering his sovereignty, that he is as a shepherd and master of a flock, and extracting for himself whatever may tend to betterment from everything whatever that is said or done." Then he would continue, "When 45 you are attending theatrical or gymnastic competitions or those of the chariot race, do not pay regard to what the performers actually do, but to the moral achievement<sup>a</sup> shown in their doings, and reason thus with yourself. If there are those who so labour on 46 things which do not profit human life but merely provide pleasure and enjoyment to the spectator, so that they win praise and admiration and rewards and honours and crowns announced by proclamations, what should he do who has learnt the highest and greatest art? And the best and greatest art is the art of 47 government which causes the good deep soil in lowlands and highlands to be tilled, and all the seas to be safely navigated by merchantships laden with cargoes to effect the exchange of goods which the countries in desire for fellowship render to each other, receiving those which they lack and sending in return those of which they carry a surplus. For envy has 48 never gained the mastery over the habitable world, nor even of the great sections of it, the whole of Europe or the whole of Asia. But like a venomous reptile it creeps into tiny hiding-places, into a single man or a single house or, if the force of its blast be ἐνεργήματα. The virtue in this case is ἀνδρεία, and it is only in so far as the performers showed this that their performance was worth looking at. Cf. Zeller, Stoics (Eng. trans.), p. 243.

PHILO

- πολὺς ἄγαν πνέοι, πόλει μιᾷ· πρὸς δὲ μείζονα κύκλον ἔθλους ἢ χώρας οὐ πρόσσεισι, καὶ μάλιστα ἀφ' οὗ τὸ ὑμέτερον γένος τὸ Σεβαστὸν ὄντως ἤρξατο
- 49 πρυτανεύειν τῶν πανταχοῦ πάντων. ὅσα μὲν γὰρ εὐήμεροι τῶν βλαβερῶν καὶ ἐν μέσοις ἐξητάζετο, πρὸς ἔσχατιὰς ὑπερόρια καὶ Ταρτάρου μυχοὺς ἤλασε, τὰ δὲ τρόπον τινὰ φυγαδευθέντα τῶν λυσιτελῶν καὶ ὠφελίμων κατήγαγεν ἀπὸ περάτων γῆς καὶ θαλάττης εἰς τὴν καθ' ἡμᾶς οἰκουμένην· ἅ πάντα μιᾷ χειρὶ σῆ κυβερνᾶν ἐπιτέτραπται.
- 50 παραπεμφθεῖς γοῦν ὑπὸ τῆς φύσεως ἐπὶ πρύμναν ἀνωτάτω καὶ τοὺς οἴακας ἐγχειρισθεῖς πηδαλιούχει τὸ κοινὸν ἀνθρώπων σκάφος σωτηρίως, ἐπὶ μηδενὶ μᾶλλον χαίρων καὶ τερπόμενος ἢ τῷ τοὺς ὑπηκόους
- 51 εὐεργετεῖν. ἄλλοι μὲν γὰρ ἄλλων ἔρανοι, οὓς ἀναγκαίως εἰσφέρουσιν ἰδιῶται κατὰ πόλεις· ἄρχοντι δὲ οἰκειότατος ἔρανος, βουλὰς ἀγαθὰς εἰσηγεῖσθαι περὶ τῶν ὑποτεταγμένων καὶ πράττειν τὰ βουλευθέντα ὀρθῶς καὶ ἀταμίευτα προφέρειν τὰ ἀγαθὰ πλουσία χειρὶ καὶ γνώμῃ, πλὴν ὅσα κατὰ πρόνοιαν τῆς εἰς τὸ μέλλον ἀδηλότητος ἄξιον παραφυλάττειν.”
- 52 VIII. Τοιούτοις κατεπῆδεν ὁ δυστυχῆς, ὥστε βελτιῶσαι τὸν Γάιον. ὁ δὲ φίλερις καὶ φιλόνεικος ὢν ἐπὶ τὰναντία τὴν διάνοιαν ἔτρεπεν, ὥσπερ εἰς ἐκεῖνα παρακληθεῖς, καὶ τὸν σωφρονιστὴν ἀντικρυς ἀπεθάρρει δυσωπεῖν, ἔστι δὲ ὅτε καὶ πόρρωθεν ἀφικνούμενον ὀρῶν πρὸς τοὺς πλησίον ταυτὶ διε-
- 53 λάλει· “ πάρεστιν ὁ διδάσκαλος τοῦ μηκέτι μαθητῆν ὀφείλοντος, ὁ παιδαγωγὸς τοῦ μηκέτι παιδὸς overstrong, into a single city. But to the wider circuit of a nation or country it has no entry, particularly since your family, the truly Augustan, began to hold sway over all and everywhere. For 49 all the mischiefs which used to prosper and occupy a central place have been driven by your house into exile and into the utmost corners and recesses of Tartarus, and things beneficial and profitable which lay as though in banishment it has brought back from the ends of the earth and sea into the world of our habitation. The governance of all these has been entrusted to your single hand. Accordingly 50 having under Nature's escort risen to the highest post in the stern, and the tiller placed in your hand, steer in security the common ship of mankind, rejoicing and delighting in nothing so much as in benefiting your subjects. For various are the contributions 51 which private citizens throughout the cities render under compulsion, but the fittest contribution for a ruler is to put forth good proposals for the benefit of his subjects and to execute these proposals in the best way possible and to bring forth good gifts with a bountiful hand and will, reserving nothing save what in provision for the uncertainty of the future may fitly be stored in safe-keeping."

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 48-53

VIII. With such talk the unfortunate man tried to 52 charm Gaius into better ways. But quarrelsome and contentious as he was, he let his inclination turn to the opposite direction as though it was that to which Macro urged him. And he grew bold enough to flout his monitor outright, and sometimes when he saw him coming a little way off he would discourse thus to the bystanders, "Here comes the teacher of 53 one who no longer needs to learn, the tutor of one who

PHILO

ὄντος, ὁ νουθητητῆς τοῦ φρονιμωτέρου, ὁ τὸν αὐτοκράτορα τῷ ὑπηκόῳ πειθαρχεῖν ἀξιῶν, ἐθάδα τῆς ἡγεμονικῆς ἐπιστήμης καὶ παιδευτὴν ἑαυτὸν γράφει, παρὰ τίνι μαθὼν τὰ ἀρχικὰ ἔγωγε οὐκ 54 οἶδα. ἐμοὶ μὲν γὰρ ἐξ ἔτι σπαργάνων μυριοὶ διδάσκαλοι γεγόνασι, πατέρες, ἀδελφοί, θεῖοι, ἀνεψιοί, πάπποι, πρόγονοι μέχρι τῶν ἀρχηγετῶν, οἱ ἀφ' αἵματος πάντες καθ' ἑκάτερον γένος τό τε πατρῶον καὶ μητρῶον, αὐτοκρατεῖς ἐξουσίας περιποιησάμενοι, χωρὶς τοῦ καὶ ταῖς πρώταις τῶν σπερμάτων καταβολαῖς εἶναι τινὰς δυνάμεις βασι-
 55 λικὰς τῶν ἡγεμονικῶν. ὡς γὰρ αἱ τοῦ σώματος καὶ τῆς ψυχῆς ὁμοιότητες κατὰ τε τὴν μορφήν καὶ σχέσεις καὶ κινήσεις βουλὰς τε καὶ πράξεις ἐν τοῖς σπερματικοῖς σῶζονται λόγοις, οὕτως εἰκὸς ἐν
 [554] τοῖς αὐτοῖς ὑπογράφεσθαι τυπωδέστερον | καὶ τὴν
 56 πρὸς ἡγεμονίαν ἐμφέρειαν. εἶτα ἐμὲ τὸν καὶ πρὸ τῆς γενέσεως ἔτι κατὰ γαστρὸς ἐν τῷ τῆς φύσεως ἐργαστηρίῳ διαπλασθέντα αὐτοκράτορα τολμᾷ τις διδάσκειν, ἀνεπιστήμων ἐπιστήμονα; ποῦ γὰρ τοῖς ιδιώταις πρὸ μικροῦ θέμις εἰς ἡγεμονικῆς ψυχῆς παρακύψαι βουλεύματα; τολμῶσι δὲ ὑπ' ἀναισχύντου θράσους ἱεροφαντεῖν καὶ τελεῖν τὰ 57 ἡγεμονικὰ μόλις ἂν ἐν μύσταις ἀναγραφέντες." ἐκ δὲ τοῦ κατ' ὀλίγον μελετῶν ἀλλοτριοῦσθαι τοῦ Μάκρωνος ἤρχετο καὶ ψευδεῖς μὲν πιθανὰς δὲ καὶ εὐπαραγώγους κατ' αὐτοῦ πλάττειν αἰτίας· δειναὶ γὰρ αἱ εὐθικτοὶ καὶ μεγάλαι φύσεις εἰκοτολογῆσαι.

---

* Or "principles." See note on De Aet. 85, and on De

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 53-57

is no longer in tutelage, the censor of his superior in wisdom, who holds that an emperor should obey his subjects, who rates himself as versed in the art of government and an instructor therein, though in what school he has learnt its principles I do not know. For I from the cradle have had a host of 54 teachers, father, brothers, uncles, cousins, grandparents, ancestors, right up to the founders of the House, all my kinsmen by blood on both the maternal and paternal sides, who attained to offices of independent authority, apart from the fact that in the original seeds of their begetting kinglike potentialities for government were contained. For just as 55 the seminal forces<sup>a</sup> preserve similarities of the body in form and carriage and gait, and of the soul in projects and actions, so we may suppose that to the governing faculty they contain a resemblance in outline. And 56 then does anyone dare to teach me, who even while in the womb, that workshop of nature,<sup>b</sup> was modelled as an emperor, ignorance dare to instruct knowledge? How can they who were but now common citizens have a right to peer into the counsels of an imperial soul? yet in their shameless effrontery they who would hardly be admitted to rank as learners dare to act as masters who initiate others into the mysteries of government." Step by step he began to practise 57 alienating himself from Macro and also to fabricate charges against him, which though false were specious and readily accepted. For quick and highly gifted natures are clever at producing plausible argu-

Op. 43 (vol. i. p. 475), where reference is given to S.V.F. index p. 93 a.

<sup>b</sup> This phrase for the womb has been used several times, see note on De Act. 66.

PHILO

- 58 τοιαῦται δὲ ἦσαν αἱ προφάσεις· “ ἐμόν ἐστι τοῦ Μάκρωνος ἔργον Γάιος· μᾶλλον αὐτὸν ἢ οὐχ ἤττον τῶν γονέων γεγέννηκα· τρίς, οὐχ ἅπαξ, ἀνήρπαστο ἂν ἐπ’ αὐτῷ Τιβερίου φονῶντος, εἰ μὴ δι’ ἐμέ καὶ τὰς ἐμὰς παρηγορίας· ἀλλὰ καὶ τελευτήσαντος ἔχων ὑπηκόους τὰς στρατιωτικὰς δυνάμεις εὐθύς εἰς τὴν ἐκείνου παρέπεμψα τάξιν, ἀναδιδάσκων ὅτι ἀνδρὸς ἐνὸς γέγονεν ἔνδεια· μένει δὲ ἄρτιος καὶ πλήρης ἢ
- 59 ἡγεμονία.” τούτοις συνεπειθοντό τινες ὡς ἀψευδέσιν ἀγνοοῦντες τὸν φένακα τρόπον τοῦ λέγοντος· οὐπω γὰρ ἦν τὸ πεπλασμένον αὐτοῦ καὶ ποικίλον τῶν ἡθῶν ἐμφανές· ἀλλὰ γὰρ οὐ πολλαῖς ὕστερον ἡμέραις ἐκποδῶν ὁ κακοδαίμων γίνεται σὺν τῇ γυναικί, τῆς περιττῆς εὐνοίας ἀμοιβὰς τὰς
- 60 ἀνωτάτω τιμωρίας ἀντιλαβῶν. τοιοῦτόν ἐστιν ἢ εἰς τοὺς ἀχαρίστους χάρις· ἀντὶ γὰρ ὧν ὠφελήθησαν, παρέχουσι τὰς μεγίστας ζημίας τοῖς εὐεργετήσασιν. ὁ γοῦν Μάκρων πάντα ἐπ’ ἀληθείας πραγματευσάμενος μετ’ ἐκτενεστάτης σπουδῆς καὶ φιλοτιμίας, τὸ μὲν πρῶτον ὑπὲρ τοῦ σῶσαι Γάιον, ἔπειτα δὲ ὑπὲρ τοῦ μόνον τὴν ἡγεμονίαν διαδέξασθαι, τοιαῦτα εὗρατο τὰ ἐπίχειρα. λέγεται γάρ, ὅτι ἠναγκάσθη ὁ δεῖλαιος αὐτοχειρίᾳ κτείνειν ἑαυτὸν καὶ τὴν αὐτὴν ἀνεδέξατο συμφορὰν ἢ γυνή, καίτοι ποτὲ νομισθεῖσα διὰ συνηθείας αὐτῷ γενέσθαι· βέβαιον δὲ οὐδὲν φασὶ τῶν ἐν ἔρωτι φίλτρων εἶναι διὰ τὸ τοῦ πάθους ἀψίκορον.
- 62 IX. Ἐπειδὴ δὲ καὶ ὁ Μάκρων πανοίκιος ἰέρευτο,<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἰερεύετο.

---

<sup>a</sup> It is strange not to find some words to the effect that Marco had been heard to say this. For since what follows

30

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 57-62

ments. This was the sort of allegation which he 58 made, "Macro says,<sup>a</sup> 'It is I Macro who made Gaius, I am his begetter more or not less than his parents. Not once only but thrice, when Tiberius wished to kill him he would have been violently removed, had it not been for me and my exhortations. Even when Tiberius was dead, as I had the military forces under my control, I at once brought them over into his camp by teaching them that one man was needed and so his sovereignty remains perfect and complete.' "

Some people accepted these charges as 59 veracious, not knowing the deceptive and cunning character of the speaker, for his artificial and cunning disposition was not yet manifest. However a few days later the unhappy man together with his wife was got rid of and paid the extreme penalty in return for his excessive zeal. This is the gratitude 60 gained by benefits bestowed on the ungrateful. They return the benefits they have received by inflicting the severest penalties on their benefactors. Such were, for example, the rewards which Macro reaped after having busied himself throughout in all sincerity with the most intense zeal and ardour, first to save Gaius's life and secondly to secure his sole accession to the sovereignty. For it is said that the unhappy 61 man was forced to slay himself with his own hand and that his wife submitted to the same fate, though she was supposed to have been at one time Gaius's mistress. But love as they say is a fickle passion, and therefore none of its endearments are stable.

IX. When Macro, too, with his whole house had 62 simply repeats what Philo declares to have been the truth, the falsity could only lie in that he had actually made the boast.

PHILO

τρίτῳ ἐπαπεδύετο δόλῳ βαρυτέρῳ. πενθερὸς ἐγεγένητο αὐτῷ Μάρκος Σιλανός, μεστὸς φρονήματος ἀνὴρ καὶ γένει λαμπρός. οὗτος ὠκυμόρου τῆς θυγατρὸς ἀποθανούσης ἔτι περιεῖπε τὸν Γάιον, εὖνοιαν προσφερόμενος οὐ πενθεροῦ μᾶλλον ἢ γνησίου πατρός, ἧς<sup>1</sup> ἐνόμιζεν ἀντιλήψεσθαι κατὰ νόμον ἰσότητος μεθαρμοσάμενος τὸν γαμβρὸν εἰς υἱόν. ἐλελήθει δὲ ἄρα ψευδοδοξῶν καὶ ἀπατώ-[555] 63 μενος. | ὁ μὲν γὰρ τοὺς τοῦ κηδεμόνος<sup>2</sup> λόγους αἰεὶ διεξήκει μηδὲν ἐπικρυπτόμενος τῶν εἰς βελτίωσιν καὶ ὠφέλειαν ἡθῶν καὶ βίου καὶ ἡγεμονίας, ἔχων εἰς παρρησίαν καὶ μεγάλας ἀφορμὰς ὑπερβάλλουσάν τε εὐγένειαν καὶ τὴν κατ' ἐπιγαμίαν οἰκειότητα.
 καὶ γὰρ ἡ θυγάτηρ οὐ πρὸ πολλῶν ἐτεθνήκει χρό-νων, ὡς ἀμαυρωθῆναι τὰ δίκαια τῶν κηδεστῶν, ἀλλὰ μόνον οὐκ ἦσπαιρεν, ἔτι λευψάνων τινῶν ὑστάτων τοῦ ψυχικοῦ πνεύματος ἐνυπαρχόντων καὶ 64 ἐγκατελλημμένων τῷ σώματι. ὁ δὲ πρὸς ὕβρεως τὰς νουθεσίας λαμβάνων τῷ πάντων οἶεσθαι φρονιμώτατος καὶ σωφρονέστατος ἔτι δὲ ἀνδρειότατος εἶναι καὶ δικαιοτάτος ἤχθαιρε μᾶλλον τῶν ὁμολο-65 γουμένων πολεμίων τοὺς διδάσκοντας. ὑπολαβὼν οὖν καὶ τοῦτον εἶναι παρενόχλημα, τὴν πολλὴν αὐτοῦ ῥύμην τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν ἐφέξοντα, πολλὰ χαί-ρειν φράσας τοῖς δαίμοσι τῆς ἀποθανούσης γυναικός, εἰ πατέρα μὲν ἐκείνης ἑαυτοῦ δὲ γενόμενον πενθερὸν μεταστήσεται, δολοφονεῖ.

66 X. Καὶ τὸ πρᾶγμα ἤδη περιβόητον τοῖς ἐπαλ-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἦν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. τοὺς κηδομένους οἱ τοῦ κηδομένου.

<sup>a</sup> Possibly second, i.e. before that of Macro, which is

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 62-66

been slaughtered Gaius armed himself to deal a third<sup>a</sup> blow of still more grievous treachery. He had for his father-in-law M. Silanus, a man with plenty of fine spirit and of distinguished family. His daughter died early but he continued to pay the same attentions to Gaius and showed him an affection suited not so much to a father-in-law as to an actual father, thinking that by thus converting his son-in-law into a son he would have it reciprocated by the rule of equality. But he little knew how false and deceptive was his expectation. In all his discourse he talked as a guardian, concealing nothing which might tend to improve and benefit Gaius's character, conduct and government. He had, indeed, strong inducements to speak freely in his pre-eminently noble lineage and his close connexion by marriage. For his daughter had died only a short time before ; the rights of her kinsfolk had grown faint but had all but ceased to struggle for breath although some last remnants of their vitality still existed enclosed in their body. But Gaius took his admonitions as an insult since he thought himself the wisest and most temperate of men and also the bravest and justest and hated his instructors more than his avowed enemies. He considered, too, that Silanus was a nuisance, who would obstruct the torrent of his lusts, and, dismissing all thought of his dead wife's ghostly avengers, should he make away with her father, afterwards his own by marriage, he treacherously murdered him.

X. The matter at once gained notoriety by follow- mentioned by Dio and Suetonius at a later point in their narratives. The death of both Tiberius Gemellus and Silanus is fixed as before 24th May 38, by the records of the Arval Brothers, which note the appointment of their successors at that date. See Balsdon, Gaius, pp. 37, 38.

PHILO

- λήλοις τῶν πρώτων ἀνδρῶν φόνοις ἐγεγένητο, ὡς διὰ παντὸς στόματος δυσκάθαρτα ἄγη συνηχέσθαι, φανερώς μὲν οὐ διὰ δέος, ἡρεμαιοτέρα δὲ τῇ φωνῇ.
- 67 κᾶπειτα ἐκ μεταβολῆς—ὄχλος γὰρ ἀνίδρυτον ἐν ἅπασι, καὶ βουλαῖς καὶ λόγοις καὶ πράγμασιν—ἀπιστοῦντες, εἰ οὕτως ἀθρόαν ἐνδέδεται τροπὴν ὁ πρὸ μικροῦ χρηστὸς καὶ φιλάνθρωπος ἴσος τε καὶ κοινωνικὸς εἶναι νομισθεῖς Γάιος, ἀπολογίας ἐσκόπουν καὶ διερευνῶντες εὔρισκον, ἐπὶ μὲν τῷ ἀνεψιῷ καὶ συγκληρονόμῳ τοιαῦτα φάσκοντες·
- 68 “ἀκοινώνητον ἀρχή, θεσμὸς φύσεως ἀκίνητος. οὗτος ἂ παθεῖν ἐμέλλησεν ἂν ὑπ’ ἀδυνατωτέρου προδιέθηκεν ἰσχυρότερος ὢν· ἄμυνα τοῦτ’ ἔστιν, οὐκ ἀνδροφονία. τάχα δὲ καὶ προνοητικῶς ἐπ’ ὠφελείᾳ τοῦ σύμπαντος ἀνθρώπων γένους τὸ μειράκιον ἐκποδῶν γεγένηται, τῶν μὲν τούτῳ τῶν δὲ ἐκείνῳ προσκληρουμένων, ἐξ ὧν ταραχαὶ ἐμφύλιοί τε καὶ ξενικοὶ πόλεμοι συνίστανται. τί δὲ ἄμεινον εἰρήνης; εἰρήνη δὲ ἐξ ἡγεμονίας ὀρθῆς φύεται· ἡγεμονία δὲ ἀφιλόνεικος καὶ ἀνερίθευτος ὀρθῆ μόνη, δι’ ἧς καὶ τᾶλλα πάντα κατορθοῦται.”
- 69 ἐπὶ δὲ Μάκρωνι· “πλέον ἐφυσήθη τοῦ μετρίου· τὸ Δελφικὸν γράμμα οὐ διανέγνω, τὸ ‘γνώθι σαυτόν’· φασὶ δὲ τὴν μὲν ἐπιστήμην εὐδαιμονίας τὴν δὲ ἄγνοιαν κακοδαιμονίας αἰτίαν εἶναι. τί παθῶν ὑπελλάττετο καὶ μετετίθει τὸν μὲν ὑπήκοον αὐτὸν εἰς τάξιν ἄρχοντος, τὸν δὲ αὐτοκράτορα
- [556] Γάιον | εἰς ὑπηκόου χώραν; οἰκειότατον ἡγεμονίαν μὲν τὸ προστάττειν, ὅπερ ἐποίει Μάκρων, ὑπηκόω

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 66-69

ing on the successive murders of the foremost men. And so in every mouth there was common talk about these inexpiable abominations, though quietly and in undertones, since fear prevented open discussion. Then there was a reaction, for a multitude is unstable 67 in everything, intentions, words and deeds. They could not believe that Gaius, who but now had been thought kind and humane, showing fairness and fellowship to all, had undergone at once so complete a change. They began to look for arguments of defence and by close search found them. Of his own cousin and fellow-heir they would talk thus. "Sovereignty cannot be shared, that is an immutable 68 law of nature. He being the stronger promptly did to the weaker what the weaker would have done to him. This is defence, not murder. Perhaps, too, it was providential and for the benefit of all mankind, that the lad was put out of the way, since some would have been partisans of him and others of Gaius, and it is such things that create disturbances and wars both civil and foreign. And what is better than peace? But peace springs from right government. The only right government is that which is free from disputes and factions which also causes everything else to be carried on aright." Of Macro they said, "His pride extended beyond 69 reasonable limits, he did not read well the Delphic motto 'Know thyself.' It is a common saying that knowledge is the source of happiness and ignorance of unhappiness. What reason had he for reversing his part and transferring the subject to the rank of ruler, and Gaius, the emperor, to the place of a subject? To command, which is what he did, befits best the sovereign, and to obey, which is what

PHILO

- δὲ τὸ πειθαρχεῖν, ὅπερ ὑπομένειν ἡξίου Γάιον.”
- 70 ἐκάλουν γὰρ οἱ ἀνεξέταστοι τὴν παραίνεσιν πρόσταξιν καὶ τὸν σύμβουλον ἄρχοντα, ἦτοι μὴ συν-ιέντες ὑπ’ ἀναισθησίας ἢ διὰ κολακείαν τὰς φύσεις τῶν ὀνομάτων ὁμοῦ καὶ πραγμάτων μεταχαράτ-71 τοντες. ἐπὶ δὲ Σιλανῶ· “ χλεύης ἄξιον ὁ Σιλανὸς ἔπαθεν, οἰηθεὶς πενθερὸν τοσοῦτον παρὰ γαμβρῶ δύνασθαι, ὅσον πατέρα γνήσιον παρ’ υἱῶ.
καίτοι πατέρες ἰδιῶται γενομένων ἐν ἀρχαῖς μεγάλαις καὶ ἐξουσίαις υἱῶν ὑποστέλλουσιν, ἀγα-πητῶς φερόμενοι δευτερεία. ὁ δὲ ἡλίθιος, οὐδὲ πενθερὸς ὢν ἔτι, τὰ μὴ καθ’ ἑαυτὸν προσπεριειργάζετο μὴ συνιείς, ὅτι θανάτῳ τῆς θυγατρὸς συνετεθνήκει καὶ ἢ κατ’ ἐπιγαμίαν οἰκειότης· 72 δεσμὸς γὰρ οἴκων ὀθνείων αἰ ἐπιγαμίαι τὴν ἄλλοτριότητα εἰς οἰκειότητα συνάγων, οὗ λυθέντος λέλυται καὶ τὰ τῆς κοινωνίας, καὶ μάλιστα ὅταν ἀνεπανορθῶται πράγματι λυθῆ, τελευτῆ τῆς εἰς 73 ἀλλότριον οἶκον δεδομένης ἐπὶ γάμῳ.” τοιαῦτα ἐν ἅπασιν τοῖς συλλόγοις ἐθρύλουν πλείστον διδόντες μέρος τῷ μὴ βούλεσθαι δοκεῖν ὠμὸν εἶναι τὸν αὐτοκράτορα· χρηστότητα γὰρ καὶ φιланθρωπίαν ἐλπίσαντες ὄσσην παρ’ οὐδενὶ τῶν προτέρων ἐνδρῦ-σθαι τῇ Γαίου ψυχῇ σφόδρα ἄπιστον ἐνόμιζον, εἰ τοσαύτην καὶ οὕτως ἀθρόαν ἐνδέδεκται μεταβολὴν πρὸς τάναντία.
- 74 XI. Κατεργασάμενος οὖν τρεῖς τοὺς εἰρημένους ἄθλους ἐκ τριῶν τῶν ἀναγκαιοτάτων μερῶν, δυοῖν μὲν ἐκ τῆς πατρίδος τοῦ τε βουλευτικοῦ καὶ τοῦ

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 69-74

he deemed Gaius should submit to, befits the subject." For in their thoughtlessness they gave the name of commanding to exhortation and of the ruler to the counsellor, whether they misunderstood the matter through stupidity, or in flattery recast the words and the things signified by them away from their natural use.

Of Silanus, "He was under a ridiculous delusion in thinking that a father-in-law had the same influence over a son-in-law as a real father has over his son, though, indeed, in private life fathers whose sons have obtained high offices and posts of authority waive their claims and are content to take the second place. But this silly man even though he had ceased to be a father-in-law extended his activities beyond his sphere and did not understand that the death of his daughter carried with it the death of the matrimonial affinity. For intermarriage is a lien between unconnected households bringing the status of stranger into one of affinity, and if this be broken the community of interests is broken also, particularly if the break is caused by an irretrievable event, the death of her whose admission to a house not her own rested on her marriage." Such were the ideas on which they dwelt in all their talks, and what principally weighed with them was their wish to think that the emperor was not cruel. For as they had hoped that kindness and humanity were established in his soul in a greater degree than in any of his predecessors they thought it very incredible that he had undergone all at once so complete a change to the reverse.

XI. Gaius had thus won the three contests described above in three vitally important departments. Two of these, the Senate and the Equestrian Order,

PHILO

- τῆς ἵππικῆς τάξεως, τρίτου δὲ τοῦ συγγενικοῦ, καὶ ὑπολαβὼν τῶν ἰσχυροτάτων καὶ δυνατωτάτων 75 περιγεγενημένος καταπληκτικώτατον δέος ἐνεργάσθαι τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν, διὰ μὲν τῆς Σιλιανοῦ σφαγῆς τοῖς βουλευταῖς—ἦν γὰρ οὐδενὸς τῶν ἐν συγκλήτῳ δεύτερος—, διὰ δὲ τῆς Μάκρωνος τοῖς ἵππικοῖς—οἶα γὰρ χοροῦ τινος ἡγεμῶν ἐγεγένητο φερόμενος τὰ πρωτεῖα τιμῆς καὶ εὐδοξίας—, διὰ δὲ τῆς τοῦ ἀνεμιοῦ καὶ συγκληρονόμου τοῖς ἀφ' αἵματος ἅπασιν, οὐκέτι ἡξίου μένειν ἐν τοῖς τῆς ἀνθρωπίνης φύσεως ὄροις, ἀλλ' ὑπερέκυπτε σπου-76 δάζων θεὸς νομίζεσθαι. καὶ ἐν ἀρχῇ ταύτης τῆς παραπληξίας φασὶν αὐτὸν χρήσασθαι τοιοῦτω λογισμῷ· καθάπερ γὰρ οἱ τῶν ἄλλων ζώων ἀγελάρχαι, βουκόλοι καὶ αἰπόλοι καὶ νομεῖς, [557] οὔτε βόες εἰσὶν οὔτε αἶγες οὔτε ἄρνες, ἀλλ' ἄν-θρωποι κρείττονος μοίρας καὶ κατασκευῆς ἐπι-λαχόντες, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον ἀγελαρχοῦντα καμὲ τῆς ἀρίστης ἀνθρώπων γένους ἀγέλης νομιστέον διαφέρειν καὶ μὴ κατ' ἀνθρωπον εἶναι, μείζονος δὲ 77 καὶ θειοτέρας μοίρας τετυχηκέαι. ταύ-την τὴν ὑπόληψιν ἐνσφραγισάμενος τῇ διανοίᾳ περιέφερον ὁ ἡλίθιος ἐν ἑαυτῷ μυθικὸν πλάσμα ὡς ἀψευδεστάτην ἀλήθειαν. καὶ ἐπειδὴ ἅπαξ ἐθρασύνατο καὶ ἀπετόλμησεν εἰς τοὺς πολλοὺς ἐξενεγκεῖν τὴν ἀθεωτάτην ἐκθέωσιν αὐτοῦ, τὰ ἀκόλουθα καὶ συνωδὰ πράττειν ἐπεχειρεῖ καὶ οἶα δι' ἀναβαθμῶν ἐκ τοῦ κατ' ὀλίγον εἰς τὸ ἄνω προῆει.
 78 ἤρχετο γὰρ ἐξομοιοῦν τὸ πρῶτον τοῖς λεγομένοις ἡμιθέοις ἑαυτὸν, Διονύσω καὶ Ἑρακλεῖ καὶ Διοσκκούροις, Τροφώνιον καὶ Ἀμφιάραον καὶ Ἀμφίλοχον καὶ τοὺς ὁμοίους χρηστηρίοις αὐτοῖς καὶ

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 74-78

concerned his relations to his Capital; the third was his family life. So supposing that by his victory over the strongest and most powerful personages he had inspired all the rest with abject fear, the senators by the murder of Silanus who was 75 second to none of the members of that body, the knights by the death of Macro who had become like the leader of a chorus and stood first in honours and reputation among them, and all his blood relations by the death of his cousin and fellow-heir, he no longer considered it worthy of him to abide within the bounds of human nature but overstepped them in his eagerness to be thought a god.

In the 76 first stage of this infatuation he is said to have taken this line of argument. "Those who have charge of the herds of other animals, ox herds, goat herds, shepherds, are not themselves oxen, nor goats nor lambs, but men to whom is given a higher destiny and constitution, and in the same way I who am in charge of the best of herds, mankind, must be considered to be different from them and not of human nature but to have a greater and diviner destiny."

This conception he had firmly sealed 77 in his mind and carried about with him, poor fool, a mythical fiction as if it was an indisputable truth. And when once he had gained courage and was emboldened to publish to the multitude his most godless assumption of godship he tried to make his actions correspond and harmonize with it and gradually as if on stepping-stones advanced to the top.

For he began first of all to 78 liken himself to the so-called demigods, Dionysus and Heracles and the Dioscuri, treating Trophonius and Amphiaraus and Amphiloachus and their like and their

PHILO

- ὀργίοις χλεύην τιθέμενος κατὰ σύγκρισιν τῆς ἰδίας 79 δυνάμεως. εἶθ' ὥσπερ ἐν θεάτρῳ σκευὴν ἄλλοτε ἄλλοίαν ἀνελάμβανε, τοτὲ μὲν λεοντήν καὶ ῥόπαλον, ἀμφοτέρα ἐπίχρυσα, διακοσμούμενος εἰς Ἑρακλέα, τοτὲ δὲ πῖλους ἐπὶ τῆς κεφαλῆς, ὁπότε ἄσκειτο
 εἰς Διοσκούρους· ἔστι δὲ ὅτε κιττῶ καὶ θύρσῳ 80 καὶ νεβρίσιν εἰς Διόνυσον ἠσκέιτο. καὶ ταύτῃ διαφέρειν ἀξιῶν, ὅτι ἐκείνων μὲν ἕκαστος ἰδίας ἔχων τιμὰς οὐ μετεποιεῖτο ὧν ἐκοινωνοῦν ἕτεροι, ὁ δὲ τὰς πάντων ἀθρόων<sup>1</sup> ἐσφετερίζετο φθόνῳ καὶ πλεονεξίᾳ, μᾶλλον δὲ καὶ αὐτοὺς ἐκείνους, οὐκ εἰς Γηρυόνην τὸν τρισώματον μεταβαλὼν, ἵνα τῷ πλήθει παραγάγῃ τοὺς ὀρώντας, ἀλλ', ὁ δὴ παραδοξότατον ἦν, ἐνὸς σώματος οὐσίαν μετασχηματίζων καὶ μεταχαράττων εἰς πολυτρόπους μορ-φάς, Αἰγυπτίου τρόπον Πρωτέως, ὃν εἰσήγαγεν Ὅμηρος μεταβολὰς παντοίας ἐνδεχόμενον εἰς τε τὰ στοιχεῖα καὶ τὰ ἐκ τούτων ζῶα καὶ φυτά.
- 81 Καίτοι τί παρασῆμων ἔδει σοι, Γάιε, οἷς ἔθος ἀσκεῖσθαι<sup>2</sup> τὰ τῶν εἰρημένων ἀφιδρύματα; ἐχρῆν γὰρ ζηλοῦν τὰς ἐκείνων ἀρετάς. Ἑρακλῆς ἐκάθηρε γῆν καὶ θάλατταν ἄθλους ἀναγκαιοτάτους καὶ ὠφελιμωτάτους ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποις ὑποστὰς ἕνεκα τοῦ τὰ βλαβερά καὶ κακωτικὰ φύσεως ἐκατέρας 82 ἀνελεῖν. Διόνυσος ἡμερώσας ἄμπελον καὶ ποτὸν ἐξ αὐτῆς ἀναχέας ἠδιστον ὁμοῦ καὶ ὠφελιμωτάτον ψυχαῖς τε καὶ σώμασι τὰς μὲν ἄγει πρὸς εὐθυμίαν, κακῶν λήθην καὶ ἀγαθῶν ἐλπίδας

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἄθροον.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἀρκεῖσθαι.

<sup>a</sup> According to Dio lix. 26, he also impersonated goddesses: Hera, Aphrodite and Artemis.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 78-82

oracles and celebrations as laughing-stocks compared with his own power. Then, as in a theatre, he assumed 79 different costumes at different times, sometimes the lion skin and club, both overlaid with gold, to adorn himself as Heracles, sometimes caps on his head when he made himself up as the Dioscuri, or again as Dionysus with ivy, thyrsus and fawn's skin.<sup>a</sup>

And he thought it fit to differ from these in that 80 while each of them held to his own honours and did not lay claim to those which were shared by others, he, filled with envy and covetousness, took possession wholesale of the honours of them all, or rather of the deities themselves. He did not convert himself into a triple-bodied Geryon to bewilder the spectators by the multiplication, but performed a feat which could be least expected by remodelling and recasting what was nothing but a single body into manifold forms, like the Egyptian Proteus whom Homer represented as admitting every kind of transfiguration both into the elements and into the animals and plants of which they are the components.<sup>b</sup>

And yet what business had you, Gaius, to take the 81 insignia commonly used to adorn the images of the said deities? For you should have emulated their virtues. Heracles purged the earth and the sea, undergoing trials of endurance most necessary and profitable for all mankind in order to destroy things which are mischievous and baneful to either form of life.

Dionysus cultivated the wild vine and 82 drew pouring from it a drink most delicious and at the same time profitable to souls and bodies. The soul he brings into a state of cheerfulness, creating oblivion <sup>b</sup> See Od. iv. 454 ff. Cf. Ebr. 36.

PHILO

- ἐνεργαζόμενος, τὰ δὲ σώματα ὑγιεινότερα καὶ κρα-83 ταιότερα καὶ εὐκινήτοτερα παρασκευάζει· καὶ ἰδίᾳ τε ἕκαστον ἀνθρώπων<sup>1</sup> βελτίονα ποιεῖ καὶ πολυἀνθρώπους οἰκίας καὶ συγγενείας ἐξ αὐχμηροῦ καὶ ἐπιπόνου βίου μεθαρμόζεται πρὸς ἀνειμένης
 σχῆμα καὶ ἰλαρᾶς διαίτης καὶ πάσαις πόλεσιν | [558] Ἑλληνικαῖς τε καὶ βαρβαρικαῖς εὐωχίας, εὐφρο-σύνας, θαλίας, ἑορτὰς ἐπαλλήλους παρέχει· πάντων γὰρ τῶν λεχθέντων αἴτιος ἄκρατος.
- 84 πάλιν Διοσκούρους λόγος ἔχει κοινώσασθαι τὴν ἀθανασίαν. ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ὁ μὲν θνητὸς ὁ δὲ ἀθάνατος ἦν, οὐκ ἔδικαίωσεν ὁ τῆς κρείττονος μοίρας ἀξιοθεῖς φιλαυτῆσαι μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς τὸν ἀδελφὸν εὐνοίαν 85 ἐπιδείξασθαι. φαντασιωθεῖς γὰρ τὸν ἄπειρον αἰῶνα καὶ λογισάμενος, ὅτι αὐτὸς μὲν αἰεὶ βιώσεται, ὁ δὲ ἀδελφὸς αἰεὶ τεθνήξεται, καὶ μετὰ τῆς ἀθανασίας ἀθάνατον τὸ ἐπ' ἐκείνῳ πένθος ἀναδέξεται, θαυμαστὴν ἐμεγαλουργήσεν ἀντίδοσιν ἀνακερασά-μενος αὐτῷ μὲν τὸ θνητόν, τῷ δὲ ἀδελφῷ τὸ ἄφθαρτον, καὶ ἀνισότητα, τὴν ἀδικίας ἀρχὴν, ἐνηφάνισεν<sup>2</sup> ἰσότητι, ἣτις ἐστὶ πηγὴ δικαιοσύνης.
- 86 XII. Οὗτοι πάντες, ὦ Γαίε, διὰ τὰς ὑπηρεγμένας εὐεργεσίας ἐθαυμάσθησαν καὶ ἔτι νῦν θαυμάζονται καὶ σεβασμοῦ τε καὶ τῶν ἀνωτάτω τιμῶν ἠξιώ-θησαν. εἰπέ δὴ καὶ αὐτὸς ἡμῖν, ἐπὶ τίνι γαυριᾶς 87 καὶ πεφύσησαι τῶν παραπλησίων; ἐμιμήσω τοὺς Διοσκούρους εἰς φιλαδελφίαν; ἵνα ἐντεῦθεν ἄρξωμαι. τὸν μὲν ἀδελφὸν καὶ συγκληρονόμον ἐν ἀκμῇ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. αὐτῶν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἐνεκαίνεσεν or ἀνεκοίνωσεν.

° Philo has alluded to the story of the Dioscuri, De Som. i.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 82-87

of evils and hopes of good, while he renders the body healthier and stronger and more agile. In private life 83 he improves each person and converts large households and families from a squalid and toilsome existence to a free and gay mode of living, and for all cities Greek and barbarian he provides a constant succession of banquets, merrymakings, galas, festivals. For all these owe their existence to Dionysus. Again, 84

the Dioscuri<sup>a</sup> are said to have shared the immortality between them, for since one of them was mortal and the other immortal he who had been judged worthy of the higher destiny did not think it fit to gratify his selfish instinct instead of showing affection to his brother. For having before his eyes the endless ages 85 and reflecting that while he lived for ever his brother would be dead for ever and his mourning for him would be as everlasting as his own existence, he achieved a great and marvellous reciprocation in that he mingled mortality with his own lot and indestructibility with his brother's, and thus made inequality, the source of injustice, vanish in equality, which is the fountain of justice.

XII. All these, Gaius, received and still receive 86 admiration for the benefits for which we are beholden to them<sup>b</sup> and were judged worthy of worship and the highest honours. Tell me yourself what deeds like these have you to make you so boastful and puffed with pride. To begin with the Dioscuri. Did you 87 imitate them in brotherly love? Your brother and 150 and De Dec. 56. Here he takes the version of the legend in which Castor the mortal was actually killed and then Pollux renounced half his immortality to him.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. benefits in which they took the initiative and not in return for anything which we had done. For this use of ὑπάρχω see Lexicon.

PHILO

τῆς πρώτης ἡλικίας, ὡ σιδήρειε καὶ ἀνηλεέστατε, ὡμῶς ἀπέσφαξας, τὰς <δ'> ἀδελφὰς ὕστερον ἐφυ-γάδευσας· μὴ καὶ αὐταὶ τὸν περὶ ἀφαιρέσεως 88 ἀρχῆς φόβον εἰργάζοντό σοι; ἐμμήσω Διόνυσον; εὐρετῆς καινῶν γέγονας χαρίτων ὡς ἐκείνος; εὐφροσύνης κατέπλησας τὴν οἰκουμένην;
 Ἀσία καὶ Εὐρώπη τὰς ἐκ σοῦ γεγενημένας δωρεὰς 89 οὐ χωρεῖ; καινὰς μὲν οὖν τέχνας καὶ ἐπιστήμας ἀνεύρες ὡς κοινὸς λυμεὼν καὶ παλαμναῖος, αἷς μεταβάλλεις τὰ ἡδέα καὶ χαρτὰ πρὸς ἀηδίας καὶ λύπας καὶ ἀβίωτον βίον τοῖς πανταχοῦ πᾶσι, τὰ μὲν παρ' ἑτέροις ἀγαθὰ καὶ καλὰ πάντα σφετεριζόμενος ἀπλήστοις καὶ ἀκορέστοις ταῖς ἐπιθυμίαις, τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐψῶν, τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐσπερίων, τὰ ἀπὸ τῶν ἄλλων τοῦ παντὸς κλιμάτων, εἴ τινα ἢ κατὰ μεσημβρίαν ἢ πρὸς ἄρκτον, τὰ δὲ ἀπὸ τῆς σαυτοῦ πικρίας καὶ ὅσα ταῖς ἐπαράτοις καὶ ἰοβόλοις ψυχαῖς γεννᾶν ἔθος βλαβερὰ καὶ ἐπιζήμια ἀντιδιδοὺς καὶ ἀντιπέμπων· διὰ ταῦτα ὁ νέος Διόνυσος 90 ἡμῖν ἀνεφάνης; ἀλλὰ καὶ Ἑρακλέα ἐζή-λωσας τοῖς ἀκαμάτοις σαυτοῦ πόνοις καὶ ταῖς ἀτρύτοις ἀνδραγαθίαις, εὐνομίας καὶ εὐδικίας εὐ-θηνίας<sup>1</sup> τε καὶ εὐετηρίας καὶ τῆς τῶν ἄλλων ἀγαθῶν ἀφθονίας, ὧν ἡ βαθεῖα εἰρήνη δημιουργός, ἀνα-πλήσας ἠπείρους τε καὶ νήσους, ὁ ἀγεννέστατος, ὁ δειλίας μεστός, ὁ τῶν μὲν εἰς εὐστάθειαν καὶ εὐδαιμονίαν ἀπάντων κενώσας τὰς πόλεις, μεστὰς
 [559] δὲ τῶν | εἰς ταραχὰς καὶ θορύβους καὶ τὴν
 91 ἀνωτάτω βαρυδαιμονίαν ἀναφήνας; ἐπὶ δὲ ταῖς

<sup>1</sup> MSS. εὐσθενείας.

<sup>a</sup> For an account of the banishment by Gaius of his sisters

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 87-91

fellow-heir you, iron-hearted and utterly ruthless, cruelly slew in the flower of his prime. Your sisters you afterwards sent into exile.<sup>a</sup> Did they too give you cause to fear that they might rob you of your throne? Did you imitate Dionysus? 88

Have you become an inventor of new bounties as he was? Did you fill the inhabited world with joyfulness? Are the gifts bestowed by you more than Asia and Europe can contain? Rather the novel 89 arts and sciences, which you as the author of general ruin and destruction discovered, were such that with them you changed what gave pleasure and joy into discomfort and grief and a life which all men everywhere find unworthy of the name. And so insatiable and quenchless were your lusts that you stole all that was good and valuable whether from the east or the west or from all other regions of the world southwards or northwards, and in return you gave and sent them the fruits of your own bitterness and all things mischievous and hurtful that abominable and venomous souls are wont to generate. Was it these which revealed you to us as the new Dionysus?

Or did you also emulate Heracles in your unwearied 90 labours, your tireless feats of courage? Did you fill continents and islands with legality and justice, with fertility and prosperity and a lavish supply of the other boons which peace deep-founded creates?—you the utterly ignoble, brimful of cowardice, who stripped the cities of all that tends to well-being and happiness and turned them into hotbeds of what makes for confusion and tumults and the height of misery. Is it because of the great harvests of your 91

Agrippina and Livilla to the Pontian islands on the charge of adultery and conspiracy see Suet. Gaius 24 and Dio lix. 22. 8.

PHILO

- τοσαύταις φοραῖς, ὥς ἤνεγκας ἐπ' ὀλέθρῳ, εἰπέ μοι, Γάιε, ζητεῖς ἀθανασίας μεταλαχεῖν, ἵνα μὴ ὀλιγοχρονίους καὶ ἑφημέρους ἀλλὰ ἀθανάτους ἀπεργάσῃ συμφοράς; ἐγὼ δὲ νομίζω τοῦναντίον, εἰ καὶ τις ἔδοξας γεγενῆσθαι θεός, πάντως ἂν σε μεταβαλεῖν ἔνεκα τῶν πονηρῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων εἰς θνητὴν φύσιν· εἰ γὰρ ἀθανατίζουσιν ἀρεταί, πάντως
- 92 φθείρουσι κακίαι. μήτε οὖν ἐν Διοσκουροῖς γράφου τοῖς φιλαδελφοτάτοις, ὁ σφαγεὺς καὶ λυμεὼν τῶν ἀδελφῶν γεγονώς, μήτε Ἡρακλέους ἢ Διονύσου τιμῆς<sup>1</sup> κοινοπράγει τῶν τὸν βίον ὀνησάντων, ὁ κακωτῆς καὶ διαφθορεὺς ὧν ἔδρασαν ἐκεῖνοι.
- 93 XIII. Τοσαύτη δέ τις περὶ αὐτὸν ἦν λύττα καὶ παράφορος καὶ παράκοπος μανία, ὥστε καὶ τοὺς ἡμιθέους ὑπερβὰς ἐπανήει καὶ ἐπαπεδύετο τοῖς τῶν μειζόνων καὶ ἀμφιβαλῶν εἶναι δοκούντων σεβα-
- 94 σμοῖς Ἑρμοῦ καὶ Ἀπόλλωνος καὶ Ἄρεως. Ἑρμοῦ τὸ πρῶτον, κηρυκείοις καὶ πεδίλοις καὶ χλαμύσιν ἐνσκευαζόμενος τάξιν τε ἐν ἀταξίᾳ καὶ τὸ ἀκόλουθον ἐν συγχύσει καὶ λογισμὸν ἐν φρενοβλαβείᾳ
- 95 παρεπιδεικνύμενος· εἶτα, ὁπότε δόξειεν αὐτῷ, τὰ μὲν ἀπετίθετο, εἰς δὲ Ἀπόλλωνα μετεμορφοῦτο καὶ μετεσκευάζετο, στεφάνοις μὲν ἀκτινοειδέσει τὴν κεφαλὴν ἀναδούμενος, τόξον δὲ τῆ εὐωνύμῳ καὶ μέλη κρατῶν χειρὶ, χάριτας δὲ τῆ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. τιμαῖς.

<sup>a</sup> Heracles, Dionysus and the Dioscuri all had mortal mothers. See note on ἀμφιβαλῆς Quod Omn. Prob. 20 (vol. ix. p. 510).

<sup>b</sup> Cf. Pausanias ix. 35. 3 Ἀγγελίων τε καὶ Τεκταῖος οἱ γε Διονύσου τὸν Ἀπόλλωνα ἐργαζόμενοι τοῖς Δηλίοις τρεῖς ἐποίησαν raising, Gaius, whose fruit is destruction, that you seek to partake of immortality so that you may produce calamities not short-lived nor ephemeral but everlasting? I think that on the contrary even if it appeared that you were one of the gods your evil practices would have caused you to change into the mortal kind of existence, for if virtues give immortality, vices certainly bring destruction. So then <sup>92</sup> you must not rank with the Dioscuri, those best of brothers, you who dealt murder and perdition to your brother, nor share the honour of Heracles or Dionysus who benefited the life of man, you who wrought havoc and corruption in what they had achieved.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 91-95

XIII. So great a frenzy possessed him, so wild and <sup>93</sup> delirious an insanity that leaving the demigods below he proceeded to advance upwards and armed himself to attack the honours paid by their worshippers to the deities held to be greater and divine on both sides,<sup>a</sup> Hermes, Apollo and Ares. To take Hermes first, <sup>94</sup> he arrayed himself with herald's staffs, sandals and mantles, a grotesque exhibition of order in disorder, consistency in confusion, reason in derangement.

Then when it pleased him he <sup>95</sup> would strip them off and change his figure and dress into Apollo's, his head encircled with garlands of the sun-rays, wielding a bow and arrows in his left hand and holding out Graces <sup>b</sup> in his right to signify

ἐπὶ τῇ χειρὶ αὐτοῦ Χάριτας. Pausanias says nothing of the right hand and Plutarch, De Musica 16, says that the Graces were carried in the left hand, and the bow in the right. But coins believed to be copied from the Delian Apollo at Athens, which itself was a copy of the statue at Delos mentioned by Pausanias, bear out Philo's statement. See Frazer on Pausanias l.c.

PHILO

δεξιᾶ προτείων, ὡς δέον τὰ μὲν ἀγαθὰ ὀρέγειν ἐξ ἑτοίμου καὶ τετάχθαι τὴν βελτίονα τάξιν τὴν ἐπὶ δεξιᾶ, τὰς δὲ κολάσεις ὑποστέλλειν καὶ τὴν καταδεεστέραν χώραν κεκληρῶσθαι τὴν ἐπ' εὐώνυμα.

96 χοροὶ τε εὐθύς εἰσθήκεσαν συγκεκροτημένοι, παιᾶνας εἰς αὐτὸν ᾄδοντες, οἱ πρὸ μικροῦ Βάκχον καὶ Εὐήμιον καὶ Λυαῖον ὀνομάζοντες καὶ ὕμνοις γεραίροντες, ἥνίκα τὴν Διονυσιακὴν ἀνελάμβανε σκευήν.

97 πολλάκις δὲ καὶ θώρακα ἐνδύομενος ξιφῆρης προΐει μετὰ κράνουσ καὶ ἀσπίδος, Ἄρης ἀνακαλούμενος· καὶ παρ' ἑκάτερα οἱ Ἄρεως τοῦ καινοῦ [καὶ νέου] θεραπευταὶ συμπροΐεσαν, ἀνδροφόνων καὶ δημοκοίνων θίασος, ὑπηρετήσοντες κακὰς ὑπηρεσίας φονῶντι καὶ διψῶντι ἀνθρωπείου

98 αἵματος. εἶτα τοῖς ταῦτα ὀρώσι κατάπληξις ἦν ἐπὶ τῷ παραλόγῳ, καὶ ἐθαύμαζον, πῶς ὁ τάναντία δρῶν οἷς ἰσότημος εἶναι προαιρεῖται τὰς μὲν ἀρετὰς αὐτῶν ἐπιτηδεύειν οὐκ ἀξιοῖ, τοῖς δὲ παρασήμοις εἰς ἕκαστον σκευάζεται. καίτοι τὰ περίαπτα ταῦτα καὶ προκοσμήματα ξοάνοις καὶ ἀγάλμασι προσκαθίδρυται, διὰ συμβόλων μηνύοντα

[560] τὰς ὠφελείας, | ἃς παρέχονται τῷ γένει τῶν ἀν-

99 θρώπων οἱ τιμώμενοι. πέδιλα Ἑρμῆς ὑποδεῖται πτερῶν ταρσοὺς ἔχοντα· διὰ τί; ἄρα οὐχ ὅτι προσήκει τὸν ἑρμηνέα καὶ προφήτην τῶν θεῶν, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ Ἑρμῆς ὠνόμασται, τὰ ἀγαθὰ διαγγέλλοντα—κακοῦ γὰρ οὐχ ὅτι θεὸς ἀλλ' οὐδὲ σοφὸς ἀνὴρ γίνεται μηνυτής—ποδωκέστατόν τε εἶναι καὶ μόνον οὐ πτηνὸν φέρεσθαι διὰ σπουδῆν ἀνυπέρεθον; ἐπειδὴ τὰ λυσιτελεῖ φθάνοντας εὐαγγελίζεσθαι προσήκει, καθάπερ τὰ παλίμφημα μέλλοντας,

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 95-99

that it was fitting for him to extend good things readily and that these should hold the superior position on the right, while punishment should be kept in the background and allotted the inferior place on the left. And at once at his side singing paeans to him stood drilled choirs of those who but now were calling him Bacchus or Evius or Lyaeus and honouring him with hymns when he was assuming the garb of Dionysus. 96

Often too he would don a breastplate and proceed sword in hand, with helmet and shield, hailed as Ares, and on either side went a procession of the worshippers of the new Ares composed of homicides and official cut-throats to render their base service to a master avid for slaughter and thirsting for human blood. 97

Then those who saw these things were struck with amazement at the strange contradiction, marvelling how one, whose actions were the opposite of those whose honours he purposed to share as their equal, did not think fit to practise their virtues and yet at the same time invested himself with their insignia each in turn. Yet surely these trappings and ornaments are set as accessories on images and statues as symbolically indicating the benefits which those thus honoured provide for the human race. Hermes is shod with sandals like outstretched wings, why? Is it not because it befits the interpreter (ἑρμηνεύς) and spokesman of things divine, whence also he gets his name of Hermes, that when he is the harbinger of good, since not even a wise man, much less a god, makes himself the announcer of evil, he should be very swift-footed, travelling with well-nigh the speed of wings in the zeal which brooks no delay. The news of things profitable should be carried quickly, bad news slowly if it is not permitted to 98

PHILO

- 100 εἰ μὴ ἐπιτρέποι τις αὐτὰ ἡσυχάζεσθαι. πάλιν κηρύκειον ἀναλαμβάνει δείγμα συμβατηρίων σπονδῶν· πόλεμοι γὰρ ἀνοχὰς καὶ διαλύσεις λαμβάνουσι διὰ κηρύκων εἰρήνην καθισταμένων· οἱ δὲ ἀκήρυκτοι συμφορὰς ἀτελευτήτους ἀπεργάζονται καὶ
- 101 τοῖς ἐπιφέρουσι καὶ τοῖς ἀμυνομένοις. Γάιος δὲ πρὸς τίνα χρεῖαν πέδιλα ἀνελάμβανεν; ἢ ἵνα τὰ δύσφημα καὶ δυσώνυμα, δέον ἡσυχάζεσθαι, βοηδρομηταὶ τάχει συντόνω πάντη συνηχοῦντα; καίτοι τί κινήσεως ἐπεσπυευμένης ἔδει; μένων γὰρ κακὰ ἐπὶ κακοῖς ἀμύθητα ὥσπερ ἐξ ἀενάων πηγῶν εἰς
- 102 ἅπαντα τὰ μέρη τῆς οἰκουμένης ὤμβρει. τί δὲ δεῖ κηρυκείου τῷ μηδὲν εἰρηναῖόν ποτε μήτε εἰπόντι μήτε δράσαντι, πᾶσαν δὲ οἰκίαν καὶ πόλιν ἐμφυλίων ἀναπλήσαντι πολέμων κατὰ τε τὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ βάρβαρον; ἀποθέσθω δὴ τὸν Ἑρμῆν ἀφοσιωσάμενος τὴν ἀνοίκειον κλήσιν, ὁ ψευδώνυμος.
- 103 XIV. τί δὲ τῶν Ἀπολλωνιακῶν ἐμφερές ἐστι παρ' αὐτῷ; στέφανον ἀκτινωτὸν φορεῖ, εὖ πως ἀπομαξαμένου τὰς ἡλιακὰς ἀκτῖνας τοῦ τεχνίτου. ἐκείνῳ δὲ ἥλιος ἢ φῶς συνόλως ἀσπαστόν ἐστιν, ἀλλ' οὐχὶ νύξ (καὶ σκότος) καὶ εἴ τι σκότους ἀφεγγέστερον εἰς τὴν τῶν ἐκνόμων ἔργων διάθεσιν; ἐπειδὴ τὰ μὲν καλὰ περιανγείας μεσημβρινῆς δεῖται πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν, τὰ δὲ αἰσχρά φασιν ἐσχατιᾶς Ταρτάρου, εἰς ὃν ἄξιον συνωθεῖσθαι δεόντως ἐπι
- 104 κρυφθησόμενα. μεταθέτω καὶ τὰ ἐν ἑκατέρᾳ χειρὶ

---

<sup>a</sup> He is alluding to the way in which ἀκήρυκτος comes to be applied to any truceless or exceptionally bitter conflict, with no thought whether heralds can enter it or not. Cf.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 99-104

leave it untold. Again Hermes assumes the herald's 100 staff as an emblem of covenants of reconciliation, for wars come to be suspended or ended through heralds establishing peace; wars where no heralds are admitted<sup>a</sup> create endless calamities both for the assailants and the defenders. But for what useful 101 purpose did Gaius assume the sandals? Was it that everything of ill report and evil name, instead of being buried in silence, as it should be, might be noised abroad with impetuous speed and resound on every side? And yet what need was there for this activity in locomotion? Standing where he was, he rained miseries untold one after the other as from perennial fountains on every part of the inhabited world. And what need of the herald-staff had he 102 whose every word and deed was not for peace but filled every house and city throughout Greece and the outside world with intestine wars! No, let him shed Hermes, let him purge himself of his lying claim to a title so ill-fitting, the impostor! XIV. As 103 for the appurtenances of Apollo, what is there like them in Gaius? Apollo wears a crown adorned with rays, for the craftsman has managed to make a good copy of the rays of the sun, but was the sun or light in any form welcome to Gaius and not rather night and darkness or anything more rayless than darkness for disposing his lawless actions, since things noble and beautiful need the full brightness of noonday to show them forth, but the base and ugly need as they say deepest Tartarus into which they should be thrown to lie in the concealment which they deserve? Let him also transpose what he holds in either hand 104 § 119. The play upon words involved cannot be reproduced in English.

PHILO

καὶ μὴ κιβδηλευέτω τὴν τάξιν. τὰ μὲν βέλη καὶ τοῖχα τῇ δεξιᾷ προφερέτω· βάλλειν γὰρ καὶ τοξεύειν εὐσκόπως οἶδεν ἄνδρας, γυναῖκας, συγγενείας ὄλας, 105 εὐανδρούσας πόλεις, ἐπ' ὀλέθρῳ παντελεῖ. τὰς δὲ χάριτας ἢ ῥυψάτω θάπτον ἢ τῇ εὐωνύμῳ συσκιαζέτω· τὸ γὰρ κάλλος ἤσχυεν αὐτῶν, προσοφθαλμιῶν καὶ προσκεχηγνῶς ταῖς μεγάλαις οὐσίαις εἰς ἀρπαγὰς ἀδίκους, αἷς ἐπικατεσφάττοντο οἱ δεσπότες τῆς εὐτυχίας ἔνεκα κακοδαιμονοῦντες.

106 ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν ἰατρικὴν Ἀπόλλωνος εὖ πως μετεχάραξεν. ὁ μὲν γὰρ σωτηρίων φαρμάκων εὐρετῆς ἐγένετο πρὸς ὑγίαν ἀνθρώπων, ἀξιῶν καὶ τὰς ὑφ' ἐτέρων ἐγγινομένας νόσους αὐτὸς ἰᾶσθαι διὰ τὴν ἐκ φύσεως καὶ ἐπιτηδεύσεως ὑπερβάλλουσαν |
 [561] ἡμερότητα. ὁ δὲ ἔμπαλιν νόσους μὲν τοῖς ὑγιαίνουσι, πηρώσεις δὲ τοῖς ὀλοκλήροις, καὶ συνόλως
 107 θανάτους τοῖς ζῶσι χειροποιήτους πρὸ τοῦ μοιριδίου χαλεποὺς ἐπέφερε, πάντα τὰ φθοροποιὰ χορηγίαις ἀφθόνοις παρεσκευασμένος, οἷς, εἰ μὴ ἔφθασε προαναιρεθεῖς ὑπὸ τῆς δίκης [χρήσασθαι], κὰν τὸ
 108 ἐν ἐκάστη πόλει δοκιμώτατον ἤδη διέφθαρτο. πρὸς τοὺς γὰρ ἐν τέλει καὶ πλουσίους εὐτρεπεῖς ἦσαν αἱ παρασκευαί, καὶ μάλιστα τοὺς ἐν Ῥώμῃ καὶ τῇ ἄλλῃ Ἰταλίᾳ, παρ' οἷς ἄργυρος καὶ χρυσὸς τεθησαύριστα τοσοῦτος, ὥστε, εἰ σύμπας ὁ ἐξ ἀπάσης τῆς ἄλλης οἰκουμένης ἀπὸ περάτων αὐτῶν συνενεχθείη, πολλῶ καταδεέστερος ἂν εὐρεθῆναι. διὰ τοῦτο ἀπὸ τῆς πατρίδος ὥσπερ ἀφ' ἱερᾶς

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "he began from the sacred line." See § 22, pp. 12-15.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 104-108

and not falsify the arrangement; let him carry the bow and arrows in his right hand, for he knows how to use them both with a true aim against men and women, against whole families, against populous cities to bring them to utter perdition. But the 105 Graces he should either cast quickly away or carry them shaded in his left hand. For he put their beauty to shame when he fixed his greedy eyes and gaping mouth on great estates to work the unjust robberies which were crowned with the slaughter of their owners, whose prosperity was the cause of their miserable end.

He also managed to make 106 a fine recasting of Apollo's art of medicine. For Apollo became the inventor of salutary remedies promoting the health of mankind, deigning also to heal himself the maladies engendered by the actions of others in virtue of the supreme kindness which nature and practice gave him. Gaius on the other 107 hand brought disease to the healthy, crippling to the sound of limb and in general death to the living, death in cruel forms, the work of men anticipating that of fate. Every instrument of destruction he had provided with unstinted liberality whereby, had not his death at the hands of justice forestalled his use of them, all the most highly reputed part of the community in every city would already have perished. For he had all his arrangements ready to deal with 108 the magnates and the rich, particularly those in Rome and the rest of Italy, in whose possession there lay treasured such a great amount of gold and silver that if all contained in all the rest of the inhabited world from its very boundaries was gathered together it would be found to fall far short of it. And therefore<sup>a</sup> with utter recklessness, he proceeded to cast

PHILO

- ἤρχετο τὰ σπέρματα τῆς εἰρήνης ἀπορρίπτειν,<sup>1</sup> ὁ 109 μισόπολις, ὁ δημοβόρος, ἡ λύμη, τὸ φθοροποιὸν λέγεται μὴ μόνον ἰατρός ἀλλὰ καὶ μάντις ἀγαθὸς Ἀπόλλων εἶναι, χρησμοῖς προ-λέγων τὰ μέλλοντα πρὸς ὠφέλειαν ἀνθρώπων, ἵνα μὴ τις ἐπισκιασθεῖς αὐτῶν<sup>2</sup> περὶ τὸ ἄδηλον ἀπροοράτως καθάπερ τυφλὸς τοῖς ἀβουλήτοις ὡς λυσι-τελεστάτοις ἐπιτρέχων ἐπεμπίπτῃ, προμαθῶν δὲ τὸ μέλλον ὡς ἤδη παρὸν καὶ βλέπων αὐτὸ τῇ 110 διανοίᾳ οὐχ ἦττον ἢ τὰ ἐν χερσὶν ὀφθαλμοῖς σώ-ματος φυλάττηται, προνοούμενος τοῦ μηδὲν ἀνή-κεστον παθεῖν. ἄρα ἄξιον τούτοις ἀντιθεῖναι τὰ παλίμφημα Γαῖου λόγια, δι' ὧν πενίαι καὶ ἀτιμῖαι καὶ φυγαὶ καὶ θάνατοι προεμηνύοντο τοῖς πανταχοῦ τῶν ἐν τέλει καὶ δυνατῶν; τίς οὖν κοινωνία πρὸς Ἀπόλλωνα τῷ μηδὲν οἰκείον ἢ συγγενὲς ἐπιτετηδευκότι; πεπαύσθω καὶ ὁ ψευδώνυμος Παιᾶν τὸν ἀληθῆ Παιᾶνα μιμούμενος· οὐ γὰρ ὡσπερ τὸ νόμισμα παράκομμα καὶ θεοῦ μορφὴ γίνεται.
 111 XV. πάντα γε μὴν ἐλπίσειεν ἂν τις ἄλλου) ἢ τοιοῦτον σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν, ἄμφω μαλακὰ καὶ κατεαγότα, τῇ περὶ ἑκάτερον Ἄρεως ἀλκῇ δυνηθῆναι ποτε ἐξομοιωθῆναι· ὁ δὲ ὡσπερ ἐπὶ σκηνῆς ἐναλλάττων πολυειδῆ προσωπεῖα φαντα-112 σίαις ψευδέσιν ἡπάτα τοὺς ὄρωντας. φέρε δ' οὖν, μηδὲν τῶν περὶ σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν ἐξεταζέσθω<sup>3</sup> διὰ τὴν ἐν πάσαις σχέσεσι καὶ κινήσεσι ἀλλοτριότητα

<sup>1</sup> ? ἀπορρίπτων.

<sup>2</sup> mss. τῶν. Perhaps, as Mangey and others, to be expunged. <sup>3</sup> mss. ἐξετάζεσθαι.

<sup>a</sup> ἐπεμπίπτειν may mean to fall upon (and seize). But that they "come a cropper" is suggested by the conclusion

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 108-112

away the seeds of peace from his homeland, city-hater, people-devourer, scourge and baleful pest.

Apollo is said to be not only a physician <sup>109</sup> but a good prophet, foretelling by his oracles the future for the benefit of men, lest any of them too beclouded to discern its uncertainties should, with no more foresight than the blind, expect high profit from what prove to be things he little welcomes when he races to them only to stumble and fall upon them,<sup>a</sup> but with foreknowledge of the future as though it were now present and seeing it with his mind as clearly as he sees what lies before him with the eyes of his body, protect and secure himself against any fatal disaster. Can we rightly <sup>110</sup> place beside these those ominous pronouncements of Gaius by which the coming poverty, disfranchisement, exile, death were announced to the highly-placed and powerful everywhere? What fellowship then with Apollo has he whose conduct never showed any affinity or kinship? Falsely does he call himself Paeon, let him cease once for all to mimic the true Paeon, for a divine form cannot be counterfeited as a coin can be. XV. And <sup>111</sup> surely the last thing one would expect is that such a body and soul as his, both of them feeble and nerveless, could ever be assimilated to the prowess of Ares in both. Yet like an actor wearing in turn many kinds of masks he beguiled the spectators with the deceptive appearances he assumed. Well, one need <sup>112</sup> not examine his characteristics of body and soul, since his every posture and movement showed the of the very similar passage Spec. Leg. iii. 79 ἀπερισκέπτως καὶ ἀπροοράτως σώμασιν ὁμοῖ καὶ πράγμασιν ἐπεμπίπτοντες τυφλῶν τρόπον . . . οὐκ ἐλάττω ὧν διατιθέασι πάσχουσι.

PHILO

- πρὸς τὸν εἰρημένον δαίμονα· τὴν Ἄρεως οὖν, οὐχὶ τοῦ μεμυθευμένου, τοῦ δὲ ἐν τῇ φύσει λόγου, ὃν ἀνδρεία κεκλήρωται, δύναμιν οὐκ ἴσμεν ἀλεξίκακον οὔσαν καὶ βοηθὸν καὶ παραστάτιν ἀδικουμένων, ὡς
- 113 καὶ αὐτό που δηλοῖ τοῦνομα; παρὰ γὰρ τὸ ἀρήγειν, ὅπερ βοηθεῖν ἐστὶ, κατὰ γλῶτταν Ἄρης ὠνομάσθαι μοι δοκεῖ, καθαιρετικὸς πολέμων, δημιουργὸς εἰρήνης, ἧς ἐχθρὸς μὲν ἦν ἕτερος, ἑταῖρος<sup>1</sup> δὲ πολέμων, τὴν εὐστάθειαν εἰς ταραχὰς καὶ
- [562] στάσεις μεθαρμοζόμενος.
- 114 XVI. | Ἄρα γε ἤδη μεμαθήκαμεν ἐκ τούτων, ὅτι οὐδενὶ θεῶν ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ἡμιθέων ἐξομοιοῦσθαι δεῖ Γάιον, μήτε φύσεως μήτε οὐσίας ἀλλὰ μηδὲ προαιρέσεως τετυχηκότα τῆς αὐτῆς; τυφλὸν δέ, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἡ ἐπιθυμία, καὶ μάλισθ' ὅταν προσλάβῃ κενοδοξίαν ὁμοῦ καὶ φιλονεικίαν μετὰ τῆς μεγίστης ἐξουσίας, ὑφ' ἧς ἡμεῖς οἱ πρότερον εὐτυχεῖς<sup>2</sup> ἐπορεύμεθα.
- 115 μόνους γὰρ Ἰουδαίους ὑπεβλέπετο, ὡς δὴ μόνους τάναντία προηρημένους καὶ δεδιδαγμένους ἐξ αὐτῶν τρόπον τινὰ σπαργάνων ὑπὸ γονέων καὶ παιδαγωγῶν καὶ ὑφηγητῶν καὶ πολὺ πρότερον τῶν ἱερῶν νόμων καὶ ἔτι τῶν ἀγράφων ἔθῶν ἕνα νομίζειν τὸν πατέρα καὶ ποιητὴν τοῦ
- 116 κόσμου θεόν. οἱ μὲν γὰρ ἄλλοι πάντες, ἄνδρες, γυναῖκες, πόλεις, ἔθνη, χῶραι, κλίματα γῆς, ὀλίγου

<sup>1</sup> Some mss. omit ἕτερος, others ἑταῖρος.

<sup>2</sup> mss. ἀτυχεῖς.

---

<sup>a</sup> i.e. the Ares which belongs to the order of things which is governed not by μῦθος but by λόγος, and is the deity whose special province among the virtues is, ἀνδρεία. How Mangey difference which divided him from the deity in question. Surely we know the power of Ares, not the Ares of mythology, but the Ares of the realm of reason whom courage has taken for its own.<sup>a</sup> That power is a defence from evil, the helper and champion of the wronged as its very name declares. For 113 under the name of Ares I think is disguised ἀρήγω, that is "help." That Ares is the destroyer of wars, the creator of peace. This other<sup>b</sup> was the foe of peace, the friend of wars, the converter of stability into turmoil and faction.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 112-116

XVI. Need we more than these proofs to teach us 114 that Gaius has no right to be likened to any of the gods or demigods either, for his nature, his substance, his purpose in life, is different from theirs? But passion we see to be a blind thing, particularly when it is reinforced by vanity and ambition, combined with possession of the supreme dominion which made havoc of our former prosperity. For he looked with 115 disfavour on the Jews alone because they alone opposed him on principle, trained as they were we may say even from the cradle, by parents and tutors and instructors and by the far higher authority<sup>c</sup> of the sacred laws and also the unwritten customs, to acknowledge one God who is the Father and Maker of the world. For all others, men, women, cities, nations, 116 countries, regions of the earth, I might almost say understood the words is not clear from his translation "(Martis) eius per quem naturalem fortitudinem intellegimus."

<sup>b</sup> The imperfect shows that the "other" is Gaius rather than the Ares of mythology, though Philo may perhaps mean to equate the two in their vices.

<sup>c</sup> So rather than "long before." For probable examples of this meaning of the phrase see note on Flaccus 10.

PHILO

- δέω φάναι πᾶσα ἢ οἰκουμένη, καίτοι στένοντες ἐπὶ τοῖς γινομένοις, οὐδὲν ἤττον ἐκολάκευον αὐτὸν ἀποσεμνύνοντες πλέον τοῦ μετρίου καὶ τὸν τύφον συναύξοντες. ἔνιοι δὲ καὶ τὸ βαρβαρικὸν ἔθος εἰς Ἰταλίαν ἤγαγον, τὴν προσκύνησιν, τὸ εὐγενές τῆς
- 117 Ῥωμαϊκῆς ἐλευθερίας παραχαράττοντες. ἐν δὲ μόνον ἔθνος ἐξαίρετον τῶν Ἰουδαίων ὑποπτον ἦν ἀντιπράξειν, εἰωθὸς ἐκουσίους ἀναδέχεσθαι θανάτους ὡσπερ ἀθανασίαν, ὑπὲρ τοῦ μηδὲν τῶν πατρῴων περιδεῖν ἀναιρούμενον, εἰ καὶ βραχύτατον εἴη, διὰ τὸ καθάπερ ἐπὶ τῶν οἰκοδομημάτων ὑφαίρεσει ἐνὸς καὶ τὰ ἔτι παγίως ἐστάναι δοκοῦντα συμπίπτειν πρὸς τὸ κενωθὲν χαλῶμενα καὶ καταρρέοντα.
- 118 μικρὸν δὲ οὐκ ἦν τὸ κινούμενον, ἀλλὰ τὸ μέγιστον τῶν ὄντων, ἀνθρώπου γενητὴν καὶ φθαρτὴν φύσιν εἰς ἀγένητον καὶ ἀφθαρτον ὅσα τῷ δοκεῖν θεοπλαστῆσαι, ὅπερ ἀσεβημάτων ἔκρινεν εἶναι χαλεπώτατον—θᾶπτον γὰρ ἂν εἰς ἄνθρωπον θεὸν ἢ εἰς θεὸν ἄνθρωπον μεταβαλεῖν—, δίχα τοῦ καὶ τὰς ἄλλας τὰς ἀνωτάτω κακίας ἀναδέξασθαι, ἀπιστίαν ὁμοῦ καὶ ἀχαριστίαν πρὸς τὸν τοῦ κόσμου παντὸς εὐεργέτην, ὃς τῇ αὐτοῦ δυνάμει τοῖς μέρεσι πᾶσι τοῦ παντὸς ἀφθόρους περιουσίας ἀγαθῶν ἐκδίδωσιν.
- 119 XVII. Μέγιστος οὖν καὶ ἀκήρυκτος πόλεμος ἐπὶ τῷ ἔθνει συνεκροτεῖτο. τί γὰρ ἂν εἴη δούλω βαρύτερον κακὸν ἢ δεσπότης ἐχθρός; δούλοι δὲ αὐτοκράτορος οἱ ὑπήκοοι, καὶ εἰ μηδενὸς ἐτέρου

---

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Ar. Rhet. i. 5. 9 τὰ βαρβαρικά, οἷον προσκνήσεις, where Jebb translates "salaams." See Sandys's note, which is to the effect that properly speaking προσκ. signifies kissing the hand to another rather than prostration or salaam, though the whole inhabited world, groaning though they were at what was happening, flattered him all the same and magnified him out of all proportion and augmented his vanity. Some too even introduced into Italy the barbarian practice of prostrating themselves,<sup>a</sup> a degradation of the high tradition of Roman freedom. One nation only standing apart, 117 the nation of the Jews, was suspected of intending opposition, since it was accustomed to accept death as willingly as if it were immortality, to save them from submitting to the destruction of any of their ancestral traditions, even the smallest, because as with buildings if a single piece is taken from the base, the parts that up to then seemed firm are loosened and slip away and collapse into the void thus made. But that displacement was of nothing 118 petty, but of the greatest of all that exists, when the created and corruptible nature of man was made to appear uncreated and incorruptible by a deification which our nation judged to be the most grievous impiety, since sooner could God change into a man than a man into God. Apart from that it included the supremely evil vices of infidelity and ingratitude to the Benefactor of the whole world who through His power bestows blessings poured in unstinted abundance on every part of the All.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 116-119

XVII. So then a vast and truceless war was pre- 119 pared against the nation. For what greater curse can a slave have than a hostile master? Subjects are slaves of the absolute emperor, and if this is not true the two probably often went together. They appear to be confused by Eur. Orestes 1507 προσκυνῶ σ', ἀναξ, νόμοισι βαρβάροισι προσπίτνων, but distinguished by Plato, Legg. x. 887 ε προκυλίσεις ἄμα καὶ προσκυνήσεις.

PHILO

τῶν προτέρων διὰ τὸ σὺν ἐπιεικείᾳ καὶ μετὰ νόμων ἄρχειν, ἀλλὰ τοι Γαίτου πᾶσαν ἐκτετημημένου τῆς ψυχῆς ἡμερότητα καὶ παρανομίαν ἐζήλωκόςτος— νόμον γὰρ ἡγούμενος ἑαυτὸν τοὺς τῶν ἑκασταχοῦ νομοθετῶν ὡς κενὰς ῥήσεις ἔλυεν— ἡμεῖς δὲ οὐ μόνον ἐν δούλοις ἀλλὰ καὶ δούλων τοῖς ἀτιμοτάτοις ἐγραφόμεθα τοῦ ἄρχοντος τρέποντος<sup>1</sup> εἰς δεσπότην.

[563] XVIII. | ὅπερ συναισθόμενος ὁ Ἀλεξανδρέων μιγὰς
120 καὶ πεφορημένος ὄχλος ἐπέθετο ἡμῖν, καιρὸν ἐπιτηδειότατον παραπεπτωκέναι ὑπολαβῶν, καὶ τὸ τυφόμενον ἐκ μακρῶν χρόνων μῖσος ἀνέφηνε πάντα
121 κυκῶν καὶ συνταράττων. ὡς γὰρ ἐκδοθέντας εἰς ὁμολογουμένας καὶ τὰς ἀνωτάτω συμφορὰς ὑπὸ τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος ἢ πολέμῳ κατακρατηθέντας<sup>2</sup> ἐκμανέσι καὶ θηριωδεστάταις ὄργαις κατειργάζοντο, ταῖς οἰκίαις ἐπιτρέχοντες, τοὺς δεσπότης αὐταῖς γυναιξὶ καὶ τέκνοις ἐλαύνοντες, ὡς κενὰς οἰκητόρων
122 ἀποφῆναι. ἐπιπλα καὶ κειμήλια οὐκέτι ὡς λησταὶ νύκτα καὶ σκότος ἐπιτηροῦντες διὰ φόβον ἀλώσεως ἔκλεπτον, ἀλλὰ φανερώς μεθ' ἡμέραν ἐξεφόρουν ἐπιδεικνύμενοι τοῖς ἀπαντῶσιν, ὥσπερ οἱ κεκληρονομηκότες ἢ πριάμενοι παρὰ τῶν κυρίων. εἰ δὲ καὶ πλείους συνέθεντο κοινοπραγῆσαι τῶν ἀρπαγῶν, τὴν λείαν ἐν ἀγορᾷ μέσῃ διενέμοντο, πολλάκις ἐν ὄψεσι τῶν δεσποτῶν, κατακερτομοῦντες καὶ ἐπι-
123 χλευάζοντες. δεινὰ μὲν οὖν καθ' ἑαυτὰ καὶ ταῦτα· πῶς γὰρ οὐ; πένητας ἐκ πλουσίων καὶ ἀπόρους ἐξ εὐπόρων γεγενῆσθαι μηδὲν ἀδικοῦντας ἐξαιφνης καὶ ἀνοίκους καὶ ἀνεστίους, ἐξεωσμένους καὶ πεφυγαδευμένους τῶν ἰδίων οἰκιῶν, ἵνα μεθ' ἡμέραν

<sup>1</sup> τρέπω intransitive in the active is otherwise unknown. τραπεῖντος has been suggested.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 119-123

of any of his predecessors since they ruled with moderation and observance of the law, it was indeed true of Gaius who had excised all kindness from his soul and zealously practised lawlessness. For considering that he himself was a law, he abrogated those laid down by legislators in the several states, treating them as empty talk. And we were ranked not only as slaves but as the most degraded slaves when the ruler changed into a despotic master. XVIII. The promiscuous and unstable rabble of the Alexandrians perceived this, and thinking that a very suitable opportunity had occurred, attacked us and brought to light the hatred which had long been smouldering, reducing everything to chaos and confusion. For treating us as persons given over by the emperor to suffer the extremity of calamity undisguised or as overpowered in war, they worked our ruin with insane and most brutal rage. They overran our houses, expelling the owners with their wives and children, and left them uninhabited. Then they stole the furniture and cherished valuables and, not needing now like robbers through fear of capture to watch for night and darkness, they carried them out openly in daylight and exhibited them to those whom they met as if they had inherited them or bought them from the owners. And if several agreed together to share the pillaging they divided the spoil in mid-market, often before the eyes of the owners, jeering and reviling them the while. These things are horrible in themselves, how could it be otherwise?—when the rich became poor, the well-to-do destitute, suddenly through no fault of their own rendered hearthless and homeless, outcasts and exiles from their own

---

<sup>2</sup> MSS. κατακρήντας or κρατηθέντας.

PHILO

- καὶ νύκτωρ ὕπαιθροι διατελοῦντες ἢ ταῖς ἀφ' ἡλίου φλογώσεσιν ἢ νυκτεριναῖς περιψύξεσι διαφθαρώσι.
 124 κουφότερα δὲ τῶν μελλόντων λέγεσθαι ταῦτα· συνελάσαντες γὰρ τοσαύτας μυριάδας ἀνδρῶν ὁμοῦ καὶ γυναικῶν καὶ τέκνων καθάπερ βοσκήματα καὶ θρέμματα ἐξ ἀπάσης τῆς πόλεως εἰς μοῖραν ἐλαχίστην οἰά τινα σηκόν, ᾧήθησαν ὀλίγαις ἡμέραις σωροὺς ἀθρόων νεκρῶν ἐφευρήσειν ἢ λιμῶ διαφθα-ρέντων διὰ σπάνιν τῶν ἀναγκαίων, οὐ προευτρεπισ-μένων τὰ ἐπιτήδεια κατὰ μαντείαν τῶν ἐξαπιναίων 125 κακοπραγιῶν, ἢ δι' ὠθισμόν καὶ πνίγος, μηδεμιᾶς εὐρυχωρίας προσφερομένης, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῦ πέριξ ἀέρος κακωθέντος καὶ ὅσον ἦν ἐν αὐτῷ ζωτικὸν ταῖς ἀναπνοαῖς, εἰ δὲ δεῖ τὸ ἀληθὲς εἰπεῖν, τοῖς ἐκπνεόντων ἄσθμασιν ἀποβαλόντος,<sup>1</sup> ὑφ' ὧν φλεγό-μενος καὶ τρόπον τινὰ καταβολῇ πυρετοῦ πιεσθεὶς θερμὸν καὶ ἄτοπον πνεῦμα διὰ μυκτῆρων καὶ στόματος εἰσέπεμπε, τὸ λεγόμενον κατὰ τὴν παροι-126 μίαν πῦρ ἐπιφέρων πυρί. τῶν γὰρ ἐντὸς σπλάγγνων ἡ δύναμις ἐκ φύσεως φλογωδεστάτη καθέστη-κεν, ἦν ὅταν μὲν αἱ θύραθεν αὔραι μετρίως ψυχραὶ καταπνέωσιν, εὐδοεῖ τὰ τῆς ἀναπνοῆς ὄργανα ταῖς εὐκρασίαις, ὅταν δὲ μεταβάλωσι πρὸς τὸ θερμότερον, ἀνάγκη δυσοδοεῖν πυρὸς ἐπεισρέοντος πυρί.
 127 XIX. μηκέτι οὖν ὑπομένειν τὴν δυσ-[564] χωρίαν | οἰοί τε ὄντες ἐξεχέοντο εἰς ἐρημίας καὶ αἰ-γιαλοὺς καὶ μνήματα, γλιχόμενοι σπάσαι καθαροῦ καὶ ἀβλαβοῦς ἀέρος. εἰ δὲ τινες ἢ προκατελήφ-θησαν ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις μέρεσι τῆς πόλεως ἢ ἀγνοία

<sup>1</sup> So Mangey, but apparently with no ms. authority. Reiter with mss. (one ὑπερβάλλοντος) prints ὑποβαλόντος. But I cannot see what meaning it can have here.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 123-127

houses, to dwell night and day under the open sky, and sent to their death by the burning heat of the sun or the freezing cold of the night. But all this is 124 light compared with what is still to be told. After driving all these many myriads of men, women, and children like herds of cattle out of the whole city into a very small portion as into a pen, they expected in a few days to find heaps of dead massed together, perished either by famine through lack of necessaries, since having had no prophetic inkling of the sudden disasters they had not provided what was needed, or else through overcrowding and stifling heat. For no 125 sufficiency of room was obtainable, and the air was vitiated and lost all its life-giving properties through the respirations or, to give them their true name, the gasps of expiring men. Inflamed by these and heavily labouring under something like an attack of fever it injected hot and noisome breath through the mouth and nostrils, adding fire to fire, to use the proverbial phrase. For our internal parts as 126 constituted by nature work<sup>a</sup> at a very great heat, and when the outside airs which ventilate them are fairly cool, the favourable combination keeps the organs of respiration in good order, but when the atmosphere changes to a higher temperature and one stream of fire is added to another these organs are bound to get out of order. XIX. So 127

the Jews, unable to endure any longer the painful want of space, poured out into deserted spots and beaches and tombs, eager to get a breath of pure and innocuous air. And if any were caught in the other parts of the city before they could escape or <sup>a</sup> δύναμις in this usage seems to imply function as well as nature.

PHILO

τῶν κατασκευησάντων κακῶν ἀγρόθεν παρεγένοντο, πολυτρόπων ἀπέλαυον συμφορῶν, ἢ καταλευόμενοι ἢ κεράμῳ τιτρωσκόμενοι ἢ πρίνου κλάδοις καὶ δρυὸς τὰ καιριώτατα<sup>1</sup> μέρη τοῦ σώματος καὶ μάλιστα κεφαλὴν ἄχρι θανάτου καταγνύμενοι.

128 περικαθήμενοι δὲ ἐν κύκλῳ τινὲς τῶν ἀργεῖν καὶ σχολάζειν εἰωθότων τοὺς συνεληλαμένους καὶ συνεωσμένους εἰς ἔσχατιᾶς βραχὺ τι μέρος, ὡς ἔφη, καθάπερ τοὺς τειχίρεις γεγονότας ἐπετήρουν, μή τις ὑπεξέλθῃ λαθῶν. ἔμελλον δὲ ἄρα οὐκ ὀλίγοι διὰ σπάνιν τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἀλογήσαντες τῆς ἰδίας ἀσφαλείας ἐξιέναι, δέει τοῦ μὴ λιμῶ πανοίκιοι παραπολέσθαι. τούτων τὰς διαδύσεις<sup>2</sup> παραδοκοῦντες ἐπετήρουν καὶ τοὺς συλληφθέντας εὐθύς διέφθειρον αἰκιζόμενοι πάσαις αἰκίαις.

129 ἕτερος δὲ λόχος ἦν ἐφεδρεῦν τοῖς τοῦ ποταμοῦ λιμέσι πρὸς ἀρπαγὴν τῶν καταγομένων Ἰουδαίων καὶ ὧν κατ' ἐμπορίαν ἐκόμιζον· ἐπεισβαίνοντες γὰρ ταῖς ναυσὶ τὸν φόρτον ἐν ὄψεσι τῶν κυρίων ἐξεφόρου καὶ αὐτοὺς ἐξαγκωνίζοντες ἐνεπίμπρασαν, ὕλη χρώμενοι πηδαλίους, οἶαξι, κοντοῖς καὶ ταῖς

130 ἐπὶ τῶν καταστρωμάτων σανίσι. τοῖς δὲ ἐν μέσῃ τῇ πόλει κατακαιομένοις οἰκτρότατος ἦν ὄλεθρος· σπάνει γὰρ ἔστιν ὅτε ξύλων φρύγανα συνεφόρου καὶ ταῦτα ἀνάψαντες ἐπερρίπτου τοῖς ἀθλίους· οἱ δὲ ἡμίφλεκτοι καπνῶ τὸ πλέον ἢ πυρὶ διεφθείροντο, τῆς φρυγανώδους ὕλης πῦρ μὲν ἀμνηγὸν καὶ καπνώδες ἐξαπτύσεως καὶ αὐτίκα σβεννυμένης, ἀνθρακοῦσθαι δὲ διὰ κουφότητα μὴ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. κυριώτατα.

<sup>2</sup> So Mangey.—Reiter with MSS. διαλύσεις (one MS. διελύσεις).

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 127-130

if they came up from the country in ignorance of the disasters which had fallen upon us they experienced manifold misfortunes, being stoned or wounded by tiles or branches of ilex or oak in the most vital parts of the body and particularly in the head, the fracture of which proved fatal.

Some of the habitual idlers and loungers would 128 make a circle round the Jews who, as I have said, had been driven and thrust together into a small part of the extremity of the city, and sit there watching them as though they were in a besieged fortress lest anyone should escape unseen. It was of course certain that several in lack of necessities would, regardless of their own safety, sally out through fear of their whole household being starved to death. A close watch was kept for these attempts to slip through and when any were caught they were at once dispatched by their enemies with every possible maltreatment. There was another 129 company who lay in waiting at the harbours of the river to rob the Jews who put in there and seize the goods which they were bringing for trade. They boarded the vessels and carried out the cargo before the eyes of the owners, whom they pinioned and burnt, using for fuel rudders, tillers, poles and the planks on the decks. Most pitiable was 130 the fate of those who were burnt to death in the middle of the city. For sometimes through lack of proper wood they collected brushwood and after setting it on fire threw it upon the unhappy victims, who perished half burnt more through the smoke than by the fire. For brushwood produces a feeble and smoky flame which is at once extinguished since its slightness prevents it from burning steadily like

PHILO

- 131 δυναμένης. πολλοὺς δὲ ἔτι ζῶντας ἱμάσι καὶ βρόχοις περιβαλόντες καὶ ἐπισφίγγαντες τὰ σφυρὰ διὰ μέσης κατέσυρον ἀγορᾶς ἐναλλόμενοι καὶ μηδὲ νεκρῶν ἀπεχόμενοι τῶν σωμάτων· διαρτῶντες γὰρ αὐτὰ κατὰ μέλη καὶ μέρη καὶ πατοῦντες οἱ καὶ τῶν ἀτιθιάσων θηρίων ὠμότεροι καὶ ἀγριώτεροι πᾶσαν ἰδέαν ἐξανήλισκον, ὡς μηδὲ λείψανον γοῦν ὁ δυνήσεται ταφῆς ἐπιλαχεῖν ὑπολιπέσθαι.
- 132 XX. Τοῦ δὲ ἐπιτρόπου τῆς χώρας, ὃς μόνος ἐδύνατο βουληθεὶς ὥρα μιᾷ τὴν ὀχλοκρατίαν καθελεῖν, προσποιουμένου ἅ τε ἑώρα μὴ ὄρᾶν καὶ ὧν ἤκουε μὴ ἐπακούειν, ἀλλ' ἀνέδην ἐφίεντος πολεμοποιεῖν καὶ τὴν εἰρήνην συγχέοντος, ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐξοτρυνόμενοι πρὸς ἀναισχύντους καὶ θρα-
 [565] συτέρας ὤρμησαν | ἐπιβουλὰς καὶ συνταξάμενοι στίφη πολυανθρωπότατα τὰς προσευχὰς<sup>1</sup>—πολλαὶ δὲ εἰσι καθ' ἕκαστον τμήμα τῆς πόλεως—τὰς μὲν ἐδενδροτόμησαν τὰς δὲ αὐτοῖς θεμελίους κατέσκαψαν, εἰς αἷς δὲ καὶ πῦρ ἐμβαλόντες ἐνέπρησαν, ὑπὸ λύττης καὶ μανίας ἔκφρονος ἀλογήσαντες καὶ τῶν πλησίον οἰκίῶν· πυρὸς γάρ, ὁπότε λάβοιτο
 133 ὕλης, οὐδὲν ὠκύτερον. καὶ σιωπῶ τὰς συγκαθαιρεθείσας καὶ συμπρησθείσας τῶν αὐτοκρατόρων τιμὰς ἀσπίδων καὶ στεφάνων ἐπιχρῦσων καὶ στήλων καὶ ἐπιγραφῶν, δι' ἃ καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὠφείλον ἀνέχειν· ἀλλ' ἐθάρρουν ἅτε τὴν ἐκ Γαίτου τίσιν οὐ δεδιότες, ὃν εὖ ἠπίσταντο μίσος ἄλεκτον ἔχοντα πρὸς Ἰουδαίους, ὡς ὑπονοεῖν, ὅτι οὐδεὶς οὐδὲν αὐτῷ χαρίζοιτο μείζον ἢ πάσας κακῶν ἰδέας
 134 ἐπιφέρων τῷ ἔθνει. βουλόμενοι δὲ καινοτέραις

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ταῖς προσευχαῖς.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 130-134

coal. Many too, while still alive, they tied with 131 thongs and nooses and, binding fast their ankles, dragged them through the middle of the market, leaping on them and not even sparing their dead bodies. For, more brutal and savage than fierce wild beasts, they severed them limb from limb and piece from piece and trampling on them destroyed every lineament, so that not even the least remnant was left which could receive burial.

XX. When the governor of the country, who, if he 132 wished, could have by himself suppressed in a single hour the tyranny of the mob, pretended not to see what he saw and not to hear what he heard but allowed them to wage war unrestrainedly and so wrecked the peace, they became still more excited and pressed forward to carry out shameless designs of a bolder kind. They collected great bodies of men to attack the meeting-houses, of which there are many in each section of the city. Some they ravaged, others they demolished with the foundations as well, others they set fire to and burnt regardless in their frenzy and insane fury of the fate of the neighbouring houses, for nothing runs faster than fire when it gets hold of something to feed it. I say nothing of the 133 tributes to the emperors which were pulled down or burnt at the same time, the shields and gilded crowns and the slabs and inscriptions, consideration for which should have made them spare the rest. But they were emboldened by having no fear of the vengeance of Gaius. They knew well that he had an indescribable hatred of the Jews, and so they surmised that nothing anyone could do would gratify him more than the infliction on the nation of every kind of ill-treatment. And as they wished to in- 134

PHILO

κολακείαις ὑπελθόντες αὐτὸν ἀνυπευθύνους χρῆσθαι κατὰ τὸ παντελὲς ταῖς εἰς ἡμᾶς ἐπηρείαις τί ποιούσι; προσευχὰς ὅσας μὴ ἐδυνήθησαν ἐμπρήσει καὶ κατασκαφαῖς ἀφανίσει διὰ τὸ πολλοὺς καὶ ἀθρόους πλησίον οἰκεῖν Ἰουδαίους ἕτερον τρόπον ἐλυμήναντο μετὰ τῆς τῶν νόμων καὶ ἔθῶν ἀνατροπῆς· εἰκόνας γὰρ ἐν ἀπάσαις μὲν ἰδρύνοντο Γαῖου, ἐν δὲ τῇ μεγίστῃ καὶ περισημοτάτῃ καὶ
 135 ἀνδριάντα χαλκοῦν ἐποχούμενον τεθρίππῳ. καὶ τοσοῦτον ἦν τὸ τάχος καὶ τὸ σύντονον τῆς σπουδῆς, ὥστε οὐκ ἔχοντες ἐν ἐτοίμῳ καινὸν τέθριππον ἐκ τοῦ γυμνασίου παλαιότατον (ἐκόμιζον) ἰοῦ γέμον, ἠκρωτηριασμένον ὦτα καὶ οὐρὰς καὶ βάσεις καὶ ἕτερα οὐκ ὀλίγα, ὡς δὲ φασί τινες καὶ ὑπὲρ γυναικὸς ἀνατεθὲν τῆς ἀρχαίας Κλεοπάτρας, ἧτις
 136 ἦν προμάμμη τῆς τελευταίας. ἠλίκην μὲν οὖν καθ' αὐτὸ τοῦτο τοῖς ἀναθεῖσιν ἐπέφερε κατηγορίαν, παντί τῳ δῆλον. τί γάρ, εἰ [καὶ] καινὸν γυναικὸς; τί δέ, εἰ παλαιὸν ἀνδρός; τί δέ, εἰ συνόλως ἐπιφημισθὲν ἑτέρῳ; τοὺς τοιοῦτον ἀνατιθέντας ὑπὲρ αὐτοκράτορος οὐκ εἰκὸς ἦν εὐλαβηθῆναι, μή τις γένηται μήνυσις τῷ πάντα σεμνοποιούντι 137 τὰ καθ' αὐτὸν διαφερόντως; οἱ δέ γε ἐκ πολλοῦ τοῦ περιόντος ἠλπίζον ἐπαινεθήσεσθαι καὶ μειζόνων καὶ λαμπροτέρων ἀπολαύσειν ἀγαθῶν ἕνεκα τοῦ καινὰ τεμένην προσαναθεῖναι Γαίῳ τὰς προσευχὰς,

---

* The meaning as I understand it is that while the fact that the statue was an old one, or that that the figure represented by it was a female, would each of them separately have disqualified the statue, it is unnecessary to press them as the mere fact that it had been dedicated to someone else was enough to show its impropriety.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 134-137

gratiate themselves with him by further novelties in flattering and so secure complete immunity for their maltreatment of us, what do you suppose they did? The meeting-houses which they could not raze or burn out of existence, because so many Jews live massed together in the neighbourhood, they outraged in another way, thereby overthrowing our laws and customs. For they set up images of Gaius in them all and in the largest and most notable a bronze statue of a man mounted on a chariot and four. And <sup>135</sup> so speedy and impetuous were they in their eagerness, that not having a new chariot of the kind at hand they fetched a very old one out of the gymnasium, a mass of rust with the ears, tails, feet and many other parts mutilated, and as some say dedicated to the honour of a woman, the original Cleopatra, great-grand-mother of the last queen of that name. What a serious charge this in itself <sup>136</sup> entailed upon the dedicators is obvious to everyone. What does it matter if it was the new chariot of a woman? What if it was an old chariot of a man?<sup>a</sup> As long as the general fact remains that it had been dedicated to someone else? Might not the authors of an offering of this kind in honour of the emperor reasonably feel alarm lest some information should be laid before one who always particularly insisted on his personal glorification? No doubt they had <sup>137</sup> extravagant<sup>b</sup> hopes of getting praise and reaping greater and more splendid benefits for turning our meeting-houses into new and additional precincts consecrated to him, though their motive was not <sup>b</sup> For the common phrase ἐκ πολλοῦ τοῦ περιόντος see note on De Vit. Cont. 63, where among its uses intensification of an action or creation of a superlative are given. So here.

PHILO

οὐχ ἕνεκα τιμῆς τῆς εἰς ἐκείνον, ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ τοῦ πάντα τρόπον ἐμφορεῖσθαι τῶν ἐπὶ τῷ ἔθνει κακοπραγιῶν.

138 [566] ἔστι· πρῶτον μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν βασιλέων· δέκα που ἐναργεῖς δὲ πίστει | λαβεῖν

σχεδὸν ἢ καὶ πλείονων ἐν τριακοσίοις ἔτεσιν ἐξῆς γενομένων, ἀνάθεσιν εἰκόνων ἢ ἀνδριάντων ἐν προσευχαῖς οὐδεμίαν ἐποίησαντο, καίτοι γε οἰκείων ὄντων καὶ συγγενῶν, οὓς θεοὺς καὶ ἐνόμιζον καὶ

139 ἔγραφον καὶ ἐκάλουν. τί δὲ οὐκ ἔμελλον ἀνθρώπους γε ὄντας οἱ κύνας καὶ λύκους καὶ λέοντας καὶ κροκοδείλους καὶ ἄλλα πλείονα θηρία καὶ ἔνυδρα καὶ χερσαῖα καὶ πτηνὰ θεοπλαστοῦντες, ὑπὲρ ὧν βωμοὶ καὶ ἱερά καὶ ναοὶ καὶ τεμένη κατὰ πᾶσαν

140 Αἴγυπτον ἰδρυνται; XXI. τάχα που νῦν φήσουσι τότε οὐκ ἂν εἰπόντες—τὰς γὰρ τῶν ἀρχόντων εὐπραγίας μᾶλλον ἢ τοὺς ἄρχοντας αὐτοὺς εἰώθασι θεραπεύειν—, ὅτι μείζους μὲν οἱ αὐτοκράτορες τὰ ἀξιώματα καὶ τὰς τύχας τῶν Πτολεμαίων εἰσὶ, μειζόνων δὲ καὶ τιμῶν τυγχάνειν ὀφείλουσιν.

141 εἶτα, ὧ πάντων ἀνθρώπων, ἵνα μηδὲν ἀναγκασθῶ βλάσφημον εἰπεῖν, εὐηθέστατοι, διὰ τί τὸν πρὸ Γαίτου Τιβέριον, ὃς κακείνω τῆς ἡγεμονίας αἰτίας γέγονε, τρία πρὸς τοῖς εἴκοσιν ἔτη γῆς καὶ θαλάσσης ἀναψάμενον τὸ κράτος καὶ μηδὲ σπέρμα πολέμου μήτε κατὰ τὴν Ἑλλάδα μήτε κατὰ τὴν βάρβαρον ὑποτυφόμενον εἶασαντα, τὴν δὲ εἰρήνην καὶ τὰ τῆς εἰρήνης ἀγαθὰ παρασχόμενον ἄχρι τῆς τοῦ βίου τελευτῆς ἀφθόνω καὶ πλουσίᾳ χειρὶ καὶ

142 γνώμῃ, τῆς ὁμοίας τιμῆς οὐκ ἠξιώσατε; τὸ γένος ἦν ἐλάττων; ἀλλ' εὐγενέστατος κατ' ἀμφοτέρους τοὺς γονεῖς. ἀλλὰ τὴν παιδείαν; καὶ τίς ἦν φρονιμώτερος ἢ λογιώτερος ἐκείνου τῶν κατ' αὐτὸν

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 137-142

to honour him but to take their fill in every way of the miseries of our nation. We can 138 find clear proofs of this. Take first the kings of Egypt. In three hundred years there was a succession of some ten or more of these, and none of them had any images or statues set up for them in our meeting-houses by the Alexandrians, although they were of the same race and kin as the people and were acknowledged, written and spoken of by them as gods. It was only natural that they who at any rate 139 were men should be so regarded by those who deified dogs and wolves and lions and crocodiles and many other wild animals on the land, in the water and the air, for whom altars and temples and shrines and sacred precincts have been established through the whole of Egypt. XXI. Perhaps they will 140 now say what they would not have said then, since it is their way to pay more court to the good fortunes of rulers than to the rulers themselves, that the emperors are superior to the Ptolemies in prestige and fortune and deserve to receive superior honours. Tell me, you of all men most foolish, for I do not wish 141 to be forced into abusive language, what of Gaius's predecessor Tiberius from whom he derived his sovereignty, who for twenty-three years was invested with dominion over sea and land and did not let the smallest spark of war smoulder in Greece or the world outside Greece, and to the very end of his life provided peace and the blessings of peace with a rich and unstinting hand and heart? Did you not deem him worthy of like honour? Was he inferior 142 in birth? No, his birth was of the highest on both sides of his parentage. In culture? who was a greater master of thought or of language among ἀκμασάντων; ἀλλὰ τὴν ἡλικίαν; καὶ ποῖος μᾶλλον ἢ βασιλέων ἢ αὐτοκρατόρων εὐγέρωσ; οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ ἔτι νέος ὢν ὁ πρεσβύτης ἐλέγετο δι' αἰδῶ τὴν περὶ τὴν ἀγχίνοιαν. οὗτος οὖν ὁ τοιοῦτος καὶ τοσοῦτος ὑμῖν παρώφθη καὶ παρεσύρη.

PHILO

143 Τί δέ; ὁ τὴν ἀνθρωπίνην φύσιν ὑπερβαλὼν ἐν ἀπάσαις ταῖς ἀρεταῖς, ὁ διὰ μέγεθος ἡγεμονίας αὐτοκρατοῦς ὁμοῦ καὶ καλοκαγαθίας πρῶτος ὀνομασθεῖς Σεβαστός, οὐ διαδοχῇ γένους ὥσπερ τι κλήρου μέρος τὴν ἐπωνυμίαν λαβὼν, ἀλλ' αὐτὸς γενόμενος ἀρχὴ σεβασμοῦ καὶ τοῖς ἔπειτα; ὁ τοῖς μὲν πράγμασι τεταραγμένοις καὶ συγκεχυμένοις ἐπιστάς, ὅτε εὐθύς παρῆλθεν ἐπὶ τὴν τῶν κοινῶν

144 ἐπιμέλειαν; νῆσοι γὰρ πρὸς ἡπείρους καὶ ἡπειροὶ πρὸς νήσους περὶ πρωτείων ἀντεφιλονεῖκουσ ἡγεμόνας ἔχουσαι καὶ προαγωνιστάς Ῥωμαίων τοὺς ἐν τέλει δοκιμωτάτους· καὶ αὖθις τὰ μεγάλα τμήματα τῆς οἰκουμένης, Ἀσία πρὸς Εὐρώπην καὶ Εὐρώπη πρὸς Ἀσίαν, ἡμιλλῶντο περὶ κράτους ἀρχῆς, τῶν Εὐρωπαϊῶν καὶ Ἀσιανῶν ἔθνῶν ἀπὸ ἐσχάτων γῆς ἀναστάντων καὶ βαρεῖς πολέμους |

[567] ἀντεπιφερόντων διὰ πάσης γῆς καὶ θαλάττης πεζομαχίαις (καὶ ναυμαχίαις), ὡς μικροῦ σύμπαν τὸ ἀνθρώπων γένος ἀναλωθὲν ταῖς ἀλληλοκτονίαις εἰς τὸ παντελὲς ἀφανισθῆναι, εἰ μὴ δι' ἓνα ἄνδρα καὶ ἡγεμόνα, τὸν Σεβαστὸν [οἶκον], ὃν ἄξιον καλεῖν

145 ἀλεξίκακον. οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ Καῖσαρ, ὁ τοὺς καταρράξαντας πανταχόθι χειμῶνας εὐδιάσας, ὁ τὰς κοινὰς νόσους Ἑλλήνων καὶ βαρβάρων ἰασάμενος, αἱ κατέβησαν μὲν ἀπὸ τῶν μεσημβρινῶν καὶ those who were in the prime of life in his time? In length of days? and which of the kings or emperors reached a longer and happier old age, not but what while still in his youth he was called the old man out of respect for his shrewdness? Such and so great was he who was overlooked and brushed aside by you.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 142-145

Again, consider him who in all the virtues transcended human nature, who on account of the vastness of his imperial sovereignty as well as nobility of character was the first to bear the name of the August or Venerable, a title received not through lineal succession as a portion of its heritage but because he himself became the source of the veneration which was received also by those who followed him; who from the moment that he had charge of the common weal took in hand the troubled and chaotic condition of affairs. For islands were engaged with continents in fierce rivalry for primacy, and continents with islands, all having for their leaders and champions those of the Romans in great positions who stood foremost in repute. And again the great regions which divide the habitable world, Europe and Asia, were contending with each other for sovereign power with the nations of both brought up from the uttermost parts of the earth waging grievous war all over sea and land, battling on either element, so that the whole human race exhausted by mutual slaughter was on the verge of utter destruction, had it not been for one man and leader Augustus whom men fitly call the averter of evil. This is the Caesar who calmed the torrential storms on every side, who healed the pestilences common to Greeks and barbarians, pestilences which descending from the ἐώων, ἔδραμον δὲ καὶ μέχρι δύσεως καὶ πρὸς ἄρκτον, τὰ μεθόρια χωρία καὶ πελάγη κατασπείρασαι τῶν ἀβουλήτων· οὗτός ἐστιν ὁ τὰ δεσμά, οἷς κατέζευκτο καὶ ἐπεπίεστο ἢ οἰκουμένη, παραλύσας, 146 οὐ μόνον ἀνείς· οὗτος ὁ καὶ τοὺς φανεροὺς καὶ ἀφανεῖς πολέμους διὰ τὰς ἐκ ληστῶν ἐπιθέσεις ἀνελών· οὗτος ὁ τὴν θάλατταν πειρατικῶν μὲν σκαφῶν κενὴν ἐργασάμενος, φορτίδων δὲ πληρώ-147 σας. οὗτος ὁ τὰς πόλεις ἀπάσας εἰς ἐλευθερίαν ἐξελόμενος, ὁ τὴν ἀταξίαν εἰς τάξιν ἀγαγών, ὁ τὰ ἄμικτα ἔθνη καὶ θηριώδη πάντα ἡμερώσας καὶ ἄρμοσάμενος, ὁ τὴν μὲν Ἑλλάδα Ἑλλάσι πολλαῖς παραυξήσας, τὴν δὲ βάρβαρον ἐν τοῖς ἀναγκαιο-τάτοις τμήμασιν ἀφελληνίσας, ὁ εἰρηνοφύλαξ, ὁ διανομὸς τῶν ἐπιβαλλόντων ἐκάστοις, ὁ τὰς χάριτας ἀταμιεύτους εἰς μέσον προθείς, ὁ μηδὲν ἀποκρυψάμενος ἀγαθὸν ἢ καλὸν ἐν ἅπαντι τῷ 148 ἑαυτοῦ βίῳ. XXII. τοῦτον οὖν τὸν τοσοῦτον εὐεργέτην ἐν τρισὶ καὶ τεσσαράκοντα ἐνιαυτοῖς, οὓς ἐπεκράτησεν Αἰγύπτου, παρεκαλύψαντο, μηδὲν

PHILO

 ἐν προσευχαῖς ὑπὲρ αὐτοῦ, μὴ ἄγαλμα, μὴ ξόανον, 149 μὴ γραφὴν ἰδρυσάμενοι. καὶ μὴν εἴ τιμι καινὰς καὶ ἐξαιρέτους ἔδει ψηφίζεσθαι τιμάς, ἐκείνῳ προσῆκον ἦν, οὐ μόνον ὅτι τοῦ Σεβαστοῦ γένους ἀρχὴ τις ἐγένετο καὶ πηγῆ, οὐδὲ ὅτι πρῶτος καὶ μέγιστος καὶ κοινὸς εὐεργέτης, ἀντὶ πολυαρχίας ἐνὶ κυβερνήτῃ παραδοὺς τὸ κοινὸν σκάφος οἰακονομεῖν ἑαυτῷ, θαυμασίῳ τὴν ἡγεμονικὴν ἐπιστήμην—τὸ

<sup>a</sup> On the technical law term ἐξελεσθαι εἰς ἐλευθερίαν see
Dict. of Ant. s.v. ἐξαιρέσεως δίκη "If a reputed slave wished

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 145-149

south and the east coursed to the west and north sowing the seeds of calamity over the places and waters which lay between. This is he who not only 146 loosed but broke the chains which had shackled and pressed so hard on the habitable world. This is he who exterminated wars both of the open kind and the covert which are brought about by the raids of brigands. This is he who cleared the sea of pirate ships and filled it with merchant vessels. This is 147 he who reclaimed every state to liberty,<sup>a</sup> who led disorder into order and brought gentle manners and harmony to all unsociable and brutish nations, who enlarged Hellas by many a new Hellas and hellenized the outside world in its most important regions, the guardian of the peace, who dispensed their dues to each and all, who did not hoard his favours but gave them to be common property, who kept nothing good and excellent hidden throughout his life. XXII. This 148 great benefactor they ignored during the forty-three years in which he was sovereign of Egypt, and set up nothing in our meeting-houses in his honour, neither image, nor bust, nor painting. And yet if it was 149 right to decree new and exceptional honours to anyone, he was the proper person to receive them. He was what we may call the source and fountain-head of the Augustan stock in general. He was also the first and the greatest and the common benefactor in that he displaced the rule of many and committed the ship of the commonwealth to be steered by a single pilot, that is himself, a marvellous master of the science of government. For there is justice in the

to recover his rights as a freeman he could only do so with the assistance of one who was himself a freeman and was said ἐξαιρείσθαι αὐτὸν εἰς ἐλευθερίαν."

PHILO

γὰρ “ οὐκ ἀγαθὸν πολυκοιρανίη ” λέλεκται δεόν-τως, ἐπειδὴ πολυτρόπων αἴτιαι κακῶν αἱ πολυψηφίαι—, ἀλλ’ ὅτι καὶ πᾶσα ἡ οἰκουμένη τὰς 150 ἰσολυμπίους αὐτῷ τιμὰς ἐψηφίσαντο. καὶ μαρτυροῦσι ναοί, προπύλαια, προτεμενίσματα, στοαί, ὡς ὅσαι τῶν πόλεων, ἢ νέα ἢ παλαιά, ἔργα φέρουσι μεγαλοπρεπῆ, τῷ κάλλει καὶ μεγέθει τῶν Καισαρείων παρενημερεῖσθαι, καὶ μάλιστα κατὰ τὴν 151 ἡμετέραν Ἀλεξάνδρειαν. οὐδὲν γὰρ τοι-οὔτον ἐστὶ τέμενος, οἶον τὸ λεγόμενον Σεβαστεῖον, ἐπιβατηρίου Καίσαρος νεώς, <ὅς> ἀντικρὺ τῶν εὐορμοτάτων λιμένων μετέωρος ἰδρυται μέγιστος [568] καὶ ἐπιφανέστατος καὶ | οἶος οὐχ ἑτέρωθι κατὰπλεως ἀναθημάτων, [ἐν] γραφαῖς καὶ ἀνδριάσι καὶ ἀργύρῳ καὶ χρυσῷ περιβεβλημένος ἐν κύκλῳ, τέμενος εὐρύτατον στοαῖς, βιβλιοθήκαις, ἀνδρῶ-σιν, ἄλσεσι, προπυλαίοις, εὐρυχωρίαις, ὑπαίθροις, ἅπασιν τοῖς εἰς πολυτελέστατον κόσμον ἡσκημένον, ἐλπίς καὶ ἀναγομένοις καὶ καταπλέουσι σωτήριος.

152                   XXIII. ἔχοντες οὖν τοιαύτας ἀφορμὰς καὶ τοὺς πανταχοῦ πάντας ὁμογνώμονας οὔτε περὶ τὰς προσευχὰς ἐνεωτέρισαν καὶ καθ’ ἕκαστον <τὸ> νόμιμον ἐφύλαξαν· ἢ τινα σεβασμὸν παρέλιπον τῶν ὀφειλομένων Καίσαρι; καὶ τίς ἂν εὖ φρονῶν

<sup>a</sup> II. ii. 204. The passage is quoted more fully in De Conf. 170.

<sup>b</sup> The other place where this word is known is Thuc. iii. 10. 5, where the Mitylenaeans say that the members of the saying "It is not well that many lords should rule,"<sup>a</sup> since multiplicity of suffrages<sup>b</sup> produces multiform evils. But besides all these the whole habitable world voted him no less than celestial honours. These are so well attested by temples, gateways, 150 vestibules, porticoes, that every city which contains magnificent works new and old is surpassed in these by the beauty and magnitude of those appropriated to Caesar and particularly in our own Alexandria.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 149-152

For there is elsewhere no precinct like 151 that which is called the Sebasteum, a temple to Caesar on shipboard,<sup>c</sup> situated on an eminence facing the harbours famed for their excellent moorage, huge and conspicuous, fitted on a scale not found elsewhere with dedicated offerings, around it a girdle of pictures and statues in silver and gold, forming a precinct of vast breadth, embellished with porticoes, libraries, chambers, groves, gateways and wide open courts and everything which lavish expenditure could produce to beautify it—the whole a hope of safety to the voyager either going into or out of the harbour.

XXIII. Though they had such 152 grounds for action and could command the approval of all men everywhere they brought no violence to bear upon the meeting-houses and observed the law in every respect. Or did they neglect any mark of the reverence that was due to Caesar? No one in his senses would say that they did. Why confederacy of Delos could not unite to resist the encroachments of the Athenians διὰ τὴν πολυψήφισιν. It does not seem very appropriate here.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. commemorating the voyage of Augustus which led to the surrender of Alexandria on 1st Aug. 30 B.C. Dr. Cook compares coins found in Alexandria bearing the image of a ship with the inscription σεβαστόφορος.

PHILO

- εἶποι; διὰ τί οὖν ἐστέρησαν;<sup>1</sup> ἐγὼ φράσω μηδὲν 153 ὑποστειλάμενος. ἤδεσαν αὐτοῦ τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν καὶ ὅτι τοσαύτην ποιεῖται τῆς βεβαιώσεως τῶν παρ' ἑκάστοις πατρίων, ὅσην καὶ τῶν Ῥωμαϊκῶν, καὶ ὅτι δέχεται τὰς τιμὰς οὐκ ἐπὶ καθαιρέσει τῶν παρ' ἐνίοις νομίμων τυφοπλαστῶν ἑαυτὸν, ἀλλὰ τῷ 154 μεγέθει τῆς τοσαύτης ἡγεμονίας ἐπόμενος, ἢ διὰ τῶν τοιούτων πέφυκε σεμνοποιεῖσθαι. τοῦ δὲ μὴ ταῖς ὑπερόγκοις τιμαῖς δεθῆναι<sup>2</sup> καὶ φυσηθῆναι ποτε πίστις ἐναργεστάτη τὸ μηδέποτε θεὸν ἑαυτὸν ἐθελῆσαι προσειπεῖν, ἀλλὰ κἂν εἰ λέγοι τις δυσχεραίνειν, καὶ τὸ τοὺς Ἰουδαίους ἀποδέχεσθαι, οὓς ἀκριβῶς ἤδει πάντα ἀφοσιουμένους τὰ τοιαῦτα.
 155 πῶς οὖν ἀπεδέχετο; τὴν πέραν τοῦ
 Τιβέρεως ποταμοῦ μεγάλην τῆς Ῥώμης ἀποτομὴν [ἦν] οὐκ ἠγγόει κατεχομένην καὶ οἰκουμένην πρὸς Ἰουδαίων.<sup>3</sup> Ῥωμαῖοι δὲ ἦσαν οἱ πλείους ἀπελευ-θερωθέντες· αἰχμάλωτοι γὰρ ἀχθέντες εἰς Ἰταλίαν ὑπὸ τῶν κτησαμένων ἠλευθερώθησαν, οὐδὲν τῶν 156 πατρίων παραχαράξαι βιασθέντες. ἠπίστατο οὖν καὶ προσευχὰς ἔχοντας καὶ συνιόντας εἰς αὐτάς, καὶ μάλιστα ταῖς ἱεραῖς ἐβδόμαις, ὅτε δημοσίᾳ τὴν πάτριον παιδεύονται φιλοσοφίαν. ἠπίστατο καὶ χρήματα συνάγοντας ἀπὸ τῶν ἀπαρχῶν ἱερά καὶ πέμποντας εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα διὰ τῶν τὰς θυσίας

<sup>1</sup> Wendland suggested <τιμῆς> ἐστέρησαν. Something is perhaps needed, but why not <τοῦδ'>?

<sup>2</sup> δεθῆναι is clearly corrupt. Suggestions are οἰδηθῆναι, ἐπαρθῆναι, διαρθῆναι (or perhaps the simple ἀρθῆναι).

<sup>3</sup> So Mangey. I am surprised that Reiter should have adopted the mss. text by retaining ἦν, which involves putting the question mark after Ἰουδαίων. There is little or no point then did they withhold this from him? I will answer that question without any reserve. They 153 knew his carefulness and that he showed it in maintaining firmly the native customs of each particular nation no less than of the Romans, and that he received his honours not for destroying the institutions of some nations in vain self-exaltation<sup>a</sup> but in accordance with the magnitude of so mighty a sovereignty whose prestige was bound to be enhanced by such tributes. That he was never elated or puffed 154 up by the vast honours given to him is clearly shown by the fact that he never wished anyone to address him as a god but was annoyed if anyone used the word, and also by his approval of the Jews, who he knew full well regarded all such things with horror.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 152-156

How then did he show his approval? 155 He was aware that the great section of Rome on the other side of the Tiber is occupied and inhabited by Jews, most of whom were Roman citizens emancipated. For having been brought as captives to Italy they were liberated by their owners and were not forced to violate any of their native institutions. He knew therefore that they have houses of prayer 156 and meet together in them, particularly on the sacred sabbaths when they receive as a body a training in their ancestral philosophy. He knew too that they collect money for sacred purposes from their first-fruits and send them to Jerusalem by persons who in the question "how did he approve of the section beyond the Tiber?" By the very small change involved in expelling ἡν after ἀποτομήν, the course of the argument is clearly shown.

<sup>a</sup> So, I think, rather than as L. & S. revised, citing this passage, "deceiving himself."

---

PHILO

- 157 ἀναξόντων. ἀλλ' ὁμως | οὔτε ἐξώκισε τῆς Ῥώμης [569] ἐκείνους οὔτε τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴν αὐτῶν ἀφείλετο πολιτείαν, ὅτι καὶ τῆς Ἰουδαϊκῆς ἐφρόντιζον, οὔτε ἐνεωτέρισεν εἰς τὰς προσευχὰς οὔτε ἐκώλυσε συνάγεσθαι πρὸς τὰς τῶν νόμων ὑψηγήσεις οὔτε ἠναντιώθη τοῖς ἀπαρχομένοις, ἀλλ' οὕτως ὡσίωτο περὶ τὰ ἡμέτερα, ὥστε μόνον οὐ πανοίκιος ἀνα-θημάτων πολυτελείαις τὸ ἱερὸν ἡμῶν ἐκόσμησε, προστάξας καὶ διαιωνίους ἀνάγεσθαι θυσίας ἐντελεχεῖς ὀλοκαύτους καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων προσόδων ἀπαρχὴν τῷ ὑψίστῳ θεῷ, αἱ καὶ μέχρι νῦν ἐπιτελοῦνται καὶ εἰς ἅπαν ἐπιτελεσθήσονται, 158 μήνυμα τρόπων ὄντως αὐτοκρατορικῶν. οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ ταῖς μηνιαίοις τῆς πατρίδος<sup>1</sup> διανομαῖς, ἀργύριον ἢ σίτον ἐν μέρει παντὸς τοῦ δήμου λαμβάνοντος, οὐδέποτε τοὺς Ἰουδαίους ἠλάττωσε τῆς χάριτος, ἀλλ' εἰ καὶ συνέβη τῆς ἱερᾶς ἐβδόμης ἐνεστῶσης γενέσθαι τὴν διανομὴν, ὅτε οὔτε λαμβάνειν οὔτε διδόναι ἢ συνόλως τι πράττειν τῶν κατὰ βίον καὶ μάλιστα τὸν ποριστὴν ἐφεῖται, προσετέτακτο τοῖς διανέμουσι ταμιεύειν τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις εἰς τὴν ὑστεραίαν τὴν κοινὴν φιλανθρωπίαν.
 159 XXIV. Τοιγαροῦν οἱ πανταχοῦ πάντες, εἰ καὶ φύσει διέκειντο πρὸς Ἰουδαίους οὐκ εὐμενῶς, εὐλαβῶς εἶχον ἐπὶ καθαιρέσει τινὸς τῶν Ἰουδαϊκῶν νομίμων προσάφασθαι· καὶ ἐπὶ Τιβερίου μέντοι τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον, καίτοι τῶν ἐν Ἰταλία παρακινήεντων, ἠνίκα Σηιανὸς ἐσκευάσει τὴν ἐπίθεσιν.
 160 ἔγνω γάρ, εὐθέως ἔγνω μετὰ τὴν ἐκείνου τελευτὴν,

<sup>1</sup> "πατρίδος suspectum," says Reiter, and a correction to σποριδος = sportulae has been suggested. But cf. the application of πατρίς to Jerusalem in § 278. It is an essential part would offer the sacrifices. Yet nevertheless he 157 neither ejected them from Rome nor deprived them of their Roman citizenship because they were careful to preserve their Jewish citizenship also, nor took any violent measures against the houses of prayer, nor prevented them from meeting to receive instructions in the laws, nor opposed their offerings of the firstfruits. Indeed so religiously did he respect our interests that supported by wellnigh his whole household he adorned our temple through the costliness of his dedications, and ordered that for all time continuous sacrifices of whole burnt offerings should be carried out every day at his own expense as a tribute to the most high God. And these sacrifices are maintained to the present day and will be maintained for ever to tell the story of a character truly imperial.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 156-160

Yet more, in the monthly doles in his own city when 158 all the people each in turn receive money or corn, he never put the Jews at a disadvantage in sharing the bounty, but even if the distributions happened to come during the sabbath when no one is permitted to receive or give anything or to transact any part of the business of ordinary life, particularly of a lucrative kind, he ordered the dispensers to reserve for the Jews till the morrow the charity which fell to all.

XXIV. Therefore everyone everywhere, even if he 159 was not naturally well disposed to the Jews, was afraid to engage in destroying any of our institutions, and indeed it was the same under Tiberius though matters in Italy became troublesome when Sejanus was organizing his onslaughts. For Tiberius knew the 160 truth, he knew at once after Sejanus's death that of the argument that Augustus's favour was shown to the Jews in his own city.

---

PHILO

- ὅτι τὰ κατηγορηθέντα τῶν ὠκνηρότων τὴν Ῥώμην Ἰουδαίων ψευδεῖς ἦσαν διαβολαί, πλάσματα Σηιανοῦ τὸ ἔθνος ἀναρπάσαι θέλοντος, ὅπερ ἢ μόνον ἢ μάλιστα ἤδει βουλαῖς ἀνοσίοις καὶ πράξεσιν ἀντιβησόμενον ὑπὲρ τοῦ παρασπονδηθῆναι κινδυνεύσαντος αὐτοκράτορος. καὶ τοῖς πανταχόσε χειροτονουμένοις ὑπάρχοις ἐπέσκηψε παρηγορῆσαι μὲν τοὺς κατὰ πόλεις τῶν ἀπὸ τοῦ ἔθνους, ὡς οὐκ εἰς πάντας προβάσσης τῆς ἐπεξελεύσεως, ἀλλ' ἐπὶ μόνους τοὺς αἰτίους—ὀλίγοι δὲ ἦσαν—, κινήσαι δὲ μηδὲν τῶν ἐξ ἔθους, ἀλλὰ καὶ παρακαταθήκην ἔχειν τοὺς τε ἄνδρας ὡς εἰρηνικοὺς τὰς φύσεις καὶ τὰ νόμιμα ὡς ἀλείφοντα πρὸς εὐστάθειαν.
- 162 XXV. Ὁ δὲ Γάιος ἑαυτὸν ἐξετύφωσεν, οὐ λέγων μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ οἰόμενος εἶναι θεός. εἶτα οὐδένας εὔρεν οὔτε Ἑλλήνων οὔτε βαρβάρων ἐπιτηδειοτέρους Ἀλεξανδρέων εἰς τὴν τῆς ἀμέτρου καὶ ὑπὲρ φύσιν ἀνθρωπίνην ἐπιθυμίας βεβαίωσιν· δεινοὶ γάρ εἰσι τὰς κολακείας καὶ γοητείας καὶ ὑποκρίσεις, παρεσκευασμένοι μὲν θῶπας λόγους, [570] ἀνειμένοι | δὲ στόμασι καὶ ἀχαλίνοις πάντα φύροντες. θεοῦ κλήσις οὕτως ἐστὶ σεμνὸν παρ' αὐτοῖς, ὥστε καὶ ἴβеси καὶ ἰοβόλοις ἀσπίσι ταῖς ἐγχωρίοις καὶ πολλοῖς ἑτέροις τῶν ἐξηγριωμένων θηρίων αὐτῆς<sup>1</sup> μεταδεδώκασιν· ὥστε εἰκότως ἀταμιεύτοις χρώμενοι ταῖς εἰς θεὸν τεινούσαις προσηγορίαις ἀπατῶσι μὲν τοὺς ὀλιγόφρονας καὶ ἀπίστους τῆς Αἰγυπτιακῆς ἀθεότητος, ἀλίσκονται δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν ἐπισταμένων τὴν πολλὴν αὐτῶν ἡλι-
164 θιότητα, μᾶλλον δὲ ἀσέβειαν. ἦς ἄπειρος ὢν

<sup>1</sup> Reiter's text has αὐτῆς θηρίων, but he notes "transponenda vidit Mang.," as indeed seems necessary.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 160-164

the accusations made against the Jewish inhabitants of Rome were false slanders, invented by him because he wished to make away with the nation, knowing that it would take the sole or the principal part in opposing his unholy plots and actions, and would defend the emperor when in danger of becoming the victim of treachery. And he charged 161 his procurators in every place to which they were appointed to speak comfortably to the members of our nation in the different cities, assuring them that the penal measures did not extend to all but only to the guilty, who were few, and to disturb none of the established customs but even to regard them as a trust committed to their care, the people as naturally peaceable, and the institutions as an influence promoting orderly conduct.

XXV. But Gaius grew beside himself with vanity, 162 not only saying but thinking that he was God. He then found among the Greeks or the outside world no people fitted better than the Alexandrians to confirm the unmeasured passion which craves for more than is natural to mankind. For the Alexandrians are adepts at flattery and imposture and hypocrisy, ready enough with fawning words but causing universal disaster with their loose and unbridled lips. How much reverence is paid by them to the title of 163 God is shown by their having allowed it to be shared by the indigenious ibises and venomous snakes and many other ferocious wild beasts. It naturally followed that by this unrestricted use of names appertaining to God, while they deceived the little-wits who do not see through Egyptian godlessness, they stand condemned by those who understand their great folly or rather impiety. Failing to 164

PHILO

- Γάιος ὑπελάμβανε τῷ ὄντι νομίζεσθαι παρ' Ἀλεξανδρεῦσι θεός, ἐπειδήπερ οὐ πλαγίως ἀλλ' ἀντικρυς ἅπασιν ἐχρῶντο κατακόρως τοῖς ὀνόμασιν, 165 ὅσα τοῖς ἄλλοις ἔθος ἐπιφημίζεσθαι θεοῖς. εἶτα καὶ τὴν περὶ τὰς προσευχὰς νεωτεροποιίαν ἀπὸ καθαροῦ τοῦ συνειδότος καὶ τῆς εἰς αὐτὸν ἀκραιφνοῦς τιμῆς ὥετο γεγενῆσθαι, τῇ μὲν ταῖς ὑπομνηματικαῖς ἐφημερίσιν, ἃς ἀπὸ τῆς Ἀλεξανδρείας διεπέμποντο τινες, προσέχων—ἥδιστον γὰρ ἦν ἀνάγνωσμα τοῦτο αὐτῷ, ὡς καὶ τὰ τῶν ἄλλων συγγραφέων καὶ ποιητῶν ἀηδέστατα συγκρίσει τῆς ἐν τούτοις χάριτος νομίζεσθαι—, τῇ δὲ καὶ δι' ἐνίους οἰκέτας τοὺς τωθάζοντας αἰεὶ καὶ χλευάζοντας σὺν αὐτῷ.
- 166 XXVI. Τούτων ἦσαν οἱ πλείους Αἰγύπτιοι, πονηρὰ σπέρματα, κροκοδείλων καὶ ἀσπίδων τῶν ἐγχαυρίων ἀναμεμαγμένοι τὸν ἰὸν ὁμοῦ καὶ θυμὸν ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς. ἠγεμὼν δὲ οἶά τις ἦν χοροῦ τοῦ Αἰγυπτιακοῦ θιάσου παντὸς Ἑλικῶν, ἐπάρατον καὶ ἐξάριστον ἀνδράποδον παρεισφθαρὲν εἰς τὴν αὐτοκρατορικὴν οἰκίαν· ἀπεγεύσατο γὰρ τῶν ἐγκυκλίων κατὰ φιλοτιμίαν τοῦ προτέρου δεσπότη, 167 ὃς αὐτὸν ἐδωρήσατο Τιβερίῳ Καίσαρι. τότε μὲν οὖν οὐδεμιᾶς ἐτύγχανε προνομίας, ὅσα μειρακιώδη χαριεντίσματα Τιβερίου διαμεμισθηκότος, ἐπειδὴ πρὸς τὸ σεμνότερόν τε καὶ αὐστηρότερον σχεδὸν 168 ἐκ πρώτης ἡλικίας ἐπικλινῶς εἶχεν. ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ μὲν ἐτελεύτησε, Γάιος δὲ τὴν ἠγεμονίαν διεδέξατο,

<sup>a</sup> Or " in the regular curriculum of the schools."

<sup>b</sup> Or simply " zeal " as in § 60. In any case the meaning seems to be that his master wished to give an acceptable

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 164-168

understand this Gaius supposed that he was really regarded by the Alexandrians as a god, since they incessantly used plainly and without any indirection terms which other people commonly employ when speaking of God. Then again he thought that the violent proceedings against the meeting-houses had sprung from a clear conscience and from a sincere desire to do him honour. This impression was due partly to the attention he paid to the periodical notifications which were sent at the instance of some persons in Alexandria and made very pleasing reading for him, so much so that in comparison with their charm the works of others either in prose or poetry seemed to him very distasteful. Partly also it was caused by some of his domestics who joined him in perpetual scoffing and mockery. 165

XXVI. The majority of these were Egyptians, a seed bed of evil in whose souls both the venom and the temper of the native crocodiles and asps were reproduced. The one who played the part of chorus-leader to the whole Egyptian troupe was Helicon, an abominable execrable slave, who had been foisted for ill into the imperial household. For he had received a smattering of a liberal education<sup>a</sup> through the ambition<sup>b</sup> of his former master, who made a present of him to Tiberius Caesar. In his time indeed he got no high position as Tiberius thoroughly hated all juvenile pleasantries, since from his earliest years he was inclined to solemnity and austerity. But when he died and Gaius succeeded to his sovereignty, 167 168 present to Tiberius and therefore had his slave educated for this purpose. Yonge's translation, "in emulation of his master," would, I think, need πρός with acc. rather than the simple genitive.

PHILO

νέω δεσπότη παρεπόμενος εἰς ἀνέσεις καὶ τρυφὴν τὴν διὰ πάσης αἰσθήσεως ἐπιχαλῶντι, “σός,” εἶπε, “νῦν ὁ καιρὸς ἐστίν, Ἑλικῶν, ἐπέγειρε σαυτὸν· ἔχεις πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν ἀκροατὴν καὶ θεατὴν τὸν πάντων ἄριστον· εὐθικτος<sup>1</sup> εἶ τὴν φήσιν· σκώπτειν καὶ χαριεντίζεσθαι δύνασαι μᾶλλον ἐτέρων· ἀθύρματα καὶ παιδιὰς ληρώδεις καὶ παρασεσυρμένας οἶδας· τῶν ἐγκυκλίων οὐχ ἦττον πεπαίδευσαι τὰ ἀχόρευτα· πρόσσεσί σοι καὶ τὸ στωμύλον οὐκ

169 ἀτερπές· ἐὰν ἔτι κέντρον ἐγκαταμίξης τοῖς τωθασμοῖς ὑποκακόηθες, ὡς μὴ γέλωτα κινεῖν μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ πικρίαν ἐκ τοῦ καχυπόνου, τὸν δεσπότην

[571] ὄλον ἤρπακας | εὐφυῶς διακείμενον πρὸς ἀκρόασιν τῶν μετὰ χλεύης ἐγκλημάτων· ἀναπέπταται γὰρ αὐτοῦ, ὡς οἶδας, τὰ ὦτα καὶ ἀνωρθίασται πρὸς τοὺς ἐπιτετηδευκότας συνυφαίνειν τὸ βλασφημεῖν

170 τῷ συκοφαντεῖν· ὕλας δὲ μὴ ζήτηι περιττοτέρας· ἔχεις τὰς κατὰ Ἰουδαίων καὶ τῶν Ἰουδαϊκῶν ἔθων διαβολάς,<sup>2</sup> αἷς ἐνετράφης· ἐξ ἔτι σπαργάνων ἀνεδιδάχτης αὐτάς, οὐ παρ’ ἐνὸς ἀνδρὸς ἀλλὰ τοῦ γλωσσαργοτάτου μέρους τῆς Ἀλεξανδρέων πόλεως.

171 ἐπίδειξαι τὰ μαθήματα.” XXVII. τούτοις τοῖς παραλόγοις καὶ ἐπαράτοις λογισμοῖς ἐπάρας καὶ συγκροτήσας ἑαυτὸν συνέιχε καὶ περιεῖπε τὸν Γάιον, οὐ νύκτωρ, οὐ μεθ’ ἡμέραν

<sup>1</sup> MSS. εὐθικτος.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. καταβολάς. Perhaps, as Mangey suggested as an alternative, καταβοάς.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 168-171

Helicon, attaching himself to his new master who was relaxing into dissipation and voluptuous enjoyment of every sense, said to himself, "Now is your hour, Helicon! rouse yourself; you have an unrivalled auditor and spectator of your exhibitions; you are naturally quick of apprehension, you can scoff and jest more than other people, you now how to amuse and to play the fool with drolleries and quips and cranks. Your education has been quite as much in subjects unrecognized in the schools<sup>a</sup> as in those of the regular course; also your gift of the gab is not without its charm. If you also mix with your jestings the sting of a touch of malice so that you stir not only laughter but bitterness born of suspicion, you have your master a complete captive. For he is happily disposed by nature to listen to accusations mixed with derision. His ears as you know are wide open and pricked up to listen to those who have studied to combine abuse with sycophancy. And do not seek for needless abundance of material. You have the obloquy cast upon the Jews and their customs; in this you were reared; right from the cradle you were taught it not by one person only but by the noisiest element in the city of the Alexandrians. Display your learning." XXVII. Having stimulated and worked himself up with these perverse and execrable reflections he got a hold of Gaius and paid much court to him. Neither by day nor by night <sup>a</sup> Or perhaps more strongly "base and vicious." Philo may be thinking of Plato, Laws 654 A, where ὁ ἀχόρευτος is said to be ἀπαιδευτος, and the πεπαιδευμένος is the ἰκανῶς κεχορευκίως, which is afterwards defined as including not merely dancing and singing well, but showing in them a love for τὰ καλά, and hatred for τὰ αἰσχρά. If this is right, πεπαιδευσαι τὰ ἀχόρευτα is an intentional oxymoron.

PHILO

ἀφιστάμενος, ἀλλὰ πανταχοῦ συμπαρών, ἵνα ταῖς ἐρημίαις καὶ ἀναπαύλαις αὐτοῦ καταχρήται πρὸς τὰς κατὰ τοῦ ἔθνους αἰτίας, ἡδονὰς κινῶν τὰς διὰ σκωμμάτων ὁ πανουργότατος, ἵνα τιτρώσκωσιν αἱ διαβολαί· τὸν γὰρ ἐπ' εὐθείας κατήγορον οὔτε ὠμολόγει οὔτε ὁμολογεῖν ἐδύνατο, πλαγιάζων δὲ καὶ τεχνιτεύων χαλεπώτερος καὶ βαρύτερος ἦν ἐχθρὸς τῶν ἐπιγεγραμμένων<sup>1</sup> ἄντικρυς τὴν δυσ-172 μένειαν. φασὶ δὲ ὅτι καὶ τῶν Ἀλεξανδρέων οἱ πρέσβεις εὐ τοῦτο εἰδότες ἀφανῶς ἐμεμίσθωντο αὐτὸν μεγάλοις μισθοῖς, οὐ διὰ χρημάτων μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ἐπὶ τιμαῖς ἐλπίδων, ἃς ὑπέσπειραν αὐτῷ παρέξειν οὐκ εἰς μακράν, ἐπειδὰν ἀφίκηται
 173 Γάιος εἰς Ἀλεξάνδρειαν. ὁ δὲ τὸν καιρὸν ἐκείνιον ὄνειροπολῶν, ἐν ᾧ παρόντος τοῦ δεσπότη καὶ σὺν αὐτῷ σχεδόν τι τῆς οἰκουμένης—οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἄδηλον, ὅτι κατὰ θεραπείαν Γαίῳ συνεισβαλεῖ τὸ δοκιμώτατον καὶ ὅσον τῶν πόλεων ὅσους ἐστὶν ἀναστὰν ἀπὸ περάτων αὐτῶν—ὑπὸ τῆς μεγίστης καὶ ἐνδοξοτάτης πόλεως τιμηθήσεται, πάντα ὑπ-174 ισχνεῖτο. μέχρι μὲν οὖν τινος τὸν ἐμφωλεύοντα ἔνδον πολέμιον ἀγνοοῦντες ἐφυλαττόμεθα τοὺς ἕξω μόνους· ἐπεὶ δὲ ἤσθόμεθα, διηρενῶμεν περιβλεπόμενοι πάσας ὁδοὺς, εἴ πως δυνησόμεθα μαλθάξαι καὶ τιθασεῦσαι τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐξ ἅπαντος τρόπου καὶ τόπου βάλλοντα καὶ τοξεύοντα ἡμᾶς

<sup>1</sup> mss. ἀπογεγραμμένων ("registered themselves"), a word which seems not inappropriate here, where stress is laid on the open profession. I doubt whether change is necessary, though ἐπιγ. is very common in Philo.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 171-175

did he leave him but was everywhere in his company, so that he might make full use of his hours of solitude and leisure to press the charges against our nation. An utter villain, he worked upon the pleasure which malicious jesting gives to add a sting to slanders. For he neither owned that he was bringing a direct accusation nor could he have done so, but by his indirect and crafty methods he was a more difficult and formidable enemy than those who straightforwardly ranged themselves among their enemies. It is said also that the envoys of the Alexandrians knew this well and had secretly bribed him with big fees not only in money but also with hopes of honours which they covertly suggested they would procure for him soon when Gaius should come to Alexandria. Elated with visions of that occasion when in the presence of his master and of almost the whole habitable world, since undoubtedly all the men of light and leading<sup>a</sup> in the cities would journey from the furthest parts to join in homage to Gaius, he would be honoured by the greatest and most illustrious city of them all, he promised everything.

For some time, knowing nothing of the foe who was lurking within, we took precautions against foes outside only, but when we perceived the truth we began to search about and scan every path in the hope that we might be able to appease and soften the heart of a man who in every way and from every place was aiming his javelins and arrows at us so effectively. For he played ball with <sup>a</sup> The "eye of the city" is those through whom it sees what it needs, cf. the phrase ὄφθαλμὸς βασιλείας. Or perhaps simply "the choicest part" (so also ὄφθαλμὸς); cf. ὡς ὄψιν ἐν σώματι Spec. Leg. iv. 157.

PHILO

- 175 εὐσκόπως. καὶ συνεσφαίριζε γὰρ καὶ συνεγυμνά-ζετο καὶ συνελούετο καὶ συνηρίστα καὶ μέλλοντι κοιμᾶσθαι παρῆν Γαῖω, τὴν τοῦ κατακοιμιστοῦ καὶ κατ' οἰκίαν ἀρχισωματοφύλακος τεταγμένος τάξιν, ὅση μηδενὶ προσῆν ἄλλω, ὡς μόνος ἔχειν εὐκαιρούσας καὶ σχολαζούσας ἀκοὰς αὐτοκράτορος τῶν ἔξω διαφειμένας θορύβων εἰς ἀκρόασιν ὧν
- 176 μάλιστα ἐπόθει. διασυρμοὶ δὲ ἦσαν ἀνακεκραμένοι κατηγορίαις, ἵνα τοῖς μὲν ἡδονὰς κινῆ, ἡμᾶς δὲ τὰ μέγιστα βλάβη· τὸ μὲν γὰρ προηγούμενον ἔργον εἶναι δοκοῦν, ὁ διασυρμός, πάρεργον ἦν αὐτῷ, τὸ δὲ φαινόμενον πάρεργον, αἱ κατηγορίαι,
- 177 μόνον καὶ πρῶτον ἔργον. πάντα δὲ κάλων ἀνασείων, ὡς οἱ πνεῦμα δεξιὸν κατ' οἰάκων ἔχοντες,
- [572] ἐφέρετο πλησίστιος οὐριοδρομῶν, ἄλλας | ἐπ' ἄλ-λαις συντιθεῖς καὶ συνείρων αἰτίας. τοῦ δὲ ἐνετυποῦτο ἡ διάνοια παγιώτερον, ὡς ἄληστον εἶναι τὴν τῶν ἐγκλημάτων μνήμην.
- 178 XXVIII. Ἐν ἀπόροις δὲ καὶ ἐν ἀμηχάνοις
 ὄντες, ἐπειδὴ πάντα λίθον κινοῦντες ὑπὲρ τοῦ τὸν Ἑλικῶνα ἐξευμενίσασθαι πάροδον οὐδεμίαν ἀνευ-ρίσκομεν, μηδενὸς μήτε εἰπεῖν μήτε προσελθεῖν τολμῶντος ἕνεκα τῆς ἀλαζονείας καὶ βαρύτητος, ἥ πρὸς πάντας ἐκέχρητο, καὶ ἅμα διὰ τὸ ἀγνοεῖν, εἴ τις ἐστὶν αὐτῷ πρὸς τὸ Ἰουδαίων γένος ἀλλοτρι-ωσις ἀλείφοντι τὸν δεσπότην αἰεὶ καὶ συγκροτοῦντι κατὰ τοῦ ἔθνους, τὸ μὲν ἔτι πονεῖσθαι περὶ τοῦτο τὸ μέρος εἰάσαμεν, τοῦ δὲ ἀναγκαιοτέρου περιειχό-μεθα· γραμματεῖον γὰρ ἔδοξεν ἀναδοῦναι Γαῖω κεφαλαιώδη τύπον περιέχον ὧν τε ἐπάθομεν καὶ
- 179 ὧν τυχεῖν ἡξιούμεν. ἦν δὲ σχεδὸν τοῦτο ἐπιτομή
 τις ἱκετείας μακροτέρας, ἣν ἐπεπόμφεμεν πρὸ

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 175-179

Gaius, practised gymnastics with him, bathed with him, dined with him and was with him when he was going to bed, as he held the post of chamberlain and Captain of the Guard in the house, a post greater than any that was given to anyone else, so that he alone had convenient and leisurely audiences of the emperor, where he could listen released from outside disturbances to what was most to his heart. Satire 176 was blended with accusations so that while he gave rise to pleasure he did us a maximum of harm, for what seemed the leading feature, the satire, was with him secondary and what appeared secondary, the accusations, were his sole and primary task. So 177 letting out every reef like sailors with a fair wind at the stern, he was carried along at full sail racing before the breeze, while he assembled a string of indictments one after the other. And the impression made on Gaius's mind grew firmer so that his memory of the charges was ineffaceable.

XXVIII. In these straits and difficulties, since 178 while leaving no stone unturned to propitiate Helicon we found no way open, as no one dared to address or approach him because of the arrogance and harshness he showed to all, and also we did not know whether in always inciting and working up his master against the nation he was influenced by a personal dislike of the Jewish race, we ceased to exert ourselves in this direction and confined our efforts to the more pressing side. We determined to give Gaius a document representing in a summarized form the story of our sufferings and our claims. This document was practically 179 an epitome of a longer supplication which we had sent to him a short time before through the hands

PHILO

ὀλίγου δι' Ἀγρίππα τοῦ βασιλέως· ἐκ τύχης γὰρ ἐπεδήμησε τῇ πόλει μέλλων εἰς Συρίαν κατὰ τὴν 180 δοθεῖσαν αὐτῷ βασιλείαν ἀπαίρειν.<sup>1</sup> * * * ἐλελή-θειμεν δὲ ἄρα ἔτι ἀπατῶντες ἑαυτούς· καὶ γὰρ πρότερον, ὅτε εὐθύς ἠρξάμεθα πλεῖν οἰόμενοι πρὸς κριτὴν ἀφίξεσθαι τευξόμενοι τῶν δικαίων.

ὁ δὲ ἦν ἐχθρὸς ἄσπονδος, δελεάζων ὅσα τῷ δοκεῖν φαιδρῷ τῷ βλέμματι καὶ ἰλαρωτέραις ταῖς προσ-181 ρήσεσι. δεξιωσάμενος γὰρ ἡμᾶς ἐν τῷ πρὸς Τιβέρει πεδίῳ τὸ πρῶτον—ἔτυχε δὲ ἐκ τῶν μητρώων ἐξιῶν κήπων—ἀντιπροσηγόρευσε καὶ τὴν δεξιὰν χεῖρα κατέσεισεν ἀνιττόμενος εὐμένειαν καὶ τὸν ἐπὶ τῶν πρεσβειῶν, "Ὀμιλον ὄνομα, προσπέμφας, " αὐτός," ἔφη, " τῆς ὑμετέρας ὑποθέσεως ἀκούσομαι προσευκαιρήσας," ὥστε τοὺς ἐν κύκλῳ πάντας συνήδεσθαι καθάπερ ἤδη νενικηκόσι καὶ τῶν ἡμετέρων ὅσοι ταῖς ἐπιπολαίοις παράγονται

<sup>1</sup> Reiter here places what he calls (Prolegomena, p. 60) a "lacuna maior." On this see note b.

---

<sup>a</sup> This document of course was quite different from the complimentary address mentioned in Flaccus 103 as sent in duplicate through Agrippa. The statement made here seems to me to raise considerable difficulty. The natural meaning is that it was handed to Agrippa at his visit to Alexandria in the spring of 38. That the Jews might have given him a petition setting forth their rights, i.e. their claims to citizenship, is possible enough, and as circumstances had not changed this, this petition might have been adequate later. But it also is said to have set forth their sufferings, i.e. the persecutions and the desecration of the synagogues, and these could not have been described in a document handed to Agrippa during this visit, for it is impossible to suppose that he remained at Alexandria through the pogrom which culminated at the end of August. The only intelligible

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 179-181

of King Agrippa.<sup>a</sup> For he had chanced to pay a visit to the city when he was about to sail to Syria to take up the kingdom which had been given to him. . . .<sup>b</sup> But we proved to have been unwittingly 180 deceiving ourselves, not for the first time. For it was the same earlier, when we first started on our voyage thinking that we should meet a judge and get our rights.

Actually he was our mortal foe, beguiling us with the seeming geniality with which he eyed us and the increased cheeriness of his address. After first greeting us in the 181 plain by the Tiber, as he issued from the gardens left him by his mother, he repeated his salutation and waved his right hand signifying goodwill and sent the official who managed the admission of ambassadors named Homilus with the message: "I will hear your statement of the case myself when I get a good opportunity." Consequently everyone around us rejoiced with us as though we had already won the case, and those of our party who were mis-meaning I can give to the statement is that the visit of Agrippa had created an intimacy which made him a natural channel in the subsequent matters for approaching Gaius. Unless indeed some words are lost. See next note.

For Agrippa's life and personality see vol. ix. p. 532.

<sup>b</sup> Reiter gives no reason for supplying a lacuna here beyond the words "lacunam statuit Cohn." But Cohn's article in Philologus says nothing bearing on it, though he observes that as the ambassadors are suddenly introduced in ch. xxvii., some account of the reasons for the embassy may have been originally given there. I expect that his idea of a lacuna at this point in ch. xxviii. is a later modification. I see no reasons for supposing lacunas on any such grounds. See Intro. pp. xxii. But it is true that a few words to the effect that Agrippa's visit had led to intimacy with him might have cleared up the difficulty mentioned in the preceding note.

PHILO

- 182 φαντασίαις. ἐγὼ δὲ φρονεῖν τι δοκῶν περιττότερον καὶ δι' ἡλικίαν καὶ τὴν ἄλλην παιδείαν εὐλαβέστερος ἤμην ἐφ' οἷς ἔχαιρον οἱ ἄλλοι. “διὰ τί γάρ,” ἔφασκον ἀνακινῶν τὸν ἑμαυτοῦ λογισμόν, “τοσούτων ὄντων πρεσβευτῶν σχεδὸν ἀπὸ πάσης γῆς ἀφιγμένων, ἡμῶν εἶπε τότε μόνων ἀκούσεσθαι; τί βουλόμενος; οὐ γὰρ ἠγνόει γε ὄντας Ἰουδαίους,
- 183 οἷς ἀγαπητὸν τὸ μὴ ἐλαττοῦσθαι. τὸ δὲ δὴ καὶ προνομίας οἶεσθαι τυγχάνειν παρ' ἄλλοθενεὶ καὶ νέῳ καὶ αὐτεξουσίῳ δεσπότη μὴ καὶ μανίας ἐγγύς ἐστιν; ἀλλ' ἔοικε τῇ τῶν ἄλλων Ἀλεξανδρέων |
- [573] μερίδι προσκείσθαι, ἥ διδοὺς προνομίαν θάττον ὑπέσχετο δικάσειν, ἐὰν ἄρα μὴ τὸν ἴσον καὶ κοινὸν ἀκροατὴν ὑπερβάς ἀντὶ δικαστοῦ γένηται τῶν μὲν συναγωνιστής, ἡμῶν δὲ ἀντίπαλος.”
- 184 XXIX. Ταῦτα λογιζόμενος ἐσφάδαζον καὶ οὔτε μεθ' ἡμέραν οὔτε νύκτωρ ἠρέμουν. ἀθυμοῦντος δέ μου καὶ τὴν ἀνίαν στέγοντος<sup>1</sup>—οὐδὲ γὰρ ἀνενεγκεῖν ἀσφαλὲς ἦν—, ἕτερον κατασκήπτει βαρύτατον ἐξαπινάϊως ἀπροσδόκητον κακόν, οὐχ ἐνὶ μέρει τοῦ Ἰουδαϊκοῦ τὸν κίνδυνον ἐπάγον, ἀλλὰ συλλήβδην
- 185 ἅπαντι τῷ ἔθνει. ἀφίγμεθα μὲν γὰρ ἀπὸ Ῥώμης κόλπον, ἀμείβων τὰς ἰδίας ἐπαύλεις πολλὰς καὶ εἰς Δικαιάρχειαν ἐπακολουθοῦντες Γαίῳ· κατεληλύθει δὲ ἐπὶ θάλατταν καὶ διέτριβε περὶ τὸν
- 186 πολυτελῶς ἡσκημένας. φροντίζουσι δὲ ἡμῖν τῆς ὑποθέσεως—αἰεὶ γὰρ κληθήσεσθαι προσεδοκῶμεν—προσέρχεταιί τις ὑφαιμόν τι καὶ ταραχῶδες ὑπο-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἄνοιαν (or ἀγνοίαν) στένοντος.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 181-186

led by short-sighted fancies felt the same. But as 182
I believe myself in virtue of my age and my good education otherwise to possess a greater amount of good sense, what gave joy to the others rather alarmed me. Bestirring my thinking powers I said, “ Why when so many envoys were present from almost the whole earth did he say that he would hear us only ? What was his object ? For he must have known that we were Jews who would be contented if they were not treated worse than others.
To suppose that we shall take precedence with a 183 despot of an alien race, a young man possessing absolute power, surely borders on madness ; it looks as if he is attaching himself to the party of the other Alexandrians and it was to them that he gave precedence and promised to give judgement quickly, if indeed he has not discarded the idea of giving a fair and impartial hearing and instead of a judge become their advocate and our opponent.”

XXIX. Thus thinking I was deeply disturbed and 184 had no rest by day or night. But while in my despondency I kept my affliction concealed since it was not safe to let it appear, another very heavy calamity was suddenly and unexpectedly launched upon us, which endangered not one part only of the Jewish race but the whole body of the nation. We 185 had travelled from Rome to Puteoli following Gaius, who had come down to the sea side and was spending some time round the bay passing from one to another of the numerous and expensively furnished country houses which he owned. While we were anxiously 186 considering the statement of our case, since we were always expecting to be summoned, there came to us one with a troubled look in his bloodshot eyes and

PHILO

- βλεπόμενος, ἄσθματος μεστός, καὶ μικρὸν ἀπὸ
 τῶν ἄλλων ἀπαγαγών—πλησίον γὰρ ἦσαν τινες—“ἠκούσατε,” ἔφη, “τὰ καινά;” καὶ μέλλων ἀπαγγέλλειν ἐπεσχέθη, δακρύων ἀθρόας φορᾶς 187 ἐνεχθείσης. καὶ πάλιν ἀρξάμενος δεύτερον ἐπεσχέθη καὶ τρίτον. ἄπερ ὁρῶντες ἡμεῖς ἐπτοήμεθα καὶ παρεκαλοῦμεν μηνῦσαι τὸ πρᾶγμα, οὐ χάριν ἐλθεῖν ἔφασκεν. “οὐ γὰρ ἔνεκα τοῦ διὰ μαρτύρων κλαίειν· εἰ δὲ ἄξια δακρύων ἐστί, μὴ μόνος ἀπόλαυε τῆς λύπης· ἐθάδες γεγόναμεν ἤδη κακοπραγιῶν.” 188 ὁ δὲ μόλις μὲν ἀναλύζων δὲ ὁμως κεκομμένῳ τῷ πνεύματί φησιν. “οἴχεται ἡμῶν τὸ ἱερόν· ἀνδριάντα κολοσσιαῖον ἐσωτάτῳ τῶν ἀδύτων ἀνατεθῆναι 189 Γάιος προσέταξε Διὸς ἐπίκλησιν αὐτοῦ.” θαν-μασάντων δὲ τὸ λεχθὲν καὶ πεπηγόντων ὑπ’ ἐκπλήξεως καὶ μηδὲ προελθεῖν<sup>1</sup> ἔτι δυναμένων—ἀχανεῖς γὰρ εἰσθήκειμεν ὀλιγοδρανοῦντες καὶ καταρρέοντες περὶ αὐτοῖς, τῶν σωματικῶν τόνων ἐκνευρισμένων—, ἕτεροι παρήσαν τὰς αὐτὰς 190 φέροντες ὠδῖνας. ἔπειτα συγκλεισάμενοι πάντες ἀθρόοι ἰδίας ὁμοῦ καὶ κοινὰς τύχας ἐθρηνοῦμεν καὶ οἷα ὑπέβαλλεν ὁ νοῦς διεξήμεν—λαλίστατον γὰρ ἄνθρωπος ἀτυχῶν—· ἀγωνιάσωμεν<sup>2</sup> ὑπὲρ τοῦ μὴ εἰς ἅπαν ταῖς ἀνιάτοις<sup>3</sup> παρανομίαις ἀφεθῆναι.

<sup>1</sup> mss. προσελθεῖν.

<sup>2</sup> For another punctuation see note a.

<sup>3</sup> mss. ἐν αὐτοῖς: see note a. If the punctuation there suggested is accepted, Mangey’s conjecture of ἐν ἀστοῖς is possible. I would also ask for consideration for ἐνιαυσίους, i.e. outrages which have now lasted a year.

---

<sup>a</sup> If this punctuation is right the meaning is “don’t let us be led into making illegal resistance, or perhaps into action

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 186-190

gasping convulsively. He drew us a little way apart since there were some people standing near and said, "Have you heard the new tidings?" and when he was going to report it he was brought up short, as a flood of tears streamed from his eyes. He began 187 again and the second time stopped short and so too a third time. When we saw this we were all in a flutter and bade him tell us the matter which he said had brought him there. "For," we said, "you have not come just to have your weeping witnessed. If the facts are worth tears do not be the only one to feel sorrow. We have become inured to misfortunes by now." He managed with difficulty while sobbing 188 and breathing spasmodically to say, "Our temple is lost, Gaius has ordered a colossal statue to be set up within the inner sanctuary dedicated to himself under the name of Zeus." As we marvelled at his 189 words and, petrified by consternation, could not get any further, since we stood there speechless and powerless in a state of collapse with our hearts turned to water, others appeared bringing the same woeful tale. Then gathered altogether in seclusion 190 we bewailed the disaster personal to each and common to all and such thoughts as the mind suggested we discussed at length. For nothing is more ready of tongue than a man in misfortune. "Let us struggle," we said, "to save us from delivering ourselves altogether to fatal acts of lawlessness.<sup>a</sup> We sailed in which will bring upon us lawless outrages." But I should prefer to put the stop after ἀγωνιάσωμεν instead of after ἀφεθῆναι. The sense will be "let us face the crisis. It was to save ourselves from being the victims of outrages that we sailed," etc. In this case the παρανομίαι are the outrages we expected to happen in Alexandria. So substantially Mangey, though he reads ἀγωνιζόμενοι.

PHILO

χειμῶνος μέσου διεπλεύσαμεν ἀγνοοῦντες, ὅσος χειμῶν ἔφεδρός ἐστιν ὁ κατὰ γῆν ἀργαλεώτερος πολλῶ τοῦ κατὰ θάλατταν· τοῦ μὲν γὰρ ἡ φύσις αἰτία διακρίνουσα τοὺς ἐτησίους καιρούς, φύσις δὲ σωτήριον· ἐκείνου δὲ ἄνθρωπος οὐδὲν φρονῶν ἀνθρώπινον, νέος καὶ νεωτεροποιὸς ἀνημμένος τὴν [574] ἐφ' ἅπασιν | ἀνυπεύθυνον ἀρχὴν· νεότης δὲ μετ' ἐξ-ουσίας αὐτοκρατοῦς ὄρμαῖς ἀκαθέκτοις χρωμένη 191 κακὸν δῦσμαχον. ἐξέσται δὲ προσελθεῖν ἢ διαῖραι τὸ στόμα περὶ προσευχῶν τῷ λυμεῶνι τοῦ πανιέ-ρου; δῆλον γὰρ ὡς οὐ φροντιεῖ τῶν ἀφανεστέρων καὶ τιμῆς ἐλάττονος ἡξιωμένων ὁ τὸν περισημότατον καὶ ἐπιφανέστατον νεών, εἰς ὃν ἀνατολαὶ καὶ δύσεις ἀποβλέπουσιν ἡλίου τρόπον πανταχόσε 192 λάμποντα, καθυβρίζων. εἰ δὲ καὶ γένοιτό τις ἄδεια προσόδου, τί χρῆ προσδοκᾶν ἢ θάνατον ἀπαραίτητον; ἀλλ' ἔστω, τεθνηξόμεθα· ζωὴ γὰρ τίς ἐστιν ὁ ὑπὲρ φυλακῆς νόμων εὐκλεέστατος θάνατος. εἰ δὲ ἐκ τῆς ἡμετέρας τελευτῆς γενήσεται μηδὲν ὄφελος, οὐ μανία παραπολέσθαι, καὶ ταῦτα πρεσ-βεύειν δοκοῦντας, ὡς τῶν πεμφάντων μᾶλλον ἢ

---

<sup>a</sup> The six sections which follow become intelligible if we recognize that ιδίου in § 193 refers to the particular interests of the Alexandrian Jews, especially their claims to citizenship, as opposed to the interests of the nation as a whole, and not to the personal safety of the ambassadors. Philo and his colleagues had three courses of action before them. First they might proceed with their suit, perhaps by sending the document mentioned in § 178 if that had not been sent already. This was impracticable as far as the synagogue question was concerned and might probably cost them their lives (§ 191). Such a death was, indeed, honourable but under the circumstances a mere waste (§ 192). As to the other question, the midst of the stormy winter, not knowing how great a storm was awaiting us, a land storm far more dangerous than that of the sea. For that is the work of nature who divides the annual seasons, and nature is a preserver. But the other is the work of a man whose thoughts are not those of a man, a youth with the recklessness of youth, invested with irresponsible dominion over all. And youth coupled with absolute authority is subject to unrestrainable impulses, a formidable power for evil. <sup>a</sup> Shall we be allowed to 191 come near him and open our mouths in defence of the houses of prayer to the destroyer of the all-holy place? for clearly to houses less conspicuous and held in lower esteem no regard would be paid by one who insults that most notable and illustrious shrine whose beams like the sun's reach every whither, beheld with awe both by east and west. And even if we were allowed to approach him un- 192 molested, what have we to expect but death against which there is no appeal? Well so be it, we will die and be no more, for the truly glorious death, met in defence of laws, might be called life. But if our decease brings no advantage, is it not madness to let ourselves perish as well, particularly as we are supposed to act as ambassadors, so that the disaster citizenship, to press it when the national existence was in danger would be felt to be a selfish particularism (§§ 193, 194). The second alternative was to throw up the whole thing and go home. This is rejected as unworthy (§ 195). The third was to wait on quietly in Italy trusting in God and hoping that the crisis would pass (§ 196). This is probably what actually happened thanks to Agrippa's intercession, after which the envoys were admitted and even if unsuccessful, at any rate, left unharmed. I see no reason to agree with Balsdon, page 136, that this "laboured defence shows that they were criticised for neglecting to make any gesture at this point."

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 190-192

PHILO

- 193 τῶν ὑπομενόντων εἶναι τὴν συμφορὰν; οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ ὅσοι τὰς φύσεις μισοπονηρότατοι τῶν ὁμοφύλων ἀσέβειαν ἡμῶν κατηγορήσουσιν ὡς, ἐν ἐσχάτῳ κινδύνῳ τῶν ὅλων σαλευόντων, ἐπιμνησθέντων ὑπὸ φιλαυτίας ἰδίου τινός· τοῖς γὰρ μεγάλοις τὰ βραχέα καὶ τοῖς κοινοῖς τὰ ἴδια ὑποστέλλειν ἀναγκαῖον, ὧν οἰχομένων ἔρρει καὶ ἡ πολιτεία.
- 194 ποῦ γὰρ ὅσιον ἢ θεμιτὸν ἄλλως ἀγωνίζεσθαι, δεικνύντας ὡς ἐσμὲν Ἀλεξανδρεῖς, οἷς ὁ περὶ τῆς καθολικωτέρας πολιτείας ἐπικρέμαται κίνδυνος τῆς Ἰουδαίων; ἅμα γὰρ τῇ τοῦ ἱεροῦ καταλύσει δέος, μὴ καὶ τὸ κοινὸν τοῦ ἔθνους ὄνομα συναφανισθῆναι κελεύσῃ ὁ νεωτεροποιὸς καὶ μεγαλοουργὸς ἀνθρω-
- 195 πος. ἀμφοτέρων οὖν τῶν ὑποθέσεων δι' ἃς ἐστάλημεν οἰχομένων, ἴσως φήσει τις· τί οὖν, οὐκ ἤδесαν πραγματεύεσθαι τὴν μετὰ ἀσφαλείας ἐπάνοδον; πρὸς ὃν εἶπομι ἄν· ἢ οὐκ ἔχεις ἀνδρὸς εὐγενοῦς πάθος γνήσιον ἢ οὐκ ἐνετράφης οὐδὲ ἐνησκῆθης τοῖς ἱεροῖς γράμμασιν. ἐλπίδων εἰσὶ πλήρεις οἱ ὄντως εὐγενεῖς, καὶ οἱ νόμοι τοῖς ἐντυγχάνουσι μὴ χεῖλεσιν ἄκροισ ἐλπίδας ἀγαθὰς
- 196 δημιουργοῦσιν. ἴσως ἀπόπειρα ταῦτα τῆς καθεστῶσης γενεᾶς ἐστὶ, πῶς ἔχει πρὸς ἀρετὴν καὶ εἰ πεπαίδευται φέρειν τὰ δεινὰ λογισμοῖς ἰσχυρογνώμοσιν οὐ προκαταπίπτουσα. τὰ μὲν οὖν ἐξ ἀν-θρώπων ἅπαντα καὶ ἔρρει καὶ ἐρρέτω· μενέτω δὲ ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἀκαθαίρετος ἢ ἐπὶ τὸν σωτήρα θεὸν ἐλπίς, ὃς πολλάκις ἐξ ἀμηχάνων καὶ ἀπόρων περιέσωσε τὸ ἔθνος.
- 197 XXX. Ταῦτα ἅμα μὲν ὀλοφυρόμενοι τὰς ἀπροσ-

<sup>a</sup> See Intro. pp. xxvi f.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 192-197

would fall more on those who sent us than on the actual sufferers? Indeed those among our fellow 193 nationals who most detest wickedness will accuse us of impiety in selfishly pleading for something which concerns us in particular, when the existence of all is tottering in extreme danger. For small things must needs give way to big and particular to general interests, the loss of which means the perdition of the body politic. For what religion or righteousness 194 is to be found in vainly striving to show that we are Alexandrians, when we are menaced by the danger which threatens a more universal interest, the corporate body of the Jews? For it is to be feared that the overthrow of the temple will be accompanied by an order for the annihilation of our common name and nation from the man who deals in revolution on so great a scale. If then both the 195 causes<sup>a</sup> which we were sent to plead are lost, someone perhaps will say, 'Well what then? did they not know how to manage their safe return?' To such a one I would say, 'Either you have not the genuine feelings of the nobly born or you were not reared or trained in the sacred writings.' The truly noble are always hopeful and the laws create good hopes for those who take more than a mere sip of their study. Perhaps these things are sent to try the 196 present generation, to test the state of their virtue and whether they are schooled to bear dire misfortunes with a resolution which is fortified by reason and does not collapse at once. So then what man can do is gone, and let it go. But let our souls retain indestructible the hope in God our Saviour who has often saved the nation when in helpless straits."

XXX. Thus we talked on, at once lamenting 197

PHILO

δοκήτους ἀτυχίας ἅμα δὲ καὶ παρηγοροῦντες ἑαυτοὺς ἐλπίδι μεταβολῆς γαληνοτέρας διεξῆμεν.
 μικρὸν δὲ ἐπισχόντες πρὸς τοὺς ἀπαγγείλαντας, | [575] “ τί καθ’ ἡσυχίαν,” εἶπομεν, “ κάθησθε, σπινθῆρας αὐτὸ μόνον τοῖς ὤσιν ἡμῶν ἐνιέντες, ὑφ’ ὧν καιό-μεθα καὶ πυρπολούμεθα, δέον προσεξηγεῖσθαι καὶ 198 τὰ κεκινηκότα τὸν Γάιον;” οἱ δέ· “ τὴν μὲν ἀνωτάτω καὶ πρώτην αἰτίαν ἴστε, ἣν καὶ πάντες ἴσασι· ἄνθρωποι· θεὸς βούλεται νομίζεσθαι, ὑπ-εἶλθε δὲ μόνους Ἰουδαίους μὴ πείσεσθαι, οἷς μείζον οὐδὲν ἂν προστρίψαιτο κακὸν ἢ λυμηνάμενος τὴν τοῦ ἱεροῦ σεμνότητα. κατήχηται δέ, ὅτι καὶ πάντων ἱερῶν τῶν πανταχοῦ κάλλιστόν ἐστιν ἐξ ἀπείρων χρόνων ἀπαύστοις καὶ ἀφειδέσι δαπάναις αἰεὶ προσκοσμούμενον· δύσερις δὲ καὶ φιλόνεικος ὧν σφετερίσασθαι τοῦτο εἰς ἑαυτὸν διανοεῖται.
 199 παρατέθηται δὲ νῦν μᾶλλον ἢ πρότερον ἐξ ἐπιστολῆς, ἣν ἔπεμψε Καπίτων. φόρων ἐκλογεὺς ὁ Καπίτων ἐστὶ τῶν τῆς Ἰουδαίας, ἔχει δὲ πῶς πρὸς τοὺς ἐγχωρίους ἐγκότως· πένης γὰρ ἀφιγμένος καὶ ἐξ ὧν νοσφίζεται καὶ παρεκλέγει ποικίλον τινὰ καὶ πολὺν πλοῦτον ἠθροικῶς, εἶτα εὐλαβηθεῖς, μή τις αὐτοῦ γένηται κατηγορία, τέχνην ἐπενόησεν, ἣ διαβλαῖς τῶν ἀδικηθέντων 200 διακρούσεται τὰς αἰτίας. ἀφορμὴν ἡ δὲ αὐτῷ δίδωσιν εἰς ὅπερ ἐβούλετο συντυχίᾳ τις τοιαύτη. τὴν Ἰάμνειαν—πόλις δὲ ἐστὶ τῆς Ἰουδαίας ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα πολυάνθρωπος—[ταύτην] μιγάδες οἰκοῦσιν, οἱ πλείους μὲν Ἰουδαῖοι, ἕτεροι δὲ τινες ἀλλόφυλοι παρεισφθαρέντες ἀπὸ τῶν πλησιοχώρων, οἱ τοῖς τρόπον τινὰ αὐθιγενέσιν ὄντες μέτοικοι κακὰ καὶ

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 197-200

our unexpected misfortunes and comforting ourselves with a hope of a change to serener conditions. Then pausing for a little we said to those who had brought the news, "Why do you sit here silently merely implanting in our ears the sparks to light the fire by which we are consumed, instead of proceeding to tell us the causes which have moved Gaius to do this?" They replied, "You know the chief and 198 primary cause which all men also know. He wishes to be thought a god and has supposed that the only dissentients will be the Jews on whom he could inflict no greater injury than the ruin of the sanctity of their temple. He has been instructed that of all the temples anywhere it is the most beautiful, ever from endless ages embellished by ceaseless and un-sparing expenditure. Quarrelsome and contentious as he is, he proposes to appropriate it for his own use. But now his eagerness has become 199 keener than ever before owing to a letter sent to him by Capito. Capito is the tax-collector for Judaea and cherishes a spite against the population. When he came there he was a poor man but by his rapacity and peculation he has amassed much wealth in various forms. Then fearing that some accusation might be brought against him he devised a scheme to elude the charges by slandering those whom he had wronged. It chanced that an opportunity for obtain- 200 ing his object was given by the following incident. Jamneia, one of the most populous cities of Judaea, is inhabited by a mixture of people, the majority being Jews with some others of alien races, intruders for mischief from the dwellers in adjacent countries. These people being new settlers have made themselves a pest and a nuisance to those who are in a

PHILO

- πράγματα παρέχουσιν, αεί τι παραλύοντες τῶν 201 πατρίων Ἰουδαίους. οὗτοι παρὰ τῶν ἐπιφοιτῶντων ἀκούοντες, ὄση σπουδῇ κέχρηται Γάιος περὶ τὴν ἰδίαν ἐκθέωσιν καὶ ὡς ἀλλοτριώτατα διάκειται πρὸς ἅπαν τὸ Ἰουδαϊκὸν γένος, καιρὸν ἐπιτήδειον εἰς ἐπίθεσιν παραπεπτωκέναι νομίζοντες αὐτοσχέδιον ἀνιστάσι βωμὸν εἰκαιοτάτης ὕλης, πηλὸν σχηματίσαντες εἰς πλίνθους, ὑπὲρ τοῦ μόνον ἐπι-βουλεύειν τοῖς συνοικοῦσιν· ἤδεσαν γὰρ οὐκ ἀνεξομένους καταλυομένων τῶν ἐθῶν, ὅπερ καὶ ἐγένετο.
 202 θεασάμενοι γὰρ καὶ δυσανασχετήσαντες ἐπὶ τῷ τῆς ἱερᾶς χώρας τὸ ἱεροπρεπὲς ὄντως ἀφανίζεσθαι καθαιροῦσι συνελθόντες· οἱ δὲ εὐθύς ἐπὶ τὸν Κα-πίωνα ἤκον, ὃς ἦν τοῦ δράματος ὄλου δημιουργός.
 ἔρμαιον δὲ εὐρηκέναι νομίσας, ὅπερ ἐκ πολλῶν χρόνων ἀνεζήτηι, γράφει Γαῖῳ διαίρων τὰ πράγ-203 ματα καὶ μετεωρίζων. ὁ δὲ διαναγνοῦς<sup>1</sup> πλουσιώτερον καὶ μεγαλοφρονέστερόν τι ἀντὶ τοῦ πλυνθίνου βωμοῦ τοῦ κατ' ἐπήρειαν ἀνασταθέντος
 [576] ἐν Ἰαμνείᾳ κελεύει | κολοσσιαῖον ἀνδριάντα ἐπίχρυσον ἐν τῷ τῆς μητροπόλεως ἱερῷ καθιδρυθῆναι, συμβούλοις χρησάμενος τοῖς ἀρίστοις καὶ σοφωτάτοις, Ἐλικῶνι τῷ εὐπατρίδῃ δούλῳ, σπερμολόγῳ, περιτρίμματι, καὶ Ἀπελλῇ τινι τραγωδῷ, ὃς ἀκμῇ μὲν τῆς πρώτης ἡλικίας, ὡς φασιν, ἐκαπήλευσε τὴν ὥραν, ἕξωρος δὲ γενόμενος ἐπὶ τὴν σκηνὴν 204 παρῆλθεν. ὅσοι δὲ σκηνοβατοῦσιν ἐμπορευόμενοι θεαταῖς καὶ θεάτροις, αἰδοῦς εἰσι καὶ σωφροσύνης ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀναισχυντίας καὶ ἀκοσμίας ἐρασταὶ τῆς ἀνωτάτῳ· διὰ ταῦτα εἰς τὴν τοῦ συμβούλου

<sup>1</sup> MSS. διαγνοῦς (which however is sometimes used in the same sense: v. Stephanus); cf. Flaccus 100.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 200-204

sense indigenous by perpetually subverting some part of the institutions of the Jews. Hearing from travel- 201 lers visiting them how earnestly Gaius was pressing his deification and the extreme hostility which he felt towards the whole Jewish race, they thought that a fit opportunity of attacking them had fallen in their way. Accordingly they erected an extemporized altar of the commonest material with the clay moulded into bricks, merely as a plan to injure their neighbours, for they knew that they would not allow their customs to be subverted, as indeed it turned out. For, when they saw it and felt it intolerable 202 that the sanctity which truly belongs to the Holy Land should be destroyed, they met together and pulled it down. The others at once went off to Capito, who was the author of the whole episode, and he, thinking that he had found a piece of luck which he had long been seeking, wrote to Gaius a highly exaggerated account of the facts. Gaius 203 after reading it gave orders that in place of the altar of bricks erected in wanton spite in Jamneia something richer and more magnificent, namely a colossal statue coated with gold, should be set up in the temple of the mother city. In this he followed the advice of those excellent and sapient advisers, that member of the aristocracy Helicon, slave, scrap retailer, piece of riff-raff, and one Apelles<sup>a</sup> a tragic actor, who, they say, in the flower of his prime had trafficked his youthful charms, but when the bloom was passed went on to the stage. Of course performers on the stage 204 whose trade is with theatres and theatre-goers are lovers of modesty and sobriety, not of shamelessness and extreme indecency. The reason why Apelles <sup>a</sup> Cf. Suet. Gaius 33 and Dio lix. 5.

PHILO

τάξιν ὁ Ἀπελλῆς παρήλθεν, ἵνα βουλευέσθαι Γάιος μεθ' οὗ μὲν ὡς σκωπτέον, μεθ' οὗ δὲ ὡς ἀστέον, ὑπερβὰς τὰς περὶ τῶν ὄλων σκέψεις, ὡς εἰρηνεύ-

205 εσθαι καὶ ἡρεμείσθαι τὰ πανταχοῦ πάντα. ὁ μὲν οὖν Ἑλικῶν, σκορπιῶδες ἀνδράποδον, τὸν Αἴγυπτιακὸν ἰὸν εἰς Ἰουδαίους ἤφιεν, ὁ δὲ Ἀπελλῆς τὸν ἀπὸ Ἀσκάλωνος ἦν γὰρ ἐκεῖθεν· Ἀσκαλωνίταις δὲ ἀσύμβατός τις καὶ ἀκατάλλακτος δυσμένεια πρὸς τοὺς τῆς ἱερᾶς χώρας οἰκήτορας Ἰουδαίους 206 ἐστὶν οὖσιν ὁμόροις." ταῦτα ἀκούοντες ἐφ' ἐκάστου ῥήματος καὶ ὀνόματος ἐτιρωσκόμεθα τὰς ψυχάς. ἀλλ' οἱ μὲν καλῶν πράξεων καλοὶ σύμβουλοι μικρὸν ὕστερον τὰ ἐπίχειρα εὗρον τῆς ἀσεβείας, ὁ μὲν ὑπὸ Γαίου σιδήρῳ δεθεὶς ἐφ' ἐτέραις αἰτίαις καὶ στρεβλούμενος καὶ τροχιζόμενος ἐκ περιτροπῆς, ὥσπερ ἐν ταῖς περιοδιζούσαις νόσοις, ὁ δὲ Ἑλικῶν ὑπὸ Κλαυδίου Γερμανικοῦ Καίσαρος ἀναιρεθείς, ἐφ' οἷς ἄλλοις ὁ φρενοβλαβῆς ἠδίκησεν. ἀλλὰ ταῦτα μὲν ὕστερον ἐγένετο.

207 XXXI. Ἡ δὲ περὶ τῆς ἀναθέσεως τοῦ ἀνδριάντος ἐπιστολὴ γράφεται, καὶ οὐχ ἀπλῶς ἀλλ' ὡς οἶόν τε ἦν περιεσκευμένως εἰς ἀσφάλειαν. κελεύει γὰρ Πετρωνίῳ τῷ τῆς Συρίας ἀπάσης ὑπάρχῳ, πρὸς ὃν καὶ τὴν ἐπιστολὴν ἐγεγράφει, τῆς παρ' Εὐφράτῃ στρατιᾶς, ἢ τὴν διάβασιν τῶν ἐξῶν βασιλέων καὶ ἐθνῶν παρεφύλαττε, τὴν ἡμίσειαν ἄγειν ἐπὶ τῆς Ἰουδαίας τὸν ἀνδριάντα παραπέμψουσας, οὐχ ἵνα σεμνοποίησιν τὴν ἀνάθεσιν, ἀλλ' ἵνα, εἰ διακωλύοι<sup>1</sup>

208 τις, εὐθύς ἀπόληται. τί λέγεις, ὦ δέσποτα;

<sup>1</sup> MSS. διακωλύει.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 204-207

was advanced to the post of councillor was that Gaius might take advice on the right method of jesting from one and of chanting from the other, having set aside all consideration for the general welfare by which peace and tranquillity of every thing in every place might be maintained. So then Helicon, scorpion 205 in form of a slave, vented his Egyptian venom on the Jews and so too Apelles with the venom of Ascalon. For that was the place he came from, and the Ascalonites have a truceless and irreconcilable hostility to the Jewish inhabitants of the Holy Land on whose borders they live." As we heard this every single 206 word was a wound to our souls. But shortly afterwards these admirable advisers of admirable actions received the reward of their impiety. Apelles for other reasons was thrown by Gaius into chains of iron and tortured by the rack and the wheel in turns <sup>a</sup> like people suffering from recurring fevers. Helicon was put to death by Claudius Germanicus Caesar for the other wrongs which the madman had committed. But these events belong to a later time.

XXXI. Gaius's letter enjoining the dedication of 207 the statue was written not in simple terms but with all circumspection possible to ensure safety. He ordered his viceroy for the whole of Syria, Petronius, to whom the letter was addressed, to bring for the conduct of the statue to Judaea half the army quartered on the Euphrates to guard the passage against the kings and nations of the east. This was done not to add dignity to the dedication but to effect the immediate destruction of anyone who tried to prevent it.

<sup>a</sup> Or "periodically" (rack and wheel being regarded as a single process), which suits the figure of recurrent fevers better.

PHILO

προειληφώς οὐκ ἀνεξομένους, ἀλλ' ὑπερασπιούοντας τοῦ νόμου καὶ προαποθανουμένους τῶν πατρίων πολεμοποιεῖς; οὐ γὰρ ἔοικας δι' ἄγνοιαν ὧν εἰκὸς ἦν ἀποβήσεσθαι τοῦ περὶ τὸ ἱερόν ἄψασθαι νεω-τερισμοῦ, προμαθῶν δὲ ἀκριβῶς τὰ μέλλοντα ὡς
 ἤδη παρόντα καὶ τὰ γενησόμενα ὡς χειριζόμενα<sup>1</sup> | [577] τὴν στρατιὰν εἰσάγειν προσέταξας, ἵνα θυσίαις ἐναγέσι<sup>2</sup> πρώταις καθιερωθῇ τὸ ἀφίδρυμα, σφαγαῖς 209 ἀθλίων ἀνδρῶν ὁμοῦ καὶ γυναικῶν. ὁ μὲν οὖν Πετρώνιος τὰ ἐπισταλέντα διαναγνοὺς ἐν ἀμηχάνοις ἦν, οὔτε ἐναντιοῦσθαι δυνάμενος διὰ φόβον—ἦδει γὰρ ἀφόρητον οὐ μόνον κατὰ τῶν τὰ κελευσθέντα μὴ πραξάντων, ἀλλὰ καὶ κατὰ τῶν μὴ εὐθύς—οὔτε ἐγχειρεῖν εὐμαρῶς· ἦδει γὰρ ἀνθ' ἐνὸς θανάτου μυρίουσ ἄν, εἴπερ δυνατὸν ἦν, ἐθελήσοντας ὑπομεῖναι μᾶλλον ἢ περιδεῖν τι τῶν ἀπειρημένων 210 δρώμενον. ἅπαντες γὰρ ἄνθρωποι φυλακτικοὶ τῶν ἰδίων ἔθῶν εἰσι, διαφερόντως δὲ τὸ Ἰουδαίων ἔθνος· θεόχρηστα γὰρ λόγια τοὺς νόμους εἶναι ὑπολαμβάνοντες καὶ τοῦτο ἐκ πρώτης ἡλικίας τὸ μάθημα παιδευθέντες ἐν ταῖς ψυχαῖς ἀγαλματο-211 φοροῦσι τὰς τῶν διατεταγμένων εἰκόνας· εἶτα ἐναργεῖς τύπους καὶ μορφὰς αὐτῶν καθορῶντες ἀεὶ τοῖς λογισμοῖς αὐτῶν τεθήπασι· καὶ τοὺς μὲν τιμητικῶς ἔχοντας ἀλλοφύλους αὐτῶν οὐχ ἦττον τῶν ἰδίων ἀποδέχονται πολιτῶν, τοῖς δὲ ἢ καθαιροῦσιν ἢ χλευάζουσιν ὡς πολεμιωτάτοις ἀπέχθονται· καὶ πεφρίκασι μὲν ἕκαστον τῶν διηγορευμένων

<sup>1</sup> MSS. χειριζόμενα ὅτ ἐν χειρὶ ἐσόμενα.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. εὐαγέσι.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 208-211

What mean you by this, my lord and master? is it 208 an act of war based on the foreknowledge that they would not submit but would take up arms to defend the laws and die for their national institutions?
For surely it was not done in ignorance of the probable results of any attempt to violate the temple. No, you foresaw what would take place as clearly as if it were already present and the future events as though they were already in hand, and so you ordered the army to be brought in that the first sacrifice with which the image was consecrated might be polluted with the massacre of unhappy men and women alike.

Petronius hav- 209
ing read the instructions was in great difficulties.
Fear made it impossible for him to oppose the order, for he knew that Gaius crushed irresistibly not only those who did not carry out his command but also those who did not do so at once. Neither could he lightly undertake it, for he knew that the Jews would willingly endure to die not once but a thousand times, if it were possible, rather than allow any of the prohibited actions to be committed.
For all men guard their own customs, but this is 210 especially true of the Jewish nation. Holding that the laws are oracles vouchsafed by God and having been trained in this doctrine from their earliest years, they carry the likenesses of the commandments enshrined in their souls. Then as they contemplate 211 their forms thus clearly represented they always think of them with awe. And those of other races who pay homage to them they welcome no less than their own countrymen, while those who either break them down or mock at them they hate as their bitterest foes. And such dread is inspired by each of the pro-

PHILO

- οὕτως, ὡς ἅπασαν τὴν παρ' ἀνθρώποις εἶτε εὐτυ-χίαν εἶτε εὐδαιμονίαν χρῆ καλεῖν μηδέποτ' ἂν ὑπὲρ παραβάσεως καὶ τοῦ τυχόντος ἂν ὑπαλλάξασθαι.
- 212 περιττοτέρα δὲ καὶ ἐξαιρέτος ἐστὶν αὐτοῖς ἅπασιν
 ἢ περὶ τὸ ἱερὸν σπουδή. τεκμήριον δὲ μέγιστον· θάνατος ἀπαραίτητος ὤρισταὶ κατὰ τῶν εἰς τοὺς ἐντὸς περιβόλους παρελθόντων—δέχονται γὰρ εἰς τοὺς ἐξωτέρω τοὺς πανταχόθεν πάντας—τῶν οὐχ ὁμοειδῶν.
- 213 Εἰς δὴ ταῦτα ἀφορῶν ὁ Πετρώνιος βραδὺς ἦν ἐγχειρητής, ὅσον τόλμημα μεγαλουργεῖται σκεπτό-μενος, καὶ συγκαλέσας ὡς ἐν συνεδρίῳ τοὺς τῆς ψυχῆς ἅπαντας λογισμοὺς τὴν ἐκάστου γνώμην διηρεῦνα καὶ πάντας εὑρισκεν ὁμογνωμονοῦντας περὶ τοῦ μηδὲν κινεῖν τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς καθωσιωμένων, πρῶτον διὰ τὸ φύσει δίκαιον καὶ εὐσεβές, ἔπειτα διὰ τὸν ἐπικρεμάμενον κίνδυνον, οὐκ ἐκ θεοῦ μόνον
- 214 ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ἐπηρεαζομένων. ἔννοιά τε αὐτὸν εἰσῆει τοῦ ἔθνους, ὅσον ἐστὶν ἐν πολυαν-θρωπία, ὅπερ οὐχ ἐδέξατο καθάπερ τῶν ἄλλων ἕκαστον μιᾶς χώρας τῆς ἀποκεκληρωμένης αὐτῷ μόνῳ περίβολος, ἀλλ' ὀλίγου δέω φάναι πᾶσα ἡ οἰκουμένη· κέχυται γὰρ ἀνά τε τὰς ἡπείρους καὶ νήσους ἀπάσας, ὡς τῶν αὐθιγενῶν μὴ πολλῶ τινι
- 215 δοκεῖν ἐλαττοῦσθαι. τοσαύτας μυριάδας ἐφέλκεσθαι πολεμίων ἄρ' οὐ σφαλερώτατον; ἀλλὰ μήποτε γένοιτο συμφρονήσαντας τοὺς ἑκασταχοῦ πρὸς ἄμυναν ἐλθεῖν· ἄμαχόν τι συμβήσεται χρῆμα·
 δίχα τοῦ καὶ τοὺς τὴν Ἰουδαίαν κατοικοῦντας |
 [578] ἀπείρους τε εἶναι τὸ πλῆθος καὶ τὰ σώματα γεν-

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 211-215

nouncements that they would never purchase what men deem good fortune or happiness, whichever name is right, by transgressing even in the slightest matters. Still more abounding and peculiar is the 212 zeal of them all for the temple, and the strongest proof of this is that death without appeal is the sentence against those of other races who penetrate into its inner confines. For the outer are open to everyone wherever they come from.

Having these things before his eyes Petronius was 213 slow to set to work. He saw the audacity of so vast an enterprise, and having mustered all the reasoning faculties of his soul, as though in a council, he looked to see what verdict they gave, and found it unanimous against destroying anything which was held sacred from the beginning, primarily from a feeling of natural justice and piety, secondly from the danger threatened not only from God but from the victims of the outrage. He bethought him of the 214 vast number of people comprised in the nation, which needed to contain it not like every other the circumference of a single country allotted to itself alone, but, one might almost say, the whole habitable world. For it is spread abroad over all the continents and islands so that it seems to be not much less than the indigenous inhabitants. To draw all these myriads 215 into war against him was surely very dangerous. Heaven forbid indeed that the Jews in every quarter should come by common agreement to the defence. The result would be something too stupendous to be combated.<sup>a</sup> But without this the inhabitants of Judea are unlimited in number. Their bodies are <sup>a</sup> χρῆμα is used in the idiomatic sense of something big, of which ὅς χρῆμα μέγα is the stock example.

PHILO

ναιοτάτους καὶ τὰς ψυχὰς εὐτολμοτάτους καὶ προαποθνήσκειν αἰρουμένους τῶν πατρίων ὑπὸ φρονήματος, ὡς μὲν ἔνιοι τῶν διαβαλλόντων εἵποιεν ἄν, βαρβαρικοῦ, ὡς δὲ ἔχει τάληθές, ἐλευθερίου καὶ 216 εὐγενοῦς. ἐφόβουν δὲ αὐτὸν καὶ αἱ πέραν Εὐφράτου δυνάμεις· ἦδει γὰρ Βαβυλῶνα καὶ πολλὰς ἄλλας τῶν σατραπειῶν ὑπὸ Ἰουδαίων κατεχομένας, οὐκ ἀκοῆ μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ πείρα· καθ' ἕκαστον γὰρ ἔνιαυτὸν ἱεροπομποὶ στέλλονται χρυσοῦν καὶ ἄργυρον πλεῖστον κομίζοντες εἰς τὸ ἱερόν τὸν ἀθροισθέντα ἐκ τῶν ἀπαρχῶν, δυσβάτους καὶ ἀτριβεῖς καὶ ἀνηνύτους ὁδοὺς περαιούμενοι, ἃς λεωφόρους εἶναι νομίζουσιν, ὅτι πρὸς εὐσέβειαν ἄγειν δοκοῦσι.
 217 περιδεῆς οὖν ὡς εἰκὸς ἦν, μὴ πυθόμενοι τὴν καινουργουμένην ἀνάθεσιν ἐπιφοιτήσωσιν ἐξαίφνης καὶ περίσχωσιν, οἱ μὲν ἔνθεν οἱ δὲ ἔνθεν, κύκλος γενόμενοι, καὶ συνάψαντες ἀλλήλοις τοὺς ἐναποληφ-θέντας μέσους δεινὰ ἐργάσωνται. τοιοῦτοις μὲν 218 λογισμοῖς χρώμενος ἀπώκνει. πάλιν δὲ ὑπὸ τῶν ἐναντίων ἀνθείλκετο, “ δεσπότης,” λέγων, “ ἡ πρόσταξις ἐστὶ καὶ νέου καὶ ὃ τι ἂν βουλευθῆ τοῦτο συμφέρον κρίνοντος καὶ τὸ γνωσθὲν ἅπαξ ἐπιτελεσθῆναι, κἂν ἀλυσιτελέστατον ἦ καὶ φιλο-νεικίας καὶ ἀλαζονείας γέμον, ὅς γε καὶ ὑπερπηδήσας τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐν θεοῖς ἦδη γράφει ἑαυτόν.
 ἐπικρέμαται δὴ μοι κίνδυνος ὁ περὶ ψυχῆς καὶ ἐναντιωθέντι καὶ εἷξαντι, ἀλλ' εἷξαντι μὲν μετὰ πολέμου καὶ τάχα ἀμφίβολος<sup>1</sup> καὶ οὐ πάντως
 ἀποβησόμενος,<sup>1</sup> ἐναντιωθέντι δὲ ἀπαραίτητος καὶ

<sup>1</sup> Perhaps read ἀμφίβολου . . . ἀποβησομένου, which would be more logical.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 215-218

of the finest quality and their souls of the highest courage, preferring to die in defence of their national institutions, moved by a high spirit not as some of their slanderers would say barbaric but in very truth worthy of the free and nobly born. He was frightened 216 also by the forces beyond the Euphrates, since that Babylon and many other satrapies were occupied by Jews was known to him not only by report but by experience. For every year envoys were dispatched for the sacred purpose of conveying to the temple a great quantity of gold and silver amassed from the firstfruits, and these envoys travel over the pathless, trackless, endless routes which seem to them good highroads because they feel that they lead them to piety. So he was naturally much alarmed lest hearing 217 of this unprecedented dedication the Jews of those parts might suddenly take to raiding, and coming from different quarters might encircle his troops and joining hands attack them now isolated in their midst with terrible effect. While following this line of reasoning he shrank from action.

Then again he was drawn in the opposite direction 218 by counter-arguments. "The order," he said, "is given by a master who is young and judges that whatever he wishes is beneficial and that what he has once decreed is as good as accomplished, be it ever so unprofitable and charged with contentiousness and arrogance. For he has soared above man's estate and already ranks himself as among the gods. My life is in imminent danger whether I oppose or give way, but while if I give way the danger is the prospect of war the result of which is doubtful, and there is no certainty that it will happen at all, if I oppose, its source is Gaius and it admits of no appeal and no

PHILO

- 219 ὁμολογούμενος ἐκ Γαίου." συνελάμβανον δὲ τῇ γνώμῃ ταύτῃ πολλοὶ τῶν συνδιεπόντων τὰ κατὰ Συρίαν αὐτῷ Ῥωμαίων, εἰδότες ὅτι καὶ ἐπ' αὐτοὺς πρώτους αἱ ἀπὸ Γαίου χωρήσουσιν ὄργαι καὶ τιμωρίαι ὡς συναιτίους τοῦ τὸ κελευσθὲν μὴ
- 220 γενέσθαι. παρέσχε δὲ εἰς ἀκριβεστέραν σκέψιν ἀναχώρησιν ἢ κατασκευὴ τοῦ ἀνδριάντος· οὔτε γὰρ ἀπὸ τῆς Ῥώμης διεπέμψατο—θεοῦ μοι προνοία δοκῶ τὴν χεῖρα τῶν ἀδικουμένων ἀφανῶς ὑπερέχοντος—οὔτε τῶν κατὰ Συρίαν ὅστις ἂν ἄριστος εἶναι δοκιμασθῆ μετακομίζειν προσέταξεν, ἐπεὶ καὶ τῷ τάχει τῆς παρανομίας ταχὺς ἐξήφθη ὁ
- 221 πόλεμος. καιρὸν οὖν σχῶν<sup>1</sup> εἰς τὴν τοῦ συμφέροντος [579] διάσκεψιν |—τὰ γὰρ αἰφνίδια καὶ μεγάλα, ὅταν ἀθρόα προσπέσῃ, κατακλᾷ τὸν λογισμὸν—προσάττει τὴν κατασκευὴν ἔν τινι τῶν ὁμόρων
- 222 ποιεῖσθαι. μεταπεμψάμενος οὖν ὁ Πετρώνιος δημιουργοὺς τῶν ἐν Φοινίκῃ τοὺς φρονιμωτάτους δίδωσι τὴν ὕλην· οἱ δὲ ἐν Σιδῶνι εἰργάζοντο. μεταπέμπεται δὲ καὶ τοὺς ἐν τέλει τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἱερεῖς τε καὶ ἄρχοντας, ἅμα μὲν δηλώσωσιν τὰ ἀπὸ Γαίου, ἅμα δὲ καὶ συμβουλευσῶσιν ἀνέχεσθαι τῶν ὑπὸ τοῦ δεσπότου προσταττομένων καὶ τὰ δεινὰ πρὸ ὀφθαλμῶν λαμβάνειν· εὐτρεπεῖς γὰρ εἶναι τῶν κατὰ Συρίαν στρατιωτικῶν δυνάμεων

<sup>1</sup> MSS. σχόντος. I feel some doubt about this correction, which is accepted by Mangey and Reiter. The form of the sentence and the appearance of Petronius's name in the next sentence rather suggest that Gaius and not he is the subject of προσάττει. Is there any objection to this on the ground

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 218-222

denial." This latter view was supported by many 219 Romans who shared his administration of Syria, since they knew that the wrath and vengeance of Gaius would reach them first as accomplices in making his orders of none effect. An opportunity for a respite 220 to take a closer consideration was afforded by the constructing of the statue. For Gaius had not had one sent from Rome, in my opinion through the providence of God, who unseen by us stretched out his hand to protect the wronged, nor did he command Petronius to select from the statues in Syria the one approved of as best and send it to Jerusalem. For speed in the execution of his unlawful purpose would have led to a speedy outburst of war. So Petronius 221 having got an opportunity for consideration of the best course to adopt, since great and sudden emergencies when they fall with concentrated force crush the reasoning faculty, ordered the construction to be carried out in some one of the adjacent countries and accordingly sent for the most clever craftsmen 222 to be found in Phoenicia and gave them the material which they worked up in Sidon.

He also sent for the magnates of the Jews, priests and magistrates, partly to explain Gaius's intentions and partly to advise them to accept the orders of their lord and master and keep before their eyes the dire consequences of doing otherwise. For, as he told them, the more efficient part of the armed forces in Syria of sense? It was natural that Gaius should tell Petronius to get a statue made and he may be credited with enough sense to see that it had better not be made in Judaea itself. In this case the proper correction would be σχόνη, but even this is not absolutely necessary. Examples of the genitive absolute where strict grammar demands another case are not unknown. See Goodwin's Moods and Tenses 850.

---

PHILO

τὰς μαχιμωτέρας, αἱ πᾶσαν τὴν χώραν καταστορέ-223 σουσι νεκρῶν. ᾤετο γάρ, εἰ προμαλάξειε τούτους, δυνήσεσθαι δι' αὐτῶν καὶ τὴν ἄλλην πληθὺν ἅπασαν ἀναδιδάξαι<sup>1</sup> μὴ ἐναντιοῦσθαι· γνώμης δέ, ὡς εἰκός, διημάρτανε. πληχθέντας γάρ φασιν ὑπὸ τῶν πρώτων ῥημάτων εὐθύς αὐτοὺς ἀήθους<sup>2</sup> κακοῦ διηγῆσει καταπαγῆναι<sup>3</sup> καὶ ἀχανεῖς γενομένους φοράν τινα δακρύων ὥσπερ ἀπὸ πηγῶν ἀθρόαν ἐκχεῖν, τὰ γένεια καὶ τὰς τρίχας τῆς κεφαλῆς 224 τίλλοντας καὶ τοιαῦτα ἐπιλέγοντας· “πολλὰ εἰσηνέγκαμεν εἰς εὐγήρω βίον οἱ λίαν εὐτυχεῖς, ἵνα ὁ μηδεὶς πώποτε εἶδε τῶν προγόνων ἡμεῖς θεασώμεθα· τίσιν ὀφθαλμοῖς; ἐκκοπήσονται πρότερον μετὰ τῆς ἀθλίας ψυχῆς καὶ τῆς ἐπωδύνου ζωῆς ἢ τοιοῦτον ὄψονται κακόν, ἀθέατον θέαν, ἣν οὔτε ἀκοῦσαι θέμις οὔτε νοῆσαι.”

225 XXXII. Καὶ οἱ μὲν τοιαῦτα ὠλοφύροντο. πυθόμενοι δὲ οἱ κατὰ τὴν ἱερόπολιν καὶ τὴν ἄλλην χώραν τὸ κινούμενον, ὥσπερ ἀφ' ἐνὸς συνθήματος συνταξάμενοι, τοῦ κοινοῦ πάθους τὸ σύνθημα δόντος, ἐξεληλύθεσαν ἀθρόοι καὶ κενὰς τὰς πόλεις καὶ κώμας καὶ οἰκίας ἀπολιπόντες μιᾷ ῥύμῃ συνέτεινον εἰς Φοινίκην· ἐκεῖ γὰρ ὧν ἐτύγγχανεν 226 ὁ Πετρώνιος. ἰδόντες δὲ τῶν Πετρωνίου τινὲς ὄχλον ἀμύθητον φερόμενον ἐβοηδρόμουν ἀπαγγέλ-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀναδιδάξειν.

<sup>2</sup> MSS. ἀληθοῦς.

<sup>3</sup> MSS. καταπαγῆναι.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 222-226

were ready at hand and would strew the land with the dead. For he thought that if he could start by 223 appeasing them he could use them to instruct all the rest of the population to abstain from opposition. But he failed as might be expected to effect his intention. Smitten by his first words, we are told, as soon as they heard the story of the abnormal calamity they stood riveted to the ground, incapable of speech, and then while a flood of tears poured from their eyes as from fountains they plucked the hair from their beards and heads and finally 224 uttered such words as these, "Did we too fortunate pay so much to purchase a long and happy life,<sup>a</sup> only to behold what none of our forefathers saw in the past? How can our eyes bear it? they shall be torn out and with them the miseries of life, the anguish of our existence, before they look on such a calamity—a sight unfit for them to see, unlawful for the ears to hear, or the mind to imagine."

XXXII. While they were thus lamenting, the 225 inhabitants of the holy city and the rest of the country hearing what was afoot marshalled themselves as if at a single signal, the signal which their common situation gave them, and issued forth in a body leaving cities, villages and houses empty and in one onrush sped to Phoenicia where Petronius chanced to be. Some of his people seeing a vast 226 crowd moving along ran to his aid and made their report in order that he might take precautions

<sup>a</sup> If the translation is right it seems to mean that their fortunes and actions had been such that they expected to end their days happily. But the phrasing is odd. Mangey translates "en quo minus beati pervenimus," which I cannot fit into the Greek at all.

PHILO

λοντες, ἵνα φυλάττηται, πόλεμον προσδοκήσαντες.
 ἔτι δὲ διηγουμένων, ὁ μὲν ἀφρούρητος ἦν, ἡ δὲ τῶν Ἰουδαίων πληθὺς ἐξαπιναίως ὥσπερ νέφος ἐπι-σταῖσα πᾶσαν Φοινίκην ἐπέσχε, κατάπληξιν τοῖς 227 μένη. καὶ βοή μὲν τοσαύτη τὸ πρῶτον ἦρθη μετὰ κλαυθμῶν καὶ στερνοτυπιῶν, ὡς ἂν μηδὲ τὰς ἀκοὰς τῶν παρόντων χωρεῖν τὸ μέγεθος· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἐπαύσατο παυσαμένων, ἀλλ' ἡσυχασάντων ἔτι συνήχει. ἔπειτα πρόσοδοι καὶ δεήσεις, οἷας ὁ καιρὸς ὑπέβαλλε· διδάσκαλοι γὰρ τοῦ παρόντος<sup>1</sup> αὐταὶ αἱ συμφοραὶ. εἰς τάξεις δὲ ἐξ διενεμήθησαν, πρεσβυτῶν, νέων, παίδων, πάλιν ἐν μέρει πρεσβυτιδίων, γυναικῶν τῶν ἐν ἡλικίᾳ, παρθένων.
 228 ἐπεὶ δὲ ὁ Πετρώνιος ἐξ ἀπόπτου κατεφάνη, πᾶσαι [580] αἱ τάξεις καθάπερ | κελευσθεῖσαι προσπίπτουσιν εἰς ἔδαφος ὀλολυγῆν θρηνώδη τινὰ μεθ' ἱκετηριῶν ἀφιεῖσαι. παραινέσαντος δὲ ἀνίστασθαι καὶ προσελθεῖν ἐγγυτέρω, μόλις ἀνίσταντο καὶ καταχεάμνοι πολλὴν κόνιν καὶ ρέομενοι δακρύοις, τὰς χεῖρας ἀμφοτέρας εἰς τοῦπίσω περιαγαγόντες 229 τρόπον ἐξηγκωνισμένων, προσήεσαν. εἶτα ἡ γερουσία καταστᾶσα τοιάδε ἔλεξεν· “ ἄσπλοι μὲν (ἔσμεν), ὡς ὄρας, παραγενομένους δὲ αἰτιῶνται τινες ὡς πολεμίους. ἃ δὲ ἡ φύσις ἐκάστω προσἐνειμεν ἀμυντήρια μέρη, χεῖρας, ἀπεστρόφαμεν, ἔνθα μηδὲν ἐργάσασθαι δύνανται, παρέχοντες αὐτῶν τὰ σώματα πρὸς εὐσκόπους τοῖς θέλουσιν ἀπο-230 κτεῖναι βολὰς. γυναῖκας καὶ τέκνα καὶ γενεὰς<sup>2</sup>

<sup>1</sup> Reiter and Mangey, who suggested πρέποντος, both suspect παρόντος. Note that τοῦ γὰρ παρόντος συμφοραὶ διδάσκαλοι would form an iambic line.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 226-230

against the war which they expected. They had not finished their story and Petronius still remained unguarded, when the multitude of the Jews suddenly descended like a cloud and occupied the whole of Phoenicia to the profound astonishment of those who did not know how populous the nation was. The first thing to be observed was the great shouting <sup>227</sup> which arose mingled with weeping and smiting of breasts, so great that it was more than the ears of those present could contain. For even when they paused there was no pausing in the sound but it still echoed even amid their silence. The next step was to approach Petronius and make such supplications as the occasion suggested, for great misfortunes themselves teach men what their situation is. They were divided into six companies, old men, young men, boys, and again in their turn old women, grown women, maidens. When Petronius <sup>228</sup> first appeared in the distance all the companies as though at a word of command fell before him to the ground uttering a dirge-like wail with cries of supplication. When he encouraged them to rise and come nearer, they rose with some reluctance and with dust poured all over them, their eyes streaming with tears and both hands set behind them as though they were pinioned, they approached him. Then the body <sup>229</sup> of elders stood and spoke as follows, "We are unarmed as you see, though some accuse us of having come as enemies in war, yet the parts which nature has assigned to each of us for defence, our hands, we have put away where they can do nothing and present our bodies as an easy target for the missiles of those who wish to kill us. We have brought our <sup>230</sup>

---

<sup>2</sup> Perhaps read γυνέας. See note a on p. 120.

PHILO

- ἐπηγαγόμεθά σοι καὶ διὰ σοῦ προσεπέσομεν<sup>1</sup> Γαῖω μηδένα οἴκοι καταλιπόντες, ἵνα ἢ περισώσητε πάντας ἢ πάντας πανωλεθρία διαφθείρητε. Πε-τρώνιε, καὶ τὰς φύσεις ἐσμέν εἰρηνικοὶ καὶ τὴν προαίρεσιν, καὶ αἱ διὰ παιδοτροφίαν φιλεργίαι τοῦτο ἡμᾶς ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐπαίδευσαν τὸ ἐπιτήδευμα.
- 231 Γαῖω παραλαβόντι τὴν ἡγεμονίαν πρῶτοι τῶν κατὰ Συρίαν ἀπάντων ἡμεῖς συνήσθημεν, Οὐτελ-λίου τότε, παρ' οὗ διεδέξω τὴν ἐπιτροπήν, ἐν τῇ πόλει διατρίβοντος, ᾧ τὰ περὶ τούτων ἐκομίσθη γράμματα, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς ἡμετέρας πόλεως εὐαγ-γελιουμένη πρὸς τὰς ἄλλας ἔδραμεν ἢ φήμη.
- 232 πρῶτον τὸ ἡμέτερον ἱερὸν ἐδέξατο τὰς ὑπὲρ τῆς
 ἀρχῆς Γαῖου θυσίας, ἵνα πρῶτον ἢ καὶ μόνον ἀφαιρεθῇ τῆς θρησκείας τὸ πάτριον; ἐξιστάμεθα τῶν πόλεων, παραχωροῦμεν τῶν οἰκιῶν καὶ κτημάτων, ἐπιπλα καὶ χρήματα καὶ κειμήλια καὶ τὴν ἄλλην ἅπασαν λείαν εἰσοίσομεν ἐκόντες· λαμβάνειν, οὐ διδόναι, ταῦτα νομιοῦμεν. ἐν ἀντὶ πάντων αἰτούμεθα, μηδὲν ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ γενέσθαι νεώτερον, ἀλλὰ φυλαχθῆναι τοιοῦτον, οἶον παρὰ τῶν πάππων
- 233 καὶ προγόνων παρελάβομεν. εἰ δὲ μὴ πείθομεν, παραδίδομεν ἑαυτοὺς εἰς ἀπώλειαν, ἵνα μὴ ζῶντες ἐπίδωμεν θανάτου χεῖρον κακόν. πυνθανόμεθα πεζὰς καὶ ἵππικὰς δυνάμεις εὐτρεπίσθαι καθ'

<sup>1</sup> mss. προσπεσοῦμεθα. I am not sure that the change is necessary. Their prostration before Petronius could when reported in the future to Gaius constitute a prostration before him.

<sup>a</sup> Philo sometimes uses γενεά = "family," cf. § 308. But

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 230-233

wives, our children and our families<sup>a</sup> to you, leaving none at home, and have prostrated ourselves before Gaius in doing so to you, that you and he may either save us all from ruin or send us all to perish in utter destruction. O Petronius, both by our nature and our principles we are peaceable, and the diligence which parents devote to rearing their children has trained us in this practice from the very first. When 231 Gaius succeeded to the sovereignty we were the first of all the inhabitants of Syria to show our joy, for Vitellius your predecessor as governor was staying in the city, and it was to him that the letter telling the news was sent and it was from our city that rumour to carry the good tidings sped to the others. Was our temple the first to accept sacrifices in behalf 232 of Gaius's reign only that it should be the first or even the only one to be robbed of its ancestral tradition of worship? We are evacuating our cities, withdrawing from our houses and lands; our furniture and money and cherished possessions and all the other spoil we will willingly make over. We should think ourselves gainers thereby, not givers. One thing only we ask in return for all, that no violent changes should be made in this temple and that it be kept as we received it from our grandparents and ancestors. But if we cannot persuade you, we give up ourselves 233 for destruction that we may not live to see a calamity worse than death. We hear that forces of cavalry and infantry have been prepared against us if we it is strange to find it=" the rest of the family." So in Spec. Leg. iii. 159 we have γύναια τούτων καὶ τέκνα καὶ γονεῖς καὶ τὴν ἄλλην γενεάν. In suggesting γονέας I do not forget that elsewhere he seems regularly to use γονεῖς. But γονέας is a known Attic form and he may have thought it appropriate for a highly rhetorical speech put into the mouth of another.

PHILO

ἡμῶν, εἰ πρὸς τὴν ἀνάθεσιν ἀντιβαίημεν. οὐδεὶς οὕτως μέμηνεν, ὡς δούλος ὢν ἐναντιοῦσθαι δεσπότη· παρέχομεν ἐν ἐτοίμῳ τὰς σφαγὰς ἄσμενοι, κτεινέτωσαν, ἱερευέτωσαν, κρεανομείτωσαν ἅμαχεὶ
 καὶ ἀναιμωτί, πάντα ὅσα κεκρατηκότων ἔργα 234 δρᾶτωσαν. τίς δὲ χρεῖα στρατιᾶς; αὐτοὶ κατάρ-
 [581] ξομεν | τῶν θυμάτων οἱ καλοὶ ἱερεῖς, παραστησόμενοι τῷ ἱερῷ γυναικας οἱ γυναικοκτόνοι, ἀδελφοὺς καὶ ἀδελφὰς οἱ ἀδελφοκτόνοι, κούρους καὶ κόρας, τὴν ἄκακον ἡλικίαν, οἱ παιδοφόνται· τραγικῶν
 γὰρ ὀνομάτων δεῖ τοῖς τὰς τραγικὰς συμφορὰς 235 ὑπομένουσιν. εἴτ' ἐν μέσοις στάντες καὶ λουσάμενοι τῷ συγγενικῷ αἵματι—τοιαῦτα γὰρ τὰ λουτρά τοῖς εἰς ἄδου φαιδρυνόμενοις—ἀνακερασόμεθα τὸ 236 ἴδιον ἐπικατασφάζαντες αὐτούς. ἀποθανόντων τὸ ἐπίταγμα γενέσθω· μέμφαιτ' ἂν οὐδὲ θεὸς ἡμᾶς ἀμφοτέρων στοχαζομένους, καὶ τῆς πρὸς τὸν αὐτοκράτορα εὐλαβείας καὶ τῆς πρὸς τοὺς καθω-σιωμένους νόμους ἀποδοχῆς· γενήσεται δὲ τοῦτο, ἐὰν ὑπεκστῶμεν ἀβιώτου βίου καταφρονήσαντες.
 237 ἄκοην ἐδεξάμεθα παλαιάτην ὑπὸ τῶν κατὰ τὴν Ἑλλάδα λογίων παραδοθεῖσαν, οἱ τὴν τῆς Γοργόνης κεφαλὴν τοσαύτην ἔχειν δύναμιν ὠμολόγουν, ὥστε τοὺς προσιδόντας εὐθύς λίθους καὶ πέτρους γίνεσθαι. τοῦτο μύθου μὲν πλάσμα ἔοικεν εἶναι, τὸ δ' ἀληθὲς αἱ μεγάλοι καὶ ἀβούλητοι καὶ ἀνήκεστοι συντυχίαι ἐπιφέρουσιν. ὄργαι δεσπότης θάνατον 238 ἀπεργάζονται ἢ παραπλήσιόν τι θανάτῳ. νομίζεις, ὃ μήποτε γένοιτο, παραπεμπόμενον εἰ θεάσαιντό

---

* Or "fine priests indeed"—a strange travesty of priest-122

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 233-238

oppose the installation. No one is so mad as to oppose a master when he is a slave. We gladly put our throats at your disposal. Let them slaughter, butcher, carve our flesh without a blow struck or blood drawn by us and do all the deeds that conquerors commit. But what need of an army! our 234 selves will conduct the sacrifices, priests of a noble order <sup>a</sup>: wives will be brought to the altar by wife-slayers, brothers and sisters by fratricides, boys and girls in the innocence of their years by child-murderers. For the tragedian's vocabulary is needed for those who endure tragical misfortunes. Then 235 standing in the midst of our kinsfolk after bathing ourselves in their blood, the right bathing for those who would go to Hades clean, we will mingle our blood with theirs by the crowning slaughter of ourselves. When we are dead let the prescript be 236 carried out; not God himself could blame us who had a twofold motive, respectful fear of the emperor and loyalty to the consecrated laws. And this aim will be accomplished if we take our departure in contempt of the life which is no life. We have 237 heard a very ancient story handed down by the common consent of learned men of Greece, that the Gorgon's head had such great power that those who looked upon it were turned at once into rocks and stones. The story is no doubt a mythical figment but great and disastrous and irreparable circumstances do bring with them the truth which it conveys. A despot's angry passions do work death or something like death. Think you that if, which 238 Heaven forbid, any of our people should see the hood, καλοί being used ironically, as perhaps always when applied to persons.

PHILO

- τινες τῶν ἡμετέρων εἰς τὸ ἱερὸν τὸν ἀνδριάντα, οὐκ ἂν εἰς πέτρους<sup>1</sup> μεταβαλεῖν, παγέντων μὲν αὐτοῖς τῶν ἄρθρων, παγέντων δὲ τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν, ὡς μηδὲ κινήθῃναι δύνασθαι, ὅλου δὲ τοῦ σώματος τὰς φυσικὰς κινήσεις μεταβαλόντος καθ' ἕκαστον
- 239 τῶν ἐν τῇ κοινωνίᾳ μερῶν αὐτοῦ; τελευταίαν δέησιν, ᾧ Πετρώνιε, ποιησόμεθα δικαιοσάτην· οὐ φάμεν μὴ δεῖν τὰ κελευσθέντα δρᾶν, ἀλλ' ἀναχώρησιν αἰτούμεθα προσικετεύοντες, ἵνα πρεσβείαν ἐλόμενοι πέμψωμεν τὴν ἐντευξομένην τῷ δεσπότη.
- 240 τάχα που πρεσβευσάμενοι πείσομεν, ἢ περὶ θεοῦ τιμῆς πως διεξελθόντες ἢ περὶ νομίμων ἀκαθαιρέτων φυλακῆς ἢ περὶ τοῦ μὴ πάντων καὶ τῶν ἐν ἐσχατιαῖς ἐθνῶν, οἷς τετήρηται τὰ πάτρια, ἔλαττον ἐνέγκασθαι ἢ περὶ ὧν ὁ πάππος αὐτοῦ καὶ πρόπαππος ἔγνωσαν ἐπισφραγιζόμενοι τὰ ἡμέτερα ἔθνη
- 241 μετὰ πάσης ἐπιμελείας. ἴσως ταῦτα ἀκούων ἔσται μαλακώτερος· οὐκ ἐν ὁμοίῳ μένουσιν αἱ γνώμαι τῶν μεγάλων, αἱ δὲ σὺν ὀργῇ καὶ τάχιστα κάμνουσι. διαβεβλήμεθα, τὰς διαβολὰς ἐπίτρεψον
- 242 ἰάσασθαι· ἀκρίτους καταγνωσθῆναι χαλεπὸν. ἐὰν δὲ μὴ πείσωμεν, τί λοιπὸν ἐμποδῶν ἐστίν [ἢ]
- [582] ταῦτα ἂ καὶ | νῦν διανοῆ πράττειν; ἕως οὐ πρεσβεύμεθα, μὴ ἀποκόψῃς τὰς ἀμείνους ἐλπίδας μυριάδων τοσοούτων, αἷς οὐχ ὑπὲρ κέρδους ἀλλ' ὑπὲρ εὐσεβείας ἐστὶν ἢ σπουδῆ. καίτοι γε ἡμάρτομεν τοῦτο εἰπόντες· τί γὰρ ἂν εἴη κέρδος λυσιτελέστερον ὁσιότητος ἀνθρώποις;”
- 243 XXXIII. Ταῦτα δὲ διεξήεσαν ὑπ' ἀγωνίας καὶ περιπαθήσεως ἄσθματι πολλῷ, κεκομμένῳ τῷ

<sup>1</sup> MSS. πέτρον.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 238-243

statue being carried in procession to the temple, they would not be transformed to stone, their joints stiffened and their eyes likewise so that they could not even move, and their whole body in each part of its system changed from its natural motions? Our final prayer, the justest of all, Petronius, will 239 be this. We do not say that you are not bound to do as you are bidden but we add to our supplications a request for a respite so that we may choose a body of envoys and send them to seek an interview with our lord. It may be that by this 240 mission we shall persuade him, pleading in full either the honour due to God or the preservation of our laws undestroyed, or our right to be no worse treated than all the nations, even those in the uttermost regions, who have had their ancestral institutions maintained, or the decisions of his grandfather and great-grandfather in which they ratified our customs with all respect for them. Per- 241 haps when he hears this he will be softened. The judgements of the great do not remain unchanged; if they have been made in anger they soonest lose their strength. We have been slandered, permit us to purge the slanders; it is a grievous thing to be condemned untried. But if we fail to persuade him 242 what remains to hinder you from carrying out your present intention? Wait till we have sent our embassy before you cut away their hopes for better things from all these myriads whose zeal is for their religion and not for gain. And yet we err when we say this, for what more profitable gain can men have than holiness?"

XXXIII. This appeal was made in great agitation 243 and intense emotion accompanied with much gasping

PHILO

πνεύματι, ρέομενοι κατὰ τῶν μελῶν ἀπάντων ἰδρῶτι, μετὰ φορᾶς ἀπαύστων δακρῶν, ὡς ἤδη συναλγεῖν τοὺς ἀκούοντας καὶ τὸν Πετρώνιον—ἦν γὰρ καὶ τὴν φύσιν εὐμενῆς καὶ ἡμερος—ὑπὸ τῶν λεχθέντων καὶ ὀρωμένων συνηρπάσθαι· ἐδόκει γὰρ αὐτῷ καὶ τὰ λεγόμενα εἶναι δικαιοτάτα καὶ οἰκτρά 244 τις ἢ τῶν ὀρωμένων περιπάθησις. ἐπεξαναστὰς δὲ μετὰ τῶν συνέδρων ἐβουλεύετο τὰ πρακτέα καὶ ἑώρα τοὺς μὲν πρὸ μικροῦ παντάπασιν ἐναν-τιουμένους ἐπαμφοτερίζοντας, τοὺς δὲ ἐνδοιαστὰς ἐπιρρέποντας ἤδη τῷ πλείονι μέρει πρὸς ἔλεον· ἐφ' οἷς ἤδετο, καίτοι τὴν φύσιν εἰδὼς τοῦ προεστῶτος καὶ ὡς ἔστιν ἀπαραίτητος ὀργήν.
 245 ἀλλ' εἶχέ τινα καὶ αὐτός, ὡς ἔοικεν, ἐναύσματα τῆς Ἰουδαϊκῆς φιλοσοφίας ἅμα καὶ εὐσεβείας, εἴτε καὶ πάλαι προμαθῶν ἕνεκα τῆς περὶ παιδείαν σπουδῆς εἴτε καὶ ἀφ' οὗ τῶν χώρων ἐπετρόπευσεν, ἐν οἷς Ἰουδαῖοι καθ' ἐκάστην πόλιν εἰσὶ παμπληθεῖς, Ἀσίας τε καὶ Συρίας, εἴτε καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν οὕτω διατεθεῖς αὐτηκόῳ καὶ αὐτοκελεύστῳ καὶ αὐτομαθεῖ τι πρὸς τὰ σπουδῆς ἄξια φύσει. τοῖς δὲ ἀγαθοῖς ἀγαθὰς ὑπηχεῖν ἔοικε γνώμας ὁ θεός, δι' ὧν ὠφελοῦντες ὠφεληθήσονται· ὅπερ κακεῖνῳ 246 συνέβη. τίνες οὖν ἦσαν αἱ γνώμαι; μὴ κατεπείγειν τοὺς δημιουργούς, ἀλλ' ἀναπειθεῖν εὖ τετεχνιτευμένον ἀπεργάσασθαι τὸν ἀνδριάντα, στοχαζομένους καθ' ὅσον ἂν οἶόν τε ἢ μὴ ἀπολειφθῆναι τῶν διωνομασμένων ἀρχετύπων εἰς πλείο-νος χρόνου μῆκος, ἐπειδὴ τὰ μὲν αὐτοσχέδια φιλεῖ

---

* Or "suggests." For Philo's frequent use of ὑπηχεῖν, generally carrying with it the idea of a voice heard in-126

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 243-246

and spasmodic breathing, the sweat streaming over every limb amid a flood of ceaseless tears, so that by now their hearers shared their sorrow, and Petronius who was naturally kindly was quite carried away both by what he heard and what he saw. For he felt that what they said was very just and that the emotion displayed in what he saw was worthy of pity. He rose and retiring deliberated with his fellow-councillors on the course to be taken. He saw that those who had just before been entirely opposed to the Jews were wavering, and that the doubters had thrown most of their weight into the scale of mercy. This pleased him though he knew the nature of his chief and how implacable was his anger. Indeed it appears that he himself had some rudiments of Jewish philosophy and religion acquired either in early lessons in the past through his zeal for culture or after his appointment as governor in the countries where the Jews are very numerous in every city, Asia and Syria, or else because his soul was so disposed, being drawn to things worthy of serious effort by a nature which listened to no voice nor dictation nor teaching but its own. But we find that to good men God whispers a good decisions by which they will give and receive benefits, and this was true in his case. What then were his decisions? He would not press the craftsmen but would urge them to perfect the statue with good artistry and aim as far as possible to take a long time to reach the standard of the widely known exemplars, since work, if perfunctory, is gen-wardly, often as here the divine voice, see note on De Som. i. 164 (vol. v. p. 601). The complete omission of this usage in L. & S., which was remarked on in that note, has since been rectified in the revised edition.

PHILO

πως ἐπιτέμεσθαι, τὰ δὲ σὺν πόνῳ καὶ ἐπιστήμη 247 μῆκος χρόνων ἐπιζητεῖν. ἦν ἠτήσαντο πρεσβείαν, οὐκ ἐπιτρέπειν· ἀσφαλὲς γὰρ οὐκ εἶναι. τοῖς βου-λομένοις ἐπὶ τὸν πάντων ἡγεμόνα καὶ δεσπότην ἐκκαλεῖσθαι τὰ πράγματα μὴ ἐναντιοῦσθαι. τῷ 248 πλῆθει μῆτε ὁμολογεῖν μῆτε ἀρνεῖσθαι· ἐκάτερον
 [583] γὰρ φέρειν κίνδυνον. ἐπιστέλλειν | Γαῖῳ μὴδὲν μὲν τῶν Ἰουδαίων κατηγοροῦντα, μὴ δηλοῦντα δὲ ἐπ' ἀληθείας τὰς ἰκετείας καὶ ἀντιβολίας αὐτῶν, καὶ τῆς περὶ τὴν ἀνάθεσιν βραδυτήτος αἰτιᾶσθαι τὸ μὲν τι τὴν κατασκευὴν χρόνου μεμετρημένου δεομένην, τὸ δέ τι καὶ τὸν καιρὸν διδόντα μεγάλας ἀφορμὰς εἰς ἀναβολὴν εὐλόγους, αἷς συναινέσειν 249 οὐκ ἴσως ἀλλ' ἀναγκαίως καὶ αὐτὸν Γάιον. ἐν ἀκμῇ μὲν γὰρ τὸν τοῦ σίτου καρπὸν εἶναι καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ὅσα σπαρτά, δεδιέναι δὲ μὴ κατ' ἀπόγνωσιν τῶν πατρίων ἄνθρωποι καὶ τοῦ ζῆν καταφρονούντες ἢ δηλώσωσι τὰς ἀρούρας ἢ ἐμπρήσωσι τὴν σταχυηφόρον ὄρεινὴν καὶ πεδιάδα, φυλακῆς δὲ χρήξειν εἰς ἐπιμελεστέραν τῶν καρπῶν συγκομιδὴν, οὐ μόνον τῶν σπειρομένων ἀλλὰ καὶ ὧν ἡ δενδροφόρος 250 παρέχει. διεγνώκει<sup>1</sup> μὲν γάρ, ὡς λόγος, πλεῖν εἰς Ἀλεξάνδρειαν τὴν πρὸς Αἰγύπτῳ, πελάγει δὲ οὐκ ἀξιώσει τοσοῦτος ἡγεμὼν διὰ τε τοὺς κινδύνους καὶ διὰ τὸ πλῆθος τοῦ παραπέμποντος στόλου καὶ ἅμα διὰ τὴν ἐπιμέλειαν τοῦ σώματος, ἃ δὴ πάντα γίνεται ραδίως τὸν δι' Ἀσίας καὶ Συρίας κύκλον 251 περαιουμένῳ· δυνήσεται γὰρ καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν καὶ πλεῖν καὶ ἀποβαίνειν, καὶ μάλιστα τὰς πλείστας ναῦς ἐπαγόμενος μακράς, ἀλλ' οὐχ ὀλκάδας, αἷς ὁ παρὰ γῆν πλοῦς ἀνυσιμώτερος, ὡς ταῖς φορτίσι

<sup>1</sup> MSS. διέγνωκα μὲν.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 246-251

erally short-lived and to have it executed with pains and knowledge requires a long time. He would 247 not grant their request for an embassy. It was not safe. He would not oppose those who wished to lay the matter before the ruler and master of them all, but to the general multitude he would express neither assent nor denial, as both were dangerous. He would send to Gaius a letter in 248 which, without accusing the Jews or giving a candid account of their prayers and entreaties, he would charge the delay in the installation partly to the work requiring a definite allowance of time for the construction, partly to the season, which gave strong grounds for delay, the reasonableness of which Gaius himself not only might but necessarily must admit. For the wheat crop was just ripe and 249 so were the other cereals, and he feared that the Jews in despair for their ancestral rites and in scorn of life might lay waste the arable land or set fire to the cornlands on the hills and the plain. He needed a guard to insure more vigilance in gathering the fruits not only of the cornfields but also those provided by the orchards. For Gaius had deter- 250 mined, they were told, to sail to Alexandria by Egypt, but so great a potentate would not think it right to go by the open sea because of the dangers and the numbers of ships required for a convoy, and also the need of providing for his bodily comfort, all which ends are easily obtained by taking the circuitous route along Asia and Syria. For he would be able every 251 day to combine the voyage with landing, particularly as most of the vessels which he would take would be not merchant ships but warships for which coasting is more feasible, just as an open sea voyage is for

PHILO

- 252 διὰ πελάγους ἐστίν. ἀναγκαῖον οὖν καὶ χιλὸν κτήνεσι καὶ τροφὰς ἀφθόνους ἐν ἀπάσαις ταῖς Συριακαῖς πόλεσιν εὐτρεπίσθαι, καὶ μάλιστα ταῖς παράλοις. ἀφίξεται γὰρ παμπληθῆς ὄχλος καὶ διὰ γῆς καὶ διὰ θαλάττης, οὐ μόνον ἀπ' αὐτῆς Ῥώμης καὶ Ἰταλίας ἀναστάς, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἐξῆς ἄχρι Συρίας ἐπικρατειῶν ἐπηκολουθηκώς, ὁ μὲν τῶν ἐν τέλει, ὁ δὲ στρατιωτικός, ἰππέων, πεζῶν, τῶν ἐν ταῖς ναυσίν, ὁ δὲ οἰκετικός οὐκ ἀποδέων τοῦ
- 253 στρατιωτικοῦ. δεῖ δὲ χορηγιῶν οὐ πρὸς τὰ ἀναγκαῖα συμμεμετρημένων αὐτὸ<sup>1</sup> μόνον, ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς περιττὴν δαψίλειαν, ἣν ἐπιζητεῖ Γάιος. τούτοις ἔαν ἐντύχη τοῖς γράμμασιν, ἴσως πρὸς τῷ μὴ δυσχερᾶναι καὶ τῆς προνοίας ἡμᾶς ἀποδέξεται ὡς ποιησαμένους τὴν ὑπέρθεσιν, οὐ χάριτι τῇ τῶν Ἰουδαίων, ἀλλ' ἔνεκα τῆς τῶν καρπῶν συγκομιδῆς.
- 254 XXXIV. Ἀποδεξαμένων δὲ τὴν ἐπίνοιαν τῶν συνέδρων, κελεύει γράφεσθαι τὰς ἐπιστολάς καὶ ἐχειροτόνει τοὺς διακομιοῦντας ἄνδρας εὐζώνους, ἐθάδας δὲ καὶ τῶν κατὰ τὰς ὁδοιπορίας ἐπιτομῶν. καὶ οἱ μὲν ἦκοντες ἀνέδοσαν τὰς ἐπιστολάς, ὁ
- [584] δ' ἔτι μὲν ἀναγινώσκων διώδει | καὶ μεστὸς ἦν
- 255 ὀργῆς ἐφ' ἐκάστῳ σημειούμενος· ὡς δὲ ἐπαύσατο, συνεκρότει τὰς χεῖρας “ εὖ, Πετρῶνιε,” φάσκων, “ οὐκ ἔμαθες ἀκούειν αὐτοκράτορος· αἱ ἐπάλληλοί σε ἀρχαὶ πεφυσήκασιν· ἄχρι τοῦ παρόντος οὐδὲ ἀκοῇ γνωρίζειν μοι δοκεῖς Γάιον, οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν
- 256 αὐτοῦ πείραν ἕξεις. μέλει μὲν γάρ σοι τῶν Ἰουδαϊκῶν νομίμων, ἐχθίστου μοι ἔθνους, ἀλογεῖς δὲ τῶν ἀρχόντος ἡγεμονικῶν προστάξεων. ἐφοβήθης τὸ πλῆθος· εἶτα οὐ παρήσαν αἱ στρα-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. αὐτῷ.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 251-256

cargo boats. It would be necessary therefore to have 252 fodder for the beasts and a vast stock of food got ready in all the cities of Syria, particularly on the coast. For a huge crowd would come both by sea and by land, drawn not only from Rome itself and Italy, but also from the successive provinces right up to Syria, a crowd composed partly of persons of high rank, partly of soldiers, infantry and cavalry and marines, while the multitude of servants would be not less than the military. Supplies were needed 253 calculated not merely for absolute necessities but for the excessive expenditure which Gaius demanded.
If he reads this letter, thought Petronius, he will probably not merely refrain from anger but approve our forethought, recognizing that the postponement which we have made is not due to favouritism to the Jews but in order to insure the carrying of the harvest.

XXXIV. As his fellow-councillors approved of his 254 policy he ordered the letters to be written, and appointed to carry them persons who were active travellers and also knew how to make short cuts in their journey. When they arrived they delivered the letter, but Gaius while he was still reading was fuming and was filled with wrath as he noted each point.
When he stopped reading he smote his hands together 255 and said, " Good, Petronius, you have not learnt to hearken to an emperor ; your successive offices have puffed you with pride. Up to this time you seem to have no knowledge of Gaius even by report ; you will soon know him by actual experience. You concern 256 yourself with the institutions of the Jews, the nation which is my worst enemy ; you disregard the imperial commands of your sovereign. You feared their great numbers. Then had you not with you the military

PHILO

- 257 τιωτικαὶ δυνάμεις, ὡς δέδιεν ἔθνη τὰ ἑῷα καὶ ἡγεμόνες αὐτῶν Παρθυαῖοι; ἀλλ' ἠλέησας· εἶτα οἰκτῶ μᾶλλον ἐνέδωκας ἢ Γαῖω; προφασίζου νῦν ἄμνητον, τὸν ἀπροφάσιστον οὐκ εἰς μακρὰν ἐνδεξόμενος αὐτὸς τῇ κεφαλῇ· συγκομιδὴν αἰτιῶ καρπῶν καὶ τὰς εἰς τὴν ἡμετέραν ἄφιξιν παρασκευάς· εἰ γὰρ ἀφορία παντελῆς ἐπέσχε τὴν Ἰουδαίαν, οὐκ ἦσαν αἱ πλησιόχωροι τοσαῦται καὶ οὕτως εὐδαίμονες ἱκαναὶ χορηγεῖν τὰ ἐπιτήδεια
- 258 καὶ τὴν μῆσ ἐνδειαν ἀναπληρῶσαι; ἀλλὰ τί προανίσταμαι τῶν χειρῶν; τί δέ μου τῆς γνώμης προαισθάνονται τινες; ὁ μέλλων τὰ ἐπίχειρα καρποῦσθαι γινωσκέτω πρῶτος ἐξ ὧν ἂν πάθῃ· παύομαι λέγων, φρονῶν δὲ οὐ παύσομαι."
- 259 καὶ μικρὸν ὅσον ἐπισχῶν τινι τῶν πρὸς ταῖς ἐπιστολαῖς ὑπέβαλε τὰς πρὸς Πιτρῶνιον ἀποκρίσεις, ἐπαινῶν αὐτὸν ὅσα τῷ δοκεῖν εἰς τὸ προμηθὲς καὶ τὴν τοῦ μέλλοντος ἀκριβῆ περίσκεψιν· σφόδρα γὰρ τοὺς ἐν ἡγεμονίαις εὐλαβεῖτο τὰς πρὸς νεωτεροποιίαν ἀφορμὰς ὄρων ἔχοντας ἐν ἐτοιμῷ, καὶ μάλιστα τοὺς ἐν ταῖς μεγάλαις καὶ μεγάλοις ἐπιτάττοντας στρατοπέδοις, ἡλίκα τὰ πρὸς Εὐφράτη
- 260 κατὰ Συρίαν ἐστίν. θεραπεύων οὖν τοῖς ὀνόμασι καὶ γράμμασιν ἄχρι καιροῦ τὸ ἔγκοτον ἐπεσκίαζε βαρῦμηις ὢν. εἶτα ἐπὶ πᾶσι γράφει κελεύων μηδενὸς οὕτω φροντίζειν ἢ τοῦ θάπτον ἀνατεθῆναι τὸν ἀνδριάντα· καὶ γὰρ ἤδη τὰ θέρη, τὴν εἶτε πιθανὴν εἶτε ἀληθῆ πρόφασιν, συγκεκομίσθαι δύνασθαι.
- 261 XXXV. Μετ' οὐ πολὺ μέντοι παρῆν Ἀγρίππας ὁ βασιλεὺς κατὰ τὸ εἰωθὸς ἀσπασόμενος Γάιον.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 256-261

forces which are feared by the nations of the east and their rulers the Parthians? Oh but you had 257 compassion! Then did pity weigh more than Gaius with you? Go on, plead the harvest as your pretext; the harvest for which no pretext will avail will soon be visited on your own head. Yes, lay the blame on the ingathering of the fruits and the preparations needed for our journey. Why, even if complete barrenness reigned in Judaea were not the neighbouring countries so many and so prosperous capable of providing the necessaries and compensating the deficiency in one? But why should I not sit still till 258 my hands get to work? why should any people know my intentions beforehand? he who is to reap the reward, let him know of it before others through personal experience. I stop speaking, but I shall not stop thinking.” After waiting a short 259 time he gave one of his secretaries instructions about answering Petronius. In these he seemingly praised him for his forethought and his careful exploration of future requirements. For he greatly feared the holders of governorships, he saw that they had resources ready for an uprising, particularly those who had large provinces and commanded large armies of the size of those in Syria on the Euphrates. So his 260 language and letters were ingratiating, and though furiously angry he disguised his rancour waiting for an opportunity. Then he concluded his letter by bidding him interest himself in nothing so much as in hastening the installation of the statue, since the harvest which he alleged as an excuse, whether truly or plausibly, could already have been carried.

XXXV. Not long afterwards King Agrippa ap- 261 peared to pay his wonted respects to Gaius. Now he ἦδει δὲ ἀπλῶς οὐδὲν οὔτε ὦν ἐπεστάλκει ὁ Πετρώνιος οὔτε ὦν ὁ Γάιος ἢ πρότερον ἢ ὕστερον· ἔτεκμαίρετο μέντοι διὰ τῆς οὐκ ἐν τάξει κινή-σεως καὶ τῆς τῶν ὀμμάτων ταραχῆς ὑποτυφομένην ὄργην καὶ ἀνεσκόπει καὶ διηρεῖνα ἑαυτὸν πάντη καὶ πρὸς πάντα μικρά τε αὐτὸ καὶ μεγάλα τὸν λογισμὸν ἀποτείνων, μὴ τι δέδρακεν ἢ εἶπεν ὦν οὐ χρή.

PHILO

 262 ὡς δὲ συνόλως οὐδὲν εὔρισκεν, ἐτόπασεν, ὅπερ ἦν εἰκός, ἐτέροις τισὶ πικραίνεσθαι. πάλιν δὲ ὅτε ὑποβλεπόμενον εἶδε καὶ τετακότα τὰς ὄψεις πρὸς
 μηδένα τῶν παρόντων ἢ μόνον ἐπ' αὐτόν, ἐδεδίει | [585] καὶ πολλάκις ἐρέσθαι διανοηθεὶς ἐπέσχε, τοιοῦτον λαμβάνων λογισμὸν. “ ἴσως τὴν ἀπειλήν πρὸς ἐτέρους οὔσαν αὐτὸς ἔλξω περιεργίας ὁμοῦ καὶ προπετείας καὶ θράσους ὑπόληψιν ἐξενεγκάμενος.” 263 ἐπτοημένον δ' οὖν καὶ ἀποροῦντα θεασάμενος αὐτὸν Γάιος—ἦν γὰρ δεινὸς ἐκ τῆς φανεράς ὄψεως ἀφανὲς ἀνθρώπου βούλημα καὶ πάθος συνιδεῖν—“ ἀπορεῖς,” εἶπεν “ Ἀγρίππα; παύσω σε τῆς 264 ἀπορίας. ἐπὶ τοσοῦτόν μοι χρόνον συνδιατρίψας ἠγνόησας, ὅτι οὐ τῇ φωνῇ μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς ὀμμασι φθέγγομαι μᾶλλον ἢ οὐχ ἦττον ἕκαστα 265 διασημαίνων; οἱ καλοὶ σου καὶ ἀγαθοὶ πολῖται, παρ' οἷς μόνοις ἐξ ἅπαντος ἀνθρώπων γένους θεὸς οὐ νομίζεται Γάιος, ἦδη μοι δοκοῦσι καὶ θανατᾶν ἀφηγιάζοντες· ἐμοῦ κελεύσαντος ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ Διὸς ἀνδριάντα ἀνατεθῆναι, πανδημεὶ συνταξάμενοι τῆς πόλεως καὶ τῆς χώρας ὑπεξῆλθον, πρόφασιν ἰκετεύσοντες, τὸ δ' ἀληθὲς ἐναντία τοῖς προστεταγ-266 μένοις ἐργασόμενοι.” μέλλοντος δὲ προσεπιφέρειν ἕτερα, ὑπ' ἀγωνίας παντοδαπὰς χροῶς ἐνήλλαπτεν

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 261-266

knew absolutely nothing about the contents of the letter sent by Petronius or of those written earlier and later by Gaius. He judged however by his irregular movements and the disturbance shown in his eyes that anger was smouldering beneath, and he examined and searched himself in every way, setting his reason to work in every direction and on every possibility small or great, to see whether he had done or said something which he should not. But when he could find nothing at all he conjectured naturally enough that Gaius was exasperated by some other persons, but again when he saw him frowning and that his eyes had been fixed on no one else in the company but himself alone, he was frightened and though he was often minded to question him he forbore, reasoning thus: "Perhaps I shall draw upon myself the menace directed to others and have officiousness, rashness and effrontery imputed to me." Gaius, who was skilled in discerning a man's secret wishes and feelings from his open countenance, observed his agitation and perplexity and said, "You are perplexed, Agrippa, I will release you from your perplexity. Have you sojourned with me all this time and not learnt that I speak not only with my voice but quite as much with my eyes in every intimation that I make? Your excellent and worthy fellow-citizens, who alone of every race of men do not acknowledge Gaius as a god, appear to be courting even death by their recalcitrance. When I ordered a statue of Zeus to be set up in the temple they marshalled their whole population and issued forth from the city and country nominally to make a petition but actually to counteract my orders." He was about to add further charges when Agrippa in deep distress turned

PHILO

- ἐν ταύτῳ γινόμενος αἰμωπός, ὠχρός, πελιδνός.
 267 ἤδη δὲ καὶ ἀπὸ κεφαλῆς ἄκρας ἄχρι ποδῶν φρίκη κατέσχητο, τρόμος τε καὶ σεισμός πάντα αὐτοῦ τὰ μέρη καὶ τὰ μέλη συνεκύκα, χαλωμένων τε καὶ ἀνιεμένων τῶν σωματικῶν τόνων περὶ ἑαυτῷ κατέρρει καὶ τὰ τελευταῖα παρεθεῖς μικροῦ κατἔπεσεν, εἰ μὴ τῶν παρεστώτων τινὲς ὑπέλαβον αὐτόν· καὶ κελευσθέντες φοράδην οἴκαδε κομίζουσιν οὐδενὸς συναισθανόμενον ὑπὸ κάρου τῶν ἀθρόων 268 κατασκηψάντων κακῶν. ὁ μὲν οὖν Γάιος ἔτι μᾶλλον ἐξετραχύνθη τὸ κατὰ τοῦ ἔθνους μίσος ἐπιτείνων· “εἰ γὰρ Ἀγρίππας,” ἔφασκεν, “ὁ συνηθέστατος καὶ φίλτατος καὶ τοσαύταις ἐνδε-δεμένος εὐεργεσίαις ἤττηται τῶν ἐθῶν, ὡς μηδὲ ἀκοὴν ἀνέχεσθαι τὴν κατ’ αὐτῶν, ἀλλ’ ὑπ’ ἐκλύσεως μικροῦ καὶ τελευτήσαι, τί χρὴ περὶ τῶν ἄλλων προσδοκᾶν, οἷς μηδεμία πρόσσεστιν ὄλκος 269 δύναμις εἰς τούναντίον;” ὁ δὲ Ἀγρίππας τὴν μὲν πρώτην ἡμέραν καὶ τὸ πλεῖστον μέρος τῆς ὑστεραίας ὑπὸ κάρου πιεσθεὶς βαθέος οὐδὲν ἐγνώ-ριζε τῶν ὄντων, περὶ δὲ δεῖλην ἐσπέραν μικρὸν ὅσον τὴν κεφαλὴν ἐπάρας καὶ βεβαρημένους τοὺς ὀφθαλμοὺς ἐπὶ βραχὺ μόλις διοίξας ἀμαυραῖς καὶ ἀχλυῶδεσι ταῖς ὄψεσι τοὺς ἐν κύκλῳ παρεθεᾶτο, μήπω γνωρίζειν δυνάμενος ἐπ’ ἀκριβὲς τὰς ἐκά-270 στων ἰδέας. πάλιν δὲ ὑπενεχθεὶς εἰς ὕπνον ἠρέμει τῆς προτέρας ὑγιεινότερα καταστάσει χρώμενος, ὡς ἐνῆν ἔκ τε τῆς ἀναπνοῆς καὶ ἐκ τῆς περὶ τὸ
 [586] σῶμα σχέσεως τεκμήρασθαι. | περιαναστὰς δὲ
 271 ὕστερον ἐπυθάνετο· “ποῦ τὰ νῦν εἰμι; μήτι παρὰ Γαῖω; μὴ καὶ αὐτὸς πάρεστιν ὁ δεσπότης;”
 ἀποκριναμένων δέ· “θάρρει, παρὰ σαυτῷ διατρί-136

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 266-271

to every kind of colour, blood-red, dead pale and livid all in a moment. And by now from the crown of his 267 head to his feet he was mastered by a fit of shuddering, every part and every limb convulsed with trembling and palpitation. With his nervous system relaxed and unbraced he was in a state of utter collapse, and finally thus paralysed was on the point of falling. But some of the bystanders caught him and, when ordered to bring him home, took him thither on a stretcher, quite unconscious in his coma of the mass of troubles which had fallen upon him.

Gaius indeed was still more ex- 268 asperated and pushed his hatred of the nation still further. "If Agrippa," he said, "who is my dearest and most familiar friend and bound to me by so many benefactions, is so under the dominion of its customs that he cannot even bear to hear a word against them and is prostrated almost to the point of death, what must we expect of the others who are not under the influence of any counter-acting force?" On the other hand Agrippa for the first 269 day and the greater part of the next lay sunk in profound coma and knew nothing of what went on. But about the late afternoon he lifted his head slightly and just managed to open his eyes a little, weary as they were, and with their dim and misty vision cast a half look on those around him, unable as yet to distinguish clearly their several forms. Then again 270 he dropped off into sleep and rested quietly in a healthier condition than before, as far as could be judged from his revival and the state of his body. Afterwards he woke up and asked, "Where am I 271 now? At Gaius's? is my lord also present?" They replied, "Cheer up, you are staying in your

PHILO

- 272 βεις, Γάιος οὐ πάρεστιν· ἰκανῶς ἠρέμησας (ὑπενεχθεῖς) εἰς ὕπνον· ἀλλ' ἐπιστραφεῖς καὶ μετεωρίσας σαυτὸν τὸν ἀγκῶνα πῆξον, γνώρισον τοὺς παρόντας· ἴδιοι πάντες εἰσί, φίλων καὶ ἀπελευθέρων καὶ οἰκετῶν οἱ μάλιστα τιμῶντες καὶ ἀντιτιμῶμενοι”
- 273 —ὁ δὲ—νήφειν γὰρ ἤρχετο—καθεώρα τὸ παρ' ἐκάστω συμπαθές· καὶ κελευσάντων τοὺς πολλοὺς μεταστῆναι τῶν ἰατρῶν, ἵνα δι' ἀλειμμάτων καὶ
- 274 τροφῆς καιρίου τὸ σωματίον ἀνακτήσωνται, “ πάνν γάρ,” εἶπε, “ φροντιστέον ὑμῖν ἐπιμελεστέρας τῆς εἰς ἐμὲ διαίτης; οὐ γὰρ ἐξαρκεῖ μοι τῷ βαρυδαίμονι λιμὸν ἀκέσασθαι διὰ ψιλῆς καὶ εἰς εὐτέλειαν ἀπηκριβωμένης τῆς τῶν ἀναγκαίων χρήσεως; οὐδ' αὐτὰ δὴ ταῦτα προσηκάμην ἄν, εἰ μὴ ἔνεκα τελευταίας βοηθείας, ἣν ὄνειροπολεῖ μου ἡ διάνοια
- 275 τῷ ταλαιπῶρῳ ἔθνει παρασχεῖν.” καὶ ὁ μὲν δεδακρυμένος καὶ ἀναγκοφαγῶν δίχα προσοψήματος οὐδὲ κράματος προσενεχθέντος ἠνέσχετο, ἀλλ' ὕδατος ἀπογευσάμενος, “ ἀπέχει<sup>1</sup> μὲν,” εἶπεν, “ ἡ τάλαινα γαστήρ ὁ ἀπήτει δάνειον· ἐμοὶ δὲ τί προσήκει ποιεῖν ἢ δεῖσθαι Γαῖου περὶ τῶν ἐνεστώτων;”
- 276 XXXVI. Καὶ δέλτον λαβὼν ταῦτα ἐπιστέλλει· “ τὴν μὲν κατ' ὄψιν ἔντευξις, ὧ δέσποτα, φόβος με καὶ αἰδῶς ἀφείλαντο, ὁ μὲν ἀπειλήν ἐκτροπέμενος, ἡ δὲ τῷ μεγέθει τοῦ περὶ σὲ ἀξιώματος

<sup>1</sup> Reiter prints ἐπέχει from A only. I do not understand why, for ἀπέχω in the sense of “ receive in full ” is well known, e.g., St. Matth. vi. 2. No such sense is cited for ἐπέχω.

<sup>a</sup> For the medical use of σωματίον for a sick man's body under treatment see examples in L. & S. revised.

<sup>b</sup> πάνν may be regarded as introducing a question, or an

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 271-276

own house ; Gaius is not here ; you got a good rest 272 when you fell asleep ; now turn round, lift yourself up, lean upon your elbow and recognize the company present. They are all your own people, those of your friends and freedmen and servants who most value you and are valued by you." He was begin- 273 ning to come to his sober senses and observed the sympathy shown by all, and when the physicians told most of them to leave the room so that they might restore their patient <sup>a</sup> with unguents and suitable nourishment he said, " The idea of troubling your- 274 selves to give me a more elaborate diet ! <sup>b</sup> Isn't it enough for me, ill-fated wretch that I am, to assuage hunger merely with the use of bare necessities carefully calculated to maintain economy ?—and even these I would not have accepted save to insure the last remaining help which it is the dream of my heart to give to the unhappy nation." Tearfully he 275 forced himself to swallow some food without anything to season it, and even refused the offer of a mixed drink, and merely took a taste of water instead. " The belly," he said, " poor creature, has been paid in full the debt which it claimed.
What should I now do but make my petition to Gaius about the present situation ? "

XXXVI. He took a tablet and wrote to him as 276 follows : " My opportunity, my master, of interceding with you face to face has been lost through fear and reverend shame, fear which could not confront the menace, reverence which struck me dumb before the greatness of your dignity. But ironical affirmation. In either case the sentence indicates a strong repudiation, though no example of any such use is given in Stephanus or L. & S.

PHILO

- καταπλήττουσα· γραφή δὲ μηνύσει μου τὴν δέησιν, 277 ἣν ἀνθ' ἱκετηρίας προτείνω. πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις, αὐτοκράτορ, ἐμπέφυκεν ἔρως μὲν τῆς πατρίδος, τῶν δὲ οἰκείων νόμων ἀποδοχή· καὶ περὶ τούτων οὐδεμιᾶς ἐστὶ σοι χρεῖα διδασκαλίας, ἐκθύμως μὲν στέργοντι τὴν πατρίδα, ἐκθύμως δὲ τὰ πάτρια τιμῶντι. καλὰ δὲ ἐκάστοις, εἰ καὶ μὴ πρὸς ἀλή-θειάν ἐστι, διαφαίνεται τὰ οἰκεία· κρίνουσι γὰρ αὐτὰ οὐ λογισμῶ μᾶλλον ἢ τῷ τῆς εὐνοίας πάθει.
- 278 γεγέννημαι μὲν, ὡς οἶδας, Ἰουδαῖος· ἔστι δέ μοι Ἱεροσόλυμα πατρίς, ἐν ἣ ὁ τοῦ ὑψίστου θεοῦ νεῶς ἅγιος ἵδρυται· πάππων δὲ καὶ προγόνων βασιλέων ἔλαχον, ὧν οἱ πλείους ἐλέγοντο ἀρχιερεῖς, τὴν βασιλείαν τῆς ἱερωσύνης ἐν δευτέρᾳ τάξει τιθέμενοι καὶ νομίζοντες, ὅσῳ θεὸς ἀνθρώπων διαφέρει κατὰ τὸ κρεῖττον, τοσοῦτῳ καὶ βασιλείας ἀρχιερωσύνην<sup>1</sup> τὴν μὲν γὰρ εἶναι θεοῦ θεραπείαν, τὴν δὲ ἐπιμέλειαν 279 ἀνθρώπων. ἔθνει δὴ τοιούτῳ προσκεκληρωμένος καὶ πατρίδι καὶ ἱερῷ δέομαι ὑπὲρ πάντων· τοῦ μὲν ἔθνους, ἵνα μὴ τὴν ἐναντίαν δόξαν ἐνέγκηται τῆς ἀληθείας, εὐσεβέστατα καὶ ὀσιώτατα διακεί-
 [587] μενον | ἐξ ἀρχῆς πρὸς ἅπαντα τὸν ὑμέτερον οἶκον·
 280 ἐν οἷς γὰρ ἐφέεται καὶ ἕξεστι μετὰ νόμων εὐσεβεῖν, οὐδενὸς οὔτε τῶν Ἀσιανῶν οὔτε τῶν ἐν Εὐρώπῃ λείπεται τὸ παράπαν, εὐχαῖς, ἀναθημάτων κατα-σκευαῖς, πλήθει θυσιῶν, οὐ μόνον ἐν ταῖς κατὰ τὰς δημοτελεῖς ἑορτὰς ἀναγομέναις, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐν ταῖς καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν ἐντελεχέσιν· ἐξ ὧν οὐ στόματι καὶ γλώσση μηνύουσι τὸ εὐσεβὲς μᾶλλον

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἀρχιερωσύνη.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 276-280

my handwriting will declare to you the petition which I put forward instead of the suppliant's olive branch. All men, my emperor, have planted in them a passionate love of their native land and a high esteem for their own laws; and on this there is no need to instruct you, who love your native city as ardently as you honour your own customs. Every people is convinced of the excellence of its own institutions, even if they are not really excellent, for they judge them not so much by their reasoning as by the affection which they feel for them. I as you know am by birth a Jew, and my native city is Jerusalem in which is situated the sacred shrine of the most high God. It fell to me to have for my grandparents and ancestors kings, most of whom had the title of high priest, who considered their kingship inferior to the priesthood, holding that the office of high priest is as superior in excellence to that of king as God surpasses men. For the office of one is to worship God, of the other to have charge of men. As my lot is cast in such a nation, city and temple I beseech you for them all. For the nation, that it may not get a reputation the reverse of the truth, when from the very first it has been so piously and religiously disposed to all your house. For in all matters in which piety is enjoined and permitted under the laws it stood not a whit behind any other either in Asia or in Europe, in its prayers, its erection of votive offerings, its number of sacrifices, not only of those offered at general national feasts but in the perpetual and daily rites through which is declared their piety, not so much with mouth and tongue as in intentions formed in the secrecy of the soul by those

PHILO

- ἢ ψυχῆς ἀφανοῦς βουλευμασιν οἱ μὴ λέγοντες, ὅτι φιλοκαίσαρές εἰσιν, ἀλλ' ὄντες ὄντως.
- 281 περὶ δὲ τῆς ἱεροπόλεως τὰ προσήκοντά μοι λεκτέον· αὕτη, καθάπερ ἔφη, ἐμὴ μὲν ἐστὶ πατρίς, μητρόπολις δὲ οὐ μιᾶς χώρας Ἰουδαίας ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν πλείστων, διὰ τὰς ἀποικίας ἃς ἐξέπεμψεν ἐπὶ καιρῶν εἰς μὲν τὰς ὁμόρους, Αἴγυπτον, Φοινίκην, Συρίαν τὴν τε ἄλλην καὶ τὴν Κοίλην προσαγορευομένην, εἰς δὲ τὰς πόρρω διωκισμένας, Παμφυλίαν, Κιλικίαν, τὰ πολλὰ τῆς Ἀσίας ἄχρι Βιθυνίας καὶ τῶν τοῦ Πόντου μυχῶν, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον καὶ εἰς Εὐρώπην, Θετταλίαν, Βοιωτίαν, Μακεδονίαν, Αἰτωλίαν, τὴν Ἀττικὴν, Ἄργος, Κόρινθον, τὰ
- 282 πλείστα καὶ ἄριστα Πελοποννήσου. καὶ οὐ μόνον αἱ ἠπειροὶ μεστὰι τῶν Ἰουδαϊκῶν ἀποικιῶν εἰσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ νήσων αἱ δοκιμώταται, Εὐβοία, Κύπρος, Κρήτη. καὶ σιωπῶ τὰς πέραν Εὐφράτου· πᾶσαι γὰρ ἔξω μέρους βραχέος, Βαβυλῶν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων σατραπειῶν αἱ ἀρετῶσαν ἔχουσαι τὴν ἐν κύκλῳ
- 283 γῆν Ἰουδαίους ἔχουσιν οἰκήτορας. ὥστ' ἐὰν μεταλάβῃ σου τῆς εὐμενείας ἢ ἐμὴ πατρίς, οὐ μία πόλις ἀλλὰ καὶ μυρίαὶ τῶν ἄλλων εὐεργετοῦνται καθ' ἕκαστον κλίμα τῆς οἰκουμένης ἰδρυθεῖσαι, τὸ Εὐρωπαϊόν, τὸ Ἀσιανόν, τὸ Λιβυκόν, τὸ ἐν ἠπείροις, τὸ ἐν νήσοις, παράλόν τε καὶ μεσόγειον.
- 284 ἀρμόττει δέ σου τῷ μεγέθει τῆς τοσαύτης τύχης διὰ τῶν εἰς μίαν πόλιν εὐεργεσιῶν μυρίας ἄλλας συνευεργετεῖν, ὅπως διὰ πάντων τῶν τῆς οἰκουμένης μερῶν ἄδηταί σου τὸ κλέος καὶ οἱ μετ'
- 285 εὐχαριστίας ἔπαινοι συνηχῶνται. φίλων ἐνίων πατρίδας ὅλας<sup>1</sup> τῆς Ῥωμαϊκῆς ἡξίωσας πολιτείας, <sup>1</sup> mss. ὅλης.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 280-285

who do not tell you that they love their Caesar but love him in very truth. As for the holy 281 city, I must say what befits me to say. While she, as I have said, is my native city she is also the mother city not of one country Judaea but of most of the others in virtue of the colonies sent out at divers times to the neighbouring lands Egypt, Phoenicia, the part of Syria called the Hollow and the rest as well and the lands lying far apart, Pamphylia, Cilicia, most of Asia up to Bithynia and the corners of Pontus, similarly also into Europe, Thessaly, Boeotia, Macedonia, Aetolia, Attica, Argos, Corinth and most of the best parts of Peloponnese. And not only are 282 the mainlands full of Jewish colonies but also the most highly esteemed of the islands Euboea, Cyprus, Crete. I say nothing of the countries beyond the Euphrates, for except for a small part they all, Babylon and of the other satrapies those where the land within their confines<sup>a</sup> is highly fertile, have Jewish inhabitants. So that if my own home-city 283 is granted a share of your goodwill the benefit extends not to one city but to myriads of the others situated in every region of the inhabited world whether in Europe or in Asia or in Libya, whether in the mainlands or on the islands, whether it be seaboard or inland. It well befits the magnitude of 284 your great good fortune that by benefiting one city you should benefit myriads of others also so that through every part of the world your glory should be celebrated and your praises mingled with thanksgiving resound. Some of your friends have had their 285 homelands as a whole deemed worthy by you of <sup>a</sup> Or "the land round them," the satrapy being identified with its capital.

PHILO

καὶ γεγόνασιν οἱ πρὸ μικροῦ δοῦλοι δεσπότηαι 286 ἑτέρων· καὶ τῶν ἀπολελαυκότων τῆς χάριτος μάλλον ἢ οὐχ ἦττον οἱ δι' οὓς γέγονεν ἡδοναί. καὶ γὰρ τίς εἰμι τῶν εἰδόντων μὲν ὅτι δεσπότην ἔχω καὶ κύριον, κεκριμένων δὲ ἐν τῇ τάξει τῶν ἐταίρων,
 [588] ἀξιώματος μὲν ἕνεκα οὐ πολλῶν ὕστερος, | εὐνοίας
 287 δὲ οὐδενὸς δεύτερος, ἵνα μὴ λέγω πρῶτος. διὰ τε οὖν τὸ πεφυκέναι<sup>1</sup> καὶ διὰ τὸ πλήθος τῶν εὐεργεσιῶν, αἷς με κατεπλούτισας, θαρρήσας ἂν ἴσως αἰτήσασθαι τῇ πατρίδι καὶ αὐτός, εἰ καὶ μὴ τὴν Ῥωμαϊκὴν πολιτείαν, ἐλευθερίαν γοῦν ἢ φόρων ἄφεσιν, οὐδὲν ἀπετόλμησα τοιοῦτον αἰτήσασθαι, τὸ δὲ φορητότατον, χάριν σοὶ μὲν ἀζήμιον δοῦναι, τῇ δὲ πατρίδι λαβεῖν ὠφελιμωτάτην· τί γὰρ ἂν γένοιτο εὐμενείας ἡγεμόνος ὑπηκόοις ἄμεινον 288 ἀγαθόν; ἐν Ἱεροσολύμοις πρῶτον, αὐτοκράτορ, ἡγγέλη σου ἢ εὐκταία διαδοχῇ, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς ἱερο-πόλεως ἐπὶ τὰς παρ' ἑκάτερα ἡπείρους ἐχώρησεν ἡ φήμη· προνομίας καὶ διὰ τοῦτο τυγχάνειν ἐστὶν 289 ἀξία παρὰ σοί. καθάπερ γὰρ ἐν ταῖς συγγενείαις οἱ πρεσβύτατοι παῖδες τυγχάνουσι πρεσβείων, ὅτι πρῶτοι τὸ πατὴρ καὶ τὸ μητὴρ ὄνομα τοῖς γονεῦσιν ἐφήμισαν, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον, ἐπειδὴ τῶν ἀνατολικῶν πρώτη πόλις αὕτη σε προσείπεν αὐτοκράτορα, δικαία τυγχάνειν πλειόνων ἐστὶν 290 ἀγαθῶν, εἰ δὲ μὴ, τῶν γοῦν ἴσων. τοσαῦτα δικαιο-λογηθεῖς καὶ δεηθεῖς ἅμα περὶ τῆς πατρίδος εἰμι τὸ τελευταῖον ἐπὶ τὴν <περὶ> τοῦ ἱεροῦ δέησιν.
 τοῦτο, Γαίε δέσποτα, τὸ ἱερὸν χειρόκμητον οὐδεμίαν ἐξ ἀρχῆς μορφὴν παρεδέξατο διὰ τὸ ἔδος τοῦ

<sup>1</sup> Α τὸ πεφυκέναι εὐ, Mangey τὸ (τοιούτος) πεφυκέναι.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 285-290

Roman citizenship, and men who but now were slaves have become masters of others. The pleasure which this gracious action gives to those who have enjoyed it is felt quite as much if not more by those for whose sake it was done. I myself, being one of those who 286 while knowing we have a lord and master have been chosen to rank among your companions, am in dignity inferior to few and in loyalty second to none, I might almost say the first. And though, because I am what 287 I am and in view of the multitude of benefits with which you have enriched me I might perhaps have had the courage to beg myself that my homeland should obtain if not Roman citizenship at least freedom and remission of tribute, I have felt it would be overbold to ask for anything of the kind and only prefer the very modest request of a favour which you will lose nothing by giving and my country will best profit by receiving. For what greater boon can subjects have than the goodwill of their ruler? It 288 was in Jerusalem, my emperor, that your much-prayed-for succession was first announced, and from the holy city the rumour travelled to the mainlands on both sides, and for that reason it deserves to hold the premier place in your esteem. For just as in 289 families the oldest children hold the primacy because they have been the first to give the name of father and mother to their parents, so too this city since it was the first of eastern cities to address you as emperor deserves to receive greater boons than they or at least no less. Having said thus much as a 290 claimant for justice and as a suppliant also on behalf of my native place I come finally to my supplication for the temple. This temple, my Lord Gaius, has never from the first admitted any figure wrought by ἀληθοῦς εἶναι θεοῦ· γραφέων μὲν γὰρ καὶ πλαστῶν ἔργα μιμήματα τῶν αἰσθητῶν θεῶν εἰσιν· τὸν δὲ ἀόρατον εἰκονογραφεῖν ἢ διαπλάττειν οὐχ ὅσιον 291 ἐνομίσθη τοῖς ἡμετέροις προγόνοις. Ἀγρίππας ἐτίμησε τὸ ἱερὸν ἐλθὼν, ὃ πάππος σου, καὶ ὁ Σεβαστὸς διὰ τοῦ κελεῦσαι τὰς πανταχόθεν ἀπαρχὰς ἐπιστολαῖς<sup>1</sup> πέμπειν ἐκείσε καὶ διὰ τῆς ἐντε-292 λεχοῦς θυσίας· καὶ ἡ προμάμμη σου * * *<sup>2</sup> ὅθεν οὐδεὶς, οὐχ Ἕλλην, οὐ βάρβαρος, οὐ σατράπης, οὐ βασιλεύς, οὐκ ἐχθρὸς ἄσπονδος, οὐ στάσις, οὐ πόλεμος, οὐχ ἄλωσις, οὐ πόρθησις, οὐκ ἄλλο τι τῶν ὄντων οὐδὲν ἐνεωτέρισέ ποτε οὕτως εἰς τὸν νεών, ὡς ἀγαλμα ἢ ξόανον ἢ τι τῶν χειροκμήτων 293 ἰδρῦσασθαι. καὶ γὰρ εἰ τοῖς οἰκήτορσι τῆς χώρας

PHILO

 [589] ἀπήχθοντο δυσμενεῖς ὄντες, ἀλλ' αἰδῶς γέ | τις ἢ φόβος εἰσῆει παραλῦσαί τι τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς νενο-μισμένων ἐπὶ τιμῇ τοῦ ποιητοῦ τῶν ὅλων καὶ πατρός· ἦδεσαν γὰρ ἐκ τούτων καὶ τῶν ὁμοιοτρόπων τὰς τῶν θεηλάτων κακῶν φνομένας ἀνηκέστους συμφοράς. ἥς χάριν αἰτίας ἀσεβῆς σπέρμα σπείρειν εὐλαβοῦντο δεδιότες, μὴ θερίζειν ἀναγκασθῶσι τοὺς ἐπ' ὀλέθρῳ παντελεῖ καρπούς.

<sup>1</sup> The position of ἐπιστολαῖς seems very strange, if not impossible. Mangey suggests transposition—presumably in juxtaposition to κελεῦσαι—or correction to ἀποστολαῖς=“by missions” (of persons chosen for the purpose). But the evidence he cites for this use does not seem to do away with its superfluity after πέμπειν.

<sup>2</sup> The supposed lacuna suggested by Mangey is supported by Cohn and Reiter. It certainly looks as if some words had fallen out anticipating what is said of Julia Augusta (Livia) in § 319, as ἐλθὼν anticipates the account of Agrippa in men's hands, because it is the sanctuary of the true God. For the works of painters and modellers are representations of gods perceived by sense but to paint or mould a likeness of the invisible was held by our ancestors to be against their religion. Your 291 grandfather Agrippa visited and paid honour to the temple, and so did Augustus by the letters in which he ordered the first fruits to be sent from every quarter and by instituting the perpetual sacrifice. Your great-grandmother too . . . Thus no one, Greek or 292 non-Greek, no satrap, no king, no mortal enemy, no faction, no war, no storming or sacking of the city, nor any existing thing ever brought about so great a violation of the temple as the setting up in it of an image or statue or any hand-wrought object for worship. For even if they were ill-disposed and 293 hostile to the inhabitants of the land yet an instinct of reverence or fear warned them against breaking down any of the customs observed from the first in honour of the Maker and Father of all, for they knew that it was from these and like actions that the irreparable calamities of divine visitations spring. Therefore they took good care not to sow the seed of impiety, lest they should be compelled to reap its fruits which bring utter destruction.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 290-293

---

§§ 294-297, and the words about Augustus anticipate §§ 311-318. But I should not expect more than something like δι' ὧν ἐδωρήσατο, since ἐτίμησε has all three persons for its subject. Mangey however thought that something more was required on the grounds that § 292 has no logical connexion with § 291. But if we regard that section as parenthetical there is a sufficient logical connexion between §§ 290 and 292, and it is quite in Philo's manner to have causal clauses which connect with something which has not immediately preceded. See Intro. pp. xxi-xxiii.

PHILO

- 294 XXXVII. “ Ἄλλὰ τί μοι ξένους καλεῖν μάρτυρας ἔχοντι πολλοὺς τῶν οἰκειοτάτων σοι παραστήσαι; Μάρκος Ἀγρίππας εὐθέως, ὁ πρὸς μητρός σου πάππος, ἐν Ἰουδαίᾳ γενόμενος, ἡνίκα Ἑρῳδῆς ὁ ἐμὸς πάππος ἐβασίλευε τῆς χώρας, ἀναβῆναι μὲν ἀπὸ θαλάττης εἰς τὴν μητρόπολιν ἐν μεσογειῷ 295 κειμένην ἠξίωσε· θεασάμενος δὲ τὸ ἱερὸν καὶ τὸν τῶν ἱερέων κόσμον καὶ τὴν τῶν ἐγχωρίων ἀγιστεῖαν, ἠγάσθη χρῆμα νομίσας ὑπέρσεμνόν τι καὶ παντὸς λόγου μείζον ἔωρακέναι, καὶ διήγημα οὐδὲν ἦν ἕτερον αὐτῷ πρὸς τοὺς συνόντας τότε τῶν ἐταίρων ἢ ὁ τοῦ νεῶ καὶ τῶν κατ’ αὐτὸν ἀπάντων
 296 ἔπαινος. ὅσας γοῦν ἡμέρας διέτριψεν ἐν τῇ πόλει κατὰ χάριν τὴν πρὸς Ἑρῳδῆν, ἐφοίτησεν εἰς τὸ τέμενος τερπόμενος τῇ θεᾷ καὶ τῆς κατασκευῆς καὶ τῶν θυσιῶν καὶ τῆς περὶ τὰ ἱερουργούμενα λειτουργίας καὶ τάξεως καὶ τῆς περὶ τὸν ἀρχιερέα σεμνότητος, ὅποτε ἀσκηθεῖη τῇ ἱερᾷ στολῇ καὶ
 297 κατάρχῳ τῶν ἱερῶν. ἀναθήμασι δὲ κοσμήσας ὅσοις ἐξῆν τὸ ἱερὸν καὶ τοὺς οἰκήτορας εὐεργετήσας ὅσα μὴ βλάψει χαριζόμενος, Ἑρῳδῆν εὐφημήσας πολλὰ καὶ εὐφημηθεῖς μυρία, παρεπέμφθη μέχρι λιμένων, οὐχ ὑπὸ μᾶς πόλεως, ἀλλ’ ὑπὸ τῆς χώρας ἀπάσης, φυλλοβολούμενός τε καὶ θαυμαζό-
 298 μενος ἐπ’ εὐσεβείᾳ. τί δὲ ὁ ἕτερός σου πάππος Τιβέριος Καῖσαρ; οὐχὶ ταῦτα φαίνεται προηρημένος; ἐν γοῦν τρισὶ καὶ εἴκοσιν ἔτεσιν οἷς αὐτοκράτωρ ἐγένετο τὴν κατὰ τὸ ἱερὸν ἐκ μηκίστων χρόνων παραδεδομένην θρησκείαν ἐτήρη-

<sup>a</sup> Meaning perhaps such as would not be offensive to Herod or be felt to be encroaching on his authority.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 294-298

XXXVII. "But why should I cite the testimony of 294 strangers when I can set before you that of many of your closest kinsmen? For instance your maternal grandfather M. Agrippa, being in Judaea when Herod my grandfather was king of the country, saw fit to come up from the coast to the capital situated in the centre of the land. But when he surveyed the temple 295 and the rich array of the priests and the worship paid by the native population he was filled with wonder thinking that he had seen something to be profoundly reverenced, something greater than words could describe. His discourse to those of his friends who were there with him consisted of nothing else but praise of the sanctuary and all that pertained to it.
Thus throughout the days which he spent in the 296 city out of courtesy to Herod he resorted to the precinct, delighting himself with the spectacle both of the ornate structure and of the sacrifices and the ritual observed in the services and the majestic aspect of the high priest when arrayed in the sacred vestments and conducting the holy rites. After decking 297 the temple with all the dedicatory gifts which the law made permissible and benefiting the inhabitants by granting every favour which he could without causing mischief<sup>a</sup> and paying many compliments to Herod and receiving a host of the same from him, he was escorted to the harbours not by one city only but by the whole population of the country amid showers of posies which expressed their admiration of his piety. What of your other grand- 298 father Tiberius Caesar? Did he not evidently adopt the same policy? At any rate in the twenty-three years during which he was emperor he maintained the tradition observed in the temple from distant ages and σεν, οὐδὲν αὐτῆς παραλύσας ἢ παρακινήσας μέρος.

PHILO

 299 XXXVIII. ἔχω δέ τι καὶ φιλοτίμημα αὐτοῦ προσ-διηγῆσασθαι, καίτοι μυρίων ἀπολελαυκῶς ὅτε ἔζη κακῶν· ἀλλὰ τάληθές φίλον καὶ σοὶ τίμιον. Πιλᾶ-τος ἦν τῶν ὑπάρχων ἐπίτροπος ἀποδεδειγμένος τῆς Ἰουδαίας· οὗτος οὐκ ἐπὶ τιμῇ Τιβερίου μᾶλλον ἢ ἔνεκα τοῦ λυπῆσαι τὸ πλῆθος ἀνατίθησιν ἐν τοῖς κατὰ τὴν ἱερόπολιν Ἑρῳδου βασιλείοις ἐπιχρύσους [590] ἀσπίδας μήτε | μορφὴν ἐχούσας μήτε ἄλλο τι τῶν ἀπηγορευμένων, ἔξω τινὸς ἐπιγραφῆς ἀναγκαίας, ἢ δύο ταῦτα ἐμήνυε, τὸν τε ἀναθέντα καὶ ὑπὲρ οὗ 300 ἢ ἀνάθεσις. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἦσθοντο οἱ πολλοί—καὶ περιβόητον ἦν ἤδη τὸ πρᾶγμα—, προστησάμενοι τοὺς τε βασιλέως υἱεῖς τέτταρας οὐκ ἀποδέοντας τό τε ἀξίωμα καὶ τὰς τύχας βασιλέων καὶ τοὺς ἄλλους ἀπογόνους καὶ τῶν παρ' αὐτοῖς τοὺς ἐν τέλει παρεκάλουν τὸ νεωτερισθὲν περὶ τὰς ἀσπίδας εἰς ἐπανόρθωσιν ἀγαγεῖν καὶ μὴ κινεῖν ἔθνη πάτρια τὸν πρὸ τοῦ πάντα αἰῶνα διαφυλαχθέντα καὶ πρὸς 301 βασιλέων καὶ πρὸς αὐτοκρατόρων ἀκίνητα. στερρῶς δὲ ἀντιλέγοντος—ἦν γὰρ τὴν φύσιν ἀκαμπῆς καὶ μετὰ τοῦ αὐθάδους ἀμειλικτος—, ἀνεβόησαν· ‘ μὴ στασίαζε, μὴ πολεμοποιεῖ, μὴ κατάλυε τὴν εἰρήνην· οὐκ ἔστιν ἀτιμία νόμων ἀρχαίων αὐτοκράτορος τιμῆ. μὴ πρόφασις τῆς εἰς τὸ ἔθνος ἐπηρείας ἔστω σοὶ Τιβέριος· οὐδὲν ἐθέλει τῶν ἡμετέρων καταλύεσθαι. εἰ δὲ φῆς, αὐτὸς ἐπίδειξον ἢ διάταγμα ἢ ἐπιστολὴν ἢ ὁμοιότροπον, ἵνα

* Or perhaps “showing his public spirit,” as φιλοτιμία is sometimes used of the munificence of rulers (see Lexicon). L. & S. revised strangely cite this passage in the sense of “a.”

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 298-301

destroyed or disturbed no part of it. XXXVIII. I 299 can quote in addition one act showing a fine spirit.<sup>a</sup>
For though I experienced many ills when he was alive, truth is dear, and is held in honour by you.<sup>b</sup> One of his lieutenants was Pilate, who was appointed to govern Judaea. He, not so much to honour Tiberius as to annoy the multitude, dedicated in Herod's palace in the holy city some shields coated with gold.
They had no image work traced on them nor anything else forbidden by the law apart from the barest inscription stating two facts, the name of the person who made the dedication and of him in whose honour it was made. But when the multitude understood 300 the matter which had by now become a subject of common talk, having put at their head the king's four sons,<sup>c</sup> who in dignity and good fortune were not inferior to a king, and his other descendants and the persons of authority in their own body, they appealed to Pilate to redress the infringement of their traditions caused by the shields and not to disturb the customs which throughout all the preceding ages had been safeguarded without disturbance by kings and by emperors. When he, naturally inflexible, a blend 301 of self-will and relentlessness, stubbornly refused they clamoured, 'Do not arouse sedition, do not make war, do not destroy the peace; you do not honour the emperor by dishonouring ancient laws. Do not take Tiberius as your pretext for outraging the nation; he does not wish any of our customs to be overthrown. If you say that he does, produce yourself an order or a letter or something of the kind so act of ambition or ostentation," which is surely quite out of place.

<sup>b</sup> Or perhaps "reflects honour on you."

<sup>c</sup> For the account in Josephus cf. Bell. Jud. ii. 169 ff., vol. ii. p. 389 L.C.L.

PHILO

πανσάμενοι τοῦ σοὶ διενοχλεῖν πρέσβεις ἐλόμενοι 302 δεῦμέθα τοῦ δεσπότου.' τὸ τελευταῖον τοῦτο μάλιστα αὐτὸν ἐξετράχυνε καταδείσαντα, μὴ τῷ ὄντι πρεσβευσάμενοι καὶ τῆς ἄλλης αὐτὸν ἐπιτροπῆς ἐξελέγξωσι τὰς δωροδοκίας, τὰς ὕβρεις, τὰς ἀρ-παγὰς, τὰς αἰκίας, τὰς ἐπηρείας, τοὺς ἀκρίτους καὶ ἐπαλλήλους φόνους, τὴν ἀνήνυτον καὶ ἀργαλεω-303 τάτην ὠμότητα διεξελθόντες. οἷα οὖν ἐγκότως ἔχων καὶ βαρῦμηνις (ὦν) ἄνθρωπος ἐν ἀμηχάνοις ἦν, μήτε καθελεῖν τὰ ἅπαξ ἀνατεθέντα θαρρῶν μήτε βουλόμενός τι τῶν πρὸς ἡδονὴν τοῖς ὑπηκόοις ἐργάσασθαι, ἅμα δὲ καὶ τὴν ἐν τούτοις σταθερότητα Τιβερίου μὴ ἀγνοῶν· ἅπερ ὀρῶντες οἱ ἐν τέλει καὶ συνιέντες, ὅτι μετανοεῖ μὲν ἐπὶ τοῖς πεπραγμένοις, δοκεῖν δὲ οὐ βούλεται, γράφουσι 304 Τιβερίῳ δεητικωτάτας ἐπιστολάς. ὁ δὲ διαναγνοὺς<sup>1</sup> οἷα μὲν εἶπε Πιλάτον, οἷα δὲ ἠπέιλησεν· ὡς δὲ ὠργίσθη, καίτοι οὐκ εὐληπτος ὦν ὀργῇ, περιττόν ἐστὶ διηγείσθαι, τοῦ πράγματος ἐξ αὐτοῦ φωνὴν 305 ἀφιέντος. εὐθέως γὰρ οὐδὲ εἰς τὴν ὑστεραίαν ὑπερθέμενος ἐπιστέλλει, μυρία μὲν τοῦ καινουργη-θέντος πολμήματος ὀνειδίζων καὶ ἐπιπλήττων, κελεύων δὲ αὐτίκα καθελεῖν τὰς ἀσπίδας καὶ μετακομισθῆναι ἐκ τῆς μητροπόλεως εἰς τὴν ἐπὶ θαλάττῃ Καισάρειαν, ἐπώνυμον τοῦ προπάππου Σεβαστήν, ἵνα ἀνατεθεῖεν ἐν τῷ Σεβαστείῳ· καὶ
 ἀνετέθησαν. οὕτως ἀμφότερα ἐφυλάχθη, καὶ ἡ |
 [591] τιμὴ τοῦ αὐτοκράτορος, καὶ ἡ περὶ τὴν πόλιν

<sup>1</sup> mss. διαγνοὺς. See on § 203.

<sup>a</sup> So in Jos. Ant. xvi. 136, though the epithet Σεβαστή does not appear elsewhere. It is usually distinguished from 152

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 301-305

that we may cease to pester you and having chosen our envoys may petition our lord.' It was this final 302 point which particularly exasperated him, for he feared that if they actually sent an embassy they would also expose the rest of his conduct as governor by stating in full the briberies, the insults, the robberies, the outrages and wanton injuries, the executions without trial constantly repeated, the ceaseless and supremely grievous cruelty. So with all his vindictiveness and furious temper, he was in a difficult 303 position. He had not the courage to take down what had been dedicated nor did he wish to do anything which would please his subjects. At the same time he knew full well the constant policy of Tiberius in these matters. The magnates saw this and understanding that he had repented of his action but did not wish to appear penitent sent letters of very earnest supplication to Tiberius. When he had read 304 them through what language he used about Pilate, what threats he made! The violence of his anger, though he was not easily roused to anger, it is needless to describe since the facts speak for themselves. For at once without even postponing it to 305 the morrow he wrote to Pilate with a host of reproaches and rebukes for his audacious violation of precedent and bade him at once take down the shields and have them transferred from the capital to Caesarea on the coast surnamed Augusta<sup>a</sup> after your great-grandfather, to be set up in the temple of Augustus, and so they were. So both objects were safeguarded, the honour paid to the emperor and the policy observed from of old in dealing Caesarea Philippi by ἡ ἐπὶ θalάσση as here; v. Pauly-Wissowa, s.v.

PHILO

- 306 ἀρχαία συνήθεια. XXXIX. τότε μὲν οὖν ἀσπίδες ἦσαν, αἷς οὐδὲν ἀνεζωγράφητο μίμημα· νυνὶ δὲ κολοσσιαῖος ἀνδριάς. καὶ τότε μὲν ἡ ἀνάθεσις ἐν οἰκίᾳ τῶν ἐπιτρόπων ἦν· τὴν δὲ μέλλουσάν φασιν ἐσωτάτω τοῦ ἱεροῦ κατ' αὐτὰ τὰ ἄδυστα γίνεσθαι, εἰς ἃ ἅπαξ τοῦ ἐνιαυτοῦ ὁ μέγας ἱερεὺς εἰσέρχεται τῇ νηστείᾳ λεγομένη μόνον ἐπιθυμιάσων καὶ κατὰ τὰ πάτρια εὐξόμενος φορὰν ἀγαθῶν εὐετηρίαν τε
- 307 καὶ εἰρήνην ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποις. κἂν ἄρα τίς που, οὐ λέγω τῶν ἄλλων Ἰουδαίων, ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν ἱερέων, οὐχὶ τῶν ὑστάτων, ἀλλὰ τῶν τὴν εὐθὺς μετὰ τὸν πρῶτον τάξιν εἰληχότων, ἢ καθ' αὐτὸν ἢ καὶ μετ' ἐκείνου συνεισέλθῃ, μᾶλλον δὲ κἂν αὐτὸς ὁ ἀρχιερεὺς δυσὶν ἡμέραις τοῦ ἔτους ἢ καὶ τῇ αὐτῇ τρὶς ἢ καὶ τετράκις εἰσφοιτήσῃ, θάνατον
- 308 ἀπαραίτητον ὑπομένει. τοσαύτη τίς ἐστὶν ἡ περὶ τὰ ἄδυστα φυλακὴ τοῦ νομοθέτου μόνα ἐκ πάντων ἄβαστα καὶ ἄψαυστα βουλευθέντος αὐτὰ διατηρεῖσθαι. πόσους ἂν οὖν οἶε θανάτους ἐκουσίως ὑπομένειν τοὺς περὶ ταῦτα ὠσιωμένους, εἰ θεάσαιτο τὸν ἀνδριάντα εἰσκομιζόμενον; ἐμοὶ μὲν δοκοῦσι γενεὰς ὅλας αὐταῖς γυναιξὶ καὶ τέκνοις ἀποσφάζαντες ἐπὶ τοῖς τῶν οἰκείων πτώμασιν ἑαυτοὺς τελευταῖον καθιερεύσειν. ταῦτα μὲν
- 309 Τιβέριος ἔγνω. τί δὲ ὁ σοὺς πρόπαππος, ὁ τῶν πώποτε γενομένων αὐτοκρατόρων ἄριστος, ὁ πρῶτος ἀρετῆς ἕνεκα καὶ τύχης Σεβαστοῦ ὀνομασθεῖς, ὁ τὴν εἰρήνην διαχέας πάντῃ διὰ γῆς
- 310 καὶ θαλάττης ἄχρι τῶν τοῦ κόσμου περάτων; οὐκ ἀκοῆ πυνθανόμενος τὰ περὶ τὸ ἱερὸν καὶ ὅτι οὐδὲν ἐστὶν ἀφίδρυμα ἐν αὐτῷ χειρόκμητον, ὄρατὸν ἀοράτου μίμημα φύσεως, ἐθαύμαζε καὶ προσεκύνει,

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 305-310

with the city. XXXIX. Now at that time it was 306 shields on which no likeness had been painted ;
now it is a colossal statue. Then too the installation was in the house of the governors ; now they say it is to be in the inmost part of the temple in the special sanctuary itself, into which the Grand Priest enters once a year only on the Fast as it is called, to offer incense and to pray according to ancestral practice for a full supply of blessings and prosperity and peace for all mankind. And if any priest, to 307 say nothing of the other Jews, and not merely one of the lowest priests but of those who are ranked directly below the chief, goes in either by himself or with the High Priest, and further even if the High Priest enters on two days in the year or thrice or four times on the same day death without appeal is his doom. So greatly careful was the law-giver to guard 308 the inmost sanctuary, the one and only place which he wished to keep preserved untrodden and untouched. How many deaths think you would those who have been trained to holiness in these matters willingly endure if they should see the statue imported thither? I believe that they would slaughter their whole families, women and children alike, and finally immolate themselves upon the corpses of their kin. This Tiberius knew. But what of 309 your greatgrandfather the best of the emperors that ever were to this day, he who first received the title of Augustus for his virtue and good fortune, who disseminated peace everywhere over sea and land to the ends of the world? Did he not, hearing 310 by report the story of the temple and that it had no work of man's hands, a visible effigy of an invisible being, erected in it, marvel and pay it honour?

φιλοσοφίας οὐκ ἄκροισ χεῖλεσι γευσάμενος ἀλλ' ἐπὶ πλεόν ἐστιαθεῖς καὶ σχεδόν τι καθ' ἑκάστην ἡμέραν ἐστιώμενος, τὰ μὲν μνήμαις ὧν ἡ διάνοια προμαθοῦσα τὰ φιλοσοφίας ἀνεπόλει, τὰ δὲ καὶ ταῖς τῶν συνόντων ἀεὶ λογίων συνδιαιτήσεσι; κατὰ γὰρ τὰς ἐν δείπνῳ συνουσίας ὁ πλείστος χρόνος ἀπενέμετο τοῖς ἀπὸ παιδείας, ἵνα μὴ τὸ σῶμα μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ τοῖς οἰκείοις ἀνατρέφοιτο.

311 XL. τεκμηρίοις δὲ ἀφθόνοις πιστώσασθαι δυνάμενος τὸ βούλημα τοῦ Σεβαστοῦ προπάππου σου δυσὶν ἀρκεσθήσομαι. τὸ μὲν γὰρ πρῶτον ἐπέστειλε τοῖς ἐπιτρόποις τῶν κατὰ τὴν Ἀσίαν ἐπικρατειῶν, πυθόμενος ὀλιγωρεῖσθαι τὰς ἱερὰς ἀπαρχάς, ἵνα ἐπιτρέπωσι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις μόνοις εἰς τὰ συναγώγια

312 συνέρχεσθαι· μὴ γὰρ εἶναι ταῦτα συνόδους ἐκ μέθης καὶ παροιρίας ἐπὶ συστάσει,<sup>1</sup> ὡς λυμαινέσθαι

[592] τὰ | τῆς εἰρήνης, ἀλλὰ διδασκαλεῖα σωφροσύνης καὶ δικαιοσύνης ἀνδρῶν ἐπιτηδευόντων μὲν ἀρετὴν, ἀπαρχὰς δὲ ἐτησίους συμφερόντων, ἐξ ὧν ἀνάγουσι θυσίας στέλλοντες ἱεροπομποὺς εἰς τὸ ἐν Ἱερο-

313 σολύμοις ἱερόν. εἶτα κελεύει μηδένα ἐμποδῶν ἴστασθαι τοῖς Ἰουδαίοις μήτε συνιούσι μήτε συνεισφέρουσι μήτε διαπεμπομένοις κατὰ τὰ πάτρια εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα· ταῦτα γὰρ εἰ καὶ μὴ τοῖς ῥήμασι,

314 τοῖς γοῦν πράγμασι ἐπέσταλται. μίαν δὲ ἐπιστολὴν ὑποτέταχα πρὸς τὴν σὴν τοῦ δεσπότητος πειθῶ, ἣν Γάιος Νορβανὸς Φλάκκος ἐπιστέλλει

<sup>1</sup> Reiter has ἐπισυστάσας on Cohn's conjecture. The mss. readings recorded are ἐπὶ συστάσει (so Mangey), ἐπὶ συστάσεως and ἐπισυστάνα. I do not see much reason for ἐπισυστάσας, which, if taken in the sense of conspiring, would naturally be followed by a dative, nor any difficulty in ἐπὶ συστάσει. For σύστασις in this sense cf. De Praem. 75.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 310-314

For he had not taken a mere sip of philosophy but had feasted on it liberally and continued so to feast almost every day, partly by the memories of the lessons which his mind had conned from its earlier instruction in philosophy, partly by intercourse with the learned who from time to time were in his company. For in the gatherings at his table most of the time was assigned to listening to men of culture<sup>a</sup> so that not only the body but also the soul might be nourished by the food proper to each. XL. While I have 311 a great abundance of evidence to show the wishes of your great-grandfather Augustus I will content myself with two examples. The first is a letter which he sent to the governors of the provinces in Asia, as he had learnt that the sacred first-fruits were treated with disrespect. He ordered that the Jews alone should be permitted by them to assemble in synagogues. These gatherings, he said, were not 312 based on drunkenness and carousing to promote conspiracy and so to do grave injury to the cause of peace, but were schools of temperance and justice where men while practising virtue subscribed the annual first-fruits to pay for the sacrifices which they offer and commissioned sacred envoys to take them to the temple in Jerusalem. Then he commanded that no 313 one should hinder the Jews from meeting or subscribing or sending envoys to Jerusalem according to their ancestral practice. For these were certainly the substance if not the actual words of his instructions. But 314 there is one letter which I subjoin here to convince you, my lord and master, sent by Gaius Norbanus Flaccus <sup>a</sup> This might mean "subjects of culture," but cf. in De Mut. 33 and Quod Omn. Prob. 125, where we have οἱ ἀπὸ παιδείας.

- δηλῶν τὰ ὑπὸ Καίσαρος αὐτῷ γραφέντα. ἔστι δὲ 315 τῆς ἐπιστολῆς τὸ ἀντίγραφον τόδε· Γάιος Νορβανὸς Φλάκκος ἀνθύπατος Ἐφεσίων ἄρχουσι χαίρειν. Καίσαρ μοι ἔγραψεν, Ἰουδαίους, οὗ ἂν ὦσιν, ἰδίῳ ἀρχαίῳ ἐθισμῷ νομίζειν συναγομένους χρήματα φέρειν, ἃ πέμπουσιν εἰς Ἱεροσόλυμα· τούτους οὐκ ἠθέλησε κωλύεσθαι τοῦτο ποιεῖν. ἔγραψα οὖν ὑμῖν, ἵν' εἰδῆτε, ὡς ταῦτα οὕτως γίνεσθαι κελεύει.
- 316 ἄρ' οὐκ ἐναργῆς πίστις ἐστίν, αὐτοκράτορ, τῆς Καίσαρος προαιρέσεως, ἣ περι τὴν τοῦ ἡμετέρου ἱεροῦ τιμὴν ἐκέχρητο, μὴ βουλευθεὶς τῷ κοινῷ τύπῳ τῶν συνόδων ἀναιρεθῆναι τὰς τῶν Ἰουδαίων εἰς ταῦτ' οὐ συμφουτήσεις, ἃς ἀπαρχῶν ἔνεκα ποιοῦνται
 317 καὶ τῆς ἄλλης εὐσεβείας; ἕτερον δὲ ἐστὶν οὐκ ἀποδέον τούτου δείγμα σαφέστατον τῆς βουλήσεως τοῦ Σεβαστοῦ· διετάξατο γὰρ ἐκ τῶν ἰδίων προσόδων ἀνάγεσθαι θυσίας ἐντελεχεῖς<sup>1</sup> ὀλοκαύτους τῷ ὑψίστῳ θεῷ καθ' ἐκάστην ἡμέραν, αἱ καὶ μέχρι νῦν ἐπιτελοῦνται· ἄρνες εἰσὶ δύο καὶ ταῦρος τὰ ἱερεῖα, οἷς Καίσαρ ἐφαίδρυε τὸν βωμὸν ἐπιστάμενος σαφῶς, ὅτι οὐδέν ἐστὶν ἀφίδρυμα οὔτε
 318 φανερόν οὔτε ἀφανές· ἀλλὰ γὰρ ὁ τοσοῦτος ἡγεμὼν καὶ φιλόσοφος<sup>2</sup> οὐδενὸς δεύτερος ἐλογίσαστο παρ' ἑαυτῷ, ὅτι ἀναγκαῖόν ἐστὶν ἐν τοῖς περιγείοις ἐξαιρετόν ἀπονεμεῖσθαι τόπον ἱερὸν τῷ ἁοράτῳ θεῷ μηδὲν ὄρατόν ἀπεικόνισμα περιέξοντα πρὸς μετουσίαν ἐλπίδων χρηστῶν καὶ ἀπόλαυσιν ἀγαθῶν
 319 τελείων. ὑφήγητῆ τοιοῦτῳ τῆς εὐσεβείας χρησαμένη καὶ ἡ προμάμμη σου Ἰουλία Σεβαστῆ κατεκόσμησε τὸν νεὼν χρυσαῖς φιάλαις καὶ σπονδαίοις καὶ ἄλλων ἀναθημάτων πολυτελε-

<sup>1</sup> MSS. ἐντελεῖς.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 314-319

declaring what Caesar had written to him. Here is a transcript of this letter. 'Gaius Norbanus Flaccus pro- 315 consul to the magistrates of the Ephesians, greeting. Caesar has written to me that the Jews, wherever they may be, regularly according to their old peculiar custom, make a rule of meeting together and subscribing money which they send to Jerusalem. He does not wish them to be hindered from doing this. I therefore write to you to let you know that this is what he orders to be done.' Is not this a clear proof, my 316 emperor, of the principles which he followed as to the honour due to our temple? He did not think that the form generally adopted about meetings should be applied to do away with the assemblages of the Jews to which they resort for collection of the first-fruits and their other religious observances. Another 317 example no less cogent than this shows very clearly the will of Augustus. He gave orders for a continuation of whole burnt offerings every day to the Most High God to be charged to his own purse. These are carried out to this day. Two lambs and a bull are the victims with which he added lustre to the altar, knowing well that there is no image there openly or secretly set up. Indeed this great ruler, this philosopher 318 second to none, reasoned in his mind that within the precincts of earth there must needs be a special place assigned as sacred to the invisible God which would contain no visible image, a place to give us participation in good hopes and enjoyment of perfect blessings. Under such an instructor in 319 piety your great-grandmother Julia Augusta adorned the temple with golden vials and libation bowls and a multitude of other sumptuous offerings. What made <sup>a</sup> MSS. φιλοσοφία (= -α) or φιλοσοφίας.

---

PHILO

- στάτων πλήθει· τί παθοῦσα καὶ αὕτη, μηδενὸς ἔνδον ὄντος ἀφιδρύματος; ἀσθενέστεραι γὰρ πῶς εἰσιν αἱ γινώμαι τῶν γυναικῶν ἔξω τῶν αἰσθητῶν
- 320 μηδὲν ἰσχύουσαι νοητὸν καταλαβεῖν. ἡ δέ γε
 [593] καθάπερ ἐν τοῖς ἄλλοις ὄλον | τὸ γένος κὰν τούτῳ διήνεγκεν, ὑπὸ παιδείας ἀκράτου φύσει καὶ μελέτῃ περιγεγενημένης,<sup>1</sup> ἀρρενωθεῖσα τὸν λογισμόν, ὃς οὕτως ὀξύτερκῆς ἐγεγένητο, ὡς μᾶλλον τὰ νοητὰ καταλαμβάνειν τῶν αἰσθητῶν καὶ ταῦτα νομίζειν ἐκείνων εἶναι σκιάς.
- 321 XLI. “Ἐχων οὖν, δέσποτα, τῆς ἡμερωτέρας<sup>2</sup> προαιρέσεως τοιαῦτα παραδείγματα, πάντα οἰκειότατα καὶ συγγενέστατα ἀφ’ ὧν ἐσπάρης καὶ ἀνέβλαστες καὶ τοσοῦτον ηὔξηθης, διατήρησον ἃ κακείνων 322 ἕκαστος. παρακλητεύουσι τοῖς νόμοις αὐτοκρά-τες πρὸς αὐτοκράτορα, Σεβαστοὶ πρὸς Σεβαστόν, πάπποι καὶ πρόγονοι πρὸς ἕκγονον, πλείους πρὸς ἓνα, μονονουχὶ φάσκοντες· ἐν ταῖς ἡμετέραις βουλήσεσιν ἃ μέχρι καὶ τήμερον ἐφυλάχθη νόμιμα μὴ καθέλῃς· καὶ γὰρ εἰ μηδὲν ἐκ τῆς καταλύσεως

<sup>1</sup> So Mangey with some mss. Others περιγεγενημένη (so Reiter). See note a.

<sup>2</sup> mss. ἡμετέρας.

---

<sup>a</sup> The exact meaning, as well as the reading, see note 1, is uncertain. The one thing certain is that we have an allusion to the Educational Trinity, Nature, Instruction and Practice, which occurs so frequently in Philo, particularly in its spiritual application. See particularly Introd. to vol. vi. pp. x f. and vol. viii. p. 453. Mangey's translation "ex eruditione pura quam natura et studio comparaverat," is, I think, impossible.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 319-322

her too do this, as there was no image there? For the judgements of women as a rule are weaker and do not apprehend any mental conception apart from what their senses perceive. But she excelled all her sex in this as in everything else, for the purity of the training she received supplementing nature and practice<sup>a</sup> gave virility to her reasoning power, which gained such clearness of vision that it apprehended the things of mind better than the things of sense and held the latter to be shadows of the former. 320

XLI. "So then, my lord, having such patterns of the gentler line of treatment, patterns so closely connected by kinship to yourself, the seed-bed from which you sprang<sup>b</sup> and grew up and rose to such greatness, maintain what each of them also maintained. The cause of the laws is pleaded by emperors to emperor, by Augusti to an Augustus, by grandparents and ancestors to their descendant, by several to one, and you may almost hear them say, 'Do not destroy the institutions which under the shelter of our wills were safeguarded to this day, for even if no sinister result were encountered through their 322

By παιδείας Philo clearly refers to the instruction received from her ύφηγητής Augustus, and it is inconsistent with this to say that it was gained by nature and practice. The same applies if reading with Reiter we translate "through instruction she surpassed (her sex) in nature and practice." The translation above seems to me to give the required sense. Livia had the advantage of Augustus's instruction but like everybody else she could not use it properly without the other two. But I cannot find examples of περιγίγνομαι in this sense and I should like to read παραγεγεννημένης = "supporting" or "supplementing."

<sup>b</sup> Or perhaps "most closely akin to those from whom you sprang," τούτων being omitted before ἀφ' ὧν. Cf. Quod Omn. Prob. 104 and 123.

PHILO

αὐτῶν ἀπαντηθεῖη παλίμφημον, ἀλλ' ἣ γε τοῦ μέλλοντος ἀδηλότης καὶ τοῖς θαρραλεωτάτοις, εἰ μὴ καταφρονηταὶ τῶν θείων εἰσίν, οὐ παντελῶς 323 ἔστιν ἄφοβος. εἴαν καταλέγωμαι τὰς εἰς ἑμαυτὸν ἐκ σοῦ γενομένας εὐεργεσίας, ἐπιλείψει με ἡ ἡμέρα, πρὸς τῷ μηδὲ ἀρμόττον εἶναι προηγούμενον ἔργον πάρεργον ἑτέρου ποιεῖσθαι λόγου· κἂν ἡσυ-χάζω μέντοι, τὰ πράγματα αὐτὰ βοᾷ καὶ φωνὴν 324 ἀφίησιν. ἔλυσάς με σιδηρῷ δεδεμένον· τίς οὐκ οἶδεν; ἀλλὰ μὴ χαλεπωτέροις δεσμοῖς, αὐτοκράτορ, ἐπισφίγξης· οἱ μὲν γὰρ λυθέντες μέρει περιβέβληντο τοῦ σώματος, οἱ δὲ νῦν προσδοκώ-μενοι ψυχῆς εἰσιν, ὅλην αὐτὴν δι' ὅλων μέλλοντες 325 πιέζειν. τὸν ἐπικρεμάμενον αἰεὶ τοῦ θανάτου φόβον ἀπώσω καὶ τεθνεῶτα τῷ δέει ζωπυρήσας καθάπερ ἐκ παλιγγενεσίας ἀνήγειρας· διατήρησον τὴν χάριν, αὐτοκράτορ, ἵνα μὴ ὁ σὸς Ἀγρίππας ἀποτάξῃται τῷ βίῳ· δόξω γὰρ οὐ τοῦ σωθῆναι χάριν ἀφείσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ τοῦ βαρυτέρας ἐνδεξάμενος συμφορὰς 326 ἐπισημότερον τελευτῆσαι. τὸν μέγιστον καὶ εὐτυχεστάτον ἐν ἀνθρώποις κλῆρον ἔχαρισω μοι, βασιλείαν, πάλαι μὲν μιᾶς χώρας, αὐθις δὲ καὶ ἑτέρας μείζονος, τὴν Τραχωνίτιν λεγομένην καὶ τὴν Γαλιλαίαν συνάψας· μὴ τὰ πρὸς περιουσίαν μοι χαρισάμενος, ὧ δέσποτα, τὰ ἀναγκαῖα ἀφέλης 327 μὴδὲ εἰς φῶς ἀναγαγὼν τηλαυγέστατον ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς
 εἰς βαθύτατον σκότος ῥίψης. ἐξίσταμαι | τῶν [594] λαμπρῶν ἐκείνων, τὴν πρὸ μικροῦ τύχην οὐ παραιτοῦμαι, πάντα ὑπαλλάττομαι ἐνός, τοῦ μὴ

---

* Or "I do not deprecate my recent (ill) fortune." So Mangey. This is certainly more in accordance with the 162

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 322-327

overthrow, still the uncertainty of the future cannot entirely fail to strike fear into the most courageous unless he holds things divine in contempt.' If I should 323 recount the benefits conferred on myself by you, the day will be too short, and besides it is not suitable to treat a primary task as an appendage to another subject. And indeed even if I hold my peace the facts themselves break into speech and cry aloud. You released me bound fast in iron fetters, who does 324 not know it? but do not clamp me, my emperor, with still more grievous fetters, for those which were then unbound encompassed but a part of my body, those which I see before me are of the soul and must press hard on every part of its whole being. You thrust 325 away the ever imminent terror of death, you kindled fresh life in me when dead with fear, you awakened me as though I were born anew. Maintain your bounty, my emperor, that your Agrippa may not bid farewell to life, for it will seem as though my release was not given to save me but that a victim to heavier misfortunes I should come to a more notorious end. The greatest gift of fortune that man can possess 326 you granted to me, a kingdom, in the past of one country, later of another and a greater when you added Trachonitis as it is called and Galilee. Do not after granting me favours in super-abundance take from me bare necessities, and after restoring me to light of fullest radiance cast me anew into deepest darkness. I renounce all that brilliance, I do not 327 beg to keep my shortlived good fortune.<sup>a</sup> I exchange all for one thing only, that the ancestral institutions common use both of παραιτούμαι and πρὸ μικροῦ, but the sentence, if so taken, entirely contradicts what is said in § 323.

PHILO

κινηθῆναι τὰ πάτρια. τίς γὰρ ἂν μου γένοιτο λόγος ἢ παρὰ τοῖς ὁμοφύλοις ἢ παρὰ τοῖς ἄλλοις ἅπασιν ἀνθρώποις; ἀνάγκη γὰρ δυοῖν θάτερον ἢ προδότην τῶν ἰδίων ἢ σοὶ μηκέτι ὁμοίως φίλον 328 νομισθῆναι· ὦν τί ἂν εἶη μείζον κακόν; εἰ μὲν γὰρ ἐν τῇ τάξει τῶν ἐταίρων ἔτι καταριθμοῦμαι, προ-δοσίας ἐξοίσομαι δόξαν, εἰ μὴτε ἡ πατρίς ἀπαθῆς παντὸς κακοῦ διαφυλαχθῆ μῆτε τὸ ἱερὸν ἄψαυστον· τὰ γὰρ τῶν ἐταίρων καὶ προσπεφευγό-των ταῖς αὐτοκρατορικαῖς ἐπιφανείαις ὑμεῖς οἱ 329 μεγάλοι διασώζετε. εἰ δὲ ὑποικουρεῖ τί σου τὴν διάνοιαν ἔχθος, μὴ δήσης ὡς Τιβέριος, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὴν τοῦ δεθῆναί ποτε αὐθις ἐλπίδα συνανελῶν κέληυσον ἐκποδῶν αὐτίκα γενέσθαι· τί γὰρ ἐμοὶ ζῆν καλόν, ὧ μίᾳ σωτηρίας ἐλπίς ἦν τὸ σὸν εὐμενές;”
 330 XLII. Ταῦτα γράψας καὶ σφραγισάμενος πέμπει Γαίῳ καὶ συγκλεισάμενος οἴκοι κατέμενευ, ἀγωνιῶν καὶ συγκεχυμένος καὶ πῶς ἐντύχοι<sup>1</sup> μάλιστα φροντίζων· οὐ γὰρ βραχὺς ἐπέρριπτο κίνδυνος, ἀλλ’ ὁ περὶ ἀναστάσεως καὶ ἀνδραποδισμοῦ καὶ παντελοῦς πορθήσεως, οὐ μόνον τοῖς τὴν ἱερὰν χώραν κατοικοῦσιν ἀλλὰ καὶ τοῖς πανταχοῦ τῆς οἰκου-331 μένης Ἰουδαίοις. λαβὼν δὲ καὶ διαναγινώσκων ἐφ’ ἑκάστῳ τῶν νοημάτων ἅμα μὲν ὧδει, μὴ κατορθουμένου τοῦ βουλήματος, ἅμα δὲ καὶ ἐπεκλάτο ταῖς δικαιολογίαις ὁμοῦ καὶ δεήσεσι, καὶ τὸν 332 Ἀγρίππαν τῇ μὲν ἐπήγει, τῇ δὲ ἐμέμφετο· ἦτιἀτο μὲν τῆς εἰς τοὺς ὁμοφύλους ἄγαν ἀρεσκειᾶς <sup>1</sup> A strange use of ἐντυγχάνω. Perhaps, as Mangey, ἂν τύχοι.

<sup>a</sup> Or “take shelter under the manifestations.”

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 327-332

be not disturbed. For what would be my reputation among either my compatriots or all other men ? Either I must seem a traitor to my people or no longer be counted your friend as I have been ; there is no other alternative, and what greater ill could befall me than these ? For if I still keep my place 328 in the list of your companions I shall lie under an imputation of treachery, unless my homeland is guarded unscathed from every kind of mischief and the temple is untouched. For you great potentates safeguard the interests of your companions and those who take refuge with you by manifestations of your absolute power.<sup>a</sup> But if your mind harbour any 329 hostility to me, do not imprison me as Tiberius did, rather do away with any idea of future imprisonment and at the same time bid me take myself out of the way forthwith. For of what value would life be to me whose one hope of salvation lay in your goodwill ? ”

XLII. Having written and sealed this letter he 330 sent it to Gaius and shut himself up in his house where he remained greatly agitated and distraught, particularly by anxiety about the turn events might take. For the danger which had fallen upon him was no trifle but one which involved the expulsion, enslavement, and wholesale spoliation of the Jews who dwelt not only in the Holy Land but everywhere through the habitable world. Gaius received the 331 letter and, as he read it, its every sentiment filled him with resentment at the ill-success of his project, yet at the same time he began to bend under the claims for justice coupled with supplication. And from one point of view he praised Agrippa and blamed him from another. He charged him with over-complai- 332

PHILO

- μόνους ἀνθρώπων ἀφηνιάζοντας καὶ ἐκτρεπομένους αὐτοῦ τὴν ἐκθέωσιν, ἐπῆναι δὲ τὸ μηδὲν ἐν ἑαυτῷ συσκιάζειν καὶ ἐπικρύπτειν, ἅπερ ἔλεγεν εἶναι δείγματα ἐλευθεριωτάτων καὶ εὐγενεστάτων ἡθῶν.
- 333 ἡμερωθεῖς οὖν ὅσα τῷ δοκεῖν ἀποκρίσεων χρηστοτέρων Ἀγρίππαν ἠξίωσε, τὸ ἀνωτάτω καὶ μέγιστον δωρούμενος, τὸ μηκέτι γενέσθαι τὴν ἀνάθεσιν· καὶ Ποπλίῳ Πετρωνίῳ, τῷ τῆς Συρίας ἐπιτρόπῳ, κελεύει γραφῆναι μηδὲν ἐπὶ τῷ ἱερῷ τῶν Ἰουδαίων ἔτι νεώτερον κινεῖν.
- 334 Ὅμως μέντοι καὶ τὴν χάριν διδοῦς ἔδωκεν οὐκ ἀκέραιον, ἀλλ' ἀναμίξας αὐτῇ δέος ἀργαλεώτατον· προσγράφει γάρ· “ ἐὰν δέ τινες ἐν ταῖς ὁμόροις ἔξω μιᾶς τῆς μητροπόλεως ἐθέλοντες βωμοὺς ἢ ἱερά ἢ τινὰς εἰκόνας ἢ ἀνδριάντας ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ καὶ τῶν ἐμῶν ἰδρῦεσθαι κωλύονται, τοὺς εἴργοντας ἢ
- 335 παραχρῆμα κολάζειν ἢ εἰς αὐτὸν ἀνάγειν.” τοῦτο δὲ οὐδὲν ἦν ἕτερον ἢ στάσεως καὶ ἐμφυλίων πολέμων ἀρχὴ καὶ τῆς δωρεᾶς, ἣν ἐπ' εὐθείας ἐδόκει παρασχεῖν, πλάγιός τις ἀναίρεσις· ἔμελλον γὰρ οἱ μὲν κατὰ τὴν πρὸς Ἰουδαίους φιλονεικίαν μᾶλλον ἢ τὸ πρὸς Γάιον εὐσεβῆς καταπλήσειν τὴν χώραν
- [595] ἅπασαν | ἀναθημάτων, οἱ δὲ ἐν ὄψεσι ταῖς αὐτῶν τὴν τῶν πατρίων ὀρώντες κατάλυσιν, εἰ καὶ πάντων ἦσαν πραοπαθέστατοι, μὴ ἀνέχεσθαι, Γάιος δὲ τοὺς παρακινηθέντας τιμωρίᾳ κρίνων μεγίστη ἀνατεθῆναι
- 336 πάλιν κελεύειν τὸν ἀνδριάντα ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ. προνοία

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 332-336

sance to his compatriots, who stood alone among mankind in their recalcitrance and refusal to accept his deification. He praised him for disguising and concealing nothing of his real self and this he said proved that he had the characteristics of the truly free and noble. Thus to all appearance mollified he 333 thought good to give kindly answers to Agrippa's request, granting him the chief and principal thing, that the installation should not now take place, and he ordered letters to be sent to Publius Petronius, governor of Syria, that he should forbear to take further steps to violate the tradition of the temple of the Jews.

Nevertheless the concession thus granted by him 334 was not unmixed but had blended with it a very grave cause for alarm. For he added an injunction that if any persons in neighbouring regions outside the capital who wished to set up altars or temples or any images and statues in honour of him or his were prevented from so doing, Petronius was to punish the obstructors at once or send them up to him. Now this was nothing else than a starting point 335 for seditions and civil conflicts and an indirect cancelling of what appeared to be a straightforward gift on his part. For it was to be expected that one party, through hostility to the Jews rather than reverence for Gaius, would fill the whole country with such installations, and the others seeing with their own eyes their ancestral institutions overthrown would not hold their hands even if they were the mildest of men. Then Gaius while awarding the severest punishment to those who had been provoked to violence would again order the statue to be set up in the temple. But by a dispensation 336

PHILO

δέ τινι καὶ ἐπιμελείᾳ τοῦ πάντα ἐφορῶντος καὶ σὺν δίκῃ πρυτανεύοντος θεοῦ τῶν ὁμόρων παρεκίνησεν οὐδὲν οὐδὲ εἰς, ὡς μὴ χρεῖαν τινὰ γενέσθαι, ἢ πρὸ μετριωτέρας μέμψεως ἀπαραίτητος ἔμελλεν 337 ἀπαντᾶσθαι συμφορά. τί δὲ ὄφελος; εἴποι τις ἄν· οὐδὲ γὰρ ἡρεμοῦντων ὁ Γάιος ἡρέμει, μετανοῶν ἐπὶ τῇ χάριτι ἤδη καὶ τὴν πρὸ μικροῦ ζωπυρῶν ἐπιθυμίαν· προστάττει γὰρ ἕτερον ἀνδριάντα δη-μιουργεῖσθαι κολοσσιαῖον χαλκοῦν ἐπίχρυσον ἐν Ῥώμῃ, μηκέτι τὸν ἐν Σιδῶνι κινῶν, ἵνα μὴ τῇ κινήσει διαταράξῃ τὸ πλῆθος, ἀλλ' ἡρεμοῦντος καὶ τῆς ὑπονοίας ἀπηλλαγμένου κατὰ πολλὴν ἡσυχίαν ἀφανῶς ἐν ταῖς ναυσὶ κομισθέντα λαθῶν τοὺς πολ-338 λούς ἐξαίφνης ἰδρύσῃται. XLIII. τοῦτο δὲ πράξειν ἔμελλεν ἐν παράπλῳ κατὰ τὴν εἰς Αἴγυπτον ἀποδημίαν. ἄλεκτος γὰρ τις αὐτὸν ἔρωσ κατείχε τῆς Ἀλεξανδρείας, εἰς ἣν ἐπόθει σπουδῇ πάσῃ παραγενέσθαι καὶ ἀφικόμενος πλεῖστον χρόνον ἐνδαιτηθῆναι, νομίζων τὴν ἐκθέωσιν, ἣν ὠνειροπόλει, μίαν ταύτην πόλιν καὶ γεγεννη-κέναι καὶ συναυξήσειν, καὶ ταῖς ἄλλαις παράδειγμα γεγενῆσθαι τοῦ σεβασμοῦ, μεγίστην τε οὖσαν καὶ ἐν καλῷ τῆς οἰκουμένης· τὰ γὰρ τῶν μεγάλων εἶτε ἀνδρῶν εἶτε πόλεων τοὺς καταδεεστέρους ἀνδρας 339 τε καὶ δῆμους ζηλοῦν ἐπιχειρεῖν. ἦν

<sup>a</sup> More literally, " admirably situated for commanding or serving the habitable world." So rather than " in the finest situation in the world " (as Mangey), which would need καλλίστῳ. Thus Stephanus quotes from Lucian (Πλοῖον 15) ἡ οἰκία ἐν καλῷ τῆς πόλεως οἰκοδομηθεῖσα, but more parallel to the use here is Xen. Hell. ix. 2. 9 κείσθαι τὴν Κερκύραν ἐν καλῷ μὲν τοῦ Κορινθιακοῦ κόλπου καὶ τῶν πόλεων αἱ ἐπὶ τοῦτον καθήκουσι, ἐν καλῷ δὲ τοῦ τὴν Λακωνικὴν χώραν βλέπτεν, ἐν of the providence and watchful care of God, who surveys and presides over all things with justice, not a single person among the neighbours gave any provocation to violence, so that no occasion arose which would entail a calamity passing beyond a moderate censure and against which no prayers would avail. But what was the use of this? one might 337 say, for if they remained quiet, Gaius did not. He was already repenting of his concession and resuscitating his recent desire. He ordered another bronze statue of colossal size coated with gold to be constructed in Rome. The one in Sidon he forbore from moving, for he did not wish to perturb the multitude by moving it, but intended when they were tranquil and freed from suspicion to have the other conveyed very quietly and secretly on shipboard and suddenly erected unobserved by the mass of the population.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 336-338

XLIII. This he intended to 338 do while coasting along on his voyage to Egypt. For he was possessed by an extraordinary and passionate love for Alexandria. His heart was entirely set upon visiting it and on his arrival staying there for a very considerable time. For he thought this city was unique in that it had both given birth to and would foster the idea of godship which occupied his dreams, and that its vast size and the world-wide value of its admirable situation<sup>a</sup> had made it a pattern to other cities of the worship due to him, since it is true both of individual men and of whole populations that the inferior try to emulate the qualities of the great men and cities respectively.

καλλίστῳ δὲ τῆς τε ἀντιπέραν Ἠπείρου καὶ τοῦ εἰς Πελοπόννησον ἀπὸ Σικελίας παράπλου. There the genitives give the places conveniently reached whether for attack or other purposes.

PHILO

- μέντοι καὶ πρὸς τᾶλλα πάντα τὴν φύσιν ἄπιστος, ὡς, εἰ καὶ τι χρηστὸν ἐργάσαιτο, μετανοεῖν εὐθὺς καὶ τρόπον τινὰ δι' οὗ καὶ ταυτὶ λυθήσεται ζητεῖν
- 340 μετὰ μείζονος ἀνίας καὶ βλάβης. οἶον δὴ τι λέγω· δεσμώτας ἔλυσεν ἐνίους ἐπ' οὐδεμιᾷ προφάσει, πάλιν ἔδησε βαρυτέραν τῆς προτέρας ἐπαγαγῶν
- 341 συμφορὰν, τὴν ἐκ δυσελπιστίας. πάλιν κατέγνω φυγὴν ἐτέρων θάνατον προσδοκησάντων, οὐκ ἐπειδὴ συνήδεσαν αὐτοῖς ἄξια θανάτου πεπραχόσιν ἢ συνόλως βραχυτέρας ἢστινοσοῦν τιμωρίας, ἀλλὰ διὰ τὴν ὑπερβάλλουσαν ὠμότητα τοῦ δικαστοῦ μὴ προσδοκῶντες ἀποφεύξεσθαι. τούτοις ἔρμαιον ἦν ἢ φυγὴ καὶ ἰσότημος καθόδω τὸν περὶ ψυχῆς
- 342 ἀνωτάτω κίνδυνον ἀποδεδρακέναι νομίζουσιν. ἀλλ' οὐ μακρὸς διῆλθε χρόνος, καὶ τῶν στρατευομένων ἐπιπέμψας τινάς, μηδενὸς καινοτέρου προσπεσόντος, τοὺς ἀρίστους καὶ εὐγενεστάτους ἤδη ζῶντας
- [596] ὡς ἐν πατρίσι ταῖς νήσοις καὶ τὴν | ἀτυχίαν
 εὐτιχέστατα φέροντας ἀθρόους ἀνήρει, πένθος οἰκτρότατον καὶ ἀπροσδόκητον οἴκοις τῶν ἐν
- 343 Ῥώμῃ μεγάλων προσβαλῶν. εἰ δέ τισι καὶ δωρεὰν ἔδωκεν ἀργύριον, οὐχ ὡς δάνειον ἀνέπραττε τόκουσ προσεκλέγων καὶ ἐπιτοκίας, ἀλλ' ὡς φώριον μετὰ μεγίστης τῶν λαβόντων ζημίας· οὐ γὰρ ἐξήρκει τὰ δοθέντα τοῖς ἀθλίοις ἀποτινῦειν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὰς οὐσίας ὅλας προσεϊσέφερον, ὥς ἢ παρὰ γονέων ἢ παρ' οἰκείων ἢ φίλων ἐκληρονόμουσιν ἢ ποριστῆν

---

° Here the description of Gaius's conduct, interrupted by the parenthetical section on Alexandria, is resumed. The arrangement by which a new chapter is begun at § 338 is unfortunate.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 339-343

<sup>a</sup> In fact in all other matters he was 339 naturally untrustworthy, so that if he did commit any kind action he immediately repented of it and sought some means of cancelling it, thus causing increased affliction and injury. Here is an instance of this 340 sort of thing. He released some prisoners for no reason, and then by imprisoning them again imposed on them a suffering heavier than the former through the bitter disappointment. Again he sentenced 341 others to banishment when they expected death, not because their conscience told them that their action deserved death or even any minor penalty at all, but because in view of the supreme cruelty of their judge they did not expect to get off unpunished. To these banishment was a godsend as good as repatriation, since they felt that they had escaped from the extremity of danger which threatened their lives. But no long time had elapsed when, though no fresh 342 occasion had been given, he sent some of his soldiers on duty to deal with them, and when these men of high excellence and nobility were leading their lives on the islands as though they were their native homes and bearing their misfortunes with the spirit of the favourites of fortune, he proceeded to slaughter them in a body, a blow which brought misery as heartrending as it was unexpected into the households of the great in Rome. So too if he gave a present of money 343 to some he did not treat it as a loan and exact interest and compound interest, but as stolen property entailing very heavy loss for those who took it. For it was not enough for the poor wretches to repay the sums given to them, but they had to contribute as well their whole properties which they inherited from their parents or their relations and friends or

PHILO

- 344 ἐλόμενοι βίον ἐκτήσαντο αὐτοὶ δι' ἑαυτῶν. οἱ δ' εὐπάρυφοι καὶ σφόδρ' εὐδοκιμεῖν οἰόμενοι τρόπον ἕτερον τὸν σὺν ἡδονῇ μετὰ προσποιήσεως φιλικῆς ἐβλάπτοντο, πάμπολλα μὲν εἰς τὰς ἀκρίτους καὶ ἀτάκτους καὶ ἐξαπιναίους ἀποδημίας ἀναλίσκοντες, πάμπολλα δὲ εἰς τὰς ἐστιάσεις· ὅλας γὰρ οὐσίας ἐξανάλουν εἰς ἑνὸς δείπνου παρασκευήν, ὡς καὶ
- 345 δανείζεσθαι· τοσαύτη τις ἦν ἡ πολυτέλεια. τοιγαροῦν ἀπηύχοντό τινες ἤδη τὰς δεδομένας ὑπ' αὐτοῦ χάριτας, ὑπολαμβάνοντες οὐκ ὠφέλειαν ἀλλὰ
- 346 δέλεαρ εἶναι καὶ ἐνέδραν ἀφορήτου ζημίας. τοσαύτη μὲν οὖν τις ἡ περὶ τὸ ἦθος ἢ ἀνωμαλία πρὸς ἅπαντας, διαφερόντως δὲ πρὸς τὸ Ἰουδαίων γένος, ᾧ χαλεπῶς ἀπεχθανομένας τὰς μὲν ἐν ταῖς ἄλλαις πόλεσι προσευχὰς ἀπὸ τῶν κατ' Ἀλεξάνδρειαν ἀρξάμενος σφετερίζεται, καταπλήσας εἰκότων καὶ ἀνδριάντων τῆς ἰδίας μορφῆς—ὁ γὰρ ἐτέρων ἀνατιθέντων ἐφείς αὐτὸς ἰδρύετο δυνάμει—, τὸν δὲ ἐν τῇ ἱεροπόλει νεών, ὃς λοιπὸς ἦν ἄφραυτος ἀσουλίας ἠξιωμένος τῆς πάσης, μεθηρμόζετο καὶ μετεσχημάτιζεν εἰς οἰκεῖον ἱερόν, ἵνα Διὸς Ἐπι-
- 347 φανοῦς Νέου χρηματίζη Γαῖου. τί φῆς; σὺ μὲν ἄνθρωπος ὢν αἰθέρα καὶ οὐρανὸν ζητεῖς προσλαβεῖν, οὐκ ἀρκεσθεῖς τῷ πλήθει τῶν τοσοῦτων ἡπείρων, νήσων, ἐθνῶν, κλιμάτων, ὧν ἀνήψω τὴν ἀρχήν; τὸν δὲ θεὸν οὐδενὸς τῶν ἐνταῦθα καὶ παρ' ἡμῖν ἀξιοῖς, οὐ χώρας, οὐ πόλεως, ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸν βραχὺν οὕτως περίβολον αὐτῷ καθιερωθέντα καὶ καθοσιωθέντα χρησιμοῖς καὶ λογιόις θεσφότοις

<sup>a</sup> i.e. now seen in bodily form. So coins of Antiochus Eiphanes bear the inscription Ἀντιόχου θεοῦ ἐπιφανοῦς. Mangey's suggestion that ἐπιφανής in these cases carries the

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 343-347

by choosing a business career acquired through their own efforts. Dignitaries who considered themselves particularly distinguished suffered in another way which served his pleasure under the guise of friendship. His visits to them made without discretion, or order, or warning, cost them huge sums as did also the entertainments which they gave him. For they used to spend their whole substance on providing a single dinner and so run into debt. So vast was the lavish expenditure. And so some came to the point of deprecating the favours bestowed by him, thinking that they were no benefit but a snare to trap them into losses more than they could bear. This great inconstancy of conduct affected all, but particularly the Jewish race. Having conceived a violent enmity to them he took possession of the synagogues in the other cities after beginning with those of Alexandria, by filling them with images and statues of himself in bodily form. For by permitting others to instal them he virtually did it himself. The temple in the Holy City, which alone was left untouched being judged to have all rights of sanctuary, he was proceeding to convert and transmogrify into a temple of his own to bear the name of Gaius, "the new Zeus made manifest."<sup>a</sup>

What is this that you say? do you a mere man seek to annex also ether and heaven, not satisfied with the sum of so many mainlands, islands, nations, regions, over which you assumed sovereignty, and do you deem God worthy of nothing in our world here below, no country, no city, but even this tiny area hallowed for Him and sanctified by oracles and divine messages you propose same sense as the Latin praesens, i.e. powerful and ready to help, is perhaps unnecessary.

PHILO

ἀφελέσθαι διανοῆ, ἵν' ἐν τῷ τῆς τοσαύτης γῆς | [597] περιβόλω μηδὲν ἴχνος μηδὲ ὑπόμνημα καταλειφθῆ τιμῆς καὶ εὐσεβείας τῆς εἰς τὸν ὄντως ὄντα ἀληθῆ 348 θεόν; καλὰς ὑπογράφεις τῷ γένει τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐλπίδας· ἀγνοεῖς ὅτι πηγὰς ἀνατέμνεις ἀθρόων κακῶν, καινουργῶν καὶ μεγαλουργῶν ἃ μῆτε δρᾶν μῆτε λογίζεσθαι θέμις;<sup>1</sup>

349 XLIV. Ἄξιον δὲ ἐπιμνησθῆναι καὶ ὧν εἶδομέν τε καὶ ἠκούσαμεν μεταπεμφθέντες ἀγωνίσασθαι τὸν περὶ τῆς πολιτείας ἀγῶνα. εἰσελθόντες γὰρ εὐθύς ἔγνωμεν ἀπὸ τοῦ βλέμματος καὶ τῆς κινήσεως, ὅτι οὐ πρὸς δικαστὴν ἀλλὰ κατήγορον ἀφίγμεθα, 350 τῶν ἀντιτεταγμένων μᾶλλον ἐχθρόν. δικαστοῦ μὲν γὰρ ἔργα ταῦτα ἦν· καθίσαι μετὰ συνέδρων ἀριστίνοδην ἐπιλελεγμένων, ἐξεταζομένης ὑποθέσεως μεγίστης ἐν τετρακοσίοις ἔτεσιν ἡσυχασθείσης καὶ νῦν πρῶτον εἰσαγομένης ἐπὶ μυριάσι πολλαῖς τῶν Ἀλεξανδρέων Ἰουδαίων, ἐκατέρωθεν στήναι τοὺς ἀντιδίκους μετὰ τῶν συναγορευσόντων, ἐν μέρει μὲν ἀκοῦσαι τῆς κατηγορίας, ἐν μέρει δὲ τῆς ἀπολογίας πρὸς μεμετρημένον ὕδωρ, ἀναστάντα βουλευσασθαι μετὰ τῶν συνέδρων, τί χρῆ φανερώς ἀποφῆνασθαι γνώμη τῇ δικαιοτάτῃ τυράννου δὲ ἀμειλίκτου δεσποτικῆν ὄφρὺν ἐπανατειναμένου τὰ 351 πραχθέντα. χωρὶς γὰρ τοῦ μηδὲν ὧν ἀρτίως εἶπον ἐργάσασθαι, μεταπεμφάμενος τοὺς δυεῖν κήπων ἐπιτρόπους τοῦ τε Μαικήνα καὶ Λαμία—πλησίον

<sup>1</sup> Reiter here indicated a lacuna. See Introd. pp. xii, xxiii.

<sup>o</sup> For Josephus's account of this interview see Ant. xviii. 8. 1.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 347-351

to take away, so that in the circumference of this great earth no trace or reminder should be left of the reverence and honour due to the truly existing veritable God? Fine hopes are these which you 348 picture for the human race. Know you not that you are opening the springs of a flood of evil, in these strange and monstrous actions which it is unlawful either to do or conceive?

XLIV. It is right that I should record also both what 349 we saw and what we heard when we were summoned to take a part in the contention about our citizenship.<sup>a</sup> The moment we entered we knew from his look and movements that we had come into the presence not of a judge but of an accuser more hostile than those arrayed against us. For this is what a judge would 350 do: he would sit with assessors selected for their high merit, as the case under examination was of the greatest importance, since nothing had been heard of it for four centuries and it was now for the first time brought up against the many myriads of the Alexandrian Jews<sup>b</sup>: the opposing parties would stand on either side of him with the advocates who would speak for them, and he would listen in turn to the accusation and the defence for the space of water-time allowed! then he would rise and consult with his assessors as to the verdict which in full accordance with justice they would publicly declare. The actual proceedings showed a ruthless tyrant with a menacing frown on his despotic brow. Instead 351 of doing anything that I have just mentioned he sent for the stewards of the two gardens belonging to Maecenas and Lamia near to each other and the <sup>b</sup> See Introd. pp. xxvi ff.

PHILO

δέ εἰσιν ἀλλήλων τε καὶ τῆς πόλεως, ἐν οἷς ἐκ τριῶν ἢ τεττάρων ἡμερῶν διέτριβε· κείθι γὰρ ἐπὶ παροῦσιν ἡμῖν ἢ κατὰ παντὸς τοῦ ἔθνους ἔμελλε σκηνοβατεῖσθαι δραματοποιία—κελεύει τὰς ἐπαύλεις αὐτῷ πάσας περιανοιχθῆναι· βούλεσθαι γὰρ 352 μετὰ ἀκριβείας ἐκάστην ἰδεῖν. ἡμεῖς δὲ ὡς αὐτὸν εἰσαχθέντες ἅμα τῷ θεάσασθαι μετ' αἰδοῦς καὶ εὐλαβείας τῆς ἀπάσης νεύοντες εἰς τοῦδαφος ἔδεξιούμεθα, Σεβαστὸν Αὐτοκράτορα προσειπόντες· ὁ δὲ οὕτως ἐπιεικῶς καὶ φιλανθρώπως ἀντιπροσηγόρευσεν, ὡς μὴ μόνον τὴν ὑπόθεσιν ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ 353 ζῆν ἀπογνῶναι. σαρκάζων γὰρ ἅμα καὶ σεσηρῶς, “ ὑμεῖς,” εἶπεν, “ ἐστὲ οἱ θεομισεῖς, οἱ θεὸν μὴ νομίζοντες εἶναί με, τὸν ἤδη παρὰ πᾶσι τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀνωμολογημένον, ἀλλὰ τὸν ἀκατονόμαστον ὑμῖν; ” καὶ ἀνατείνας τὰς χεῖρας εἰς τὸν οὐρανὸν ἐπεφήμιζε πρόσρησιν, ἣν οὐδὲ ἀκούειν θεμιτὸν, οὐχ ὅτι 354 διερμηνεύειν αὐτολεξεί. πόσης εὐθύς ἀνεπλήσθησαν ἡδονῆς οἱ τῆς ἐναντίας μερίδος πρέσβεις, ἡδη κατωρθωκέναι διὰ τῆς πρώτης ἀναφθέγγεως Γαῖου τὴν πρεσβείαν νομίζοντες· ἐπεχειρονόμουν, ἀνωρ-
 [598] χοῦντο, | τὰς θεῶν ἀπάντων ἐπωνυμίας ἐπεφήμιζον
 355 αὐτῷ. XLV. γανύμενον δὲ ταῖς ὑπὲρ ἀνθρωπίνην φύσιν προσήρῃσει θεασάμενος ὁ πικρὸς συκοφάντης Ἰσιδωρος, “ ἔτι μᾶλλον,” ἔφη, “ δέσποτα, μισήσεις τοὺς παρόντας καὶ τοὺς ὦν εἰσιν ὁμόφυλοι, ἐὰν γνῶς τὴν εἰς σέ κακόνοιαν αὐτῶν καὶ ἀσέβειαν· ἀπάντων γὰρ ἀνθρώπων ὑπὲρ σωτηρίας τῆς σῆς θυσίας ἀναγόντων εὐχαριστηρίους, οὐχ ὑπέμειναν οὗτοι μόνοι θύειν· ὅταν δὲ οὗτοι λέγω, καὶ τοὺς 176

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 351-355

city, in which gardens he had been spending three or four days. For this was the stage where the tragedy which was aimed against our whole nation was to be performed with us who were present as the immediate victims. He ordered them to leave all the villas completely open as he wished to make a careful survey of each of them. When we were brought into his presence the moment we saw him we bowed our heads to the ground with all respect and timidity and saluted him addressing him as Emperor Augustus. The mildness and kindness with which he replied to our greeting was such that we gave up not only our case but our lives for lost! In a sneering, snarling way he said, "Are you the god-haters who do not believe me to be a god, a god acknowledged among all the other nations but not to be named by you?" And stretching out his hands towards heaven he gave utterance to an invocatory address which it was a sin even to listen to, much more to reproduce in the actual words. How vast was the delight which at once filled the envoys on the other side! They thought that Gaius's first utterance had secured the success of their mission. They gesticulated, they danced about and invoked blessings on him under the names of all the gods. XLV. Seeing that he was delighted at being addressed as of more than human nature the virulent sycophant Isidorus said, "My lord, you will hate still more these people here present, and those of whose nation they are, if you understand their malevolence and impiety towards you. For when all men were offering sacrifices of thanksgiving for your preservation they alone could not bear the thought of sacrificing. And when I say 'they' I include also

PHILO

- 356 ἄλλους Ἰουδαίους συμπαλαμβάνω.” ἀναβοησάντων δὲ ἡμῶν ὁμοθυμαδόν, “ κύριε Γάιε, συκοφαντούμεθα· καὶ γὰρ ἐθύσαμεν καὶ ἑκατόμβας ἐθύσαμεν, οὐ τὸ μὲν αἷμα τῷ βωμῷ περισπείσαντες τὰ δὲ κρέα εἰς θοίνην καὶ εὐωχίαν οἴκαδε κομίσαντες, ὡς ἔθος ἐνίοις ποιεῖν, ἀλλ’ ὀλόκαυτα τὰ ἱερεῖα παραδόντες τῇ ἱερᾷ φλογί, καὶ τρίς, οὐχ ἅπαξ, ἤδη· πρῶτον μὲν ὅτε διεδέξω τὴν ἡγεμονίαν, δεύτερον δὲ ὅτε τὴν βαρεῖαν νόσον ἐκείνην ἣν πᾶσα
 ἡ οἰκουμένη συνενόσησεν ἐξέφυγες, τρίτον δὲ κατὰ 357 τὴν ἐλπίδα τῆς Γερμανικῆς νίκης,” “ ἔστω,” φησί, “ ταῦτα ἀληθῆ, τεθύκατε, ἀλλ’ ἐτέρω, κὰν’ ὑπὲρ ἐμοῦ· τί οὖν ὄφελος; οὐ γὰρ ἐμοὶ τεθύκατε.”
 φρίκη βύθιος εὐθύς κατέσχευεν ἡμᾶς ἐπὶ τῷ προτέρῳ καὶ τοῦτο ἀκούσαντας, ἣ καὶ μέχρι τῆς ἐπιφανείας 358 ἀνεχύθη. καὶ ταῦθ’ ἅμα λέγων ἐπήει τὰς ἐπαύλεις, ἀνδρῶνας κατανοῶν, γυναικωνίτιδας, τὰ ἐν ἐπι-πῆδω, τὰ ὑπερῶα, ἅπαντα, αἰτιώμενος ἐνίας ὡς ἔλλιπεῖς κατασκευάς, ἐτέρας ἐπινοῶν καὶ προσδια-359 τάττων πολυτελεστέρας αὐτός. εἶτα ἡμεῖς ἐλαυνόμενοι παρηκολουθοῦμεν ἄνω κάτω, χλευαζόμενοι καὶ κατακερτομούμενοι πρὸς τῶν ἀντιπάλων ὡς ἐν θεατρικοῖς μίμοις· καὶ γὰρ τὸ πρᾶγμα μιμεία τις ἦν· ὁ μὲν δικαστῆς ἀνειλήφει σχῆμα κατηγοροῦ, οἱ δὲ κατήγοροι φαύλου δικαστοῦ πρὸς ἔχθραν ἀποβλέποντος, ἀλλ’ οὐ τὴν φύσιν τῆς ἀληθείας.
 360 ὅταν δὲ αἰτιᾶται κρινόμενον δικαστῆς καὶ τοσοῦτος,

<sup>1</sup> MSS. καὶ οἱ καὶ οὐχ.

---

* As sacrifices could only be offered in Jerusalem, they must mean by “we” the Jewish nation, or else (less probably) that the contributions of money which they sent there were

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 355-360

the other Jews." We cried out with one accord, 356
" Lord Gaius, we are slandered ; we did sacrifice and sacrifice hecatombs too, and we did not just pour the blood upon the altar and then take the flesh home to feast and regale ourselves with it as some do, but we gave the victims to the sacred fire to be entirely consumed, and we have done this not once but thrice already, the first time at your accession to the sovereignty, the second when you escaped the severe sickness which all the habitable world suffered with you, the third as a prayer of hope for victory in Germany." <sup>a</sup> " All right," he replied, " that is true, 357 you have sacrificed, but to another, even if it was for me ; what good is it then ? For you have not sacrificed to me." When we heard these words following on his first remark we were seized by a profound terror which spread till it became visible in the countenance.
While he was saying this he was going on with his 358 survey of the houses, the different chambers, men's or women's, the ground floors, the upper floors, all of them, and some he censured as defective in structure, and for others he made his own plans and gave orders that they should be more magnificent. Then driven 359 along we followed him up and down mocked and reviled by our adversaries, as they do in the mimes at the theatres. For indeed the business was a sort of mime ; the judge had taken on the rôle of accuser, the accusers the rôle of a bad judge who had eyes only for his enmity and not for the actual truth. But 360 when the person on trial is accused by a judge and accompanied with instructions that they were to be applied to pay for sacrifices for these particular purposes, cf. § 232.

For the bearing of the statement about the German victory the chronology see Intro. p. xxvii.

PHILO

ἀνάγκη σιωπᾶν· ἔστι γάρ πως καὶ δι' ἡσυχίας ἀπολογεῖσθαι, καὶ μάλιστα πρὸς οὐδέν ὧν ἐπεζήτει καὶ ἐπεπόθει δυναμένους ἀποκρίνασθαι, τῶν ἐθῶν καὶ νομίμων τὴν γλῶτταν ἐπεχόντων καὶ τὸ στόμα 361 κλειόντων καὶ ἀπορραπτόντων. ἐπεὶ δὲ ἔνια τῶν περὶ τὰς οἰκοδομὰς διατάξατο, μέγιστον καὶ σεμνὸν ἐρώτημα ἠρώτα· “διὰ τί χοιρείων κρεῶν ἀπἔχεσθε;” πάλιν πρὸς τὴν πεύσιν γέλως ἐκ τῶν ἀντιδίκων κατερράγη τοσοῦτος, τῇ μὲν ἡδομένων τῇ δὲ καὶ ἐπιτηδεύόντων ἔνεκα κολακείας ὑπὲρ τοῦ τὸ λεχθὲν δοκεῖν σὺν εὐτραπείᾳ καὶ χάριτι εἰρησθαι, ὡς τινα τῶν ἐπομένων αὐτῷ θεραπόντων [599] | ἀγανακτεῖν ἐπὶ τῷ καταφρονητικῶς ἔχειν αὐτοκράτορος, ἐφ’ οὗ καὶ τὸ μετρίως μειδιάσαι τοῖς μὴ 362 πάνυ συνήθεσιν οὐκ ἀσφαλές. ἀποκριναμένων δὲ ἡμῶν, ὅτι “νόμιμα παρ’ ἑτέροις ἕτερα καὶ χρήσις ἐνίων ὡς ἡμῖν καὶ τοῖς ἀντιδίκους ἀπείρηται,” καὶ φαμένου τινός, “ὡς πολλοὶ γε καὶ τὰ προχειρότατα ἀρνία οὐ προσφέρονται,” γελάσας, “εἶ γε,” εἶπεν, 363 “ἔστι γὰρ οὐχ ἡδέα.” τοιαῦτα φλυαρηθέντες καὶ κατακερτομηθέντες ἐν ἀμηχάνοις ἦμεν. εἶτα ὀψέ ποτε παρασεσυρμένως, “βουλόμεθα μαθεῖν,” ἔφη, 364 “τίσι χρήσθε περὶ τῆς πολιτείας δικαίοις.” ἀρξαμένων δὲ λέγειν καὶ διδάσκειν, ἀπογευσάμενος τῆς δικαιολογίας καὶ συνεὶς ὡς οὐκ ἔστιν εὐκαταφρόνη-τος, πρὶν ἐπενεγκεῖν τὰ ἐχυρώτερα, συγκόψας καὶ τὰ πρότερα δρομαίως εἰς τὸν μέγαν οἶκον εἰσἐπήδησε καὶ περιελθὼν προστάττει τὰς ἐν κύκλῳ θυρίδας ἀναληφθῆναι τοῖς ὑάλῳ λευκῇ παραπλη-

<sup>a</sup> The imperfects ἐπεζήτει and ἐπεπόθει show that we have here a sudden transition from the general to the particular. We have had an exact parallel in Flaccus 118.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 360-364

that one of such eminence, he must needs hold his peace. For silence too may in a way serve as a defence, particularly to us <sup>a</sup> who could not answer any of the points which he was investigating and wished to press, because our customs and laws muzzled the tongue and closed and stitched up the mouth. But <sup>361</sup> after giving some of his orders about the buildings he put to us this grave and momentous question, "Why do you refuse to eat pork?" The question was greeted by another outburst of laughter from some of our opponents because they were delighted, while with others it was a studied attempt to flatter him, intended to make the remark seem witty and sprightly. The laughter was so great that some of the servants following him were annoyed at it as showing disrespect for the emperor, with whom even a tempered smile is unsafe except for quite intimate friends. We answered, "Different people have different <sup>362</sup> customs and the use of some things is forbidden to us as others are to our opponents." Then someone said, "Yes, just as many don't eat lamb which is so easily obtainable," whereupon Gaius laughed and said, "Quite right too, for it's not nice." Under such befooling and reviling we were helpless. <sup>363</sup> Then tardily going on a different tack <sup>b</sup> he said, "We want to hear what claims you make about your citizenship." We started to speak and give him the <sup>364</sup> information; but when he had had a taste of our pleading and recognized that it was by no means contemptible, he cut short our earlier points before we could bring in the stronger ones, and dashed at high speed into the large room of the house, and walked round it and ordered the windows all round

<sup>b</sup> Or "with a sarcastic air."

PHILO

- σίως διαφανέσι λίθοις, οἱ τὸ μὲν φῶς οὐκ ἐμποδίζουσιν, ἄνεμον δὲ εἶργουσι καὶ τὸν ἄφ' 365 ἡλίου φλογμόν. εἶτα προελθὼν ἄνευ σπουδῆς μετριώτερον ἀνηρώτα· “ τί λέγετε; ” συνείρειν δὲ ἀρξαμένων τὰ ἀκόλουθα, εἰστρέχει πάλιν εἰς ἕτερον οἶκον, ἐν ᾧ γραφὰς ἀρχετύπους ἀνατεθῆναι 366 προσέταπτεν. οὕτω τῶν ἡμετέρων σπαραττομένων καὶ διαρτωμένων καὶ μόνον οὐ συγκοπτομένων καὶ συντριβομένων δικαίων, ἀπειρηκότες καὶ μηδὲν ἔτι σθένοντες, αἰεὶ δὲ οὐδὲν ἕτερον ἢ θάνατον προσδοκῶντες, οὐκέτι τὰς ψυχὰς ἐν αὐτοῖς εἶχομεν, ἀλλ’ ὑπ’ ἀγωνίας ἔξω προεληλύθεσαν ἰκετεύειν τὸν 367 ἐπίσχη. ὁ δὲ λαβὼν οἶκτον ἡμῶν τρέπει τὸν θυμὸν αὐτοῦ πρὸς ἔλεον· καὶ ἀνεθίς πρὸς τὸ μαλακώτερον, τοσοῦτον εἰπὼν, “ οὐ πονηροὶ μᾶλλον ἢ δυστυχεῖς εἶναι μοι δοκοῦσιν ἄνθρωποι καὶ ἀνόητοι μὴ πιστεύοντες, ὅτι θεοῦ κεκλήρωμαι φύσιν, ” ἀπαλλάττεται προστάξας καὶ ἡμῖν ἀπέρ-χεσθαι.
- 368 XLVI. Τοιοῦτον ἀντὶ δικαστηρίου θέατρον ὁμοῦ καὶ δεσμωτήριον ἐκφυγόντες—ὡς μὲν γὰρ ἐν θεάτρῳ κλωσμὸς συριπτόντων, καταμωκωμένων, ἄμετρα χλευαζόντων, ὡς δὲ ἐν εἰρκτῇ πληγαὶ κατὰ τῶν σπλάγγων φερόμεναι, βάσανοι, κατατάσεις τῆς ὅλης ψυχῆς διὰ τε τῶν εἰς τὸ θεῖον βλασφημιῶν καὶ διὰ τῶν ἐπανατάσεων, ἃς τοσοῦτος [600] αὐτοκράτωρ | ἐπανετείνοτο, μνησικακῶν οὐ περὶ ἑτέρου, ῥαδίως γὰρ ἂν μετέβαλεν, ἀλλὰ περὶ ἑαυτοῦ καὶ τῆς εἰς τὴν ἐκθέωσιν ἐπιθυμίας, ἥ μόνους ὑπελάμβανε μῆτε συναιεῖν Ἰουδαίους μῆτε δύνα-369 σθαι συνυπογράψασθαι—μόλις ἀνεπνεύσαμεν, οὐκ
 182

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 364-369

to be restored with transparent stones, which in the same way as white glass do not obstruct the light but keep off the wind and the scorching sun. Then 365 he advanced in a leisurely way and said in a more moderate tone, "What is it that you say?" and when we began on the points which came next in the thread of our argument he ran again into another room and ordered original pictures to be put up there. So with the statement of our case thus mangled and 366 disjointed, one may almost say cut short and crushed to pieces, we gave up, for there was no strength left in us, and since we all the time expected nothing else but death, in our deep distress our souls had passed from within us and went forth to supplicate the true God that he should restrain the wrath of the pretender to that name. And God taking compassion on 367 us turned his spirit to mercy; he relaxed into a softer mood and said just this, "They seem to me to be people unfortunate rather than wicked and to be foolish in refusing to believe that I have got the nature of a god," and saying this he went off bidding us be gone also.

XLVI. Such was this combination of a theatre 368 and a prison in place of a tribunal, theatre-like in the cackling of their hisses, their mockery and unbounded jeering, prison-like in the strokes inflicted on our flesh, the torture, the racking of the whole soul through the blasphemies against God and menaces launched upon us by this mighty despot, who resented the affront not to another, since then he might easily have changed his mind, but to himself and his desire of the deification to which he supposed the Jews alone did not assent and could not pledge themselves to subscribe. From this prison we had 369

PHILO

ἐπειδὴ φιλοζωοῦντες θάνατον κατεπτήχειμεν, ὃν ἄσμενοι καθάπερ ἀθανασίαν εἰλόμεθα ἂν, εἰ δὴ τι τῶν νομίμων ἔμελλον ἐπανόρθωσιν ἕξειν, ἀλλ' εἰδότες ἐπ' οὐδενὶ λυσιτελεῖ παρανάλωμα γενησόμενοι μετὰ πολλῆς δυσκλείας· ἃ γὰρ ἂν πρέσβεις ὑπομένωσιν, ἐπὶ τοὺς πέμψαντας λαμβάνει τὴν

370 ἀναφορὰν. τούτων μὲν δὴ χάριν ἐπὶ ποσὸν ἐδυνήθημεν ἀνακύψαι, τὰ δὲ ἄλλα ἡμᾶς ἐφόβει διεπτοημένους καὶ ἀποροῦντας, τί γινώσεται, τί ἀποφανεῖται, ποταπὴ γένοιτ' ἂν ἡ κρίσις· ἤκουσε γὰρ τῆς ὑποθέσεως, ὃς πραγμάτων ἐνίων παρήκουσεν; ἐν ἡμῖν δὲ πέντε πρεσβευταῖς σαλεύειν τὰ τῶν πανταχοῦ πάντων Ἰουδαίων οὐ χαλεπόν;

371 εἰ γὰρ χαρίσαιτο τοῖς ἡμετέροις ἐχθροῖς, τίς ἕτερα πόλις ἡρεμήσει; τίς οὐκ ἐπιθήσεται τοῖς συνοικουσί; τίς ἀπαθῆς καταλειφθήσεται προσευχῆ; ποῖον πολιτικὸν οὐκ ἀνατραπήσεται δίκαιον τοῖς κοσμουμένοις κατὰ τὰ πάτρια τῶν Ἰουδαίων; ἀνατετράψεται, ναυαγήσει, κατὰ βυθοῦ χωρήσει καὶ τὰ ἐξαίρετα νόμιμα καὶ τὰ κοινὰ πρὸς ἑκάστας

372 τῶν πόλεων αὐτοῖς δίκαια. τοιούτοις ὑπέραντλοι γενόμενοι λογισμοῖς ὑπεσυρόμεθα καταποντούμενοι· καὶ γὰρ οἱ τέως συμπράττειν ἡμῖν δοκοῦντες ἀπειρήκεσαν· καλουμένων γούν, ἔνδον ὄντες οὐχ ὑπέμειναν, ἀλλ' ὑπεξῆλθον διὰ φόβον ἀκριβῶς

<sup>a</sup> See Flacc. 12 and note.

<sup>b</sup> Balsdon, who translates (p. 161) "for he heard our case though he paid no attention to some of the facts," whence he infers that Philo is compelled to admit that Gaius gave a hearing to the Jewish arguments, is, I think, certainly wrong. The question mark appended both by Mangey and Reiter is necessitated by ὃς, which cannot bear the sense which Balsdon gives it.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 369-372

escaped and were just able to breathe again, not because we clung to life and cringed from death, which we would gladly have chosen as being immortality, if thereby we were going to get restoration of our institutions, but because we knew that we should prove to have thrown ourselves away for no useful purpose <sup>a</sup> and to our great discredit. For whatever ambassadors suffer recoils upon those who sent them. For the above reasons we were able to 370 lift our heads above water to some extent but the other circumstances alarmed us in our trepidation and suspense as to what he would decide, what verdict he would declare, on what grounds the judgement would be given. For had a hearing been given to our case by him who heard some points only to misunderstand? <sup>b</sup> Surely it was a cruel situation that the fate of all the Jews everywhere should rest precariously on us five envoys. For if he should 371 decide in favour of our enemies, what other city will keep tranquil or refrain from attacking its fellow inhabitants, what house of prayer will be left unscathed, what kind of civic rights will not be upset for those whose lot is cast under the ancient institutions of the Jews? First upset, then shipwrecked, then sunk to the very bottom will be both their peculiar laws and the rights which they enjoy in common in every city. Waterlogged by such 372 considerations we were dragged down and submerged in the depths, for those who hitherto seemed to be acting with us gave up. At least when we were summoned <sup>c</sup> they did not stay in and hold their ground but slunk away in fear, knowing full well <sup>a</sup> Or perhaps "when we called upon them," which gives better sense, though with poorer grammar, cf. note on § 221.

PHILO

ἐπιστάμενοι τὸν ἡμερον, ᾧ κέχρητο πρὸς τὸ νομί-ζεσθαι θεός.

373 Εἴρηται μὲν οὖν κεφαλαιωδέστερον ἢ αἰτία τῆς πρὸς ἅπαν τὸ Ἰουδαίων ἔθνος ἀπεχθείας Γαΐου· λεκτέον δὲ καὶ τὴν παλινοδίαν.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> ? παλινοδίαν. See note a.

---

<sup>a</sup> "Counter-story" or "reversal." Presumably this gave an account of Gaius's death and probably also the change of policy adopted by Claudius, as shown in the two edicts recorded by Josephus, Ant. xix. 5. If, that is, it was ever written, for it is curious that Eusebius in his brief notice of the longing which he cherished for being acknowledged as a god.

THE EMBASSY TO GAIUS, 372-373

So now I have told in a summary way the cause 373 of the enmity which Gaius had for the whole nation of the Jews, but I must also describe the palinode.<sup>a</sup>

the Legatio, see Introd. pp. xvii, shows no knowledge of it. But the word is an odd one, for though Philo uses παλινοφθεῖν="repeat" in De Mut. 53, the noun itself is only cited in the sense of recantation. Cf. in Philo himself De Post. 179, De Som. ii. 232. The only sense in which the story of these events would be a recantation would be that it would force the doubters of providence to recant. I think παλινοδία, said by Suidas to=ἐναντία ὁδός, would be a more natural word.

INDICES TO PHILO

---

SCRIPTURE INDEX

KEY

INCIDENTS

Blessing of Jacob	Gen. xlix
Passover	Exod. xii
Red Sea	Exod. xiv
Song of Moses	Exod. xv. Cf. Deut. xxxii
Manna and Quails	Exod. xvi, Num. xi
Water from Rock	Exod. xvii, Num. xx
Jethro's visit	Exod. xviii
Giving of the Law	Exod. xix ff
Seventy elders	Exod. xxiv. Cf. Num. xi
Theophany on Sinai	Exod. xxiv. 10
Golden Calf	Exod. xxxii
Slaughter by Levites	Exod. xxxii
Nadab and Abihu	Lev. x
Spies	Num. xiii
Sabbath broken	Num. xv. 32-36
Korah's revolt	Num. xvi
Edom	Num. xx
Balak and Balaam	Num. xxii-xxiv
Phinehas	Num. xxv
Midianite War	Num. xxv, xxxi
Zelophehad's daughters	Num. xxxvii, xxxvi
Blessing of Moses	Deut. xxxiii

SCRIPTURE INDEX

OFFERINGS

Lev. i-vii, xxiii. 10, Num. xxviii. 2, Deut. xxvi

FEASTS

Lev. xxiii, Num. xxviii, xxix, Deut. xvi ; cf. xxvi

LAWS AND ORDINANCES, ETC.

Atonement	Lev. xvi
Blessing & Cursing	Lev. xxvi, Deut. xxvii, xxviii
Cities of refuge	Exod. xxi. 13, 14, Num. xxxv, Deut. xix
Clean and Unclean	Lev. xi, Deut. xiv
Decalogue	Exod. xx, Deut. v
Great Vow	Num. vi
High Priest	Lev. viii, xvi, xxi
Ius talionis	Exod. xxi. 23-25, Lev. xxiv. 19-21, Deut. xix. 21
Jubilee	Lev. xxv
Leprosy	Lev. xiii, xiv
Levites	Exod. xxxii, cf. Num. xxv ; Num. xviii, Deut. x. 9, xxxiii. 9, 10
Nazirite	Num. vi
Rebellious son	Deut. xxi. 18-21
Release	Lev. xxv, Deut. xv
Sabbath-breaking	Exod. xx. 8, xxxi. 13-16, xxxv. 2, 3, Num. xv. 32-36

SCRIPTURE INDEX

Sabbath for land	Lev. xxv
Tabernacle	Exod. xxv-xxxix, xxxv-xl
Two wives	Deut. xxi. 15-17
Urim & Thummim	Exod. xxviii. 26 (EV 30)

BIBLICAL REFERENCES

Old Testament : I. Gen. Introd. pp. xii, xiii n, xv, xvi n, xix, xxi, II. Cher. 53[N], 84[N], Sac. 45[N], IV. Mig. 140[N], VII. Gen. Introd. p. xv, Spec. Leg. i. 60n, iii. 47n, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xii, Virt. 122[N], Praem. 23[N], IX. Gen. Introd. p. v, Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 107, Vit. Cont. 25n, 28, Hypoth. 7. 6nn, De Prov. Introd. p. 448

Pentateuch <sup>a</sup> : I. Gen. Introd. p. xiii n, IV. Mig. 184n, V. Mut. 216n, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. ix, xi, xvi, xvii, Mos. i. 290n, ii. 26-44[N], 47n & [N], 65[N], VII. Gen. Introd. pp. x, xi, xiv, xv, Spec. Leg. i. 1n, 71[N], 79[N], 180[N], ii. 28n, 176n, 243n, iii. 64n, 110n, 120[N], 149[N], VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xv, xix(xx) n, xx, Spec. Leg. iv. 2[N], 51n, Virt. 28[N], 44[N], 122[N], Praem. 78[N], 87[N], 171[N], IX. Gen. Introd. p. v, Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. pp. 2, 3, 5, Quod Omn. Prob. 57 & n, 70[N], Vit. Cont. 25[N], 65[N],

<sup>a</sup> These general references to the Pentateuch include those made to "the Law."

SCRIPTURE INDEX

Hypoth. Introd. pp. 407 & n-411, 7.
1n, 7. 5n, 7. 6n, 7. 7n, De Prov.
Introd. p. 450

- Septuagint <sup>a</sup> :
- I. Leg. All. i. 1n, 2n, 53n, 66n, ii. 9n, 46n, 59n, iii. 16[N], 20n, 24n, 32[N], 165n, 171n, 203n, 228n
- II. Cher. 1n, 8[N], 35n, 49[N], 72n, 128n, Sac. 5n, 6n, 8n, 12[N], 51n, 59n, 62n, 76n, 77n, 108n, 112n, 136[N], Det. 1[N], 12n, 158n, Post. 55n, 57[N], 62n, Gig. 34n
- III. Quod Deus 1n, 6[N], 13n, 72n, 82n, 88n, 99n, 111-116[N], 123n, 145n, Agr. 1n, 21n, 97n, 170n, 175n, Plant. 61[N], 73[N], Ebr. Introd. p. 316n, 2[N], 14[N], 24n, 27n, 31[N], 39n, 73n, 79n, 84n & [N], 114-118[N], 127n, 143n, 146n, 149n, 150[N], 152n, Sob. 12n, 32[N], 50n, 56[N], 58[N], 66n
- IV. Conf. 1n, 23n, 44[N], 50n, 56n, 70[N], 81n, 96nn, 103[N], 106[N], 131n, Mig. 5n, 19n, 94n, 98n, 99n, 130n, 142n, 155n, 159n, 162n, 164n, 174[N], 206[N], 224nn, Quis Her. 118n, 170n, 218n & [N], 243n, 249n, 274n, 275n, 290[N], Congr. 8n, 25n, 43n, 139n, 164n
- V. Fug. 11-13[N], 22n, 132n, 155n, 212n, Mut. Introd. p. 128nn, 34n &

<sup>a</sup> This is a list of passages where attention has been drawn by the Translators to the LXX version in the textual notes, footnotes, or Appendices.

SCRIPTURE INDEX

[N], 104n, 166n, 173n, 190n, 234n, 249n, Som. i. 3nn, 33n, 81n, 182n, 202n, 228n, 254[N], Som. ii. 26n, 44n, 67n, 68n, 69n, 140n, 159n, 170n, 217n, 221[N], 298n

VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xvi, xvii, Abr. 8n, 17n, 33n, 42n, 81n, 85n, 166n, 172n, 232n, 270n, De Jos. 27n, 246n, 256n, 258n, 266n, Mos. i. 9n, 179n, 219n, 250n, 276n, 279nn, 283nn, 290nn, 304n & [N], 326n, Mos. ii. 77n, 87n, 104n, 112n, 113n, 114[N], 115n, 203n, 213n, 214n, 235n, 243n

VII. Decal. 16n, 38n, 47n, Spec. Leg. i. 22n, 41n, 53n, 55[N], 58n, 60n, 74n, 79[N], 80[N], 83[N], 84n, 100n, 117n, 120n, 124n, 145n, 151n, 157n, 169n, 171n, 175n, 183n, 186n, 223n, 226n, 247n, 265n, 268n, 273n, 276n, 290n, 318n, 319n, 333n, Spec. Leg. ii. 26n, 27n, 33n, 42n, 70n, 72n, 82[N], 124n, 133[N], 145[N], 146n, 162n & [N], 194n, 232[N], 238n, 243n, 248n, 255n, 256n, Spec. Leg. iii. 8n, 26n, 27n, 30n, 32n, 37-38[N], 55n, 58n, 59n, 61n, 65n, 86n, 93n, 94n, 102n, 106n, 108n & [N], 110n, 120n, 140n, 142n, 145n, 149n, 150n, 151n, 179n

VIII. Gen. Introd. p. x, Spec. Leg. iv. 2n, 7n & [N], 13n & [N], 22n, 34nn, 36n, 37n, 51n, 59n, 62n, 70n, 72n, 113n, 114n, 119n, 122n, 123n, 128n, 129n, 130n, 137n & [N], 158n, 160n, 168n, 171n, 177n, 183n, 197n, 203nn, 217n, 223n, 227n, Virt. 23n, 28[N], 41n, 43n, 44n & [N], 58n, 73n, 86n, 90n, 91n, 96n, 103n, 115n & [N], 122[N], 142n, 156n, 158n, 165n, 171n, 216n, Praem. 13n, 15n, 47n, 65[N], 72n, 79n, 81n, 83n, 84n, 95n, 104n, 108n, 115n, 124n, 129nn, 133nn, 138n, 141n, 143nn, 146n, 147n, 148nn, 150nn, 152n, 158n, 159n, 163n

 IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5(6)n, 57n, 70[N]. Vit. Cont. 81n, Aet. 19nn, Flacc. 159n, 165n, Hypoth. 7. 1n, 7. 4n

OLD TESTAMENT

GENESIS

- i. V. Fug. 178 (ἡ κοσμοποιία)
 1, 2. IX. Aet. 19 & n
 1. I. Op. 26-29, IV. Quis Her. 122
 2. I. Op. 29, 30, 32, Leg. All. i. 33, II. Gig. 22 & [N], IX. Aet. 19 & n
 3. I. Op. 29, V. Som. i. 75 & n
 4. I. Op. 30, 33, IV. Quis Her. 163f, V. Som. i. 76
 5. I. Op. 15 & n, 33-35, IV. Quis Her. 163-165
 5-14. IV. Quis Her. 165
 6-8. I. Op. 36f
 9. I. Op. 38, 136

10. I. Op. 39
 11, 12. I. Op. 40, 42-44, 46f
 14-19. I. Op. 29-31
 14. I. Op. 45-47, 53, 55-61, 78, III. Plant.
 117f, IX. Aet. 19 & n
 16. V. Som. i. 135
 20-ii. 3. IV. Quis Her. 165
 20-23. I. Op. 62-68, 78, V. Som. i. 135
 24, 25. I. Op. 64-68, 78, Leg. All. ii. 11-13,
 V. Som. i. 135
 26, 27. I. Op. 65-88, IV. Conf. 169-180, V. Fug.
 68-72, Mut. 30f
<sup>a</sup> 26. I. Op. 72-75, IV. Conf. 169-180, V. Fug.
 68-70, Mut. 30f
 27. I. Op. 25, 65-88, 134, Leg. All. i. 31-34, 42, 53-55, 88-94, ii. 4, 13, iii. 96, II. Det.
 83-90, III. Plant. 19f, 44, IV. Conf. 146,
Quis Her. 56f, 164, 231-233, V. Fug.
 71f, Som. i. 73, 74 & n, VII. Spec. Leg.
 i. 81, 171 & n, iii. 83 & n, 207
 28. I. Op. 84, 88
 31. IV. Mig. 42 & [N], 135, Quis Her. 159f
- ii. 1. I. Leg. All. i. 1 & n, VI. Gen. Introd.
 p. ix n
 1, 2. IV. Quis Her. 122
 2. I. Leg. All. i. 2 & n-6, 16
 2, 3. I. Op. 89, II. Post. 64, V. Fug. 173
 3. I. Leg. All. i. 16-18, VI. Mos. i. 207n
 4. I. Leg. All. i. 19-21, II. Post. 65, VI.
Abr. 11n
 4, 5. I. Op. 129, Leg. All. i. 21-27

<sup>a</sup> In these passages Philo bases his argument upon the use of the plural in "Let us make man . . ."

6. I. Op. 131-133, Leg. All. i. 28-30, II Post. 127, V. Fug. 178-182
7. I. Op. 134-147, Leg. All. i. 31-42, 53-55, 88-95, ii. 4-13, 19, 71-73, iii. 161, II. Det. 80-92, III. Plant. 19, IV. Quis Her. 56-58, Congr. 90, V. Som. i. 34, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 123 & n
8. I. Op. 153, Leg. All. i. 41, 43-49, III. Plant. 32-45, IV. Conf. 61
9. I. Leg. All. i. 56-62, 100, IV. Mig. 37, 42[N], V. Som. ii. 70 & [N]
- 10-14. I. Leg. All. i. 63-87, 66n
10. I. Leg. All. i. 63-65, II. Post. 128f, V. Som. ii. 241-243
11. I. Leg. All. i. 66, 70-77, 85-87
12. I. Leg. All. i. 67, 78-84
- 13, 14. I. Leg. All. i. 68-74, 85-87
15. I. Leg. All. i. 53 & n, 88f, V. Som. ii. 300[N]
- 16, 17. I. Leg. All. i. 90-106, IV. Congr. 178n
18. I. Leg. All. ii. 1, 4-8
- 19, 20. I. Op. 148-150, Leg. All. i. 91f, ii. 9 & n-18 & [N], V. Mut. 63f
- 21-25. I. Op. 151, Leg. All. ii. 19-70, 65[N]
- 21, 22. I. Leg. All. ii. 19-70, iii. 185, II. Cher. 60
21. I. Leg. All. ii. 19-39, IV. Quis Her. 257
22. I. Leg. All. ii. 39f
23. I. Leg. All. 40-48, 44[N]
24. I. Leg. All. ii. 49-52, II. Gig. 65
25. I. Leg. All. ii. 53-70, 65[N]
- iii. I. Op. 155-169
1. I. Op. 156, 165, Leg. All. ii. 53, 71-108 (esp. 71-76, 106-108)

2. III. Agr. 95-99
 3. V. Som. ii. 70n & [N]
 5. IV. Quis Her. 316n
 7. I. Leg. All. iii. 55
 8. I. Leg. All. iii. 1-48 (esp. 1, 4-6, 28-31)
 9. I. Leg. All. iii. 49-54, V. Som. i. 192
 10. I. Leg. All. iii. 54
 12. I. Leg. All. iii. 56-58
 13. I. Leg. All. iii. 59-64, 66f
 14, 15. I. Gen. Introd. pp. xi f, Leg. All. iii. 65 & [N]-199 (esp. 65-68, 75f, 107-117, 160f, 182)
 14. IV. Mig. 66f
 15. I. Leg. All. iii. 182-199, II. Sac. 136[N], III. Agr. 107f
 16. I. Op. 167, Leg. All. iii. 200-221 (esp. 200, 211-213, 216, 220f)
 17-19. I. Op. 167, Leg. All. iii. 222-247 (esp. 222-224, 246f)
 18. I. Leg. All. iii. 248-251
 19. I. Leg. All. iii. 251-253, IV. Mig. 3, V. Som. ii. 70 & n
 20. II. Cher. 57, 60, III. Agr. 97 & n, IV. Quis Her. 52f
 22. IV. Conf. 169-182
 23, 24. IV. Congr. 171 & [N]
 23. I. Leg. All. i. 96, II. Cher. 1, III. Plant. 34
 24. II. Cher. 1-39 (esp. 1 & n, 2, 10f, 20-30, 28[N]), IV. Quis Her. 166n
- iv. 1, 2. II. Cher. 40-130 (esp. 40 & n-44, 52-66, 73 & n, 124-127)
 2. II. Sac. 1-51 (esp. 1-5, 10-16, 45, 51), III. Agr. 21 & n

3. II. Sac. 52-88 (esp. 52f, 71f, 88), IV. Conf. 124 & [N]-127
4. II. Sac. 88-139 (esp. 88f, 136), IV. Conf. 124 & [N]-127
7. III. Agr. 127 & n-130, Sob. 50 & n & [N], V. Mut. 195 & n, 196
8. II. Det. 1-50 (esp. 1 & [N], 32, 37-42, 45-50), IV. Mig. 74f
9. II. Det. 57 & [N], 58, 61f
10. II. Det. 48-50, 69-95 (esp. 69-79, 75n, 91 & [N])
11. II. Det. 96-103
12. II. Det. 104-140 (esp. 104, 112f, 119, 140), III. Agr. 21-27, VIII. Praem. 72f
13. II. Det. 141-150, III. Agr. 21-27, IV. Conf. 165 & n
14. II. Det. 150-156 (esp. 150-158 & n, 163-166)
15. II. Det. 166-178, IV. Conf. 122n, V. Fug. 60 & n-64
16. II. Cher. 12f, Det. 163, Post. 1-32 (esp. 1-12, 21-32)
17. II. Post. 33-65 (esp. 33-40, 49-52), IV. Conf. 122f
18. II. Post. 40-48, 66-74
19. II. Post. 75-83, 79[N], 124
20. II. Post. 83-99
21. II. Post. 100-111
22. II. Post. 112-123
23. II. Det. 50 & [N], 51
23. II. Cher. 54f, Post. 10f, 124, III. Agr. 12n
26. II. Det. 138-140, VI. Abr. 8 & n, 11 & n, VIII. Praem. 13 & n, 14

- v. IV. Congr. 90
 1. II. Det. 139, VI. Abr. 9, 11 & n
 18. II. Post. 40
 21, 25. II. Post. 40-48
 24. V. Mut. 34 & n & [N]-38, VI. Abr. 17
 & n & [N]-25, VIII. Praem. 15 & n-21,
 IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 63n
 29. II. Det. 121-123
- vi, vii (The Flood). VI. Abr. 1 & n, Mos. ii. 53, 263, VIII. Praem. 78[N], IX. Aet. 147
 & [N]
- vi. 1. II. Gig. 1-5
 2. II. Gig. 6-18
 3. II. Gig. 19-57 (esp. 19-21, 28-31, 53-57)
 4. II. Gig. 58-67 & n, III. Quod Deus 1
 5-7. III. Quod Deus 20-70
 5, 6. III. Quod Deus 20, IV. Conf. 24 & [N], 25
 6. III. Quod Deus 20-50 (esp. 20-22, 33-35, 48f)
 7. III. Quod Deus 51-73 (esp. 51f, 71-73)
 8. I. Leg. All. iii. 77f, III. Quod Deus 70
 & [N]-74, 85-116 (esp. 86, 104-109, 116)
 9. III. Quod Deus 117-121, VI. Abr. 11
 & n, 27, 31-38 & nn, VIII. Praem. 22
 & n, 23
 11. III. Quod Deus 122-140
 12. III. Quod Deus 140-183 (esp. 140-143)
 14. IV. Conf. 105
- vii. 2. II. Det. 170
 8, 9. III. Plant. 143
 11. IV. Conf. 23-25, V. Fug. 192, VI. Abr.
 42 & n

- viii. 6, 7. IV. Mig. 83 & n
 20. IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 70[N]
 21. IV. Quis Her. 296, Congr. 115
 22. IV. Quis Her. 165-228 & [N], IX. Aet. 19 & n
- ix. 6. V. Som. i. 74, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 83 & n, 84
 11. V. Som. ii. 223-225
 20-25. VIII. Virt. 201f
 20. III. Agr. 1-181 (esp. 1-11, 20-26, 124-126, 180f), Plant. 1-140 (esp. 1, 73, 140)
 21-29. III. Ebr.
 21. III. Agr. 1, Plant. 140-177 (esp. 143f, 156, 170-174), Ebr. 1-10, Sob. 1
 24. III. Sob. 1-30 (esp. 1-6, 30)
 25-27. IV. Quis Her. 260, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Intro. p. 5n
 25. III. Sob. 30-52 (esp. 30-32 & [N], 33, 44f, 51f)
 26, 27. I. Leg. All. ii. 60-62, III. Sob. 32[N], 51-69, 51[N], 58[N]
- x. 8, 10. II. Gig. 66
- xi. 1-9. IV. Conf.
 1. IV. Conf. 1-60 (esp. 1-22), Som. ii. 283 & n & [N]-295
 2. IV. Conf. 60-82 (esp. 60, 67-69, 75f)
 3. IV. Conf. 83-104 (esp. 83-87, 101-103 & [N], 104)
 4. II. Post. 53, IV. Conf. 107-133 (esp. 107-121, 133)
 5. IV. Conf. 134-149 (esp. 134f, 140-144), 155

6. II. Post. 53, 81f, IV. Conf. 150-167
 7. IV. Conf. 158, 168-195, VI. Abr. 143n
 8. IV. Conf. 196-198
 10. V. Mut. 189
 20. II. Det. 105-112
 20-27. I. Leg. All. ii. 60-62
 27, 29. IV. Congr. 43-51
 27, 28. II. Gig. 62
 29. II. Post. 75-78
 31. IV. Mig. 177-189 (esp. 177-179, 184 & n, 187-189), 194f, Quis Her. 289, Congr. 48f, V. Mut. 16, Som. i. 52-60, 160f, VI. Abr. 67 & n, VIII. Praem. 26f
 32. V. Som. i. 47-51
- xii. 1-3. IV. Mig. 1-127
 1, 2. IV. Quis Her. 277f
 1. IV. Mig. 1-53 (esp. 1-12, 35 & n-43), Quis Her. Introd. p. 273nn, 69-74, 287-289, VI. Abr. 62 & n-88
 2. IV. Mig. 53-108 (esp. 53, 70-73, 86-93, 106 & n-108)
 3. IV. Mig. 109-127 (esp. 109f, 118-124)
 4. IV. Mig. 127-215 (esp. 127-139, 148-151, 176f, 187-198, 207), V. Som. i. 47
 5. VI. Abr. 67 & n
<sup>a</sup> 6. I. Leg. All. iii. 25, IV. Mig. 216-225, VI. Abr. 77 & n
 7. II. Det. 159, VI. Abr. 77 & n-80
 9. VI. Abr. 85 & n-87

<sup>a</sup> Where the A.V. has "unto the plain of Moreh" the LXX reads ἐπὶ τὴν δρῦν τὴν ὑψηλήν. R.V. "unto the oak of Moreh."

10. IV. Quis Her. 287-289
 10-20. VI. Abr. 91 & n-98
 32. IV. Mig. 150 & [N]
- xiii. 2. VI. Abr. 209n
 5-11. VI. Abr. 212-224
 7-12. IV. Mig. 150 & [N], 151
 9. IV. Mig. 13, VI. Abr. 224 & n
- xiv. IV. Congr. 92, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvii, Abr. 225-235, 244n, VIII. Virt. 22n
 3. IV. Conf. 26
 7. V. Fug. 196
 9, 11. IV. Congr. 92
 12. IV. Mig. 150 & [N]
 13. IV. Mig. 164n
 14-17. IV. Quis Her. 287-289, Congr. 92f
 14. VI. Abr. 232
 17. III. Ebr. 24
 18. I. Leg. All. iii. 79-82
 20. IV. Congr. 93, 99
 21. I. Leg. All. iii. 24 & n, 25, 197
 22, 23. I. Leg. All. iii. 24, III. Ebr. 105-110
 24. IV. Mig. 164 & n-167 & n
- xv. 1. IV. Quis Her. 1n, 2
 2, 3. IV. Quis Her. 1, 2 & n-65 (esp. 1-9, 22-42, 51, 52 & [N]-65)
 4. IV. Quis Her. 66-74, V. Mut. 177
 5. I. Leg. All. iii. 39-41, IV. Quis Her. 75-89
 6. I. Leg. All. iii. 228, III. Quod Deus 4, IV. Mig. 44, Quis Her. 90-95, 101, V. Mut. 177, 181f, 186, 218, VI. Abr. 262-274, VIII. Virt. 216-218, Praem. 27-30, 49-51[N]

7. IV. Quis Her. 96-99, 314 & n, VI. Abr. 62n
  8. IV. Quis Her. 100f
  9. IV. Quis Her. 102-112, 123-127
  10. IV. Quis Her. 129-236 (esp. 129-132, 141-146, 207, 213-215, 230-233)
  11. IV. Quis Her. 237 & n-248
  12. IV. Quis Her. 249-265
  13. IV. Quis Her. 266 & n, 267 & n, 268 & n-271, 274 & n
  14. I. Gen. Introd. p. xiv, IV. Quis Her. 271-274 & n
  15. IV. Quis Her. 275 & n-292
  16. IV. Quis Her. 293-306, 300n, 308
  17. IV. Quis Her. 307-312
  18. IV. Quis Her. 313, 314 & n-316
  - 18-20. IV. Congr. 119, V. Som. ii. 255-260
- xvi. 1-6. VI. Abr. 247-254
- 1, 2. IV. Congr. 1-70 (esp. 1-24, 34f, 63-70)
  2. I. Leg. All. iii. 241 & n, 245
  3. IV. Congr. 71-121 (esp. 71-82, 88f, 121)
  4. IV. Congr. 122-151 (esp. 122, 127-130, 139-151)
  5. IV. Congr. 139-153 (esp. 139f, 151-153)
  - 6-9. II. Cher. 3-6 & [N], V. Fug. 1-207, VI. Abr. 253n
  6. IV. Congr. 153-180 (esp. 153-159, 155[N], 180), V. Fug. 1-118 (esp. 1-6)
  7. V. Fug. 1, 119-203 (esp. 119, 177, 202f)
  8. V. Fug. 203-206
  9. V. Fug. 207
  11. V. Fug. 1, 5f, 204, 208

12. V. Fug. 1, 204, 209-211
 13. V. Fug. 211f, Som. i. 240
 14. V. Fug. 212 & n, 213
- xvii. 1. I. Leg. All. iii. 244, II. Cher. 4, Gig. 63f, V. Mut. Introd. p. 128 & n, 1-51 (esp. 1-7, 15-19, 23f, 27-31, 39f, 47-51), 65, 70f, VII. Decal. 38 & n
 2. V. Mut. 51-53
 3. V. Mut. 54-56
 4. V. Mut. 57-59
 5. II. Cher. 7, Gig. 62-64, V. Mut. 60-129 (esp. 60-76), VI. Abr. 81 & n
 15. I. Leg. All. iii. 217, II. Cher. 7, V. Mut. 61, 77-80, 130
 16. I. Leg. All. iii. 217, V. Mut. Introd. p. 128 & n, 130-153 (esp. 130-132, 141-151), 166n
 17. I. Leg. All. iii. 85-87, 217f, V. Mut. 154-201 (esp. 154-167, 175-188 & n, 193 & n, 201); cf. VI. Abr. 111f, 205, 206 & n, 207, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 54
 18. V. Mut. 201-252 (esp. 201-204, 209f, 216-219, 252f)
 19. I. Leg. All. iii. 85-87, II. Cher. 8[N], V. Mut. 253-262
 20. V. Mut. 263
 21. V. Mut. 263-269
 22. V. Mut. 270
 25. III. Sob. 8
- xviii. VI. Abr. 107-132
 3. VI. Abr. 132
 5-8. II. Cher. 106, VI. De Jos. 205n

6. II. Sac. 58, 59 & n, 60
 9. II. Det. 59-61
 11-15. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 54 & n, 55
 11. I. Leg. All. iii. 218 & [N], II. Cher. 8 & [N], 50, Det. 28, Post. 134, III. Ebr. 59f, 62n, V. Fug. 128, 167, Som. ii. 185
 12. I. Leg. All. iii. 218 & [N], III. Ebr. 62 & n, V. Mut. 166 & n, VI. Abr. 112, 206 & n
 13. V. Mut. 166 & n
 14. VI. Abr. 112
 15. VI. Abr. 113n, 206 & n
 16. IV. Mig. 173-175
 17. I. Leg. All. iii. 27, III. Sob. 55, 56 & [N]
 22. V. Som. ii. 226f
 23. IV. Mig. 132
 22, 23. I. Leg. All. iii. 9f, II. Cher. 18f, Post. 27
 23, 27. III. Quod Deus 161, IV. Quis Her. 30, V. Som. i. 214
 24ff. II. Sac. 122, IV. Mig. 122f, Congr. 109, V. Mut. 228f
 32. IV. Congr. 109
 33. V. Som. i. 70
- xix. VI. Abr. 133-141
 4. IV. Conf. 27 & [N]
 11. V. Fug. 144, 146
 20. VI. Abr. 166 & n
 21, 22. VIII. Praem. 78[N]
 23, 24. V. Som. i. 85f, VIII. Praem. 133n
 24, 25. VI. Abr. 1 & n, Mos. ii. 53, 55, 263, VIII. Praem. 78[N], IX. Aet. 147[N]
 26. I. Leg. All. iii. 26, III. Ebr. 164, V. Fug. 121f, Som. i. 246-248

- 30-38. II. Post. 175f, III. Ebr. 164-170, 203-205
 37, 38. I. Leg. All. iii. 81, V. Som. i. 89, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 327n, 333n
- xx. 3-7. V. Som. i. 1-2[N]
 7. IV. Quis Her. 258
 12. III. Ebr. 61, IV. Quis Her. 62
- xxi. 1. II. Cher. 45 & [N]
 2. V. Fug. 166-168
 5. V. Mut. 1, 188
 6. I. Leg. All. iii. 219, II. Cher. 45, Det. 123-125, IV. Mig. 139-142, V. Mut. 130f, 137, Som. i. 173
 7. IV. Mig. 140 & [N]-142, cf. 29
 8. III. Sob. 8, IV. Mig. 29 & n, V. Som. ii. 10
 9. II. Cher. 8[N], III. Sob. 8
 10. II. Cher. 9
 12. I. Leg. All. iii. 245, III. Sob. 9
 14. II. Cher. 3, 7-10
 14-16. III. Sob. 8
 19. II. Post. 130
 20. II. Post. 131, IV. Congr. 129
 25. V. Som. i. 14
 30. V. Fug. 200
 31. V. Som. i. 14
 33. III. Plant. 73 & [N]-89, V. Mut. 190 & n
- xxii. 1-19. VI. Abr. 167-177, 202-204, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 70[N]
 1, 2. II. Sac. 110, III. Quod Deus 4, IV.

SCRIPTURE INDEX -GEN. XXIV. 67

- Mig.* 139, 142, V. Som. i. 194f, cf. VI Abr. 172
- 3, 4. II. Post. 17-20, IV. Mig. 139f, 154, 166n, V. Som. i. 64-67
6. II. Cher. 36, VI. Abr. 171 & n
7. V. Fug. 132-134, VI. Abr. 173
8. IV. Mig. 166, 167 & n, V. Fug. 132 & n, 135f, VI. Abr. 172 & n, 175
9. III. Quod Deus 4
- 9-12. V. Som. i. 195
13. V. Fug. 132n, 135f
16. I. Leg. All. iii. 203 & n-210, VI. Abr. 273
17. I. Leg. All. iii. 203-210
- 23, 24. IV. Congr. 43-53
- xxiii. VI. Abr. 255-261
4. IV. Conf. 79
6. V. Mut. 152f, Som. ii. 26n, 89f, VI. Abr. 261 & [N], VIII. Virt. 216 & n-219
7. V. Som. ii. 89f
9. II. Post. 62 & n, IV. Conf. 79, V. Som. ii. 26
- xxiv. 1. III. Sob. 17 & [N], 18, VI. Abr. 270 & n
7. I. Leg. All. iii. 42
10. IV. Congr. 111 & n, 112, VIII. Virt. 223
16. V. Fug. 194f
- 16-20. II. Post. 132f, 136-158
22. IV. Congr. 113 & n
35. VI. Abr. 209 & n
63. I. Leg. All. iii. 43, II. Det. 29-31
65. II. Det. 30f
67. II. Post. 77f

- xxv. 5, 6. I. Leg. All. iii. 197 & n, II. Sac. 43f, IV. Conf. 74, Mig. 94 & n & [N], VIII.
Virt. 207, Praem. 58
 7. IV. Quis Her. 291
 8. II. Sac. 5, V. Fug. 128 & n
 21-23. II. Cher. 47, Sac. 4
 23. I. Leg. All. iii. 88f, IV. Congr. 129f,
 VIII. Praem. 63
 25. II. Cher. 47
 27. I. Leg. All. iii. 2, III. Plant. 44, IV. Quis
Her. 252, 254n, Congr. 61f
 29. II. Sac. 81 & n
 33. II. Sac. 17f, 120, III. Sob. 26, VI. Mos.
 i. 242, VIII. Virt. 208
- xxvi. 2. I. Leg. All. ii. 58f, II. Det. 46
 2, 3. IV. Mig. 29f, Conf. 81 & n, cf. V. Som.
 i. 160
 3-5. IV. Quis Her. 8f
 5. IV. Mig. 130 & n, VI. Abr. 275
 8. II. Cher. 8 & n, III. Plant. 168-170
 12. V. Mut. 190, 268
 18. V. Fug. 200
 19-23. V. Som. i. 14
 20-22. V. Som. i. 39, 40 & n
 23-25. V. Som. i. 68
 32. III. Plant. 78-84, V. Som. i. 8-10, 38
 33. III. Plant. 78-84, V. Som. i. 14-40, 68
- xxvii. 3, 5. IV. Quis Her. 252, 254n
 11. I. Leg. All. ii. 59 & n, IV. Mig. 153
 16. VIII. Virt. 208 & n & [N]
 20. II. Sac. 64, III. Quod Deus 92f, III. Ebr.

SCRIPTURE INDEX -GEN. XXVIII. 22

- 120, IV. Quis Her. 252, 254n, V. Fug. 168f
23. VIII. Virt. 208 & n & [N]
28. IV. Mig. 101
30. II. Sac. 135, III. Ebr. 9f
33. IV. Quis Her. 251-254 & n
36. I. Leg. All. iii. 190-195, II. Sac. 135, IV. Quis Her. 252, 254n
38. V. Mut. 230f
40. I. Leg. All. iii. 193, IV Congr. 175f, VIII. Virt. 209, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 4, 57 & n
41. II. Det. 46 & [N], VI. Mos. i. 242, VIII. Virt. 208
- 42-45. IV. Mig. 208-211, V. Fug. 4, 23-47, 25[N], Som. i. 45f
- xxviii. 2. II. Post. 75-78, V. Fug. 48-52
7. IV. Congr. 70
10. V. Som. i. 4-60 (esp. 4-6, 12-15, 24, 39-41)
11. V. Som. i. 4, 61-133 (esp. 61, 68-73, 115-121, 126-129)
- 12-15. V. Som. i. 1-188, ii. 3
12. V. Som. i. 1-3, 133-159, ii. 19
- 13, 14. V. Som. i. 3 & nn, 159-178
15. V. Som. i. 179 & n-181
16. V. Som. i. 182 & n-185
17. IV. Mig. 5 & n, 6, V. Som. i. 184-188
18. V. Som. i. 241n
20. V. Som. i. 126
21. III. Plant. 90-92, V. Som. i. 163
22. IV. Congr. 99

- xxix. 4, 5. IV. Mig. 212f
 6. I. Leg. All. ii. 82
 16. III. Sob. 12
 24. VIII. Virt. 223
 26. III. Ebr. 47-51
 27, 28. III. Ebr. 52f
 29. VIII. Virt. 223
 31. I. Leg. All. ii. 47-95, iii. 180f. II. Cher.
 46, Post. 135, IV. Quis Her. 50f, Congr.
 7, V. Mut. 132f, 254f
 31-35. I. Leg. All. iii. 180f
 35. I. Leg. All. i. 80 & n, iii. 146, III. Plant.
 134f, V. Som. i. 37f
- xxx. 1. I. Gen. Introd. p. xii, Leg. All. ii. 46,
 iii. 180
 2. I. Leg. All. ii. 47, iii. 180, II. Post. 179
 3. IV. Congr. 24, 29f, 33, VIII. Virt. 223
 5-8. I. Leg. All. iii. 146
 9. IV. Congr. 24, 29f, 33, VIII. Virt. 223
 13. IV. Mig. 95f
 16. IV. Congr. 123
 18. I. Leg. All. i. 80 & n, III. Plant. 134, 136
 24. II. Post. 179, Som. ii. 47
 25-43. V. Fug. 11-13 & [N]
 30. IV. Mig. 214
 36. II. Sac. 46-48, III. Agr. 42
 37. III. Plant. 110 & [N]
 42. IV. Quis Her. 180, V. Fug. 9f, Som. i.
 202 & n
- xxxi. 3. IV. Mig. 26-31
 4, 5. II. Det. 3f

SCRIPTURE INDEX -GEN. XXXII. 28

- 10-13. V. Som. i. 189-256
 10. V. Som. i. 200-227 (esp. 200-212), ii. 19f
 11. V. Som. i. 189-197, ii. 19f
 12. V. Som. i. 197, 226f
 13. V. Som. i. 227-230 (& 228n), 238-256 (& 241n)
 14-16. IV. Quis Her. 44, V. Fug. 14f
 20, 21. I. Leg. All. iii. 16 & [N]-19, 20n, V. Fug. 4, 7, 14-17, 20-23
 23. I. Leg. All. iii. 19
 24. V. Som. i. 1-2[N]
<sup>a</sup> 27a. I. Leg. All. iii. 20 & n-22
 27b. V. Fug. 20-22 & n
 28. IV. Quis Her. 43f
 34. I. Leg. All. ii. 46 & [N], V. Fug. 143, 146
 35. III. Ebr. 54-59, 56[N], 63
 42. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 3 & n
 43. II. Cher. 67-74
 46, 47. II. Post. 59 & [N]
 53. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 3 & n
- xxxii. 1. III. Sob. 65 & n
 10. I. Leg. All. ii. 89
 24-31. III. Sob. 65 & n, IV. Mig. 200, V. Mut. 81f, Som. i. 129
 25. V. Mut. 187, Som. i. 130-132, VIII. Praem. 47 & n, 48
 28. III. Ebr. 82 & n, 83, IV. Mig. 201, V. Mut. 44-46 & n, 81f, 87f, VIII. Praem. 44 & n & [N]

GEN. XXXII. 29- SCRIPTURE INDEX

29. V. Mut. 14
 31. V. Mut. 187, Som. i. 79f
- xxxiii. 5. IV. Quis Her. 38
 11. II. Sac. 42
- xxxiv. IV. Mig. 223-225, V. Mut. 193-195, 199f
 1, 2. IV. Mig. 223-225
 2, 3. V. Mut. 194
 25. IV. Mig. 224 & nn, Mut. 199f
 31. IV. Mig. 224
- xxxv. 2, 3. IV. Conf. 74
 4. I. Leg. All. iii. 23, 27 & n
 11. V. Mut. 23f
 16. V. Mut. 96
 18, 19. V. Mut. 92-96
<sup>a</sup> 22. VIII. Introd. p. xviii n
 29. II. Sac. 6f
- xxxvi. 12. IV. Congr. 54-62
- xxxvii-l. VI. Introd. p. xii, De Jos. passim
- xxxvii. VI. De Jos. 5-27
 2. III. Quod Deus 119-121, Agr. 55f, Sob. 12-15, VI. De Jos. 2
 3. II. Det. 6-8, V. Som. i. 219-223, VI. De Jos. 32
 7. V. Som. ii. 5, 17-92 (esp. 17f, 21f, 30-43, 78), VI. De Jos. 6f
 8. V. Som. ii. 93-104

<sup>a</sup> Wrongly given as xxxvi. 22.

SCRIPTURE INDEX -GEN. XXXIX. 1

- 9-11. V. Som. ii. 5-7, 110-154, VI. De Jos. 8f, VIII. Praem. 65[N]
9. V. Som. ii. 5f, 110-134, VI. De Jos. 8f
10. V. Som. ii. 7, 135-140 & n, 136n, VI. De Jos. 8f
11. V. Som. ii. 10, 141-154
- 13-17. I. Gen. Introd. p. xiii, II. Det. 5-28
- 15-17. V. Fug. 126-131 & n
31. V. Som. i. 221-223
- 33, 34. V. Som. ii. 65 & n, 66
36. See xxxix. 1. VI. De Jos. 27 & n
- xxxviii. 2. VIII. Virt. 221[N]
- 6-10. VIII. Virt. 221 & n & [N], IX. Hypoth. 7. 7n
6. I. Leg. All. iii. 74
7. I. Leg. All. iii. 69-75
- 7, 8. VIII. Virt. 222 & n
9. II. Post. 180f, III. Quod Deus 16-19
11. III. Quod Deus 137
- 12-26. IV. Congr. 125f, V. Fug. 149-156, Mut. 134-136, Som. ii. 44f, VIII. Virt. 221f.
- 14-18. IV. Congr. 124-126 & n
15. V. Mut. 134
18. V. Fug. 150, Som. ii. 44 & n, 45
- 20-23. V. Fug. 149-156, 150[N], 155n
- 25, 26. V. Mut. 134-136
- xxxix. VI. De Jos. 37-53
- <sup>a</sup> 1. I. Leg. All. iii. 236, III. Quod Deus 111 & [N], Ebr. Introd. p. 316n, 210-217,

* Where the EV have "an officer of Pharaoh's, captain of the guard" the LXX reads ὁ εὐνοῦχος Φαραῶ ὁ ἀρχιμάγειρος, "the eunuch of Pharaoh and chief cook."

- 224, IV. Conf. 95, Mig. 19 & n, V. Mut. 173 & n, VI. De Jos. 27 & n
2. II. Post. 80
- 7ff. I. Leg. All. iii. 236f, IV. Mig. 19, V. Som. ii. 106
- 11, 12. I. Leg. All. iii. 238-242, 239[N]
- 14, 17. IV. Mig. 21 & [N]
- 20-23. III. Quod Deus 111-116 & [N], VI. De Jos. 80-87
- xl.
- V. Som. ii. 155-214, VI. De Jos. 88-99
- 1, 2. IV. Conf. 95, Mig. 19
- 2, 3. III. Ebr. 210-220
7. V. Som. ii. 184
8. II. Cher. 128, IV. Mig. 19
- 9-11. V. Som. ii. 159-204, 215
9. V. Som. ii. 159
10. V. Som. ii. 159 & n, 195-200
11. V. Som. ii. 159, 200-205
15. IV. Mig. 20
- 16, 17. V. Som. ii. 158, 205-215
20. III. Ebr. 208, 220f
21. III. Ebr. 208 & [N]
- xli.
- VI. De Jos. 100-124, 157-162
- 17-24. V. Som. ii. 216-218 & n
17. V. Som. ii. 216-302 (esp. 216, 237-240, 261)
34. IV. Mig. 204, VI. De Jos. 158n
40. IV. Mig. 22 & n
41. IV. Mig. 20, 22 & n, V. Som. ii. 44
42. V. Som. ii. 44
43. IV. Mig. 160f, V. Som. ii. 16, 46
45. V. Mut. 89-91, Som. i. 78

- 46-57. VI. De Jos. 157-162
 48. V. Mut. 90, Som. ii. 46
 49. II. Post. 96
 57. V. Som. ii. 46
- xlii. VI. De Jos. 163-189
 9. VI. De Jos. 164n
 11. IV. Conf. 41-43, 147
 15, 16. IV. Mig. 162 & n
 18. IV. Mig. 21
 23. VI. De Jos. 175 & n
 36. I. Leg. All. i. 61, V. Som. ii. 207 & n
- xliii. VI. De Jos. 189-206
 10. IV. Quis Her. 254n, 255 & n
 32, 33. VI. De Jos. 202n, 203n
 34. VI. De Jos. 234 & n
- xliv. VI. De Jos. 207-237
- xlv. VI. De Jos. 237-253
 1f, 7f. IV. Mig. 22
 7, 8. IV. Mig. 22
 9, 11. I. Gen. Introd. p. xii, Leg. All. iii. 179
 15. VI. De Jos. 246n
 16. V. Mut. 170-174
 18. V. Mut. 173f
- xlvi. VI. De Jos. 254-256
 1. V. Som. i. 171f
 4. II. Post. 29-31, VI. De Jos. 255 & n
 20. IV. Congr. 39-43 & n
 28. VI. De Jos. 256 & n
 30. V. Mut. 214f
 33, 34. II. Sac. 51, III. Agr. 56-59

- xlvii. VI. De Jos. 257-260
     3. II. Sac. 48f, III. Agr. 59-64
     4. III. Agr. 64-66
     9. IV. Conf. 80
     13-26. VI. De Jos. 258 & n-260
     14. VI. De Jos. 258n
     24. VI. De Jos. 258n, 260
- xlviii. 5. V. Mut. 97-102
     13, 14. III. Sob. 27-29
     15, 16. I. Gen. Introd. p. xii, Leg. All. iii. 177-179, III. Quod Deus 157f, IV. Conf. 181, V. Fug. 67, Mut. 32n, 41
     19. I. Leg. All. iii. 90-93, IV. Congr. 39
     22. I. Leg. All. iii. 26 & n
- xlix. VIII. Praem. 65[N]
     1. IV. Quis Her. 261. Cf. V. Mut. 210 & n
     4. VIII. Introd. p. xviii & n
     5. V. Mut. 200
     6. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 84n
     8. I. Leg. All. iii. 26
     15. I. Leg. All. i. 80, IV. Mig. 221; cf. III. Ebr. 94, V. Som. ii. 34
     16-18. I. Leg. All. ii. 94-104, III. Agr. 94 & [N], 95 & [N]-123
     22. III. Sob. 12 & n, 15 & n, 68
     33. II. Sac. 5
- l. 3. IV. Mig. 202
     7, 8. IV. Mig. 159 & n, 160, 163 & n
     15-26. VI. De Jos. 261-268
     19. IV. Mig. 22, 160, V. Som. ii. 107, VI. De Jos. 266 & n
     24-26. IV. Mig. 16-23

EXODUS

IX. Flacc. Introd. p. 408

- i. IV. Mig. 14, Quis Her. 251
 5. IV. Mig. 199f
 8. IV. Conf. 71f
 9. IV. Mig. 54f
 11. II. Post. 54-58, 57[N], IV. Conf. 91,
 V. Som. i. 77
 14. IV. Conf. 88-92
 15. IV. Quis Her. 128
 19. IV. Mig. 141 & n, Congr. 3 & n, V. Fug.
 168
 20. I. Leg. All. iii. 243
 21. I. Leg. All. iii. 3, IV. Mig. 215 & n
- ii. 1-10. VI. Mos. i. 5-17
 1, 2. IV. Congr. 131f
 2. IV. Conf. 106 & [N], Mig. 142 & n,
Congr. 131f, VI. Mos. i. 9 & n
 3. IV. Conf. 106
 4. V. Som. ii. 142
 6. IV. Conf. 106
 11. I. Leg. All. iii. 38 & n
 12. I. Leg. All. iii. 37-39, V. Fug. 148 & n
 13. V. Fug. 148 & n
 14-25. VI. Mos. i. 34-59
 15. I. Leg. All. iii. 12-14, V. Fug. 147 & n
 16, 17. V. Mut. 110-113
 18. V. Mut. 103, 105, 114, 116
 19, 20. V. Mut. 117-120
 21. II. Post. 77f, V. Mut. 120

22. II. Cher. 47, IV. Conf. 82
23. I. Leg. All. iii. 214, II. Det. 93-95, IV. Conf. 93, Mig. 15
- iii. VI. Mos. i. 63-76
1. II. Sac. 50, III. Agr. 43
- 2, 3. V. Fug. 161-164
4. V. Som. i. 194
5. V. Fug. 162f
6. V. Fug. 141
9. I. Leg. All. iii. 214f
- 11, 12. V. Fug. 140f
14. II. Det. 160, V. Mut. 11-13, Som. i. 231-234
15. IV. Mig. 125[N], V. Mut. 12f, VI. Abr. 51 & n & [N]
- iv. VI. Mos. i. 76-86
- 1-5. I. Leg. All. ii. 88-93, II. Det. 177
10. II. Sac. 12f & [NN], Det. 38, IV. Mig. 76f, Quis Her. 4, VIII. Praem. 54
12. IV. Quis Her. 25
14. II. Det. 126-128, IV. Mig. 78, 79 & [N], 82f, V. Mut. 168
15. IV. Mig. 80f
16. II. Det. 39f, IV. Mig. 81, 84
22. II. Post. 63
27. IV. Quis Her. 44n
- 27-31. VI. Mos. i. 85f
- v. VI. Mos. i. 87-90
2. I. Leg. All. iii. 12, 243, II. Post. 115, III. Ebr. 19, 77-79, V. Som. ii. 182
6. IV. Quis Her. 254n, 255

22. VI. Mos. i. 85n
 22, 23. IV. Quis Her. 19f
- vi. 3. V. Mut. 13, Som. i. 230 & n
 7. II. Sac. 87
 12. II. Det. 38
 16-20. VI. Mos. i. 7 & n
 23. II. Post. 75-78
 26, 27. V. Mut. 207-209
 29. V. Mut. 20
- vii-xii. (The Ten Plagues), IV. Congr. 118,
 V. Mos. i. 90-146, 97n, 118n, VIII.
Praem. 78[N]
- vii. 1. I. Leg. All. i. 40, II. Sac. 9 & [N], Det.
 39f, 161f, IV. Mig. 84, 169, V. Mut. 19,
 20n, 125, 128f & n, Som. ii. 189 & n,
 IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 43 & n, 44
 3-6. V. Som. ii. 259
 8-13. VI. Mos. i. 90-95
 11. V. Mut. 208
 12. IV. Mig. 83, 85
 14-25. VI. Mos. i. 98-102
 15. IV. Conf. 29-34, V. Som. ii. 277 & n,
 278, 300 & [N]
 17. V. Mut. 19f
 20, 21. V. Som. ii. 259f
 22. IV. Mig. 83
 23. V. Fug. 124f
- viii. VI. Mos. i. 103-132
 1-15. VI. Mos. i. 103-106
 1. IV. Conf. 94

7. IV. Mig. 83
 9, 10. II. Sac. 69-71
 16-19. VI. Mos. i. 107 & n-112
 18, 19. IV. Mig. 85
 20-30. VI. Mos. i. 130-132
 26. II. Sac. 51 & n, V. Fug. 18f
- ix. 1-7. VI. Mos. i. 133
 8-12. VI. Mos. i. 126-129
 22-35. VI. Mos. i. 118f
 29. I. Leg. All. iii. 43f, III. Ebr. 101-103,
 V. Mut. 21-23, 129n
- x. 12-20. VI. Mos. i. 120-122
 21-29. VI. Mos. i. 123-125
 21. V. Som. i. 114
 23. V. Som. i. 117
- xi. 5, 7. V. Som. ii. 266f
- xii. VI. Mos. i. 134-142, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 145n
 2. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 150 & n
 3. IV. Congr. 106 & n
 4. I. Leg. All. iii. 165, IV. Quis Her. 193
 6. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145[N]
 8. IV. Congr. 162
 11. I. Leg. All. iii. 154, II. Sac. 63, IV. Mig.
 25f, 151 & n, Quis Her. 254n, 255
 13. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145[N], 146n
 15-20. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 150-161
 21. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145[N]
 23. I. Leg. All. ii. 34, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 145n & [N]

SCRIPTURE INDEX -EXOD. XV. 1

27. VI. Mos. i. 147 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145n & [N]
 29-36. VI. Mos. i. 134-142
 34. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 158 & n
 37. VI. Mos. i. 147 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 146 & n
 38. IV. Mig. 152-155, 158, 163 & n, VI. Mos. i. 147 & n
 39. II. Sac. 62 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 158 & n
 48. VIII. Virt. 104n
- xiii. 1, 2. IV. Quis Her. 117, 118 & n, 119
 2. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 137f
 11-13. II. Sac. 89-117
 11. II. Sac. 89-101 & n
 12. II. Sac. 102-112
 13. II. Sac. 112 & n-117
 17-22. VI. Mos. i. 163-166
 19. V. Som. ii. 109
- xiv. VI. Mos. i. 167-179, ii. 247-257, VIII. Praem. 78[N]
 7. III. Ebr. 111
 14. V. Som. ii. 265
 14, 15. IV. Quis Her. 14 & n, 15
 20. IV. Quis Her. 203
 27. IV. Conf. 70 & [N]
 30. IV. Conf. 35-37, V. Som. ii. 279 & n-282
- <sup>a</sup> xv. VII. Decal. 15, 16 & n, 17

<sup>a</sup> Called "The Song": III. Agr. 81, Plant. 48, V. Som. ii. 269. Cf. II. Post. 167n, III. Sob. 10n, V. Mut. 182n.

1. I. Leg. All. ii. 102, III. Agr. 80-83, 81[N], Ebr. 111, Sob. 13, V. Som. ii. 269, VI. Mos. i. 180
4. III. Ebr. 79 & n, 111
5. VI. Mos. ii. 252 & n
8. I. Leg. All. iii. 172
9. II. Cher. 74-78
10. VI. Mos. ii. 252 & n
17. III. Plant. 46-55, IV. Congr. 57
18. III. Plant 46-55
- 20, 21. III. Agr. 80-83, 81[N], VI. Mos. i. 180
- 22-26. IV. Congr. 163-166, 164n, VI. Mos. i. 181-187
23. II. Post. 155
25. II. Post. 156, IV. Mig. 36f
27. V. Fug. 183-187, VI. Mos. i. 188-190
- xvi. I. Gen. Introd. p. xi, VI. Mos. i. 191-208, ii. 258-269, VII. Decal. 15, 16 & n, 17
4. I. Leg. All. iii. 162-168, V. Fug. 137f, Mut. 258-260
13. VI. Mos. i. 209 & n
- 13-15. I. Leg. All. iii. 169-176, 171n
- 15, 16. I. Gen. Introd. p. xi, V. Fug. 137-139 & n
18. IV. Quis Her. 191 & n
23. V. Mut. 260n, VI. Mos. ii. 219n
31. II. Det. 118 & [N]
36. IV. Congr. 100f
- xvii. VI. Mos. i. 210-219
- 1-7. VI. Mos. i. 210f
6. I. Leg. All. iii. 4, II. Sac. 67f, IV. Conf.

SCRIPTURE INDEX -EXOD. XIX. 18

- 138, Mig. 183, V. Som. i. 241, ii. 221 & [N]
- 8-16. VI. Mos. i. 214 & n-219 & n, VIII. Virt. 22n
- 11<sup>c</sup> I. Leg. All. iii. 186
12. I. Leg. All. iii. 45, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5n, 29 & n
14. I. Leg. All. iii. 187
15. VI. Mos. i. 219 & n
- xviii. III. Ebr. 37, V. Mut. 104 & n, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xv, Mos. i. & ii. Introd. p. 275 & n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 170-175
1. V. Mut. 106
4. IV. Quis Her. 59f
7. IV. Quis Her. 44 & n
- 9-11. II. Gig. 50, V. Mut. 105
11. III. Ebr. 41-45
14. II. Gig. 50f
16. III. Ebr. 37
17. V. Mut. 104 & n
21. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 171 & n
25. IV. Congr. 110
26. I. Leg. All. iii. 197
- xix. 6. III. Sob. 66 & n, VI. Abr. 56
8. IV. Conf. 58f
13. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 144n
- <sup>a</sup> 14-19. VII. Decal. 44-49
16. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 189
17. V. Som. i. 71
18. IV. Quis Her. 251, VII. Decal. 44 & n-49

<sup>a</sup> In the footnote (a) to Decal. 44 the reference is wrongly given as ch. xx. 14-19.

EXOD. XIX. 19- SCRIPTURE INDEX

19. IV. Quis Her. 17f
 20. II. Cher. 114[N]
 24. II. Post. 136
 33, 34. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 51f
- xx. 1-17. (The Ten Commandments), IV. Quis Her. 168-173, Congr. 120, VII, VIII. Decal., Spec. Leg. i-iv
 2, 3. <sup>a</sup> 1st : IV. Congr. 133[N], V. Mut. 23f, VII. Decal. 52-65, 155, Spec. Leg. i. 12-20, 256
 4-6. 2nd : VII. Decal. 66-81, 156, Spec. Leg. i. 21-31, 255
 5. III. Sob. 48
 7. 3rd : VII. Decal. 82-95, 157, Spec. Leg. ii. 2-38, 27n, 252-254
 8-11. 4th : I. Op. 128, VII. Decal. 96-105, 158-164, Spec. Leg. ii. 39-222 (esp. 39, 56-70 & n), 249-251
 10. II. Cher. 87-90, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 70 & n
 12. 5th : II. Det. 52-56, VII. Decal. 106-120, 165-167, Spec. Leg. ii. 224-248
<sup>b</sup> 13 (EV 14). 7th (Adultery ; LXX, Philo, 6th) : VII. Decal. 121-131, 168f, Spec. Leg. iii. 8 & n-82 <sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Not only does the LXX have a different order from the Hebrew and English, but there are two versions of the order in the LXX itself: Philo at this point follows the same order as that of Deuteronomy v.

<sup>b</sup> There are three variations of the order. In the Hebrew and English it is murder, adultery, theft. In the LXX of Exodus it is, as shown above, adultery, theft, murder. In the LXX of Deut. v, and in Philo it is, adultery, murder, theft.

<sup>c</sup> The Translator's note is not in keeping with the order of the text adopted by Swete.

SCRIPTURE INDEX -EXOD. XXI. 12

- <sup>a</sup> 14 (EV 15). 8th (Theft; LXX 7th, Philo 8th): VII. Decal. 135-137, 171, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 1-40
- <sup>a</sup> 15 (EV 13). 6th (Murder; LXX 8th, Philo 7th): VII. Decal. 132-134, 170, Spec. Leg. iii. 83-209
16. 9th: VII. Decal. 138-141, 172, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 41-77
17. 10th: VII. Decal. 142-153, 173f, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 78-131
- <sup>b</sup> 18. IV. Mig. 47, VI. Mos. ii. 213 & n, VII. Decal. (32-35), 44-49, 47n
19. II. Post. 143f, IV. Quis Her. 19, V. Som. i. 143
21. II. Post. 14, Gig. 54, V. Mut. 7 & [N], Som. i. 186-188[N]
23. I. Leg. All. i. 51, IV. Congr. 159 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 21-31, 22nn
24. I. Leg. All. iii. 215
25. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 273 & n
26. V. Som. ii. 67
- xxi. 2. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 79n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 4n
- 2, 3. VIII. Virt. 122[N]
- 5, 6. I. Leg. All. iii. 198f, II. Cher. 72 & n, 73, IV. Quis Her. 186 & n
10. IV. Mig. 105 & n
- 12-14. V. Fug. 53-82
12. V. Fug. 53-64 (esp. 53-55), VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 83f

<sup>a</sup> See note b on previous page.

<sup>b</sup> In the footnote (b) to Decal. 47 the reference is wrongly given as ch. xix. 18.

13. II. Sac. 133, IV. Conf. 160f, V. Fug. 65f, 75 & n, 76, 86, 93, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 120 & n & [N]-122
14. IV. Conf. 160f, V. Fug. 77-82, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 86 & n & [N]-91
- 15, 17 (LXX 16). V. Fug. 83-86, VII. Spec. Leg. 243 & n-248 & n
- 16 (LXX 17). VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 13 & n & [N]-19
- 18, 19. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 105, 106 & n & [N], 107, 120[N]
- 20, 21. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 137-143 & nn
- 22, 23. IV. Congr. 136-138 & nn, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 108 & n & [N], 109 & [N], 110 & n-119
- <sup>a</sup> 23-25. (the ius talionis) VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 181-204
- 26, 27. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 184, 195-203
- 28-32. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 144, 145 & n
- 33, 34. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 147 & n, 148 & [N]
- 35, 36. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 144-146 & nn
- xxii. 1-4. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2n (p. 8, n. a)
1. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 11 & n & [N]
2. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 7 & n & [N]
- 2, 3. I. Leg. All. iii. 32 & [N]-35
3. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 3 & n
4. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2 & n & [N]
5. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 22 & n-25
6. I. Leg. All. iii. 248-250, IV. Quis Her. 296, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 26-29 & n
7. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2n, 30-33
8. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 34 & nn
- <sup>a</sup> Cf. Lev. xxiv. 19-21, Deut. xix. 21.

SCRIPTURE INDEX -EXOD. XXIII. 20

9. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2n
 9-13. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 36 & n
 14, 15. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 37 & n, 38
 16, 17. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 65 & n-70
 18. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 93 & n-103, 94n,
 102n
 19. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43-45
 22. IV. Congr. 178 & n, 179
 25. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 74 & n-78, VIII. Virt.
 82-85
 26, 27. II. Gig. 53[N], V. Som. i. 92-114
 28. VI. Mos. ii. 203n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 53
 & n, IX Hypoth. 7. 4n
 29. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 134 & n, 137f
 30. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 135f, VIII. Virt. 126n
 31. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 119 & n-121
- xxiii. 1. IV. Conf. 141, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 44n, 59-61
 2. III. Ebr. 25f, IV. Mig. 61f, VIII. Spec.
Leg. iv. 44n, 45-47
 3. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 72 & n-77
 4, 5. VIII. Virt. 116, 117 & n-120
 7. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 44n
 8. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 62 & n-69, 169
 10, 11. IV. Mig. 32 & [N], VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 86-109, VIII. Virt. 97 & n, 98
 13. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 256 & nn
 14. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 181 & n
 16. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 183n & [N]
<sup>a</sup> 19. II. Sac. 72-75, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 134,
 VIII. Virt. 142-144
 20. III. Agr. 51f, IV. Mig. 174 & [N]

<sup>a</sup> The verse occurs again at xxxiv. 26.

EXOD. XXIII. 21- SCRIPTURE INDEX

21. IV. Mig. 174 & [N]
 26. VIII. Praem. 108 & n-111
 28. VIII. Praem. 96
- xxiv. 1. IV. Mig. 168, 169 & n, 170, 201, V. Mut. 125f
 6. IV. Quis Her. 182-185
 10. IV. Conf. 96 & n, 97, V. Som. i. 62, ii. 222
 11. IV. Conf. 56 & n, VIII. Virt. 44[N]
 16, 17. V. Som. i. 186[N]
 18. V. Som. i. 36, VI. Mos. ii. 70 & n
- xxv. 1, 2. IV. Quis Her. 113-117, 122
 10-22. VI. Mos. ii. 95-97
 10. III. Ebr. 85, V. Mut. 43f
 19. II. Cher. 25f
 21. IV. Quis Her. 166, V. Fug. 100f
 23-30. VI. Mos. ii. 104-108
 29. IV. Congr. 168
 30. IV. Quis Her. 175
 31. IV. Quis Her. 218[N], Congr. 8
 31-40. VI. Mos. ii. 102f, 105
 36. IV. Quis Her. 216-218
 37. IV. Congr. 8 & n
 40. I. Leg. All. iii. 102, IV. Congr. 8n
- xxvi. 1. IV. Congr. 116 & n
 1-14. VI. Mos. ii. 84-88
 18-30. VI. Mos. ii. 77 & n-83
 33. V. Mut. 43f, 192
 36. V. Som. i. 207 & n, VI. Mos. ii. 87n
- xxvii. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 273-276
 1. III. Ebr. 85, 87

SCRIPTURE INDEX -EXOD. XXVIII. 30

- 9-18. VI. Mos. ii. 89-93
 9. V. Mut. 190
 16. VI. Mos. ii. 77n
 21. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 296-298
- xxviii. VI. Mos. ii. 109-135, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 83-97, 84n
1. V. Som. ii. 186
 4. III. Ebr. 85f, V. Mut. 43f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 85, 94
 6-8. VI. Mos. ii. 109, 111, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 86, 88n
 9-12. IV. Quis Her. 176, VI. Mos. ii. 112, 122f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 86, 94
 15, 16. VI. Mos. ii. 112, 125, 127f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 87f
 15-21. I. Leg. All. i. 81-84, IV. Quis Her. 178n, V. Fug. 185, VI. Mos. ii. 112 & n, 124-128, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 87f
 22, 24, 25 (EV 22-28). VI. Mos. ii. 113, 130
<sup>a</sup>26 (EV 30). I. Leg. All. iii. 118, 128f, 140, IV. Quis Her. 303 & n, VI. Mos. ii. 112, 113 & n, 117-135[N], VII. Spec. Leg. i. 84n, 88 & n-92, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 69
 27-30 (EV 31-34). IV. Mig. 102f, VI. Mos. ii. 110, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 93-97
 27 (EV 31). VI. Mos. ii. 118, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 85
<sup>a</sup>29, 30 (EV 33, 34). IV. Mig. 103, VI. Mos.

<sup>a</sup> At Leg. All. iii. 119 the reference is to the EV; at Mos. ii. 113 there is no exact reference; at Mos. ii. 114[N] and 115n LXX and EV are mixed, but it is indicated; at Spec. Leg. ii. 83 the reference is to the EV; at Spec. Leg. iv. 69 no reference is given. At Mig. 103f the references are to the LXX.

EXOD. XXVIII. 30- SCRIPTURE INDEX

- ii. 110, 119-121, 133-135, 117-135[N],
 VII. Spec. Leg. i. 84n, 93-95
 31 (EV 35). IV. Mig. 104
<sup>a</sup> 32 (EV 36). IV. Mig. 103, VI. Mos. ii. 114
 & [N], 115 & n, 132, 117-135[N]
 35, 36 (EV 39, 40). VI. Mos. ii. 116, 131-133
 36-39 (EV 40-43). VII. Spec. Leg. i. 82f
 37 (EV 41). VII. Spec. Leg. i. 79[N]
- xxix. VI. Mos. ii. 143-152
 4, 5. V. Som. i. 214f
 38, 39. IV. Quis Her. 174
 39. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 276n
 40. IV. Congr. 102
- xxx. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 273-276
 1, 2. III. Ebr. 85, 87, IV. Quis Her. 226,
 VI. Mos. ii. 101, 105
 7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 176n
 7, 8. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 171
 12-16. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 77 & n, 78
 12, 13. IV. Quis Her. 186f, VII. Spec. Leg. 33n
 15. IV. Quis Her. 189f
 19, 20. IV. Mig. 98n
 34, 35. IV. Quis Her. 196-200, 226
- xxx. 2-11. I. Leg. All. iii. 95f, 102f, III. Plant. 26f,
 V. Som. i. 206
 2, 3. I. Leg. All. iii. 95f, II. Gig. 23, V. Som.
 i. 207 & n
 14, 15. VI. Mos. ii. 217 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 249-251

<sup>a</sup> See note a on previous page.

SCRIPTURE INDEX -EXOD. XXXIV. 28

- xxxii. III. Ebr. 95 & [N]-110, VI. Mos. ii. 161-173, 270-274, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 124-127
2. II. Post. 166f
- 3, 4. II. Sac. 130, III. Ebr. 95 & [N], V. Fug. 90, VI. Mos. ii. 161f, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 125
16. IV. Mig. 85, Quis Her. 187
- 17-19. III. Ebr. 96 & [N]-98 & [N], 99, 104f, 121-124
20. II. Post. 158-165
- 26-29. II. Sac. 130, III. Ebr. 66-71, V. Fug. 90-92, VI. Mos. ii. 167-171, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 79 & n & [N], iii. 125f
32. IV. Quis Her. 19f, VI. Mos. ii. 166
- xxxiii. 7. I. Leg. All. ii. 54f, iii. 46-48, II. Det. 160, Gig. 54, III. Ebr. 100, 124
11. IV. Quis Her. 21, V. Som. i. 232, VI. Mos. i. 156, ii. 163, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 44
- 13-23. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 41-50
13. I. Leg. All. iii. 101-103, II. Post. 13-16, V. Mut. 7[N], 8-10, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 41 & n
15. IV. Mig. 170-172
17. III. Quod Deus 109f
18. V. Fug. 164, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 41n, 45
- 19-23. II. Post. 169, V. Fug. 164f, Mut. 8-10, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 41n, 46-50
- xxxiv. 12. IV. Mig. 8
16. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 29 & n
26. = xxiii. 19, q.v.
28. I. Leg. All. iii. 142

EXOD. XXXIV. 28- SCRIPTURE INDEX

- 28-35. VI. Mos. ii. 69, 70 & n xxxv. 2. VI. Mos. ii. 217 & n
 3. IV. Mig. 91, VI. Mos. ii. 219 & n, VII.
Spec. Leg. ii. 65, 251
 22, 23. IV. Mig. 97
- xxxvi. <sup>a</sup> 10 (EV xxxix. 3). II. Sac. 83, IV. Quis Her.
 131
<sup>b</sup> 15-21 (EV xxxix. 8-14). V. Som. i. 202 & n
<sup>b</sup> 38 (EV xxxix. 30). VI. Mos. ii. 114[N]
- xxxviii. <sup>c</sup> 13, 14 (EV xxxvii. 17). IV. Congr. 8n <sup>d</sup> 15-17 (EV xxxvii. 18-24). IV. Quis Her.
 218 & [N]-229
 26, 27 (EV xxxviii. 8). IV. Mig. 98 & n, VI.
Mos. ii. 136-140
 xl. 6, 26 (EV xl. 6, 29). VI. Mos. ii. 94 & n

LEVITICUS

For the title compare Plant. 26 and Fug. 170 & n

- i. 1. III. Plant. 26
 3-9. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 198-211
 3, 4. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 163-165
 6. II. Sac. 84f

<sup>a</sup> In both passages the LXX numeration is followed. At Quis Her. 131 there is a misprint; for xxxvii. 10 read xxxvi. 10.

<sup>b</sup> At Som. i. 202 the numeration is LXX (EV); in Mos. ii. 114[N] it is EV (LXX).

<sup>c</sup> In the footnote to Congr. 8, for Ex. xxxviii. 5f (xxxvii. 17) read xxxviii. 13, 14 (EV xxxvii. 17).

<sup>d</sup> The LXX differs considerably from the EV.

9. I. Leg. All. iii. 143f
 10, 11. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 163-165
 14. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 162
- ii. 1, 2. V. Som. ii. 71-74
 11. IV. Congr. 69, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 291-295, ii. 182-185
 13. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 289f
 14. II. Sac. 76 & n-87
- iii. II. Sac. 136-139, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 212-219
 16, 17. II. Post. 123
 17. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 123 & n, 124
- iv. 3. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 226 & nn-230 & n, 231-233
 6-12. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 231-233
 7-10. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 125
 11. II. Sac. 137[N]
 13, 22, 27. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 226 & nn-233
- v. 1. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 26 & n
 2. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 119n
 4, 5. V. Som. ii. 296 & n-299, 298n
 5-12. V. Mut. 233-251
 15, 16. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 234
- vi. 2-7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 235-239
 9. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 285-288
 10. V. Mut. 43f
 12, 13. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 285-288
 20. IV. Quis Her. 174, Congr. 103-105
 20-22. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 255f

- 25, 26, 29. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 240-246, 242[N]
<sup>a</sup> 38 (EV vii. 8). VII. Spec. Leg. i. 151
<sup>a</sup> 40 (EV vii. 10). IV. Quis Her. 195
- <sup>b</sup> vii. 2, 3, 5 (EV 12, 13, 15). VII. Spec. Leg. i. 224f
<sup>c</sup> 21 (EV 31). I. Leg. All. iii. 140 & n
 21-24 (EV 31-34). VII. Spec. Leg. i. 145 & n, 146
 24 (EV 34). I. Leg. All. iii. 133-137
- viii. VI. Mos. ii. 143-152
 21. IV. Mig. 67
 29. I. Leg. All. iii. 129-132, 140, 147, IV. Mig. 67
- ix. VI. Mos. ii. 143-152
 14. I. Leg. All. iii. 140-145, 147
 24. IV. Quis Her. 251
 34. VI. Mos. ii. 154-158
- x. 1-7. I. Leg. All. ii. 57f
 1, 2. I. Leg. All. ii. 57f, IV. Quis Her. 309, V. Fug. 59, Som. ii. 67 & n, 186, VI. Mos. ii. 158
 9. III. Ebr. 2
 6. V. Som. ii. 67
 8-11. III. Ebr. 127-143, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 98-100

<sup>a</sup> At Spec. Leg. i. 151 the reference is to the EV (LXX); at Quis Her. 195 it is to the LXX only.

<sup>b</sup> At Spec. Leg. i. 224f the numeration is that of the LXX (EV); but at i. 145f of the EV (LXX); while in Leg. All. iii. 133-137, 140 only the EV is given.

<sup>c</sup> In the footnote to Leg. All. iii. 140 there is a misprint. For Lev. vii. 3 read vii. 21 (EV 31).

16. V. Fug. 157, 160n
 19, 20. V. Fug. 159, 160 & n
 24. VI. Mos. ii. 153 & n-158
- xi. V. Som. i. 81, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. x n
 3. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 106 & n & [N]-109
 & n & [N]
 4. III. Agr. 131-145
 7. III. Agr. 144f
 9-12. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 110-112
 13-20. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 116 & n & [N]-118
 21. I. Leg. All. ii. 105-108, IV. Quis Her.
 239, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 114 & n
 22. I. Op. 163f, Leg. All. ii. 108
 42. I. Leg. All. iii. 139, IV. Mig. 64f, 69,
 VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 113 & n-115
- xiii. 3. II. Post. 47
 9-17. I. Leg. All. iii. 7n
 11-13. III. Quod Deus 127-130, Plant. 111
 14, 15. III. Quod Deus 123 & n-126
 22, 23. III. Sob. 49
- xiv. 34-36. III. Quod Deus 131-135 & [N]
 37-42. II. Det. 16
- xv. 18. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 63
 31. I. Leg. All. iii. 15
- xvi. 1-19. I. Leg. All. ii. 56
 2. II. Gig. 52 & [N]
 4. III. Ebr. 86, 88-90, V. Som. i. 216-218,
 VII. Spec. Leg. i. 84
 8. I. Leg. All. ii. 52, III. Plant. 61 & [N],
 IV. Quis Her. 179

- 9, 10. II. Post. 70 & [N]-72 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 188
10. III. Plant. 61[N]
- 12, 13. V. Som. ii. 232, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 72
16. IV. Quis Her. 113
17. IV. Quis Her. 84 & n, V. Som. ii. 188f, 231 & n-233
- 23, 24. III. Ebr. 86
30. I. Leg. All. iii. 174
31. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 194 & n
34. II. Gig. 52 & [N], VII. Spec. Leg. i. 72 & n
- xvii. 11. II. Det. 80-84, 92, IV. Quis Her. 55f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 171n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 122 & n, 123
14. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 122f
- xviii. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 12 & n-53, 29n
- 1-5. IV. Congr. 85-87
6. II. Gig. 32-52, 34nn
- 7-21. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13-45
7. V. Fug. 193, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13-19
8. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 20f
9. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22 & [N]-25
- 10-16. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 26 & n, 27n
18. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 27 & n, 28
- 19-21. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 32 & n, 33
22. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 37 & n-42, IX. Hypoth. 7. 1n
23. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43-45
- xix. 3. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 239-241
4. I. Leg. All. iii. 22, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 25-27

- 5-8. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 220-223 & n
 9. V. Som. ii. 23-25, 29, VIII. Virt. 90
 10. VIII. Virt. 91 & n-94, 104n
 11, 12. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 39 & [N], 40
 13. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 195f, Virt. 88 & n
 14. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 197 & n, 198
 15. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 44n, 72n
 16. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 183 & n-188
 18. IX. Hypoth. 7. 8n
 19. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 46-50
 23-25. III. Plant. 94-138, 123[N], VIII. Virt. 155-160
 23. I. Leg. All. i. 52, III. Plant. 94-116, VIII. Virt. 155, 156 & n, 157
 24. III. Plant. 117-131, V. Som. i. 33 & n-36, VI. Abr. 13 & n, 14, VIII. Virt. 158 & n-160
 25. III. Plant. 95 & [N], 132f, 136-138, 137[N]
 28. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 58 & n & [N]
 32. II. Sac. 77 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 238 & n
 33, 34. VIII. Virt. 102, 103 & n
 35, 36. IV. Quis Her. 162, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 193f, IX. Hypoth. 7. 8 & n
- xx. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 12n
 6. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 59n & [N]
 9. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 248 & n
 10. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 11, IX. Hypoth. 7. 1n
 13. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 37 & n-42, IX. Hypoth. 7. 1n
 15, 16. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43-45
 17. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22 & [N]-24 & n, 25

18. V. Fug. 188-191
 20. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 26 & n
 27. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 59n & [N]
- xxi. 1-3. V. Fug. 109n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 112
 5. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 58n
 7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 101-103, 108f
 10-12. V. Fug. 108-113, 109n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 113-116
 12, 13. V. Som. ii. 185
 13-15. V. Fug. 114, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 105-107, 110 & n, 111
 16, 17. IX. Hypoth. 7. 1n
 17-21. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 80 & [N], 81, 117 & n
 22. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 117 & n
- xxii. 4-7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 118f
 4. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 80-82
 6, 7. V. Som. i. 81 & n-84
 10. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 120 & n-124 & n, 125
 11. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 126-128
 12, 13. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 129f
 19-24. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 166
 27. VIII. Virt. 125-133
 28. VIII. Virt. 134-141
- xxiii. 5-8. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 150 & n-161
 5. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145[N]
 10-14. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 162 & n & [N]-176 & n, 175n. Cf. i. 181f
 10. V. Som. ii. 75-77
 15-21. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 162[N], 176[N], 183 & n-185
 22. VIII. Virt. 89

24. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 186n, ii. 188-192
 27. II. Post. 48, IV. Congr. 107, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 193-203
 32. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 194 & n
 33-38. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 204-213, 211n
 40-43. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 206-209, 214n
- xxiv. 3, 4. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 296-298
 5-8. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 172-176 & n, ii. 161
 7. VI. Mos. ii. 104 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 175 & n, IX. Vit. Cont. 81 & n
 10-15. V. Fug. 180n, VI. Mos. ii. 193-208
 15, 16. VI. Mos. ii. 203 & n, 204, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 53n
 17, 21. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 84
<sup>a</sup> 19-21. (the ius talionis), VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 84
- xxv. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 86-109, VIII. Virt. 97 & n, 98
 4-7. IV. Mig. 32[N], V. Fug. 173f, Mut. 260 & n
 4, 5. V. Mut. 260 & n
 6, 7. V. Fug. 174, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 105n, VIII. Virt. 104n
 8-17. II. Sac. 122, IV. Mig. 32[N], Congr. 108f, V. Fug. 170-174, Mut. 228, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 110-123, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 4 & nn & [N], Virt. 100f
 9. IV. Congr. 108 & n, 109
 10. II. Sac. 122, IV. Congr. 109, V. Mut. 228
 11. V. Fug. 170-172 & nn, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 110n

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Exod. xxi. 23-25, Deut. xix. 21.

- 14-16. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 111-113
 16-21. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 115
 23. II. Cher. 108-110, 119-123, 121[N],
 VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 113f
 29-31. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 116-119
 32-34. II. Sac. 127, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 120f
 35-37. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. (71-74), 122, VIII.
Virt. 82-87, 86n
 39, 40. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 122, VIII. Virt. 122
 & n & [N], 123
 44, 46. VII. Spec. Leg. 123, 124n
- xxvi. VIII. Intro. pp. xix(xx) n, xxi
 3, 4. VIII. Praem. 101
 5. VIII. Virt. 47 & n, Praem. 93, 101
 6. VIII. Praem. 87[N]
 7. VIII. Praem. 79, 94 & n
 8. VIII. Praem. 94
 10. II. Sac. 79 & n, IV. Quis Her. 279
 12. II. Sac. 87, V. Mut. 266, Som. i. 148f,
 ii. 248, VIII. Praem. 123 & n
 13. VIII. Praem. 124 & n
 16. VIII. Praem. 127, 143 & n, 144
 19. VIII. Praem. 130-132
 21-23. VIII. Praem. 148f
 25, 27. VIII. Praem. 147nn, 148
 29. VIII. Praem. 134
 31, 32. VIII. Praem. 133, 150
 33-35. VIII. Praem. 153 & n-161
 36. VIII. Praem. 148 & n
 37. VIII. Praem. 95n, 148 & n
 39. VIII. Praem. 149
 40-48. VIII. Praem. 163-172
 40. VIII. Praem. 163

41. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 304 & n
 42. VIII. Praem. 166 & n
 43. VIII. Praem. 153n
- xxvii. 2-8. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 32, 33 & n, 34
 9-13. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 35-37
 14, 15. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 37
 16-25. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 37n
 30, 32. II. Sac. 122[N], Post. 94-97, 95[N],
 IV. Congr. 94-97
 32, 33. I. Leg. All. iii. 110, II. Post. 94-97, 95[N], IV. Congr. 94

NUMBERS

- iii. 12, 13. II. Sac. 118-135 (esp. 118-126, 128, 134), IV. Quis Her. 124 & n, Congr. 98
- <sup>a</sup> iv. 3ff. V. Fug. 37
- v. 2. I. Leg. All. iii. 8
 12-31. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 53-63 & nn
 15. III. Plant. 108
 18. II. Cher. 14-17
 27, 28. I. Leg. All. iii. 148-150
- vi. 1-12. I. Leg. All. i. 17, III. Quod Deus 87-90,
Agr. 174-178, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 247-250
 2. I. Leg. All. i. 17, III. Quod Deus 87-90, 89[N], Agr. 175 & n, Ebr. 2, V. Som. ii.
 25, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 247 & n
- <sup>a</sup> viii. 24-26 rather than iv. 3ff at Fug. 37.

- 3, 4. III. Ebr. 2 & [N], VII. Spec. Leg. i. 249
 5. III. Quod Deus 88 & n, 89 & [N], V. Som. i. 253 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 250
 6. I. Leg. All. i. 17, III. Quod Deus 89 & [N], 90, Agr. 174-178, 175n, V. Fug. 115, Som. ii. 25
 7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 250
 12. I. Leg. All. i. 17 & n, III. Quod Deus 90 & n, Agr. 174-178
 13, 14. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 251-254
 20. III. Ebr. 2 & [N]
 21. V. Mut. 220-223
- vii. 10ff. IV. Quis Her. 195
 13ff. IV. Mig. 202
 14ff. IV. Congr. 114
- <sup>a</sup> viii. 24-26. II. Det. 62-68, V. Fug. 37
- ix. 1-14. VI. Mos. ii. 222-232
 3. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145[N]
 6-14. I. Leg. All. iii. 94 & n, VI. Mos. ii. 229-232
 x. 29, 30. III. Ebr. 38, 39 & n, 40
- xi. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 126-131
 4. IV. Mig. 155 & n-157
 5, 6. IV. Quis Her. 79f
 8. II. Sac. 86, Det. 118 & [N]
 12, 13. IV. Quis Her. 19f
 16. II. Sac. 77, III. Sob. 19f, IV. Mig. 201, V. Fug. 186
 17. II. Gig. 24-27

<sup>a</sup> See note on previous page.

20. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 130 & n
 21. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 146n
 22. IV. Quis Her. 19f
 23. II. Sac. 65f, V. Mut. 232
 31-34. VI. Mos. i. 209 & n, VIII. Gen. Introd.
 p. x n, Spec. Leg. iv. 126-131 & nn
- xii. 1. I. Leg. All. ii. 67
 6-8. I. Leg. All. iii. 103, IV. Quis Her. 262
 7. I. Leg. All. ii. 67, iii. 103, 204, 228 & n
 12. I. Leg. All. i. 76
 14. I. Leg. All. ii. 66f
- xiii. VI. Mos. i. 220-234
 17. V. Mut. 121-123
 18-21. V. Som. ii. 170 & n
 22. II. Post. 60-62
 24. V. Mut. 224-227, Som. ii. 171
- xiv. VI. Mos. i. 235f
 4. I. Leg. All. iii. 175
 9. II. Post. 122, V. Mut. 265, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 56[N]
 11, 12. V. Mut. 68
 20, 24. IV. Mig. 122, 123f
 44. II. Gig. 48f
- xv. 14-16. VIII. Virt. 104n
 18-20. II. Sac. 107, 108 & n, 109, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 132f, VIII. Virt. 95
 30. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 265 & n, VIII. Virt. 171-174
 32-36. VI. Mos. ii. 213, 214 & n-220, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 250 & n, 251

- xvi. 1-35. V. Fug. 145f, VI. Mos. ii. 275-287,
VIII. Praem. 74 & n-78
2. VIII. Praem. 75 & n
15. IV. Conf. 50 & n
19. VIII. Praem. 75
47, 48. IV. Quis Her. 201f, V. Som. ii. 234-237
48, 49. VI. Mos. i. 304[N]
- xvii. VI. Mos. ii. 174-179
- xviii. 8-19. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 152 & n
12. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 141 & n-144
13. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 134 & n
15, 16. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 139f
15-20. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 135f
19. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 152 & n
20. III. Plant. 63, 68-72
21. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 156
26, 28. V. Mut. 2, 191
26-28, 32. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 157 & n
- xix. 2-9. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 268 & n-272
9. V. Som. i. 214[N]
11-22. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 205 & nn-209
11, 12. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 261
14. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 206f
15. II. Det. 103, IV. Conf. 167, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 206
17, 18. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 262-266, iii. 59 & n, 205
- xx. 1-13. VI. Mos. i. 210f-213
14-21. VI. Mos. i. 239f-249
17-20. II. Post. 101f, Gig. 64 & n, III. Quod

- Deus* 142-180, IV. Mig. 146f, VIII.
Spec. Leg. iv. 168 & n
25. I. Leg. All. iii. 45
- xxi. 1-3. VI. Mos. i. 250 & n-254
 6-9. I. Leg. All. ii. 77-87, 78[N], 93
 8. I. Leg. All. ii. 79, 81, III. Quod Deus
 183, Agr. 95-99
 16-18. III. Ebr. 112, 113 & [N], V. Som. ii.
 270f, VI. Mos. i. 255 & n, 256
 20-25. VI. Mos. i. 258-262
 22. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 168n
 27-30. I. Leg. All. iii. 225-235
 30. I. Leg. All. iii. 229, 233-235, IV. Mig.
 99 & n, 100
- xxii. VI. Mos. i. 263-276
 28. VI. Mos. i. 263 & [N]
 29-31. II. Cher. 32-35 & n, 36, VI. Mos. i.
 263[N], 269-273
 31. III. Quod Deus 181-183
 41. VI. Mos. i. 276 & n
- xxiii. VI. Mos. i. 277-282
 7-11. IV. Conf. 159, Mig. 113f
 7, 8. II. Det. 71, IV. Conf. 64-66, 72
 15, 17. VI. Mos. i. 282n, 283n
 19. II. Sac. 94, III. Quod Deus 52-69, 53[N], IV. Conf. 98, Mig. 113f, V. Som. i. 234-
 237, VI. Mos. i. 283 & nn
- xxiv. VI. Mos. i. 282-293
 7. VI. Mos. i. 290 & n, VIII. Praem. 95
 & n

- 7, 8. VI. Mos. i. 290 & n
 16. V. Mut. 202f
 20. I. Leg. All. iii. 187
- xxv. VI. Mos. i. 295-304, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 56 & n, 57, VIII. Introd. pp. xiii & n, xiv, Virt. 34 & n & [N]-41
1. V. Som. i. 88-91
 2. IV. Conf. 55[N]
 3. V. Mut. 107
 4. V. Som. i. 88-91, 89n
 6. VI. Mos. i. 302 & n
 7, 8. I. Leg. All. iii. 242, II. Post. 182-185, III. Ebr. 73 & n & [N]-76, IV. Conf. 57, V. Mut. 108, VI. Mos. i. 303, VIII. Virt. 34[N]
 9. VI. Mos. i. 303, 304 & n & [N], VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 126n, VIII. Virt. 41 & n
 12, 13. I. Leg. All. iii. 242, II. Post. 183, III. Ebr. 74-76, IV. Conf. 57, V. Mut. 108, VI. Mos. i. 304
 14, 15. VI. Mos. i. 304n
 18. VI. Mos. i. 304n, VIII. Virt. 34[N]
- xxvii. 1-11. VI. Mos. ii. 234-245
1. IV. Mig. 205
 3. IV. Mig. 206, VI. Mos. ii. 235 & n
 7. VI. Mos. ii. 239f, 243 & n
 8-11. VI. Mos. ii. 243 & n-245, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 124-126
 16, 17. II. Post. 67-69, III. Agr. 44-49, VIII. Virt. 58-65
 19. VIII. Virt. 70f
 22, 23. VIII. Virt. 66-68

- xxviii. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 190 & n-193, ii. 42 & n
 2. I. Leg. All. iii. 196, II. Cher. 84-124 (esp. 84 & [N]-90, 107-109, 113, 118f), Sac. 111, III. Quod Deus 6-9, IV. Mig. 142, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 42n
 3, 4. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 169 & n, 276 & n
 6. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 169n
 9, 10. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 170
 11-14. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 177-179. Cf. ii. 140-144
 15, 22, 30. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 190n
 17-24. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 181f. Cf. ii. 150-161
 26-31. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 183-185. Cf. ii. 179-187
- xxix. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 186-193
 1-6. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 180 & n. Cf. Decal. 159[N]
 5. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 190n
 7-11. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 186 & n-188, ii. 193-203
 11. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 190n
 12-36. IV. Mig. 202, V. Fug. 186, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 189, ii. 204-213
 22, 25, 28, 31, 34, 38. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 190n
 35. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 211 & n-213
- xxx. I. Leg. All. ii. 63, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 24f
 1-3 (EV 1, 2). IX. Hypoth. 7. 5n
 4-17 (EV 3-16). I. Leg. All. ii. 63 & [N], VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 24
 10 (EV 9). I. Leg. All. ii. 63, II. Det. 147-149
 10-17 (EV 9-16). VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 25

- xxxi. VI. Mos. i. 295-299, 305-318
 1-18. VIII. Virt. 34 & n & [N], 42-50
 8. V. Mut. 203
 16. VI. Mos. i. 294-299, 305, VIII. Virt. 34[N]
 17. VIII. Virt. 43 & n
 26. I. Leg. All. ii. 35
 28ff. IV. Mig. 139, Quis Her. 120-122, V. Som. ii. 29
 48. III. Ebr. 114-121 & [N], IV. Mig. 206[N]
 49. III. Ebr. 114 & [N]-121, IV. Conf. 55 & n, V. Mut. 109, VI. Mos. i. 309, VIII. Virt. 44 & n & [N]
 50. III. Ebr. 114-121

 xxxii. VI. Mos. i. 319-333
 23. VI. Mos. i. 326 & n

 xxxv. 2-8. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 158
 6. II. Sac. 128-130, V. Fug. 86-100, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 158, iii. 123-136
 8. IV. Quis Her. 194
 9-28. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 158-161, iii. 123-136
 11-15. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 123-136
 12. V. Fug. 100, IX. Flacc. 159n
 14. V. Fug. 87, 103
 15. V. Fug. 102, VIII. Virt. 104n
 16-21. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 84, 92 & n
 20-23. V. Fug. 102, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 92 & n
 25, 32. V. Fug. 87, 106-118, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 123, 131-136 & n & [N], 150n
 28. VII. Introd. p. xiii n, Spec. Leg. iii. 123

SCRIPTURE INDEX -DEUT. IV. 19

- 30, 31. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 84 & n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 53f
 31-33. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 150 & n
 32. See 25
- xxxvi. 6-13. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82[N], 126f
 9. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 128n
 11. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 126n

DEUTERONOMY <sup>a</sup>

- VII. Spec. Leg. i. 299n, 313n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 136n, Praem. 4-6[N]
- i. 17. IV. Quis Her. 157, V. Mut. 104n, Som. ii. 24, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 70 & n, 71
 31. II. Sac. 101
 43, 44. III. Quod Deus 99 & n-103
- iv. 1. V. Mut. 23f
 2. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 143-148
 4. V. Fug. 56f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 31, 345 & n
 6, 7. IV. Mig. 56-59, VIII. Praem. 81-84 & n
 12. IV. Mig. 5n, 48 & n-52
 19. IV. Conf. 173 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 15-20

<sup>a</sup> Philo uses Δευτερονόμιον (Leg. All. iii. 174, Quod Deus 50), προτρεπτικοί (sc. λόγοι, Spec. Leg. iv. 131n) (Agr. 78, 172, Fug. 142, Mut. 42, 236, Virt. 47 & n, Fug. 170 & n), παρανέσεις (Agr. 84, Spec. Leg. iv. 131), Ἐπινομίς (Quis Her. 162, 250, Spec. Leg. iv. 160 & n & [N]).

- 29, 30. V. Fug. 142
 39. I. Leg. All. iii. 4, 82, IV. Mig. 182f
- v. 5. IV. Quis Her. 205f, V. Som. ii. 228-234
 6-21. See Exod. xx
 14. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 70 & n
 18. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 8n
 29. II. Sac. 136[N]
 31. II. Sac. 8 & n, Post. 28-30, Gig. 48, 49
 & n, III. Quod Deus 23-26, IV. Conf.
 31f, V. Som. ii. 227, 228n
- vi. 4. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 136n
 6-9. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 136 & n, 137 & [N]- 142
 10, 11. III. Quod Deus 94-98, V. Fug. 175f
 13. I. Leg. All. iii. 208
- vii. 3. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 29 & n
 7, 8. IV. Mig. 60f
 13. VIII. Praem. 107
 15. VIII. Praem. 119 & n-122
 20. VIII. Praem. 96
- viii. 2. IV. Congr. 170-174
 3. I. Leg. All. iii. 174, 175 & [N], 176
 5. III. Quod Deus 52-69, V. Som. i. 237
 7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 303 & n, 304
 12-14. II. Sac. 54f, VIII. Virt. 163f
 15. I. Leg. All. ii. 83-87 & [N], V. Som. ii.
 222, VI. Mos. i. 210 & n, VII. Decal.
 16 & n
- ix. 5. II. Sac. 54, 57

SCRIPTURE INDEX -DEUT. XII. 32

- x. 9. I. Leg. All. ii. 51f, III. Plant. 62-72, IV. Congr. 134 & [N], V. Fug. 102, V. Som. i. 159 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 131n
 12, 13. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 299f
 14, 15. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 302f
 16. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 304 & n-306
 17. IV. Conf. 173 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 307
 17, 18. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 176-182, Virt. 102f
 18, 19. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 308-310, VIII. Virt. 102f
 20. IV. Mig. 132
 21. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 311
 22. IV. Mig. 201
- xi. 11. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 303 & n, 304
 13, 14. VIII. Praem. 101
 18, 19. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 136 & n, 137 & [N]-141
 26. VIII. Praem. 79n
- xii. 5-7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 67
 6. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 83[N]
 8. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 131
 11-14. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 67
 17. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 67, 83[N]
 18. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 67
 23. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 122n
 26. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 83[N]
 28. V. Mut. 42
 29-31. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 312
 31. VI. Abr. 181
 32. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 143-148

- xiii. 1-11. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 315-318
 4. IV. Mig. 131
 6. IV. Quis Her. 83
 6-11. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55[N]
 12-17. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55 & n & [N]
 16. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 222n
 18. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 318 & n & [N]
- xiv. VIII. Gen. Introd. p. x n
 1. IV. Conf. 145, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 58n,
 318 & n & [N]
 4-7. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 105, 106 & n & [N]-
 109 & n & [N]
 9, 10. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 110-112
 12-19 (EV 12-20). VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 116 &
 n-118
 20 (EV 21). VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 119 & n-121,
Virt. 142-144
- xv. 1. VIII. Virt. 122[N]
 1-3. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 71-73
 6. VIII. Praem. 107
 8. II. Post. 142-145
 9. VIII. Virt. 122[N]
 10. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 72, VIII. Virt. 83n
 12-18. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82-85
 12. (Spec. Leg. ii. 79-81, Virt. 122n)
- xvi. 3. IV. Congr. 161, 167, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 158 & n
 16. I. Leg. All. iii. 11
 19. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 44n, 70 & n, 71
 20. II. Cher. 15, Det. 18-21, VIII. Spec. Leg.
 iv. 44n, 66 & n, 169

21. I. Leg. All. i. 48-51, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 74 & n
22. V. Som. i. 244-246
- xvii. 2-5. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 255 & n, 256
 4-7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55[N]
 6. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 53 & n, 54
 6-13. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 55 & n
 8, 9. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188-192, 190n & [N]
 15-17. III. Agr. 84-93, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 151-158 & nn & [N], 159
 18-20. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 160-169 & nn
- xviii. 1, 2. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 131 & n
 3. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 147-150
 4. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 134 & n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 98 & n, 99
 10-12. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 59[N], 60 & n
- xix. 5. V. Fug. 77f, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 120[N]
 14. II. Post. 89, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 149 & n, 150
 15. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 53 & n, 54
<sup>a</sup> 21. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 181 & n-204, 201n
- xx. 1. III. Agr. 78-83, IV. Mig. 62f
 5-7. III. Agr. 140-168, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xiii n, VIII. Virt. 28 & [N]-31, 33n
 8. VIII. Virt. 23 & n-25
 10-18. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 219 & n-225, Virt. 109
<sup>a</sup> Cf. Exod. xxi. 23-25, Lev. xxiv. 19-21.

- 19, 20. III. Agr. 12-19, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 226-229, Virt. 149 & n-154
- xxi. 10-13. VIII. Virt. 110-114
14. II. Cher. 121[N], VIII. Virt. 115 & n & [N]
- 15-17. I. Leg. All. ii. 48, II. Sac. 19-44, III. Sob. 21-25, IV. Quis Her. 47-49 & n, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xiii n, Spec. Leg. ii. 133-139 & [N]
17. II. Post. 63
- 18-21. III. Ebr. 13-98 (esp. 14 & [N]-34, 29n, 30[N], 93-95), V. Mut. 206, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xiii n, Spec. Leg. ii. 232 & n & [N]
- 22, 23. II. Post. 26f, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 152 & n
- xxii. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 12n
- 1-3. VIII. Virt. 96, 117n, IX. Hypoth. 7. 6n
4. VIII. Virt. 116n, IX. Hypoth. 7. 9[N]
5. VIII. Virt. 18-21
6. IX. Hypoth. 7. 9 & n
8. III. Agr. 169, 170 & n, 171, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 149 & n & [N]
- 9-11. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 46 & n-50, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 203 & n-217 & n, 218, Virt. 146 & n, 147
- 13-21. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 79 & n-82 & n
22. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 11
- 23-27. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 72 & [N]-78, IX. Hypoth. 7. 1n
- 28, 29. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 65 & n-70 & n
- xxiii. 1. III. Quod Deus 111, Ebr. 213 & [N], IV. Mig. 69, V. Mut. 204f, Som. ii. 184,

SCRIPTURE INDEX -DEUT. XXV. 4

- VII. Spec. Leg. i. 325, 327 & [N]-330, iii. 37n
2. I. Leg. All. iii. 8, II. Post. 177, IV. Conf. 144, V. Mut. 204f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 326, 331f
- 3, 4. I. Leg. All. iii. 81, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 333 & n & [N]-344, VIII. Virt. 105n
5. IV. Mig. 115-117
- 7, 8. VIII. Virt. 28[N], 105 & n-108
12. I. Leg. All. iii. 151f
13. I. Leg. All. ii. 27-30, iii. 153-159
15. 16. I. Leg. All. iii. 194 & n, VIII. Virt. 124 & n
17. IV. Mig. 224, VI. De Jos. 43 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 319 & n-323, iii. 37-38[N], 51 & n & [N]
18. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 104, 280-284, 319 & n-323
19. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 74 & n-78, VIII. Virt. 82-85
- 21-23. II. Sac. 53f, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 38 & n, IX. Hypoth. 7. 5n
- xxiv. 3. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 72n
4. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 30 & n & [N], 31
6. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 204 & [N]
7. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 13 & n-19
- 10, 11. VIII. Virt. 89
- 14-16. V. Mut. 104n
- 14, 15. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 195f, Virt. 88 & n
16. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 153-168
- 20, 21. VIII. Virt. 91 & n-94
- xxv. 4. VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xxii n, Virt. 145

- 5-10. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 27n
 11, 12. V. Som. ii. 68f, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 175-180, & nn, 244 [N]
 13-16. IV. Quis Her. 162, V. Som. ii. 193f, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 193f, IX. Hypoth. 7. 8n
 17-19. III. Ebr. 24, IV. Mig. 143f, VI. Mos. i. 214n
- xxvi. 1-11. V. Som. ii. 272f, VII. Gen. Introd. pp. xvi, xvii n, xviii n, Spec. Leg. i. 134 & n, ii. 42n, 215 & n-222, VIII. Virt. 95
 13. V. Som. ii. 272f
 17, 18. VIII. Virt. 184-186
- xxvii. 9. IV. Quis Her. 10-14, V. Som. i. 193, ii. 263
 11-13. IV. Quis Her. 177, V. Fug. 73f
 15. I. Leg. All. iii. 36
 16. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 248 & n
 17. I. Leg. All. iii. 107, II. Post. 84, 89
 18. I. Leg. All. iii. 107, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 198-202
 24. I. Leg. All. iii. 108
- xxviii. VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xix(xx) n, xxi
 1-14. VIII. Praem. 79
 1, 2. VIII. Virt. 47 & n, 48, Praem. 79 & n
 3, 4. VIII. Praem. 107
 6. VIII. Praem. 113
 7. VIII. Virt. 47 & n, 48, Praem. 79, 94
 8. VIII. Praem. 103, 104 & n, 105

12. I. Leg. All. iii. 104, III. Quod Deus 156,
IV. Quis Her. 76
13. VIII. Praem. 124f
14. II. Post. 102
- 16-20. VIII. Praem. 141 & n, 142
22. VIII. Praem. 143 & n, 144
- 23, 24. VIII. Praem. 130-133
27. VIII. Praem. 143 & n, 144
- 28, 29. IV. Quis Her. 250
- 30, 31. VIII. Praem. 139 & n
32. VIII. Praem. 140n, 143 & nn
34. VIII. Praem. 139
35. VIII. Praem. 143n, 145 & n
37. VIII. Praem. 150 & n
- 38, 39. VIII. Praem. 128
- 40, 42. VIII. Praem. 129 & n
43. VIII. Praem. 152 & n
44. VIII. Praem. 124n
48. VIII. Praem. 137, 138 & nn
- 49-57. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 313n
- 53-57. VIII. Praem. 134
61. VIII. Praem. 150
- 65, 66. II. Post. 24f, VIII. Praem. 151 & n
67. VIII. Praem. 151 & n, IX. Flacc. 167
& n
- xxix. 4. V. Fug. 123
11. VIII. Virt. 104n
29. II. Cher. 16
- xxx. 1-10. VIII. Praem. 163-172
- 3-5. VIII. Praem. 164f, 168
4. IV. Conf. 197, VIII. Praem. 115 & n-117

7. VIII. Praem. 169-171
 9, 10. V. Som. ii. 175, 180
 11-14. II. Post. 84-88, V. Mut. 236-239, Som. ii. 180, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 301, VIII. Virt. 183, 184 & n, Praem. 80f, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 68 & n, 70[N]
 15. III. Quod Deus 50, V. Fug. 58
 19. II. Post. 69, III. Quod Deus 50
 20. II. Post. 12, 69, IV. Congr. 134, V. Fug. 58
- xxxī. 7. VIII. Virt. 69
 12. VIII. Virt. 104n
 23. VIII. Virt. 69
 28. VIII. Virt. 75 & n
- <sup>a</sup> xxxīi. VIII. Virt. 72-75
 4-6. III. Sob. 10f
 4. V. Mut. 182f
 6. IV. Conf. 145
 7-9. II. Post. 89-92, III. Plant. 58-60
 9. II. Post. 167-169
 13. II. Det. 114-118
 15. II. Post. 121, IV. Congr. 160
 18. IV. Conf. 145
 21. VIII. Virt. 75n
 32, 33. III. Ebr. 222f, V. Som. ii. 191
 34, 35. I. Leg. All. iii. 105f
 34-43. VIII. Virt. 75n
 39. V. Som. ii. 297
 43. VIII. Virt. 73 & n

<sup>a</sup> Called "The Greater Song" (as distinct from "The Song" of Exod. xv), I. Leg. All. iii. 105 & n, II. Post. 167 & n, III. Plant. 59, Sob. 10 & n, V. Mut. 182 & n, Som. ii. 191; cf. VIII. Virt. 72.

SCRIPTURE INDEX

- xxxiii. VI. Mos. ii. 288-291, VIII. Virt. 77-79
1. V. Mut. 25f, 125-128
3, 4. IV. Mig. 130
6. V. Mut. 210 & n-213
8. V. Mut. 200
9, 10. I. Leg. All. ii. 51, II. Det. 67f, III. Ebr.
72, IV. Congr. 133 & [N], 134, V. Fug.
89, Mut. 127 & n
17. VI. Mos. i. 290n
- xxxiv. VI. Mos. ii. 288-291
4. IV. Mig. 44-47
5, 6. II. Sac. 8-10
7. II. Gig. 56
10. IV. Quis Her. 262

JOSHUA

- i. 5. IV. Conf. 166

JUDGES

- viii. 9. IV. Conf. 128-132, 131n
xviii. 12. I. Leg. All. ii. 44[N]

RUTH

- ii. 14, 16. II. Post. 57[N]

1 SAMUEL

- i. 11. (LXX 1 Kings) III. Ebr. 143n
III. Ebr. 143 & n, V. Som. i. 254 & [N]

SCRIPTURE INDEX

14. III. Ebr. 146 & n
15. III. Ebr. 149 & n-152, 150[N]
27, 28. III. Quod Deus 5-9, 6[N]
ii. 5. III. Quod Deus 10-15, 13n, V. Mut. 143, 144 & [N], VIII. Praem. 159 & n, 160
iv. 10. VI. Mos. i. 304[N]
v. 28. V. Som. i. 254[N]
ix. 9. III. Quod Deus 139, IV. Mig. 38, Quis
Her. 78
x. 22, 23. IV. Mig. 196f

1 KINGS

- (LXX 3 Kings)
i. 33. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 47n
xv. 11. IV. Conf. 149 & [N]
xvii. 10. III. Quod Deus 136, 138
18. III. Quod Deus 138
xxii. 17. VIII. Virt. 58n

2 KINGS

- (LXX 4 Kings)
iv. 1. VIII. Virt. 122[N] xviii. 3. IV. Conf. 149 & [N]
xx. 9-11. II. Post. 113[N]

1 CHRONICLES

- vii. 14. IV. Congr. 43n
xxi. 22. VI. Mos. i. 304[N]

SCRIPTURE INDEX

2 CHRONICLES

xix. 3. IV. Mig. 5n

EZRA

viii. 2. IV. Conf. 149[N]

JOB

v. 23. VIII. Praem. 87[N]
xiv. 4. V. Mut. 48f xxxviii. 32. VIII. Praem. 65[N]

PSALMS

IX. Vit. Cont. 25[N], 80[N]

<sup>a</sup> xxii. 1 (EV xxiii. 1). III. Agr. 50-54, V. Mut. 115 <sup>a</sup> xxvi. 1 (EV xxvii. 1). V. Som. i. 75
xxx. 19 (EV xxxi. 18). IV. Conf. 39
<sup>a</sup> xxxvi. 4 (EV xxxvii. 4). III. Plant. 39, V. Som. ii.
242

<sup>a</sup> The numeration given by the Translators for these Psalms has been primarily that of the EV. In many cases the LXX is given in brackets. In all the others the LXX has been given, with or without the EV in brackets.

In a few cases there is a difference of one verse or more between the LXX and the EV, so that the references given by the Translators are slightly inaccurate. I have thought it sufficient to indicate these in the list of corrigenda and simply to print the correct numeration above.

SCRIPTURE INDEX

- xl. 1-3 (EV xli. 1-3). IX. Hypoth. 7. 6n
 xli. 4 (EV xlii. 3). IV. Mig. 157
<sup>a</sup> xlv. 5 (EV xlvi. 4). IV. Conf. 108 n & [N], V.
     Som. ii. 246-254, 300[N]
     liii. 8 (EV liv. 6). VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 40[N]
     lxi. 11 (EV lxii. 11). III. Quod Deus 82 & n-85 <sup>a</sup> lxiv. 10 (EV lxv. 9). V. Som. ii. 245 lxxiv. 9 (EV lxxv. 8). III. Quod Deus 77-82 lxxvii. 49 (EV lxxviii. 49). II. Gig. 16f lxxxix. 6 (EV lxxx. 5). IV. Mig. 157 & n
     7 (EV lxxx. 6). IV. Conf. 52-54
<sup>a</sup> lxxxiii. 11 (EV lxxxiv. 10). IV. Quis Her. 290 & [N]
<sup>a</sup> lxxxvi. 3 (EV lxxxvii. 3). IV. Conf. 108n
     xc. 11, 12 (EV xci. 11, 12). III. Quod Deus 182
<sup>a</sup> xciii. 9 (EV xciv. 9). III. Plant. 29
     c. 1 (EV ci. 1). III. Quod Deus 74-76
     cv. 28 (EV cvi. 28). IV. Conf. 55[N]
     <sup>a</sup> 30 (EV cvi. 30). VI. Mos. i. 304[N]
<sup>a</sup> cxiii. 13-16 (EV cxv. 5-8). VII. Decal. 74
     <sup>a</sup> 16 (EV cxv. 8). VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 255 & n, 256
     25 (EV cxv. 17). V. Fug. 59

PROVERBS

- IX. Vit. Cont. 25[N]
- i. 8. III. Ebr. 84 & [N]
 iii. 4. III. Ebr. 84 & n
     11, 12. IV. Congr. 177
 iv. 3. III. Ebr. 84
 viii. 22. III. Ebr. 31 & [N], VIII. Virt. 62 & n

<sup>a</sup> See note on previous page.

SCRIPTURE INDEX

- xi. 1. IX. Hypoth. 7. 8n
xvi. 11. IX. Hypoth. 7. 8n xvii. 2. IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5(6)n
xix. 17. IX. Hypoth. 7. 6n

ECCLESIASTES

- IX. Vit. Cont. 25[N]

SONG OF SOLOMON

- IX. Vit. Cont. 25[N]

ISAIAH

- v. 7. V. Som. ii. 172f
vi. 9. I. Leg. All. ii. 69
xi. VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xxii
6-9. VIII. Praem. 87 & n-90
xlviii. 22. V. Mut. 169
1. 4. IV. Quis Her. 25 & [N], VIII. Praem.
87[N]
liv. 1. VIII. Praem. 158 & n & [N], 159 & n
lxvi. 1. IV. Conf. 98
20. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 47n

JEREMIAH

- ii. 13. V. Fug. 197-201
34. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 7[N]
iii. 4. II. Cher. 49 & [N]-52

SCRIPTURE INDEX

- xv. 10. IV. Conf. 44 & [N]-51
xix. 6. I. Leg. All. ii. 44[N]
xxxiv. 7 (EV xxvii. 9). VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 51n xxxvi. 8 (EV xxix. 8). VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 51n

EZEKIEL

- xviii. 6. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 32n

HOSEA

- ii. 18. VIII. Praem. 87[N]
xiv. 9, 10. III. Plant. 138, V. Mut. 139f

OBADIAH

18. VI. Mos. i. 179n

ZECHARIAH

- vi. 12. IV. Conf. 62f

WISDOM OF SOLOMON

- xi. 17. IX. Act. 19n

3 MACCABEES

- vii. 10-15. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55[N]

SCRIPTURE INDEX

TOBIT

- i. 17ff. IX. Hypoth. 7. 7n
iv. IX. Hypoth. 7. 6n

JUBILEES

- VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvii

NEW TESTAMENT

- I. Gen. Introd. p. xx & n, Leg. All.
iii. 16[N], II. Det. Introd. p. 200, VII.
Spec. Leg. iii. 100[N], VIII. Spec. Leg.
iv. 37n, IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 107,
Hypoth. 7. 6n

MATTHEW

- i. 3. VIII. Virt. 221[N]
ii. 1-12. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100[N]
iii. 8, 9. VIII. Introd. p. xvii
v. 6. I. Gen. Introd. p. xx(xxi) n
34, 35. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 5n
38. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 182n
vi. 2. X. Legatio 275n
6. IX. Vit. Cont. 25[N]
20. I. Gen. Introd. p. xx(xxi) n
vii. 12. IX. Hypoth. 7. 6n
xvii. 24. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 33n
xxiii. 5. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 137n

SCRIPTURE INDEX

MARK

vii. 10ff. IX. Hypoth. 7. 5[N]

LUKE

vi. 39. III. Sob. 50[N]
xv. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 23n xviii. 1-8. IX. De Prov. fr. 2, 4[N]
xix. 21. V. Fug. 25[N]
IX. Hypoth. 7. 6n

JOHN

i. 1-14. I. Gen. Introd. pp. xx, xxi
ii. 10. III. Plant. Introd. p. 209n, V. Fug. 32n
vii. 37. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 211n
xvi. 8. III. Quod Deus 125n
xxi. 11. VI. Mos. ii. 79[N]

ACTS

vi. 12. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55[N]
vii. 2. VI. Abr. 62n
20. VI. Mos. i. 9n
22. VI. Mos. i. 23n
58, 59. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55[N]
viii. 9ff. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100[N]
xii. IX. Flacc. 25[N]
2, 3. IX. Flacc. 25[N]
4. IX. Flacc. 111n
xiii. 6-11. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100[N]

SCRIPTURE INDEX

- xiv. 5, 19. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55[N]
xv. 29. VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 122n xxvi. 10. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55[N] xxvii. 9. VI. Mos. ii. 23n

1 CORINTHIANS

- i. 28. I. Gen. Introd. p. xx(xxi) n
ix. 9. VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xv
x. 8. VI. Mos. i. 304[N]
xvi. 22. IX. Flacc. 39n

2 CORINTHIANS

- vi. 16. VIII. Praem. 123[N]
ix. 6. I. Leg. All. iii. 210n
xi. 32. IX. Flacc. 74n

GALATIANS

- iii. 13. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 151n

EPHESIANS

- ii. 3. II. Post. 130n

1 TIMOTHY

- v. 18. VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xv

SCRIPTURE INDEX

HEBREWS

- II. Det. Introd. p. 200
iv. 12. I. Gen. Introd. p. xx(xxi) n
vi. 13. I. Gen. Introd. p. xx(xxi) n
ix. 7. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 72n
13. V. Som. i. 214[N]
xi. 5. V. Mut. 38n, VI. Abr. 17n & [N],
VIII. Praem. 15n
23. IV. Conf. 106[N], Mig. 142n, VI. Mos.
i. 9n
xii. 16. VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 37-38[N]

JAMES

- i. 26. I. Gen. Introd. p. xx(xxi) n
ii. 23. III. Sob. 56[N]
iii. 10. I. Gen. Introd. p. xx(xxi) n

1 JOHN

- II. Det. Introd. p. 200

REVELATION

- ii. 17. V. Som. i. 186[N]
iii. 18. V. Som. i. 164n xiii. 18. VI. Mos. ii. 79[N]
xxi. 10ff. V. Som. i. 186[N]

INDEX OF NAMES

Aaron : ' mountainous,' the reason whose thoughts are lofty and sublime (Ebr. 128) ; Speech (Leg. All. iii. 103, Mig. 79, 169 & n) or Word (Leg. All. iii. 45, 118 (ἱερός λ.) Quis Her. 201f, Mut. 208), the logos in utterance (προφορικός, Mig. 78, Det. 39, 126), the perfect interpreter (Det. 132, cf. 40, Mig. 78, 81, 84, Mut. 208, Mos. i. 84). He is also the man of gradual improvement (ὁ προκόπτων, Leg. All. iii. 140, 144, Som. ii. 234, 237), training or practising (ἀσκητής, opp. to τέλειος, Leg. All. iii. 144), but falling short of consummation (Som. ii. 234-237), and so inferior to Moses (ib. ; δεύτερος, Leg. All. iii. 128, 132), whom he is predisposed to obey (Mos. i. 85)

Aaron, Speech, is the brother of Moses, Mind (Det. 39f, 126-135, Mig. 78-84, cf. Mut. 208), the logical nature being the one mother of them both (Mig. 78-84, cf. 168f). On the other hand, he is contrasted with Moses because he receives a less direct revelation (Leg. All. iii. 103, Mig. 81) and access (Gig. 52), he is instable (ib., Som. ii. 234-237), he is not whole-hearted in rejecting the passions (Leg. All. iii. 128, 132, 134) and pleasure (140), he is subject to toil and discipline (135, 144), a learner, imperfect (135, Som. ii. 234-237), making only gradual improvement (see above)

INDEX OF NAMES

He is a Levite ('speech in deep earnest,' Det. 132), and head of its priesthood (Gig. 52 & [N], Ebr. 135-138). His mistakes are exposed (Leg. All. iii. 103, Fug. 159), but there is silence about his making the Golden Calf (Mos. ii. 161ff), unless he is referred to in Ebr. 95f, 108f, 124-126. But he is an example of good voluntary action (Post. 75f), and his aim is Truth, which he attains at death (Leg. All. iii. 45)

I. Leg. All. iii. 45, 103, 118-129, 140, 144, II. Det. 39f, 126-132, 135, Post. 75f, Gig. 52 & [N], III. Ebr. 95f, 108-110, 124-138, IV. Mig. 78-84, 168f, Quis Her. 195, 201f, V. Fug. 159, Mut. 207f, Som. ii. (187-189), 234-237, VI. Mos. i. 84-86, 90f, 97-113, 126-129, Mos. ii. 142-154, 161ff, 176-186, 278, VIII. Praem. 78

Abae : IX. Prov. 2. 33 & n

Abel : 'one who refers all things to God' (Sac. 2, 51, Det. 32), the God-loving principle or creed (φιλόθεον δόγμα, Sac. 3, Det. 32, 38, 78, 103), the good conviction (καλὸν δόγμα, Sac. 5), the type of the good in man (Det. 78), the noble (Det. 69), virtue (Sac. 14), holiness, the perfect good (Sac. 10, cf. Det. 62). In Mig. 74 Philo derives Abel from a different Hebrew root ('mourn') : he is one to whom things mortal are a grief and things immortal are full of happiness

He is contrasted with Cain, the self-loving principle (Sac. 3, 5, Det. 32, 49), with whom he should not have fought as he had never learned the arts of speech (Det. 37, Mig. 74). Though he was killed, yet he is alive with the happy life in God (Det. 48f, 69, Post. 38f, cf. 173). He finds a new birth, as it were, in Seth (Post. 124)

INDEX OF NAMES

II. Cher. 40, Sac. 1-3, 10f, 14, 51f, 88, 136, Det. 1, 32, 37, 42, 45-49, 57 & [N], 61, 68f, 78f, 93, 100, 103, Post. 10, 38f, 49, 124, 170-173, (III. Agr. 21), IV. Conf. 124 & [N], Mig. 74, Congr. 54 [N], VI. Abr. 12n & [N], VIII. Virt. 199

Abihu : see Nadab

Abimelech : III. Plant. 169 (Gen. xxvi), IV. Quis Her. 258, V. Som. i. 1-2[N] (Gen. xx), VI. Abr. 92-106

Abraham : Abram is πατήρ μετέωρος, the 'father high-soaring' or 'uplifted father,' signifying the mind which surveys the supra-terrestrial, called 'father' because it cares for its tenets (Abr. 82), or because it is the father of our compound being (Gig. 62, cf. Leg. All. iii. 83), or because it is productive of some wisdom (Mut. 68). This is the mind of the lover of learning, the meteorologist or astrologer, given to nature-study (Gig. 62f, Mut. 70f, 76, cf. Abr. 82, 84), associated with Abram's residence in Chaldaea and contrasted with his departure from there and his new name (Leg. All. iii. 83f,<sup>a</sup> cf. 244, Cher. 4, Gig. 62, Mut. 66-71, 76, Abr. 81-84)

Abraham is πατήρ ἐκλεκτός ἡχοῦς, the 'elect father of sound,' signifying the good man's reasoning (Gig. 64, cf. Cher. 7), because reason (Gig. 64) or mind (Cher. 7, Mut. 66, Abr. 83, 99) is father of the uttered word (ὁ γεγωνὸς or προφορικὸς λόγος). This is the man of wisdom (Mut. 69f, Abr. 84) or man of worth, chosen out of all for his merits (Gig. 63), who pursues ethical philosophy <sup>a</sup> In Leg. All. iii. 83f Philo may be coupling this with a favourable interpretation, 'the mind which contemplates the Deity'; but probably there too he is alluding to the change of name.

INDEX OF NAMES

(Mut. 76), the man of God (Gig. 63). See Cher. 7, Gig. 63f, Mut. 66, 69f, 76, Abr. 81-84

He is called the wise man or Sage (passim; see p. 278, n), or the man of worth,<sup>a</sup> the good man (ὁ σπουδαῖος, Leg. All. iii. 217, Mig. 110, 129, Quis Her. 129, Mut. 31, 201, Som. ii. 256), pious (Leg. All. iii. 10), faithful (Post. 173), just (Leg. All. iii. 9, Decal. 38, cf. Abr. 232), perfect (Leg. All. iii. 203, 244, Quod Deus 4, Quis Her. 275, Mut. 270, cf. Abr. 244 & n, 270, Virt. 217, Sac. 7), the lover of God (φιλόθεος,<sup>b</sup> Cher. 7, Post. 21, Abr. 50, cf. 170) and beloved of God (θεοφιλής, Abr. 50, 89, cf. 273, Sob. 56 & [N], Som. i. 193f). He is the elder (πρεσβύτερος, Gen. xxiv. 1; by virtue of his right reasoning, Sob. 17, 18 & [N], or wisdom, Abr. 270, 274), the most ancient (πρεσβύτατος, Virt. 212), the first (Abr. 272, 276), the founder of the race (Quis Her. 279, Som. i. 167, Mut. 88, Abr. 98, 276, cf. 56, Mos. i. 7, Virt. 206f, cf. Praem. 166 & n). He is regarded as a prophet (Quis Her. 258f, 263-266, Virt. 218). (See further below)

Abraham at first dwelt in Chaldaea, signifying mere opinion (Gig. 62, Mig. 187) and the study of the supra-terrestrial (Cher. 4, Gig. 62, Mut. 67f) or astrology (Congr. 45n, 49, Mut. 16, 71, Som. i. 53, 161, Abr. 69, 77, 82, Virt. 212 & n, Praem. 58), the study of nature and its causes (Congr. 48f, <sup>a</sup> ἀστέιος, Mig. 130, Quis Her. 276, Mut. 175, 180, 193, 252, Som. ii. 244, Abr. 83, 85, 90, 118, 214, 225, 242, 274. The English translations vary.

<sup>b</sup> Compare also φιλάρετος (Abr. 68, cf. 220, 224), φιλοδίκαιος (225), φιλομαθής (Congr. 68, 73, 111, Mut. 70, cf. 270), φιλόσοφος (Mut. 70, cf. Cher. 45, Mig. 149, Abr. 224, 271); cf. also Abr. 271 (with φρόνησις), Mig. 197 (with ἐπιστήμη).

INDEX OF NAMES

Mut. 76, cf. Quis Her. 289, Abr. 69f), a polytheistic creed (Virt. 214, cf. Mig. 184 & n).<sup>a</sup> But he awoke or was awakened to the falsity of this (Abr. 70, 78-80, Virt. 214, Abr. 88) and departed from Chaldaea and dwelt in Haran, the land of sense-perception (Mig. 176f, 184-189, 195, Som. i. 41-44, 47, 52-60, Abr. 72 & n). Then in obedience to divine command, or by free impulse (Abr. 88 ; contrast 67, cf. Virt. 214), he left Haran and his kindred and his father's house (Abr. 67, 85-88, Virt. 214 ; 'body, sense and speech,' Det. 159, Mig. 1-12, 192, 195).<sup>b</sup> Soon after God appeared to him (Det. 159, Mig. 192, 195, Som. i. 59f, Abr. 70f, 77-80, 84, 88, Virt. 214, Praem. 58).<sup>b</sup> So this was a spiritual emigration (Abr. 66, 68f), an advance from self-knowledge to the vision and knowledge of God (Mig. 1-12, 192, 195, Quis Her. 287-289, Congr. 48f, Abr. 72 & n, 77-80, 87f, cf. Mut. 16, Som. i. 59f, Abr. 70f, Virt. 214f, Praem. 58, Leg. All. iii. 244), to wisdom (Mut. 70f) and virtue (Mut. 70-76) and truth (Mig. 1-12, Virt. 214, Praem. 58), a true stripping of the soul (Leg. All. ii. 59, cf. Mig. 192 & n, Som. i. 43). Thereafter his name was changed (see above).<sup>c</sup> Mean-

<sup>a</sup> In Cher. 4, Mig. 178-181, Mut. 67f (cf. Gig. 62) Philo's view of the sojourn in Chaldaea is favourable or partly favourable. It is unfavourable or partly unfavourable in Abr. 69f, 79, 84, 88, Virt. 212f, Praem. 58, Mig. 179, 194, Congr. 48f, Som. i. 161.

<sup>b</sup> Often Philo directly links the vision of God with Abraham's earlier migration from Chaldaea (Quis Her. 287-289, Congr. 48f, Mut. 16, 70-73, Som. i. 161, Abr. 69-71, 80, cf. 84, 88, Virt. 214, Praem. 58).

<sup>c</sup> The similarity of Gen. xii. 7 and xvii. 1 has made it easy for Philo to connect the change of name (xvii. 5) with the emigrations from Chaldaea and Haran (xi. 31, xii. 1).

INDEX OF NAMES

while, when compelled by famine to enter Egypt (Quis Her. 286-289) his marriage <sup>a</sup> was protected as a reward for his departure from Haran (Abr. 90-98). His separation from Lot (Abr. 211-225) showed his kindness (208ff) and peaceableness (216, 225); the quarrel represented a conflict of principles in the soul (220-223 & n, cf. Mig. 150 & [N]). On the other hand, his courageous and warlike nature (225) was revealed by his conflict with Chederlaomer and the kings; this was a victory over the four passions and five sense-faculties (Ebr. 105, Conf. 26, Congr. 92f, Abr. 236-244), over evil and wrongdoings (Ebr. 24, Quis Her. 286-289), a victory of reason or the Word (Abr. 243f), of the friendly and perfect number, Ten (Congr. 91-93, Abr. 244), establishing democracy (Abr. 242 & n). In this Abraham revealed his kindness and trust in God (Abr. 232, cf. Virt. 22n) and might (Ebr. 105f). His refusal to accept any spoil from the king of Sodom was the obedience of the man of worth who dissociates himself from evil (Leg. All. iii. 24 & n, 197) and acknowledges only God (Ebr. 105f)

When God made promise of a son, "Abraham believed God and He counted it to him for righteousness": that is, his virtue or expectation was rewarded with faith, the one sure good (Mig. 44, Abr. 268, 273, Virt. 216, Praem. 27, 49f & [N]). His faith in God is in contrast to trust in reasonings (Leg. All. iii. 228), the inconstancy of created things (Quod Deus 4, Praem. 28-30), lower things (Quis Her. 92f), externals (Abr. 269), <sup>a</sup> Sarah is Virtue (Leg. All. iii. 218, Post. 62, etc.), or Wisdom (Congr. 72f).

INDEX OF NAMES

sense-perception (Praem. 28-30). On the other hand, his faith is not absolute, such as that of God (Mut. 181f, 186, cf. 201, 218 ; cf. Quis Her. 94f). His union with Hagar was advised by Sarah because he was still Abram, inquiring into supra-mundane things (for Hagar is School-learning or the Culture of the Schools ; Leg. All. iii. 244) and the things of sense (Congr. 81, 88). Abram's name was changed to Abraham when his character improved and he became perfect (see Scripture Index, s.v. Gen. xvii. 1, Leg. All. iii. 244, Cher. 4, Gig. 63, Mut. 65, 70f, 76, cf. 83f, 87). His laughter at God's promise of a son is variously justified : it was because he was about to beget Happiness (Leg. All. iii. 85-87, 218, cf. Mut. 166) ; because of his joy in God as the sole cause of good gifts (Mut. 154-156) ; the doubt was one of the mind only, and quite momentary (175-180), but sincere (193 & n, cf. Abr. 110f). His entertainment of the three strange visitors showed his kindness (Abr. 107), generosity (110) and piety (114), and God's recognition of his wisdom (118). Allegorically the incident represents Abraham's vision of God and His potencies (Cher. 106, Abr. 119-132). The birth of Isaac was promised as a thank-offering for their stay (Sac. 122, Abr. 110). Abraham interceded for Sodom because he believed that God would spare the rest for the sake of the least particle of virtue (Mig. 122f, Mut. 228) : scanty goodness by God's favour expands ; this is signified by the number Ten (Sac. 122, Congr. 109), which God accepted, viz., the lower training or education (Mut. 228). Cf. Abr. 164-166

INDEX OF NAMES

Abraham's greatest action was his readiness to sacrifice Isaac (Abr. 167-207); he was steadfast in his love for God (170), and it was an offering made in piety (177, 198) and obedience (192), an allegory of the offering of joy to God (200-207). Attention is drawn to his moderation in grief over the loss of Sarah (245f, 255-261). For this he was hailed as a king (261, Virt. 216 & n, 218)—an example of a ruler appointed for ever by Nature herself (Mut. 151). This kingship in the mind illustrates the principle that the sage alone is king (Mut. 152f & [N], Som. ii. 244, Abr. 261, cf. Mig. 196f) and that this kingship is a gift from God in reward for virtue (Abr. 261, Virt. 216).<sup>a</sup> Abraham's purchase of the cave of Machpelah (see Scripture Index, s.v. Gen. xxiii. 3ff) and his marriage to Keturah (Sac. 43f, cf. Congr. 34f, Virt. 207; contrast Cher. 40) are both mentioned. Finally, Gen. xxv. 8 (Lxx) is interpreted as not implying death: Abraham, being a fully purified soul, inherited incorruption and passed direct to heaven (Sac. 5-7, Quis Her. 276-289)

He had been a man of wealth and power (Det. 14, Mig. 94, Abr. 209 & n, 252; contrast Mut. 152); though his life was comparatively short (Sob. 17, Quis Her. 291), he had lived in harmony with nature (Mig. 128) and with the will of God (Leg. All. iii. 197), Whose worthy servant (Quis Her. 8f) and companion (Gig. 64) he was, enjoying access (Post. 27, Mig. 132) and intimacy (Cher. 18, Gig. 62f, Ebr. 94, Quis Her. 289). God was his instructor (Som. i. 173, cf. Sac. 5-7) and standard in all things (Cher. 31); for, recognizing his meanness before Him (Quod Deus 161), his was the soul that hides away wickedness and longs for all beautiful things (Leg. All. iii. 27, cf. Abr. 48-51), flying from himself and taking refuge in God (Leg. All. iii. 39), stretching Godwards (Ebr. 105f), the very type of the pilgrim soul (Quis Her. 280). He was a man of vision (Ebr. 107, Som. ii. 226f, Abr. 70f, 79f, Praem. 30, 58, cf. Det. 159) and a man of God (Gig. 63), inspired by divine spirit, whereby his whole being and character were refined (Virt. 217)

<sup>a</sup> For Philo's interest in Gen. xxv. 5, 6, see Scripture Index.

INDEX OF NAMES

He is numbered in the second (and higher) Patriarchal triad of those who yearn for virtue, signifying that virtue which comes by Teaching (Congr. 35f, Mut. 12, Som. i. 168-172, Mos. i. 76, Praem. 27, 49 & [N], cf. Mig. 125 & [N].<sup>a</sup> See s.vv. Isaac, Jacob). Thus he was the grandfather of Jacob's early training and knowledge (Sac. 43 & n, Sob. 65, Mut. 270, Abr. 50, Som. i. 47 & n & [N], 70; contrast 171f, cf. Quod Deus 92 & [N]) and the starting-point for that of Moses (Post. 174). He was thus himself a learner (Congr. 63, 122, Som. i. 171) and pupil of God (see above), apt to learn because he despaired of himself (Som. i. 60) and was eager for knowledge (Mut. 88), and because he combined attention, memory (cf. Mig. 125 & [N], Mut. 84, 270) and the valuing of deeds before words (Congr. 68), and retained what he had learned and so remained constant (Mut. 84, cf. Post. 27). Thus, taught by natural zeal, he was not only one who obeyed the law, <sup>a</sup> Here Abraham is described as one of the threefold divisions of eternity or time (αιώνος μέτρα).

INDEX OF NAMES

but rather himself a law and an unwritten statute (Abr. 275f)

Philo often mentions his particular qualities of character : in addition to the epithets already mentioned, he alludes to his virtue,<sup>a</sup> his piety,<sup>b</sup> his holiness (Abr. 198, cf. Praem. 24), spiritual refinement (Virt. 217), justice (Abr. 219, 225, 232), sincerity (Mut. 193 & n), obedience (Abr. 60, 88, 192, 276), faith (see Scripture Index s.v. Gen. xv. 6) and faithfulness (Quis Her. 129) and constancy (see above), his wisdom,<sup>c</sup> sound sense (φρόνησις, Mig. 164, Abr. 219, 271), moderation (σωφροσύνη, Abr. 219, cf. 256-261), reason (Abr. 256, Praem. 30, cf. Leg. All. iii. 9), knowledge (Congr. 153, 156, Som. i. 59f, 160, Praem. 61, cf. Quis Her. 93), confidence blended with caution (Quis Her. 22) ; his courage (Abr. 225, 219) and war-like quality (225), yet peaceableness (ib.), love of tranquillity (216) and solitude (87) ; his kindness of heart (107, 208, 232), hospitality (114, <sup>a</sup> ἀρετή, Leg. All. iii. 24, 244f, Cher. 40, Post. 62, 75f, Mig. 167 & n, Congr. 35, Mut. 71, 83f, Som. ii. 90, 255-258, Abr. 51f, cf. 60, 219f, 221, cf. 224, 244, 261, 269, Mos. i. 76, Praem. 27.

<sup>b</sup> εὐσέβεια, Leg. All. iii. 209, Mut. 76, 155, Abr. 60f, 98-208, esp. 114, cf. 177, 198f, 208, Virt. 218.

<sup>c</sup> σοφία, Cher. 45, Post. 174, Sob. 55f, Conf. 77-79, Congr. 48, 73ff, 153, 156, Mut. 32, 69, 71, 270, Som. i. 66, Abr. 118, 219f, 224, 271, Mos. i. 76, Praem. 27, 49 & [N]. 'Wise' is the most frequent epithet of Abraham : Leg. All. iii. 210, 217, 244, Cher. 7, 10, 18 (πάνσοφος), 31, 106, Sac. 122, Det. 59, 124, Post. 18, 27, Plant. 73, Ebr. 24, 105, Sob. 17, 65, Conf. 26, 77-79, Mig. 13, 94, 109, 122, 129, 140, Quis Her. 1, 88, 91, 258, 280, 313, Congr. 48, 92, 109, 119, Fug. 200, Mut. 69-71, 152, 155, 270, Som. i. 214, Som. ii. 89f, 226, 244, 255, Abr. 68, 77, 80, 83f, 118, 132, 142, 168, 199, 202, 213, 229, 255, 261, 272, 275, Praem. 58.

INDEX OF NAMES

cf. 167), domestic authority (116), fatherly affection (170, 194-199), conjugal faithfulness (Congr. 73, 78-80), sexual continence (Cher. 40, Mut. 31-34, Abr. 253 & n); his industry (Plant. 73-77), law-abidingness and stability (Quis Her. 289, Abr. 276); he was great and lofty in character (Abr. 199), worthy of our affection (88), the very pattern of nobility (Virt. 219, cf. Abr. 98, 276)

- I. Gen. Introd. pp. xiii, xvii, Leg. All. ii. 59, iii. 9f, 24, 27, 39, 41f, 83-85, 177, 197, 203, 209f, 217f, 228, 244f, II. Cher. 4, 7, 8[N], 10, 18, 31, 40, 45 & [N], 106, Sac. 5-7 & [N], 43 & n, 59, 122, Det. 14, 59-61, 124, 159, Post. 17-20, 27, 62, 75f, 173f, Gig. 62-64, III. Quod Deus 4, 161, Plant. 73-77, Ebr. 24, (61), 94, 105-107, 110, Sob. 8, 17f & [N], 38n, 55f & [N], 65, IV. Conf. 26, 74, 79, Mig. 1, 13, 35n, 43f, 94, 109f, 122f, 125 & n & [N], 128-130, 132, 139f, 149f & [N] (154), 164, 166, 167 & n, 173-195, 184n, 197f, Quis Her. Introd. p. 273 n, 1f, 8f, 22-39, 66, 76, 88, 90-95, 99f, 129, 258f, 263-266, 275-292, 313f & [N], Congr. Title, p. 249 n, 34f, 48, 63, 68, 72f, 78-82, 91-93, 109, 111, 119, 122, 153-156, V. Fug. 25ff[N] (132-136), 200, Mut. 1ff, 12f, 15-18, 31-34, 39-76, 83-88, (130), 152, 154-156, 166 & n, 175-187, 188, 193, 201, (210, 216), 218, (228), 252f, 270, Som. i. (3, 14), 41-44, 47 & n & [N], 52, 56n, 59f, 64-67, 70, 159-162, 166-173, 193-195, 214, Som. ii. 89f, 226f, 244, 255-258, VI. Gen. Introd. x-xii, xv n, xvi, xvii, Abr. 48-55, (56), 60-62 & n, 66-72, 77-99 & nn, 100-102[N], 107-111, 114-118 & [N], 131f, 142, 167-276 & nn, (Jos. 1), Mos. i. 7 & n, 76, VII. Decal. 38, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xvii, xviii, xxi, Spec. Leg. iv. 168n, Virt. 22n, 78[N], 206, 207 & n, 211-219,

INDEX OF NAMES

212n, Praem. 23[N], 24-30, 49 & [N], 57f & nn, 61, 166 & n, IX. Flacc. 74n, Hyp. 6. 1n

Ada : wife of Lamech (Post. 75, 112), means 'Witness' (79), bearing witness to the success of worthless things and being borne witness to as helping to accomplish them (83). Represents the Epicurean school (79[N])

Adam : For Philo Adam is generic man rather than an actual individual ; and in fact he treats the story of Eve's creation from Adam as an allegorical myth (Leg. All. ii. 19, cf. I. Gen. Introd. p. xiii). As such Adam stands for the mind of man, and occasionally for the soul

" There are two races of men, the one made after the (Divine) Image, and the one moulded out of the earth " (Leg. All. ii. 4) ; Philo generally distinguishes the two accounts of creation given in Gen. i. 27 and ii. 7 ; the first is the genus man, male and female, the second is the species (Leg. All. ii. 13). In Op. 134 he says that the first is not an objective being at all, but an idea, type or seal, incorporeal. Generally the contrast is between the spiritual man made after the image of God and the earthly man made out of clay. In Quis Her. 56f the point of contrast is not the two creations but the two elements in man, the spiritual (Gen. i. 27 and ii. 7, " God breathed into him the breath of life ") and the earthly (ii. 7, made from clay). In Plant. 18-20 the two creations are taken together as complementary rather than contrasted ; so, too, in the fine passage in Virt. 203-205 (cf. Op. 72-76, where Philo builds upon the use of the plural in ' Let us make, ' accounting thus for the evil in man).

INDEX OF NAMES

When contrasted, the points of contrast are the material and the manner of the constitution of each (Op. 134, Leg. All. i. 31, 33, 42, 88, Plant. 44f, cf. Quis Her. 56f), their character (Leg. All. i. 53-55, 92-96, Plant. 45, cf. Quis Her. 56f), their status and function in Eden (Leg. All. i. 53-55, 88f, 92-96, Plant. 44f).

The direct equation of Adam with Mind is made frequently (Leg. All. i. 90, 92, iii. 50, 185, (222), 246, Cher. 10, 57 (Plant. 42, 46, Quis Her. 52, 257, Virt. 204)); in many more instances Philo assumes this equation and launches into his interpretation (e.g., Leg. All. i. 42, 55, ii. 49f, Quis Her. 231). It is in respect of the mind within the soul that Adam or man is said to be made after the image of God (Op. 69, Virt. 204). This mind may be said to partake of spirit, for its reasoning faculty possesses robustness (Leg. All. i. 42). It is the less material mind, having no part in perishable matter, endowed with a constitution of a purer and clearer kind: it is the heavenly mind (88, 90), immortal (Op. 134, Plant. 44), the child of God (Virt. 204). This is the mind to whom God affords secure knowledge of virtue and the double advantage of practising and remembering it (Leg. All. i. 89). It possesses virtue instinctively, and so needs no command or prohibition from God (ib. 92). Usually the emphasis is on the likeness and proximity to God; but in Quis Her. 231 (cf. Leg. All. iii. 96) Philo deduces from "after the image of God" that the likeness was at third hand

It is less easy to define the other type of mind, the one signified by the man moulded from the earth (Plant. 32, 34, 41f, 44, Congr. 90, Abr. 12 ; cf. Som. ii. 70, Abr. 56, Virt. 203), because Philo is sometimes comparing it unfavourably with the first creation, and sometimes favourably with the creation of Sense-Perception (Eve). The man moulded from the earth is the first objective creation by the Artificer, but not His offspring (Leg. All. i. 31 ; but see Virt. 204). Nevertheless it is, more strictly speaking, this mind which is called Adam (Leg. All. i. 90, Cher. 57, Plant. 42 ; cf. Op. 165. But see Quis Her. 261). He is mind mingling with, but not yet blended with, body. This earth-like mind is also corruptible, were not God to breathe into it a power of real life, making it a soul, endowed with mind and actually alive (Leg. All. i. 32). This was 'of grace' on God's part, Who has thus created no soul barren of virtue (34). Furthermore, it means that man could not plead that his sin was due to ignorance (33-35). It is only by this in-breathing that the soul of man conceives of God (38). The mind in turn shares this inspiration with the unreasoning part of the soul (40). On the other hand, this breathing into the mind made out of matter is insubstantial air compared with the spirit of the image-mind (42). It is placed amid virtue (Eden. 47) because it is rational (Plant. 42) ; but in contrast to the image-mind, it neither remembers nor practises it, but has facility for apprehending it only (Leg. All. i. 55). Such a mind is the more earthly and perishable (88, 90) ; it is incapable of knowing itself (91) ; it can have no part in wisdom independently of command and exhortation (92) ; it is neutral, being neither bad nor good (93, 95) ; it cannot be alone, for it is closely linked with the senses, passions, and vices (Leg. All. ii. 4). Here Philo begins to treat of it in relation to Eve or Sense-Perception. The mind prior to the creation of sense-perception is the older (Cher. 60) and princely part of the soul, as opposed to the irrational portion (Leg. All. ii. 6). It is mind without body (Leg. All. ii. 22, iii. 49, Cher. 58) ; with many powers and faculties lying dormant (Leg. All. ii. 22, 37), but an incomplete soul (24, cf. Op. 166, Cher. 59f). From one of these faculties, a quiescent state of perception, God made the activity of perception (Leg. All. ii. 35-37, 40, 45). This was done while the mind was asleep, for that means the waking of sense (25, Quis Her. 257 ; but see Leg. All. ii. 31). This sense-perception poured light into the mind (Cher. 61). For the sake of sense-perception the mind abandons both God and His wisdom, resolving itself into the inferior order of flesh (Leg. All. ii. 49f). Sense-perception has a certain independence of mind (iii. 56-58 ; contrast ii. 41) ; when it is subservient to mind, good results (i. 50, iii. 221f) : but the reverse is profitless. The nakedness of Adam and Eve typifies the nakedness of the neutral mind, clothed neither with vice nor with virtue (ii. 53, cf. iii. 55). It is irrational and amoral (ii. 64f). This infant-like state (53) is prior to that of apprehension (70).<sup>a</sup> It is in Leg.

INDEX OF NAMES

INDEX OF NAMES

<sup>a</sup> Notice that whereas the neutral state of the moulded mind was contrasted with the goodness of the image-mind in Leg. All. i. 93, 95 above, and that because it was prior to the creation of sense-perception, here the neutrality is that of

INDEX OF NAMES

All. iii. 246f that Philo seems to develop this theme of neutrality most fully, in terms of Gen. iii. 17 : Adam is the neutral mind, for in so far as he is mind, his nature is neither bad nor good, but under the influence of virtue and vice it is his wont to shift towards good and bad. The doings of the whole soul (does Philo mean mind and sense-perception ?) are blameworthy when it allows wickedness to regulate them. In pain does the bad man all his life long avail himself of his own vitality ; his only motive for joy is supplied by righteousness and good sense and the virtues. Thus the neutral mind is given the high calling of deciding its own destiny (Plant. 45). The Fall ended all neutrality, and Adam becomes the foolish mind <sup>a</sup> or the bad man (Leg. All. iii. 200, 216, 251f, Cher. 10). His flight from God leads only to the error of self-sufficiency (Leg. All. iii. 28-31). He is expelled from Eden or Virtue for ever (Leg. All. i. 55, Cher. 10, Plant. 46). His vanity of soul is later revealed in his naming his son as Cain or ' Possession ' (Cher. 57, 63 ; cf. Leg. All. ii. 68-70)

Adam is often referred to as the ' first founder of the race ' (Op. 79, 136, 142, Mut. 64, cf. Abr. 56, Virt. 199) or, simply, ' the first man ' (Op. 136, 140, 148, 151, 156, Leg. All. ii. 14f, Plant. 34, Abr. 12, 56, Virt. 203). He is the first ' world-citizen ' (Op. 3 & [N], 142 & [N]). In contrast with his later folly and wickedness, he is wise (Op. 148, Mut. 64, cf. Leg. All. ii. 15), surpassing all later men Adam and Eve, prior to the eating of the fruit of the tree of knowledge.

<sup>a</sup> But see below.

INDEX OF NAMES

in body and soul, the bloom of the race (Op. 140), the noblest of things earthborn and of perishable creatures, a miniature heaven (Op. 82, cf. Virt. 203), a being naturally adapted for sovereignty (Op. 84), and so a king, viceroy of God (148, cf. Mut. 63). It was because of this kingship that he was made responsible for the naming of the creatures (ib.); but also because of his wisdom (148, Mut. 64), and because God was testing him, to make him exert some faculty of his own (149), testing, too, his character, to see how he would welcome, name, and make use of wealth, pleasure, etc. (Leg. All. ii. 16-18); also because he was to be regarded as the beginning of the use of speech (ib. 14f, 18), God carefully avoiding being responsible for letters and parts of speech (Mut. 63f). But in fact these names were signs of moral values (Mut. 65). By thus assigning the giving of names to one man incongruity and inconsistency were avoided (Leg. All. ii. 15). Adam was placed in Eden that his choice might be tested (Op. 155, Plant. 32, 41, Virt. 205). There woman became for him the beginning of a blame-worthy life: bodily pleasure led to his fall (Op. 151, 165). His crime was that he honoured the two before the One, the created rather than the Creator (Som. ii. 70), the false rather than the true (Virt. 205). He was expelled<sup>a</sup> from the garden by God, evil-mindedness expelled from holy boundaries by the Good (Congr. 171); thus he forfeited immortality and happiness and en-<sup>a</sup> The departure from Eden is usually an expulsion or an involuntary act (Post. 10); but in Plant. 34 and Leg. All. i. 55 Adam is said to run away or migrate.

INDEX OF NAMES

tered upon a life of toil and misery (Virt. 205, cf. Op. 167)

- I. Gen. Introd. p. xiii, Op. 25, 69-88, 134-169, Leg. All. i. 31-43, 53-55, 79, 88-96, 101f, ii. 1, 4-9, 11, 13-16, 18-26, 31, 35, 40-43, 45, 49f, 53, 64, 68-73, iii. 1, 4, 6f, 28-31, 49-61, 66, 185, 220-224, 246-248, 251-253, II. Cher. 1f, 10, 40 & n, 43, 53f, 57-62, Det. 80, Post. 10f, 33ff (89, 91), 124 (Gig. 65), III. Plant. 18-20, 32, 34, 41f, 44-46, (59f), Ebr. 4n, IV. Conf. 169, Quis Her. 52f, 56f, 164, 231, 257, Congr. (58), 90, 171, V. Mut. 63f, Som. i. 192, ii. 70 & [N], VI. Abr. 12 & n, 56, Mos. i. 263 [N], VIII. Virt. 199, 203-205

Adullamite : V. Fug. 149 (Gen. xxxviii. 20)

Aegean : IX. Flacc. 151

Aegira : IX. Aet. 140 & n

Aeschylus : (VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 15, 16 & n) ; IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 143 & n, (Aet. 49 & n)

Aetolia : X. Leg. 281

Agag : Mos. i. 290n (Num. xxiv. 7)

Agathon : IX. Vit. Cont. 57

Agrippa : Herod Agrippa I, King of Judaea, etc. (Acts xii. 1ff), a grandson of Herod the Great, IX. Flacc. 25 & [N]-35, 39, 103, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xx, xxv, xxx & n, 179, 261-333

Agrippa : Marcus Agrippa, grandfather of Gaius Caesar, X. Leg. 291 & n, 294-297

Ahiman : one of the sons of Anak, dwelling in Hebron (Num. xiii. 22). Means ' My brother,' and typifies the body, brother to the body-loving soul, II. Post. 60f

Alexander the Great : II. Cher. 63f, VI. Mos. i. 29, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 94-96

Alexandria, Alexandrians : VI. Mos. ii. 35, IX. Quod

INDEX OF NAMES

- Omn. Prob.* 125, Vit. Cont. 21, Flacc. Introd. pp. 295-299, 2, 23, 26, 28, 43, 45, 47, 74, 78, 80, 103, 110, 141, 163, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xi, xii, xvii, xviii, xxi n, xxiv & n, xxvi & n, xxvii, 120-141, 150, 162-166, 170, 172f, 183, 194, 250, 338, 346, 350
- Aloeidae : IV. Conf. 4
- Amalek : ' a people licking out,' so ' Passion,' which " eats up the whole soul and licks it out, leaving behind in it no seed or spark of virtue " ; through it all the war of the soul is fanned into flame (I. Leg. All. iii. 186f, cf. IV. Mig. 143f, Congr. 54-56). It represents the very opposite of the Practiser, whom it attacks (III. Ebr. 24, IV. Mig. 143f), VI. Mos. i. 214n, 215ff, VIII. Virt. 22n
- Aminadab : II. Post. 76 (Exod. vi. 23)
- Ammonites : descendants of Lot's daughters, by incest, according to Gen. xix. 38 (II. Post. 176f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 333n). They refused hospitality to Israel before the entry into Canaan, and so were to be shut out from the congregation of the Lord (Deut. xxiii. 3, 4 ; I. Leg. All. iii. 81) ; but they are also excluded, in Philo's mind, because of their impure descent, by which they inherit the nature of sense-perception (II. Post. 177, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 333n, 327[N]). They signify those who attribute creation to (mind and) sense-perception (II. Post. 177). See also Moabites
- Amorites : ' talkers ' (I. Leg. All. iii. 232, IV. Quis Her. 302), a figure of the uttered word (ὁ γεγωνὸς λόγος), especially plausible, sophisticated speech (Quis Her. 302, 304) or unanalysed ways of thought (308). In III. Quod Deus 99 they represent the inward feelings which chase (Deut. i. 43f) those who do not achieve righteousness.

INDEX OF NAMES

- VI. Mos. i. 258-262 describes Israel's battle with them
- Amphiaraus : X. Leg. 78
- Amphilochus : X. Leg. 78
- Anak : II. Post. 60
- Anaphe : IX. Aet. 121 & n
- Anaxagoras : (V. Fug. 10 & n & [N], Som. i. 22 & n & [N]), IX. Vit. Cont. 14, Aet. 4, (47 & n)
- Anaxarchus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 106, 109
- Andro : IX. Flacc. 76
- Andros, Andrians : IX. Flacc. 151, 156-159, 161, 173, 185f
- Antigenidas : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 144 & n
- Antigonus Doston : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 114 & n
- Antisthenes : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 28
- Apelles : X. Leg. 203-206
- Aphrodite : VII. Decal. 54, IX. Vit. Cont. 59
- Apollo : VII. Decal. 54, X. Leg. 93, 95, 103-110
- Arabia, Arabians : VI. Jos. 15, Mos. i. 47, 51, VIII. Virt. 34
- Ares : X. Leg. 93, 97, 111-113 & nn
- Argo, Argonauts : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 128, 137n, 142f & n
- Argos : X. Leg. 281
- Aristippus : III. Plant. 151
- Aristotle : IX. Aet. 10, 12, 16, 18
- Arnon : a river forming the northern boundary of Moab and the Amorite country (Num. xxi. 28, I. Leg. All. iii. 225). It means 'their light' and signifies the reasoning, with boundary-stones of particular thoughts and judgements, which is the frontier of the mind (Moab), invaded by corrupting false opinion (Sihon, king of the Amorites), ib. 230

INDEX OF NAMES

Arphaxad : son of Shem, begotten when he was a hundred years old (Gen. xi. 10). Means ' he disturbed affliction ' : the soul's offspring harasses and destroys injustice, afflicted and full of evils as it is (V. Mut. 189). Philo is discoursing upon the perfect number one hundred

Artemis : VII. Decal. 54

Asa : (IV. Conf. 149)

Ascalon : IX. Prov. 2. 64, X. Leg. 205

Asenath : wife of Joseph, daughter of the priest of Heliopolis (Gen. xli. 45). Signifies the Senses, daughters of Mind (V. Som. i. 78 & n)

Asher : means ' felicitation ' and symbolizes natural wealth, which has the reputation of conferring felicity (V. Som. ii. 35). But he was the son of Leah's handmaid, and so in IV. Mig. 95 he is the symbol of counterfeit (bastard) wealth, outward and visible (cf. III. Sob. 12[N])

Asia, Asians : II. Cher. 63, III. Quod Deus 175, V. Som. ii. 54, VI. Jos. 134, Mos. i. 263, ii. 19f, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 94, 132, Aet. 141, Flacc. 46, X. Leg. 10, 22, 48, 88, 144, 245, 250, 280f, 283, 311

Assyria, Assyrians : means ' directing ' and stands for pleasure, which thinks that it can direct the course of human weakness (I. Leg. All. i. 69, 85-87). Philo is interpreting Gen. ii. 14, where the river Tigris (self-mastery) is said to flow over against Assyria. VI. Mos. i. 23 & [N], Assyrian letters

Athena : I. Leg. All. i. 15

Athens, Athenians : I. Op. 104, VI. Abr. 10, Mos. ii. 19, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 47, 127-129, 132, 137n, 140

Athos : V. Som. ii. 118

INDEX OF NAMES

- Atlantic : III. Ebr. 133
Atlantis : IX. Aet. 141
Attica, Attic : II. Post. 94, IX. Flacc. 156, 173, X. Leg. 281
Augusta : see s.vv. Caesarea, Julia Augustan House : IX. Flacc. 23, 49, 81, 103f, X. Leg. 48, 149, 322
Augustus : G. Julius Caesar Octavianus, first Emperor, 27 B.C.—A.D. 14, grandfather of Gaius Caesar (Caligula), IX. Flacc. 50, 74, 105, X. Leg. 143-158, 291, 305, 309-319, 322
Augustus : Gaius Caesar (Caligula), third Emperor, A.D. 37-41, X. Leg. 240, 322, 352. See s.v. Gaius
Aunan : IV. Mig. 164, 165 & n. Means 'eyes,' and so stands for the vision-lover, since the eyes of the soul are opened by cheerfulness. Eshcol (good natural ability) and Aunan are rewarded with Mamre (the contemplative life) for inheritance (Gen. xiv. 24)
Autolycus : IX. Vit. Cont. 57
Avillius : see Flaccus

Baal : VI. Mos. i. 276n
Baal-Peor : " And Israel joined himself unto Baal-Peor " (Num. xxv. 3), perhaps 'Baal of Peor'; in any case the reference is to heathen cult. It occurs in the context of the incident of Phinehas leading to the Midianite war (see VIII. Virt. 34[N]), described in VI. Mos. i. 300-304, VIII. Virt. 34-46. So Philo interprets: Midianites (those 'sifted out' as unfit), initiated in the unholy rites of Baal-Peor, and widening all the orifices of the body to receive the streams which pour in from outside (for the meaning of Baal-

INDEX OF NAMES

- Peor is 'mouth of skin (or leather) above'—ἀνωτέρω στόμα δέρματος), flood the ruling mind and sink it (V. Mut. 106f). So Midian is also described as the nurse of things bodily, and Baal-Peor as her offspring, the heavy leathern weight (δερμάτινον ὄγκον, IV. Conf. 55; here Philo is interpreting Num. xxxi. 49 with xxv in mind). In Deut. iv. 3, 4 the Israelites are reminded of the fate of their fellows who sinned in following Baal-Peor and perished; this allusion underlies Philo's exposition in V. Fug. 56, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 31 & n, 345 & n
- Babel: or 'Confusion' (Gen. xi. 9, LXX, A.V. mg.), II. Post. 81, IV. Conf. 1, 183-195, IV. Quis Her. 228n, V. Som. ii. 283-290, 283n & [N], VIII. Praem. 23 [N], 111[N]
- Babylon, Bablyonia: II. Gig. 66, V. Som. ii. 59, VI. Abr. 188, Mos. i. 5, 34, VIII. Virt. 223, X. Leg. 216, 282. Only in Gig. 66 does Philo allegorize; Nimrod ('desertion') has Babylon ('alteration') as the beginning of his kingdom (Gen. x. 10, LXX), for with every deserter change and alteration of purpose are the first steps
- Bacchants, Bacchic, Bacchus: III. Plant. 148, IX. Vit. Cont. 85, X. Leg. 96
- Balaam: 'foolish (or 'vain,' μάταιος) people' (Cher. 32, Conf. 159 & n, Mig. 113), a sophist, an empty (μάταιος) conglomeration of incompatible and discordant notions (Det. 71), a dealer in auguries and prodigies and in the vanity of unfounded conjecture (Quod Deus 181, Conf. 159, Mut. 202), dwells in Mid-River Land, for his understanding is submerged (Conf. 66); he is no heavenly growth, but a creature of earth (Quod Deus 181).

INDEX OF NAMES

With his soothsaying mock wisdom he defaces the stamp of heaven-sent prophecy (Mut. 202)

- I. Leg. All. iii. 210n, II. Cher. 32f, 35n, Det. 71, III. Quod Deus 53[N], 181, 183, IV. Conf. 66, 159, Mig. 113, 115, V. Mut. 202, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xv n, Mos. i. 263n & [N], 264-300, 282n, 294n, VIII. Virt. 34n & [N]

Balak : means ' foolish,' for it is the pitch of folly to hope that God should be deceived and His purpose upset by the devices of men (IV. Conf. 65, on Num. xxiii. 7f). The whole story of Balak and Balaam is told at length in VI. Mos. i. 263-300, 305. I. Leg. All. iii. 210n, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xv, VIII. Virt. 34n & [N]

Bassus : IX. Flacc. 92

Bassus : IX. Flacc. 109n, 109-114

Beersheba : the ' well of the oath ' is so named by Abraham and by Isaac (Gen. xxi. 31, III. Plant. 73f, 78 ; xxvi. 33, Plant. 78-84, V. Som. i. 8, 12, 14, 40). It is from Beersheba that Isaac departs to go to Haran (xxviii. 10, Som. i. 4, 5 & n, 6-13, 42, 61, 68). It represents the inexhaustible nature of knowledge (Plant. 78-84, Som. i. 42) ; also the endless quest of the fourth cosmic region, heaven (Som. i. 14-24)

Ben-Ammi : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 333n

Benjamin : means ' Son of days ' (Mut. 92f, Som. ii. 36) and symbolizes vainglory, for the day is illumined by the sunlight visible to our senses, to which we liken vainglory (Mut. 92). This name is given him by his father, the head of the house, the reason ; but the soul (Rachel) calls him a Son of Sorrow, knowing by experience the unhappiness that goes with vainglory. Rachel died on giving birth to him, for the conception and birth of vainglory, the creature of sense, is in reality the death of the soul (Mut. 94-96). In Som. ii. 36, 41 the interpretation of his name is quite neutral : he is a symbol of time, both that of youth and that of old age, which are alike measured by days and nights. In Mig. 203 it is almost favourable : he is the offspring of sense-perception, and he receives from Joseph five changes of raiment because he deems the senses pre-eminent and deserving of adornment and honour. Naturally in the narrative of Joseph's life he is often mentioned (Jos. 167-236)

INDEX OF NAMES

IV. Mig. 203, V. Fug. 73, Mut. 92-96, Som. ii. 33, 36, 41, VI. Jos. 167-236, 234n

Benoni : ' Son of my sorrow ' (Mut. 94-96). See s.v. Benjamin Bered : Hagar's well was between Kadesh (holy) and Bered (in evils) ; he that is in gradual progress (Hagar symbolizes School learning) is on the border-land between the holy and the profane (V. Fug. 213)

Bethel : IV. Conf. 74, V. Som. i. 228 & n

Bethuel : father of Rachel (II. Post. 76), means ' Daughter of God ' and signifies Wisdom, an ever-virgin daughter, who by reason alike of her own modesty and the glory of Him that begot her hath obtained a nature free from every defiling touch. And Wisdom is not only masculine but father, begetting aptness to learn, sound sense, etc. (V. Fug. 48, 50-52). See also Laban Bezaleel : the craftsman of the Tabernacle (Exod. xxxi. 2ff), filled with the spirit of God (II. Gig. 23). The name means ' In the shadow of God,'

INDEX OF NAMES

for Bezaleel made the copies only : Moses had already made the original archetypes (I. Leg. All. iii. 102, III. Plant. 26f, V. Som. i. 206). In Som. i. 207 his work typifies the variegated (see 207n) fabric of the world, the product of wisdom. In Leg. All. 95-99 it typifies the soul ; God's shadow is His Word, by which He made the world ; but this shadow is the archetype for further creations (and Philo applies this elaborately to Gen. i. 27)

Bias : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 153

Bilhah : handmaid of Rachel (III. Quod Deus 119-121, VIII. Virt. 223 & n, 224). The name means 'swallowing' and represents the necessary subsistence of the mortal life (I. Leg. All. i. 94-96, iii. 146, IV. Congr. 29f), which in turn is necessary to the higher, spiritual life (Congr. 33). Also VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xviii n

Bithynia : X. Leg. 281

Boeotia : X. Leg. 281

Boethus : IX. Aet. 76 & nn, 78

Brundisium : IX. Flacc. 26, 152, 173

Brutus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 118

Bura : IX. Aet. 140 & n

Buzyges, Buzygia : IX. Hyp. Introd. p. 407 n, 7, 8 & n & [N]

Caesar : Julius Caesar : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 118.

Caesar Augustus : see s.v. Augustus. Tiberius

Caesar : see s.v. Tiberius. Gaius Caesar

(Caligula) : IX. Flacc. 25, 35, 40, 42, X. Leg.

Introd. pp. xviii, xix, 280, 322, 352, 240 ; and see s.v. Gaius. Claudius Germanicus Caesar :

X. Leg. 206

INDEX OF NAMES

Caesarea : X. Leg. 305 & n

Cain : 'possession'; passively (Adam's possession) in Cher. 52, 124-126, but otherwise actively, as claiming that all things are his own possession (Cher. 57, 64-66, Sac. 2, 72, cf. Det. 32), and that even when he is incapable of ruling himself (Cher. 65f, Post. 42). He symbolizes the self-loving principle (Sac. 3, 51f, 71, Det. 32, 68, 78, Post. 21, cf. Conf. 128), ascribing all things to mind rather than God (Sac. 2f, cf. 71f, Post. 35, cf. 42),<sup>a</sup> impious and godless (Cher. 65, Sac. 71, Det. 50, 103, 119, Post. 12, 34f, 42, cf. 52, Conf. 125); he is occupied with the lower, mortal, earthly level of life (Det. 119, cf. 156f, Post. 38, cf. 172), and is dead to the life directed by virtue (Det. 47, 69f, 78, cf. 156, 165f, Post. 45, Conf. 122), a deserter in the war against wickedness (Post. 172, cf. Det. 142, 165f), an example of worthlessness (Det. 140, 165), wickedness (Det. 68, 165, 167-169, Post. 172, Fug. 64) and depravity (Conf. 122). With him Philo associates false opinion and folly (οἰήσις, Cher. 57; εὐήθεια, 65f; ἄτοπος δόξα, Sac. 5; ἀφροσύνη, Det. 178, Conf. 165; ἀπόνοια, Post. 35). Often in these passages he is consciously contrasted with Abel

Cain was "a tiller of the ground" (Gen. iv. 2), but an unscientific one, no husbandman (Agr. 20-25, 27).<sup>b</sup> His quarrel with Abel is interpreted thus: Cain aimed to draw Abel into a dispute and to <sup>a</sup> In Det. 167f (on Gen. iv. 15) Philo makes Cain the mind, the eighth part which is ruler of the seven irrational parts of the soul.

<sup>b</sup> This must underlie Philo's remark in Mig. 74f that Cain has the cleverness of the town.

INDEX OF NAMES

master him with plausible sophistries (Det. 1, cf. 37, Post. 38, Mig. 74); in murdering Abel he only did away with himself (Det. 47, 50, 52, 69f, 78, cf. Post. 21; cf. Post. 45, Conf. 122) and succeeded in slaying only the impression, the specimen, not the original, the pattern, the class (Det. 75-78); Gen. iv. 11: he stood agape for all outward things, praying in his greed to take them in for the destruction of Abel (Det. 100-103); he was accursed (Fug. 60, Virt. 199f, Praem. 68-73)—indeed he must have been accursed from the very start (Det. 96),—and was doomed to fear and misery (Det. 119, 140, Conf. 165, Virt. 199f, Praem. 71, 72 & n); he “went out from the presence of the Lord” voluntarily (Adam was driven out): his was the moral failure which is of free choice, and therefore worse (Post. 10). Cain’s wife is the opinion held by an impious man’s reasoning faculty (Post. 33-39). He built a city, i.e., he resolved to set up his own creed (Post. 49-51, 52f, 65, Conf. 122). Nothing is said of his death; so Philo uses this to declare that folly is a deathless evil (Det. 177f, Post. 39, Conf. 122, Fug. 60 & n, 61, 64, Virt. 200, Praem. 68-73)

- II. Cher. 12, 52, 53 & [N]-55, 64-66, 124-126, Sac. 1-3, 5, 11, 14, 51f, 71f, 88 & n, Det. 1, 32, 37, 47f, 50, 57, 61f, 68-70, 74, 75n, 78f, 96, 100, 103f, 119, 140-142, 163-169, 177f, Post. 1, 5f, 10, 12, 21, 33-35, 38f, 40, 42, 45, 48, 49-51, 52, 65, 124, 172, III. Agr. 20-25, 27, 127, Sob. 50 & n, IV. Conf. 122 & n, 124, 165, Mig. 74, Congr. 54[N], 171[N] V. Fug. 60 & n, 64 & n, Mut. 195f, VI. Abr. 12n & [N], VIII. Gen. Introd. xxi, Virt. 199f, Praem. 68-72, 68n, 72n

INDEX OF NAMES

Calanus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 93-96 & n & [N]
Caleb : VI. Mos. i. 232-236. In V. Mut. 123f, Num.
xiv. 24 is taken as showing there was a total change of the man himself, because his name means ' all heart '

Callias : IX. Vit. Cont. 57

Canaan, Canaanites : Canaan's father Ham saw Noah's nakedness and told his brothers, and Noah pronounced a curse on Ham (Gen. ix. 18-27). That Canaan, not Ham, is cursed leads Philo to say that it was Canaan reported abroad the incident (Leg. All. ii. 62).<sup>a</sup> This publishing represents the accomplishment of evil which until then was only purposed (ib.) ; this hints at what Philo develops in another treatise, namely that Ham is vice in the quiescent state, but Canaan, which means ' tossing,' is vice when it passes into active movement (Sob. 30-34, 44-48, Congr. 81-88). Thus the Exodus is from passion (Egypt) to vice (Congr. 84), Canaan also symbolizing the stage of adolescence (82, 85). In Sac.
90 he applies ' tossing ' differently : the land of the Canaanites is where reason is tossed to and fro. In Post. 122 the reference suggests that the Canaanites ( ' the people of the land ' ) stand for opposing doctrines.

I. Leg. All. ii. 62, II. Sac. 90, Post. 122, III. Sob. 30-
34, 44-48, 51, 69, IV. Congr. 71, 81-88, 87n, 121,
V. Fug. 87, VI. Gen. Intro. p. xiv n, Abr. 77n, 85n, 133, Mos. i. 163, 214n, 220, (250) & n,

<sup>a</sup> God's curse makes Canaan slave to Ham's brothers ;
the fool is slave of the virtuous, either for improvement or for chastisement (Sob. 69).

INDEX OF NAMES

- VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 29n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 219n, Virt. 202, 221 [N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd.
 p. 4, Hyp. 6, 1n
- Capito : X. Leg. 199-202
- Carabas : IX. Flacc. 34n, 36-40
- Carthage : III. Quod Deus 174
- Castor and Pollux : VII. Decal. 56 & [N], X. Leg.
 78-92
- Castus : IX. Flacc. 86f
- Cenchreae : IX. Flacc. 155
- Chaereas : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 125
- Chaldaea, Chaldaeans : Chaldaea was famed for astrology (Mig. 178, Som. i. 53, Abr. 69), and so Abraham's connexion with Chaldaea is taken to imply he too was an astrologer (Ebr. 94, Mig.
 177-181, Quis Her. 96f, Abr. 69-72, 82, Virt. 212 & n, Praem. 58), though at other times Philo makes the identification only allegorically. It is called, rather contemptuously, the 'Chaldaean δόξα—creed, opinion,' (e.g. Gig. 62, Mig. 187), and is contrasted unfavourably even with Haran (sense-perception). It represents the attempt to regard the physical universe as the only reality and to attribute causation to the heavenly bodies, thus honouring the created world before the Creator (Mig. 179, Quis Her. 97, 280, Congr. 49, Mut. 16, Abr. 69, Virt. 212f). Only once does Philo translate the name : in Quis Her. 97 he says it corresponds to 'even tenour or levelness';
 it was the even tenour of the heavenly bodies that suggested this creed
- In the later treatises 'Chaldaean' is used for 'Hebrew' tongue (Abr. 8 & n, 12, 99, 201, Mos.
 ii. 26, 31, 38, 40, 224, Praem. 14, 23, 31, 44).

INDEX OF NAMES

- Moses and Jacob are called Chaldaeans (Mos. i. 5, Hyp. 6. 1 & n), and Moses is said to have been trained in Chaldaean astronomy (Mos. i. 23 & n)
- II. Gig. 62, III. Ebr. 94, IV. Mig. 177-181, 184 & n, 187, Quis Her. 96-99, 277, 280, 289, Congr. 49f, V. Mut. 16, Som. i. 52-54, 161, VI. Abr. 8 & n, 12, 62n, 67-72, 77, 82, 99, 188, 201, Mos. i. 5, 23, ii. 26, 31, 38, 40, 224, VIII. Virt. 212n, 212-214, Praem. 14, 23, 31, 44, 58, IX. Hyp. 6. 1 & n
- Chananes : VI. Mos. i. 250 & n
- Charybdis : V. Som. ii. 70 & n
- Chedorlaomer : III. Ebr. 24
- Chemosh : I. Leg. All. iii. 225, 231 : Moab's people maimed and blinded ; for Chemosh means ' as a groping,' and groping is characteristic of one who cannot see
- Cherubim : The Cherubim with flaming sword guarding Eden are an allegorical figure of the revolution of the whole heaven. One symbolizes the outer sphere of fixed stars, the other the inner contained sphere of the seven planetary zones (Cher. 21-24). The Cherubim over the mercy-seat of the ark suggest an alternative interpretation : they are the two hemispheres, circling round the earth ; the flaming sword on this interpretation is the sun (25f, Mos. ii. 98). But there is a third and higher interpretation : the Cherubim represent God's two chief potencies or powers, sovereignty and goodness, the sword is the symbol of reason, which unites them (27-30 ; so too, on the ark, Quis Her. 166 & n, Fug. 100, Mos. ii. 99). Philo translates the Cherubim as recognition or full knowledge (Mos. ii. 97 & n)

INDEX OF NAMES

- II. Cher. 1 & n, 11, 20, 21-30 & 28[N], IV. Quis Her.
 166 & n, V. Fug. 100, VI. Mos. ii. 97-100
Cheth : see Heth
Chimera : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 45
Chrysippus : IX. Aet. 48 & [N], 90, 94
Cia : IX. Flacc. 156
Cilicia : X. Leg. 281
Claudia, Gens : X. Leg. 33 & n, 206
Cleanthes : IX. Aet. 90
Cleopatra : X. Leg. 135
Coele Syria : see s.v. Syria
Corinth : V. Som. ii. 55, VI. Jos. 132, IX. Flacc. 154f, 173, X. Leg. 281
Corybants : I. Op. 71, IV. Mig. 35, Quis Her. 69,
IX. Flacc. 169
Crete : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43, X. Leg. 282
Critolaus : IX. Aet. Introd. p. 176, 55ff, 70ff, 71n, 74
Croesus : VI. Jos. 133, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 136, 153
 & n, Prov. 2. 7
Croton : IX. Prov. 2. 7
Cyclops : IX. Vit. Cont. 40f, Prov. 2. 66 & n
Cynic : III. Plant. 151
Cyprus : X. Leg. 282
Cythnus : IX. Flacc. 156

Daedalus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 44
Damascus : Gen. xv. 2, IV. Quis Her. 2 & n, 54f, 58, 61. Means ' the blood of a sackcloth robe ' ; by ' sackcloth robe ' he intimates the body, and by ' blood ' the blood-life ; the substance of the soul is twofold, blood being that of the soul as a whole, and the divine breath or spirit that of its most dominant part (54f)
Damocles : (IX. Prov. 2. 29f)

INDEX OF NAMES

- Dan : I. Leg. All. ii. 94-108, III. Agr. 94-123 & 95[N], Sob. 58[N], V. Som. ii. 35, 39. In Som. ii. 35 Dan is the symbol of distinguishing and analysing matters. In Leg. All. ii. 94ff and Agr. 94ff Philo allegorizes the reference to Dan in the Blessing of Jacob (Gen. xlix. 16-18). Dan, offspring of Bilhah, typifies the soul's second and perishable offspring. His name means 'sifting': for this race distinguishes and separates things immortal from those that are mortal. So his father prays that he may prove a lover of self-mastery. (This is worked out in detail according to the text. Leg. All. ii. 94-108 ; cf. Agr. 95[N] and 94ff)
- Dardania : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 115 & n
- Darius : (IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 132, cf. 136)
- David : IV. Conf. 149, VIII. Virt. 221[N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. p. 5 (-6)n
- Delos : IX. Act. 120, 121 & n
- Delphi : II. Post. 113 & [N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 19, Prov. 2. 33, X. Leg. 69
- Demeter : I. Op. 133, VII. Decal. 54, Spec. Leg. iii. 40 & [N], IX. Vit. Cont. 3
- Democritus : IX. Vit. Cont. 14 & n, 15, Act. 8
- Deucalion : VIII. Praem. 23 & [N]
- Dibon : I. Leg. All. iii. 225, 233 ; a name given to going to law, for probabilities and plausible arguments involve trial and disputation and everything of that sort
- Dicaearchia (Puteoli) : IX. Flacc. 27 & n, X. Leg. 185
- Dinah : Gen. xxxiv. Means 'judgement' and signifies the soul's court of justice ; the virgin soul is not to be ravished by the shameless fool (IV. Mig. 223, 224 & n, V. Mut. 194f)
- Diogenes the Babylonian : IX. Act. 77 & n

INDEX OF NAMES

Diogenes the Cynic : III. Plant. 151, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 121n, 121-124, 157

Dion : IX. Aet. 48-51, 48[N]

Dionysius, of Alexandria : IX. Flacc. 20 & [N]

Dionysius of Sicily, the Elder : IX. Prov. 2. 26-32, 26n

Dionysius of Sicily, the Younger : VI. Jos. 132 & n

Dionysus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 130, X. Leg. 78-96

Dioscuri : VII. Decal. 56 & [N], X. Leg. 78-92

Doric : V. Som. ii. 55

Dothaim, Dothan : II. Det. 5, 28, V. Fug. 127f. Means 'thorough quitting'; Joseph's brethren have whole-heartedly set themselves to study how to quit all that does not contribute to virtue

Drusilla : IX. Flacc. 56 & n & [N]

Eden : The Garden (παράδεισος) signifies the ruling power of the soul, which is full of countless opinions, as it might be of plants (Op. 154); for its plants are endowed with soul or reason, bearing the virtues for fruit (ib., cf. Leg. All. i. 46, 53-55, 64, 89, Plant. 37, Conf. 61, Mig. 37). Elsewhere Philo treats the Garden as meaning earthly wisdom, a copy of the heavenly (Leg. All. i. 43, 64; contrast Plant. 40, Som. ii. 242), virtue or excellence or joy (Leg. All. i. 45, Cher. 12f, Mig. 37), or right reason (ὁ ὀρθὸς λόγος, Leg. All. i. 46, cf. Post 32). The whole universe (Plant. 45) and the placing of man in it signifies the gift of facility in apprehending (ib., Leg. All. i. 45). But his hiding in it is made to mean hiding in the garden of the soul, for he that runs away from God takes refuge in himself (Leg. All. iii. 28)

Its name Eden literally means 'luxuriance' (τρυ-

INDEX OF NAMES

φῆ,<sup>a</sup> Leg. All. i. 45, Post. 32, cf. Plant. 38; 'delight,' Som. ii. 242); symbolically it means right and divine reason (Post. 32, cf. Plant. 37f), wisdom of God (Som. ii. 242). It is situated "toward the sun-rising" (Gen. ii. 8) because right reason, wisdom or the heavenly virtues are radiant and without setting (Leg. All. i. 46, Plant. 40, Conf. 61) In Op. 153, Leg. All. i. 43, Plant. 32, Conf. 61 Philo insists upon the impropriety of thinking of a literal garden

I. Op. 153-155, Leg. All. i. 41, 43-47, 53-56, 63f, 88-90, 96f, 100f, iii. 1, 28-31, II. Cher. 1n, 12f, Post. 1, 32, 128, III. Plant. 32-46, IV. Mig. 37, Congr. 171 & [N], V. Som. ii. 241f

Edom: signifies the earthly one<sup>b</sup> (Quod Deus 144), all that is good in outward appearance (for all things whose goodness lies in mere seeming are of earth (148; so 166, 180, Mig. 146))

II. Post. 101, III. Quod Deus 144f, 148, 166, 180, IV. Mig. 146

Egypt, Egyptians: These nearly always symbolize the body<sup>c</sup> or passions<sup>d</sup> or both<sup>e</sup>; or the adject-

<sup>a</sup> So the later LXX; but 'Eδέμ in Genesis. Eden is from a different Hebrew root than that for 'luxury.'

<sup>b</sup> From I. ארם, man, ארמה, ground, instead of II. ארם, red.

<sup>c</sup> Body, Leg. All. ii. 59, 77, iii. 37, 212, 242, Sac. 130, Det. 38, Post. 60-62, cf. 158, cf. Ebr. 95 & [N], Ebr. 208, cf. Sob. 13, Conf. 70, 92, Mig. 23, 154, Quis Her. 256, 315, Congr. 20f, Fug. 180, cf. 147f, Mut. 173f, 209, Som. ii. 258, 277f, cf. Abr. 103, Jos. 151f.

<sup>d</sup> Passions, Leg. All. ii. 84 & [N], 103, iii. 13, 37f, 81, 87, 94, 175, Sac. 51, 62, 134, Det. 46, 95, Ebr. 111, 209, Conf. 70, Mig. 202, Quis Her. 255 & n, Congr. 83 (tr. 'sense'), 84f, 87 & n, 163f, Fug., Mut. 172, Som. ii. 269, 278, 281.

<sup>e</sup> Sac. 48, Post. 96, 155, Quod Deus 111, Agr. 64, 88,

INDEX OF NAMES

tives body-loving, passion-loving, pleasure-loving<sup>a</sup> are used. The wickedness and vices of Egypt are also mentioned (Leg. All. iii. 38, Som. ii. 255, cf. 266), and Israel's sojourn there signifies the dissolute and licentious life (Post. 156, cf. Det. 95); or it is a childhood stage to be left behind (Congr. 85), its fleshpots contrasted with the wilderness manna (Quis Her. 79f). It is earthly (Congr. 20)

Other interpretations are also given. Egypt represents sense (αἴσθησις, Mig. 77, Quis Her. 315, Congr. 83, cf. 21, Mut. 117-119), the mortal element or values (Det. 95f, cf. Quis Her. 316), the lower education (Congr. 20, cf. Som. i. 240), unholy doctrines (Conf. 36). The King of Egypt is thus the body-loving mind (Abr. 103, Jos. 151f), the boastful mind (Ebr. 111), rebellious against God (Conf. 88, Congr. 118), the power that flings away all ideas of what is noble (Det. 95); he is the sovereign of all that is animal and composite (Sac. 48), the king of terror (Mut. 173).<sup>b</sup> And the Nile, or river Egyptus (Quis Her. 315, 316 & n, Som. ii. 255-259), represents speech (Som. ii. 255-259, 300 & [N]) or the tide of passions (Conf. 29f, Som. ii. 277f). The arrogance of the Egyptians is mentioned (Agr. 62) and their jealousy (Flacc. 129) and folly (Sac. 51, Mut. 170, cf. Leg. 163),

Conf. 81f, 88-90, Mig. 14-16, 18, 20f, 77, 151, 160-162, Fug. 18, Som. ii. 109, 255f.

<sup>a</sup> φιλοσώματος, Conf. 70, Mig. 16, Abr. 103, Jos. 151f; φιλοπαθής, Sac. 51, Mig. 77, 202; φιλήδονος, Leg. All. iii. 37f, 212, 242, Agr. 88, cf. Det. 95, Mig. 18, 29, Quis Her. 203, 272, Congr. 84, Fug. 147f, cf. Mut. 174, Som. ii. 278.

<sup>b</sup> See further s.v. Pharaoh.

INDEX OF NAMES

but especially their godlessness (ἄθεος, Quis Her. 203, etc.; cf. Leg. 163) in worshipping the animals or the Nile (Leg. All. iii. 212, Fug. 180 & n, Jos. 254, Mos. ii. 194-196, Decal. 76ff & n & [N], Vit. Cont. 8 & n, 9, Leg. 163); and the worship of the Golden Calf is usually regarded as a revival of this (Sac. 130, Post. 2 & [N], 158, 165, Ebr. 95 & [N], Mig. 160 & [N], Fug. 90, Mos. ii. 161f & n, 169, 270, Spec. Leg. i. 79, iii. 125)

An allusion is made in Quod Deus 174, Jos. 135 to the great Egyptian empire of ancient times

- I. Gen. Introd. p. xvi, Leg. All. ii. 59, 77, 83-87 & [N], 103, iii. (3), 13, 37f, 81, 94, 175, 212, (243), II. Sac. 48, 51, 62 & [N], 118, 130, 134, Det. 38f, 46, 91 [N], 93-95, 177, III. Quod Deus 111, 174, Agr. 62, 64, 84, 88f, Ebr. 36, 95 & [N], 111, 208-210, Sob. 13, IV. Conf. 29f, 36, 70, 72, 81f, 88-90, 92, Mig. 14, 15 & n, 16-26 & n, 29, 54, 76f, 83n, 141, 142n, 151, 154, 159-162 & 160 [N], 200-202, 204, 215, Quis Her. 79f, 203, 242 [N], 251, 255f & n, 315f, Congr. 1, 20f, 71, 83-87 & n, 118, 163f, V. Fug. 18f, 90, 147n, 148, 179f & n, Mut. 20, 97, 117-119, 125, 126n, 170-174 & nn, 208f, Som. i. 114, 220, 240, ii. 5, 43, 88, 106, 109, 123, 189, 216, 255-259, 266, 269, 277-281, 300 & [N]-302, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xii, xiii, Abr. 92f, 103, 107, 251, Jos. 3 [N], 15, 27, 37, 117, 121, 135, 151f, 157 & n, 159, 161, 184, 186, 188, 195f, 201, 203, 237f, 242, 248, 250f, 254f, 259, Mos. i. 5f, 17, 21, 23f & nn, 34, 36, (47), 71, 81, 85f, 91, 96, 99, 100ff, 107, 109, 112-118, 120-122, 134ff, 143ff, 147, 149, 163f, 167, 171f, 178f, 193, 202, 210, 216, 237, 240, 247, 284, 290, ii. 1, 19, 29, 161f & n, 169, 193-195, 246,

INDEX OF NAMES

- 248, 270, VII. Decal. 76 & n & [N], 80, Spec. Leg. i. 2 & n & [N], 5, 79, 101n, 133 [N], ii. 145n, 146, 148[N], 164[N], 204[N], 217, 250, iii. 23, 125, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2[N], 158n, Virt. 17[N], 103n, 106f, 139[N], Praem. 78[N], 90, 124n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 73[N], 125, Vit. Cont. Introd. pp. 295, 298 & n, 2 & n, 3, 17, 29, 43, 45, 78, 80, 92f, 130[N], 131[N], 152, 158, 163, Hyp. 6. 1, Prov. 2. 65, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xv, xxiv, 138f, 148, 163, 166, 205, 250, 281, 338
- Elea : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 106 (Zeno)
- Eleazar (Exod. xxviii. 1) : V. Som. ii. 186, VI. Mos. ii. 276 & n
- Eli : III. Ebr. 146n
- Eliezer (Gen. xv. 2) : IV. Quis Her. 2 & n, 39, 52, 54, 58
- Eliezer (Exod. xviii. 4) : IV. Quis Her. 59f
- Elijah : III. Quod Deus 136, 138
- Elim : V. Fug. 183, 187, 'gateways,' a figure of the entrance to virtue through the preliminary exercises of the Schools. In VI. Mos. i. 188f the twelve springs and seventy palm trees of Elim are allegorized
- Eliphaz : IV. Congr. 54-56, father of Amalek, 'God hath dispersed me'—the soul rejected by God, which then begets passion
- Elis : III. Agr. 119
- Elizabeth : II. Post. 76
- Elzaphan : I. Leg. All. ii. 58
- Enaim : V. Fug. 149
- Enoch (Gen. iv. 17) : offspring of Cain and his opinion ; means 'thy gift,' and represents those who are beholden to the human mind for everything (in contrast to Enoch, descendant of Seth,

INDEX OF NAMES

Gen. v. 3-24, Post. 41), II. Post. 33, 35, 40, 66, IV. Conf. 122-127

Enoch (Gen. v. 18-24) : means ' thy gift ' (χάρις σου, cf. κεχαρισμένος, Abr. 17), and signifies those who acknowledge all as from God the Universal Mind (Post. 41f). Enoch's translation (LXX, " he was not found, because God translated him ") indicates that such people are seldom found, because they escape from the wickedness of this life, translated by God (Post. 40-44, Mut. 34-38). In each case Philo seems to understand the ' translated ' as both an ordinary removal, literal and metaphorical, and as a ' translation ' to immortality (cf. Quaest. in Gen. 86, Abr. 17[N]). In Abr. 17-26, 47 this change is one of heart (repentance) or of abode (seclusion), and the immortality seems to be associated with his finding company with those who are immortalized in their works.<sup>a</sup> In Praem. 15-21 the change of abode is a removal from the familiar surroundings of the old life of passion to solitude

II. Post. 40-44, V. Mut. 34 & n & [N]-38, VI. Gen. Introd. p. x, Abr. 17 & n & [N]-26, 47f, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, Praem. 15 & n-21, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 63n

Enos : ' Man ' hopes in God (Gen. iv. 26, LXX), and Enos is thus made the founder of the truly reasonable race (Gen. v. 1) (II. Det. 138-140, VI. Abr. 7-16, 12n). As the representative of hope he figures in the first triad (Enos, Enoch, <sup>a</sup> In this treatise Philo is contrasting the triad Enos, Enoch, Noah, who yearn for virtue, with Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who achieve it (47f).

INDEX OF NAMES

Noah), contrasted with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob (VI. Gen. Introd. p. x, Abr. 7-16, 47f), a type of those who yearn for virtue but do not attain to it. Similarly VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, Praem. 13 & n, 14

Ephraim : Ephraim is the figurative name of Memory, meaning 'fruitbearing': for the soul's proper fruit is to retain what it learns (I. Leg. All. iii. 90-93, III. Sob. 27f, IV. Mig. 205f, Congr. 40f, V. Mut. 97f). In Leg. All. iii. 94 & n Ephraim typifies those who (? remember to) sacrifice the Passover in the first month (Num. ix. 6ff). In Mut. 97f, 101f his association with Reuben (Gen. xlviii. 5) is fitting, because of the kinship of Memory with natural excellence. In all these passages he is favourably contrasted with his elder brother Manasseh ('recollection')

Ephron : IV. Conf. 79. Ephron, from whom Abraham bought Machpelah (Gen. xxiii), means 'clay,' and represents the Hittite preference for mortality, clay, and dust rather than the soul

Epicurus : II. Post. 2 & [N], IX. Aet. 8

Equestrian Order : X. Leg. 74

Equinoxes : I. Op. 116, Leg. All. i. 8 & n

Er : Er, slain by God (Gen. xxxviii. 7), means 'leathern' and typifies the body, especially as something corpse-like, and those who love it. I. Leg. All. iii. 69-75, II. Post. 180

Esau : Philo's interpretation of Esau is nearly always suggested by some phrase from the narratives of Gen. xxv or xxvii rather than by his etymology of the name, which is more than usually absurd. So too Esau is most often named in contrast to Jacob

INDEX OF NAMES

Mainly, Esau typifies the bad man or vice, in pursuit of the passions and bodily lusts,<sup>a</sup> the worse part of the soul (Fug. 24, 42f), the base and irrational nature (Leg. All. iii. 88f); or he represents folly.<sup>b</sup> Here Philo sometimes appeals to a fanciful derivation<sup>c</sup> and progress of ideas, which may be summarized as  $\sqrt{\pi\psi\gamma}$ —ποίημα—fiction, to which belongs folly, or  $\sqrt{\gamma\gamma}$ —δρῦς—oak—stubbornness—folly. Only in Quis Her. 251-254 does Philo suggest an altogether different interpretation; here Esau is passion (πάθος), pursued and supplanted by Jacob, by acquired skill a hunter for the good, in a sense, but slow and procrastinating (Jacob anticipated him with the venison)

Other details are suggested by texts. For instance, Esau being a man of the fields (ἄγρικός, in contrast to Jacob, who was a 'simple' man, ἄπλαστος, dwelling in the city, Gen. xxv. 27, LXX), is interpreted as vice unfit to dwell in the city of virtue, following rustic grossness (Leg. All. iii. 2, ἀγροικία), the friend of fiction and make-up (Plant. 44, Congr. 62, playing on the ἄπλαστος (Jacob) of the text and the derivation Esau—ποίημα). In Praem. 59 the text has coloured Philo's description of Esau's character as wild (ἄγριος) and fierce. Esau was hairy, Jacob smooth (xxvii. 11): thus he is contrasted with

<sup>a</sup> Leg. All. (ii. 59), iii. 2, 191f, Sac. 81 & n, 120 (contr. Quis Her. 251-254), 135, Ebr. 9f, Det. 45f, Mig. 208 & n, Congr. 129, Fug. 24, 43, Virt. 210, Praem. 62.

<sup>b</sup> Leg. All. iii. 193, Sac. 17 & [N], Ebr. 9f, Sob. 26, Congr. 61, 175, Virt. 209, Quod Omn. Prob. 57. Ignorance, Fug. 39.

<sup>c</sup> Sac. 17 & [N], Congr. 61, Fug. 39, 42.

INDEX OF NAMES

the soul stripping bodily passions (Leg. All. ii. 59), with the man of single aim (Mig. 153). Esau sold his birthright when weak from hunting (xxvi. 33): this represents his bodily and unspiritual desires (Leg. All. iii. 191, Virt. 208, cf. Sac. 121), or his recognition that he has no claim to spiritual values (Sac. 17), or the defeat of the bad man by reason (Gen. xxvi. 29, Sac. 81 & n), the inferiority of folly (Sob. 26—if it refers to this). Further examples may be found by reference to the Scripture Index, particularly s.v. Gen. xxv. 23 and xxvii. 40, 42-45

I. Leg. All. ii. 59, iii. 2, 88f, 191-195, II. Sac. 17f & [N], 81 & n, 120, 135, Det. 45f, III. Plant. 44, Ebr. 9f, Sob. 26, IV. Mig. 153, 208 & n-211, Quis Her. 251-254 & n, Congr. 54, 61f, 129, 175f, V. Fug. 4, 23-25 & n & [N], 39, 42f, Mut. 230, VI. Mos. i. 240-242, VIII. Virt. 206n, 208 & [N]-210, Praem. 59, 61n, 62f, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Intro. p. 4, 57

Eshcol: IV. Mig. 164f. Means 'fire' and symbolizes good natural ability, which like fire is full of daring and is hot and fastens on whatever it touches. See s.v. Aunan

Essenes: IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75 & [N]-91, Vit. Cont. 1 & n, 2 [N], 90n, Hyp. ii. 1-18, 1n, 14n

Etesian Winds: VI. Mos. i. 115, IX. Flacc. 26

Ethiopia, Ethiopian: I. Leg. All. i. 63, 68, 85, ii. 67 & [N], III. Quod Deus 174, VI. Mos. i. 99, IX. Flacc. 43

(a) Gen. ii. 13, Ethiopia, 'lowness,' signifies cowardice (Leg. All. i. 68)

(b) Num. xii. 1ff, the Ethiopian wife of Moses signifies unalterable resolve, the nature tried

INDEX OF NAMES

by fire ; black like the pupil of the eye, she represents the soul's power of vision (Leg. All. ii. 67 & [N])

Euboea : X. Leg. 282

Euodus : IX. Flacc. 76

Euphrates : I. Leg. All. i. 63, 72, 85-87, IV. Quis Her. 315f, V. Som. ii. 255-258, 300, VI. Abr. 266, VIII. Virt. 223, X. Leg. 10, 207, 216, 259

- (a) Gen. ii. 14, means 'fruitfulness' and is a figurative name for justice (Leg. All. i. 72, 85-87), a virtue which brings gladness to the mind (εὐφραίνουσα)
- (b) Gen. xv. 18, represents the wisdom of God, full of joy and gladness (εὐφροσύνη, Quis Her. 315f)
- (c) Ib., represents the soul and the soul's virtues (Som. ii. 255-258)

Euripides : I. Leg. All. i. 7 & n, iii. 202 & n, VI. Jos. 78 & n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 47 & n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 25, 99 & n & [N], 101 & n, 102f, 116 & n, 141 & n, 146 & n, 152 & n, Aet. 5f, 30, 144

Eurystheus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 120

Eve<sup>a</sup> : Eve is consistently<sup>b</sup> made to represent Sense-perception,<sup>c</sup> the details of the narrative in Gen. ii and iii giving colour to this emphasis or that. Thus sometimes Sense-perception is contrasted with Mind (Adam), sometimes with Pleasure (the serpent)<sup>d</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Eve is mentioned by name comparatively seldom (Leg. All. ii. 79-81, Cher. 54, 57, 60, Post. 33, 124, Agr. 95-99, 107f, Congr. 171 & [N]).

<sup>b</sup> Agr. 95-99 is hardly an exception. See below.

<sup>c</sup> Op. 165, Leg. All. ii. 5f, 9, 14, 24, 38-45, 49f, 53, 68-70, iii. 49f, 56-68, 182, 184f, 200, 216, 220-224, Cher. 40, 43, 57-65, Post. 124-126, 170 ; cf. Agr. 95-99.

<sup>d</sup> Eve is contrasted with the animals, the passions, in Leg.

INDEX OF NAMES

The creation of man " male and female " (Op. 76, Leg. All. ii. 13, Quis Her. 164) calls for no comment ; but the creation of Eve from Adam's side (Gen. ii. 18ff) is seen to have significance. It must not be taken literally (Leg. All. ii. 19 ; cf. Op. 156f). We learn that man's helper is a created one, formed subsequent to man (Leg. All. ii. 5, 24 ; cf. 73), and represents Sense or Sense-perception (αἴσθησις), which completes man's soul (ib. 24, Cher. 58-60), adding to the activity of mind the passivity of the senses (ib. 38f) ; thus turning a quiescent potentiality into a reality, an activity (38, 40, 44f), and pouring light into the mind (Cher. 61). This creation out of Adam reveals that the starting-point of sense is mind (Leg. All. iii. 185). Adam united to his wife as " one flesh " indicates the degrading of mind into sense-perception (ii. 49f, cf. Gig. 65), and the begetting of bodily pleasure (Op. 152f) ; thus woman is for man the beginning of a blame-worthy life (Op. 151). Their nakedness (Leg. All. ii. 53, 68-70 ; contrast iii. 56-58) suggests the imperfection and powerlessness of mind and sense-perception, each of which can dominate the other

The Temptation and Fall is also a myth (μύθου πλάσματα, Op. 156). The serpent represents pleasure, and appropriately " beguiles " the senses first and through them reaches the mind (Op. 165), which apprehends simultaneously (Leg.

All. ii. 5f, 9-14 ; with Adam, mind, in Leg. All. ii. 38-43, 49f, 56-58, 222-224, Gig. 65, Quis Her. 52f, with the serpent, pleasure, in Leg. All. iii. 61-64, 66-68, 183-185 ; with wisdom in Quis Her. 52f.

INDEX OF NAMES

All. iii. 59f); for sense-perception "gives" without guile (ib. 61-64). She is so beguiled by pleasure because she is morally neutral: whether she is good or bad depends upon whether she is in the wise man or the fool (ib. 66-68); therefore she is not condemned outright like pleasure, but given an opportunity of defence. The disobedience of Adam and Eve having been discovered, God called mind only, not sense-perception, which being irrational cannot receive instruction and is merely included in the call of mind (ib. 49f). Questioned, Adam says, "The woman whom Thou gavest with me, she gave me." This indicates that sense is free ("with," not "to"), independent of mind (contrast ii. 68-70); it apprehends simultaneously "with" mind and "gives" to it opportunities of apprehending (iii. 56-58)

In Op. 157 their crime seems to be chiefly one of omission: they passed by the tree of life immortal, the consummation of virtue

God's curse upon the serpent includes "enmity between thee and the woman, and between thy seed and her seed." This is because pleasure is really a foe to sense (Leg. All. iii. 182), and warfare takes place over what is on the boundary between the two realms. They have opposing "seed," for the starting-point for pleasure is passion, while that of sense is mind (184f). The curse upon Eve tells us that as sense she must be subject to grief and with pangs bring forth perception (Leg. All. iii. 200, 216). Her resort shall be to her husband—she has two, the lawful one being mind, the other a seducer, known when the objects of perception dominate irrational sense (220f). The curse upon Adam shows that it is profitless for mind to listen to sense-perception, for that means the rule of the inferior (222f; cf. ii. 49f)

INDEX OF NAMES

The expulsion from Eden illustrates God's expulsion of evil-mindedness from the holy boundaries (Congr. 171 & [N])

“ Adam called his wife's name Eve,<sup>a</sup> because she was the mother of all living ” (Gen. iii. 20). In Cher. 57 this means sense is the source of life to all living bodies. In Agr. 95-99 woman is life, depending upon the senses and material substances of our bodies (αἰσθήσεως καὶ σαρκῶν ἐκκρεμασμένη ζωή). In Quis Her. 52f (where Philo is discussing Masek, Gen. xv. 2) Adam gave sense the name of what was his own death to her life, for she is the mother of those who are in truth dead to the life of the soul; those who are really living have wisdom for their mother, but sense they take for a bond-woman

Eve bore Cain; so sense bears vanity of thought (Cher. 57, cf. 61-65). This, which implies the union of mind with sense, is reprehensible, and that is why men like the patriarchs did not know women (Cher. 40, 43). On the other hand, Eve's giving birth to Seth is more favourably regarded: the senses are watered from the mind and so broaden and extend their powers

I. Gen. Introd. p. xiii, Op. 76, 151-153, 156f, 165, 167, Leg. All. ii. 1, 5, 8f, 13f, 19, 24, 38-45, 49f, 53, 68-70, 73, 79, 81, iii. 1, 49f, 56-68, 182, 184f, 188, 200, 216, 220-224, II. Cher. 40, 43, 53f, 57-65, <sup>a</sup> See note a on p. 311.

INDEX OF NAMES

- Sac.* 1, Post. 33, 124-126, 170, Gig. 65, III. Agr. 95-99, 107f, Ebr. 4n, IV. Quis Her. 52f, 164, Congr. 171 & [N], VI. Mos. i. 263 [N], VIII. Virt. 199
- Evilat : I. Leg. All. i. 63, 66f, 74f, 85f, is the kindly and gracious disposition where lies God's greatest treasure, prudence (66f); it is folly 'in travail' for the foolish mind travails for its desires but is powerless to bring to birth (74f, 85f)
- Evius : X. Leg. 96
- Flaccus Avillius : IX. Flacc. passim
Flaccus, G. Norbanus : X. Leg. 314f
- Gad : V. Som. ii. 35, 40. Symbol of piratical attack and counter-attack
- Gaidad : son of Enoch (Gen. iv. 18), 'flock,' symbolic of the irrational faculties (II. Post. 66, 69)
- Gaius Caesar : IX. Flacc. 9-15, 22, 25f, 31f, 35, 40, 42, 97-100, 108f, 114, 126, 150, 180ff, X. Leg. 32-39, 41-119, 133f, 136f, 141, 162-165, 168, 180-209, 218, 230-232, 239-242, 244, 247-251, 253-373
- Gaius Flaccus : X. Leg. 314f
- Galilee : X. Leg. 326
- Ganymede : IX. Prov. 2. 7
- Geloans : III. Ebr. 174
- Genesis : I. Op. 12, II. Post. 127, VI. Abr. 1, IX. Aet. 19
- Geon : one of the four rivers of Gen. ii. 13; means 'breast' or 'butting' (κερατίζων), figurative of courage (I. Leg. All. i. 63, 68, 85f, II. Post. 128)
- Germanicus : see Caesar
- Germany, Germans : V. Som. ii. 121f & [N], X. Leg. 10, 356 & n
- Geryon : X. Leg. 80

INDEX OF NAMES

- Gideon : ' robbers' hold,' ready to destroy Penuel (Judges viii. 9). IV. Conf. 129-132, cf. VIII. Praem. 4-6[N]
- Gilead : ' migration of witness ' : for God caused the soul (Jacob) to migrate from the passions (Laban), and bore witness to it . . . etc. (I. Leg. All. iii. 16, 19). ' Heap of witness ' : for the mind is witness of each man's secret purposes (II. Post. 59 & [N]). Also IV. Congr. 43
- Gog : VI. Mos. i. 290n
- Gomorrhah : III. Ebr. 222, V. Som. i. 85, ii. 191f (' measure,' figuring those who make man the measure of all), VI. Abr. 1 & n, Mos. ii. 52-65, 263, cf. i. 207, IX. Aet. 147[N]
- Gorgon : X. Leg. 237
- Goshen : VI. Jos. 256n
- Graces, The : VI. Abr. 54, Mos. ii. 7, X. Leg. 95, 105
- Great Bear : I. Op. 114, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 57
- Greece <sup>a</sup> : III. Quod Deus 173, VI. Jos. 134, Mos. i. 21, ii. 18, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 16, VIII. Praem. 165, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 73, 94, 132, 138, 140, Vit. Cont. 14, 57, Prov. 2. 15, 66, X. Leg. 141, 147, 237
- Greek, Greeks <sup>a</sup> : I. Op. 127, Leg. All. ii. 15, II. Cher. 91, III. Plant. 14, 67, Ebr. 193, IV. Conf. 6, 68, Quis Her. 214, V. Mut. 35, 179, VI. Abr. 136, 180, 267, Jos. 30, 56, 134, Mos. i. 2, 21, 23, ii. 12, 18, 20, 23, 27, 40, VII. Decal. 153, Spec. Leg. i. 211, ii. 44, 165, iii. 15, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 61, 120, Praem. 8, 23, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 88, 94, 96, 98, 140, Vit. Cont. 14, 21, 42, 48, 68, Aet. 57, X. Leg. 8, 83, 145, 162, 237, 292
- Greek language, The <sup>a</sup> : I. Op. 127, IV. Conf. 6, 68, <sup>a</sup> Some overlapping in these three divisions is inevitable.

INDEX OF NAMES

190, Congr. 37, VI. Abr. 17, 27, 99, 201, Jos. 28, Mos. ii. 31f, 38, 40, 97, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 194, VIII. Praem. 14, 23, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75

Gyara : IX. Flacc. 151 & n

Gymnosophists : V. Som. ii. 56, VI. Abr. 182, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 43n, 74 & [N], 93, 96n

Hades : a mythical place (IV. Congr. 57), the resort of those who look to created things (IV. Quis Her. 45), the spiritually blind (ib. 78) ; the life of the bad, a life of damnation and bloodguiltiness, the victim of every curse (ὁ ἀλάστωρ καὶ παλαμναῖος καὶ πάσαις ἀραῖς ἔνοχος, Congr. 57) ; cf. V. Som. i. 151. Also VI. Mos. ii. 281, X. Leg. 235

Hagar : Hagar, Sarah's handmaid, is consistently contrasted with her, Sarah being Virtue or Wisdom,<sup>a</sup> while Hagar is the Lower Education of the Schools.<sup>b</sup> (What this comprised is sometimes told us : Congr. 11f, 15ff, 74ff, 142, 144, 146ff.) The School-learning is the step towards the perfection represented by her mistress,<sup>c</sup> and is necessary (Congr. 24), but represents a stage of in-

<sup>a</sup> Sarah is philosophy in Congr. 79, 145 ; knowledge and wisdom, ib. 156 ; better judgement (γνώμη), Fug. 205 ; good sense (φρόνησις), ib. 207.

<sup>b</sup> The lower education, ἡ μέση παιδεία, in Cher. 3, 6, Post. 130, Congr. 12, 14, 20, 22, Mut. 255 (μέσαι τέχναι, Congr. 140, cf. 128 ; παιδεία, Congr. 23, 72f, 121, Som. i. 240). παιδεύματα (Leg. All. iii. 244) and προπαιδεύματα (Cher. 8, 10, Congr. 152, 180, Fug. 2, 213, Mut. 263) are also used ; and the adjective ἐγκύκλιος, Leg. All. iii. 244, Cher. 2, 6 & [N], Sac. 43f, Congr. 14, 19f, 23, 72f, 79, 121, 155, Fug. 213, Som. i. 240.

<sup>c</sup> In Congr. 79 the handmaid-mistress relationship is used twice over to convey Encyclopaedia-Philosophy, Philosophy-Wisdom.

INDEX OF NAMES

completeness (ἀτελής, Fug. 207) and gradual progress only (ψυχὴ προκόπτουσα, ib. 202, 213, cf. 211), something temporary (Congr. 12); this is typified in Hagar being Abraham's concubine, not his wife (ib. 23, 154-156)

Hagar's name means 'sojourning'; for the aspirant to virtue sojourns with the subjects of the Schools (Leg. All. iii. 244 & [N]); or it signifies that the student of secular learning only sojourns and is not domiciled with wisdom (Sac. 43f, where Philo also identifies the 'alien sojourner' with the lower knowledge itself; cf. Congr. 20, 22f). She is an Egyptian (Gen. xvi. 1): so the student of the Schools must necessarily be associated with the body (Egypt) and its senses to apprehend knowledge (Congr. 20); but this disqualifies her from seeing God Himself (Som. i. 240 & n; see below)

Abraham's union with Hagar, sponsored by Sarah (Congr. 72), occurs before he is perfect, while he is still Abram and concerned with supramundane things (Leg. All. iii. 244), ten years after his arrival in Canaan, while the soul had passed the stage of the senses and passions and was able to apprehend and choose between virtue and vice (Congr. 81f), when it was mature enough to begin the training of the Schools (ib. 121f, cf. 88). Hagar's conception led to a feud with Sarah (ib. 127-129, 158)—not the jealousy of women, but the conflict of two minds of different quality (180). Hagar fled, voluntarily (Cher. 3, contrasting the expulsion later), to escape the stern search for virtue (Cher. 6 & [N]; but contrast Fug. 213), throwing away achievements for uncertainties (Fug. 205f), a flight prompted by shame (Fug. 5f, 203, 213). But an angel (? conviction, Fug. 6) finds her (Cher. 3, Fug. 5f, 202ff, 211-213; contrast Som. i. 240) by a spring (wisdom: Hagar is not said to draw from it, Fug. 202), and she returns <sup>a</sup>

INDEX OF NAMES

Hagar is expelled with her sophist son Ishmael after the birth of Isaac (Leg. All. iii. 245, Cher. 3, 8f, Post. 130, 132, Sob. 8f). Again she is found by a well (knowledge: and she draws for Ishmael, Post. 130, 132, 137) and she is preserved by God. In Abr. 247-254 Philo gives a summary of the story, somewhat idealized

I. Gen. Introd. pp. xviiif, Leg. All. iii. 244 & [N], II. Cher. 3, 6, 8, Sac. 43, Post. 130, 132, 137, III. Sob. 8, IV. Congr. p. 449n, 1, 11f, 20, 22-24, 71f, 81, 88, 121f, 127-129, 139, 153-158, 180, V. Fug. 1, 5f, 202f, 211 & n, 212, Mut. 255, Som. i. 240 & n, VI. Abr. 247-254

Ham: a name for vice in the quiescent state; by interpretation 'heat'—a sign of fever in the body and of vice in the soul (Sob. 44). See also s.v. Canaan, III. Sob. 1, 6, 32, 44f, 47f, VIII. Virt. 202

Hamor: irrational being (ἄλογος φύσις), for Hamor means 'ass' (IV. Mig. 224 & n). Folly or unintelligence (ἄνοια, V. Mut. 193f)

Hannah: the gift of the wisdom of God, for Hannah means 'her grace' (III. Quod Deus 5, Ebr. 145-152, V. Mut. 143, 144[N], Som. i. 254). Hannah's song (1 Sam. ii. 1-10, esp. v. 5) suggests that she represents the soul sterilized to wickedness and <sup>a</sup> Further details in the story belong rather to Ishmael, g.v.

INDEX OF NAMES

mortal sowing but holding fast to the 'seventh' and mother of its peace (V. Mut. 143f, III. Quod Deus 10f, VIII. Praem. 159 & n, 160)

Haran: the country of sense-perception, understanding's bodily tenement (Mig. 187, 197, 207-214, Som. i. 53, 68); for Haran is 'hole,' and holes are figures for eyes, ears, etc. (Mig. 188, Som. i. 59). So Haran stands also for the organs of sense (Mig. 195 & n, Fug. 45, Som. i. 41, Abr. 72)

Abraham's father, Terah (the explorer of sense; Socrates; self-knowledge), lived and died in Haran (Som. i. 47-59). It is to Haran that he and Abraham migrate, teaching us to discard the speculations of astrology in favour of the Socratic study of ourselves (Mig. 176-197, esp. 185-189, cf. 137f; Fug. 45f, Som. i. 55 & n-58, Abr. 70-80, 72n); and it is a necessary intermediate stage in the soul's progress (Mig. 198f). But Abraham leaves it to go on to immortality and the knowledge of God (Mig. 189-195, Som. i. 47, 60, Abr. 72n, 85-88)—for to despair of oneself is the first step (Som. i. 60, cf. 56; Mig. 195)

In the Jacob stories also Haran is significant. His mother wisely counsels him to flee to Haran (Gen. xxvii. 43-45), for compromise with the senses may sometimes be the best course (Mig. 208 & n-213). In Fug. 45f this is the advice to know ourselves. In either case it is to be a temporary measure (Mig. 211, Fug. 46, Som. i. 45f). Jacob goes to Haran (Gen. xxviii. 10, Som. i. 4, 5 & n, 41-45, 61, 68, 70) from Beersheba ('well of knowledge'): if a man cannot com-

INDEX OF NAMES

mune with the understanding by itself, he wins in sense-perception a second-best refuge (ib. 44). Laban's shepherds tell him they are of Haran (Gen. xxix. 4): their flocks are the irrational faculties, fittingly associated with the senses (Mig. 212f). But Jacob too eventually leaves Haran to live in the fear of God (ib. 214f, cf. 5 & n)

- IV. Mig. 176f, 184 & n-195 & n (esp. 187f), 197f, 207[N], 208-216, 210[N], 212n, V. Fug. 23, 45f, Som. i. 4, 5 & n, 41-45, 55n, 56n, 61, 68, 70, VI. Abr. 62n, 67, 72 & n, 77 & n-80

Havilah : see s.v. Evilat

Hebrew, Hebrews : Hebrew means ' migrant ' ; the wont of the Hebrews is to quit the objects of sense-perception and go after those of mind (Mig. 20). Thus Joseph was proved to be a Hebrew and proved himself one (ib.). The Hebrew women needed no midwives (Exod. i. 19) : the self-taught nature arises by no human will, but by a God-inspired ecstasy (Fug. 168, cf. Mig. 141f & n, Congr. 3 & n)

- IV. Mig. 20, 141f, Quis Her. 128, Congr. 3, V. Mut. 117, Fug. 168, VI. Abr. 251, Jos. 42, 50, 104, 203, Mos. i. 15f (34ff), 105, 143-147, 179f, 216, 218, 240, 243, 252, 263, 276, 278, 284f, 288f, 295, 305, 311, ii. 32, VIII. Virt. 34f

Hebrew language, The <sup>a</sup> : III. Plant. 169, Sob. 45, IV. Conf. 68, 129f, Mig. 13, Congr. 40, V. Som. ii. 250, VI. Abr. (8 & n, 12), 17, 27f, 57, (99, 201), Jos. 28, (Mos. ii. 26, 31, 38, 40, 97, 224), VII.

<sup>a</sup> In the later treatises Philo tends to use Χαλδαῖοι, Χαλδαῖοσί; these references are included, in brackets.

INDEX OF NAMES

- Decal.* 159, Spec. Leg. ii. 41, 86, 145, (VIII. Praem. 14, 23, 31, 44), (X. Leg. 4)
- Hebron : Hebron means 'coupling' or 'union' (συσυγή) and 'comradeship' (συνεταίρις) and is a figurative title for our body, because it is coupled with a soul and has established a comradeship with it. So Jacob sent Joseph out of the vale of Hebron (Gen. xxxvii 14) to stir him from the hollows of the body and senses (II. Det. 15-17). In II. Post. 60-62 Philo gives a similar interpretation of Num. xiii. 22, but says the 'union' may also be that of the soul with virtue (so Gen. xxiii. 9, 19). Hebron is also called a treasure-house, guarding personal monuments of knowledge and wisdom (Num. xiii. 22, Post. 60-62 & [N])
- Helene : IX. Flacc. 156
- Heliceia : IX. Aet. 140 & n
- Helicon : X. Leg. 166-178, 203-206
- Heliopolis : II. Post. 54, 57 & [N]; the mind, sun-like, sending forth its proper light, causes all forms and conditions to be clearly apprehended. So V. Som. i. 77f
- Hellas : see s.v. Greece
- Hellespont : V. Som. ii. 118
- Hephaestus : VII. Decal. 54 & [N]; IX. Vit. Cont. 3, Aet. 68
- Hera : VII. Decal. 54 & N, IX. Vit. Cont. 3
- Heracleitus : I. Leg. All. i. 108, iii. 7 & [N], IV. Quis Her. 214, V. Fug. 61 & n, IX. Aet. 111 & n, Prov. 2. 67
- Heracles : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 99-104, 101n, 120, 127 & n, 128, X. Leg. 78f, 81, 90-93 & n
- Hermes : VII. Decal. 54 & n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 101 & n, X. Leg. 93 & n-102; cf. IV. Quis Her. 224

INDEX OF NAMES

- Herod : Herod the Great, grandfather of Agrippa (q.v.), IX. Flacc. 25, X. Leg. 294-300
- Heroes' City (Goshen) : VI. Jos. 256 & n
- Heshbon : ' reasonings,' so quibbling riddles, full of obscurity, I. Leg. All. iii. 225-233
- Hesiod : IX. Aet. 17, 18 & n, 19
- Heth : V. Fug. 25 [N], Som. ii. 89, 90 & n : Abraham, to avoid giving provocation, did obeisance to the sons of Heth (Gen. xxiii. 7), the enemies of reason who remove instruction (Heth is ' removing '), that he might obtain Machpelah
- Hiddekel : see s.v. Tigris
- Hippocentaurs : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 45
- Hippocrates : I. Op. 105, 124, IX. Vit. Cont. 16 & n
- Homer : I. Gen. Introd. p. xvi n, IV. Conf. 4, VI. Abr. 10, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 31, Vit. Cont. 17 & n & [N], X. Leg. 80<sup>a</sup>
- Homilus : X. Leg. 181
- Hor : Hor (LXX <sup>Ω</sup>ρ, E.V. Hur) supports Moses' hands (Exod. xvii. 12) : that is, the wise man's doings are steadied by truth (Hor is ' light '). Similarly Num. xx. 25 : Aaron goes up into Mt. Hor to die, for the end and goal of the Word (Aaron) is truth (I. Leg. All. iii. 45 ; cf. VI. Mos. i. 214n)
- Hormah : III. Quod Deus 99
- Hoshea : Moses changes the name of Hoshea to Joshua (Num. xiii. 17), thus transforming the individual who embodies a state to the state itself ; for Hoshea is ' he,' i.e. a particular individual, ' is saved,' and Joshua is ' salvation ' (V. Mut. 121 & n)
- Hur : see s.v. Hor

<sup>a</sup> For many quotations from Homer, without his name, see Index to 'Translators' Notes.

INDEX OF NAMES

Hydra : V. Som. ii. 14

Hypotaenia : IX. Flacc. 45

Iberus : V. Som. ii. 123 & [N], IX. Flacc. 2 & n

Iliad : IX. Vit. Cont. 17. (Without naming the Iliad, Philo also quotes from it in III. Agr. 41, VI. Mos. i. 61, VII. Decal. 69 & n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 31)

India, Indians : V. Som. ii. 56, 59, VI. Abr. 182, VIII. Praem. 89, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74 & [N], 93-96, Aet. 128f

Ion : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 134 & [N]

Ionia, Ionian, Ionic : V. Som. ii. 55 (Ionic carvings), VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 102 (Ionians and luxury), IX. Flacc. 154 (Ionian Gulf)

Isaac : Isaac means 'laughter,'<sup>a</sup> the soul's gladness (Leg. All. iii. 43, 87),<sup>b</sup> or Happiness (ib. 217-219) in generic form (τὸ εὐδαιμονίας γένος, Cher. 8, 106, Det. 60, Post. 134), joy, the best of the good emotions,<sup>c</sup> given by God to soothe and cheer truly peaceful souls (Mut. 131). But chiefly he represents the virtue<sup>d</sup> or wisdom<sup>e</sup> or knowledge<sup>f</sup> which is self-learned or self-taught,<sup>g</sup> that which is by nature<sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Leg. All. i. 82, ii. 82, iii. 43, 87, 217-219, Cher. 8, 106, Det. 60, 124f, Post. 134, Plant. 168f, Mut. 137, 157, 161, 166f, Abr. 201-204, Spec. Leg. ii. 54, Praem. 31.

<sup>b</sup> So Mut. 157-161; cf. γέλως ἐνδιάθετος, 131.

<sup>c</sup> εὐπαθειῶν ἀρίστη χαρά, Congr. 36, Mut. 1, 130f, 264, Abr. 201-204, Praem. 31-35, 50; cf. Mut. 261, Spec. Leg. ii. 54.

<sup>d</sup> ἀρετή, Mig. 125, Congr. 34-36, Som. i. 167-169, Abr. 52, 54, Praem. 31, 50.

<sup>e</sup> σοφία, Post. 78, Quod Deus 4, Sob. 9, Congr. 37, cf. 111.

<sup>f</sup> ἐπιστήμη, Sob. 9, Som. i. 160.

<sup>g</sup> See notes a and b, p. 326.

<sup>h</sup> φύσις, Mut. 88, Som. i. 160, 167, 171, Abr. 52, 54, Praem. 31; φυσική, Abr. 52.

INDEX OF NAMES

Thus he belongs to the second and higher triad of those who yearn for virtue,<sup>a</sup> not so much men as values—Abraham (by teaching), Isaac (by nature<sup>b</sup>), Jacob (by practice). All alike are God-lovers and God-beloved (Abr. 48-56), all are wise men (Som. i. 167); but Isaac's is the higher gift (Sac. 5-7 & [N], Som. i. 169), so he is often favourably contrasted with the other two,<sup>c</sup> though once Philo inconsistently admits that nature cannot be complete without them (Abr. 53); and once he seems to indicate limitation in Isaac's apprehension of God (Som. i. 68 & n). This identification of Isaac with natural ability is not explained (see VI. Gen. Introd. p. xi & n)

Some other contrasts are interesting. Philo subordinates Abraham to Isaac even when following the narrative of Gen. xxii (Mig. 166f & n); when interpreting "The Lord God of Abraham thy father and the God of Isaac" (Som. i. 160f, 166-171); and God taught Abraham but begat Isaac (ib. 173). Jacob falls short of Isaac in the apprehension of the divine (Som. i. 68 & n). Ishmael, though elder in years, is spiritually junior to Isaac (Sob. 7-9; cf. Mut. 262f)

The usual epithet ('self-taught') for Isaac is αὐτο-

<sup>a</sup> This trinity appears in Sac. 5-7 & [N], Sob. 38n, Mig. 125 & [N], Congr. 34-38, Mut. 12 & [N], Som. i. 166-173, Abr. 48-56, Praem. 24-51, cf. Leg. All. ii. 59. See Vol. VI, Gen. Introd. pp. x-xii.

<sup>b</sup> But Isaac is 'perfection' in Mut. 12; see [N].

<sup>c</sup> E.g. Som. i. 167-173; Congr. 34-38, his is legitimate rather than 'concubine' knowledge; Mut. 88, he keeps the same name throughout; Leg. All. ii. 59, 'nakedness' from passion.

INDEX OF NAMES

μαθήης<sup>a</sup>; sometimes αὐτοδίδακτος<sup>b</sup> and αὐτή-κοος<sup>c</sup> are linked with it.<sup>d</sup> But φύσις (natural ability) is also used.<sup>e</sup> He is wise<sup>f</sup> and noble (ἀστέιος, Som. i. 171, Abr. 52, cf. γενναίος in Som. ii. 10), a lover of self-discipline (σωφροσύνη, Congr. 175), a man of faith (Som. i. 68), holy (ὅσιος, Abr. 52, cf. 172), excellent (ἄριστος,
Congr. 175; σῶμα κάλλιστος, ψυχὴν ἄριστος, Abr.
168), perfect in virtues<sup>g</sup> (Sob. 8f, cf. Congr. 38), the perfect good,<sup>h</sup> one who is free from passion (ἀπαθὲς εἶδος) and inviolable (ἀτρώτου γένους εἶδος, Det. 46 & n),<sup>i</sup> who has left behind his own self (Quis Her. 68). He is a prophet (ib. 261), and one of the founders of the race (Mut. 88; cf.
Som. i. 167)

Isaac was the child promised (see s.v. Gen. xv. 4, xvii. 6f) to Abraham (the good man, etc.) and

<sup>a</sup> αὐτομαθήης, Sac. 6 & [N], 120[N], Det. 30, Quod Deus 4,
Post. 78, Plant. 168, Ebr. 60, 94, Sob. 38n, 65, Conf. 74, 81,
Mig. 29f, 101, 125 & [N], 140, 166, 167 & n, Congr. 24n, 34, 36, 38, 111, Fug. 166, Mut. 1, 12 & [N], 88, 137, 255, 263, Som. i. 68, 160, 168f, 194, ii. 10, Praem. 27, 59. Cf.
μαθητῆς Θεοῦ, Sac. 7; ἱκανὸς διδάσκειν καὶ μαθάνειν οὐ δεόμενος, Mig. 140.

<sup>b</sup> αὐτοδίδακτος, Post. 78, Fug. 166, Mut. 88, Som. i. 160, ii.
10, Praem. 27, 59.

<sup>c</sup> αὐτήκοος, Plant. 168, Sob. 65, Som. i. 160, 168f, Praem.
27, 50.

<sup>d</sup> αὐτουργός, Plant. 168.

<sup>e</sup> φύσις, Plant. 168, Fug. 168, Mut. 88, Som. i. 160, 167-171, Abr. 52, 54, Praem. 31.

<sup>f</sup> πάνσοφος, Cher. 47, Sac. 43; σοφός, Sob. 9, Fug. 200,
Som. i. 167. Cf. note e, p. 324.

<sup>g</sup> ἀρετή, Cher. 40. Cf. note d, p. 324.

<sup>h</sup> τέλειον ἀγαθόν, Mut. 188, cf. 88, 166; ἀγαθὸς καὶ τέλειος,
Som. i. 162; τέλειος, Sac. 43; cf. τελειότης, Mut. 12 & [N].

<sup>i</sup> See further below, on Gen. xxvi. 2.

INDEX OF NAMES

Sarah (virtue) in their old age. They both greet this with laughter, and the offspring of them both is laughter itself (Leg. All. iii. 217f).<sup>a</sup> God's covenant would be with him (Gen. xvii. 19); this praise even before his birth is because joy gladdens in anticipation, and therefore God held Isaac worthy of his great name and of a great endowment (ib. 85-87). This male child (one free from all womanish feelings—πάθος) is to be named by the feeling he raises in Abraham, namely joy (Mut. 261).<sup>b</sup> Isaac is the most perfect thank-offering given to Abraham by the divine potencies after their visit (Gen. xviii. 9f, Cher. 106); while his answer to their question, "Where is Sarah?" is fitting: Virtue is in the soul, but Happiness can only come with the exercise of it—that is, when Sarah conceives and bears Isaac, happiness in its totality (Det. 60). "It had ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women" (xviii. 11): this favourite text<sup>c</sup> applies to Isaac, for happiness is conceived when we are dead to the passions (Cher. 8 & [N]), when virtue is free from alloy (Post. 134), and the self-taught nature requires us to forsake those human ways of custom and mere reasoning (Fug. 167f, cf. Ebr. 60). Sarah "conceived and bare" (xxi. 2) not a man,<sup>d</sup> but a most pure thought, beautiful, not by practice but by nature (Fug. 167). Abraham was then one hundred years old (xxi. 5), the number irradiated by the self-taught nature, <sup>a</sup> How they could laugh before laughter was born is discussed in Mut. 157, 166.

<sup>b</sup> See note c, p. 324.

<sup>c</sup> See s.v. Sarah.

<sup>d</sup> Cf. Mig. 140-142, Mut. 130f, Som. i. 172, Abr. 54f.

INDEX OF NAMES

Isaac, who is joy, the best of the good emotions <sup>a</sup> (Mut. 1, 188). "The Lord has made laughter for me" (xxi. 6, Lxx): as Isaac and laughter are the same, this means that God made or begat Isaac; for He Himself is the Father of the perfect nature, sowing and begetting happiness in men's souls (Leg. All. iii. 219, Mut. 130f, 137, Som. i. 173).<sup>b</sup> Sarah's rejoicing ("all that hear me will laugh with me") calls for fellowship in joy when one hears that Virtue has given birth to Happiness (Leg. All. ii. 82, cf. iii. 218f). The child gives rather than receives nourishment ('suck,' xxi. 7), being capable of teaching and not needing to learn (Mig. 140 & [N] and perhaps 29). The same interpretation is given for his being weaned (Sob. 7-9, Mig. 29, Som. ii. 10)

Abraham's (intended) sacrifice of Isaac is variously explained. It is, of course, no human being, but the fruit of a rich and fertile soul which is offered (Mig. 142, Leg. All. iii. 209); the sum offering of the mind that has reached the summit (ib. 139 & n, cf. Abr. 172); a fitting thank-offering, which illustrates what it is not to beget for oneself (Quod Deus 4): a perfect, undivided, whole burnt-offering (cf. Som. i. 194), because Isaac had no passion which breeds corruption (Sac. 110); the sacrifice of the good emotion of the understanding, that is, joy, showing that rejoicing is most clearly associated with God alone (Abr. 202, Leg. All. iii. 209).

<sup>a</sup> See note c, p. 324.

<sup>b</sup> So too Cher. 45, Det. 124f, where Isaac is also the offspring of wisdom, i.e. of Abraham (cf. Abr. 194); and Mig. 139-142, offspring of the soul, i.e. Sarah (cf. Quod Deus 4, where the soul is Abraham).

INDEX OF NAMES

Such an acknowledgement God fully rewards by returning the gift; so Isaac is saved (ib. 177, 203f) One further topic in the story <sup>a</sup>: "so they went both of them together" (xxii. 8) means with equal speed of mind rather than body along the road to holiness (Abr. 172); that is, the learner's virtue along with that of the self-taught, the pair being now capable of winning virtue's prize in equal measure (Mig. 166 & n, 167) <sup>b</sup>

"Isaac went into the plain to meditate at the eventide" (Gen. xxiv. 63, LXX). This means that he quits his own mind to be with God (Leg. All. iii. 43, Det. 29, cf. Quis Her. 68 on Gen. xv. 4, Leg. All. i. 82); the plain signifies the conquest of opposing principles, and Isaac is the champion unopposed who finds the field empty of all his adversaries (Det. 29-31)

"Abraham gave all that he had <sup>c</sup> unto Isaac. But unto the sons of the concubines . . . Abraham gave gifts" (xxv. 5, 6): The real substances, the perfect virtues, are the possessions of the perfect and true-born only (Sac. 43); so Isaac alone receives substantial realities, graven on the heart (in contrast to idols, Gen. xxxi. 35) of the wise, the self-taught nature (Congr. 74). These 'substances' or 'realities' are the natural laws (Mig. 94 & n & [N], cf. Leg. All. iii. 197)

<sup>a</sup> Philo also treats of Abraham's binding of Isaac (Quod Deus 4) and their dialogue (Fug. 132-136, Abr. 173).

<sup>b</sup> "When this higher stage is reached the old antithesis between labour and natural gifts, between art the imitator and nature the creator, is wiped out." (Translator's note ad loc.)

<sup>c</sup> τὰ ὑπάρχοντα is each time taken as the philosophical term τὰ ὑπαρκτά, 'realities.' See Mig. 94[N].

INDEX OF NAMES

Isaac was warned not to enter Egypt (xxvi. 2, 3).

This means he was always spiritually 'naked' of passions and vices (Leg. All. ii. 59, Det. 46), and dwells in Wisdom-land (Mig. 29f, Som. i. 160). In Conf. 81 Philo perversely interprets the text to teach that the good man is a sojourner in the body but dwells in wisdom. His 'sporting' with Rebecca (xxvi. 8) was a divine pursuit (Cher. 8 & n & [N]), the sacred sporting of the soul with the one who waits patiently for all that is beautiful (Plant. 168-170)

Philo interprets Gen. xxiv. 67 so that he can qualify Isaac's taking a wife (rather than receiving one from God); so Isaac is included with those who, self-taught, are ready to accept from God Reason or Knowledge, the partner in the life of the wise (Post. 77f). No concubines of Isaac are mentioned: for the self-taught nature wants neither the practice (Jacob) nor the teaching (Abraham) which entails the need of the concubine as well as the legitimate forms of knowledge; he is the husband of no slavish arts, but of the queen and mistress of virtue, constancy (Congr. 34-38, 111). Philo goes further: Isaac and the other lovers of wisdom and those of like spirit did not know women, but rather rejected sense.<sup>a</sup> Their wives are called women, but are really virtues, Rebecca being 'steadfastness in excellence' (Cher. 40f, 47, cf. Post. 62)

Of Isaac's death (xxxv. 29, "he was added to his people"—γένος) it is said that self-learnt knowledge is translated into the genus of the im-

<sup>a</sup> αἰσθησις is Philo's regular interpretation of Eve or generic woman.

INDEX OF NAMES

perishable and fully perfect (Sac. 6f & [N])

- I. Leg. All. i. 82, ii. 59, 82, iii. 43, 85-87, 177, 209, 217-219, II. Cher. 8 & n & [N], 40f, 47, 106, Sac. 5-7 & [N], 43, 64, 110, 120[N], Det. 29-31, 46 & n, 60, 124f, Post. 62, 77f, 134, III. Quod Deus 4, 92 & [N], Plant. 78f, 168-170, Ebr. 60, 94, 119f, Sob. 7-9, 38n, 65, IV. Conf. 74, 81, Mig. 26n, 29, 94, 101, 125 & n & [N], 126, 139, 140 & [N], 142n, 166, 167 & n, Quis Her. 8, 68, 251, 261, Congr. 24n, 34-38, 70, 111, 175, V. Fug. 48, 132, 166f, 200, Mut. 1, 12 & [N], 13, 88, 130f, 137, 157, 161, 166f, 175-177, 188, 190, 218, 230, 252f, 255, 261-264, Som. i. 3, 14, 38, 68 & n, 159 & n, 160, 162f, 166-173, 194f, Som. ii. 10, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. x, xi & n, xii, xvi f, Abr. 485-6, 168-177, 188, 192-207, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 54, VIII. Virt. 207 & n, 208, Praem. 24, 27, 31-35, 50, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 70[N]
- Ishmael : bastard <sup>a</sup> son of Abraham by Hagar. Hagar is the προπαιδεύματα of the Schools, the lower learning ; and so her son <sup>b</sup> represents sophistry. <sup>c</sup> He is contrasted with the true-born son, Isaac : Ishmael, though elder in years, is spiritually junior to Isaac, <sup>d</sup> his sophistry contrasts with

<sup>a</sup> νόθος, Sob. 8, cf. Fug. 208.

<sup>b</sup> Ishmael is closely linked with Hagar in Cher. 8, Post. 130-132, Congr. 127-129, Fug. 204, 208-212 & n, Mut. 255.

<sup>c</sup> σοφιστεία, Cher. 9, Sob. 9 ; σοφιστής, Cher. 8, 10, Sob. 9, Congr. 129, Fug. 209-211.

<sup>d</sup> Gen. xxi. 14-16 uses παῖδιον of Ishmael, and so he is a 'child' compared with Isaac. In Post. 130f Philo makes this 'child' the soul just beginning to crave after instruction ; when grown to manhood it becomes the sophist (xxi. 20). In Fug. 208 Ishmael is inferior to Israel (seeing God), who is a true-born son. Philo evidently has in mind the inferiority of Ishmael (νόθος, Sob. 8) to Isaac (γνήσιος).

INDEX OF NAMES

Isaac's wisdom (Sob. 8f); he is the progeny of teaching, Isaac is self-taught (Mut. 255, cf. 218f, 263). So Hagar and the sophist Ishmael, with his child's play, are cast out when generic happiness (Isaac) is born, whose 'play' (with Rebecca) is divine (Cher. 8 & [N])

Philo equates Ishmael with sophistry because he is the child of Hagar; but Gen. xxi. 20, "and he became an archer," is used to develop the theme, for whatever point he sets forth as a target, at this he discharges proofs like arrows, with sure aim (Post. 131); he is the quarrelsome sophist who shoots or is shot at with the bow (Congr. 129), loving to argue and shoot at men of every kind of learning, and of course being shot at in return (Fug. 209-211)

Philo treats Gen. xv. 11f, giving the meaning of Ishmael's name (see below), and explaining ἄγροικος as his 'country' wisdom, compared with the more civilized, gentle virtue (Fug. 208f); and xxi. 19: Hagar 'watered' Ishmael with the same incomplete education as her own (Post. 130), with gradual progress (προκοπαῖς, 132). But it is Abraham's prayer in xvii. 18, "Let Ishmael live before Thee," which obtains the fullest treatment (Mut. 201-263). Ishmael means 'hearing God' (202, Fug. 208)—he was so named because Hagar was chastened by hearing the words of God (Fug. 208)—so Philo discusses right and wrong hearing (Mut. 201-205). It is spiritual life which is concerned, that what Ishmael hears from God may abide and inflame him (209f), that his may be the sum happiness of living before God, that is, the mind knowing that God's eye is always watching over him (216f). The prayer teaches that the soul may be inadequate to receive God's greatest gifts (i.e. Isaac), but it must dedicate what gifts it has and cherish these lesser ones (220-227). God's answer to the prayer is two gifts rather than one: Ishmael will flourish, but with Isaac the greater gift is given (252f, 255, 263)

INDEX OF NAMES

I. Gen. Introd. p. xvii, II. Cher. 8 & [N], Post. 130-132, III. Sob. 8f, IV. Congr. 127-129, V. Fug. 1, 204, 208-212 & n, Mut. 201-263 (esp. 201f, 204, 209f, 216f, 252f, 255, 263), VI. Abr. 253f, VIII. Virt. 206n

Ishmaelites : (VI. Jos. 15, 27)

Isidorus : IX. Flacc. 20 & [N]-24, 125-127, 135-150, X. Leg. 355

Israel <sup>a</sup> : The proper preface to Philo's treatment of the nation is his interpretation of the individual, Jacob, renamed Israel. In some cases Philo links the nation onto the man (e.g. Mig. 199-201, Conf. 145-148) <sup>b</sup> ; in others he does not distinguish between the two (e.g. Leg. All. iii. 15, where Lev. xv. 31 is used to develop teaching on Jacob ; and, for the contrary, Ebr. 24, where the nation is called  $\delta$  Ἰσραηλῆς, Philo's regular term for Jacob ;

<sup>a</sup> Only passages containing the actual word(s) are included, with a few exceptions. Of course Philo often alludes to Israel without mentioning the name ; and that applies particularly to the biographical books. On the other hand, he repeatedly uses texts proper to Israel without any reference to context ; this makes a complete analysis almost impossible. See also Hebrews, Jews, Alexandrians.

<sup>b</sup> Sometimes, of course, Philo's text uses Jacob or Israel for the nation (e.g. Num. xxiii. 7, see Conf. 72).

INDEX OF NAMES

cf. 111). In one case it is Isaac with whom Israel is almost equated (Fug. 208)

For Philo Israel means 'seeing God,' and so he calls Israel 'the seeing one' or 'the race of vision.'<sup>a</sup> By Israel he usually means the mind or soul. Sometimes it is the good (or better) mind as a whole,<sup>b</sup> often faced with outward opposition<sup>c</sup>; sometimes it is the better part of it,<sup>d</sup> contrasted with a lower inward element represented by one of Israel's enemies<sup>e</sup>; sometimes divisions in Israel represent the conflicting elements of the soul.<sup>f</sup> But it would be unwise to press these distinctions

<sup>a</sup> (ὁ) ὁρῶν (τὸν Θεόν), Leg. All. ii. 34, iii. 15, 172, 186, 212, Sac. 134, Post. 63, 89-92, Plant. 58, Sob. 13, Conf. 56, 146, 148, 159, Mig. 113, 125, Quis Her. 78, Congr. 51, Fug. 208, Som. ii. 44, 172f, Abr. 57, Leg. 4, cf. Agr. 81, Mig. 200f, 224, Congr. 51, Som. ii. 279. τὸ ὁρατικὸν γένος, Quod Deus 144, Conf. 91f, Mig. 18, 54, Mut. 109, 189, 258, Som. ii. 279; ὁρατικός with τρόπος, Plant. 60; ψυχή, Ebr. 111, Fug. 139; διάνοια, Mig. 14; νοῦς, Mut. 209; ὁ ὁρατικός, οἱ ὁρατικοί. Mig. 163, Plant. 46f. Other expressions are used in Sac. 118-120, Plant. 58, Conf. 72, Quis Her. 279, Fug. 208, Mut. 203, 209, Som. i. 114, 172f.

<sup>b</sup> E.g. Plant. 58 (ψυχῶν σοφῶν θίασος), Leg. 5; cf. Abr. 58f, Conf. 148.

<sup>c</sup> E.g. Mig. 14, Mut. 209, where Israel is the population of the soul led out from Egypt, the body; Mut. 107, the ruling mind, swamped by Midianite sensuality.

<sup>d</sup> E.g. Sac. 119 (μεσαίτατον καὶ ἡγεμονικώτατον τῆς ψυχῆς) and Abr. 57 (ὄρασις ἢ διὰ τοῦ τῆς ψυχῆς ἡγεμονικοῦ προφέρει τὰς ἄλλας σοαὶ περὶ αὐτὸ δυνάμεις· αὕτη δέ ἐστι φρόνησις, ὅψις διανοίας).

<sup>e</sup> E.g. Pharaoh (Det. 91-95), the Egyptians (Leg. All. ii. 34, Sac. 134, Conf. 91f), Amalek (Leg. All. iii. 186).

<sup>f</sup> Leg. All. ii. 77f (the Israelites killed by serpents, οὐ τὸ ἄρχον ἐστὶν ἐν ἡμῶν, ἀλλὰ τὸ ἀρχόμενον τὸ λαῶδες), Mig. 18 (of the Exodus, τὰ θνητὰ τῆς ψυχῆς καὶ τὰ ἀφθαρτα, κτλ.), Quis Her. 78f (of Manna, cf. Mig. 199-201, Agr. 79-81).

INDEX OF NAMES

This soul-vision is an unaided faculty, transcending any perception through instruction, symbolized by hearing (Conf. 72, 148, Fug. 208, cf. Abr. 57). It represents the highest kind of seeing, the sight of the truly Existing, superior to the contemplation of the heavens and the trivialities of the sophist (Congr. 51f, cf. Abr. 58, Leg. 5f, Praem. 43-46).<sup>a</sup> It is the sight of the understanding, namely wisdom (Abr. 57, Plant. 58), outstripping reason (Leg. 4-6, cf. Praem. 43-46). It means the acme of happiness (Abr. 58). In one passage Philo allows Israel to be eclipsed; if any cannot attain to being a son of God, the next place is to be a son of God's First Born, variously entitled as the Word, Israel, etc. Those who do are sons of God's invisible image, the Word, or 'sons of Israel' (Conf. 145-148)

On the nation itself Philo makes little direct comment, though much can be inferred from its symbolical precedence. He calls it 'beloved of God' (Mig. 113) and 'the best of races' (Congr. 51), and describes it as a plant whose root was Abraham (Quis Her. 279). In Mos. i. 67 he says that the Burning Bush was a symbol of the suffering people

- I. Gen. Introd. p. xvi, Leg. All. ii. 34, iii. 11, 15, 172, 186, 194n, 212-214, II. Sac. 118-120 & [N], 134f, Det. 67, 91 & [N]-95, Post. 54, 63, 89, 92, 158, III. Quod Deus 144f, Agr. 81 & [N], Plant. 46f, 58-60, 63, Ebr. 24, 77, 79n, 82f, III. Sob. 13, 19, IV. Conf. 36, 56 & n, 72, 91-94, 145-148, 150, <sup>a</sup> But it may be of interest to notice Quis Her. 279, where Israel is σκεπτικὸν καὶ θεωρητικὸν τῶν τῆς φύσεως πραγμάτων, and Som. ii. 17, νοῦς θεωρητικὸς Θεοῦ τε καὶ κόσμου.

INDEX OF NAMES

- Mig.* 14f, 18, 25, 26 & n, 54, 113f, 125, 163 & n, 200f, 224, Quis Her. 19, 78, 117, 124, 203, 251, 279, Congr. 51, 86, 177n, V. Fug. 139, 208, Mut. 107, 109, 189, 207-209, 258-260, Som. i. 62, 71, 77, 89, 114, 117, ii. 44, 172f, 222, 271, 279f, VI. Abr. 56-59, Mos. i. 294n, ii. 186n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 51n, 100n, 131n, 303n, 319n, ii. 82n, 145n, 163n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 13n, 55n, Virt. 34[N], 75n, 92n, 120n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xv, xx f, 4-6 & n
- Issachar : Leah's fifth son, born after Judah ('Praise'), means 'pay' or 'reward'; for the thanksgiver finds in thanksgiving itself an all-sufficient reward (Plant. 134-136). Elsewhere Issachar signifies the man of toil (Gen. xlix. 15; so Mig. 221) who is worthy of reward. Thus in Leg. All. i. 79-83, 80[N], he represents the man who exercises good sense, labouring in noble deeds, and not in vain, for he is rewarded by God; so too in Som. ii. 34, where Philo suggests the deeds themselves may constitute the perfect reward; in Ebr. 94 he symbolizes those worthy of rewards because they have toiled in the acquisition of virtue
- I. Leg. All. i. 79, 80 & n & [N], 83, ii. 94, III. Plant. 134-136, Ebr. 94, IV. Mig. 221, V. Fug. 73, Som. ii. 34
- Italy, Italian : I. Leg. All. i. 62, IX. Vit. Cont. 48, Aet. 139, Flacc. 109, 125, 157f, 173, X. Leg. 10, 108, 116, 155, 159, 252
- Ithamar : (Exod. xxviii. 1), V. Som. ii. 186, VI. Mos. ii. 276 & n

Jabal : see s.v. Jobel

Jacob : Jacob, the third of the three great Patriarchs,

INDEX OF NAMES

is usually ὁ ἀσκητής, the Practiser <sup>a</sup>; but, following the derivation in Gen. xxvii. 36, Philo also uses ὁ περηνιστής, περηνίζων, the Supplanter <sup>b</sup>; much less often, Israel, and almost always with reference to the change of name.<sup>c</sup> Jacob symbolizes the soul (e.g. Som. i. 128, 179-181, Abr. 52) or mind (e.g. Quis Her. 256) or reason,<sup>d</sup> especially as the type of those who learn by practise, making gradual progress,<sup>e</sup> with toil.<sup>f</sup> In this he is often compared with Abraham and Isaac.<sup>g</sup> Otherwise his particular significance is mostly suggested by the Genesis narratives, so that we find Jacob repeatedly contrasted with Esau or Laban <sup>g</sup>

When Isaac's wife Rebecca eventually conceived she learned she had twins and that the elder would serve the younger (Gen. xxv. 23, Congr. 129); for God foreknew their potential faculties, and that Jacob, the good character endowed <sup>a</sup> ἀσκητής itself is used nearly sixty times; if we include the cognate words ἀσκητικός, ἀσκησις, ἀσκέω, there are nearly a hundred occurrences. Usually it is ὁ ἀσκητής, occasionally with a noun in apposition (νοῦς, ἀρετή) or with a descriptive genitive (σοφίας, καλῶν); or ἀσκητικός (λόγος, τρόπος, ψυχὴ διάνοια, βίος, ἀρετή, μελέται). The translators have varied their renderings—Practiser, Self-trained, (self-)disciplined, man of earnest effort, devotee of virtue, etc.

<sup>b</sup> Leg. All. i. 61, ii. 89, iii. 15, 93, 180, Sac. 42, 135, Mig. 200, cf. Quis Her. 252, Mut. 81, Som. i. 171.

<sup>c</sup> See below.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ λογισμὸν, Som. i. 180; πρεσβύτερος λόγος, Mut. 94; πρεσβύτερος ὀρθὸς λόγος, Som. ii. 135.

<sup>e</sup> προκόπτω, προκοπή. Det. 5, 51, Sac. 120, Post. 78, Conf. 72.

<sup>f</sup> πόνος, Leg. All. iii. 15, Cher. 46, Sac. 120, Mig. 214, Congr. 35, Fug. 14, Mut. 84-86, 88, Som. i. 120, 127, 168, 179, Jos. 223, cf. 230, Praem. 27, 36. Cf. ἀγωνία, Mut. 81, Som. i. 168.

INDEX OF NAMES

with reason, would dominate the slavish, base and irrational Esau (Leg. All. iii. 88f, cf. Congr. 129, Praem. 63). Esau was ἄγρoυκοs, Jacob ἄπλαστος (xxv. 27). Philo exploits the adjectives to point the contrast: Jacob's nature is simple, unfabricated, in contrast to Esau, whose very name suggests fabrication to Philo (Plant. 44). Jacob dwelt in a house, that is, virtue (Leg. All. iii. 2), but Esau is houseless (Congr. 61f). Esau surrenders to Jacob his birthright (xxv. 29-34). This is the victory <sup>a</sup> of the practiser of excellence in his unrelenting warfare against the passions (Sac. 17f, 120), the bad man's power "fainting" at Jacob's "seething" reason (ib. 81 & n). Though Esau is the elder, Jacob is proved morally senior (Sac. 17f, Sob. 26). In the story of Jacob cheating Esau of their father's blessing, Jacob says Esau is hairy, he himself smooth (λεῖοs, xxviii. 11). This smoothness signifies Jacob's nakedness of soul (i.e. freedom from passion; in Mig. 153, singleness of aim), which his marrying Leah (Λεία) confirms (Leg. All. ii. 59 & n). Isaac's surprise at the speed with which the venison was brought (xxvii. 20) also interests Philo: Jacob found quickly because God imparts wisdom to his disciples and the slow stages of learning are by-passed (Sac. 64, Quod Deus 92f, Ebr. 120, Fug. 168f). Philo contrives other contrasts with Esau from the same text (see Quis Her. 252-254 & n). Jacob had hardly gone out when Esau entered (xxvii. 30, Ebr. 9), for the exodus of virtue works the entrance of evil, and vice versa—but only to find himself supplanted

<sup>a</sup> Cf. p. 339, note a.

INDEX OF NAMES

(xxvii. 36, Sac. 134f). This is the soul's victory over passion (Leg. All. iii. 190f, cf. Mig. 208, Quis Her. 252n).<sup>a</sup> Esau's blessing says he is to serve Jacob (xxvii. 40): it is the chance for the ignorant to learn from the wise (Leg. All. iii. 193, cf. Quod Omn. Prob. 57), for the rebellious and warring nature to submit to self-control (Congr. 175f)<sup>b</sup>

Rebecca then advised Jacob to flee to her brother Laban (xxvii. 42-45). This was a flight from evil (Esau), but also from perfect virtue (his parents), giving him the chance to know himself (Fug. 42-47), a flight from intellect to the senses, when discretion required it (Mig. 208-211): it is politic to avoid action too antithetical (Fug. 27), and sense-perception is a useful second-best refuge (Som. i. 41-46). In any case it was only a temporary measure. Jacob "journeyed to Haran and met a place" (xxviii. 10f). This place is the Logos, intermediate to the perception of God (Som. i. 68-70),<sup>c</sup> for direct illumination has been withdrawn (ib. 115-117). It is also the Logos that Jacob uses for the pillow of his mind (127f). The dream of the Ladder and its allegorical significance are treated at length

<sup>a</sup> In Mig. 208 Jacob is said to be τέλειος τὴν ψυχὴν (contr. Fug. 40); but perfection is usually associated with the wrestling victory and his change of name. See below, p. 347, note e.

<sup>b</sup> ἐγκράτεια, Quis Her. 254, Congr. 31, 175, Som. ii. 15.

<sup>c</sup> The 'place' is on the way to Haran, and might have been intermediate in a local sense. But Philo seems to assume that Jacob has arrived at Sense-perception (Haran), and that (the incident in) this place is on the way to his vision of God (Israel).

INDEX OF NAMES

(see Som. i. 133-188, and the Analytical Summary, V. pp. 289-291)

When Rachel demanded children of him, thinking that sense-perception and mind can procreate all things (Post. 179 ; virtue, Leg. All. iii. 180), Jacob expostulated, saying that he was not in the place of God (xxx. 1f), that is, that God is antecedent to the mind and the only Cause (Leg. All. ii. 46f)

Jacob and Laban divided the flocks. Jacob's share was the variegated beasts, Laban's those without mark (xxx. 42). This division represents that between things approved by their stamp, awarded by God to the lover of instruction, and those having no mark, assigned to the man of ignorance (Quis Her. 180, Fug. 9f). The soul can refuse impressions, or it can submissively receive indelible stamps (ib. 181). In Fug. 11 ἐπίσημος<sup>a</sup> passes to Jacob himself as champion of a theistic philosophy against the materialist Laban ; the world is created, and each thing has been shaped and marked by God's Word. Jacob's dream about the flocks (xxxi. 10ff, Som. i. 189-256) refers to the couplings and breedings of thoughts (Som. i. 197), the mating of well-endowed souls with perfect virtues (200), 'variegated' like the branches of knowledge (205). Jacob flees from Laban (xxxi. 20f). This was flight inspired by hatred<sup>b</sup> (Fug. 4), shared by the faculties and virtues of the Practiser.<sup>c</sup> It is the soul's flight

<sup>a</sup> In Som. i. 202 ἐπίσημος may have suggested 'genuine' coinage ; see note.

<sup>b</sup> The earlier flight from Esau was one of fear.

<sup>c</sup> ἀσκητικαὶ δυνάμεις, i.e. Rachel and Leah, Gen. xxxi. 14-16 ; Fug. 14f, cf. Congr. 31.

INDEX OF NAMES

from materialism (ib. 8), from folly (14), from the passions (22, Leg. All. iii. 15-19), to the height and greatness of virtue (Gilead)

The wrestling of Gen. xxxii. 24f marks a stage in the soul's progress, as contrasted with Jacob's victory and new name (xxxii. 28, Mig. 200). It is the exercise given by the Logos to the pupil-athlete to develop his strength (Som. i. 129, Mut. 14 & n; contrast Mig. 27). In Mut. 14, Som. i. 131, it represents the quest for virtue. In Praem. 48 it is apparently a wrestling against passions within himself. The numbing of the thigh ligament is the paralysing of conceit (ib. 47f), a voluntary disabling (Som. i. 131), yet the reward for victory (Praem. 47, Som. i. 130); but in Mut. 187 we are told that virtue is not sound-footed in our mortal and bodily nature, but limps a little. Elsewhere the reward is the vision of God (Mut. 82, cf. Som. i. 129). Apart from all this, the 'wrestling' has provided Philo with a metaphor which he uses frequently to describe the Practiser's conflict against the passions (see below)

After the wrestling Jacob was told, "thy name shall no more be called Jacob, but Israel shall thy name be. Because thou hast been strong with God and mighty with men" (xxxii. 28). The second part of the verse indicates the soul's inward and outward purity; to win honour in its duty towards the uncreated and the created demands a mind truly midway between the world and God (Mut. 44f); the soul wholeheartedly following virtue will respect both parents, right reason (father), which teaches it to honour the Father of all, and instruction (mother), which introduces custom and convention (Ebr. 80-83). The change of name from Jacob to Israel is for Philo the most significant incident in Jacob's career. Generally it is associated with his wrestling victory: the prize is the vision of God, Israel (Mig. 199-201, Mut. 81f, Praem. 27). Hitherto Jacob has been characterized by learning and progress, now he has attained perfection (Ebr. 82, Som. i. 119f, Praem. 36; contrast Mut. 87); toil in the quest for truth has given place to vision (Leg. All. iii. 15, Praem. 27); hearing<sup>a</sup> is replaced by eyesight (Ebr. 82, Conf. 72, Mig. 38, Som. i. 129); or, what was seen before, but dimly, is now seen clearly (Mut. 81f, Som. i. 177, Praem. 37); the irrational element has been conquered, the soul has achieved intellectual apprehension (Mig. 199-201). This is a reminting or remodelling of the soul (μεταχαράττω, Mig. 39, Som. i. 129f, 171). Different emphases are found according to the context. Thus in Ebr. 83 the advance which this change of name represents wins the approval of both parents, right reason and convention (see above). In Mig. 199-201 it is shown that seventy and five (the senses) were associated with Jacob, but seventy only (intellectual apprehension) with Israel. In Sac. 119f Reuben is son of Jacob but Levi son of Israel, because devout contemplation is proper to the service of God. Vision is an appropriate reward for the Practiser, as faith was for Abraham and joy for Isaac (Praem. 27), <sup>a</sup> Learning depends upon hearing, but the vision of God represents that perfection which does so no longer.

INDEX OF NAMES

INDEX OF NAMES

or because an active life goes with youth but a contemplative one suits old age (ib. 51 & [N]). In Som. i. 238-241 it is said that hitherto Jacob has mistaken the Logos for God, now he sees God Himself. In Mut. 83, 87 it is an angel rather than God that renames Jacob (contr. Abraham) because Jacob continues often to be called by his old name : he is not consistently perfect. In Praem. 44-46, on the other hand, it is stressed that the revelation of God is given by God Himself : seekers for truth see God through God (cf. 39f, and Som. i. 240). Philo sometimes gives the impression that it is the climax of Jacob's own achievement (cf. Som. i. 171, Mig. 199-201, Mut. 81f), but then emphasizes that it is a revelation (e.g. Praem. 27, 36-39, cf. Som. i. 240). The vision of God only revealed that God is, not what He is (Praem. 39). Once or twice Israel is used for Jacob without reference to the renaming (e.g. Leg. All. ii. 46 & [N],<sup>a</sup> Quod Deus 121). Otherwise Israel refers to the nation, see s.v. Israel. In Ebr. 24 the nation is termed ' the Practiser '

Only a few of Philo's further comments on the narrative need be added. " In my rod I crossed this Jordan " (xxxii. 10) is the mind crossing over the lower nature by schooling (Leg. All. ii. 89). The hiding of the strange gods (xxxv. 4) is the hiding, guarding, and destroying of passions (Leg. All. iii. 23, 27). " The God who feedeth me from my youth up unto this day, the Angel who delivereth me out of all my ills, bless these boys "

<sup>a</sup> ὁ βλέπων, although in a context chronologically earlier than the renaming.

INDEX OF NAMES

(Jacob's words in xlvi. 15): from this Philo deduces that God rather than the Word feeds Jacob, that is, the principal boons (the various forms of knowledge) are from God Himself, the secondary gifts (remedial) from His Word (Leg. All. iii. 177, Fug. 66); or, that sustenance is from God rather than created things like rain (Quod Deus 157f); or, that God gives the good for virtue-loving souls, while angels have the province of evils for punishment (Conf. 181, Fug. 67). Mut. 41 deals with another phrase, "pleasing before God" rather than to Him

"Jacob departed and was added to his people" (xlix. 33). Like Abraham, he inherited incorruption and joined the angels, advancing to something better (Sac. 5)

Mut. 81f tells of Jacob's practice of virtue and warfare (Som. i. 174, 255) against the passions,<sup>a</sup> and this passage happens to contain most of the links in the chain of Philo's terms for this. Jacob is the supplanter of Esau, hence the supplanter of the passions (Leg. All. ii. 89, iii. 93, Sac. 42), which he is even said to hunt (Quis Her. 252 & n). He is the practised wrestler (πάλην ἡσκηκόςτος, Leg. All. iii. 190), so the struggle is a contest or bout (Congr. 31, Mig. 200, Som. i. 129, 255); the practised or trained wrestler, so we find athletic metaphors (γεγυμνασμένος, ἀθλητής, etc.).<sup>b</sup>

<sup>a</sup> His struggle is also directed against ignorance (Det. 3), the irrational element (Mig. 200), vainglory (Som. i. 255), effeminacy (ib. 126).

<sup>b</sup> γυμνάζω, etc., Sob. 65, Mut. 84f; ἀθλέω, ἀθλητής, etc., Mig. 26f, Congr. 70, Fug. 43, Som. i. 126, 131, 168, 179, cf. Jos. 230, Virt. 210; and both in Mig. 199f, Som. i. 129, 251, Abr. 48, Jos. 26, 223.

INDEX OF NAMES

This of course suggests that the vision of God is a prize (see above)

Esau provides the most frequent contrast to Jacob, representing passion<sup>a</sup> or wickedness and vice,<sup>b</sup> folly or ignorance,<sup>c</sup> the irrational.<sup>d</sup> Once Esau and Jacob are types of the twin natures in man (Praem. 63). Laban, too, is passion against Jacob's virtue (Leg. All. iii. 18-22), but chiefly he represents the (objects of the) senses<sup>e</sup> and corporeal ideas,<sup>f</sup> materialist and atheist philosophy (Fug. 8f, 11, 46f); he champions particular qualities against Jacob's theism (Cher. 67), the laws of time-order (Ebr. 48), sophistry (ib. 50); he represents ignorance and lack of schooling,<sup>g</sup> folly,<sup>h</sup> vainglory (Fug. 47). With him are associated his daughters,<sup>i</sup> but as the wives of Jacob they are faculties or virtues of the Practiser<sup>j</sup>

But it is the relationship of Abraham and Isaac to Jacob which most interests Philo. The three form an educational trinity representing the spiritual knowledge or virtue which is reached

<sup>a</sup> Passion, Leg. All. iii. 2, 190-192, Sac. 17f, 42, 81, Quis Her. 252-254, Virt. 208, Praem. 59.

<sup>b</sup> Wickedness, Sac. 134f, Det. 45f, Mig. 208, Congr. 129.

<sup>c</sup> Folly, Sac. 17, Ebr. 10, Sob. 26, Congr. 61, 175, Quod Omn. Prob. 57; cf. Virt. 209, Praem. 59. Ignorance, Fug. 39-43.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ φαῦλον καὶ ἄλογον, Leg. All. iii. 88f, Praem. 59; φαῦλον also in Sac. 18, Virt. 209.

<sup>e</sup> Leg. All. iii. 15-17, 20-22, Ebr. 46f, Mig. 28, Fug. 22, 45.

<sup>f</sup> Leg. All. iii. 15, Ebr. 46f, Mig. 28.

<sup>g</sup> Leg. All. iii. 20, cf. Quis Her. 180, Fug. 14.

<sup>h</sup> Agr. 42, Fug. 14, 16, 45.

<sup>i</sup> E.g., Cher. 67, Leg. All. iii. 20.

<sup>j</sup> E.g., Cher. 40 & [N], Post. 62, Congr. 24 & n-33, Quis Her. 43, Fug. 15.

INDEX OF NAMES

by teaching (Abraham), nature (Isaac), practice (Jacob).<sup>a</sup> Most of what Philo has to say about Jacob has been governed by his being the Practiser of virtue : and that rôle was chosen for him because of Philo's wish to reproduce an educational trinity in the Patriarchs. They are compared with each other in these particulars : they are all founders of the race (Mut. 88, cf. Jos. 172), God names Himself by them (Mut. 12, Mos. i. 76), their descent has spiritual significance<sup>b</sup> (Som. i. 166-170), they have certain qualities in them, whether these are potential or active (Sob. 38), they are sojourners only (Conf. 79-81), their deaths are a progress to something better (Sac. 5-7). They represent learning by teaching, by nature, by practice<sup>c</sup> ; Mig. 125 offers a variation on the theme : the Patriarchs are the threefold divisions of eternity (see note). Isaac is once or twice distinguished from Abraham and Jacob<sup>d</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Sac. 5-7 & [N], Sob. 38 & n, Conf. 79-81, Mig. 125 & [N], Congr. 34-36, Mut. 12 & [N], 83-88, Som. i. 166-170, cf. 160, 173, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. x & n, xi & n, Abr. 48-55, Jos. 1, Mos. i. 76, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, Praem. 24-27, 49-51 & [N], 57ff. The threefold education is also mentioned, without reference to the Patriarchs, in Leg. 320.

<sup>b</sup> Abraham is called ' father ' of Jacob in Gen. xxviii. 13. But see also the passages where Philo speaks of Abraham being grandfather of Jacob's knowledge : Sac. 43, Som. i. 47 & [N], 70, cf. Quod Deus 92 & [N].

<sup>c</sup> διδασκαλία, φύσις, ἄσκησις are found in Sob. 38 (Conf. 79-81), Abr. 48-55, Jos. 1 (μάθησις for διδασκαλία), Mos. i. 76, Praem. 24-27, 49-51, 57ff. There is a variation in Mut. 12, but see [N].

<sup>d</sup> Their names are changed, Isaac's not (Mut. 83-88). They married several women, Isaac only one (Congr. 34-36)—but in Cher. 40f the patriarchs have nothing to do with women, for they reject sense : their wives are virtues. Isaac might

INDEX OF NAMES

Jacob's character never suffers eclipse with Philo.

He is the practiser of virtue, the supplanter of passion, at war for the one against the other (see above). His virtue or his being a type of virtue is constantly referred to,<sup>a</sup> his pursuit of things noble,<sup>b</sup> his wisdom.<sup>c</sup> He is the man of worth.<sup>d</sup> He becomes perfect.<sup>e</sup> We are also told he is wealthy (Det. 13f), courageous (Mut. 214), holy (Abr. 52, Jos. 167), a prophet (Quis Her. 261), God-loving (Abr. 50) and God-beloved (Sob. 29, cf. Som. i. 243, Jos. 167, 200), one of the band of friends of God (Som. i. 196) seem to lag behind! But Philo is not here thinking of the educational triad.

I. Gen. Introd. p. xii, Leg. All. i. 61, ii. 46 & [N], 89, 94-97, 103, iii. 15-23, 88f, 90, 93, 146, 177, 179-181, 190-195, II. Cher. 40, 41 & [N], 46, 67, Sac.

<sup>a</sup> Leg. All. iii. 2, 15, 22, 89, 93, Cher. 40, Sac. 17f, 46, 134f, Det. 45, Ebr. 82f, Sob. 15, 65, Conf. 181, Mig. 27, 200, Quis Her. 256, Congr. 24, 35, 123, Fug. 21, 25, Mut. 14, 81, 83, 171f & nn, Som. i. 45, 121, 131, 174, 179, Abr. 50, 52, Jos. 1, 172, 230, Mos. i. 76, Virt. 210, Praem. 65.

<sup>b</sup> Sac. 17, Sob. 26, Mig. 153, Fug. 45, Som. i. 126, 131, 251, Jos. 4.

<sup>c</sup> Leg. All. iii. 2, 25f, 195, Sac. 18, 48, 135, Ebr. 48, Sob. 27, Mig. 101, Som. i. 70, 169, 175f, 178, 205, 207, Jos. 191, Mos. i. 76, Spec. Leg. ii. 3, Virt. 223, Praem. 51. Cf. Quod Deus 119, Quis Her. 180, Fug. 45-47.

<sup>d</sup> ἀστειός, Leg. All. iii. 23, 89, 191, Sac. 5, Conf. 73, Som. i. 176.

<sup>e</sup> He becomes τέλειος by his victory over Esau (Mig. 208; but contrast Fug. 39f, 'child'); but in Som. i. 213 he is said to be not yet perfect, because Philo mostly thinks of Jacob reaching perfection after his wrestling victory, when he became Israel (Ebr. 82, Mig. 27, 199-201, 214, Som. i. 131). His perfection is through practice: Agr. 42, Conf. 181, Congr. 35. In Mut. 83-87 he does not remain consistently perfect even after the change of name.

INDEX OF NAMES

5, 17f, 42, 46-48, 64, 81 & n, 119f, 134f, Det. 3-5, 13f, 17, 45, 46 & n, 51 & n, 67, Post. 59 & [N], 62, 75f, 78, 89, 179, Gig. 22 [N], III. Quod Deus 92, 119-121, 157f, Agr. 42, Plant. 44, 90, 110 & [N], Ebr. 9f, 24, 48 & [N], 53, 82f, 120, Sob. 12, 15, 26-29, 38 & n, 65 & n, 66, IV. Conf. 72-74, 80, 181, 182n, Mig. 5, 26-30, 38f, 101, 125 & [N], 153f, 159f, 199-201, 207 & [N]-214, Quis Her. 38, 43, 180, 242[N], 251-254 & n, 256, 261, Congr. 24 & n, 31-35, 61f, 70, 99, 123, 129, 175f, V. Fug. 4, 7-52 (esp. 10, 23-25 & [N], 39-48 & 45[N], 52), 67, 143, Mut. 12 & [N]-14, 41, 44-46, 81-88, 92, 94, 97, 171 & n, 172 & n, 187, 210, 214f, Som. i. 1-2[N], 3f, 5n, 45-47 & [N], 61, 68-72, 112n, 115 & n-120, 125, 126 & n & [N]-133, 144, 150, 159 & n, 163, 166-182 & n, (183-188), 189f, 196-205, 207f & n, 213, 227f, 238, 240 & n, 249-256, Som. ii. 15, 19f, 66, 135, 136n, 141, 207 & n, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. x-xii, xv n, xvi f, Abr. 48-56, Jos. 1, 4f, 8-14, 20, 22-27, 163-270 (esp. 223, 230), Mos. i. 76, 239-242, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 3 & n, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xviii, xxi, Virt. 6n, 208 & n & [N]-210, 223f, Praem. 24-27, 36-39, 40n, 44 & n, 51, 57, 59f, 61n, 63, 65f & n & [N], 78[N], 166n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 57, (Flacc. 74n), Hyp. 6. 1 & n

Jamneia : X. Leg. 200, 203

Japhet : praised for covering over the soul's sad change (I. Leg. All. ii. 63); Noah's prayer for Japhet (Gen. ix. 27) is that mind and body and external advantages may all contribute to his attaining the good (III. Sob. 59-61 & [N]), though his final home is to be the excellence of the soul (67f). See also III. Sob. Introd. p. 441

Jason : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 143

INDEX OF NAMES

Jehovah : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 217n, 222n

Jeremiah : II. Cher. 49 & [N]. See Scripture Index

Jerusalem : the 'city of God' in one sense is the whole world ; in another sense it is the soul of the sage. Its name Jerusalem means 'vision of peace' ; and God is peace, and dwells in the peace-loving soul. (V. Som. ii. 246-254), IX. Flacc. 46, X. Leg. 156, 203, 220, 225, 231f, 278, 281, 288f, 312f, 315, 346

Jethro : Jethro symbolizes τῦφος, 'vanity.'<sup>a</sup> In Greek his name is περισσός, for which it is hard to find an equivalent in English.<sup>b</sup> His is the mind which welcomes conceit (τῦφος) in preference to truth, and conceit is an 'uneven' thing (περισσόν); the conceit that modifies basic principles and so deceives the true life (Agr. 43 & [N]); the vacillating opinion whose superficial wisdom (δοκησίσοφος) contrasts with the true wisdom of Moses (Ebr. 36f); the one who jeers at things equal (ἴσα) and necessary to life, and glorifies the inequalities of surplus (? 'covetousness' : πλεονεξίας ἄνισα σεμνύνων, Mut. 103 & n). Besides δοκησίσοφος (Ebr. 37, Mut. 105), Philo uses δημαγωγέω (Ebr. 37) and ἀσέβεια (ib. 41) of Jethro. For his interpretation of Jethro's advice to Moses see Ebr. 36-40 ; compare Mut. 103ff & nn, where Philo misrepresents the story

<sup>a</sup> τῦφος, Gig. 50, Agr. 43, Ebr. 36 (πλάσμα τῦφου), 40, Mut. 103, 114.

<sup>b</sup> Whitaker began with 'worldling' in Sac. 50 ; used 'uneven' in Agr. 43, and withdrew 'worldling' ; in Mut. 103 he chose 'superfluous.' See his notes on Sac. 50 and Agr. 43. περισσός is also used in Gig. 50.

INDEX OF NAMES

In Exod. ii. 18, Num. 10. 29, Moses' father-in-law is Raguel, which means 'the shepherding of God.' This change of name reflects a change of character in Jethro, who is won over to the herd of God in admiration of Moses' direction of it (Mut. 105). His connexion with Midian <sup>a</sup> signifies that he is the judicial justice-dispensing sort, with seven daughters symbolizing the seven faculties of the unreasoning element (ib. 110-120)

II. Sac. 50 & [N], Post. 77, Gig. 50, III. Agr. 43 & [N], Ebr. 36-45, IV. Quis Her. 44, V. Mut. 103-114, 104nn, VI. Mos. i. 52, 58f, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 173

Jews, Jewish <sup>b</sup>: In Mos. i. 67 Philo says that the Burning Bush was a symbol of the suffering Jews. In Spec. Leg. iv. 179 he remarks that the race is in the position of an orphan compared with the nations all around. In Virt. 65 he says that what others gain from philosophy the Jews gain from their customs and laws, that is, to know the Cause of all

VI. Mos. i. 7, 34, ii. 17, 25, 41, 193, 216, VII. Decal. 96, Spec. Leg. i. 97, ii. 163, 166, iii. 46, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 173-175 & n, 179, 224, Virt. 65, 108, 206, 212, 226, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 29, 43, 57, 68, 75, Aet. 19, Flacc. 1, 21, 23f, 29, 43, 45, 47, 49, 54-56, <sup>a</sup> It is as Jethro he is priest of Midian (Exod. iii. 1). Philo associates this good, judiciary character of Midian with Raguel (Mut. 110ff); perhaps he intended us to infer that the bad sense of Midian applies to Jethro, but omitted any explicit statement for lack of a convenient text to illustrate Jethro being 'sifted out.' See Midian.

<sup>b</sup> The references only include the passages in which the word occurs in the Greek text. See also Israel, Hebrews, Alexandrians.

INDEX OF NAMES

- 66, 73f, 80, 85f, 94, 96, 116, 170, 189, 191, X. Leg. 115, 117, 129, 133f, 154f, 157-160, 170, 182, 184, 194, 198, 200f, 205, 210, 216, 222, 226, 245, 248, 253, 256, 278, 282, 307, 311, 313, 315f, 330, 333, 335, 346, 350, 355, 368, 370f, 373
- Job : V. Mut. 48, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5n, Prov. Introd. p. 449
- Jobel : II. Post. 83-100. Son of Ada, and μέγιστον κακόν, for he removes the landmarks fixed by the natural order (83 ; by divine principles, 89), the boundaries of virtue fixed by right reason (91). His name means 'altering' (83, 93), and he changed the virtues for vices (93), adulterating the original coinage (98). He is the father of all those who rear what is not of the soul but of the senses (99)
- Jordan : Jacob said, " In my rod I crossed this Jordan " (Gen. xxxii. 10)—the supplanter of the passions, the disciplined mind, by schooling himself crossed the lower nature : for Jordan means 'descent.' Philo adds that it would be ταπεινόν to take the verse at its face value, I. Leg. All. ii. 89. The three Cities of Refuge beyond Jordan are the three divine Potencies that are far removed from men, V. Fug. 87, 103. Add VI. Mos. i. 319, 330, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 158
- Joseph : Philo's treatment in the Allegorical Commentary is most unfair to the Joseph we find in Genesis. Presumably this was forced upon him by his own allegorical scheme ; for most of Joseph's career takes place in Egypt, the type of the body and its passions, and he is there honoured as second only to Pharaoh, the anti-thesis of all that is good. In order to present

INDEX OF NAMES

Joseph in this unfavourable light, Philo often ignores texts uncongenial to his thesis, or misrepresents those which he does quote.<sup>a</sup> Nevertheless he does sometimes allow Joseph to have had good qualities <sup>b</sup> and to be a type of the good soul.<sup>c</sup> In the De Josepho, however, the whole approach is reversed; no praise can be too high for the Patriarch (φύλαρχος, Jos. i.), and only once does Philo hint at a flaw in his character.<sup>d</sup> Again and again we find what amounts to a categorical denial of things which he has said of him in the earlier works. An indication of this is given in Philo's discussion of Joseph's name. It means, he says, 'Addition'—of external advantages (Mut. 89f), of spurious qualities (Som. ii. 47), of vanity rather than simplicity (ib. 63). But in Jos. 28 it is 'Addition of a lord,' and refers—favourably—to his political career. For a further discussion of this see VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xii-xiv

Joseph is the politician,<sup>e</sup> attempting to 'keep in' with two worlds, the real and the sham, prepared to compromise (Mig. 158, 162, Som. ii. 14f) and <sup>a</sup> Philo omits, e.g., that Jacob loved Joseph and that he gave him the coat (xxxvii. 3a), and that the Lord was with Joseph and gave him favour with the gaoler (xxxix. 2a, 21); he misrepresents xxxix. 1 by applying 'eunuch' to the Joseph-soul (Quod Deus 111 & [N]), xxxvii. 33 by assuming the false allegation there to be true (Som. ii. 65f & n, Jos. 36), and perhaps 1. 7f (Mig. 159f). In Mig. 21 (see [N]) the misrepresentation is in Joseph's favour.

<sup>b</sup> Philo lists these in Mig. 18-24.

<sup>c</sup> Fug. 126-131, Mut. 214f.

<sup>d</sup> Jos. 34-36.

<sup>e</sup> ὁ πολιτικός, Leg. All. iii. 179, Jos. 1, ὁ πολιτικός τρόπος, Fug. 126, cf. Mig. 159, Som. i. 221, πολιτεία, Det. 6, Som. i. 78, 219f. See p. 354, note c.

INDEX OF NAMES

to subordinate truth to expediency or falsehood (Det. 7, Som. i. 220), accommodating himself to both body and soul (Mig. 159, cf. Som. ii. 11, i. 78); and, being a politician, he is often given to worldly and unspiritual ambitions (Mig. 163, cf. Som. i. 219f, ii. 12, 16; contrast Fug. 126), he is eager for vainglory,<sup>a</sup> self-opinionated,<sup>b</sup> presumptuous (Som. ii. 99), swollen-headed with vanity<sup>c</sup>

Because Egypt is the scene of his activity, his πολιτεία is connected with the body (Som. i. 78, cf. Mig. 159); his responsible position signifies care for the body (Post. 96, Sob. 13, Mut. 90, Som. ii. 42, 46). So Joseph is the lover of the body and its passions,<sup>d</sup> the champion of the body and externals,<sup>e</sup> fond of luxury (Som. ii. 9, 16). From his mother he inherited the irrational strain of sense-perception (τὸ ἄλογον αἰσθήσεως, Som. ii. 16), and it found expression in his marriage (Som. i. 78 & n), his fondness for Benjamin (Mig. 203), and his corn laws (ib.).<sup>f</sup> Yet Joseph is a Hebrew, 'emigrant' from sense-perception (Mig. 20, cf. Som. ii. 107), although in Egypt, he is ruler rather than subject (Mig. 20, Quis Her. 256), he is proof

<sup>a</sup> κενὴ δόξα, Agr. 56, Sob. 15, Som. ii. 12, 16, 42, 78, 93-99, 115, 155, cf. Mig. 21; δοξομανέω, ib. 114.

<sup>b</sup> Δοκησίσοφος, Leg. All. iii. 179.

<sup>c</sup> ποικίλος τοῦ βίου τύφος, Conf. 72; cf. Mig. 161 & [N], Som. ii. 46f, 63f, 66, 95, 98, 115, 139.

<sup>d</sup> Ὁ φιλοσώματος καὶ φιλοπαθῆς νοῦς, Quod Deus 111, Mig. 16; see also Quod Deus 120, Agr. 56, Som. ii. 16.

<sup>e</sup> Of the three goods, soul, body, and externals (see Det. 7[N]), Joseph is concerned with the lower two: so Sob. 13, Mig. 22 & n, 203. In Det. 7 and Som. ii. 9, 11, all three classes are mentioned.

<sup>f</sup> αἰσθησις also in Mig. 207, Som. ii. 65, 107.

INDEX OF NAMES

against luxury (Mut. 215), from his father he inherited self-control <sup>a</sup>

Joseph began by shepherding the sheep with his half-brothers as a young man <sup>b</sup> (Gen. xxxvii. 2). This association with the sons of Jacob's concubines is fitting, for Joseph's concern is with lower things (Quod Deus 119-121) and those who honour spurious goods (Sob. 12-15); he pastures the realm of the body (ib.) and irrational natures (Agr. 55f). Philo ignores Jacob's love for Joseph, but the coat of many colours (xxxvii. 3, ποικίλον χιτῶνα) indicates the complex doctrine (λαβυρινθώδης καὶ δυσέκλυτος δόξα) of the three goods (see above, p. 353, note e; Det. 6-9, 28); it is the robe of statecraft, variegated with falsehood and sophistry (Som. i. 219-225; contrast Jos. 32). It also underlies Philo's description of Joseph's character in Conf. 72 (ποικίλος τοῦ βίου τῦφος), and probably that in Som. ii. 10-16 (δόξα πολυμυγῆς καὶ κεκραμένη) and 66 (ὁ πολυπλοκώτατος . . . τυφοπλασθηθεὶς βίος) <sup>c</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἐγκρατής. ἐγκράτεια, Leg. All. iii. 237-241, Det. 19, Som. ii. 15, 106, Jos. 54f.

<sup>b</sup> ὦν νέος; xlix. 22, νεώτατος. He remains young and immature, Quod Deus 119f, Agr. 55f, Sob. 12-15, Conf. 72 (where the translation seems to miss this allusion); cf. Leg. All. iii. 242, Mig. 205.

<sup>c</sup> Philo's chain of ideas is also πολυπλοκώτατος, and can best be shown by a diagram. For δόξα see Som. ii. 15, Det. 6-8; the arrows indicate the influence of one idea upon another; for Αἴγυπτος—τῦφος see Mig. 160 & [N].

INDEX OF NAMES

The dreams of the sheaves and the stars (xxxvii. 7-11) reveal the vainglory of Joseph's character (Som. ii. 5-7, 30-33, 78, 93-99, 110-116; contrast Jos. 5-11). His father sends him to join his brothers in the plain (xxxvii. 13-17) to learn to discipline his lower nature (Det. 5f, 10-17); so he seeks and finds the virtuous family (Fug. 126-128)

Joseph was taken to Egypt and sold to Pharaoh's chief cook, a eunuch (xxxix. 1, LXX). So the body-loving mind is enslaved to Pleasure (Quod Deus 111).<sup>a</sup> But Potiphar's wife fails to entice him (xxxix. 7-11), and here Joseph appears in a good light as the type of self-control (Leg. All. iii. 237-242, Mig. 19, 21 &[N], Som. ii. 106; and see p. 354, note a). Unjustly imprisoned, Joseph acts as an interpreter of dreams.<sup>b</sup> In Mig. 19 Philo gives him credit for saying God is the author of interpretations; but in Cher. 128 he blames him for saying they are through God instead of by Him (xl. 8). The interpretation of Pharaoh's dreams resulted in Joseph being set over all the land of Egypt (xli. 41f), which Philo treats caustically (Som. ii. 44; but see Mig. 20). Pharaoh put Joseph in his second chariot: but this is Joseph's conceit (Som. ii. 16, 46, Mig. 160 & [N]; contrast Jos. 148-150). Pharaoh also changed his name to Psonthomphanecli, 'mouth

<sup>a</sup> Philo applies 'eunuch' to the Joseph-soul. See p. 352, note a.

<sup>b</sup> Som. ii. 42, 78. In view of their context, these titles should probably be regarded as uncomplimentary; in this book Philo constantly depreciates Joseph's dreams (Som. ii. 42, 97, 105, 138; contrast Jos. 95) and ignores his skill at interpretation.

INDEX OF NAMES

which judges in answer,' which Philo makes to suggest that fools will look for wise pronouncements from any man who happens to have great wealth (Mut. 89-91)

When his father learns that Joseph lives,<sup>a</sup> it means Joseph claimed to have real life—to Jacob's surprise, who expected him to have shared in the death of vain opinions and of the body (Mig. 21 & n, cf. Quis Her. 256), or to have succumbed to the luxury with which he was surrounded (Mig. 214f, cf. Fug. 126). Joseph's words in l. 19, "I am of God," also win approval (Mig. 22, 160, Som. ii. 107, Jos. 265f). On his death he was buried in a coffin in Egypt, but he had requested that his bones accompany his people (l. 25f); so the lower side of Joseph's personality is said to have been buried in Egypt (body) and forgotten, but the higher qualities are worthy to be remembered, and leave Egypt with Moses (Mig. 16-24, Som. ii. 105-109)

- I. Gen. Introd. pp. xii & n, xiii, xxii n, Leg. All. iii. 90-93, 179f, 237-242, II. Cher. 128, Det. 5-28, Post. 80, 96, III. Quod Deus 111 & [N]-116, 119-121, Agr. 55-59, Ebr. 210, Sob. 12-15, 27, IV. Conf. 71f, Mig. 16 & n-24 & 17[N], 21[N], 23[N], 159-163 & n & 160[N], 203f, 207 & [N], Quis Her. 242[N], 251, 256, V. Fug. 73, 126-131, Mut. 89-91, 97, 170, 171 & n, 215, Som. i. 78, 219-225, ii. 5-21, 30, 33, 42-44, 46f, 64-66, 78, 93-116, 135-141, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xii-xiv & nn, Jos. passim, <sup>a</sup> xlv. 26, the brothers report that Joseph is alive; 28, Jacob rejoices that he is alive; xlv. 30, he says so to Joseph. For other points in Gen. xlv see Leg. All. iii. 179f, Mig. 21-23, Quis Her. 251, 256, Mut. 171, 215.

INDEX OF NAMES

- VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 51[N], VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xviii n, Praem. 65[N], IX. Flacc. 72n, Prov. 2. 46n
 Joshua : in the incident of Exod. xxxii, Joshua represents a man's feeling inward tumult, while Moses is the reasoning side of his nature interpreting the true cause (III. Ebr. 96-98 & [N], 103f). Joshua's name had been Hoshea, 'he is saved'; it was changed to Joshua, 'salvation'; thus it is a change from an individual to a state, the one mortal, the other permanent, and so the coin was reminted in a better form (V. Mut. 121 & n-123). Add VI. Mos. i. 216, (232-236), VIII. Virt. 55f, 60, 66-70 & n, 72
- Jubal : II. Post. 100-111. Brother of Jobal (q.v.) and akin in meaning; for it means 'inclining now this way, now that' (μετακλίνων), and it is a figure for the uttered word (ὁ κατὰ προφορὰν λόγος), the unsure speech of the wavering mind (100). He is the inventor of musical instruments, which are inferior to song-birds but, like articulate speech, capable of such varied utterance that it is natural that they should be invented by one μετακλίνων λόγους (103-111)
- Judaea : VI. Mos. ii. 31, IX. Hyp. ii. 1, X. Leg. 199f, 207, 215, 257, 281, 294, 299
- Judah : Philo's interest in Judah is in his name and in the Tamar story. His name means 'confession of praise to the Lord.'<sup>a</sup> This is the crowning virtue, and so there is significance in Leah ceasing to bear after giving birth to Judah (Gen. xxix. 35)<sup>b</sup> and in his being the fourth son: for <sup>a</sup> Leg. All. i. 80, 82, ii. 95f, iii. 26, 146, Plant. 134-136, Ebr. 94, Congr. 125, Mut. 136, Som. i. 37, ii. 34.

<sup>b</sup> Leg. All. i. 80, ii. 95, iii. 146, Plant. 134f, Som. i. 37f.

INDEX OF NAMES

four is the number of praise and thanksgiving ; Issachar is appropriately so called ( ' reward ' ), because he was born next after Judah ( xxx. 18 ), and thanksgiving itself is an all-sufficient reward ( Plant. 134-136 ). In Leg. All. i. 79-84 Philo compares Judah with Issachar. Judah represents good sense ( φρόνησις ) as a mystical spiritual condition, Issachar good sense in the action of noble deeds. With this Philo links Judah's name ; for ' thanksgiving ' takes a man out of himself, making him independent of the body, while he acknowledges that even praise is the work, not of the soul, but of God. All this is in the discussion of the precious stones of Gen. ii. 12 ; so Judah is engraved on the ruby of the High Priest's robes, because he is permeated by fire in thanksgiving and drunk with sober drunkenness

Philo varies his interpretation of the Tamar incident, but consistently idealizes it. In Congr. 125f he is the lover of learning unveiling knowledge to discover its virtue. In Fug. 149-156 the story is an instance of seeking and not finding (by Judah's messenger) invincible virtue. Here Judah is the mind wooing piety ( θεοσέβεια ) and giving pledges of his sincerity. In Mut. 134-136 Tamar's veil prevents her seeing her wooer, though she recognizes his pledges : it is God impregnating the soul, the pledges being His working in the universe. Judah is the thankful character, gratified that no profane element has defiled the divine. In Som. ii. 44f Judah is king of the race of vision (Israel), and Tamar is the soul. The pledges are again God's working in the universe, but it is Judah who teaches the soul. In Virt. 221f Judah is not mentioned; but see [N]. The description of Judah as 'king' (Congr. 125, Som. ii. 44; cf. ἀρχικὸς φύσει, Jos. 189) seems to depend upon the 'staff' in the story

INDEX OF NAMES

- I. Gen. Introd. p. xii n, Leg. All. i. 80 & n & [N]-84, ii. 95f, iii. 26, 74, 146, III. Plant. 134-136, Ebr. 94, IV. Quis Her. 255 & n, Congr. 125f, V. Fug. 73f, 149-156, 150[N], Mut. 134-136 & 135n, Som. i. 37f, ii. 34, 44 & n, 45, VI. Jos. 15, 189, 222-231, VIII. Virt. 221[N]

Julia Augusta : X. Leg. 291, 319f

Julius Caesar : see s.v. Caesar

Jupiter : IV. Quis Her. 224

Kadesh : V. Fug. 195f, 213. The spring at which Rebecca fills her water-pot (Gen. xxiv. 16) is the Divine Wisdom, which waters the fields of knowledge and souls that love the best. Philo identifies this with En-Mishpat ('spring of judgement' or 'sifting') at Kadesh ('holy') in Gen. xiv. 7, and says the Wisdom of God is holy and free from earthy ingredient (= Kadesh) and a sifting of all the universe, separating opposites (= κρισις). In 213 Hagar's well (xvi. 14) between Bered and Kadesh is the well of School knowledge, so situated because he that is in gradual progress is on the borderland between the holy and the profane, fleeing from the bad but not yet ready to share the perfect good Keturah : wife or concubine of Abraham (Gen. xxv. 1), meaning 'incense-burning'; interpreting xxv. 5f, Philo contrasts true wisdom with school-

INDEX OF NAMES

learning (suggested by Hagar); the man engaged on this can only shed over the soul a fragrance from his studies, he cannot truly feed it. III. Sac. 43f, (VIII. Praem. 23[N])

Kibroth-Hattaavah : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 130 & n

Korah : V. Fug. 145f,<sup>a</sup> (VI. Mos. ii. 275-287), VIII. Gen.

Intro. p. xxi, Praem. 75 & n, 78[N]

Kore : VII. Decal. 54

Laban : in the Genesis narratives, and consequently in Philo, Laban acts as a foil to Jacob ; much, therefore, of Laban's story may be found in that of Jacob (q.v.). Laban means 'whitening' (λευκασμός, Agr. 42 ; λευκός, Fug. 44) and that suggests colours generally (Mig. 213) ; these in turn suggest variety of character or ideas (ib. 213, 28, Cher. 67). Laban therefore stands for the man who sets his mind on colours, forms, bodies, and all things belonging to the senses (Leg. All. iii. 15, 22, Sac. 46, Ebr. 46f). His connexion with Haran also implies sense-perception (Som. i. 41-46, Fug. 45f), so that this is the most consistent significance of Laban<sup>b</sup>

Laban's name, 'white,' suggests brightness, the bright success of vainglory (Fug. 44, 47 ; cf. Som. i. 126 & n).<sup>c</sup> But it also suggests colours, things which belong to sense and appearance, so shadowy and deceptive, and unreal values (Agr. 42). But once again, colours have suggested the

<sup>a</sup> Where, it seems to me, Philo is playing upon the likeness of Κοπέ (LXX) to κόρη, 'maiden' ; this has not been shown in the translation.

<sup>b</sup> αἰσθητά in Leg. All. iii. 15-17, 20-22, Det. 4, Agr. 42, Ebr. 46f, Mig. 28, 208-214, Fug. 22, 45f ; cf. Som. i. 41f.

<sup>c</sup> To this 'Syrian' contributes also in Fug. 44.

INDEX OF NAMES

variety of things that belong to the world of sense, including bodies or corporeal ideas ; this leads Philo to the philosophical concept of the three ' goods ' or values—those of the soul, the body, and externals (see s.v. Joseph). Laban has no share in the divine values (i.e., of the soul ; Fug. 20) : his philosophy is that of the body and external things (Leg. All. iii. 20, Ebr. 46-52 & [51[N], cf. Det. 4) ; here we probably link up with the αἰσθητὰ καὶ φαινόμενα ἀγαθὰ of Agr. 42. Whether he is drawing upon αἰσθητὰ generally or σώματα in particular, Philo makes Laban also represent the passions (Leg. All. iii. 19-22)

In Fug. 8-22, esp. 8-13, Philo might be thought to reverse Laban's philosophy of ποιότης, variety. But in fact what he says there is partly governed by antithesis with Jacob and the terms under discussion (ἄσημος, ἐπίσημος ; see s.v. Jacob), and partly by his argument, which here is directed against an evolutionary philosophy (11-13[N], cf. Som. i. 45f). Laban's sheep typify the irrational (Sac. 46f), as do his shepherds, apparently (Mig. 212f) ; and Laban enslaves the rational Jacob (Leg. All. iii. 17, cf. 19). So he typifies the irrational element. This goes with his interest in the bodily things <sup>a</sup> and his neglect of the highest good, that of the soul or mind

Because of his opposition to Jacob, one of the educational triad, Laban comes to be ignorant, foolish, and unwilling to learn. He loses his daughters to Jacob, a stripping of the virtues which leaves him worthless indeed (Fug. 15-18) ; but he is really their foe, a hater of virtue (Quis <sup>a</sup> Leg. All. iii. 15, 22, Ebr. 46f, Mig. 28, Som. i. 45f.

INDEX OF NAMES

Her. 43f). Or, their going is the departure of his good sense, leaving him ignorant and uneducated (Leg. All. iii. 20-22), as does the loss of the arts and branches of knowledge (Cher. 67-71). In Ebr. 46-55 his attempt to marry the elder to Jacob before the younger was a mistaken adherence to time order and a sophistic flouting of the natural sequence of education—first the School culture and then the higher training in philosophy. As brother of Rebecca he is regarded more leniently than as Laban the Syrian (Fug. 44-46, cf. Leg. All. iii. 18); but as Bethuel he becomes divine Wisdom (Fug. 49-52)

- I. Leg. All. iii. 15-22, II. Cher. 67-70, Sac. 46f, Det. 4, Post. 59 & [N], 76, III. Agr. 42, Ebr. 46-52, IV. Conf. 74, Mig. 28, 208-214, Quis Her. 43f, 180, V. Fug. 4, 7-22 & 11-13[N] & 16[N], 44-52 & 45[N], 143, Som. i. 1-2[N], 45f, 126n, 189, 202n, 225-227, VIII. Virt. 223 & n

Lacedaemonia : see Sparta

Laconian : see Sparta

Laius : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 15

Lamech : II. Det. 50f, Post. 40f, 46-48, 74f, 79-81, 112, 124. Lamech, whose name means 'humiliation' or 'lowness' (ταπεινωσις), appears as a descendant both of Cain and of Seth (Gen. iv. 18, v. 25). The name therefore has a twofold application. There is the 'lowness' to which the soul is reduced by irrational passions owing to weakness : this is the Cain strain (cf. Det. 50); and there is the self-imposed check to conceit, an exercise of strength : herein lies Lamech's being a descendant of Seth and father of Noah (Post. 40f, 46-48). His grandfather and father

INDEX OF NAMES

(Methuselah, iv. 18) had names indicating soul-death, and his own refers to the low state to which the soul is brought by the birth of passion (ib. 74). "Lamech took unto himself two wives" (iv. 19). When a worthless man presumes to take anything to himself it is bound to be evil, and Lamech chose two very great evils (75). He arranged the marriage for himself, because he fancied the mind should proceed to its ends unhindered; and in his case they were wrong ends (79-81). His words to his wives in Gen. iv. 23 illustrate that, because the soul's actions affect the soul itself, the worthless man's wrongdoing is an injury to himself (Det. 50f)

Lamia : X. Leg. 351

Lampo : IX. Flacc. 20 & n & [N], 125-135

Leah : 'virtue.'<sup>a</sup> With this Philo fits his interpretation of her name: twice he takes the Greek Λαία, associating this with Jacob's 'smooth' nakedness of soul (Esau was hairy, Jacob λεῖος, Leg. All. ii. 59), and with the 'smooth' movement of Leah's peaceful virtue (Rachel's is combatant, Congr. 25-32); otherwise he derives it from Hebrew words, lo, 'not,' and lahah, 'to be weary.' Thus in Cher. 41 Leah means 'rejected and weary'—with sustained practice (of virtue), 'rejected,' because every fool says 'no' to her and turns from her.<sup>b</sup> In Mut. 253-255 the same

<sup>a</sup> In almost every passage. Philosophy contrasted with the lower culture in Ebr. 46-53. Beauty of soul (tantamount to virtue) contrasted with that of the body in Sob. 12

<sup>b</sup> But see the translation and [N] at Cher. 41, where Colson takes the relative to refer to the ἀσκήσεως, immediately antecedent; I have ventured an alternative rendering, taking Leah as the (admittedly remote) antecedent of 'whom'

INDEX OF NAMES

interpretation is given for 'rejected,' but 'weary' is 'causing weariness through the commands she lays upon us (Virtue).' In Mig. 145 κοπιῶσα is intransitive, 'growing weary': for it is the life of wickedness which causes weariness, and she in fact refuses to have anything to do with it; she 'wearies of' it

Laban justified marrying Leah to Jacob before Rachel because she was the elder (Gen. xxix. 26f); this was to claim that the senior culture, philosophy, may precede the junior, the School learning, and that it may be deserted in favour of the latter. Jacob's reply means he will never leave philosophy (Ebr. 46-53)

"When the Lord saw that Leah was hated, he opened her womb" (xxix. 31). Most of what Philo says about Leah revolves round this text. "Leah was hated": man hates virtue, but God honours her by making her the first to bear (Leg. All. ii. 47, Mut. 132f); men hate virtue, because she despises their association with sense-perception (Rachel): but she has fellowship with God (Post. 134f); Leah and Rachel together representing the 'mixed' life, men naturally prefer the pleasant life of the senses to the austere life of knowledge and virtue (Quis Her. 45-48); men dissent from that to which God assents, namely virtue and the commands which she lays upon us (Mut. 253-255). God "opened her womb": this Philo interprets as the impregnation of virtue by God Himself (Leg. All. ii. 47, Cher. 43f;

('which'): Leah is never ἀσκησις, always virtue; and in the close parallel in Mut. 253-255 it is Leah and virtue from which men 'turn away.'

INDEX OF NAMES

cf. Congr. 7, and perhaps Quis Her. 50f); He is the husband, but as Leah bore "to Jacob," Jacob is the father for whose sake God sowed the seed in virtue (Leg. All. iii. 180, Cher. 46, Mut. 132f; but cf. Congr. 7); by this divine impregnation virtue conceives and bears noble deeds (τὰ καλά, Leg. All. iii. 180, cf. 146, Post. 135, Quis Her. 50, Mut. 255, cf. Congr. 31)

After bearing Judah (thankfulness) Leah "left bearing" ("stood off"), Gen. xxix. 35. This indicates that Judah is the crowning virtue (Leg. All. i. 80-82 & n), beyond which Leah could not go (Som. i. 37f); and God wanted to balance the good things of the soul (Leah's sons) with progressive representatives of the body (from Rachel and the concubines) (Leg. All. iii. 146)

These contrasts with Rachel as sense-perception are not maintained in Congr. 24-33. There the soul (Jacob) is twofold, the reasoning part having Leah to wife, the unreasoning Rachel. Rachel, acting through the senses, helps the soul to fight the passions: she represents the way of war: Leah is the λεία κίνησις of virtue, most healthy and peaceful, through whom the Practiser reaps the higher and dominant blessings. See 24n

- I. Gen. Intro. p. xii n, Leg. All. i. 80 & n, ii. 47, 59 & n, 94, iii. 20, 146, 180f, II. Cher. 41 & [N], 44-46, Det. 3, Post. 62, 134f, III. Plant. 134, Ebr. 46-53, Sob. 12, IV. Mig. 95f, 99, 145 & n, Quis Her. 45-48 & 46n, 50, 175, Congr. 7, 24 & n-32, 29[N], 123, V. Fug. 15-19 & 16[N], 73, Mut. 132, 254f, Som. i. 37f, VIII. Virt. 221n, 223 & n-225

Lepidus: IX. Flacc. 151, 181

Levi, Levites: there are few references to Levi as an individual, and most of them merge into Levi the tribe.<sup>a</sup> The many passages about Levi or Levites as the tribe appointed to the temple service depend upon certain texts. First, Deut. x. 9, "Levi hath no part nor portion with his brethren; the Lord Himself is his portion." With this is usually linked <sup>b</sup> Deut. xxxiii. 9a, "Saying to his father and mother, I have not seen thee, and he acknowledged not his brethren and his sons he disowned"; which Philo seldom quotes but often alludes to in the word γένεσις.<sup>c</sup> Thus Philo contrasts Levi with the man who leaves father and mother yet 'cleaves to' sense-perception (Leg. All. ii. 51); although Reuben is Jacob's oldest son, Levi, being son of 'Israel,' is spiritually senior, and his 'portion' is that of the eldest—God Himself (Sac. 119f); like slayers compelled to flee from home to a city of refuge, Levites too are exiles, having left their families to win an immortal portion (ib. 129, Fug. 102); that is one reason why Levitical cities were chosen for refuge (Fug. 88); with proselytes, orphans, and widows, Levites <sup>d</sup> are suppliants

INDEX OF NAMES

<sup>a</sup> Leg. All. i. 81, Sac. 120, Ebr. 94, Mig. 224, Fug. 73f, 200, Mut. 199f, Som. ii. 34, 37.

<sup>b</sup> Deut. x. 9 alone in Sac. 127, Det. 62, Plant. 69-72, Fug. 102. Deut. xxxiii. 9 alone in (Det. 67f), Plant. 63f, Ebr. 72, Fug. 88f. Both in Leg. All. ii. 51, Sac. 119f, 129, Congr. 133, Mut. 127, Som. ii. 272f.

<sup>c</sup> Sac. 120, Plant. 63f, Mut. 127, Som. ii. 273. Colson translated it 'creation': and certainly it is contrasted with τὸ ἀγένητον in Plant. 63f; but is there not all the time a play upon its sense of 'family' or 'kin,' summarizing Deut. xxxiii. 9? Perhaps 'creatures' or 'creature family' would convey both.

<sup>d</sup> Philo treats these as three classes with phrases corre-

INDEX OF NAMES

and fugitives, orphans to their creature families, God being their husband and father (Som. ii. 272f); the mind, perfectly cleansed, which renounces all creatures, knows only One, the Uncreate (Plant. 62-64); the mind that slays all that claims kinship with the soul—body, passions, senses—is one with the Levi-mind, who renounced his family, and with the Phinehas mind (Ebr. 70-74); it is from this great transcendent soul who holds fast to the Uncreated alone that Moses is descended on both sides, thus having a double link with truth (Congr. 131-135); and this portion allotted to the wise is not material possessions, of course, but the greatest spiritual benefits, given by God to those who serve Him, who are thereby very kings (Plant. 62-72) <sup>a</sup>

The third key passage is Exod. xxxii,<sup>b</sup> the incident of the Golden Calf and its sequel. Moses asked, Who is on the Lord's side? The Levites alone responded, and slaughtered three thousand, not excluding their own kin. Because of this, says Philo, they too are in a sense slayers, which is why their cities are chosen for refuge (Sac. 130-134, cf. Fug. 88-90, Spec. Leg. iii. 123f, 128); it sponding to each, using μév and δέ. But the vocabulary of the phrases, while appropriate to each, is drawn from terms used of Levites, so I have amalgamated them.

<sup>a</sup> With Deut. x. 9 in Plant. 63 is linked a similar verse, Num. xviii. 20. In Mut. 199f, Deut. xxxiii. 8 is used; and 9b, 10 in Det. 62-68. See below.

<sup>b</sup> Sac. 130, Ebr. 66-74, Fug. 90-92, Mos. ii. 161-172, 272-274, Spec. Leg. i. 79, iii. 124-126; and the description of Levi in Som. ii. 37 (cf. 34) is surely an allusion to this (cf. Spec. Leg. iii. 128). The very similar story of Phinehas (Num. xxv) is laid under contribution deliberately in Ebr. 73f, and accidentally in Spec. Leg. iii. 126.

INDEX OF NAMES

was a slaughter of false doctrines : when the soul fell the holy thoughts (ἱεροὶ λόγοι), armed with the proofs of knowledge, championed true religion (Sac. 130) ; it was also a cutting away of all that is near and dear to the mind : “ each his brother, each his nearest ” (xxxii. 27) means the body, ‘ brother ’ of the soul, and the senses, ‘ nearest ’ to the uttered word <sup>a</sup> (Ebr. 65-71, Fug. 88-92). This was an instance where right reason was obeyed rather than custom (Ebr. 65, 68). The reward was the priesthood (Sac. 134, Ebr. 65, Mos. ii. 173, 274, Spec. Leg. iii. 125-128)

The fourth passage is Num. xxxv. and its parallels : the six cities of refuge taken from among the forty-eight Levitical cities. This was done because the good are a ransom for the bad (Sac. 128), because the Levites are themselves virtually exiles, but voluntarily (Sac. 129, Fug. 88), because they too are fugitives, but in God (Sac. 129), because they too are slayers (Sac. 130, Fug. 90). Yet another reason is suggested by Exod. xxi. 13, from which Philo deduces that involuntary homicide is God’s way of punishing : Levites and homicides, therefore, are both serving God, each in their way (Fug. 93, Sac. 133). The non-allegorical explanation, that Levitical cities

<sup>a</sup> ὁ κατὰ προφορὰν (προφορικὸς) λόγος. In Det. 63-66, ὁ προφορικὸς λόγος is the Levite’s brother minister of Num. viii. 26 ; while the perfect Levite (having reached fifty) guards the teachings of virtue, his brother will have the subordinate duties of teaching those who seek education (παιδεία). Aaron is ὁ προφορικὸς λόγος : “ Aaron the Levite shall speak for thee ” (Exod. iv. 14) means that only to the ἱερεὶ καὶ σπουδαίῳ λόγῳ is it fitting to reveal the thoughts of perfect mind (Moses), Det. 126, 132.

INDEX OF NAMES

would afford the protection of the sacred office and territory, is given in Spec. Leg. i. 158, iii. 129 & n. In Sac. 127 Philo tells why the Levitical cities are "ransomed for ever" (Lev. xxv. 32). The fugitive to the city of refuge was a 'suppliant'; the Levites themselves, as we have seen, were exiles from their kin, casting themselves wholly upon God. So the texts from Deut. and Num. combine to provide ικέρτης, often used of the Levites <sup>a</sup>

The Levites are called φύλακες, 'guardians.' In Fug. 37, Det. 62-66, this is based upon Num. viii. 24-26. But in the latter it leads up to one of the Deuteronomy texts (xxxiii. 9b, 10), which must be presumed to underlie Som. ii. 272f. The discussion of Num. viii also raises the matter of symbolic numbers. The Levite begins his ministry at twenty-five, retires to "guard" at fifty; the latter is the number of release from toil, the former the half-way stage of exercise and practice (Det. 63-66). Elsewhere Philo discusses Levi as ransom for the tenth (Congr. 98); and the Levites contribute tenths to make a hundred, the number of perfection (Mut. 2, 191; cf. Spec. Leg. 157)

Philo's only etymology of Levi is in Plant. 64: it means αὐτός μοι, 'He (is precious) to me'

The Levites are the consecrated tribe,<sup>b</sup> to whom belongs the active ministry and service of God (Sac. 120, 127, Som. ii. 34, 272f); they represent the mind that has been perfectly cleansed (Plant.

<sup>a</sup> Sac. 119, 129, Det. 62, Plant. 63, Ebr. 94, Quis Her. 124.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ ἱερωμένη φυλή or cognate phrases, Sac. 128f, Det. 62, Quis Her. 124, Mos. ii. 186, Spec. Leg. ii. 120f, iii. 123, 129.

INDEX OF NAMES

64), perfect virtue (Sac. 120, Mos. ii. 181, cf. Plant. 70f). They are the wise, contrasted with the worthless fool (Sac. 121, 126, Plant. 69-72); they are the representatives of reason <sup>a</sup>; with them is truth (Congr. 132, Ebr. 70; and cf. Mos. i. 177). They are guardians of the oracles and covenants of God, the most excellent exponents of his laws (Deut. xxxiii. 9f, Det. 68)

I. Leg. All. i. 81, ii. 51, II. Sac. 118-135 (for 128-133, cf. Fug. 88-93), Det. 62-68, (126), 132, 135, III. Plant. 62-72, Ebr. 65-74, 94, IV. Mig. 224, Quis Her. 124 & n, Congr. 98, 131f & n, 133 & n & [N], 134, 135n, V. Fug. 37, 73f, 88-93 (cf. Sac. 128-133), 102, Mut. 2, 127 & n, 191, 199f, Som. ii. 34, 37, 272f, VI. Mos. i. 316, ii. 159-186, 272-274, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 79 & n & [N], 121n, 156-161, ii. 120f, iii. 123-128, 129n, 130, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 190n, Praem. 54n, 74, 75n

Leviticus : III. Plant. 26, cf. V. Fug. 170 & n

Libya : III. Quod Deus 174, V. Som. ii. 54, IX. Aet. 141, Flacc. 43, 45, 152, X. Leg. 283

Lot : the name means 'inclination' or 'leaning' (ἀπόκλισις <sup>b</sup>); for the mind 'inclines,' sometimes turning away from what is good, sometimes from what is bad (Mig. 148). In his description of Lot's character in Abr. 212 Philo no doubt had this derivation in mind; but he would also be thinking of the story of Abraham's separation from Lot (Gen. xiii. 1-11, esp. v. 9), which he proceeds to tell (212-216) and to allegorize (217-

<sup>a</sup> λέγος, Sac. 119; ὀρθὸς λόγος, Ebr. 68, Congr. 98; λογικός, Fug. 90-92.

<sup>b</sup> So Mig. 148. ἀποκλίνω in Som. i. 86, 246, κλίνω in Post. 175, Mig. 13, 175. Cf. Abr. 212.

INDEX OF NAMES

224), making Lot stand for the philosophy that pursues externals. In Mig. 13 Lot is the soul that inclines to sense-perception, which Abraham thrusts away. He had begun by inclining in a good direction, for he set out with the man of wisdom (xii. 4); but he soon proved a hindrance rather than a help when he inclined back to lack of learning (ἀμαθία), and Abraham had to protect himself by separation (ib. 148-150 & [N]). Like his wife (Fug. 121f), he was capable of growing up straight and unswerving, but he bent aside his soul (Mig. 175). But it was an ἀπόκλισις to virtue when he left Sodom (xix. 23f, Som. i. 85f & n, 246). His capture by the four kings (Gen. xiv. 12) refers to the soul's enemies (the four passions, Mig. 150 & [N]); the incident and its sequel is described in Abr. 225-235

Lot's wife is affected with the same ἀπόκλισις : in Som. i. 246-248 we have an allusion to Lot's inclination away from virtue (in entering Sodom), aggravated by sense-perception, so that the soul becomes a monument of its own disaster. In a similar passage (Fug. 121f), her looking back is the soul's lazy refusal to exercise its power of reason, having no desire to seek and find, so that the soul becomes lifeless. This speaks of the soul's capability for better things; but in Leg. All. iii. 213 we are told God did not allow repentance. The right name for Lot's wife is 'custom'; her nature is hostile to truth, and if we take her with us, she lags behind and gazes round at the old familiar objects and remains among them like a lifeless monument (Ebr. 164)

This was the mother of Lot's daughters, Delibera-

INDEX OF NAMES

tion and Assent ; Lot, their father, was incapable of rearing any male or perfect growth within his soul. He is the man not only lacking knowledge but confident that he has got it—which is even worse than sheer ignorance. With his two daughters the mind discusses and assents readily to every pleasurable suggestion. This could only happen when the mind is intoxicated (Ebr. 162-166). This initiates a long discussion by Philo on the unreliability of the mind : it cannot by deliberation find out the truth nor give a right assent or judgement (166-205 ; see III. Ebr. Introd. pp. 314-316). The same passage (xix. 30-38) is allegorized in Post. 175-177, where Philo is treating " God raised up to me . . ." (Gen. iv. 25). With that attitude is to be contrasted that of Lot's daughters (with the same names) ; their desire to have children by mind is the assertion that mind can replace God (contrast " God raised up ") and be the author of everything—a truly sottish idea, created by the strong drink of folly

The offspring from this unpromising union were Moab and Ammon (q.v.). Their people are to be excluded from the congregation of the Lord (Deut. xxiii. 2), for they suppose that sense-perception and mind can procreate all things (Post. 177)

- I. Leg. All. iii. 213, II. Post. 175-177, III. Ebr. 162-205 (esp. 162-170, 203-205), IV. Mig. 13, 148-150 & [N], 175, V. Fug. 121f, Som. i. 85f & n, 246-248, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xv n, Abr. 212-235, Mos. ii. 57f, IX. Prov. 2. 8[N]

Lucanian : IX. Aet. 12

INDEX OF NAMES

- Lyaeus : X. Leg. 96
 Lycurgus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 47, 114. Cf. VI. Mos.
     ii. 19, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22, VIII. ib. iv. 102
 Lydia : VI. Jos. 133
 Lynceus : IX. Prov. 2. 7
 Lysimachus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 127-130
- Macedonians, Macedonia : II. Cher. 63, Gig. 7 & [N] (-ia), III. Quod Deus 173f (both), Plant. 12 (-ia), VI. Jos. 135, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 94, 115, X. Leg.
     281 (-ia)
- Machir : IV. Congr. 39-43. Machir means 'the father's,' and his parentage symbolizes the inferiority of reminiscence and being reminded to memory and remembering
- Machpelah : Abraham's burial place in Hebron, called in the LXX 'the double cave' (Gen. xxiii).
 In it the patriarchs and their wives were buried in pairs, so that it is a treasure house of memories (μνημαί, probably playing on μνημεῖον in xxiii.
 6 ; see Som. ii. 26n), memories of knowledge and wisdom (II. Post. 62 & n). Along with other 'doubles,' it illustrates that the man of worth both contemplates the created universe and thinks upon the Father who brought it into being. The cave is 'the pair of memories'
 (V. Som. ii. 26 & n)
- Macro : IX. Flacc. 11-16, 22, X. Leg. 32-64, 69f, 75
 Maecenas : X. Leg. 351
 Maenads : III. Plant. 148
 Maenoles : III. Plant. 148
 Magi : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100 & n & [N], IX. Quod
     Omn. Prob. 74 & n
 Magius Maximus : IX. Flacc. 74

INDEX OF NAMES

- Mahujael (Maiel) : the worthlessness of Cain and his creed is continued in his descendants, Enoch, Gaidad, Maiel, Methuselah, Lamech. The flock of irrational faculties which is Gaidad had for son Maiel, 'away from the life of God,' who also leads an irrational life (II. Post. 69). He also contributes to Lamech's bad character, whose grandfather he was ; for Mahujael (E.V. ; LXX, Maiel) represents that death of soul which is due to passion (ib. 74f)
- Maiden, The : see Athena
- Maltese Dogs : VIII. Praem. 89 & [N]
- Mamre : the portion awarded to Aunan and Eshcol by Abraham (Gen. xiv. 24), symbolizing the award to natural ability and vision, is awarded the contemplative life ; for Mamre means 'from seeing' (IV. Mig. 164 & n, 165)
- Manasseh : there are many whose natural gifts differ, as their names show. Such were Ephraim and Manasseh. In blessing them their grandfather Jacob gave precedence to the younger (Gen. xlviii. 19) ; that is because memory (Ephraim) is better than recollection (Manasseh), for the latter is always preceded by forgetfulness. It is older than memory, for in the first stages of education we begin with recollection of what we forget, then advance to remembering. Manasseh is the type of recollection (ἀνάμνησις, opposed to μνήμη) because his name means 'out of forgetfulness' (Leg. All. iii. 90-93, Sob. 27-29, cf. Mig. 205). To Manasseh's tribe belong Zelophehad's five daughters, showing five is the number of the senses (Mig. 205). The contrast between memory and recollection is also made in Congr.

INDEX OF NAMES

39-43. A discussion on legitimate wives and concubines leads Philo to mention Manasseh's marriage to a Syrian concubine (Gen. xlv. 20, LXX) who bore to him Machir. "Jacob said, Ephraim and Manasseh shall be as Reuben and Simeon to me" (xlviii. 5). Reuben is natural excellence, Simeon learning; with the relation between these two corresponds that between Ephraim and Manasseh (Mut. 97-102). This passage has the same remarks about forgetfulness, memory, recollection

Marah: on the journey from Passion the pilgrim soul is continually tempted by pleasures to return, and Marah marks the bitterness that the soul's toil comes to have. But the Saviour sweetened the waters, producing love of labour (II. Post. 156f, IV. Congr. 164-166). The passage, Exod. xv. 23-25, ends ". . . and the water was sweetened. There he laid down for him ordinances and judgments . . ."—the statutes were given for chastening, and therefore Marah was appropriate—" . . . and there he tried him,"—so that the bitterness is also that of trial in the soul's toil (IV. Congr. 163f)

Marea: IX. Flacc. 45

Mareotic Lake: IX. Vit. Cont. 22

Marin: IX. Flacc. 39 & n

Mars: IV. Quis Her. 224

Masek: IV. Quis Her. 2, 39-42, 51-54, 61. 'From a kiss,' and kissing is not the same as loving, but represents the senses; she (so LXX) is the mistress of the multitude, the servant of the good, who do not love her, only greet her with a kiss. The offspring of this blood-life is Damascus Eliezer

INDEX OF NAMES

Melchizedek : God made him both ' king ' of ' peace ' (Salem) and priest, without previous qualification. He was worthy of it, for he was a ' righteous ' king, no despot. Let him offer to the soul food full of joy and gladness and induce that divine intoxication which is sobriety itself. For he is a priest (Gen. xiv. 18), that is reason, having his portion in God <sup>a</sup> (Leg. All. iii. 79-82). " He gave him a tenth of all " (xiv. 20) is an example of that principle seen in all tithes, the offering of first-fruits to God from all the faculties of our reason ; and it illustrates that ten is the perfect number (Congr. 98f). Here Melchizedek's priesthood is αὐτομαθῆς καὶ αὐτοδιδάκτος. The story is told in Abr. 235. Add I. Gen. Introd. p. xx & n

Memphis : VI. Mos. i. 118

Mercury : II. Cher. 22, IV. Quis Her. 224

Mesopotamia : II. Post. 76, IV. Conf. 65f, Congr. 70, V. Fug. 48f, VI. Abr. 188, Mos. i. 264, 278, VIII. Virt. 223n. Isaac advised Jacob to flee into Mesopotamia (Gen. xxviii. 2) ; this means the Practiser is to enter the midst of the torrent of life's river, not overwhelmed by it, but beating back the current of affairs (Fug. 48f). For Mesopotamia is ' Mid-river-land ' (Conf. 66). It is the home of Balaam, whose understanding is submerged in the midmost depths of a river (ib.)

Methuselah : II. Post. 40f, 44f, 73f. His name means ' a sending forth of death. ' He is a descendant both of Seth and of Cain, and his name can be interpreted in two ways to fit both the good and the bad strain. In close affinity with Seth he is the good man from whom death is dismissed, he <sup>a</sup> Deut. x. 9, of Levi. Levi also represents reason.

INDEX OF NAMES

has reaped true life. But as a member of Cain's house he is at the receiving end of ἐξαποστολή θανάτου, which means he is ever dying to the life of virtue (41, 44f). With this fits his relationship to soul-death and lowness ; for he is son of Mahujael and father of Lamech (73f)

Midas : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 136

Midian, Midianites : Midian is 'from judgement,' and Philo associates with it κρίσις, 'judgement' or 'sifting.' Moses settles in Midian (Exod. ii. 15), that is, in the examination (κρίσις) of the things of nature (Leg. All. iii. 12f). But ἐκ κρίσεως can be taken in two senses : it can mean 'out-sifting,' 'elimination' ; or it can mean 'from (belonging to) judgement,' 'judiciary' (Mut. 106 & n, 110). The Midianites in the story of Phinehas (Num. xxv) come under the first heading ; their religion was that of Baal-Peor, drowning the ruling mind beneath bodily passions, and so they had to be eliminated. Phinehas killed the Midianitish woman ; and the Israelites defeated the Midianites (Num. xxxi). But the other, the good sense, applies to Raguel, "priest of Midian" (Mut. 106-109, Leg. All. iii. 242) (by implication, the bad sense perhaps applies to him in his character of Jethro), whose seven daughter-faculties bring objects to the mind, their judge and king. Philo is discussing the double name, Jethro-Raguel (Mut. 103-114). In Conf. 55 Midian is called 'the nurse of things bodily' ; if the reading is right, Midian must have this connotation from Baal-Peor, as in Mut. 106f. But see [N]. In Jos. 15ff the Midianite merchants of Gen. xxxvii are mentioned, but not named. In Mos. i. 295ff and Virt. 34ff Philo narrates the two incidents from Numbers ; but only in Virt. 34 are the Midianites named. See [N]

INDEX OF NAMES

- I. Leg. All. iii. 12f, 242, III. Agr. 43, IV. Conf. 55 & [N], 57n, V. Mut. 103-114, VI. Jos. 15, 27, 36, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xiii n, Virt. 22n, 34ff & [N]

Milcah : wife of Nahor. Her name means ' queen ' ; Nahor stayed in Chaldaea, the home of astrology, queen of sciences, and this Milcah symbolizes. It is second best to the true vision of Israel, but better than the Sceptic philosophy, represented by Nahor's concubine (IV. Congr. 43-53)

Milky Way : IX. Prov. 2. 51

Milo : IX. Prov. 2. 7

Miltiades : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 132

Minos : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43

Minotaur : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43

Miriam : Miriam criticized Moses for marrying an Ethiopian woman, and was punished (I. Leg. All. i. 76). This was sense-perception presuming to find fault with the man of vision (ii. 66f & [N], iii. 103). But her leading the song of the women at the Red Sea in company with Moses is good : it is sense-perception made pure and clean leading Virtue's women along with perfect mind and the men of vision (III. Agr. 80f). There is a non-allegorical narrative of this in VI. Mos. i. 180, ii. 256, IX. Vit. Cont. 87

The unnamed sister who witnessed the finding of the infant Moses (Exod. ii) is referred to in VI. Mos. i. 12, 16f, and in V. Som. ii. 142 she is given the allegorical name of ' Hope ' ; for she

INDEX OF NAMES

“spied out from a distance” (ii. 4), looking to the consummation of his life

Mishael : see s.v. Nadab

Mnemosyne : III. Plant. 129 & [N]

Moab, Moabites : Ammonites and Moabites were the descendants of the incestuous union of Lot's daughters with their father, and for this they were excluded from the Israelite congregation (Deut. xxiii. 2). They suppose that sense-perception and mind procreate all things (II. Post. 177, I. Leg. All. iii. 81, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 327[N], 333 & n-336). Num. xxi. 30, “And the women kindled yet further a fire in Moab,” indicates a conflagration of the mind occasioned by the senses ; for Moab means ‘out of a father,’ and our father is the mind (I. Leg. All. iii. 225, 231, IV. Mig. 99f). The “whoredom with the daughters of Moab” of Num. xxv. 1 stands for the enervating intercourse with mind's daughters, the senses (V. Som. i. 89, VIII. Virt. 34[N])

Moon, The : IV. Quis Her. 224

Morning Star, The : II. Cher. 22

Moses<sup>a</sup> : The narrative of Moses' infancy is given in Mos. i. 5-17. He was by race a Chaldaean (ib. 5 ; ‘Hebrew,’ 15), the seventh from Abraham, a Levite (7, cf. Post. 173f) by both his parents, giving him a double link with truth (Congr. 132f & nn & [N]). He was, we read, “a proper <sup>a</sup> In this analysis only a few references are made to Mos. i and ii. In the final index of passages the many quotations from or allusions to the Pentateuch, given in the form ‘Moses says’ or ‘he says,’ are not included ; only those passages are listed which seem to contribute to the character, career, or significance of Moses himself. It has been hard to be consistent ; and I have usually ignored Deuteronomy.

INDEX OF NAMES

child" (9): this means he was purest mind (Congr. 131f), the Stoic character (Conf. 106 & n & [N]), a world-citizen (ib.).<sup>a</sup> His royal education included the learning of Greece and Assyria and Egypt (Mos. i. 21-24); and he became heir to Pharaoh (32)

Moses "smote the Egyptian and hid him in the sand" (Exod. ii. 11-14, Mos. 1. 34-44)—the Egyptian being the bad man who sinks down into his own mind (Leg. All. iii. 37-39). This and the subsequent incident represent Moses' attempt to overthrow the domination of the body in two attacks directed against Epicureanism and the Peripatetics (Fug. 147 & n, 148). Pharaoh sought his life (a seeking that had no finding, Fug. 147), and Moses fled to Midian (Mos. i. 45-49); or rather, he withdrew from the leader of the passions (cf. Conf. 82) to the place of sifting in order to inquire of God (Leg. All. iii. 11-14). Midian (Arabia, Mos. i. 47) here signifies the judicial type (Mut. 110f). At the well the virtue-loving mind delivers the unreasoning faculties from mind's enemies (Exod. ii. 15-22, Mut. 110-114). Moses was given Zipporah to wife (Exod. ii. 21, Post. 77f). Really she was not a woman but a virtue; for Zipporah, 'bird,' signifies one speeding up to heaven and contemplating divine things (Cher. 40-42, 47); she is the winged and inspired prophetic nature (Mut. 120), perhaps Knowledge or Reason (Post. 78). Moses became shepherd to his father-in-law (Exod. iii. 1, Mos. i. 60, 63): that is, Moses' right reason rules the thoughts of the Jethro mind (Sac. 50, Agr. 43).

<sup>a</sup> By a pun on ἀσρέϊος.

INDEX OF NAMES

At the Burning Bush (Mos. i. 65-70) the prophet was seeking nature's causes; he was spared from a futile search by the divine warning ("Draw not nigh hither," Exod. iii. 5), and instead he inquired into the nature of the Creator (Fug. 161-164). He did not see God Himself (Fug. 141, Mut. 134), but an angel, the symbol of God's providence (Mos. i. 66, cf. Som. i. 231f). God promised His presence to Moses (Mos. i. 70-76), the secret of successful achievement (Fug. 140). He was given three signs (Mos. i. 76-82): God asks the wise man what there is in the active life of his soul, and he answers Schooling, giving it the name of a rod; when cast away it becomes the serpent Pleasure, which must be seized and disciplined (Leg. All. ii. 87-93). Moses protested that he was not eloquent (Exod. iv. 10): he sets no value upon probabilities and plausibilities, but follows after truth in its purity (Sac. 12f & [NN], Det. 38, Mig. 76f); he was tongue-tied with joy, and speech was replaced with fluent thoughts (Quis Her. 4). He was made "a god to Pharaoh" (Exod. vii. 1): the mind is god of the unreasoning part (Leg. All. i. 40, cf. Mig. 84); Moses enjoyed a unique supremacy over the body and the mind which rules it (Sac. 9f & [N]); the wise is god to the foolish (Mut. 125, 128f & n, Det. 161f)—not in reality, only in men's imagination (Det. 161f, cf. Quod Omn. Prob. 43 & n, 44). Moses especially earned this title because of his beneficence (Mut. 128f). See also Som. ii. 189, Mos. i. 158

Philo divides the Ten Plagues (Mos. i. 90-146) into those due to the agency of Aaron (96-112) and

INDEX OF NAMES

of Moses (113-125), and those of independent causation

After the Exodus and the Passage of the Red Sea, the Song of Moses (Exod. xv. 1) is the hymn of victory over the passions sung by the army of guardian virtues led by mind in its perfection (Agr. 80-83 & [N], cf. Leg. All. ii. 102, Ebr. 111, Sob. 13, Mos. i. 180). In the battle against Amalek, Moses held up his hands and Israel prevailed; but his hands were heavy (Exod. xvii. 11): when the mind lifts itself up away from mortal things the seeing soul is strengthened against passion (Leg. All. iii. 186); the wise man's doings are weighty, immovable, upheld by the Word and Truth (ib. 45, Quod Omn. Prob. 29). At Sinai Moses "drew near unto the thick darkness where God was" (Exod. xx. 21): that is, in his eager search for God he entered into immaterial conceptions, seeking to reach the unattainable, the transcendent God (Post. 14f; cf. Mut. 7 & [N]); the people said, "Speak thou with us" (xx. 19): this illustrates the fact that God tempers His communications, for none could endure His perfection (Post. 143f, cf. Som. i. 143), and that wise men take God for their guide and teacher, but the less perfect take the wise man (Quis Her. 19). Moses led his people up the mountain to the vision of the Existent (xxiv. 10, Conf. 95-97). His division of the sacrificial blood (xxiv. 6) represents the twofold nature of wisdom, divine and human (Quis Her. 182 & [N]-185). During his forty days and nights in the mount he fasted, entranced by the perfect music of the spheres (Som. i. 36). The incident of the

INDEX OF NAMES

Golden Calf reveals Joshua and Moses as the feeling and the reasoning elements in man (Ebr. 96-104, 121-124); fired by his vision of the beautiful, Moses burned the pleasures of the body (Post. 158-165)

He pitched the tabernacle outside the camp (xxxiii. 7): this is an instance of that nakedness of soul which is escape from the body and its passions to dwell in virtue (Leg. All. ii. 54f, Gig. 54, Det. 159f); the tent is wisdom, in which the wise man tabernacles, establishing it outside the body because the good man escapes from himself and returns to the apprehension of the One (Leg. All. iii. 46-48, cf. Ebr. 99), a pilgrim travelling from war to peace, from mortality to the divine life of reasonable and happy souls (Ebr. 100). The Lord "spake unto Moses face to face, as a man speaketh unto his friend" (xxxiii. 11; see Scripture Index), and Moses asked that he might know Him (xxxiii. 13): the more perfect mind gets direct apprehension of the First Cause (Leg. All. iii. 100-103); he was eager to replace uncertainty with assured confidence (Post. 13-16). He required that God's presence should go with him (xxxiii. 15), for he knew his quest was unattainable except by revelation (Mut. 8, cf. Spec. Leg. i. 41f); the Divine presence and guidance are necessary for the way to the Existent (Mig. 170-172, cf. Fug. 140 on Exod. iii. 11). Not even Moses was allowed to see God: he was permitted to see only what follows behind Him, His attendant powers (xxxiii. 23, Post. 169, cf. Fug. 164f, Mut. 8-10) or their manifestation in the sensible world (Spec. Leg. i. 43n,

INDEX OF NAMES

47-53 <sup>a</sup>). Deut. v. 31 is also a favourite text with Philo, "Stand thou here with me": it shows Moses to have been higher than the trio Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, for he was trained to soar above species and genus and was stationed beside God Himself (Sac. 8 & n); it shows the steadfastness of the man of worth (contrasted with Adam and Cain), who shares the very nature of God, which is repose (Post. 28, cf. Gig. 49); and that the perfect man seeks for quietude (Quod Deus 23-26)

Moses is pre-eminently, of course, the law-giver.<sup>b</sup> Philo regards Genesis as but the exordium to the laws (Op. 2f), and only alludes to the subsequent history of Israel (Praem. 4 & n & [N]). So great was Israel's veneration for Moses that whatever he approved was law for them (Hyp. 6. 8f). The Greeks in their Attic law copied Moses in one particular at least (Spec. Leg. iv. 61, cf. Aet. 147ff & [N]). The laws reveal the qualities of the legislator (e.g. his humanity, Virt. 80f). Philo regularly quotes the Pentateuch in the form 'Moses says' or 'he says,' not only from the narrative (e.g. Cher. 45, 49, 124, Det. 86, Post. 133), but even when repeating the words attributed to God Himself (Conf. 192 & n); and at times we are given the impression that Moses shaped the details of his narrative to suit the <sup>a</sup> In spite of Colson's note at Spec. Leg. i. 41, I think there is a difference between that passage, in which Philo interprets 'my glory' as the Powers, and the other three passages, where it is God Himself. This affects the interpretation of τὰ ὀπίσω μου.

<sup>b</sup> See below, and p. 386, note a.

INDEX OF NAMES

symbolical lessons he wishes to give (e.g. Sob. 26f). Philo defends the repetitions (Congr. 73), anthropomorphisms (Quod Deus 57-69), and seemingly bold statements of Moses (Plant. 62), and does not allow that such a passage as Gen. vi is mythical (Gig. 6, 58).<sup>a</sup> For a comparison between the Law and the Prophets see Cher. 49 & [N]. Those who follow the great law-giver's teaching are often called his pupils.<sup>b</sup> In the law we find the philosophy of Moses, which is sometimes held to have anticipated that of later Greek philosophers, and sometimes is contrasted with their theories (e.g. Op. 8, 12, 131, Leg. All. ii. 14ff, Quis Her. 213f, 227f & [N], Mos. ii. 12, Aet. 19). The Mosaic system is called a polity (πολιτεία Gig. 59 & [N], Quis Her. 169 & [N], Spec. Leg. iii. 51, iv. 55, 100, Praem. 4, cf. Hyp. 6, 10)

Comparisons and contrasts are made between Moses and other figures. Thus, like Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, he is said to have married no woman but to have been wedded to a virtue (Cher. 40-47, cf. Leg. All. ii. 67; contrast Post. 77); yet he excels them in being called to stand beside God Himself (Conf. 192 & n). A similar sort of comparison is made between Moses and Noah in Quod Deus 109f. The consistency of <sup>a</sup> On the other hand, he tells us not to take some things literally, e.g. in Leg. All. ii. 19, cf. Op. 156f.

<sup>b</sup> γνώριμοι, Det. 86, Post. 12, Conf. 39, Quis Her. 81, Spec. Leg. i. 59, 345, Vit. Cont. 63, Hyp. 11. 1; θιασῶται, Quod Deus 120, Plant. 39; ἐταῖροι, Conf. 62; φοιτηταί, Spec. Leg. i. 345, ii. 256. In Spec. Leg. i. 59 Moses is said to stamp truth upon his disciples. In Som. ii. 1 Philo says that, as Moses learned when he did not know, he may teach us too.

INDEX OF NAMES

Moses is contrasted with the character of his father-in-law Jethro in Gig. 50f; Jethro's presumption in offering advice to Moses is criticized in Ebr. 36-45, Mut. 103f; but as Raguel he is held to have joined the people of God in admiration for their leader Moses (Mut. 105). Miriam also showed presumption towards Moses (Leg. All. ii. 66f, cf. iii. 103, i. 76). Joshua reacted to the passionate clamour from the camp, but Moses could not be reached with it, for he was in the presence of God (Ebr. 96-103 & [NN]); however, Joshua was a worthy pupil and successor to Moses (Virt. 51ff). With Bezaleel also there is a contrast: he was instructed by Moses, but Moses was instructed by God (Leg. All. iii. 102f); he made the shadows of the tabernacle, Moses made the archetypes (ib., and Plant. 23, 26f). Most of all, Philo compares and contrasts Moses with Aaron, q.v.

Philo makes comparatively little use of Moses as a symbolical figure. He is sometimes the type of the wise man (see below, and p. 387, note f); he stands for the mind (e.g. Leg. All. i. 40) at its purest (Mut. 208, cf. Mos. ii. 40) or some form of excellence

“The chief of the prophets proves to have many names,” says Philo in Mut. 125. He derives ‘Moses’ from Hebrew to mean ‘handling’ (ib. 126 & n), or from Egyptian to mean ‘water’ (Mos. i. 17). Philo's most common title for Moses is ‘the law-giver,’<sup>a</sup> with which must be <sup>a</sup> θεσμοφύλαξ Sac. 50; θεσμοθέτης, Mig. 23; ὁ τοὺς νόμους προφητεύσας Spec. Leg. ii. 104. Otherwise νομοθέτης, νομοθεσία, κτλ.: Leg. All. ii. 14, iii. 145, Cher. 40, 53, Sac. 16, 72, linked other similar expressions.<sup>a</sup> He is also the 'prophet'<sup>b</sup> and 'revealer,'<sup>c</sup> chief priest,<sup>d</sup> king,<sup>e</sup> the wise man,<sup>f</sup> perfect,<sup>g</sup> most holy of men,<sup>h</sup> be-

INDEX OF NAMES

83, 136, Det. 62, 105, 115, 135, 147, 171, Post. 22, 25, 47, 57, 78, 128, 133, 166, Gig. 19, 32, 58, 66, Quod Deus 21, 23, 52, 60, 67, 125, Agr. 2, 41, 84, 86, 144, Plant. 66, 141, Ebr. 1, 13, 47, 109, Sob. 1, 7, Conf. 5, 23, 107, 135, 142, 191, Mig. 113, Quis Her. 21, 55, 163, 292, Congr. 120, 132, Fug. 120, 173, 188, 194, Som. i. 39, 93, 112, 121, ii. 4, Mos. i. 1, 7-16, 45-51, 66, 187, 190, 292, Decal. 2-17, Spec. Leg. i. 15, 234, 319, iii. 42, 102, 151, 167, iv. 39, 143, Virt. 22n, 80, 133, 201, Praem. 53, 55, Quod Omn. Prob. 29, 43, 68, Aet. 19, Hyp. 6. 8, 7. 11, 11. 1. In Mos. ii. 48 God is the true lawgiver.

<sup>a</sup> E.g. 'keeper and guardian of the mysteries of the Existent One' (Plant. 26).

<sup>b</sup> προφήτης, προφητεία, κτλ., Leg. All. ii. 1, iii. 43, 173, Sac. 130, Gig. 49, 56, Mig. 15, 151, Quis Her. 4, 262, Congr. 132, 170, Fug. 140, 147, Mut. 11, 103, 125f, Som. ii. 189, 277, Mos. i. 57, 156, ii. 2-7, 69, 187-191, 209, 213, 229, 246, 250, 253, 257f, 265, 269, 275, 280, 284, 291f, Decal. 18f, Spec. Leg. ii. 104, 256, iii. 125, Virt. 51, Praem. 1, 53, 55, Vit. Cont. 64, 87; θεολόγος, Praem. 53; ὁ ἱερός λόγος, Quis Her. 207, cf. 259; ἀνθρωπος θεοῦ, Det. 162, Mut. 25, 125, 128.

<sup>c</sup> ἱεροφάντης, Leg. All. iii. 150, 173, Sac. 94, Post. 16, 164, 173, Mig. 14, Som. ii. 3, 29, 109, Decal. 18, Spec. Leg. i. 41, Virt. 75, 174; θεοπρόπος, Ebr. 85, Conf. 29, Fug. 138; θεοφράδμων, Quis Her. 30, Mut. 96, Mos. ii. 269; ἑρμηνεύς, ἑρμηνεία, κτλ., Praem. 55, Quis Her. 213 & n, Mut. 126, Mos. i. 1, Spec. Leg. iii. 6, Post. 1; μάρτυς μαρτυρέω, Det. 138, cf. Post. 57, Mig. 3, Congr. 160, Mut. 258, Som. i. 231, ii. 222, Abr. 262 (+ θεσπίζω); ἐπίσκοπος, Quis Her. 30.

<sup>d</sup> Sac. 130, Quis Her. 182, Mos. i. 334, ii. 2-7, 66-71, 75, cf. 153-158, 187n, 275, 292, Praem. 53, 56, cf. Θεραπευτής θεοῦ, Sac. 13, Det. 160.

<sup>e</sup> In Mos. ii. 3ff (see also Mos. i and ii, Introd. p. 274) and Praem. 53-56 Philo treats of Moses as king, legislator, prophet, and high-priest. Moses is also called 'guardian' and 'leader' of the nation (Virt. 42, Praem. 77).

<sup>f</sup> Moses is or symbolizes ὁ σοφός (πάνσοφος) κτλ., in Leg. All. ii. 87, 93, iii. 45, 131, 140f, 144, 147, Cher. 41, Sac. 9, Det. 126, 162, Post. 18, 28, 169, 173, Gig. 27, 47f, 50, 56, Quod

INDEX OF NAMES

loved of God <sup>a</sup> and His friend,<sup>b</sup> truly great.<sup>c</sup> He is a lover of God,<sup>d</sup> and of virtue <sup>e</sup> and of humanity,<sup>f</sup> given to piety <sup>g</sup> and continence (Mos. i. 25-31), a man of spiritual vision,<sup>h</sup> the healer of the soul's diseases (Quod Deus 67), the nursing father of all things good (Mig. 23f); indeed he is himself worthy and noble,<sup>i</sup> a true world-citi-

Deus 23-26, cf. 110, Agr. 20, 43, Plant. 27, Ebr. 1, 37, 100, Sob. 20, Conf. 1, 30, 192 & n, Mig. 45f, 76, 113, 201, Quis Her. 19, 21, 55, 301, Congr. 132, Fug. i. 57, 165, Mut. 19, 104, 128, Som. ii. 229, 237, 278, Abr. 13, Mos. i. 4, ii. 67, Spec. Leg. ii. 194, iv. 69, 143, 157, 175, Quod Omn. Prob. 29, 68. Other terms are: φιλομαθής, Fug. 161; αὐτομαθής, Leg. All. iii. 135, Post. 77f, cf. Mos. i. 21f, ἐπιστήμη, Agr. 2.

<sup>a</sup> τέλειος, Leg. All. ii. 91, iii. 100, 131, 134f, 140, 144, 147, Sac. 9f, Det. 132, Quod Deus 23, Agr. 80, Plant. 94, Ebr. 103, Mut. 128, Som. ii. 234, Mos. i. 1; cf. Gig. 24-26.

<sup>b</sup> ἱερώτατος, Leg. All. iii. 185, Cher. 45, Det. 135, Gig. 67, Quod Deus 6, 140, Agr. 85, Plant. 86, 168, Mig. 131, Quis Her. 21, Congr. 89, Mut. 30, 187, Som. i. 121, Abr. 181, Spec. Leg. i. 15, 59, iii. 24, iv. 95, Virt. 175.

<sup>c</sup> θεόφιλος, θεοφιλής, Op. 5, Leg. All. i. 76, ii. 79, 88, 90, iii. 130, Cher. 49, Sac. 77, Det. 13, Plant. 62, Conf. 95, Mig. 67, Mos. ii. 67, 163, Spec. Leg. i. 41, iv. 175, Virt. 77, Quod Omn. Prob. 44.

<sup>d</sup> φίλος θεοῦ, based on Exod. xxxiii. 11; Sac. 130, Ebr. 94, Mig. 45, Quis Her. 21, Som. i. 193f, 231f, Mos. i. 156.

<sup>e</sup> μέγας, Op. 12, Plant. 18, Ebr. 1, Sob. 49, Mut. 128, Mos. i. 1, Spec. Leg. ii. 51.

<sup>f</sup> φιλόθεος, Post. 15, 21, Mos. ii. 67, Spec. Leg. i. 42.

<sup>g</sup> φιλάρετος, Op. 128, Leg. All. ii. 90, iii. 130f, 147, Fug. 157, Mut. 113, Som. ii. 29, Virt. 175 (+ φιλόκαλος); ἀρετή, Cher. 40, Gig. 48, Som. ii. 230, Mos. i. 48, ii. 66.

<sup>h</sup> φιλόανθρωπος, Mos. ii. 163, cf. Spec. Leg. ii. 79ff, 104, Virt. 51, 66, 76f, 80, 82ff, 175.

<sup>i</sup> εὐσέβεια, Praem. 52-56.

<sup>k</sup> ὁ βλέπων, Leg. All. ii. 93; φιλοθεάμων, Ebr. 124; ὄξυ-δερκής, Spec. Leg. ii. 194; ὄξυνωπία, ib. iii. 91.

<sup>l</sup> σπουδαῖος, Post. 28, 169, Mos. i. 157; ἀστέιος, a favourite word with Philo, esp. applicable to Moses because it is used

INDEX OF NAMES

zen.<sup>a</sup> He was finally translated, because God prizes the wise man as the world (Sac. 8-10)

In the following index only those passages are cited in which Moses the man is mentioned, or which seem in some way to be significant ; thus the repeated quotations from the Pentateuch given as 'Moses says' are not included. Nor are the words of Moses in Deuteronomy usually included

- I. Gen. Introd. pp. xiii, xvii n, Op. 1-3, 8, 12, 128, 131, Leg. All. i. 40, 60[N], 76, ii. 14f, 54, 66f, 78-81, 87-93, 102-104, iii. 11-14, 37f, 43-48, 100-103, 128-147(-159), 173, 186, 197, 204, 228, II. Cher. 40-42, 47, 49 & [N], 56 & [N], 114[N], 130, Sac. 8-10, 9 & [N], 12 & [N], 13, 50f, 69, 77, 130, Det. 16 & [N], 38-40, 86, 126-138, 160 & [N]-162, 177, Post. 1, 12-16, 21, 28-31, 67f, 77f, 136f, 143f, 169, 173f, Gig. 24-31, 47-59 & nn & [NN], III. Quod Deus 23-26, 67, 109f, Agr. 2, 43-49, 80f & [N], 94-101, Plant. 26f, 46-58, 62, Ebr. 36-45, 67, 79, 96-103 & [NN], 111-113, 124, Sob. 19f, IV. Conf. 29-36, 82, 95-97, 106 & n & [N], 141[N], Mig. 14f, 23f, 44-46, 76-85, 122 & n, 168, 169 & n-172, Quis Her. 3f, 16-21, 44, 59f, 169 & [N], 182 & [N], 205f, 213f, 228 & [N], 255, 262, Congr. 57, 110, 131-133 & [N], V. Fug. 140f, 147 & n, 148, 157-165, Mut. 7 & [N]-11, 19-21, 25f & n, 103-105 & nn, 113-120, 125-129 & nn, 134, 168, 207-209, Som. i. 36, 71, 164f, 188[N], 193f, 206, 231f, ii. 109, 142, 170, 189 & n, 227-234, 237, 277f, 300, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. ix, x, xii, xv-xvii & nn, Mos.

of him in Exod. ii. 2 : Conf. 106, Quis Her. 19, Congr. 132, Som. ii. 227, 230, Mos. i. 9.

<sup>a</sup> Conf. 106 & n & [N], Mos. i. 157.

INDEX OF NAMES

- i & ii passim, VII. Gen. Introd. p. ix, Decal. 2-19, 45, Spec. Leg. i. 41 & n-51 & n, 59, ii. 256 & n, iii. 125, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. x, xiv, xv, xxi, Spec. Leg. iv. 61, 104[N], 106[N], 173-175, Virt. title[N], 42, 51-81 & 78[N], 175, Praem. 4 & n & [N], 40n, 52-56, 77, 78 & [N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5 n, 10[N], 29 & n, 43 & n, 73[N], Vit. Cont. 65[N], 80[N], 87, Aet. 19, 147[N], Hyp. Introd. pp. 408f, 6. 1n, 6. 2-4 & nn, 6. 8f, 6. 10, 7. 11f, 11. 1 & n, Prov. Introd. p. 448
- Muses : III. Plant. 129 & [N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 62, Aet. 55 ; cf. IV. Mig. 72

Naamah : see Noeman

Naason : II. Post. 76

Nadab and Abihu : I. Leg. All. ii. 57f, (iii. 133), IV. Mig. 168f & n, Quis Her. 309 & n, V. Fug. 59, 160n, Som. ii. 67 & n, 186 & n, VI. Mos. ii. 142ff, 276n, VIII. Virt. 53, 59, Praem. 78

Nadab and Abihu must be included in several references to Moses' nephews (Leg. All. iii. 133, Mos. ii. 142ff, Virt. 53, 59, Praem. 78). Their names are explained in Philo's exposition of Exod. xxiv. 1 : Nadab means 'voluntary' honouring of God ; Abihu, 'my father,' signifies the man sensible enough to have God for his father rather than master, whom he thus approaches fearlessly and affectionately (Mig. 168f & n). They are simply 'holy principles' (Som. ii. 67). But the significant passage for Philo is Lev. x. 1ff, which he contrives to interpret wholly in favour of Nadab and Abihu. The "strange fire" which they offered was their zeal, 'alien' to creation but akin to God (Som.

INDEX OF NAMES

ii. 67 & n), or their piety (ib. 186 ; cf. 67). Their death "before the Lord" was a translation to God's presence (Fug. 59, Som. ii. 67, Quis Her. 309 & n, Mos. ii. 276n). Their leaving their coats behind (Lev. x. 5) illustrates that nakedness which is freedom from passions (Leg. All. ii. 57f)

Nahor : II. Post. 76, IV. Congr. 43, 45 & n-53. Nahor means 'rest of light' (Congr. 45), and as kinsman of Abraham he obtained a share in wisdom's light ; yet his knowledge was incomplete, resting where it was, for he did not remove from Chaldaea, but honoured the created before the Creator (ib. 43). He represents, therefore, any philosophy that does not acknowledge God (ib. 45n). Philo is considering cases where men married wives and concubines, and he allegorizes Nahor's Milcah and Reumah. In Post. 75f he and Abraham represent examples of good men making good choices

Naid : see Nod

Naphtali : denotes 'broadening' or 'flung wide open,' and so he is the symbol of peace, by which all things are opened out and given width, just as they are shut in by war (V. Som. ii. 36)

Nazirite <sup>a</sup> : I. Leg. All. i. 17 & n, III. Quod Deus 87-90, 89[N]

Nero : IX. Flacc. 22

Nike : I. Op. 100

Nile : VI. Mos. i. 115f, ii. 195, IX. Prov. 2. 65 ; and, as 'the river of Egypt,' IV. Conf. 29f, Quis Her. 315f & n, V. Fug. 179f, Som. ii. 255-259, 278, 300, <sup>a</sup> Colson used both 'Nazarite' and 'Nazirite,' but the latter more often. Both are correct.

INDEX OF NAMES

- VI. Mos. i. 6, 99-101, 202, VIII. Praem. 90. For its allegorical significance see Egypt
- Nimrod : means 'desertion,' and typifies the fleshly outlook of the earth-born "giants," who are held to have 'deserted' the good (II. Gig. 65f)
- Noah : In Gen. v. 29 Lamech names his son Noah, and a punning explanation derives the name from a Hebrew root meaning 'rest.' By his birth Philo means us to understand the birth of righteous reasoning to the soul, whereby all painful ambitions, griefs, and wickednesses are banished (Det. 121-123); the birth of just Noah and his sons makes evident the abundance of the unjust (Gig. 3); being tenth from Adam (ten is a perfect number), righteous Noah's birth shows how his ancestor Seth was enlarged in virtue (Post. 173f), and how justice in the soul is perfect and the true goal (Congr. 90). In Leg. All. iii. 77, Abr. 27, Philo treats Gen. vi. 8 : "Noah found grace in the eyes of the Lord," even though he had as yet done nothing noble (cf. Abr. 47) : so God promotes goodly natures without giving reason (cf. Quod Deus 70-74); Noah's was an excellent nature, for he signifies 'rest' or 'righteous' (see below). The deeper meaning of "finding grace" with God is that only God, not creation, has grace to bestow; His grace is the origin of creation (Leg. All. iii. 78, cf. Quod Deus 86, 104-108)
- "These are the generations of Noah. Noah was a just man, perfect in his generation, Noah was well-pleasing to God" (vi. 9, LXX) : the offspring of a good mind are the virtues mentioned, that he was a man, just, perfect, well-pleasing to God

INDEX OF NAMES

(Quod Deus 117f, Abr. 31-35); the righteous alone is a man (Abr. 32f); yet "perfect in his generation" indicates that he was not good absolutely but in comparison with the men of that time (ib. 36-39); Noah was pleasing to the Potencies, but Moses to God (Quod Deus 109, 116). This text supplies Philo with his regular epithet for Noah, "just" or "righteous,"<sup>a</sup> and with "perfect,"<sup>b</sup> and with the idea of Noah's virtues.<sup>c</sup> Other descriptions of Noah make him good (Quod Deus 70, Mos. ii. 15, cf. Det. 105, Quod Deus 107) and noble (Abr. 27, 35, 56, Virt. 201, cf. Leg. All. iii. 78) and wise (Det. 170f, Abr. 27, 31), holy and pious (Virt. 201), beloved of God (Abr. 27, 46, Som. ii. 225)

Noah begat sons (vi. 10), for the just man who follows the truly masculine reason (λόγος) begets males, true-born and excellent fruit (Gig. 4f)

The corruption of the earth, the flood, and Noah being spared (vi. 11ff) are variously interpreted. In Det. 170ff the deluge is the washing away of the soul's defilements, and Noah is the goodly reasoning faculty instructed to bring into the body or vessel containing the soul (the ark) "from among the clean beasts seven, male and female" (vii. 2) that it should find all parts of

<sup>a</sup> δίκαιος, Leg. All. iii. 77f, Det. 105-123, Post. 173f, Gig. 5, Quod Deus 85, 117f, 140, Agr. 2, 20, 181, Plant. 1, 140, Sob. 30, Conf. 105, Mig. 125, Quis Her. 260, Congr. 90, Mut. 189, Som. ii. 223f & n, Abr. 27, 33, 46, 56, Praem. 22f & n, cf. Mos. ii. 59.

<sup>b</sup> τέλειος, Quod Deus 117, 122, Abr. 34, 36ff, 47, Praem. 22 & n, cf. Gig. 5, see also VI. Gen. Introd. p. x.

<sup>c</sup> Quod Deus 117f, 122, 140, Som. ii. 225, cf. Post. 173; φιλάρετος, Abr. 27, 31, 34, 36ff, (48).

INDEX OF NAMES

the irrational side clean for its use. In Quod Deus 73-76, 85, God in anger judges the earth, but mingles mercy with judgement, that the race might survive, and valued one just man above the multitude of unjust thoughts. In Conf. 105 Philo is discussing asphalt, and suggests that its safety (ἀσφάλεια) is of bodily rather than spiritual things ; so Noah, in the great ceaseless deluge of life, while still needing sense to behold realities, " coats the ark with asphalt " (vi. 14), that is, strengthens the bodily impressions ; but presently he will come forth from the body and use his understanding, free from it, to apprehend truth. In Mig. 125, where Philo is dealing with the blessing of Abraham, Noah illustrates his argument that the righteous man is a good influence in the race, as is the righteous mind in the soul, for he survived the engulfing of so many parts of the soul and begat wisdom's new race. In Mos. ii. 60-65 Philo tells the story of the Flood and the Ark to show how the historical part of Moses' law-book records the punishment of the wicked and the salvation of the good. In Virt. 201, on Nobility, and the inheriting of it, Noah's piety is emphasized by his being the only family to be preserved from the flood : yet his son Ham was degenerate. In Praem. 22f the individual Noah was rewarded for his justice with preservation from the deluge and made the founder of a new race.<sup>a</sup> This thought, that Noah was the last of the old race and first of the new, also occurs to Philo in Abr. 46, 56, Mos. ii. 60, 65, cf. Mut. 189. The covenant made with Noah <sup>a</sup> Noah is here equated with Deucalion ; see [N].

INDEX OF NAMES

(ix. 11) is briefly treated in Som. ii. 223-225 : the Pharaoh-mind had said, " I stood " ; but this stability belongs to God ; He imparts it to the Logos, which under the name of Covenant is said to be made to stand upon the just Noah. We learn that justice and God's covenant are identical, and that God gives the recipients of His gifts to themselves (see note ad loc.). It is the desire of the God-beloved to escape the waters of engrossing business and anchor in the calm and safety of virtue " And Noah began to be a husbandman, and he planted a vineyard, and drank of the wine, and became drunken [LXX, " and was made naked " ] within his house " (ix. 20f). Tilling the soil is a skilled trade and therefore proper to righteous Noah ; for the good man prunes away the growths of passions and vices in the soul (Det. 105, Agr. 1-10, 20) ; yet Noah only " began " : he had not the strength to complete his task (Agr. 125, 181). Noah's drunkenness leads to disquisitions on the subject (Plant. 140ff, Ebr. 4ff). His nakedness was of the foolish kind, a deprivation of virtue ; but " in his house " shows that the sin was limited in its harmful effect (Leg. All. ii. 60f, cf. Ebr. 4 and n). When Noah awoke to soberness, he blessed and cursed his sons (ix. 24ff) ; this indicates sobriety of the soul (Sob. 1-5), when it perceives the former doings of the young rebellious wickedness within it and curses them (ib. 30) ; and the blessing and cursing must have been the inspired utterances of a prophet (Quis Her. 260)

Noah symbolizes the good man, etc. (see above),

INDEX OF NAMES

the righteous philosopher (Leg. All. iii. 77f, Quod Deus 107), the righteous reasoning in the soul (Det. 121, 170, cf. Gig. 5, Quod Deus 70-72, Mig. 125 & n), the incorruptible element (Quod Deus 123), the soul itself (Leg. All. ii. 60f). In Abr. 7-47 (see VI. Gen. Introd. p. x), an imperfectly wise Triad comprising Enos (Hope), Enoch (Repentance), and Noah (Justice) is contrasted with Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob; the first three are like the studies of children in comparison with the exercises of grown athletes in the sacred contests (ib. 48); Philo again treats the Triad in Praem. 22f & n (see VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xxi)

- I. Leg. All. ii. 60f, iii. 77f, II. Det. 105, 121-123, 170, Post. 173f, Gig. 1-5, III. Quod Deus 7-74, 86, 104-109, 116f, 122, 140, Agr. 1-10, 20, 125, 181, Plant. 1, 73, 140, Ebr. 4 & n, Sob. 1-5, 30-32, 44, 52n, (59), IV. Conf. 105 & n, Mig. 125 & n, Quis Her. 260, Congr. 90, V. Mut. 189, Som. ii. 223-225 & n, VI. Gen. Introd. p. x, Abr. 27, 31-39, 46-48, 56, Mos. ii. 59-65, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, Virt. 201f, Praem. 22f & n & [N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 4, 70[N]

Nod (LXX, Naid) : means 'tossing' (σάλος), symbol of the vice that creates tumult (κλόνος) in the soul of the foolish man (II. Cher. 12, Post. 22 & n), or 'tumult,' the destination of Cain (Post. 1, 32)

Noeman : one of the degenerate descendants of Cain, the 'fatness' of those whose goal is material comfort, II. Post. 120

Norbanus : X. Leg. 314f

Ocellus : IX. Aet. 12 & n & [N]

Odysseus : IX. Vit. Cont. 40f

INDEX OF NAMES

- Oedipus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 15f & n
Olympic Games : III. Quod Deus 147, Agr. 119 & [N],
VIII. Virt. 193
Olympus, Olympians : III. Agr. 119 & [N], IV. Conf.
4, V. Som. i. 151, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 105
On : see Heliopolis Onan : ' That evil suggestion of an unnatural creed,' represents self-love or the selfish pursuit of pleasure (II. Post. 180f, III. Quod Deus 16-18, IX. Hyp. 7. 7n)
Onomarchus : IX. Prov. 2. 33
Ossa : IV. Conf. 4
- Paeon : X. Leg. 110
Palestine : VI. Abr. 133, Mos. i. 163, VIII. Virt. 221, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75
Pamphylia : X. Leg. 281
Panaetius : IX. Aet. 76 & n
Panathenaea : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 132
Pandora : I. Op. 133, IX. Aet. 63
Panhellenes : IX. Vit. Cont. 42
Paradise : II. Cher. 11, 20, IV. Congr. 171 & [N] Parthians : III. Quod Deus 174, VI. Jos. 136, X. Leg.
10, 256
Pasch, Passover : I. Leg. All. (ii. 34), iii. 94 & n, 154, 165, II. Sac. 62 & [N], 63, IV. Mig. 25f, Quis Her.
192f, 255, Congr. 106, cf. 162, VI. Mos. ii. 224 (cf.
' crossing-feast,' 226, 228, 233, and Leg. All. iii.
94, Spec. Leg. ii. 41, 145 & n & [N]), VII. Decal.
159, Spec. Leg. ii. 41, 145 & n & [N], 150n, IX.
Vit. Cont. 65n & [N]
The Passover represents the passage from the life of the passions to the practice of virtue (Sac. 63), sacrificed with haste that the mind may eagerly

INDEX OF NAMES

pass away from the passions and thank God its Saviour (Mig. 25, cf. Quis Her. 255); when, at the Passover, the soul studies to unlearn irrational passion and of its own free will experiences the higher form of passion which reason sanctions, the lamb is divided for distribution: this illustrates proportioned equality of numbers (Quis Her. 192f, cf. Congr. 162); the perfect number, ten, is seen in the Passover being sacrificed on the tenth day (Congr. 106). See also Spec. Leg. ii. 145n & [N]

Pasiphaë: VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43-45, VIII. Praem. 23[N]

Peiraeus: IX. Flacc. 155

Peitho: The Egyptian city Peitho signifies our speech, because persuasion (Greek πειθῶ) is its function, and the word means 'harassing mouth' (Hebrew), for the worthless man's speech harasses and overturns all that is good, II. Post. 54f, V. Som. i. 77

Pelion: IV. Conf. 4

Peloponnesse, Peloponnesian: IX. Aet. 140, Flacc. 154, 173, X. Leg. 281

Pentecost: VII. Decal. 160, Spec. Leg. i. 183, ii. 176 & [N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 73 [N], Vit. Cont. 65 & nn & [N]

Penuel: The fate of Penuel at Gideon's hands indicates what is in store for the builders of Babel towers. Penuel, which is 'turning from God,' was destroyed: piety overturns every argument of impiety. IV. Conf. 129-132

Peor: see Baal-Peor

Peripatetic: IX. Aet. 55

Persians: III. Quod Deus 174, V. Som. ii. 117, VI. Jos. 133, 136, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13 & n & [N], 17f

INDEX OF NAMES

& [N], 100 & n & [N], IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74
 Petronius : X. Leg. 207-261, 333f

Pharaoh : Since Egypt (q.v.) represents the body, passions, etc., the king of Egypt (included here whether or not styled 'Pharaoh') signifies much the same things. He is the mind which is king of the realm of the body (Agr. 57, Conf. 88, Fug. 124, Jos. 151), sovereign of the animal and composite (συγκρίτου ζώου, Sac. 48), ruling the passions (Leg. All. iii. 13), the mind that fancies itself a king (Mig. 160, Som. ii. 215), the king of terror (Mut. 173). The same adjectives are used to describe Pharaoh as Egypt: he is a lover of pleasure and self, of the body and passion<sup>a</sup>; he represents the foolish man,<sup>b</sup> the incontinent soul<sup>c</sup>; he is proud (Ebr. 111, Mos. ii. 88), stubborn (Som. ii. 184, cf. Mos. ii. 89), impious (Mut. 19, Som. ii. 182; see below, on Exod. v. 2). But Philo's favourite description presupposes the derivation of 'Pharaoh' from a word meaning 'to scatter,'<sup>d</sup> so that he is 'the scatterer of things noble.'<sup>e</sup> Frequent, too, is the term 'god-

<sup>a</sup> φιλήδων, Leg. All. iii. 212, Mut. 171f, Jos. 153; φίλαντρος, Cher. 74, Som. ii. 219; φιλοσώματος, Abr. 103; φιλοπαθής, Ebr. 208f, Som. ii. 277.

<sup>b</sup> ἄφρων, Det. 161f, Mut. 125, 128f, 171-175, cf. 89-91, Som. ii. 181; φῶλος, ib. 237.

<sup>c</sup> Ebr. 210, Som. ii. 181f, 184, 200f, 211, Abr. 103, Jos. 153.

<sup>d</sup> 'Pharaoh' is Egyptian and has no such meaning; nor is there an obvious Hebrew word for 'scatter'; but Philo perhaps had in mind an intensive form of III. פָּרַץ, or even just the general sound of the word, akin to many that begin with 'para-' and mean 'break out,' etc.; or perhaps the Greek equivalent, φάρω.

<sup>e</sup> ὁ σκεδαστής τῶν καλῶν Leg. All. iii. 236, 243, cf. 12f, Sac. 48, 69, Det. 95, Quis Her. 59f, Som. ii. 211.

INDEX OF NAMES

less<sup>a</sup>; it is an obvious term for the enemies of God's people, but Philo justifies it in the case of Egypt by their worship of sacred beasts, and in the case of Pharaoh by Exod. v. 2, "I know not the Lord."<sup>b</sup> God's words to Moses in vii. 1, "I give thee as a god to Pharaoh," are also much used.<sup>c</sup> Other relevant texts are Gen. xli. 17 (Som. ii. 215-219, instability), Exod. ii. 15 (Leg. All. iii. 12f, Fug. 47), ii. 23 (ib. 212, Det. 93-95, Pharaoh's death and Israel's groaning), vii. 15 (Conf. 29f, Som. ii. 277f, wrong speaking of pleasure-lovers, i.e. Epicureans), the passions, viii. 9, 10 (Sac. 69-71, the folly of postponement), meet the soul with xiv. 7, xv. 1, 4 (Ebr. 77-79 & n, 111, the destruction of the wicked and boastful mind), xv. 9 (Cher. 74-83, God alone acts, man's part is passivity); the wickedness of making (brick) structures of evil-minded thoughts (Conf. 88f); failure to seek and find (Fug. 124f, 147)

- I. Leg. All. i. 40, iii. 12-14, 212, 236, 243, II. Cher. 74, Sac. 9 & [N], 48, 49-71, Det. 94f, 161f, Post. 115, III. Agr. 57-60, Ebr. 19, 77-79 & n, 111, 208-210, 214ff, IV. Conf. 72, 88, Mig. 84, 159-162 & n & 160[N], Quis Her. 20, 59f, V. Fug. 124f, 147, Mut. 19-21, 89-91, 125, 128f & n, 171-175, 207-209, Som. i. 77f, ii. 5, 159, 181-184, 195, 200f, 211,

<sup>a</sup> ἄθεος, Leg. All. iii. 12f, 212, Ebr. 19; ἀντίθεος, Conf. 88, Congr. 118, Som. ii. 183, cf. 277.

<sup>b</sup> Leg. All. iii. 12f, 243, Post. 115, Ebr. 19, 77, Som. ii. 182, Mos. i. 88.

<sup>c</sup> See Sac. 9[N]; Leg. All. i. 40, Sac. 9, Det. 161f, Mig. 84, Mut. 19, 125, 128f, Som. ii. 189, Quod Omn. Prob. 43 & n.

INDEX OF NAMES

215-219, 237f, 261, 277-279, VI.<sup>a</sup> Gen. Introd. p. xiii f, Abr. 93-106, Jos. 27 & n, 88-124, 148-150, 151-153, 157, 163, 166, 222, 242, 248-251, 256-258, Mos. i. 8-10, 13 & n, 15, 32f, 36f, 45f, 49, 73, 87-91, 105, 120, 122f, 134, 138f, 149, 167-169, ii. 248, VIII. Virt. 92n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 43 & n, Hyp. 11. 4n

Pharos : VI. Mos. ii. 35-44, IX. Flacc. 27, 110

Phaÿllus : IX. Prov. 2. 33f

Pheidias : III. Ebr. 89

Pheison : The river of Eden (Gen. ii. 10ff) divides into the four cardinal virtues (II. Post. 128f), Pheison being Prudence, owing to its 'sparing' (Greek φείδεσθαι) and guarding the soul from doing wrong ; it is the best of virtues (I. Leg. All. i. 63-66). Another derivation, supposedly from Hebrew, makes it mean 'alteration of mouth,' which is characteristic of prudence, for it transforms words into action ; universal (not particular) prudence is seated in the wisdom of God (ib. 74-78, 85)

Philadelphus, Ptolemy : VI. Mos. ii. 28-33

Philip the tetrarch : IX. Flacc. 25 & [N]

Philolaus : I. Op. 100 & n

Philomelus : IX. Prov. 2. 33f

Phinehas : When one of the Israelites introduced a Midianitish woman into the camp, Phinehas, one of the priests, took a spear and thrust both of them through. "So the plague was stayed from the children of Israel." And God said, <sup>a</sup> In Vol. VI only Jos. 151-153 contains allegorical matter about Pharaoh. For the contrast between the De Josepho and the Allegorical Commentary see VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xiii f.

INDEX OF NAMES

“ Behold, I give unto him my covenant of peace . . . even the covenant of an everlasting priesthood ” (Num. xxv. 6-13). Philo interprets this as follows : Phinehas, the controller of the inlets and outlets of the body (Post. 182), consecrated intelligence (ib. 184), most war-like reason (Conf. 57), a hater of evil and zealous for good, came as self-bidden champion (Mut. 108) ; he took a spear or probe (σειρομάσσης), that is, zeal for virtue (Leg. All. iii. 242, Conf. 57) or the exploring of the nature of existent things that discovers virtue (Post. 182, cf. Ebr. 73), the sharp and two-edged word (or ‘ reason,’ λόγος) that explores each thing (Mut. 108), and he pierced through the Midianitish woman, the nature ‘ sifted out ’ from the sacred company, namely folly (Leg. All. iii. 242), the virtue-hating, pleasure-loving creature (Post. 182, cf. Conf. 57), passion (Mut. 108), the belief which ascribes causation to creation itself (Ebr. 73, cf. Conf. 57), and with her the man, that is the ideas or reasonings based on this belief (Ebr. 73) ; by thus thrusting through her womb, the part that typifies her belief (Ebr. 73, Conf. 57), he destroyed the source of baseness and voluptuousness (Post. 182), and prevented the further growth of wickedness (Leg. All. iii. 242), that the womb should bring to birth no plague of God’s sending (Mut. 108). The twofold reward of peace and priesthood (Mos. i. 304) are sister virtues awarded to the soul for cutting out folly (Leg. All. 242, cf. Ebr. 74), peace, because Phinehas had ended the war of lusts in the soul, and priesthood, because it is akin to peace (the assonance is never far from Philo’s mind : cf. Mut.

INDEX OF NAMES

108), and the consecrated intelligence delights to do God's will (Post. 183, cf. Ebr. 75); peace is awarded to warlike reason (Conf. 57)

A broader survey is this: Joseph and Phinehas represent two methods of dealing with pleasure—flight and fight (Leg. All. iii. 242); Onan and Phinehas are contrasted in their dealing with pleasure within themselves: Phinehas 'muzzled' his inward revolt. This war in the soul is the cause of all wars (Post. 182-185); like the Levites of the similar incident in Exod. xxxii, Phinehas is an example of those dutiful children who despise the female parent, convention, and follow the male parent, right reason, and he slays the philosophy which attributes causation to creation itself (Ebr. 73-76); there is a good 'symphony' of men of peace (Gen. xlii. 11)—peace which is yet a warfare against the symphony of evil; such was that of the captains who warred against Midian (led by Phinehas, Num. xxxi); most warlike of all is Phinehas himself, for his exploit (Num. xxv): he wins the true peace; but the captains share it in their turn (Conf. 55-57 & n); Midian is a double name, and it can stand for the exclusion by judgement of wrong elements, as it does in the story of Phinehas and the Midianite war that followed (Mut. 108f)

I. Leg. All. iii. 242, II. Post. 182-185, III. Ebr. 73-76, IV. Conf. 55-57 & n, V. Mut. 106-109, VI. Mos. i. 300-304 & n, 305f, 313, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 56 & n, VIII. Virt. 34 & [N]-42

Phocis: IX. Prov. 2. 33

Phoenicia, Phoenicians: VI. Mos. i. 163, 214, IX. Hyp. 6. 6, X. Leg. 222, 225f, 281

INDEX OF NAMES

Phuah and Zipporah : The two Hebrew midwives (Exod. i. 15) represent human and divine wisdom, each indivisible, and appropriately named because Zipporah means 'bird,' and divine wisdom soars aloft like a bird, and Phuah means 'ruddy,' and human wisdom implants modesty and discretion, whose presence is proved by blushing (IV. Quis Her. 128)

Pilate : X. Leg. 299-305

Pindar : VIII. Virt. 172, IX. Aet. 121, Prov. 2. 50 & n

Planets : I. Op. 54 & [N], 113 & [N], 126, Leg. All. i. 8 & n

Plato : I. Op. 119 & n, 133, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 13 & n, Vit. Cont. 57-59, Aet. 13 & [N]-17 & nn, 25 & n-27, 38 & n, 52 & n, 141 & n<sup>a</sup>

Pleiades : I. Op. 115, Leg. All. i. 8 & n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 57

Pluto : VII. Decal. 54

Polycrates : IX. Introd. p. 449, Prov. 2. 1n, 2. 24f & n & [NN]

Polyxena : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 116

Pontus : III. Quod Deus 175, X. Leg. 281

Poseidon : VI. Abr. 244[N], VII. Decal. 54 & [N], IX. Vit. Cont. 3 & [N]

Potiphar : Philo's treatment mainly centres round three texts: Gen. xxxvii. 36 with xxxix. 1, which tell of Joseph being sold by the Midianites and purchased by Potiphar, who is "a eunuch of Pharaoh, his chief cook" (LXX); and xxxix. 7, etc., which is the account of the attempt to seduce Joseph made by Potiphar's wife. Thus, I. Leg. All. iii. 236-241: Potiphar's wife, who is pleasure, is contrasted with Joseph and Phinehas, <sup>a</sup> See further Index to Translators' Notes.

INDEX OF NAMES

who meet pleasure with flight and fight ; Potiphar, eunuch and servant of Pharaoh, is the mind incapable of begetting wisdom because it serves the one who is disperser of noble things ; this interpretation explains how a eunuch can be said to have a wife. In III. Quod Deus 111-116 & [N] it is Potiphar himself who is identified with pleasure, the chief cateress of our compound nature ; Philo is contrasting Noah and Joseph, who " found grace " with the ruler of the prison : if we are prisoners of passion, we should at least avoid friendship with our gaoler. In III. Ebr. 210-217, 224 the subject is the relation of wine to greed, and Potiphar, eunuch and chief cook, shows that the ministers of pleasure are incapable of producing wisdom (cf. Leg. All. 236) or virtue. In IV. Mig. 19, 21 & [N] the discussion is on the survival of the higher qualities of the mixed or Joseph mind ; Potiphar's wife is pleasure, lusts, and passions. In V. Mut. 173, Philo, having said that joy is only for the good, says that Egyptian expressions of joy are either assumed or the hope of seducing the soul, as was done with Joseph ; Potiphar is the soul unable to beget anything that tends to discipline ; cook-like, he lives in an environment of dead ideas, hashed to pieces (see Quis Her. 242 [N]), arousing the appetites of the passions. His wife is bodily pleasure in V. Som. ii. 106 : but Joseph, like our own better judgement, refuses to acknowledge any claim but that of God. In Jos. 37-80 the same allegories are adapted to Philo's theme of Joseph as a statesman ; Potiphar represents the multitude that buys the statesman : as politicians,

INDEX OF NAMES

the multitude is occupied, like a cook, in choosing what will give pleasure, until the soul is enervated thereby; eunuch-like, the multitude is unproductive of wisdom; Potiphar's wife is desire, for the desire of the multitude makes love to the statesman, seducing him to succumb for its favour. Other references are insignificant—IV. Conf. 95, VI. Jos. 104, IX. Flacc. 72n

Potiphara: Priest of Heliopolis (Gen. xli. 45), V. Som. i. 78

Priene: IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 153

Protagoras: II. Post. 35, an offspring of Cain's madness

Proteus: III. Ebr. 36, X. Leg. 80

Psonthomphanech: V. Mut. 89 & n-91; see Joseph

Ptolemies: VI. Jos. 136, Mos. ii. 28-33, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 125, X. Leg. 140

Puteoli (Dicaearchia): IX. Flacc. 27 & n, X. Leg. 185

Pythagoreans: I. Op. 100 & n, Leg. All. i. 15, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 2 & n, Act. 12 & n

Raamses: Egyptian city of Exod. i. 11, signifying sense-perception, for it means a 'moth's troubling,' since the mind is eaten out by each of the senses (II. Post. 54-57 & [N] & 56n, V. Som. i. 77)

Rachel: Rachel typifies sense-perception,<sup>a</sup> and she is usually depreciated in favour of Jacob, the Practiser, and Leah, virtue (see I. Gen. Introd. p. xii & n). Thus, as the younger daughter of Laban, though the more beautiful (Gen. xxix. 16), she is comeliness of the body, and mortal only, whereas Leah is immortal beauty of the soul (Sob. 12, cf. Ebr. 52). Again, "when the <sup>a</sup> Leg. All. ii. 46, Post. 135, 177-179, Ebr. 54, Sob. 12, Quis Her. 50f, Mut. 96, Som. ii. 16.

INDEX OF NAMES

Lord saw that Leah was hated, he opened her womb : but Rachel was barren" (xxix. 31) : when the soul is pregnant and bears excellent deeds, the erstwhile beloved objects of sense become barren (Quis Her. 50f, cf. Post. 135). And though Rachel demand children from Jacob (xxx. 1f), it is God only who is the source of creation, as Leah's case shows (Leg. All. iii. 180, Post. 135). Rachel later recanted, however (xxx. 24, Post. 179). Nearly all these points are included in Leg. All. ii. 46f

On the other hand, the story of the flight of Rachel and Leah with Jacob (xxxi. 14ff) classes them together as the faculties of the Practiser (Fug. 14-18, cf. Cher. 40 & [N], Post. 62, Quis Her. 43f, Congr. 24 & n-32), while Laban complains that Jacob has stolen his sound sense, namely his daughters (xxxi. 26f; Leg. All. iii. 20-22), a stripping of the virtues (Fug. 15-18), a loss of the arts and branches of knowledge (Cher. 67-71). They, however, have rightly dissociated themselves from Laban and would refuse his kiss (xxxi. 28; Quis Her. 43f). In the search for the teraphim (xxxi. 34f), Rachel's words reveal that custom is followed more by women (weaker and effeminate souls), than by men, and they are the soul's confession that it cannot rise up against the external goods represented by Laban (Ebr. 54-59 & 56 [N])

After hard labour, Rachel died in giving birth to Benjamin, whom she wanted to call Benoni, 'son of my sorrow' (xxxv. 16, 18f); here she is contrasted with Jacob, reason, and her words signify the secret misery of the soul that is mother of vainglory; cf. Ebr. 52, for her bitter experience contrasts with public opinion of it; vainglory means the death of the soul (Mut. 92-96)

INDEX OF NAMES

In Congr. 24 & n-32 we have Philo's only derivation of the name (but see Fug. 16 & [N]), and a different treatment: the Practiser of virtue has two wives; one is the smooth movement which proceeds to noble life without conflict (the λεία κίνησις of Stoic terminology): the other is Rachel, who is like a whetstone on which the mind sharpens its edge. Her name means 'vision of profanation,' because she judges the visible world to be profane; she belongs to the unreasoning element in the soul, training us through the senses (so her handmaid is Bilhah, 'swallowing,' a bodily function). The Practiser loves Rachel when he wrestles with the passions and opposes all objects of sense. Thus Leah helps by giving peaceful enjoyment of the good, Rachel by the fighting opposition to evil. See also Jacob, Laban, Leah

- I. Gen. Introd. p. xii & n, Leg. All. ii. 46f & [N], 94, iii. 20-22, 180, II. Cher. 40 & [N], 67-71, Post. 62, 135, 179, III. Ebr. 52-59 & 56[N], Sob. 12, IV. Quis Her. 43f, 50f, 175, Congr. 24 & n-32, V. Fug. 14-18 & 16 [N], Mut. 92-96, 97n, Som. ii. 16, VIII. Virt. 221n, 223 & n-225

Raguel: see Jethro

Ram: I. Op. 116

Rameses: see Raamses

Rebecca: Rebecca is the symbol of Patience,<sup>a</sup> or <sup>a</sup> ὑπομονή, Leg. All. iii. 88f (ὑπομονητικὴ ψυχὴ), Sac. 4, Det. 45, 51, Plant. 169f, (τῶν καλῶν), Mig. 208f, Congr. 36, 111-408

INDEX OF NAMES

Steadfastness in excellence, a queenly, virgin virtue <sup>a</sup> ; she is also to be connected with Reason (Post. 77f) or Knowledge (ib. 77f, 138, Fug. 52, 195 ; see Isaac)

Abraham sent his servant to obtain a wife for Isaac, and it was Rebecca who fulfilled his words by offering water to the servant and for his camels (Gen. xxiv. 15ff). In a sustained allegory, Philo contrasts Rebecca with Hagar, the type of School learning : Rebecca, virgin virtue, waters her pupil from the well of divine wisdom (cf. Fug. 194), not with gradual progress but with perfection (Post. 132-153, and Introd. p. 325f). She ' went down ' to the well (xxiv. 16), a descent from proud imposture ; she ' came up ' thereby to virtue's height (Fug. 194f, Post. 136). In Congr. 111-113 Philo illustrates the use of the perfect number, Ten : the servant had ten camels, he gave Rebecca bracelets of ten weights of gold (xxiv. 10, 12)

Philo maintains that the lovers of wisdom, represented by Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, and others, did not know women but were wedded to virtues, Rebecca being Patience (Cher. 40f, cf. Congr. 34-38, Post. 62, 132f). ' Taking a wife ' is to be understood in this way : good men choose good, bad men choose evils ; but some are above that, so Isaac, though he " took Rebekah " (xxiv. 67), did so only in his mother's 113, Fug. 39, 194f, Som. i. 46, cf. Fug. 45 (ἐπιμονή, ἐπιμένω), Cher. 41 (τῶν καλῶν), 47, Det. 30f (τοῖς καλοῖς), Fug. 24 (ὀρθογνώμων).

<sup>a</sup> Congr. 36 and Post. 132f ; ἀρετή, Cher. 40f, Post. 62, 77f, 132f, 136, Congr. 36, 111f.

INDEX OF NAMES

tent (Post. 77f; Sarah is sovereign Virtue or Wisdom). Rebecca was barren, but Isaac prayed to the Lord and she conceived (xxv. 21): virtue brings forth to her lover, but receives the divine seed from God (Cher. 47). She learned that she was to have twins ("Two nations are in thy womb . . ." xxv. 22f), the base and irrational nature, the good and rational (Leg. All. iii. 88). Hers being a pregnancy accompanied by wisdom, Rebecca received (opposed to 'having') in her womb the knowledge of the two nations of the mind, virtue and vice, and distinguished between them, and she was happily delivered (Congr. 129f, cf. Sac. 4)

Abimelech saw Isaac "sporting with Rebekah his wife" (xxvi. 8)—a divine pursuit (Cher. 8 & n), the wise man making merry with her who waits patiently for all that is beautiful (Plant. 169f)

I. Leg. All. iii. 88f, II. Cher. 8 & n, 40f, 47, Sac. 4, Det. 30f, 45, 51, Post. 62, 77f, 132-153, III. Plant. 169f, IV. Mig. 208-211, Congr. 34-38, 111-113, 129, V. Fug. 23-25 & [N], (26-38), 39-52 & 45[N], 194f, Som. i. 46, VIII. Virt. 208f & n, 221n

Red Sea: VI. Gen. Introd. p. xv, Mos. i. 165, 169-181, ii. 1, 247-257, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145n, VIII. Praem. 78[N], IX. Vit. Cont. 85; cf. I. Leg. All. iii. 94, 172, III. Ebr. 79 & n, and see Passover

Reuben: Reuben is the symbol of good natural endowments, for 'seeing son' he is called, in so far as he is a son not perfect, but in so far as he is a man with power to see and keenness of vision, well endowed by nature (Som. ii. 33). Philo keeps consistently to 'natural ability' for Reuben, and develops the idea in accordance with various texts : thus in Num. iii. 12f the Levites are said to be a ransom for the first-born ; this means that Levi, 'sanctified reason,' is accepted by God before Reuben, natural ability (Sac. 118-121). "This our son is disobedient . . ." (Deut. xxi. 18-21) suggests other sons, not disobedient ; such are the reasonings of the naturally gifted, of which Reuben is a type (Ebr. 94). God employs subordinate ministers for the lower work of punishment, and so we find the six best tribe-leaders, Reuben amongst them, set over the blessing, and six others over the cursing (Deut. xxvii. 12f, Fug. 73). The blessing of Moses (mistakenly attributed to Jacob) prays that natural ability may live (Deut. xxxiii. 6, Mut. 210). Jacob's words in Gen. xlviii. 5, "Ephraim and Manasseh shall be as Reuben and Simeon to me," lead Philo to find an analogy between Reuben, the gifted nature, and Ephraim, memory, etc. (Mut. 97-102)

INDEX OF NAMES

I. Leg. All. i. 81, II. Sac. 118-121, III Ebr. 94, V. Fug. 73, Mut. 97-102, 210, Som. ii. 33, VI. Jos. 13, 16-21, 173-176, 188, 217, Mos. ii. 175, 186n, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xviii n, Praem. 75n

Reumah : Nahor, Abraham's kinsman, shared in his wisdom, yet his knowledge never went beyond the Chaldaean astrology ; he represents, therefore, any scheme of things that does not acknowledge God as Creator. He had a wife, Milcah, who symbolizes the Chaldaean astrology, queen of the sciences ; his concubine was Reumah, which means 'seeing something,' and symbolizes the sceptics, busying themselves with quibbling over little things, missing the better, more profitable things. They come third, astrology is second best, best is Israel that sees God (Gen. xxii. 23f, IV. Congr. 43-53)

INDEX OF NAMES

Rhegium : IX. Act. 139

Rhine : X. Leg. 10

Rhodes : IX. Act. 120

Rome, Romans : I. Op. 127 (spelling of septem), IX. Flacc. 28, 40 (Senate), 105, 152, 158, X. Leg. 10, 28 (laws), 108, 116 (freedom), 144, 153, 155, 157, 160 (Jews), 185, 219f, 252, 285-287 (citizenship), 337, 342, (351)

Salem : I. Leg. All. iii. 79-81 : Melchizedek was made king of 'peace' (Salem) and priest of God without first doing anything to merit it. Peace is the proper realm of a king, as war is of the despot

Samuel : Hannah gave Samuel to the Lord, and his name means 'appointed to God' (V. Som. i. 254, III. Quod Deus 5, 11, Ebr. 143f, IV. Mig. 196). Hannah's dedication of her child contrasts with those who beget for themselves (Gen. vi. 4, Quod Deus 5); in thanksgiving she said, "The barren hath borne seven . . .," and Samuel, whose existence is ordered in accordance with God alone, the Monad, implies the number of rest, namely Seven (ib. 11-13). This ordering of his life included abstinence from strong drink (1 Sam. i. 11, LXX), and Samuel is therefore evidence that drunkenness is a moral folly; we are to think, however, not so much of Samuel the man (whose real existence Philo appears to doubt: see I. Gen. Introd. p. xiv) as of the mind that rejoices in the service of God alone (Ebr.

INDEX OF NAMES

143f). Before instructing Saul in kingship, Samuel, appointed to the highest post in God's service, withdraws him from the baggage (1 Sam. x. 22f, Mig. 196f). Samuel himself is styled 'greatest of kings and prophets' (Ebr. 143 & n). He represents an inspired temper possessed by a God-sent frenzy (Som. i. 254 & [N]). See also VIII. Praem. 4-6[N]

Sarah : Sarah stands for Virtue,<sup>a</sup> or Wisdom,<sup>b</sup> often described as 'ruling' or 'sovereign'<sup>c</sup>; that is an allusion to the interpretation of her names, made in Cher. 3-10, Congr. 1-13, Mut. 61, 66n, 77-80, 130. Sarai, as her name was at the first, means 'my sovereignty,' and is a symbol of specific virtue—the wisdom in me, the self-control in me, etc.—which perishes with its possessor. When the name was changed to Sarah (in Greek, by the addition of another rho, Mut. 61, 77), that is, 'sovereignty,' she ceased to symbolize the particular and became the type of generic virtue, greater than the species, the archetype, imperishable. She is thus the motherless principle of things (ἀμήτωρ ἀρχή): and this probably contains a play upon ἀρχή, 'rule,' 'sovereignty'; certainly Philo alludes to the name when he uses ἀρχουσα, 'ruling.' As wife of Abraham, the

<sup>a</sup> ἀρετή, Leg. All. ii. 82, iii. 218, 244, Cher. 3-7, 9 (τελεία), 41, Sac. 59, Det. 59-61, Post. 62, 132 (τελεία), 134, Ebr. 59 (φιλόρετος διάνοια), Quis Her. 62, 258, Congr. 2-12, 22f, 63, 71, 128, cf. 180, Fug. 128, Mut. 77, 80, 142, 148-150, 166f, 255, 261.

<sup>b</sup> σοφία, Leg. All. ii. 82, Cher. 9f, 45, 49f, Det. 124, Congr. 9, 13, 22, 79f, 129, Mut. 79f, 151-153, Abr. 100.

<sup>c</sup> ἀρχουσα, Leg. All. ii. 82, iii. 244, Cher. 3, 41 (ἀρχουσα και ἡγεμονίς), Quis Her. 258, (cf. ἀρχή, 62), Abr. 99.

INDEX OF NAMES

wise man, the type of the virtue that comes by teaching, Sarah assists his advance from the inferior creeds of Chaldaea and Haran to the vision and knowledge of God, chiefly by advising him to have union with Hagar (see below). As Hagar's mistress, Sarah is repeatedly contrasted with her, the higher education compared with that of the Schools (e.g. Leg. All. iii. 244f, Congr. 71-80), the branches of knowledge compared with the lower arts (Congr. 139f). Besides virtue and wisdom, Sarah also signifies sound sense,<sup>a</sup> knowledge,<sup>b</sup> the fruitful mind (Spec. Leg. ii. 54, cf. Mig. 140), good (Post. 76f)

“ Abram and Nahor took to themselves wives ” (Gen. xi. 29) : among Cain's descendants was Lamech, who did the same ; such choices can be good or bad, according to the chooser, and Abram's was a deliberate choice of the good (Post. 76-78). Sarai was barren, and told Abram to obtain children by her handmaid Hagar (xvi. 1f) : she was barren, yet prolific, for from her sprang the populous Israel ; and virtue is barren of all that is bad, but a fruitful mother of the good (Congr. 3, Mut. 143). Yet as Sarai she represents wisdom in the individual, as yet unable to have children by her (“ she was not bearing for him,” xvi. 1) ; thus the incapacity is that of the immature soul (Abram), who must resort to the School learning (Hagar) (Congr. 1-23, Leg. All. iii. 244). “ And Abram hearkened to the voice of Sarai ” : the learner must obey virtue's com-

<sup>a</sup> φρόνησις, Mig. 126, Congr. 72, 154, 156, cf. 2, Fug. 207, Mut. 137, 151-153.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπιστήμη, Congr. 22, 139f, 154, 156.

INDEX OF NAMES

mands (cf. Leg. All. iii. 244) ; yet only real lovers of knowledge do hearken—which implies assent and obedience as well as hearing (Congr. 63-70). When Sarah gave him Hagar, she is again called “ Abram’s wife ” : this points the lesson that the lover of learning engaged in the Encyclica does not forget his faith plighted to his true wife, philosophy (ib. 71-80). The words, “ when she saw that she had conceived ” (xvi. 4f), are interpreted as “ when Sarai saw,” borne out by her report to Abram in the next verse, and they signify that the lower arts can only dimly see their own products, whereas knowledge can clearly apprehend them (ib. 139f). Abram said, “ Behold thy maid is in thy hands,” which can mean ‘ subject to thee,’ but may also mean that the school subjects require the bodily organs and faculties, while the mistress wisdom reaches to the soul (ib. 155 & [N]-158). Sarah then afflicted Hagar ; but we are not here dealing with women’s jealousy, but with minds, that occupied with the preliminary learning, and that striving for virtue’s palm, not ceasing till it is won (ib. 180). Hagar fled ; but she could return because Sarai was favourably disposed, a deduction made on the basis of Hagar’s flight being one of shame (“ humiliation ” or “ affliction,” xvi. 11), not fear (Fug. 1-6). The whole story is given in Abr. 247-254 as an instance of Sarah’s wifely qualities. The change of name was made by God (xvii. 15). It indicates a betterment of soul. While she was Sarai, still specific virtue, Hagar will return to her, lower to lower ; but later, when Sarai’s name and character have been changed, and Isaac has been born, then the preliminary study and her sophist son will be banished for good (Cher. 4-8). The main lesson from this change of name is that generic virtue is higher than the specific, and imperishable (see above); but in passing, Philo states that we learn also that every virtue is a queen and a sovereign and a ruler of human life (Mut. 80). With Sarah's change of name came promises from God to Abraham. "I will give thee a child of her": this means God is to be father of the child; but he is also husband of the virtue-loving mind (proved by Gen. xxix. 31) (Mut. 130-132, cf. Cher. 49); "of her" can be taken in several ways: Philo prefers that which makes virtue the mother of the good (Mut. 141-144). The promise continues, "I will bless her and she shall be for nations, and kings of nations shall be from her." The first phrase indicates the subdivision of generic virtue; but we may also learn that virtue is beneficial for nations, whether peoples or groups of ideas: and Philo praises virtue's part in life in terms that recall the praises of Wisdom (e.g. Prov. viii. 14ff). The last phrase shows that virtue's sons are all rulers, for the sage alone is king (Mut. 148-150, 151-153)

INDEX OF NAMES

Omniscient God does not usually ask questions, which imply ignorance. But when he asked Abraham, "Where is Sarah thy wife?" (xviii. 9), it was because it was necessary for Abraham to answer where his virtue was. Abraham replied that it was in the soul ("Behold, in the tent"), laid up like a treasure, yet not making him happy because happiness consists in the exercise of virtue, impossible until the birth of Isaac (Det. 57-61). The promise of a son was renewed, but Sarah laughed, for "it had ceased to be with Sarah after the manner of women (ἐξέλειπεν δὲ Σάρρα γίνεσθαι τὰ γυναικία)" (xviii. 11). This is a favourite text with Philo. It means her passions were now calmed within her (Spec. Leg. ii. 54 & n); the passions are feminine and must be quitted for the masculine noble affections (Det. 28, Fug. 128); the "customs of women" are the external things of sense; but Sarah fled from these to where the men are quartered when she was about to conceive Isaac (Ebr. 59-64); his mother forsook the human ways of custom and mere reasoning when she was to bear Isaac, the self-taught nature that finds without seeking (Fug. 167f); God is husband of virginity, that is, wisdom, who is Sarah: she was virgin, for she passed from the emasculate passions to virtues (hence God only speaks to her after v. 11) (Cher. 49f); her virginity was not of the ever-virgin type (Rebecca), but she typifies those who pass from womanhood to virginity (Post. 134). This text is closely connected with the birth of Isaac in Leg. All. iii. 217, Cher. 8, Post. 134, Ebr. 59. In Cher. 8 it is apparently applied to Isaac himself (see [N]). When Sarah "laughed within herself" (xviii. 12) with incredulity (Abr. 111f), it was the joy of virtue contrasted with sense-perception's groaning (Leg. All. iii. 217f); even though Isaac was not yet born, laughter was possible because virtue is by nature cause for joy, while vice is grievous (Mut. 166f). In Abr. 205f it is again

INDEX OF NAMES

INDEX OF NAMES

virtue's joy ; but Philo recognizes Sarah's incredulity by saying she doubted whether joy is not more than humanity can expect ; so too Spec. Leg. ii. 54f. In Ebr. 62 it is a mocking laugh at the anxious cares of men, especially their concern with the things of sense. Sarah denied that she had laughed. Philo treats this in Abr. 205f and Spec. Leg. ii. 54f : joy was in mind's womb, so she smiled ; but she reflected that joy is the property of God alone, and becoming afraid, she denied her soul's laughter. God made her acknowledge it, thereby showing her that joy is not altogether denied to the creature : only it is a mixed joy, blended with sorrow

The story of Abraham and Sarah deceiving Abimelech (Gen. xii) is given in Abr. 92-106. Abraham's words in the parallel story of Gen. xx. (v. 12), "She is my sister, daughter of my father but not of my mother," are apt, for the virtue-loving mind has no female parentage—the material substance perceptible to the senses—but was born of the Father and Cause of all things (Ebr. 61, Quis Her. 62). The same sort of interpretation is applied to the non-mention of Abraham at Sarah's conception in Gen. xxi. 1 : "The Lord visited Sarah." The lovers of wisdom wed virtues, not women, and these bear to their lovers but by God ; an example is Sarah, who was alone at her conception (Cher. 43-45 & [N]). She said, "The Lord hath made laughter for me (E.V., "made me to laugh"), for whoever hears it shall rejoice with me" (xxi. 6). This is (a) the joy of virtue contrasted with sense-perception's grief (Leg. All. iii. 219, cf. Det. 123; cf. also Leg. All. ii. 82, where it is used for an analogy), and (b) the truth that God is the Father ("The Lord hath made") of the perfect (Isaac) nature (Leg. All. iii. 219), or of laughter, the offspring of wisdom (Det. 124),<sup>a</sup> and (c) the fact that few can receive this teaching ("whoever" suggests few) (Mut. 138f, cf. Leg. All. iii. 219). The next words of Sarah seem to mean to Philo that spiritually it is Isaac who suckles Sarah (Mig. 140 & [N]-142)

INDEX OF NAMES

Sarah's death (xxiii. 2) calls forth from Philo a eulogy of her character (Abr. 245ff), and he describes in detail Abraham's grief and his purchase of a burial-ground (ib. 255-261). So eventually Abraham and Sarah were buried in Machpelah, the double cave that received the virtues in pairs (Post. 62)

- I. Gen. Intro. p. xvi f, Leg. All. ii. 82, iii. 85, 217-219, 244f, II. Cher. 3-10, 40-52, Sac. 59f, Det. 28, 57-61, 123-125, Post. 62, 76-78, 130, 134, III. Ebr. 59-62 & n, IV. Mig. 126, 140 & [N]-142 & n, Quis Her. 62 & n, 258, Congr. 1-23, 63-82, 127-129, 139f, 151-158, 180, V. Fug. 16, 128, 166f, 207, Mut. 61 & [N], 66n, 77-80, 130, 137f, 141-143, 148-153, 166f & n, 176, 252, 261, 264, VI. Abr. 92-106 & 100-102[N], 108-113, 168, 206 & n, 254-261, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 54 & n, 55

Sardanapalus : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 122

Sarmatians : X. Leg. 10

Saturn : IV. Quis Her. 224, X. Leg. 13

<sup>a</sup> God the Father of Sarah, Ebr. 61, Quis Her. 62; of Isaac, Leg. All. iii. 219, Cher. 43-45 & [N], 49, Det. 124, Mig. 140, Mut. 130-132, 137-141, 255.

INDEX OF NAMES

- Saul : IV. Mig. 196f
 Scales : I. Op. 116
 Sceptics : IV. Congr. 52
 Scylla : II. Det. 178 & [N]
 Scythians : III. Ebr. 174, V. Som. ii. 59, VI. Mos. ii. 19,
     X. Leg. 10
 Sebasteum : X. Leg. 151
 Seir : III. Quod Deus 99
 Sejanus : IX. Flacc. 1 & [N], X. Leg. 37, 159-161
 Sella (Zillah) : one of the two wives taken for himself by the worthless Lamech, Sella means ' shadow ' and is a symbol for bodily and external goods, which are really only shadows (II. Post. 75f, 112f).
     Sella was mother of Thobel (ib. 114, 119)
 Semele : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 130
 Senate : IX. Flacc. 40, X. Leg. 74
 Seth : Adam's involuntary going out from God's face later meets with some remedy in the birth of Seth to replace Abel (Post. 10, 124, cf. 172f).
     There are two persons called Enoch (or one ?) :
     one, a son of Cain (Gen. iv. 17), the other a descendant of Seth (v. 18) ; it is the same with Methuselah and Lamech. Under the one line should be enrolled all those who share the godless creed of Cain, under the other those who acknowledge all (esp. offspring) as the gift of God, with Seth at their head (ib. 40-48). Seth means ' watering,' for the mind waters the senses (ib.
     124-126, cf. 10, 170) : this leads Philo into a long excursus on Watering (127-169). When Seth is called " another seed " (iv. 25), " another " can be taken as virtue, being ' hostile ' to wickedness (Cain) and friendly to Abel, being ' different ' only in degree from him (172f). In 170 Seth is a kind of first pattern of virtue begotten by the mind. In 173f the limit of Seth's attainment in knowledge is said to be the starting-point for that of righteous Noah, who is ten (the perfect number) places removed from Seth: Seth's virtue steadily grows in his descendants. Seth also occurs in II. Cher. 54, Det. 138, VI. Abr. 12n

INDEX OF NAMES

Shechem : Jacob hid the "strange gods" under the terebinth in Shechem (Gen. xxxv. 4). These are bad men's gods, the passions or pleasures, and must be placed under guard in Shechem ('shoulder,' symbol of toil), for he that devotes toil to pleasures keeps them well guarded. Again, Shechem is the things of the body and of the senses when in Gen. xlviii. 22 Jacob is said to give a portion to Joseph, who toils at these things. They are secondary, so the wise man does not keep them but passes them on (I. Leg. All. iii. 23-26 & n). But Shechem is also used to signify toil against bodily pleasure, a struggle that is a great burden such as 'shoulder' suggests (II. Det. 9, on Gen. xxxvii. 13). When Abraham "travelled through the country as far as Shechem" (xii. 6), it was the mind's quest for knowledge and mastery of the body and of created things, and Shechem signifies the toil involved (IV. Mig. 216, 221)—very necessary if the judgement faculties of the understanding are not to be raped by him who practises the opposite kind of toil, as does the Shechem of Gen. xxxiv. (ib. 223f & nn, cf. V. Mut. 193f)

Shem : Shem means simply 'name,' and so we must understand the whole genus, representing good, which alone is a thing of name and good report,

INDEX OF NAMES

- just as bad is nameless and of evil name. So Noah's prayer is unique and transcendent : it is the Lord whom he declares to be peculiarly the God of Shem (Gen. ix. 26, III. Sob. 51 & [N], 52 & n & [N], 53f). The words " let him dwell in the houses of Shem " may be a prayer that God Himself with His providential care may inhabit the mind ; and Shem was the root of those qualities seen in the Patriarchs and the twelve tribes, " the palace and priesthood of God " (Exod. xix. 6) (ib. 62-66). But perhaps it is Japhet who is to dwell in the houses of Shem : in that case it is a prayer that the mind that takes bodily and external things to be forms of the good should return to the one good which belongs to the soul (ib. 67f). In V. Mut. 189 Shem is used to prove the perfection of the number one hundred. Shem is also mentioned in II. Post. 173, IV. Mig. 125n, VIII. Virt. 221[N]
- Sheshai : ' Outside me,' stands for external goods (II. Post. 60f)
- Shinar : The Babel-builders " moved from the east (' rising ') and found a plain in the land of Shinar and dwelt there." This was where vice was located, the starting-point of folly : for Shinar means ' shaking out,' signifying the chaos and disintegration of the soul of the fool, from which all good is shaken out (IV. Conf. 1, 60, 68f)
- Shittim : ' Thorns,' a symbol of passions pricking and wounding the soul (Num. xxv. 1, V. Som. i. 89-91)
- Shur : Shur, where the angel of the Lord found Hagar (Gen. xvi. 7, V. Fug. 1, 203), means ' wall ' or ' straightening ' and symbolizes the way in

INDEX OF NAMES

- which the soul is kept on the safe highway of discipline
- Sicily : I. Leg. All. i. 62, VI. Jos. 132, IX. Aet. 139, Prov. 2. 26
- Siddim : Gen. xiv. 3, A.V. LXX, " salt ravine " : the place of vices and passions (IV. Conf. 26)
- Sidon : IX. Aet. 76 & n, X. Leg. 222, 337
- Sihon : When Mind listens to Sense-perception, as Adam did to Eve, disaster follows ; the mind is set on fire. Philo illustrates this by allegorizing Num. xxi. 27-30 ; he interprets " a flame (hath gone forth) from the city of Sihon " as that an irrational impulse issues forth from the mind that corrupts the truth (Sihon = ' corrupting '). Philo manages to read the destruction of the Sihon mind in the latter part of his text (I. Leg. All. iii. 225, 228, 233)
- Silanus, M. : X. Leg. 62-65, 71f, 75
- Simeon : " This our son is disobedient . . ." (Deut. xxi. 18) implies other sons who are not : among these are Reuben, Simeon, Levi, etc. Simeon is the docile scholar, for his name means ' hearing ' (III. Ebr. 94, V. Som. ii. 34, 37). In treating the Shechem of Gen. xii. 6, Philo discusses the incident of Gen. xxxiv, when Shechem, the toiler in folly, tried to ravish Dinah, the soul's judgement ; then the ' hearers ' and pupils of sound sense, Simeon and Levi, defeated him (IV. Mig. 224). These two champions were so much one in mind and purpose that Moses compresses Simeon into Levi in Deut. xxxiii. 8 (V. Mut. 200 & n). God uses subordinate ministers for punishment ; this is seen in his allocating blessing to the six best tribe-leaders (including

INDEX OF NAMES

- Simeon), and setting the other six over the cursing (V. Fug. 73). Jacob's blessing in Gen. xlvi. 5, "Ephraim and Manasseh shall be as Reuben and Simeon to me," leads Philo to see a correspondence between Ephraim and Reuben, Manasseh and Simeon. The advance 'from forgetfulness' (Manasseh) involves recollection (which M. symbolizes), and recollection is akin to learning (Simeon), in which it often plays a part. Reuben (natural excellence) is named before Simeon: so natural excellence, which resembles sight (Reuben='seeing son'), is better than learning, which resembles 'hearing' (V. Mut. 97-102). Simeon is also mentioned in I. Leg. All. i. 81 and VI. Jos. 175-210
- Sinai: IV. Quis Her. 251, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xv, Mos. i & ii, Introd. p. 275 & n, VII. Gen. Introd. p. ix, Decal. 32ff, VIII. Praem. 4-6[N]
- Sisyphus: II. Cher. 78
- Socrates: III. Quod Deus 146 & n, 147, Plant. 65f, V. Som. i. 55-58, IX. Vit. Cont. 57, Prov. 2. 21. In Som. i. 58 Socrates is equated with Terah: but whereas Socrates was a human propounding a philosophy of self-knowledge, Terah was self-knowledge itself
- Sodom, Sodomites: Sodom means 'blindness' and 'barrenness' (e.g. Scm. ii. 191f). Thus Gen. xiii. 12 indicates Lot's relapse into his old state of ignorance (ἀμαθία, Mig. 150 & [N]); the city of Sodom stands for the animal nature, blind of reason, nearly destroyed in the soul's warfare of Gen. xiv (Congr. 91f & n; the events are described in Abr. 225ff); when Abraham refused the offer of the king of Sodom ("Give me the men, and take the horses for thyself," xiv. 21, LXX), it was the refusal to accept irrational creatures in exchange for reasonable beings and so make himself rich in the products of evil (Leg. All. iii. 23f); Abraham was retaining God-given property and ridding himself of the possessions ignorantly claimed by the Sodom character (ib. 195-197); Abraham interceded for Sodom, but in spite of this it was destroyed: every wise man is a ransom for the fool, unless his evil be a sickness so violent that it overpowers the physician's treatment (Sac. 118, 121-123); when praying for the soul barren of good and blind of reason, Abraham stopped at ten, the redemption number (Conf. 109); Gen. xix. 4 tells how the Sodomites, representing those barren of wisdom and blind in understanding, surrounded the soul to dishonour the sacred Thoughts that were its guests (ib. 27f & n); they "wearied themselves in seeking the door" (xix. 11), but this was a seeking that had no finding (Fug. 143f); the destruction of Sodom by fire (Abr. 1 & n, Mos. ii. 55f, Aet. 147[N]), and, with an allegory attached, Abr. 133ff) was judgement on the adversaries of virtue (Som. i. 85, cf. Leg. All. 213); the raging passion for wine is insatiable, and, allegorically, drunkenness is a symbol for folly in general: all of which is suggested by "the vine of Sodom," etc., in Deut. xxxii. 32f, for Sodom is barrenness and blindness, and the fool's desires are barren of true gladness (Ebr. 222-224, Som. ii. 191f)

INDEX OF NAMES

- I. Leg. All. iii. 23f, 195-197, 212f, II. Sac. 118, 121-123, III. Ebr. 222-224, IV. Conf. 27f & n, 91f & n, 109, Mig. 150 & [N], V. Fug. 143f, Som. i. 85,

INDEX OF NAMES

- ii. 191f, VI. Abr. 1 & n, 133ff, 225ff, Mos. ii. 55f, IX. Aet. 147[N]
- Solomon : IV. Congr. 177 (one of Moses' disciples, who is named a man of peace)
- Solon : I. Op. 103-105 ; VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22 & [N] ; IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 47
- Sophocles : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 19
- Sparkler, or Mercury : II. Cher. 22, IV. Quis Her. 224
- Sparta, Spartan : VI. Mos. ii. 19 (laws), VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22 (laws), VIII. ib. iv. 102 (legislator), IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 47, 114, Vit. Cont. 69 (austerity), Aet. 57, 68 (sown men)
- Stephanio : IX. Flacc. 112
- Stoic : II. Post. 133, IX. Aet. 4 & n, 8, 18, 54, 76, 78 & n, 89, 102f
- Sun : II. Cher. 21-26 (the "flaming sword" of Gen. iii. 24), V. Som. i. 72-76, 87-92, 112-114 (God Himself) ; ib. 77-86 (Mind, Sense-perception, Logos)
- Sunium : IX. Flacc. 156
- Sybarites : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 43, VIII. ib. iv. 102
- Sychem : see Shechem
- Syleus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 101 & n & N-104
- Symeon : see Simeon
- Syria : I. Leg. All. iii. 16, 18, IV. Congr. 41-43, V. Fug. 7, 44f & [N], 49, Som. ii. 59, VI. Abr. 91, 133, Jos. 230, Mos. i. 163, ii. 56, 246, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 217, VIII. Virt. 221, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75, Flacc. 25[N], 26, 39, Hyp. 6. 1, 6. 6, Prov. 2. 64, X. Leg. 179, 207, 219-222, 231, 245, 250-252, 259, 281, 333
- Jacob flees from "Laban the Syrian" (Gen. xxxi. 20f) because Syria means 'highlands,' and discretion is the better part of valour when the practising mind meets passion in an exalted state (Leg. All. iii. 16, 18). For the same reason,

INDEX OF NAMES

when he fled to Laban in the first place, it was to his mother's brother, not Laban "the Syrian" (xxvii. 43), the mind empty of sound sense (Fug. 44f & [N], 49). "Syrian" stands for the loftiness of arrogance when it is used of the concubine married to Manasseh (Congr. 41-43)

Talmi: 'One hanging' from lifeless things, as does the soul enamoured of external goods (II. Post. 60f)

Tamar: Tamar, 'palm,' is a symbol of victory; but Philo's interpretations are connected, not so much with the name, as with the story of Judah and Tamar in Gen. xxxviii, from which Tamar emerges as a type of virtue, even of chastity. "Judah took for Er a wife whose name was Tamar" (v. 6): the soul is a corpse-bearer; but it only realizes this when it becomes perfect and worthy of reward—when it weds Tamar, the sign of victory (I. Leg. All. iii. 74). She became widowed, and Judah bade her remain in his house (vv. 11ff): the soul was widowed of passions and pleasures, remained in the house of her Father and Saviour, received divine impregnation, conceived virtue, bore noble actions, and so won the 'palm' of victory (III. Quod Deus 136f). There the story of Tamar's deception of Judah is only suggested in barest outline; but the details of it form increasingly elaborate allegories. Thus, on vv. 14ff: virtue makes trial of her scholars, and sits veiled at the cross-roads, wanting inquiring minds to unveil her and behold her virgin beauty; it is the excellent Judah soul who does so, and there follows a mutual 'conceiving' or 'taking' (IV. Congr. 124-126)

INDEX OF NAMES

& n). Invincible virtue, vexed at men's absurd aims, is not found by Judah's messenger (seeking and not finding); a mind bent on purchasing piety gave pledges, the human virtues of fidelity, constancy, discipline; but inquiries showed there was no harlot-soul in the region of the excellent, to the joy of the Judah mind, glad that his understanding (feminine, διάνοια; but the allegory is becoming confused: see 154n) is a lady of chastity and no easy prey; but his testing of the Tamar character was excusable, for reality is often concealed by semblance (V. Fug. 149-156 & 150[N]). When discussing divine parenthood, Philo uses the Tamar story to illustrate his point: the pledges are not the gifts of any mortal—the archetypal pattern of the universe (seal), the world's order and sequence of things (cord), the divine discipline (staff)—these all reveal the giver to be God; (so the Tamar soul, or virtue, is impregnated by God) and the Judah mind, pleased at the divine inspiration that masters her, says, "She is justified, since I gave her to no mortal": for he holds it impiety to defile the divine with things profane (V. Mut. 134-136). In V. Som. ii. 44 & n, 45, Judah's pledges to Tamar ('the soul') are contrasted with the insignia given to Joseph by Pharaoh. In VIII. Virt. 220-222, Tamar is said to have turned from polytheism to worship the one great Cause, to have kept her life stainless, and to be a pattern and source of nobility (see 208[N], 221[N], and VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xvii, xviii & n)

Tantalus: IV. Quis Her. 269, VII. Decal. 149, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 81

INDEX OF NAMES

- Tartarus : VIII. Praem. 152 & n, X. Leg. 49, 103
- Terah : Abraham came out from Haran, land of the senses, but his father, Terah, died there (Gen. xii. 4, xi. 32) ; this points to a contrast between the virtue-loving Abraham and Terah, whose name means 'scent-exploring' : he is only an explorer or spy of virtue, not a citizen, only smelling at sound sense, taking only the second prize (V. Som. i. 47-52). But the Haran-life includes exploration of the mind, so Terah stands for the "Know thyself" philosophy, and with him Socrates is identified (ib. 56 & n-58)
- Thebes : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 15
- Theodorus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 127 & [N]-130
- Theodotus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 1
- Theon : IX. Aet. 48 & [N]-51
- Theophrastus : IX. Aet. 117-119 & nn
- Therapeutae : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 73[N], 75[N], Vit. Cont. Introd. pp. 104, 106, 108, title [N], passim, esp. 2 & [N], 11, 36n & [N], 59[N], 65[N], 88, 90 & n, Hyp. Introd. p. 410
- Thersites : IX. Vit. Cont. 9 & n
- Thesmophoria : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140 & [N]
- Thessaly : X. Leg. 281
- Thobel : Sella, one of Lamech's two wives, bore a son, Thobel, which means 'all together' ; he stands for the self-conceit of those who think they have secured everything when they have health and wealth. He is by trade a hammerer (Gen. iv. 22), maker of war and munitions of war, for lusts are the real war-makers and batterers of mankind ; he is indeed son of 'shadow' (Sella) (II. Post. 114-120)
- Thummim : see Urim
- Thyestes : VIII. Praem. 134 & n

INDEX OF NAMES

- Tiber : X. Leg. 155, 181
- Tiberius Caesar : IX. Flacc. Introd. p. 295, 2, 8-14 & 10[N], 28, 105, 112, 128, 158, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxiv, 8, 14, 23-26, 29, 33-38, 58, 141, 158-161, 166-168, 240, 298-305, 308, 329
- Tiberius Gemellus : IX. Flacc. Introd. p. 295, 10 & n & [N], 13, X. Leg. 23-33, 67f, 75
- Tiberius Nero, son of Germanicus : IX. Flacc. 22
- Tigris : " The third river is Tigris (A.V., Hiddekel) ; this is that whose course is over against the Assyrians " (Gen. ii. 14). Assyria means ' directing,' Tigris means ' tiger ' : Self-mastery is the virtue set " over against " pleasure, which thinks to direct the course of human weakness ; Tigris symbolizes self-mastery because the desire with which self-mastery is occupied is like a tiger (!). The river does not encircle any land, for self-mastery is powerless to encircle desire and pleasure (I. Leg. All. i. 63, 69-73, 85-87)
- Timaeus : Philo names the work in IX. Aet. 13, 25, 141 ; see also Plato
- Timna : Concubine of Esau's son Eliphaz and mother of Amalek (Gen. xxxvi. 12). The wicked take to themselves as concubines wicked doctrines, and beget evil offspring. The bodily nature is the concubine, here called Timna, or ' tossing faintness,' through which passion (Amalek) is generated : for the soul faints and loses all power through passion (I. Leg. All. i. 54, 59f)
- Trachonitis : X. Leg. 326
- Triptolemus : VIII. Praem. 8 & [N]-10
- Trophonius : X. Leg. 78
- Trypho : IX. Flacc. 76
- Tubal : see Thobel

INDEX OF NAMES

Urim and Thummim : VI. Mos. 113n, 117ff[N], VII. Spec. Leg. i. 84n ; and see Scripture Index at Exod. xxviii. 26, LXX (E.V., 30)

Venerable Goddesses : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140

Venus : IV. Quis Her. 224

Vitellius : X. Leg. 231

Vulcan : see Hephaestus

Xanthians : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 118-120

Xenophon : IX. Vit. Cont. 57f & [N]

Xerxes : V. Som. ii. 117-120

Zabulon : V. Fug. 73. The sheaves or 'doings' of Joseph's dream include Zabulon the symbol of light, since he is named 'night's flowing' ; the man in pursuit of light replacing darkness grasps wakefulness and keen-sightedness (V. Som. 34, 39)

Zaphenath-Paneah : V. Mut. 89 & n-91

Zelophehad : The prophetic oracles of Moses include his pronouncement on the law of inheritance, made in answer to the question of the five daughters of Zelophehad (Num. xxvii. 1-11, VI. Mos. ii. 233-245, cf. VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 124-132 & 127n). They symbolize the five senses, and so it is appropriate that they belong to the tribe of Manasseh ('from forgetfulness' = recollection) ; for while memory has male progeny, the irrational portion of the soul can bear only female offspring (IV. Mig. 205f)

Zelpah : see Zilpah

Zeno : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 53 & n-57, 97, 106-108 & n, 160

INDEX OF NAMES

Zeus : I. Op. 100, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 102, 127, 130, Aet. 81 & n, Prov. 2. 7, 2. 24, X. Leg. 188, 265, 346

Zillah : see Sella

Zilpah : The soul that learns by instruction (Abraham) needs the School learning (Hagar), but the Practiser (Jacob) has two wives and two concubines, of which Zilpah is one ; she is the handmaid of Leah (virtue) and signifies oratorical power : for her name means ' walking mouth ' (IV. Congr. 24 & n, 29 & [N], 30 & n, 33). In contrasting Noah and Joseph, the " generations " of Noah indicate a development of a good kind, whereas there is a regressive development from Jacob to Joseph, who is said to have been " young " and keeping sheep with the bastard sons of the concubines, Bilhah and Zilpah (Gen. xxxvii. 2, III. Quod Deus 119-121). In VIII. Virt. 223 & n-225 Philo describes the extraordinarily cordial relations of the wives with the concubines and their respective offspring with each other (!) as an example of nobility of character among women. Zilpah is also named in I. Leg. All. ii. 94

Zipporah : Zipporah, wife of Moses (Exod. ii. 21), means ' bird,' and so she represents virtue that wings its way from earth to heaven. Moses, therefore, like other virtuous souls, did not " know " a woman, but his mate was a virtue (II. Cher. 41) ; yet the virtues must generate, and so they are impregnated by God Himself, as was Zipporah (ib. 47). Moses did not take Zipporah to wife, but received her, as the perfect natures receive Reason from God Himself (II. Post. 77f). In V. Mut. 120 she is the winged, inspired, and prophetic nature

INDEX OF NAMES

- The Hebrew midwife of Exod. i. 15 (E.V., Shiphrah) called Zipporah typifies the divine wisdom, which soars aloft like a bird (IV. Quis Her. 128)
- Zoan : “ Hebron was built seven years before Zoan in Egypt ” (Num. xiii. 22) : the soul wedded to goodness, in which are buried the virtues (Hebron), takes precedence over the body (Egypt) and vice (Zoan)—for Zoan means ‘ command of evacuation ’ (II. Post. 59 & [N]-62 & [N])
- Zoar : V. Som. i. 85, VIII. Praem. 78[N]
- Zodiac : V. Som. ii. 112, VI. Mos. ii. 123f, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 87, VIII. Praem. 65 & n & [N]; cf. IV. Quis Her. 176 & n, V. Som. i. 214

INDEX TO TRANSLATORS' NOTES

An asterisk indicates words which are also included in the Index of Names to which reference should be made. They are only given here when they are discussed in the Notes without having been in the text of Philo at that point.

Abbott : IX. Flacc. 20n

Academy : IV. Quis Her. 246N

Adam Smith : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 204N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 160n, 217n, Virt. 75n, 111N

Adler : III. Pref. p. v, Quod Deus 63n, Agr. 158n, Ebr. Introd. p. 308n, 4N, 12N, 40n, 74N, 80n, 84N, 118n, 134n & N, 146N, 149fN, 176n & N, 203n, 208n, 218n, Sob. 14nn, 40n, 52n, IV. Mig. 167N

Admetus : VIII. Virt. 124N

Adonis : IX. Flacc. 136fN

Aelian : V. Som. ii. 48N, 121N, 122N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 176N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 73N, Virt. 34N, 139N, IX. Aet. 128n

Aenesidemus : III. Ebr. Introd. p. 314n, 170N, VI. Jos. 125-147N

Aeschines : IX. Flacc. 20n, 138n, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxii n

Aeschylus * : VI. Mos. i. 279n, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 16n, VIII. Virt. 88n, 125n, 226n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 134N, 140N, 143n, Aet. 49n, 139n

Agamemnon : V. Som. ii. 144n

Agrippa * : Herod Agrippa I, grandson of Herod the Great, friend of Gaius Caesar, d. A.D. 44, IX. Flacc. 25N, 30n, 97n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xiii, xx, xxv, xxx & n, 179n, 180n, 191n, 292n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Agrippa : Herod Agrippa II, his son, IX. Flacc. 20N Agrippa * : Marcus Agrippa, friend of Augustus, grandfather of Gaius Caesar, d. 12 B.C., VII. Spec.
Leg. iv. 237N, IX. Flacc. 158n, X. Leg. 291n
 Agrippa : Agrippa Postumus, his son, IX. Flacc. 158n
 Agrippina : IX. Flacc. 10N, X. Leg. 87n
 Alcibiades : III. Sob. 12N, IX. Vit. Cont. 17N, 59N
 Alcmena : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N
 Alexander the alabarch, brother of Philo : IX. Flacc.
 25N
 Alexander Aphrodisiensis : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 56N
 Alexander the Great * : VI. Abr. 182N, Jos. 136n,
VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 164N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob.
 96N
 Alexander Jannaeus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N
 Alexander of Pherae : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 164N Alexander Tiberius, nephew of Philo : IX. Prov.
 Introd. pp. 447-449, 1n, 2. 1n, 2. 21n, 2. 43nn,
 2. 50n, 2. 51n, 2. 55n, 2. 56n, 2. 57n, 2. 62n, 2.
 66n, 2. 69n, 2. 72n
 Alexander Trallianus : IX. Vit. Cont. 40n Alexandria, Alexandrians * : I. Gen. Introd. pp. ix, xxi, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xii n, Spec. Leg. i. 55N, ii. 82n & N, 125N, iii. 3N, 171n & N, VIII. Spec.
Leg. iv. 13N, 237N, IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. pp.
 104f, 106 & n, title N, Flacc. 20N, 25N, 30n, 45N, 54N, 62n, 74n, 130N, 139N, X. Leg. Introd. pp.
 xxi n, xxiv & n, xxvi & n, xxvii, 151n, 179n, 190n,
 191n, 338n
 Aloeidae * : V. Som. ii. 283N, VIII. Praem. 23N
 Ambrose : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, II. Sac. Introd.
 p. 93, 1n, 2n, 53n, III. Sob. 52N, V. Fug. 117n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. pp. 2, 5 & nn, 19n, 61n, 96n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Anaxagoras * : V. Fug. 8n & N, 10n, Som. i. 22n & N, 23N, 31N, IX. Vit. Cont. 14n, Aet. 47n, Prov. 2. 1n
- Anaxarchus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 108n, Prov. 2. 1n
- Anaximander : V. Fug. 8N, Som. i. 22N, 23N, 53N
- Anaximenes : V. Fug. 8N, Som. i. 230N
- Andocides : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 86N
- Angus : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 327ffN
- Antaeus : IV. Quis Her. 46n
- Antigenidas * : VI. Jos. 168N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 144n
- Antigonus : VI. Abr. 182N
- Antiochus Epiphanes : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N, X. Leg. 346n
- Antiphon : V. Som. i. 95n
- Antiquities of Philo : VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvii
- Antony : VI. Jos. 56n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 85n
- Aphrodite * : VI. Abr. 244N, X. Leg. 79N
- Apion : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 2N
- Apis : III. Ebr. 95N, VI. Mos. ii. 162n
- Apollo * : VI. Abr. 244N, VII. Decal. 96N, 159N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N, X. Leg. 95n
- Apollodorus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 101n, 143n
- Apollonius Dyscolus : V. Som. i. 101N
- Apophrades : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 183N
- Appian : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 119n
- Aquila : III. Ebr. 31N, Sob. 32N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145N
- Arad : VI. Mos. i. 250n
- Archelaus, Greek philosopher : V. Som. i. 22N
- Archelaus, son of Herod the Great : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N
- Archer-Hind : I. Op. 54N, 170fN, II. Cher. 21n, Det. 84fN, III. Plant. 118N, V. Som. i. 32N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 219n, IX. Aet. 13N, 25n, 38n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Archiv für Papyrusforschung* : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 2N
 Archytas : VI. Mos. ii. 4N
 Areopagus : VIII. Virt. 139N
 Ares * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N, X. Leg. 112n, 113n
 Aristarchus : IX. Vit. Cont. 17N Aristetas : VI. Mos. ii. 26-44N, 38N, VIII. Spec. Leg.
 iv. 106N, 116N
 Aristides Quintilianus : IV. Congr. 77N, V. Som. i.
 28N, 205N
 Aristippus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 127N
 Aristobulus, King : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N
 Aristobulus Historicus : VI. Abr. 182N
 Aristophanes : II. Sac. 21N, V. Som. i. 123n, ii. 82n, VII. Decal. 116N, Spec. Leg. i. 25N, ii. 4N, iii. 22N, VIII. Virt. 34N, 124N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140N,
Vit. Cont. 59N, 63n, Flacc. 138N
 Aristotelians : V. Som. i. 30N Aristotle * : I. Gen. Introd. p. xvii, Op. 170fN, Leg.
All. iii. 129N, 175N, II. Cher. 125N, Sac. 5-7N, 21N, Det. 50N, III. Quod Deus 167N, 176N, Plant.
 163N, Sob. 34N, IV. Quis Her. 75N, Congr. 77N,
 V. Fug. 19n, Mut. 12N, Som. i. 21N, 30N, 145N, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xv, Decal. 31n, Spec. Leg. i.
 327ffN, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 64N, 237N, Virt. 122N,
Praem. 49-51N, IX. Aet. 48N, 148n
Ath. Pol. : VII. Spec. Leg. 341n
Cael. : IV. Conf. 5N, Quis Her. 283N, IX. Aet.
Introd. p. 174f, 14n
Categ. : VII. Decal. 30N
Eth. Eud. : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 19n
Eth. Nic. : I. Leg. All. i. 4n, II. Det. 7N, III. Quod
Deus 46N, 162-165N, V. Mut. 114n
Gen. et Corr. : IX. Aet. 12N, 21N
Hist. An. : II. Gig. 7N, VII. Decal. 116N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Metaph.* : I. Leg. All. i. 57N, II. Post. 173N, III. Plant. 123N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 56N
Phys. : III. Quod Deus 57N, IV. Conf. 137N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 27N, IX. Aet. 18 & n
Poet. : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 28N
Pol. : II. Det. 7N, III. Quod Deus 46N, Plant. 173N, IV. Quis Her. 145N, VI. Jos. 38N, Mos. ii. 49n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 21N
Rhet. : I. Leg. All. iii. 167n, II. Det. 141N, IV. Congr. 18N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 40n, 64n, 85N, 149fN, Virt. 152N, Praem. 111N, X. Leg. 116n
Top. : I. Leg. All. i. 57N, III. Quod Deus 46N, VII. Decal. 30N
Armenian : I. Leg. All. i. 93n, ii. 22n, II. Cher. 28N, 114N, 125N, IV. Mig. 174N, VI. Abr. 210n, VII. Decal. 106N, Spec. Leg. i. 83n & N, 90n, 139n, 300n, 318n, 342n, Spec. Leg. iii. 33n, IX. Pref. p. vii, Vit. Cont. 9n, 28n, 40n, 42n, 48n, 67n & N, 75n, 77n, 79n, 82n, 84n, 85n, Prov. Introd. pp. 447 & n, 449 & n, 1n & N, 2. 7n, 2. 11n, 2. 17nn, 2. 18N, 2. 23N, 2. 24n & NN, 2. 26n, 2. 32n, 2. 33n, 2. 48N, 2. 50n & N, 2. 54n, 2. 66n, 2. 67n & N, 2. 68n & N, 2. 71N
Arnim : III. Plant. Introd. p. 209nn, 145N, 171N, 172N, VI. Jos. 125-147N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 208n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 60n. See also Stoicorum Veterum Fragmenta
Arnold : V. Fug. 134N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 26n, Aet. 85n Arrian : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74N
Arsen : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 73N
Artemis* : VI. Abr. 244N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 40N, IX. Aet. 37n, X. Leg. 79n
Arval Brothers : X. Leg. 62n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Asaph : IX. Prov. Introd. p. 449
 Ascalon * : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 71fN, IX. Prov. Introd.
 p. 448, 2. 64n
 Asia * : VIII. Praem. 18N
 Astartê : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 40N
 Asteria : IX. Aet. 121n
 Athanasius : IX. Vit. Cont. 25N Athena * : VI. Abr. 244N, Mos. ii. 210N, VII. Decal.
 54N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 143n, Aet. 131n
 Athenaeus : III. Plant. 163N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 113N,
Virt. 122N, Praem. 89N, IX. Vit. Cont. 59N
 Athens, Athenian * : II. Cher. 120n, IX. Mig. 116n,
 VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 4N, 193N, 237N, Virt. 139N, 222n, Praem. 8N, 154N,
 IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 127N, 137n, Flacc. 130N,
Hyp. 7. 8n & N, X. Leg. 95n, 149n
 Athos * : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 335n
 Atlantis * : IX. Aet. Introd. p. 177
 Atomists : IX. Aet. 113n
 Atonement, The Day of : VI. Mos. ii. 23 & n, VII. Spec.
Leg. i. 186n, VIII. Praem. 171N
 Atreus : VIII. Praem. 134n
 Attic Coinage : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 33n Festivals : V. Som. ii. 208n Greek : I. Leg. All. iii. 203n, IV. Mig. 116n, VI. Abr.
 33n, Mos. i. 285n, VII. Decal. 159N, Spec. Leg. ii.
 253n, iii. 89n, VIII. Virt. 29N, 197n, 216n, IX.
Quod Omn. Prob. 73N, Aet. 12N, X. Leg. 230n.
 See also s.v. Liddell & Scott
 Law : II. Cher. 32N, Det. 145N, IV. Conf. 141N, V. Som. i. 159n, VI. Jos. 219n, Mos. ii. 4N, 38N, 184n, VII. Gen. Introd. pp. xi, xii & n, Decal.
 112n, Spec. Leg. i. 341n, ii. 125N, 133ffN, iii. 22N, 30N, 86N, 181N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, 7N, 61n,

INDEX TO NOTES

- 190n, Virt. 124n & N, 139N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 27n
- Orators : II. Cher. 115N, IV. Conf. 141N
- Attis : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 40N
- Aucher : IX. Vit. Cont. 14n, Prov. Introd. p. 447n, 1n & N, 2. 18N, 2. 21n, 2. 23n, 2. 24NN, 2. 32n, 2. 33n, 2. 43n, 2. 50n & N, 2. 51n, 2.54n, 2. 55n, 2. 56n, 2. 62n, 2. 66n, 2. 67N
- Augustine : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxi & n, Op. 13n, III. Sob. 52N, VI. Mos. ii. 97n
- Augustus * : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N, IX. Flacc. 74n, X. Leg. 33n, 151n, 158n, 292n
- Babylonia, Babylonian * : VI. Spec. Leg. i. 101n, ii. 244N, IX. Aet. 77n
- Bacon : VIII. Virt. 152N
- Bailey : I. Leg. All. iii. 61n, II. Post. 79N
- Balsdon : IX. Flacc. 54N, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xxvi nn, xxviii, xxix, 62n, 191n, 370n
- Baptist, John the : I. Gen. Introd. p. x, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xvii
- Bar Hebraeus : VI. Mos. ii. 114N
- Bassus * : IX. Flacc. 109n
- Bekker : II. Cher. 115N, IX. Flacc. 138N
- Bell : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82N, IX. Flacc. 20N, 45N, 54N, 130N, X. Leg. Introd. p. xvii n
- Bernays : IX. Pref. p. vi n, Aet. Introd. pp. 172f, 176, 1n, 2n, 4nn, 5nn, 13N, 14n, 15nn, 19nn, 23N, 25 & 38N, 27n. 29n, 46n, 48N, 62n, 68n, 73n, 75n, 76n, 79n, 81n, 86n, 102n, 109n, 110n, 112n, 113n, 118n, 121n, 124n, 127N, 131n, 135n, 137n, 141n, 148n, Hyp. Introd. pp. 407n, 410 & n, 6. 4nn, 6. 6n, 7. 6n, 7. 8n & N
- Berosus : V. Som. i. 23N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Beth Shemesh : II. Post. 57N
Bias * : VIII. Virt. 152N
Boethus * : IX. Aet. 76nn, 84n
Bosporus : VI. Mos. i. 23N
Box : IX. Pref. p. vii, Flacc. 5nn, 20N, 34n, 36n, 41n, 45n, 46n, 48N, 50nn, 54N, 72n, 89n, 100n, 131n
& N, 136fN, 138n, 153n, X. Leg. Introd. p. xvii
Brahmans : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74NN
Braun : VI. Jos. 48N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N
Brooke and McLean : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 137N
Browning : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 70N
Bücheler : IX. Aet. 27n
Buck : V. Som. i. 28N
Buddhists : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74N
Bunyan : I. Gen. Introd. p. xv, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv.
106N
Burkitt : VI. Mos. ii. 114N
Bywater : V. Fug. 61n
- Caesar : Julius Caesar * : I. Gen. Introd. p. xix. C. and L. Caesar : IX. Flacc. 158n. See also Augustus, Claudius, Gaius, Nero, Tiberius
'Caesarism' : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N
Calanus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5n, 74n &
N, 96n & N
Caligula : see Gaius
Callimachus : VIII. Praem. 111N, IX. Prov. 2. 26N
Callisthenes : IX. Aet. 140n
Cambridge : IX. Vit. Cont. 59N
Cambridge Ancient History : IX. Flacc. 45N, 54N, 130N
Cambridge Modern History : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82N Cambyses : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N Canaan, Canaanites * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 29n, IX.
Hyp. 6. 1n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Castor and Pollux * : V. Som. i. 150n, VII. Decal. 56N, X. Leg. 84n, 93n
- Cato : I. Gen. Introd. p. xix
- Ceres : VIII. Praem. 8N. See also Demeter
- Charon : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 91N, IX. Vit. Cont. 17N
- Charondas : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 34-36N
- Christ : I. Gen. Introd. pp. x, xxi, II. Det. Introd.
 p. 200, III. Sob. 52N
- Christian(s), Christian Church : I. Gen. Introd. pp. xx, xxi, III. Quod Deus 31n, IV. Conf. 108n, V.
Som. i. 188n & N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 106N, Virt.
 78N, 208N, Praem. 23N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob.
 Introd. pp. 3, 5 & n, Vit. Cont. Introd. pp. 106-108, Prov. Introd. p. 447
- Chrysippus * : II. Cher. 69N, Sac. 136N, III. Quod
Deus 62N, IV. Conf. 184-187N, 187N, Congr.
 149N, V. Mut. 36N, VI. Abr. 99N, Jos. 28N,
 VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 46N, 69N, 73N, VIII. Virt. 189N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 15N, Aet. 46n, 48N, 79n,
Prov. 2. 45N
- Chrysostom : VIII. Virt. 208N
- Cicero : II. Det. 9N, VIII. Praem. 49-51N, IX. Quod
Omn. Prob. 127N
- Acad.* : III. Quod Deus 46N, Agr. 134N, Plant. 165N, Ebr. 173N, V. Som. i. 53N, VIII. Gen. Introd.
 p. xi n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 7n
- Amic.* : VIII. Virt. 152N
- Div.* : V. Som. i. 1-2N, 184N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100N
- Fat.* : IX. Prov. 2. 66n
- Fin.* : VII. Decal. 142-146N, Spec. Leg. ii. 69N, VIII.
 Gen. Introd. p. xi n
- Inv.* : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 164N
- Leg.* : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 11-12N, Praem. 55N
- Nat. D.* : I. Leg. All. iii. 160N, II. Post. 1N, 104N,

INDEX TO NOTES

- IV. Conf. 115N, Quis Her. 136N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 33N, iii. 184N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 11-12N, IX. Aet. 46n
- Off.* : I. Leg. All. i. 56n, IV. Congr. 79N, IX. Hyp. 7. 8N
- Parad.* : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. pp. 3n, 4
- Phil.* : X. Leg. Introd. p. xxii n
- Pro Mil.* : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 33N
- Somn. Scip.* : V. Som. i. 30N
- Top.* : III. Plant. 165N
- Tusc. Disp.* : I. Leg. All. ii. 15N, III. Quod Deus 146n, V. Mut. 167N, Som. i. 30N, ii. 209N, VI. Abr. 257N, Jos. 132n, Mos. i. 11N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 33fN, ii. 46N, IX. Vit. Cont. 14n, Prov. 2. 26n
- Cimon : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22N
- Classical Quarterly* : IX. Flacc. 131n & N
- Claudius * : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82N, IX. Flacc. 20N, 25N, 54N, X. Leg. 33n, 373n
- Cleanthes * : I. Leg. All. i. 91N, IV. Quis Her. 136N, V. Mut. 36N, Som. i. 31N, IX. Prov. 1N
- Clement of Alexandria : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, II. Cher. 7n, IV. Mig. 49N, Congr. 77N, VI. Mos. i. 23n, 62n, 146n, ii. 97n, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13N, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xi-xiii & nn, xvi n, xvii, Spec. Leg. iv. 188N, Virt. 28n & N, 78N, 100n, 111N, 139N, 140n, 208N, IX. Vit. Cont. 9n, Aet. 30n, Hyp. 7. 8N, Prov. 2. 23N, 2. 67N
- Cleodemus : VIII. Praem. 23N
- Cleopatra * : VI. Jos. 56n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 85n
- Codomannus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
- Cohn, J. : IV. Quis Her. 25N, 36N, 52N, 185N, 188N, 218N
- Cohn, L. : I. Pref. pp. v, vi, Gen. Introd. pp. x & n, xxiii, Op. 25N, Leg. All. i. 16n, 60n, ii. 23n, II.

INDEX TO NOTES

Cher. 1n, 30n, 36n, 42N, 51n, 57n, 69n & N, 72n, 84n, 105n & N, 114n & N, 116nn, Sac. Introd. p. 93 & n, 2n, 58n, 64n, 92n, 129n, 137n, 139n, Det. 18n, III. Quod Deus 7n, 65n, 92N, 103n, 109n, Agr. 153n, 167n, Plant. 41N, 46n, 57n, 115nn, Ebr. 134N, 177n, Sob. 40n, 68n, IV. Pref. p. vii, Conf. 57n, 108n, 141n, Mig. 206N, 220n & N, Quis Her. 12n, 76N, 144N, Congr. 42n, 107N, V. Pref. p. v, Fug. 77n, 114n, 150n, 200n, Mut. 7n, 42n, 54n, 113n, 216n, Som. i. 47N, ii. 131n, 187n, 269n, Append. pp. 606, 614, VI. Pref. p. v, Gen. Introd. pp. ix n, xvii n, xviii, Abr. 20n, 50n, 115n, 118N, 119n, 131n, 133n, 210n, 260n, Jos. 7n, 33n, 34n, 45n, 66n, 67n, 71n, 112n, 143n, 158n, 168N, 176n, 189n, 219n, 225nn, 233n, 249n, 254n, 256n, 260n, 264n, Mos. i. Introd. p. 274n, 60n, 69n, 95n, 142n, 146n, 266n, 328n, ii. 30n, 60n, 65N, 70n, 86n, 114N, 133n, 204n, 208n, 242n, VII. Gen. Introd. pp. xv & n, xvi, xvii ff & nn, Decal. 16n, 20n, 31n, 33n, 39n & N, 76n, 88N, 92n, 96n & N, 106n & N, 126n, 138n, 142nn, 144n, 147N, 152n, 159n, 169n, Spec. Leg. i. Introd. p. 99, 3n, 4n, 22n, 25n, 28n, 34n, 51n, 53n, 66n, 67N, 71n, 79n, 83n & N, 90n & N, 101n, 103N, 130n, 134n, 139n, 141n, 145n, 162n, 166n, 172n & N, 177n, 179n, 187n, 191n, 223n, 234n, 237n, 238n, 257n, 270n, 271n, 285n, 286n, 300nn, 322n & N, 342n, Spec. Leg. ii. Introd. p. 305, 13n, 18nn, 39n, 41n, 42n, 66n, 87n, 91n, 109n, 110nn, 124n, 127n, 128n, 133n, 140n, 155n, 163n, 168nn, 170nn, 174nn, 176n & N, 183n, 186n, 212n, 215nn, 216n, 220n, 224, 228n & N, 236n, 241n, 253n, Spec. Leg. iii. 11n, 12nn, 15n, 23nn, 25n, 33n, 34n, 78n, 83n, 84n & N, 88n, 91n, 102nn & N, 103n, 136nn,

INDEX TO NOTES

146n, 164N, 166n, 174n, 198n, 200n, 205n, VIII. Pref. p. v, Gen. Introd. pp. xi n, xiii & n, xv-xviii & nn, xxiii, xxiv, Spec. Leg. iv. title N, 2n, 4n, 22n, 33n, 37n, 40n & N, 50n, 52n, 55n, 73N, 79n, 101n, 104N, 113n, 115n, 116n, 119n, 121n, 129nn, 132n, 136n, 137n, 144n, 151n, 157nn, 175n, 177n, 178n, 184n, 190n, 191n, 199fn & N, 218n, 236n, Virt. title N, 3n, 28n, 29N, 31n, 34n & N, 38n, 42n, 46n, 48n, 50n, 58n, 70n, 76n, 78n & N, 85n, 86n, 100n & N, 116n, 123n, 125nn, 126n, 129n, 139N, 140n, 149n, 152n, 155nn, 156nn, 159n, 162n, 171n, 172n, 182n, 185n, 188n & N, 189 N, 197n, 206n, 208n & N, 221N, 225n, 226nn, Praem. title N, 1n, 7nn, 11n, 23N, 25n, 27n, 29n, 37nn, 40n, 41n, 44nn & N, 48n, 52n, 55n & N, 54n, 58nn, 60N, 61n, 65n, 79n, 89n, 90n, 104nn, 105n, 107n, 120n, 121nn, 127n, 129n, 130n, 133nn, 135n, 136nn, 143n, 144n, 146n, 147n, 148n, 149n, 154n & N, 160nn, 163n, 165n, 166n, IX. Pref. pp. vi-viii, Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5 & n, 5n, 15NN, 27n, 32n, 40n, 42n, 53n, 74n, 96nn & N, 100N, 101n, 122n, 123n, 127n, 130n, 140n & N, 143n, 149n, 156n, Vit. Cont. 1n, 9n, 39n, 40n, 42n, 43n, 51n, 52n, 56n, 58n, 67n & N, 85n, 89n, 90n, Aet. 2n, 4n, 19n, 22n, 23N, 27n, 29n, 36n, 45n, 48n, 58n, 62n, 68n, 73n, 75n, 76n, 102n, 103n, 112n, 127N, 135n, 136n, Flacc. Introd. p. 295n, 29n, Hyp. Introd. pp. 407n, 411f, 7. 1n, Prov. Introd. p. 449n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xvi, xviii & n, xx, xxii, xxiii, 180n, 292n, 312n

Colson : I. Pref. p. vi, III. Agr. 114N, Plant. 3N, 29N, 61N, 139N, IV. Pref. pp. v, vi, V. Mut. 207N, X. Pref. p. v

INDEX TO NOTES

- Conybeare : IX. Pref. p. vi, Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 108, title N, 1 n, 2n, 9n, 16n, 17N, 20n, 25N, 28nn, 29nn, 36n & N, 38nn, 39nn, 40n, 41n, 49N, 51nn, 56n, 57n, 63-67nn & NN, 75n, 77n, 78N, 79nn,
 80n, 81n, 85n, 90n, Prov. Introd. p. 449n, 2. 50N
 Cook : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140N Cope : I. Leg. All. iii. 167n, III. Plant. 173N, VIII. Spec.
Leg. iv. 40N, Praem. 111N
 Cornelia, Lex, De Sic. et Ven. : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 89N
 Cornelius Nepos : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22N Cornutus : III. Plant. 3n, IX. Vit. Cont. 3N, Aet. 127N,
Flacc. 139N
 Coutts : X. Leg. 151n
 Crantor the Academician : VI. Abr. 257N
 Critias : V. Som. i. 30N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 327ffN
 Critolaus * : IX. Aet. Introd. p. 176, 12N, 71n, 55n, 74n
 Croesus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 153n
 Cromwell : X. Leg. Introd. p. xxvi
 Ctesias : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13N Cumont : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 40N, IX. Quod Omn.
Prob. 15N, Aet. Introd. pp. 172, 177n, 2n, 4n, 5nn, 25 & 38N, 27n, 29nn, 48n, 62n, 68n, 73n, 75n, 76n, 103nn, 109n, 110n, 112n, 121n, 127nn & N, 123n,
 135n, 136n
 Curtius Rufus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 164N
 Cybele : II. Cher. 42N
 Cyclopes * : IX. Prov. Introd. p. 449, 2. 66n
 Cynics * : I. Leg. All. iii. 189N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 28n
 Cyrene : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 46N

 Damocles * : IX. Prov. 2. 26n
 Dante : I. Gen. Introd. p. xv Darius Hystaspes * : VI. Mos. i. 23N, VII. Spec. Leg.
 iii. 17-18N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Darius Nothus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N Darius Ochus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N David * : VIII. Virt. 221N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob.
 pp. 5(-6)n, Vit. Cont. 80N
 Day of Atonement : VI. Mos. ii. 23 & n, VII. Spec.
Leg. i. 186n, VIII. Praem. 171N
 Delaunay : X. Leg. Introd. pp. xvii, xxiii
 Delos * : X. Leg. 95n, 149n
 Delphi * : II. Post. 113N
 Delta : IX. Flacc. 54n
 Demeter * : VII. Decal. 54N, Spec. Leg. iii. 40N,
 VIII. Praem. 8N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140n & N
 Demetrius : IX. Flacc. 139N
 Democritus * : I. Op. 170fN, Leg. All. iii. 61n, V. Mut.
 243N, Som. i. 22N, 30N, IX. Vit. Cont. 14n, Prov.
 2. 1n
 Demosthenes : III. Quod Deus 111N, Agr. 110n, IV.
Conf. 141N, V. Som. i. 245n, ii. 187n, VII. Gen.
 Introd. p. xi, Decal. 112n, Spec. Leg. i. 28N, ii.
 78n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, 7N, 34n, 39N, 64N, 73N, Virt. 86n, 152N, Praem. 79n, IX. Flacc. 30n, 138n, Hyp. 7. 9n, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxii n.
 Pseudo-Dem. : IV. Conf. 141N
 Deucalion * : VIII. Praem. 23N
 Diaspora : I. Gen. Introd. p. ix, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55N, 67N, iii. 171N, IX. Flacc. 48N, X. Leg. Introd.
 p. xxvii
 Dickens : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxii n
Dictionary, New English : VI. Mos. i. 172n
Dictionary of Christian Biography : V. Som. ii. 123N Dictionary of Classical Antiquities (Seyffert) : I. Leg.
All. iii. 130n
Dictionary of Geography : II. Post. 57N, IX. Quod Omn.
Prob. 115n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Dictionary of Greek and Roman Antiquities* (Smith) : I. Op. 95n, II. Cher. 115N, Sac. 21N, Det. 145N, III. Ebr. 6n, IV. Conf. 141N, V. Som. i. 28N, ii. 119N, VII. Decal. 159N, Spec. Leg. iii. 30N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 13N, 21N, 61n, 193N, Virt. 222n, IX. Flacc. 130N, X. Leg. 147n
- Dictionary of the Bible* (Hastings) : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 180N. Encyclopaedia Biblica (Cheyne) : VI. Mos. ii. 109n
- Diels : IV. Quis Her. 14N, V. Som. i. 21-23NN, 30-32NN, 53N, 145N, ii. 283N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188N, IX. Aet. 68n
- Digest* : see Ulpian
- Dikaiogenes : VII. Decal. 120N
- Dindorf : IX. Hyp. Introd. p. 411, 7. 18n, Prov. Introd. p. 449n, 1n, 2. 17nn & N, 2. 21n, 2. 23n & N, 2. 24n & N, 2. 32n, 2. 48n & N, 2. 67n
- Diodorus Siculus : VI. Abr. 182N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 2N, iii. 16n, 23N, 43n, 164N, VIII. Virt. 139N, IX. Aet. 139n, Prov. 2. 33nn
- Diogenes of Apollonia : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 327ffN
- Diogenes the Babylonian * : IX. Aet. 77 & n
- Diogenes the Cynic * : I. Op. 3N, II. Gig. 34n, III. Ebr. 193N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 40n, 100N, 121n
- Diogenes Laertius : I. Op. 3N, 160NN, 170fN, Leg. All. i. 30N, 57N, ii. 6N, iii. 129N, 160n, II. Cher. 79N, Det. 157N, Gig. 34n, 56N, III. Quod Deus 41n, 44N, 62N, 84N, 146n, 176N, Agr. 14N, 83n, 140fn & N, Ebr. Introd. p. 314n, 170N, 172-174N, 175N, Sob. 18N, IV. Conf. 5N, 90N, Mig. 94N, Quis Her. 14N, 132N, 190N, Congr. 149N, V. Fug. 10n, 134N, Mut. 32N, 179n, 243N, Som. i. 22n, 30N, 57N, 230N, Som. ii. 283N, VI. Mos. ii. 7n, VII. Decal. 54N, 120N, 142-146N, Spec. Leg. i.

INDEX TO NOTES

- 131n, 208N, 336n, ii. 73N, 185N, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xi n, Spec. Leg. iv. 85N, Virt. 24n, 152N, Praem. 46N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 2n & N, 20n, 40n, 108n, 109n, 121n, 124n, 127n & N, 153n, Vit. Cont. 14n, Aet. 4n, 48N, 94n, 97n, 102n, 124n, Hyp. 7. 6n
- Dion Cassius : V. Som. ii. 123N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N, Virt. 34N, IX. Flacc. 2n, 139N, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxx n, 39n, 62n, 79n, 87n
- Dionysius of Alexandria * : IX. Flacc. 20N
- Dionysius of Halicarnassus : II. Cher. 42N, Gig. 53N, IV. Mig. 49N, Quis Her. 253N, IX. Prov. 2. 50N
- Dionysius of Sicily, the Elder * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5, Prov. Introd. p. 449, 2. 1n, 2. 26n, 255n
- Dionysius of Sicily and Corinth, the Younger * : VI. Jos. 132n, IX. Prov. 2. 1n, 255n
- Dionysius Thrax : IV. Congr. 148N
- Dionysus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N, X. Leg. 93n
- Dioscorides : IX. Prov. 2. 18N
- Dioscuri * : see Castor and Pollux
- Diotima : IX. Vit. Cont. 59N
- Diotogenes : VI. Mos. ii. 4N
- Diphilus : V. Som. ii. 155n, IX. Hyp. 7. 8N
- Dodona : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 143n
- Doric * : IX. Aet. 12N
- Draco : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 3N
- Driver : IV. Mig. 215n, V. Fug. 160n, VI. Abr. 42n, Mos. i. 107n, 120n, ii. 109n, 162n, 219n, VII. Decal. 142n, Spec. Leg. i. 77n, 79N, ii. 145N, 146n, iii. 108n, 120n, 140n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, 29n, Virt. 115N
- Drummond : V. Fug. 101N, Mut. 28N, 131n
- Drusilla : IX. Flacc. 56n & N
- Drusus : IX. Flacc. 10N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Easter : IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 107
- Edersheim : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxii n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 71fN, IX. Hyp. 7. 5N
- Egypt * : II. Sac. Introd. p. 93, IV. Quis Her. Introd. p. 282, 242N, Congr. 87n, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xii, xiii, Jos. 3N, 157n, Mos. i. 23n, 24n, ii. 162n, VII. Decal. 76n, 77N, Spec. Leg. i. 2n & N, 101n, 180N, ii. 82N, 133ffN, iii. 148N, 164N, 204N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, 158n, Virt. 17N, 139N, IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 105, 1n, 8n, 66n, Flacc. 2n, 130N, 131N, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xv, xxiv
- Elea * : IV. Quis Her. 246N
- Eleusinian Mysteries : II. Cher. 49N
- Eliot, George : I. Gen. Introd. p. xv & n
- Elmsley : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 101n
- Elymas : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100N
- Empedocles : I. Leg. All. iii. 61n, II. Cher. 25N, V. Som. i. 21N, 23N, 30N, 145N, IX. Aet. 5n, Prov. 1N, 2. 23n & N
- Encyclia : I. Gen. Introd. p. xvi, Leg. All. iii. 244N, II. Cher. 6N, Det. 145N, III. Ebr. Introd. p. 310n, 51N, IV. Quis Her. 274N, Congr. Introd. p. 452 & n, 11N, 77n & N, V. Fug. Introd. p. 8, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 160n
- Encyclopaedia Biblica* : VI. Mos. ii. 109n
- England : VIII. Virt. 152N, IX. Flacc. 130N. English : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 65n, 269n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 40N, 85N, 121n, 133n, Praem. 111N
- Ephesus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 40N
- Ephialtes : V. Som. ii. 283N
- Epictetus : II. Cher. 109-112N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 3 n
- Epicurus * : I. Op. 160N, Leg. All. iii. 61n, II. Sac. 21-33N, Det. 157N, V. Som. i. 54N, 184N, ii. 48N,

INDEX TO NOTES

- 283N. Epicurean : I. Op. 160N, 170fN, II. Det. 50N, 157N, Post. 2N, 79N, III. Quod Deus 18N, Agr. 142N, Ebr. 199N, IV. Conf. 145n, Quis Her. 246N, Congr. 25n, V. Fug. 147n, Mut. 77N, Som. i. 184N, ii. 209N, 277n, 283n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 327ffN, ii. 46N
- Epigoni : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 16n
- Ernesti : II. Post. 108N, V. Mut. 13N, VI. Mos. ii. 38n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 39N
- Essenes * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5, 74n, 75n & N, Vit. Cont. Introd. pp. 104, 106n, 2N, 36N, 90n, Hyp. Introd. p. 407, 11. 1n, 11. 14n, 410
- Études de Papyrologie* : V. Som. i. 47N
- Euclid : IV. Congr. 142n
- Eumenides, The : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140N
- Euphrates * : V. Som. ii. 300N
- Euripides * : V. Som. i. 154n, VI. Abr. 180n, Jos. 48N, Mos. i. 31n, 135n, VIII. Virt. 189N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 22n, 134N, X. Leg. 116n
- Europe : VIII. Praem. 8N
- Eusebius : III. Plant. 10n, Ebr. Introd. p. 308n, V. Mut. 36N, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xvi n, Virt. title N, IX. Pref. pp. v, vii, viii, Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. pp. 2, 4, 5, Vit. Cont. Introd. pp. 106 & n, 107, title N, 28n, Aet. Introd. p. 172, Flacc. 1N, Hyp. Introd. pp. 407 & n. 409, 410, text n, 7. 1n, 7. 10n, 11. 1n, Prov. Introd. pp. 447-450, 2. 1n, 2. 23n, 2. 24N, 2. 43n, 2. 48N, 2. 50N, 2. 67N, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xiv, xvi, xvii-xx & nn, xxii-xxiv & nn, 373n
- Ewald : V. Som. ii. 123N
- Feast of Tabernacles : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 180N
- Feuchtwanger : VIII. Praem. 65N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Flaccus Avillius * : V. Som. ii. 123N, VIII. Virt. 17N, IX. Flacc. 20N, 30n, 41n, 45N, 54N, 55n, 97n, 142n, 158n
- Frazer : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 40N, X. Leg. 95n
- Gaisford : IX. Prov. Introd. p. 449n, 1n, 2. 17n & N, 2. 23n, 2. 48n & N, 2. 54n, 2. 67n
- Gaius Caesar * : I. Gen. Introd. p. ix, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, IX. Flacc. 10N, 25N, 30n, 45N, 56n, 62n, 91n, 97n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. ix, xiv-xix, xxi-xxiv & nn, xxvi & n, xxviii-xxx & n, xxxi, 32n, 33n, 87n, 221n, 230n, 339n, 370n, 373n
- Galen : V. Som. i. 32N, IX. Aet. 143n, Prov. 2. 18N, 2. 67N
- Galli : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 40N
- Garmanes : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74N
- Gaul : X. Leg. Introd. p. xxvii
- Gellius : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, IX. Prov. 2. 45N
- Gemellus : see Tiberius
- Gens Claudia * : X. Leg. 33n
- Gens Julia : IX. Flacc. 10N
- Gentiles : VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xv n, xvi, Mos. i. 263N, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xiv, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xix n, Spec. Leg. iv. 55n, IX. Flacc. 48n, 55n, Hyp. Introd. p. 408, 7. 1n, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxvii
- Geoponica : IX. Vit. Cont. 40n
- Germanicus Caesar * : IX. Flacc. 10N, X. Leg. 33n
- Germany, Germans* : (a) Ancient : V. Som. i. 121N, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxvii, 356n. (b) Modern : II. Sac. 21N (country), VIII. Virt. 116n (language), V. Som. i. 254N (reviewer), IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 407 (scholars), VI. Gen. Introd. p. ix n, Mos. i. 62n, ii. 72n, 105n, 114N (translation); see also Heinemann
- Gifford : IX. Pref. pp. vi, viii, Vit. Cont. 2N, Hyp.

INDEX TO NOTES

- Introd. pp. 411, 413, 6. 1n, 6. 4nn, 6. 6n, 7. 1n, 7. 3n, 7. 7n, 7. 11n, 7. 18n, 11. 1n, 11. 2n, Prov.
 Introd. p. 449n, 1n, 2. 6n, 2. 8n & N, 2. 11n, 2.
 17nn & N, 2. 18n, 2. 21n, 2. 24N, 2. 33n, 2. 46n,
 2. 48n & N, 2. 54n, 2. 67N, 2. 68n, 2. 71N
- God <sup>a</sup>: I. Leg. All. i. 18n, II. Sac. 67n, Post. 2n, 7n, III. Quod Deus 70-73N, Agr. 128fN, Ebr. 48N,
 IV. Conf. 127n, 136n, 174n, 192n, Quis Her. 167n, Congr. 45n, V. Fug. 86n, 95n, 172n, 212n, Mut.
 26n, Som. i. 1-2N, 75n, 159n, 182n, 230N, 240n,
Som. ii. 45N, 183n, VI. Abr. 143n, Mos. i. 112n, VII. Decal. 176n, Spec. Leg. i. 53n, 67N, 327ffN,
 ii. 10n, 38n, 165n, 198n, iii. 1n, 83n, VIII. Praem.
 44n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 42n, Aet. Introd. pp.
 172ff, 81n, 84n, Prov. 1N, 2. 53N, X. Leg. Introd.
 pp. xv, xvi
- Gomorrah * : IX. Aet. 147ffN
- Goodenough : VI. Gen. Introd. p. xiii & n, Mos. ii.
 4N, 65N, VII. Pref. p. vi, Gen. Introd. pp. xii n, xiv n, Spec. Leg. i. 2N, 55n & N, 59ffN, Spec. Leg.
 ii. 133ffN, 232N, 244N, Spec. Leg. iii. 3N, 6N, 23N, 30N, 64n, 72N, 89N, 96n, 108N, 109N, 146n, 148N, 164N, 171N, 181N, 204N, VIII. Pref. p.
 vi, Gen. Introd. p. xix n, Spec. Leg. iv. title N, 2n & N, 7N, 11fN, 13N, 55n, 59nn, 237N, Virt.
 title N, 17N, 124N, X. Leg. Introd. p. xvii
- Goodhart : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. title N, Virt. title N
- Goodwin : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 121n, Virt. 29N, X. Leg.
 221n
- Graces * : X. Leg. 95n
- Grant : I. Leg. All. i. 4n
- Grätz : IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 107
- Greece * : IX. Prov. 2. 66n

<sup>a</sup> Only selected references are given.

INDEX TO NOTES

- Greek * : Greek states : V. Som. ii. 187n, VI. Mos. ii. 23n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 193N ; games : VI. Abr. 48n & N ; ladies : II. Sac. 21N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iii. 171N, 176N ; language : see Attic, Liddell & Scott ; law : see Attic ; metre : IX. Vit. Cont. 80N, Flacc. 139N ; music : V. Som. i. 28N ; grammarians : IV. Quis Her. 17n & N, Congr. 148N, V. Fug. 162n, Mut. 12n, 13n & N, 28N, 207N, Som. i. 101N, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvi, Abr. 51N, Mos. ii. 47N, VIII. Virt. 29N, Praem. 1n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 73N ; rhetoric : V. Som. i. 205N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 244N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 149fN, IX. Vit. Cont. 28n ; Greek myths : V. Som. ii. 283N ; gods : X. Leg. Introd. p. xv ; theology : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 165n ; ideas : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 34-36N, 171N, VIII. Virt. 124N ; Greek philosophers : I. Gen. Introd. pp. xv, xvi, xxi, xxii. & n, Leg. All. ii. 15N, III. Ebr. 48N, IV. Mig. 128n, Quis Her. 170N, V. Fug. 8n & N, 11-13N, Som. ii. 277n, 290n, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xi, Spec. Leg. i. 327n, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. x-xii, IX. Pref. p. v, Quod Omn. Prob. 160n, Aet. Introd. p. 177. See also Stoicorum Veterum Fragmenta and Zeller
- Greek Fathers : VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xiii n, Virt. 208N
- Grégoire : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 4n, ii. 253n, iii. 84N
- Guthrie : IX. Aet. 14n
- Gymnosophists * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 43n, 74nn & NN, 96n
- Hades * : IV. Quis Her. 46n, IX. Vit. Cont. 17N
- Haggada, Halacha : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxii n
- Halyates : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 153n
- Hammurabi : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 244N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Harpocraton : VII. Decal. 159N
 Harris : VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xiii n, Virt. 44N
Harvard Theological Review : VI. Gen. Introd. p. xii n, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xiv n, VIII. Gen. Introd. p.
 xix n
 Hasmoneans : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N
 Hastings' Dictionary of the Bible : VII. Spec. Leg. i.
 180N
 Hebrew * : II. Cher. 49N, Post. 57N, IV. Mig. 155n, 174N, 215n, Quis Her. 124n, 237n, 283N, Congr.
 178n, V. Fug. 132n, Mut. 121N, Som. i. 228n,
 VI. Mos. i. 107n, 283n, ii. 97n, 104n, 114N,
 VII. Decal. 142n, Spec. Leg. i. 223n, 333n, ii. 70n,
 iii. 94n, 145n, VIII. Virt. 115N, Praem. 13n
 Hebrews * : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 67N. See also Jews
 Hecataeus : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 74n, 273n & N
 Heikel : X. Leg. Introd. p. xx n
 Heinemann : I. Leg. All. i. 60n, 80n, ii. 23n, iii. 175n, 206N, II. Post. 10n, 114n, III. Agr. 145N, Plant.
 Introd. p. 209n, 29n, 66n, 74nn, 101N, 115n,
Sob. 58N, IV. Conf. 143n, 198N, Mig. 144n, 166n, VII. Pref. p. v, Decal. 120N, Spec. Leg. i. 1n, 4n, 14n, 28n, 33fN, 46n, 55N, 60n, 67N, 70n, 71n & N, 80N, 105n, 108n, 134n, 141n, 145n, 171n, 177n,
 180N, 219n, 254n, 269n, 286n, 300n, 327ffN, 333n
 & N, 335nn, Spec. Leg. ii. 4n, 13n, 14n, 17-18N,
 18n, 27n, 52n, 56n, 63n, 72n, 73N, 78n, 82n, 88nn,
 91n, 92n, 110n, 121n, 128n, 132n, 133n & N, 140n,
 155n, 163n, 168n, 182n, 210n, 212n, 214n, 215n,
 220nn, 228n, 232nn & N, 239N, 244n & N, 250nn, 251n, 253n, Spec. Leg. iii. 3N, 11n, 12n, 34-36N, 39n, 72N, 82n, 86N, 88n, 89N, 100N, 102n, 109N,
 136n, 145n, 164n & N, 166n, 171N, 180n, 184N, 188n, 198n, 204N, VIII. Pref. pp. v, vi, Spec. Leg.

INDEX TO NOTES

- iv. 2nn & N, 4n & N, 11-12N, 22n, 32n, 38n, 39n, 49n & N, 54n & N, 55n, 64n & N, 69nn, 73N, 88n, 97n, 104N, 106N, 109n, 113n, 116n, 119-123nn, 129n, 133nn, 137n, 149fN, 161n, 188N, 190n, 194n, 200n, 210n, 217n, 235n, Virt. 122N, 124n & N, 137n, Praem. 67N, 171N, IX. Hyp. Introd. p. 407n
- Heinichen : IX. Hyp. Introd. pp. 411, 413, 6. 6n, 7. 3n, Prov. Introd. p. 449n, 1n, 2. 48n
- Helen : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 85n
- Helicon * : X. Leg. Introd. pp. xiv, xxii
- Hellenism : I. Gen. Introd. pp. ix, xv, xix, xx, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 2N, VIII. Praem. 23N, IX. Vit. Cont. 80N
- Hephaestus * : VII. Decal. 54N, IX. Vit. Cont. 3N, Aet. 127n & N, 131n
- Hera * : VII. Decal. 54N, X. Leg. 79n
- Heraclea : VII. Gen. Introd. p. xvi
- Heracleitus * : III. Quod Deus 24N, IV. Quis Her. 246N, V. Fug. 8N, 61n, Som. i. 21N, 53N, VI. Jos. 125-147N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 27n & N, 208nn & N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 60n, 188N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 57n, Aet. 38n, 110n, 111n, 127N, Prov. 2. 67N
- Heracles * : II. Sac. 21-33N, IV. Quis Her. 46n, V. Mut. 36N, VI. Jos. 78n, VIII. Praem. 23N, 154N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N, 99N, 100N, 101n, 127n, 143n, X. Leg. 93n
- Hermes * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N, 100N, 101n, Aet. 131n
- Hermes* : IV. Congr. 159N, V. Som. i. 47N, VII. Decal. 39N, 96N, Spec. Leg. i. 4n, 51n, 90n & N, 139n, 271n, 286n, Spec. Leg. ii. 168nn, 183n, 228n, 253n, Spec. Leg. iii. 78n, 84N, 146n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 52n, 113n, 200n, Virt. 29N, 38n, IX. Pref. p. viiii,

INDEX TO NOTES

- Quod Omn. Prob.* 15N, 74n, 96N, Vit. Cont. 67N, 90n, Aet. 2n, 62n, 75n
- Hermogenes : II. Det. 39N
- Herod Agrippa * : IX. Flacc. 25N
- Herod the Great * : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 71fN, 273N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N, Flacc. 25N, X. Leg. 297n
- Herodotus : V. Mut. 190n, VI. Mos. i. 23N, VII. Decal. 77N, 96N, Spec. Leg. i. 2N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 60n, 128N, IX. Flacc. 85n, Hyp. 7. 6n, Prov. 2. 24n & NN
- Hesiod * : III. Plant. 129N, Ebr. 149f n & N, IV. Quis Her. 116n, VII. Decal. 69n, 96N, IX. Vit. Cont. 35n, Aet. 17n
- Hesychius : III. Ebr. 218N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 52n & N, IX. Flacc. 138N, Hyp. 7. 8n
- Hicks : III. Quod Deus 41n, 84N, Ebr. 175N, Agr. 140fN, IV. Quis Her. 14N, 132N, 190N, Congr. 149N, V. Som. i. 30N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 85N, Praem. 46N, IX. Aet. 48N
- Hierocles : VII. Decal. 120N
- High Priest : VI. Mos. ii. 117-135N
- Hippocrates * : V. Som. i. 10N, 30n, VI. Mos. i. 218n, IX. Vit. Cont. 9n, 16n
- Hippolytus, Christian writer : V. Som. i. 184N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 208N
- Hippolytus, son of Theseus : VI. Jos. 48N
- Hoeschel : V. Som. ii. 191n, 245n, 282N, VII. Gen. Introd. pp. xvi, xvii, Spec. Leg. ii. 124n
- Hogg : VI. Mos. ii. 114N
- Holwerda : II. Post. 6n, 109n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 215n, 241n
- Homer * : I. Gen. Introd. p. xvi n, V. Som. ii. 245N, VIII. Virt. 189N, IX. Vit. Cont. 17N, (Aet. 127N), Prov. 2. 3n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Iliad* : III. Ebr. 201n, IV. Conf. 170n, Mig. 3n, 156n, Quis Her. 189n, V. Som. ii. 50n, 148n, 260n, 275n, VI. Jos. 2n, 265n, VII. Decal. 69n, Spec. Leg. i. 74n, ii. 6n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N, 112n, 122n, 125n, Vit. Cont. 9n, 17nn & N, Aet. 42n, 127n & N, 132n, Prov. 2. 7n, 2. 13n, X. Leg. 149n
- Odyssey* : I. Leg. All. i. 82n, II. Det. 178N, Gig. 53n, III. Plant. 32n, 142N, IV. Conf. 4n, Mig. 195n, Quis Her. 316n, V. Fug. 31n, 61n, Mut. 179n, Som. i. 57n, 99N, 150n, 233n, ii. 52n, 70n, 144n, VI. Jos. 265n, VII. Decal. 56n, Spec. Leg. i. 74n, VIII. Virt. 222n, Praem. 146n, IX. Vit. Cont. 17N, 40n, Aet. 37n, 131n, Prov. 2. 26N, 2. 66n, X. Leg. 80n
- Horace : I. Gen. Introd. p. xix & n, VI. Jos. 67n, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 3, Vit. Cont. 14n
- Iamblichus : V. Som. i. 30N, VIII. Praem. 111N
- Iberus : V. Som. ii. 123N, IX. Flacc. 2n
- Iconium : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55N
- India, Indian * : VI. Abr. 182n & N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74N
- Ion * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 134N
- Ionic * : V. Fug. 8n (philosophers), IX. Vit. Cont. 9n (syntax)
- Iphigeneia : VI. Abr. 180n
- Iphitus : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 101n
- Isaeus : IV. Conf. 141N
- Isidorus * : IX. Flacc. 20nn & N, 142n, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxvi
- Isis : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 23N, IX. Flacc. 136fN
- Isocrates : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 122n, Hyp. 7. 6n
- Italy * : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 59ffN, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xxvii, xxviii, xxx & n, 191n

INDEX TO NOTES

- James (Acts xii. 2) : IX. Flacc. 25N
 Jamneia * : X. Leg. Introd. pp. xxviii, xxx
 Jebb : VIII. Virt. 152N, X. Leg. 116n
 Jerome : III. Ebr. Introd. p. 308n, VI. Mos. ii. 97n, 114N, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xviii, xix Jerusalem * : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 71fN, 273n, IX. Prov.
 Introd. p. 448, 2. 64n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. ix, xxvi n, xxx n, 356n
 Jessen : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 40N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob.
 15N, Aet. 4n
 Jesus : see Christ
Jewish Encyclopaedia : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 171N, VIII.
Praem. 65N, 171N
 Jews, Jewish, Judaism * : I. Gen. Introd. pp. ix, xv, xx, xxii n, Op. 116n, VI. Gen. Introd. pp. xii, xv
 & n, Mos. ii. 26-44N, VII. Gen. Introd. pp. xii n
 (law), xiv, Decal. 159N, Spec. Leg. i. 2N, 55n & N (lynching, courts), 67N, 101n, 180N (sacred year), ii. 82N, 133fN (law, practice), 163n, iii. 3N (religion, polity), 64n & 72n (law, practice), 148N (courts), 171n & N (women, Temple, synagogue), VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xvi-xviii, xix n, Spec. Leg.
 iv. 13N (courts), 177n, Virt. 124N, 208N, Praem.
 23N (writers), 4n, 165n (expectation), 166n, IX.
Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 105, title N, 65N, 80N (synagogues, hymns), Aet. Introd. p. 172, Flacc. Introd.
 pp. 295n, 297n, 298n, 1n & N, 10n, 20N, 25N, 30N, 45N & 48n & N (synagogues), 54n & N, 55n, 62n,
 74n, Hyp. Introd. pp. 407, 410 (synagogues), 409
 (writers), 411, 7. 1n (law), 7. 6n, 11. 1n, Prov.
 Introd. pp. 447, 448, 2. 62n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. ix, xv, xix, xxii, xxiv & n, xxvi, xxvii, xxix-xxxii, 158n, 179n, 191n (synagogues), 356n, 370n
 John the Baptist : see Baptist

INDEX TO NOTES

- John of Damascus : V. Mut. 12n & N, 13n & N, VIII. Praem. 79n, 104n, IX. Flacc. Introd. p. 295n
 Jonathan, High Priest : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N
 Jones : IV. Conf. 151N
 Josephus : IV. Quis Her. 221n, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvii & n, Abr. 118N; Jos. 234n, Mos. i. 13n, 20n, 107n, ii. 26-44N, 49n, 114N, 115n, 117-135N, 203n, VII. Decal. 158N, 162n, Spec. Leg. i. 2N, 53n, 67N, 71fN, 101n, 180N, 235n, 240n, 273n, Spec. Leg. ii. 33n, 145N, 162N, 175n, Spec. Leg. iii. 29n, 89N, 108N, 110n, 149N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 7n, 11n, 30n, 190N, 237N, Virt. 34N, 91n, 111N, 115N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75n & N, Vit. Cont. 25N, 36N, 80N, Flacc. 4n, 25N, 54n, Hyp. Introd. p. 409 & n, text n, 6. 2n, 7. 1n, 7. 4n, 7. 6nn, 7. 8n, 7. 9n & N, X. Leg. Introd. pp. ix, xvii-xx & nn, xxviii-xxx, 305n, 349n, 373n
 Joshua * : IX. Hyp. Introd. p. 408
 Jost : I. Leg. All. i. 60n
Journal of Philology : III. Plant. Introd. p. 209n
Journal of Roman Studies : X. Leg. Introd. pp. xxiv, xxvii n, xxviii n
Journal of Theological Studies : V. Mut. 207N, VI. Mos. ii. 114N
 Jowett : V. Fug. 63n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 28N, iii. 120N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 63ffN
 Judaea * : IX. Flacc. 25N, X. Leg. 221n
 Judaism : see Jews
Judenthums : see Monatsschrift
 Julia, d. of Augustus : IX. Flacc. 158n, X. Leg. 33n
 Julia, Gens : IX. Flacc. 10N
 Julia, Lex, de adulteriis : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 30N
 Julia Augusta (Livia), wife of Augustus * : X. Leg. 292n, 320n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Julian : I. Leg. All. iii. 189N
 Jupiter * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 20n
 Justin : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxi. Pseudo-Justin : III.
     Quod Deus 78N
 Juvenal : V. Som. i. 57N, 247N, VII. Decal. 77N, VIII.
     Virt. 189N, Praem. 58n, IX. Flacc. 151n
- Kennedy : I. Gen. Introd. p. xx & n, VIII. Virt. 78N,
     IX. Flacc. 20n
 Keteus : VI. Abr. 182N
 Kirsopp Lake : IX. Vit. Cont. 28n, 29nn, X. Leg.
     Introd. pp. xvii n, xviii n
 Königlich. preuss. Akad. der Wiss., Sitzungsberichte der : V. Som. i. 21-23N, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xv n Körte : IV. Congr. 159N
- La Bruyère : VIII. Virt. 152N Lake, Kirsopp : IX. Vit. Cont. 28n, 29nn, X. Leg.
     Introd. pp. xvii n, xviii n
 Lampo * : IX. Flacc. 20N, 130N
 Langstadt : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N
 Latin : I. Op. 102N, Leg. All. ii. 22N, II. Cher. 114N,
     Post. 108N, 139N, IV. Mig. 35N, 174N, Quis Her.
     17N, Congr. title n, 41n, V. Fug. title n, 90n, 146n, Som. i. 22N, 230n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 73N,
     iii. 30N, 116n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 137N, 178n, 237N, Virt. 208N, Praem. 58n, IX. Quod Omn.
     Prob. 73N, Vit. Cont. 28n, Aet. 47n, X. Leg. 346n
 Latin Fathers : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, III. Sob. 52N Latin grammarians : IV. Congr. 148N, V. Mut. 13N,
     VI. Abr. 51N
 Latin version : IX. Vit. Cont. 39n, 42n ; translation : Prov. Introd. pp. 447n, 449 & n, 1N, 2. 23N,
     2. 24N, 2. 50N, 2. 67N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Old Latin : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 137N
 Laurence : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5n Leisegang : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxiii, III. Pref. p. vi,
Sob. 34N, IV. Pref. p. vii, Quis Her. 188N, V.
Som. ii. 268n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 50n, Praem. 25n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 26n, Vit. Cont. 59N, Aet.
 15n, Flacc. 141N, 162N, Prov. 2. 8N
 Leontopolis : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 67N
 Leucippus : I. Leg. All. iii. 61n Lex Cornelia de sicariis et veneficis : VII. Spec. Leg.
 iii. 89N
 Lex Julia de adulteriis : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 30N
 Libya * : VIII. Praem. 23N
 Liddell & Scott : I. Leg. All. i. 93n, II. Cher. 120n,
Det. 160N, III. Plant. 29N, IV. Conf. 184-187N,
Mig. 190n, 220N, Quis Her. 29N, 75N, 212N,
Congr. 148n, 149N, V. Fug. 31N, 90n, 113n, Mut.
 57N, Som. i. 30N, 44N, 95n, 99N, 101N, 158N, 164N, ii. 17n, 38N, 119N, 155n, VI. Abr. 262n, Jos.
 3N, 157n, Mos. i. 70n, 172n, 179n, 270n, ii. 47N, VII. Decal. 1N, 96N, 144n, 158N, 159N, Spec. Leg.
 i. 60n, 83N, 90N, 319n, 341n, ii. 213n, iii. 20n, 70n, 72n, 102N, 116n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2n, 7n & N, 52N, 109N, 113N, 128N, 209n, 213n, 215n, Virt.
 29N, 34N, 44N, 86n, 158n, 192n, 222n, Praem.
 37n, 67n, 111N, 133n, 146n, 154N, 165n, 170n,
 IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 3N, 122n, Vit. Cont. 2N, 17N, 25N, 49N, Aet. 141n, 143n & N, Flacc. 20n, 31n, 36n, 113n, 136fN, 138n & N, 139N, 141N, Hyp.
 6. 1n, 7. 1n, 7. 3n, 7. 14n, Prov. 2. 8N, 2. 19n, 2.
 26N, X. Leg. 86n, 153n, 245n, 273n, 274n, 299n
 Lipsius : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 125N, iii. 30N, 181N,
 VIII. Virt. 124N
 Livia : see Julia

INDEX TO NOTES

- Livilla : X. Leg. 87n
- Loeb texts : III. Quod Deus 41n, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvii n, IX. Act. 13N, 121n, Prov. 2. 50N, X. Leg. Introd. p. xvii n
- Longinus : III. Ebr. 198N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 73N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 134N
- Lucan : I. Gen. Introd. p. xix & n
- Lucian : III. Agr. 73N, IV. Conf. 27N, VI. Mos. i. 22N, 285n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 91N, 183N, IX. Vit. Cont. 17N, Flacc. 85n, 131N, X. Leg. 338n
- Lucius : IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. pp. 105, 106n, 107f, 17N, 65n
- Lucretius : I. Op. 170fN, Leg. All. i. 60n, II. Post. 79N, III. Ebr. 173N
- Lucullus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
- Lyons : X. Leg. Introd. p. xxx
- Lysanias : IX. Flacc. 25N
- Lysias : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 341n, VIII. Virt. 29N
- Lysimachus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 127N
- Lystra : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55N
- Macaria : VI. Abr. 180n
- Maccabees : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5n
- Macedonia * : II. Gig. 7N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 180N (calendar), iii. 164N (law), IX. Act. 45n
- McLean : see Brooke
- Macro * : IX. Flacc. 11n, X. Leg. Introd. p. xxiv, 32n, 39n, 58n, 62n
- Madvig : IV. Quis Her. 169n, IX. Act. 36n
- Maecenas * : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N,
- Magi * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13N, 100n & N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74n & N
- Malchus : VIII. Praem. 23N
- Maltese dogs * : VIII. Praem. 89N

INDEX TO NOTES

Manahem : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N

Mangey : I. Pref. p. vi, Leg. All. iii. 38n, 165n, II. Cher. 10n, 116n, Sac. Introd. p. 93 & n, 37n, 43n, 71n, 80n, Det. 61n, 68n, 173n, Post. 30n, 73n, 184n, III. Quod Deus 24n, 87n, 102n, 143n, 154n, 181n, Agr. 25n, 35n, 91n, 97n, 106n, 114n, 132N, 166n, Plant. 10n & N, 41N, 61n, 62n, 87n, 91n, 101n, 114n, 115n, 170n, Ebr. 4N, 70n, 95N, 177n, Sob. 58n, IV. Pref. pp. vi, vii, Conf. 9n, 26n, 55n & N, 79n, 95n, 103n, 118n, 136n, 141n, 151N, 154n, 159nn, 164n, 174n, 175n, 179n, Mig. 21 N, 23n & N, 24N, 32N, 39n, 42n & N, 45n, 69N, 85n, 106n, 140N, 151nn, 160N, 190n, 200n, 207n & N, 210n & N, 220n & N, Quis Her. Introd. p. 283, 36N, 44n, 81N, 115n, 126n, 144N, 170N, 182N, 185N, 188n, 212N, 218N, 220n, 228n, 252n, 253N, 268n, 280n, 285n, 288n, 292n, 306n, 310n & N, 314N, 316n, Congr. 77N, 87n, 89n, 107n, 114n, 117n, 121n, 127n, 129n, 159NN, 171n, V. Fug. title p. 1n, 16N, 45n & N, 54n, 77n, 95n, 104n, 113n, 114n & N, 118n, 153n, 162n, 171n, 200n, 211n, Mut. Introd. p. 140, 7n, 12N, 13n, 14n, 16n, 26n, 42n, 62n, 63n, 94n, 104nn, 107n, 113n & N, 119n, 121N, 122n, 127n, 128n, 131n, 135n, 144n, 147n, 163n, 167N, 188n, 191n, 197N, 200n, 217n & N, 229n, 246n, 260nn, Som. i. 28n, 32n, 40n, 42n, 47N, 57n & N, 75n, 95nn, 98n, 125n, 129n, 132n, 148n, 149nn, 158n, 159n, 188n, 202n, 231n, ii. 6n, 24n, 27n, 38N, 44n, 55N, 88n, 112n, 123n & N, 136n, 139n, 140n, 143n, 144n, 187n, 213nn, 221N, 224n, 243m & N, 248n, 258n, 267n, 282N, 283n & N, 290n, 292n, Append. p. 606, VI. Pref. p. vi, Abr. 188n, 210n, 240n, Jos. 20n, 33n, 52n, 67n, 71n, 112n, 168N, 176n, 189n,

INDEX TO NOTES

219n, 220n, 225nn, 233n, 249n, 256n, 260n, Mos. i. 62n, 95n, 146n, 310n, 328n, ii. 72n, 86n, 114N, 203n, 242n, 280n, 291n, VII. Gen. Introd. pp. xvi nn, xvii f, Decal. 1N, 16n, 31n, 39N, 62n, 64n, 90N, 162n, 169n, 176n, Spec. Leg. i. 1n, 3n, 4n, 13n, 28n, 46n, 53n, 71fN, 108n, 120n, 219n, 254n, 322n, ii. 13n, 16n, 40n, 88nn, 110n, 124n, 176N, 214n, iii. 1n, 6n, 13N, 16n, 25n, 39n, 50nn, 65n, 72n, 78n, 83n, 100N, 102n, 166n, 174n, 188n, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xviii, Spec. Leg. iv. 2n & N, 4n, 33n, 37n, 38n, 39n, 40n & N, 49nn, 50n, 52n & N, 59n, 67n, 69n, 73N, 83n, 88n, 104N, 109n, 119n, 121n, 129nn, 139n, 142n, 198n, 199N, 200n, 217n, 235n, Virt. title N, 29n & N, 46n, 48n, 85n, 88n, 100n, 122N, 125n, 126n, 152n, 155n, 156nn, 188n & N, 208N, 216n, 226n, Praem. 11n, 23N, 41n, 44N, 48n, 52n, 54n, 79n, 107n, 111N, 117n, 121nn, 133n, 152n, 154NN, 160nn, 163n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 6n, 43n, 66n, 124n, 127n, 151n, 154n, 156n, Vit. Cont. 51n, 52n, 79n, 85n, Aet. 23N, 25 & 38N, 62n, 76n, 79n, 141n, Flacc. 36n, 45n, 81n, 94n, 100n, 131n, 153nn, Hyp. Introd. p. 413, 6. 1n, 6. 4n, 6. 6n, 7. 1n, 7. 4n, 11. 1n, Prov. 2. 8N, 2. 11n, 2. 17n, 2. 18n & N, 2. 21n, 2. 24N, 2. 32n, 2. 48n, 2. 54n, 2. 66n, 2. 68n, X. Leg. 2n, 109n, 112n, 125n, 128n, 155n, 163n, 170n, 190nn, 221n, 224n, 227n, 287n, 291n, 292n, 312n, 320nn

Maranatha : IX. Flacc. 39n

Marcus Aurelius : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 48n

Mareotic Lake * : IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 108

Mark : IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 106

Markland : II. Cher. 58n, IV. Pref. pp. vi, vii, Mig. 35n & N, Quis Her. 314N, Congr. 87n, V. Mut. 54n, 61N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Massebieau : VII. Gen. Introd. p. xiv n, VIII. Praem. 171N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 147n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xvi, xx
- Mayor, J. B. : I. Gen. Introd. p. xx n
- Mayor, J. E. B. : V. Som. i. 247N, VII. Decal. 77N, IX. Flacc. 151n
- Mazzaroth : VIII. Praem. 65N
- Megasthenes : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74NN, 96N
- Meineke : VI. Mos. ii. 4N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 34-36N, 171N
- Melissus : V. Som. ii. 283N
- Menander : IV. Quis Her. 5n, Congr. 159N, VI. Abr. 134n
- Messiah : VIII. Virt. 221N, Praem. 165n
- Metrodorus : V. Som. i. 23N
- Migne : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13N
- Minns : V. Som. ii. App. p. 606
- Mishnah : IX. Hyp. 7. 5N
- Mithridates : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
- Mitylene : X. Leg. 149n
- Mnemosyne * : III. Plant. 129N
- Moab, Moabites * : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 333n & 327ffN
- Moloch : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 32n
- Molon : IX. Hyp. 6. 2n
- Mommsen : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N
- Monatsschrift für Geschichte und Wissenschaft des Judenthums* : VIII. Praem. 65N
- Montaigne : VIII. Virt. 152N
- Mosaic Law : I. Leg. All. iii. 32N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 133ffN, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. x, xv, Virt. 122N, 222n, Praem. 171N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 57n, Vit. Cont. 65N, Hyp. Introd. pp. 407 (408)n, 409, 411, 7. 1n, 7. 5n, 7. 6n
- Moulton : I. Leg. All. iii. 16N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Muses * : III. Plant. 129N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 13n
 Musonius : VI. Mos. ii. 4N, IX. Prov. 2. 67N
 Mysia : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 115n
- Nauck : V. Som. i. 154n, VII. Decal. 120N, VIII. Spec.
Leg. iv. 47n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 99N, 100N, 134N, 143n, 152n, Aet. 30n
- Nazirite * : I. Leg. All. i. 17n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 247n
 Nero * : IX. Flacc. 10N
- New College ms. : V. Fug. 77n, Mut. Introd. p. 141
New English Dictionary : VI. Mos. i. 172n
- Nicetas Serranus : III. Sob. 49n, 50N, VII. Gen.
Introd. pp. xvi & n, xvii, Spec. Leg. ii. 87n, 124n, 140n, 157n, 176n & N, 210n, 214n
- Nicomachus : I. Op. 101N, Leg. All. i. 3N, VII. Decal.
 21N, Spec. Leg. ii. 212N
- Nisan : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 180N
- Ocellus * : IX. Aet. Introd. p. 176, 12n & N, 21N
 Ochus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
- Olympus, Olympia, Olympic * : III. Agr. 119N, IV.
Quis Her. 46n, 75N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 176N
- Omphale : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 101n
- Onesicritus : VI. Abr. 182N
- Onomastica : II. Post. 62n, IV. Congr. 42n
- Oriental tradition : VIII. Praem. 23N
- Origen : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxi, IV. Conf. 44N, VI. Mos.
 ii. 114N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 137N
- Orodes : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
- Orphics : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188N
- Osiris : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 23N
- Otus : V. Som. ii. 283N
- Ovid : VIII. Praem. 8N
- Oxyrhynchus Papyrus : V. Som. i. 47N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Palestine, Palestinian * : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxii n, IV. Quis Her. 300n, VI. Mos. ii. 26-44N, VII. Spec.
Leg. i. 71fN, 101n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 158n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N, Hyp. Introd. p. 408
- Paley : IX. Vit. Cont. 59N
- Pallas : see Athena
- Panteleia : VI. Abr. 244N
- Pantheon : IV. Quis Her. 75N
- Paris Papyrus : II. Sac. Introd. p. 93, IV. Quis Her.
 Introd. pp. 282, 283 & n, V. Som. i. 47N
- Parmenides : I. Leg. All. iii. 61n, V. Som. i. 21N, 23N,
 ii. 283N, IX. Prov. 1N
- Paroemiographer : IX. Hyp. 7. 8N
- Parthians * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
- Paul : I. Gen. Introd. p. x, VI. Mos. i. 304N, VII.
Spec. Leg. i. 55N, iii. 151n, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xv, Praem. 123N, IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 107
- Pauly-Wissowa : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 21N, X. Leg.
 305n
- Pausanias : II. Post. 113N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 176N, VIII. Praem. 154N, IX. Vit. Cont. 59N, Prov. 2.
 33nn, X. Leg. 95n
- Pearson : III. Plant. Introd. p. 209n
- Penelope : I. Gen. Introd. p. xvi n
- Pentecost * : IX. Vit. Cont. 65nn & N
- Peripatetics * : III. Quod Deus 162-165N, Plant. Introd. p. 209n, Ebr. 199N, Sob. 60ffN, IV. Mig.
 147n, Quis Her. 246N, V. Fug. 147n, Mut. 32N, IX. Aet. Introd. pp. 175, 177n, 179, 46n, 48N,
 113n
- Persephone : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140n & N
- Persians * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13n & N, 17-18N, 100n
- Peter : IX. Flacc. 25N
- Peterson : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 91N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Petronius * : X. Leg. Introd. pp. xxii, xxviii-xxx, 221n, 230n
- Pfühl : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140N
- Pharisees : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145N, 162N
- Pharos * : VI. Mos. ii. 26-44N
- Pherae : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 164N
- Philadelphus, Ptolemy * : VI. Mos. ii. 26-44N
- Philip the Tetrarch * : IX. Flacc. 25N
- Philodemus : V. Som. ii. 17n
- Philolaus * : II. Cher. 26N, V. Som. i. 30N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188N
- Philologus : II. Post. 104N, X. Leg. 180n
- Philology, Journal of : III. Plant. Introd. p. 209n
- Philopator, Ptolemy : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55N
- Phintys : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 171N
- Phoenix : V. Mut. 36N
- Pilate * : X. Leg. Introd. pp. xviii & n-xx, xxiii, xxiv
- Pilgrim Fathers : I. Gen. Introd. p. xv n
- Pindar * : VII. Decal. 159N, IX. Aet. Introd. p. 177, 121n, Prov. 2. 50n & N
- Plataea : VIII. Praem. 147n
- Plato * : I. Pref. p. v, Gen. Introd. pp. xiv, xviii, xix, Op. 170fN, Leg. All. i. 63n, iii. 175N, II. Sac. 37N, 136N, Post. 173N, Gig. Introd. p. 443, 7N, 56N, 59N, III. Quod Deus 27N, 176N, Ebr. 61n, IV. Conf. 164n, 174n, Mig. 220N, Quis Her. 169N, 292n, V. Fug. 82N, Mut. 152N, 153N, Som. i. 31N, 44N, VI. Mos. ii. 49n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 25N, 48n, 327ffN, ii. 4N, 212N, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. x, xi n, Spec. Leg. iv. 40N, 49N, 85N, 92n, 237N, Praem. 49-51N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 3n, Vit. Cont. 29n, Aet. Introd. p. 177n, 14n, Prov. 2. 18n
- Apol.* : III. Plant. 80n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 198n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Axioch.* : II. Cher. 25N
Clit. : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 28N
Crat. : I. Leg. All. i. 108n, ii. 15N, II. Post. 36n, 113N, V. Som. i. 31N, VII. Decal. 54N. Spec. Leg.
 i. 27N, 28N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188n & N, 235n,
Virt. 14n
Def. : II. Sac. 139n
Ep. : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 3N
Gorg. : I. Leg. All. i. 108n, II. Det. 141N, V. Som.
 ii. 62n, VI. Jos. 20N, 62N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 103N,
 ii. 4N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188n & N
Hp. Ma. : IX. Vit. Cont. 14n
Ion : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 49N, 50n
Leg. : I. Op. 148N, III. Quod Deus 24N, IV. Quis
Her. 116n, Congr. 114n, 159N, VI. Mos. i. 23n, ii.
 49n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 25N, ii. 232n, iii. 22N, 120N, 183N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, 7N, 21N, 63ffN,
Virt. 5n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 5N, 10N, 74n, 84n,
Vit. Cont. 62n, Aet. 146n, 147ffN, Flacc. 138n,
Hyp. 7. 6n, X. Leg. 116n, 168n
Menex. : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N, IX. Vit. Cont.
 36N
Meno : IX. Vit. Cont. 78N
Phaedo : I. Leg. All. i. 103n, 105n, II. Det. 34n & N, Gig. 14N, 56N, III. Ebr. Introd. p. 309, 8n, V. Fug. 8N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 102N, VIII. Virt.
 42n, IX. Aet. 146n
Phdr. : I. Leg. All. i. 61n, 70N, 73n, ii. 32n, II. Gig.
 13N, III. Agr. 73n, Ebr. 146N, IV. Quis Her.
 38n, 241n, 249N, V. Fug. 62N, Som. i. 138N, ii.
 294N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 321nn & N, ii. 91n, 249n, VIII. Virt. 13n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 13nn, Vit.
Cont. 35n
Phlb. : V. Mut. 146N, Som. i. 30N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Polit.* : VI. Jos. 38N
- Rep.* : I. Op. 148N, Leg. All. i. 70N, II. Cher. 15N, Gig. 59N, III. Quod Deus 24N, 65ffN, 129N, Agr. 128fN, IV. Conf. 164N, V. Som. i. 138N, 148n, VI. Jos. 20N, Mos. i. 279n, ii. 2n, 49n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 212N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 14n, 63n & N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 5nn & N
- Soph.* : III. Ebr. 56N, IV. Mig. 220n & N, V. Som. i. 8n
- Symp.* : II. Det. 141N, Gig. 16N, III. Sob. 12N, V. Som. i. 141n, VI. Mos. ii. 4N, VII. Decal. 69n, Spec. Leg. iii. 37n, IX. Vit. Cont. 59N, 60n & N, 63n, Aet. 69n, Flacc. 90n
- Theaet.* : II. Post. 36n, III. Quod Deus 14N, 154n, IV. Quis Her. 181n, 246N, 247n, V. Fug. 63nn, 82nn & N, Mut. 121n, 144n & N, 212n, VI. Mos. i. 22N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 27N, 74n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 73N, 188N
- Tim.* : I. Gen. Intro. p. xviii, Op. 13n, 22n, 54N, 72ffN, 119n, 133n, 170fN, Leg. All. i. 70N, ii. 67N, II. Cher. 21n, 125N, Det. 85nn & N, 154N, 160N, Post. 5N, Gig. 13N, III. Quod Deus 31N, 32N, 79N, 84N, Agr. 128fN, Plant. 6N, 17n, 118N, 131n, Ebr. 61n, 190N, IV. Conf. 181N, Mig. 206N, Quis Her. 88n, 165n, 185N, 233n, 246N, 283N, V. Mut. 46N, 267n, Som. i. 32N, 147n, VI. Abr. 164n, VII. Decal. 103n, 104n, Spec. Leg. i. 90n, 146N, 148n, 219n, iii. 185n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 92n, 94n, IX. Vit. Cont. 74n, Aet. Intro. p. 173n, 174f, 177, 1n, 13n & N, 15nn, 19n, 21N, 25n & N, 26n, 38n & N, 53n, 62n, 74n, 141n, 146n, 147ffN, 149n, Prov. 2. 66n
- Pliny : VIII. Praem. 89N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N, Aet. 128n, 139n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Plutarch : I. Leg. All. i. 61n, 93n, iii. 116n, 244N, II. Det. 134N, III. Quod Deus 44N, 78N, Plant. 107n, 142N, Ebr. 221N, IV. Quis Her. 14N, V. Mut. 77N, 167N, 243N, VI. Abr. 257N, Jos. 28N, 125-147N, 168N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 28N, 291N, ii. 145n, iii. 17-18N, 22N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 191N, 199N, Virt. 29N, 139N, 189N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 22n, 34n, 74N, 127n, Vit. Cont. 9n, 14n, 17N, Aet. 48n & N, 127N, 143N, Flacc. 15n, 139N, Prov. 2. 45N, 2. 67N, X. Leg. 95n
- Plutus : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 25N
- Pollux, Castor and * : V. Som. i. 150n, VII. Decal. 56N, X. Leg. 84n, 93n
- Pollux, grammarian : V. Som. i. 22N
- Polybius : IV. Conf. 96n, V. Som. ii. 38N, VI. Mos. ii. 47N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 60n
- Polycrates * : IX. Prov. Introd. p. 449, 2. 1n, 2. 24n & NN
- Pompey : I. Gen. Introd. p. xix
- Pontian Islands : X. Leg. 87n
- Poseidon * : VI. Abr. 244N, VII. Decal. 54N, IX. Vit. Cont. 3N
- Posidonius : I. Op. 142N, III. Quod Deus 62N, Plant. 176ffN, V. Som. i. 1-2N, 30N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 46N, iii. 100N, IX. Aet. 76n
- Posner : IV. Mig. 5N
- Pramnae : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74N
- Preller : see Ritter
- Procopius : VI. Mos. i. 142n
- Prodicus : II. Sac. 21-33N, 35-41N
- Protagoras * : IV. Quis Her. 246N, V. Som. ii. 193n
- Prytaneium : VIII. Praem. 154N
- Pseudo-Demosthenes : IV. Conf. 141N
- Pseudo-Justin : III. Quod Deus 78N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Pseudo-Plato : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 28N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 160N, 237N
- Pseudo-Plutarch : V. Mut. 167N, 243N
- Ptolemais : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82N
- Ptolemies * : VI. Jos. 3N, Mos. ii. 26-44N (Philadelphus), VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55N (Philopator), ii. 82N, iii. 24n, 133ffN, 164N, 204N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 127N (Soter)
- Pyrrho : IV. Quis Her. 246N
- Pythagoras : I. Op. 170fN, Leg. All. ii. 15N, V. Som. i. 23N, 30N, 31N, VI. Abr. 244N, Mos. ii. 210N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 73N, Praem. 111N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 2n
- Pythagoreans * : I. Gen. Introd. p. xvii, Op. 100n, II. Post. 173N, III. Quod Deus 46N, Plant. 123N, IV. Conf. 5N, Quis Her. 170N, 190N, V. Som. i. 22N, 30N, VI. Abr. 244N, Mos. ii. 210N, VII. Decal. 20n, 102n, Spec. Leg. ii. 56n & N, iii. 171N, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xii n, Spec. Leg. iv. 231n & N, Praem. 46N, IX. Vit. Cont. 2n, Aet. 12n & N
- Quintilian : I. Leg. All. i. 57N, IV. Conf. 27N, Mig. 35N, 49N, Congr. 11N, 77N, V. Mut. 36N, 150N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 91N, 244N, iii. 6N, VIII. Praem. 49-51N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 15N, Prov. 2. 2n
- Rabbinic tradition, etc. : VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvi, Abr. 118N, Mos. ii. 114N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145N, iii. 34-36N, 82n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 106N, Virt. 137n, 221N, Praem. 65N
- Rawlinson : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
- Reid : III. Quod Deus 46N, Agr. 134N, Plant. 165N, Ebr. 173N, V. Som. i. 53N
- Reiter : V. Som. ii. 123N, IX. Pref. p. viii, Flacc.

INDEX TO NOTES

- Introd. p. 295n, 18n, 76n, 94n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xiv-xvii, xx n, xxi, 7n, 22n, 125n, 128n, 155n, 158n, 163n, 180nn, 221n, 227n, 275n, 292n, 312n, 320nn, 348n, 370n
- Rhegium * : IX. Act. 139n
Rheinisches Museum : III. Quod Deus 59N, IV. Conf. 9n, Mig. 220n, 224n
- Ritter and Preller : I. Leg. All. iii. 7N, II. Cher. 25N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 56N
- Roberts : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 73N
- Robinson, Armitage : II. Post. 130n
- Robinson, Pastor : I. Gen. Introd. p. xv n, VI. Gen. Introd. p. xiv
- Roman * : government : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 59ffN ; in Egypt, VI. Jos. 3N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82N, IX. Flacc. 130N ; world : IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 108 ; constitution : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N ; legislation : VI. Jos. 219n, VII. Gen. Introd. pp. xi, xii n, Spec. Leg. ii. 232N, 244N, iii. 30N, 89N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2n & N, 7N, 13N, Virt. 139N ; courts & magistrates : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55n & N ; religion : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 165n, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xi n (Stoicism), IX. Flacc. 137fN
- Rome * : IV. Quis Her. 75N, IX. Flacc. 1N, 20N, 25N, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xxii n, xxviii, xxx & n
- Rootham : V. Som. i. 28N
- Rouse : IV. Quis Her. 81n, Congr. 159N, V. Fug. 3n, 200N, Mut. 50n, 132n, 200n, VI. Pref. p. vi, Mos. i. 172n, 218n, ii. 242n, IX. Act. 141n, Flacc. 20n, X. Pref. p. v
- Rufinus : X. Leg. Introd. p. xviii
- Rutherford : VI. Jos. 168N
- Ryle : I. Leg. All. iii. 218N, III. Ebr. 31N, Sob. 32N, 56N, IV. Conf. 149N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Sabbath : VI. Mos. ii. 217n, 219n
 Sadducees : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 162N
 Samaria : IX. Flacc. 25N
 Sandys : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 85N, Virt. 152N, IX. Aet. 121n, Prov. 2. 50N, X. Leg. 116n
 Sanhedrin : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55N
 Saul * : IX. Flacc. 4n
 Sauppe : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 40N
 Sceptics * : I. Gen. Introd. p. xviii & n, Op. 170fN, Leg. All. iii. 206N, III. Ebr. Introd. p. 314n, 175N, 193N, V. Som. ii. 283n
 Scholiast : III. Ebr. 218N
 Schröder : IX. Prov. 2. 50N
 Schürer : VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. xiii n, xviii, Praem. 23N, IX. Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 107, X. Leg. Introd. p. xvi
 Schwichest : VII. Gen. Introd. p. xvii n
 Scipio : VIII. Virt. 152N
 Sejanus * : IX. Flacc. Introd. p. 295n, 1n & N, 191n, X. Leg. Introd. pp. xviii & n-xx, xxiii, xxiv & n
 Semele * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N
 Seneca : I. Leg. All. ii. 22N, iii. 175N, II. Sac. 41n, III. Plant. 176ffN, V. Mut. 36N, VI. Jos. 48N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 103N, 327ffN, ii. 239N, 244N, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xi n, Virt. 189N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 26n, 114n, Aet. 139n, 140n, Prov. 2. 4N, 2. 67N
 Servius : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 259N
 Severus : V. Som. ii. 123N, IX. Flacc. 2n Sextus Empiricus : III. Ebr. Introd. p. 314n, 170N, 172N, 172-174N, 173N, 175N, 178N, 181N, 184N, 186N, 190N, IV. Mig. 5N, 180N, VII. Decal. 56N, Spec. Leg. i. 327ffN, iii. 13N, 23N
 Seyffert : I. Leg. All. iii. 130n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Shakespeare : V. Som. ii. 121N
 Sibylline Oracles : VIII. Praem. 87N
 Siegfried : I. Gen. Introd. pp. xx n, xxii n, V. Mut. 121n & N, IX. Flacc. 162N
 Silanus * : X. Leg. Introd. p. xxiv, 62n
 Simon Magus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100N
 Simplicius : IX. Aet. 14n
 Sisyphus * : IV. Quis Her. 46n
Sitzungsberichte der Königlich preussischen Akademie der Wissenschaften : V. Som. i. 21-23N, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xv n Smerdis : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 17-18N
 Smith, G. A. : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 204N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 160n, 217n, Virt. 75n, 111N
 Socrates * : II. Det. 34N, Gig. 56N, III. Quod Deus 146n, Ebr. Introd. p. 309, 8n, Sob. 12N, IV. Quis Her. 247n, V. Fug. 8n, Som. i. Introd. p. 287, 54N, 56n, 57N, VI. Abr. 72n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 237N, Virt. 34N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 13n, Vit. Cont. 58N, 59N, Aet. 1n, Prov. 2. 21n
 Sodom * : IX. Aet. 147ffN
 Solomon * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 29n
 Solon * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 22N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, Virt. 162n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 3N, Hyp. 7. 6n
 Sophists : II. Post. 141N
 Sophocles * : V. Som. ii. 44n, VI. Jos. 48N, Mos. ii. 255n, VII. Decal. 116N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 191N, Virt. 152N, Praem. 154N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5n, 134N, Aet. 13N, Hyp. 7. 8N
 Sparta, Spartan * : II. Det. 134N, III. Ebr. 193N, VI. Mos. i. 179n, VII. Decal. 96N, Spec. Leg. iii. 22N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 21N, 193N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 114n, Prov. 1N

INDEX TO NOTES

Stallbaum : IX. Aet. 25 & 38N

Stanley : VI. Gen. Introd. p. xi n

Stein : IV. Conf. 198N

Stephanus : IV. Congr. 148n, 149N, V. Mut. 57N, Som. i. 22N, 99N, 164N, ii. 17n, 38N, VI. Mos. i. 218n, VII. Decal. 159N, Spec. Leg. i. 28N, 83N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 37n, 52N, 109N, 113N, 191N, 199N, Virt. 31N, 44N, 86n, 125n, 158n, 208N, 222n, Praem. 44N, 154N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 3N, 34n, Vit. Cont. 2n, 17N, 40n, 80n, Aet. 141n, 143n, Flacc. 15n, 50n, 102n, 136fN, 139N, Hyp. 7. 14n, Prov. 2. 23N, 2. 26N, 2. 48N, 2. 67N, X. Leg. 203n, 274n, 338n

Stephen : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 55N

Stobaeus : II. Cher. 26N, Sac. 37N, III. Quod Deus 22N, Agr. 110n, Sob. 34N, IV. Conf. 184-187N, 187N, V. Som. i. 21-23NN, 30-32NN, 53N, 145N, VI. Abr. 244N, Mos. ii. 4N, 210N, VII. Decal. 120N, Spec. Leg. iii. 34-36N, 171N, VIII. Virt. 189N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 141n, Aet. 12N, Prov. 2. 1n

Stoics * : I. Pref. p. vi, Gen. Introd. pp. xiv, xvii n, xviii & nn, xix, xx, Op. 3N, 26N, 43N, 117N, 142N, 170fN, Leg. All. i. 30N, 57N, 68n, 87n, 91N, ii. 6N, 22N, 99N, iii. 2N, 97N, 129N, 175N, 189N, 210N, 244N, II. Cher. 62n, 53-66N, 79N, 114N, Sac. 37N, 68N, 80N, 136N, Det. 7N, 49N, 120N, 134N, 135N, Post. 81N, 104N, 138N, Gig. 7N, 38N, 52N, III. Quod Deus 22N, 34N, 41n, 62N, 65ffN, 78N, 84N, 176N, Agr. 14N, 41N, 139n, 140fN, 160N, 161N, Plant. Introd. pp. 209n, 210n, 211n, 49n, 106N, 171N, 172N, Ebr. 29n, 70N, 88N, 142N, 199N, Sob. 18N, 56N, IV. Conf. 69n, 90N, 106n & N, 145n, Mig. 5N, 51n, 54N, 178n, 180N,

INDEX TO NOTES

219n, Quis Her. 136N, 156N, 191n, 228n & N, 246N, Congr. Introd. p. 452, 18N, 79N, 141N, V. Fug. 11-13N, 19n, 75N, 86n, 134N, 147n, Mut. Introd. pp. 131, 136, 1n, 32N, 34N, 36N, 47N, 77N, 114N, 135N, 152N, 167N, 197N, Som. i. 1-2N, 128n, 145N, VI. Abr. 27n, 99N, 201n, 261N, Jos. 28N, 29n, VII. Decal. Introd. p. 4, 54N, 120N, 142n, 142-146N, Spec. Leg. i. 6N, 246n, 318N, 327ffN, Spec. Leg. ii. 36n, 46N, 69N, 73N, 185N, 188N, 259N, Spec. Leg. iii. 34-36N, 100N, 109N, VIII. Gen. Introd. pp. x, xi & n, xiii n, xvii, Spec. Leg. iv. 12n & N, 54N, 79n, 85N, 145n, 257N, Virt. 28N, 189n & N, Praem. 11n, 55N, IX. Pref. p. vi, Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. pp. 2-4, 1n, 15N, 26n, 42n, 80n, 159nn, Aet. Introd. pp. 176, 177 & n, 4nn, 46n, 48n & N, 75n, 79n, 81n, 84n, 113n, 119n, Prov. 2. 45n & N, X. Leg. 45n

Stoicorum Veterum Fragmenta (H. von Arnim): I. Op. 3N, 26N, 43N, 117N, 170fN, Leg. All. i. 30N, 68n, 87n, 91N, ii. 22N, 99N, iii. 2N, 97N, 129N, 175N, 210N, II. Cher. 69N, 114N, 136N, Det. 7N, 9N, 16N, 49N, Post. 129n, 138N, III. Quod Deus 18N, 22N, 34N, 44N, 62N, 65ffN, 78N, 84N, Agr. 41N, 83n, 139n, 160N, 161N, Plant. 106N, Ebr. 29n, 70N, 88N, 142N, 158N, Sob. 34N, 56N, IV. Conf. 184-187N, Mig. 138N, Quis Her. 136N, 156N, 228n & N, 242n, Congr. 18N, 54N, 79N, 141N, V. Fug. 11-13N, 26N, 75N, 134N, Mut. 32N, 34N, 77N, 114N, 135N, 152N, 153N, 160N, 167N, Som. i. 31N, 145N, VI. Abr. 27n, 99N, 261N, Jos. 28N, Mos. ii. 49N, VII. Decal. 54N, 142-146N, Spec. Leg. i. 6N, 33N, 103N, 208n, 254n, 318N, 327ffN, Spec. Leg. ii. 36n, 46N, 69N, 73N, 185N, 188N, 259N, Spec. Leg. iii. 100N, 109N, VIII. Gen.

INDEX TO NOTES

- Introd. p. xi n, Spec. Leg. iv. 11, 12N, 54N, 79n, 145n, Virt. 28N, Praem. 55N, 154n, IX. Quod Omn.
Prob. Introd. p. 3, 7n, 8n, 53n, 60n, 159n, Aet.
 18n, 48N, 75n, 79n, 86n, X. Leg. 55n Strabo : V. Som. ii. 121N, VI. Abr. 182N, VIII. Praem.
 89N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74NN, 96N, Aet. 139n,
Flacc. 74n
 Strack and Billerbeck : VIII. Virt. 221N
 Strato : V. Som. i. 21N
 Suetonius : IX. Flacc. 10N, 56N, X. Leg. 62n, 87n
 Suidas : X. Leg. 373n
 Suttee : VI. Abr. 118N
 Swete : VI. Mos. ii. 26-44N
 Swoboda : X. Leg. Introd. p. xv n
 Sybarites * : VIII. Praem. 89N
 Syleus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 100N, 101n
 Symmachus : III. Ebr. 31N
 Synesius : IX. Prov. 2. 23N
 Syria, Syrian * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 40N, IX. Flacc. 25N
 Syrianus : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 244N

 Tabernacles, Feast of : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 180N, ii.
 163n, IX. Vit. Cont. 65N
 Tacitus : IX. Flacc. 10N, X. Leg. 39n Talmudists : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145N, VIII. Virt. 221N.
 See also Rabbinic
 Tantalus * : IV. Quis Her. 46n
 Taubenschlag : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N
 Tennyson : VIII. Virt. 189N
 Tertullian : V. Som. i. 54N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13N
 Tetragrammaton : VI. Mos. ii. 114N, 115n
 Thackeray : VI. Gen. Introd. p. xvii n, Mos. ii. 26-44N, 38N, 114N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 162N, iii. 149N,
 IX. Hyp. Introd. p. 409n, 7. 7n

INDEX TO NOTES

- Thales : V. Mut. 179n, Som. i. 21N, 23N
 Thebes * : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 16n, VIII. Praem. 147n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 144n, Prov. 2. 33n
 Themistius : I. Leg. All. ii. 22N
 Themistocles : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 28N, iii. 22N, VIII.
Virt. 124N
 Theocritus : III. Quod Deus 90n, VIII. Praem. 111N,
 IX. Flacc. 136fN
 Theodorus * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 127n & N
 Theodotion : III. Ebr. 31N
 Theognis : VIII. Virt. 162n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 156n
 Theon : IX. Flacc. 20N
 Theophilus : VIII. Praem. 23N
 Theophrastus * : IX. Aet. Introd. pp. 176f, 181, 118n,
 119n Therapeutae * : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 129n, 191n, Virt.
 17N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 75N, Vit. Cont. passim,
Hyp. Introd. p. 410
 Thersites * : IX. Vit. Cont. 9n
 Thesmophoria * : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 140N
 Thompson : V. Som. i. 138N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 4N,
 VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188N
 Three Children : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5n Thucydides : II. Sac. 122n, Post. 16N, 113N, III.
Quod Deus. 73n, IV. Quis Her. 158n, V. Som. ii.
 187n, VI. Jos. 24n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 13n, VIII.
Spec. Leg. iv. 128N, Virt. 124N, Praem. 147n, IX.
Aet. 4n, Flacc. 31n, X. Leg. 149n Tiberius Caesar * : IX. Flacc. 1N, 10N, 12n, 25N, X.
Leg. Introd. p. xxiv Tiberius Gemellus * : IX. Flacc. 10n & N, X. Leg.
Introd. p. xxiv Tischendorf : II. Post. 165n, VII. Gen. Introd. p.
 xviii n, Spec. Leg. ii. 66n, 183n, 192n

INDEX TO NOTES

Tishri : VII. Decal. 159N, Spec. Leg. i. 180N

Titus : IX. Flacc. 139N

Translators, The (Colson & Whitaker) : I. Pref. pp. v, vi, Gen. Introd. pp. xxii. & n, xxiii, Leg. All. i. 60N, ii. 38n, 78N, iii. 33n, 89n, 168n, 239n, II. Cher. 7n, 8n & N, 30n, 58n, 65n, 69N, 114n, 127n, Sac. 21n & N, 129n, 139n, Det. 59n, 96n. 135n & N, Post. 16n & N, 53n, 72n, 73n, 116n, 153nn, Gig. 37n, 41N, 53n & N, III. Pref. pp. v & n, vi, Quod Deus 31n, 66n & N, 84N, 87n, 101n, 108n & N, 169n, Agr. 114n & N, 134n & N, 141n, 150n, 153n, 158n, Plant. Introd. pp. 209n, 211n, 3N, 7nn, 29n & N, 61N, 89n, 90n, 104n, 118N, 127n, 139N, 145n, Ebr. 134N, 176N, 190N, 201n, 202n, 214n, Sob. 38n, 40n, 49n, 50N, 51n, IV. Pref. pp. v-vii, Conf. 14n, 51n, 52N, 55n & N, 96n, 103n, 108n & N, 111n & N, 136n, 137n & N, 151N, 154N, 175n, Mig. 5n, 23N, 24N, 52n, 79n & N, 98n, 100-101n, 106n, 119n, 149n, 164n & N, 165n & N, 206n & N, 220n & N, Quis Her. Introd. p. 283 & n, 36n & N, 46n, 52n & N, 76n & N, (81n & N), 136n, 139n, 164n, 165N, 167n, 170nn & N, 188n & N, 219n, 220n, 228N, 284n, 291N, 292n, 310n & N, 311n, 314n & N, Congr. 26n, 29n & N, 53n & N, 54n & N, 87nn, 107N, 129n, 130n, 159n, 160n & N, V. Pref. p. v, Fug. (3n), 22n, 45N, 57n, 87n, 91n, 102n, 113n, 117n, 118n, 145n, 153n, 156n, 190n, 191n & N, 200N, 206n, 211n, Mut. Introd. p. 141, 7nn, 12n & N, 24n, 26nn, 32n & N, (50n), 54n, 61N, 62N, 113n, 121n, 128nn, 132n, 135n, 142n, 144n & N, 171n, 188n, 191n, 192nn, 197N, 200n, 201n, 208nn, 217n, 218n, 229n, 237n, 242N, 252n, 260n, Som. i. 8n, 22N, 28N, 29n, 32n, 44N, 75nn, 95n, 97n,

INDEX TO NOTES

119n, 124n, 128n, 129n, 131n, 132n, 134N, 153N, 158N, 159n, 186-188nn & N, 256n, ii. Introd. p. 433 & n & N, 12n, 24n, 28n, 52n, 55N, 56n, 57n, 69n, 70n, 76n, 85n, 88n, 90n, 112n, 123n, 136n, 139-140n & N, 150n, 153n, 155n, 191n, 199n, 207nn, 243nn, 247n & N, 264n, 268nn, 276nn, 279nn, 282N, 283n, 290nn, Append. p. 613, VI. Pref. p. v, Gen. Introd. pp. xvi & n, xviii, Abr. 20n, 100-102N, 169n, 228n, 240n, 262n, Jos. 3n & N, 34n, 144n, 158n, 176n, 189n, 254n, 256n, Mos. i. 70nn, 95nn, 142n, 146m, (172n), (218n), 231n, 320n, 328n, ii. 60n, 70n, 81n, 86n, 192n, 242nn, 246n, Append. p. 611, VII. Pref. pp. v, vi, Gen. Introd. p. xviii, Decal. 106N, 159n, Spec. Leg. i. 46nn, 58-59n & N, 90N, 108n, 179n, 191n, 234n, 300n, 322n & N, 333N, ii. 13nn, 78n, 127n, 140n, 155n, 163n, 228n & N, 229nn, iii. 25n, 84nn, 124n, 166n, 200n, VIII. Pref. pp. v, vi, Gen. Introd. pp. xiii & n, xvi & n, xvii, xix & n, xxiv, Spec. Leg. iv. 69nn, 101n, 132n, 142n, 200n, 229n, Virt. 4n, 28n, 29n, 31n & N, 34n, 38n, 75n, 100N, 103nn, 137n, 149n, 185n & N, 206n, 216n, Praem. 1n, 20n, 44N, 73n, 94nn, 95n, 104n, 112n, 117n, 121n, 129n, 133n, 154n, 163n, IX. Pref. p. viii, Quod Omn. Prob. 5n, 25n, 74n & N, 96n & N, 150n, Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 106n, 6n, 42n, 52n, 80nn, 81n, 89n, 90n, Aet. 2n, 4n, 13N, 88n, 110n, 112n, 135n, 141n, Flacc. 9n, 48nn, 93n, 94n, 142n, 178n, Hyp. 7. 9n, 11. 1n, Prov. 1n & N, 2. 17n, 2. 18n, 2. 24n, 2. 66n, X. Pref. p. v, Leg. 152n, 190nn, 218n, 230nn, 373n

Treitel : VII. Decal. 1N, 20n, 62n, 153n, 176n

Trinity College ms. : V. Mut. Introd. p. 141, Som. ii.

Introd. p. 433n, App. p. 606

INDEX TO NOTES

- Triptolemus * : VIII. Praem. 8n & N
 Trojan War : VI. Jos. 56n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 85n Tucker : I. Leg. All. i. 60n, III. Plant. 142N Turnebus : II. Sac. Introd. p. 93, IV. Pref. p. vi, V.
     Som. i. 128n
 Tyre : IX. Vit. Cont. 66n
 Tzetzes : VIII. Praem. 44N
- Ulpian : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 30N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv.
     7N, Virt. 139N
 Ulysses : V. Mut. 36N
 Urim and Thummim * : VI. Mos. ii. 117-135N, VII.
     Spec. Leg. i. 84n
 Usener : I. Leg. All. iii. 160N, II. Post. 79N, V. Som.
     i. 54N, 184N, ii. 48N, 209N
- Vahlen : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 73N
 Vespasian : IX. Flacc. 139N
 Viger : IX. Hyp. Introd. pp. 410, 413, Prov. 1n, 2. 48N,
     2. 67N
 Virgil : II. Cher. 121N, III. Agr. 114N, VIII. Praem.
     8N
 Vitrasius Pollio : V. Som. ii. 123N, VI. Mos. ii. 84n,
     IX. Flacc. 2n
 Vitruvius : IX. Aet. 30n
- Waddell : V. Som. i. 47N
 Walz : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 244N
 Weeks, Feast of : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 163n
 Welldon : II. Det. 7N Wendland : I. Gen. Introd. p. xxiii, Op. 71n, Leg.
     All. iii. 91n, II. Cher. 51n, Sac. 34n, 63n, 71n,
     Det. 65n, Post. 6n, 14n, 18n, 62n, 104N, 109N, 116n, Gig. 17n, 37n, 41n, III. Pref. p. v, Quod
     483

INDEX TO NOTES

Deus 7n, 24n & N, 31n, 59n & N, 66N, 73n, 101n, 102n, 103n, 108n & N, 111N, 143n, 181n, Agr. 97n, 101n, 145n & N, 150n, 158n, 166n, 167n, 178n, Plant. 7n, 10nn & N, 32n, 33n, 37n, 41N, 45n, 66nn, 73n, 90n, 139n & N, 144n, 170n, Ebr. 4n & N, 12n, 48N, 74n & N, 80n, 118n, 134N, 143n, 146n, 149n, 175N, 177n, 214n, Sob. 14n, 28n, 32N, 40nn, 46nn, 48n, 49n, 50n & N, 61n, 66n, IV. Pref. pp. vi, vii, Conf. 1nn, 9n, 12n, 14n, 26n, 44N, 51n, 52n, 55nn & N, 57n, 96n, 99N, 103n & N, 108n, 118n, 136n, 137n, 141n & N, 151N, 154n & N, 156n, 159n, 174n, 175n, 179n, 194n, Mig. 19n, 21N, 23n & N, 24N, 35n, 60n, 69N, 112n, 149n, 151n, 164n, 165n, 166n, 192n, 208n, 220n, 224n, Quis Her. Introd. pp. 282f & n, 12n, 44n, 54n, 76n, 81n & N, 88n, 89n, 115n & N, 116n, 118n, 139nn, 144N, 145N, 163n, 169n, 172n, 185n & N, 188n, 211n, 218n, 219n, 228N, 241n, 242n & N, 252n, 268n, 274n, 284n, 285n, 291N, 310n & N, 311nn, 314n, Congr. title p. 449n, 15n, 41n, 92nn, 107N, 113n, 117n, 123n, 133n & N, 141N, 144n, 149n, 171n & N, 177n, V. Pref. p. v, Fug. 42N, 45N, 54n, 62N, 63n, 64n, 82n, 95nn, 101n & N, 102n, 114N, 115n, 117n, 131n, 145n, 150n, 156n, 162n, 171n, 182n, 200n, Mut. Introd. p. 140, 7n, 12n, 13n, 14nn, 16n, 26n, 42n, 48n, 54n, 60n, 61n & N, 62n, 104nn, 107n, 108n, 113n, 122n, 127n, 128nn, 131n, 135n, 144n, 173n, 179n, 191n, 192n, 195n, 197N, 199n, 200n, 216nn, 217n & N, 218n, 229n, 242N, 230nn, Som. i. 1-2N, 8n, 20n, 21-23N, 22N, 28n, 30N, 39n, 40n, 42n, 46n, 49n, 54N, 91n, 95n, 97n, 98n, 101n & N, 124n, 129n, 140n, 149n, 153N, 159n, 186-188nn & N, 205n & N, 231n, 247n, 253n, 254N,

INDEX TO NOTES

- ii. Introd. p. 433 & n, 6n, 12nn, 15n, 17n, 24-27nn, 38n & N, 41n, 48N, 52n, 55N, 70n & N, 76n, 82n, 88n, 112n, 121N, 131n, 136n, 139n, 140nn, 143n, 144n, 153n, 155nn, 163n, 170nn, 178n, 189n, 191n, 199n, 217n, 224n, 231n, 245n & N, 247N, 258n, 264n, 276nn, 279n, 282n & N, 290nn, 296n, Append. pp. 606, 614, VI. Gen. Introd. p. ix n, Jos. 52n, VII. Decal. 1N, Spec. Leg. i. 2N, ii. 155n, VIII. Pref. p. v, Gen. Introd. pp. xi n, xiii n, Spec. Leg. iv. 37n, Virt. 28n, 42n, IX. Pref. pp. vi, vii, Quod Omn. Prob. 15N, Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 108, 25N, 36N, 65n & N, Aet. 112n, Flacc. 90n, Prov. Introd. pp. 447, 448, 449n, 2. 4N, 2. 17n, 2. 18N, 2. 24N, 2. 33n, 2. 46n, 2. 48N, 2. 71N, X. Leg. 152n
- Wetstein : IX. Hyp. 7. 6n
- Whitaker : I. Pref. p. vi, II. Cher. 8N, Sac. 21N, Gig. 53N, III. Pref. pp. v & n, vi, Agr. 114N, Plant. 3N, 61N, IV. Pref. pp. v, vi, Conf. 55n, Mig. 5n, 98n, 149n, V. Pref. p. v, Fug. 16N, 113n, Som. i. 44N, 158N, 186-188nn & N, ii. 57n, VI. Pref. p. v
- Wiener Studien* : III. Ebr. 12N
- Winer : I. Leg. All. iii. 16N
- Wisdom : VIII. Praem. 87N
- Wordsworth : I. Gen. Introd. p. xv, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xv
- Wytttenbach : III. Ebr. 221N, V. Som. i. 129n, VI. Abr. 257N
- Xanthus : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 13N
- Xeniades : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 121n
- Xenocrates : V. Som. i. 30N, 31N, IX. Aet. 14n
- Xenophanes : V. Som. i. 23N

INDEX TO NOTES

- Xenophon * : I. Leg. All. i. 93n, II. Sac. 21-33N, 35-41N, V. Som. i. 140n, 153N, ii. 283N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 33fN, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2N, Virt. 29N, IX. Vit. Cont. 58n & N, X. Leg. 338n
- Xerxes * : V. Som. ii. 119N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 335n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 5
- Yale Classical Studies* : VI. Mos. ii. 4N
- Yonge : I. Pref. p. v, II. Sac. Introd. p. 93, IV. Conf. 103n, Quis Her. 36N, 144N, VII. Gen. Introd. p. xviii & n, Decal. 1N, IX. Pref. p. vi, Quod Omn. Prob. 6n, X. Leg. 166n
- Zeller : I. Leg. All. ii. 22N, iii. 7N, II. Cher. 25N, Sac. 68N, 136N, Post. 1N, Gig. 7N, III. Quod Deus 100N, Plant. 123N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 208N, 327ffN, ii. 176n, iii. 34-36N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 231N, Praem. 46N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. Introd. p. 3, 28n, 108n, Vit. Cont. Introd. p. 107, 2n, Aet. 48N, 75n, 81n, 84n, 85n, 103n, 111n, Prov. 2. 45N, 2. 67N, X. Leg. 45n
- Zeno * : I. Op. 3N, III. Quod Deus 62N, Plant. Introd. p. 211 & n, 176ffN, Sob. 18N, V. Fug. 134N, Mut. 36N, Som. i. 21N, 22N, 30N, VI. Jos. 28N, Mos. ii. 49n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 103N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 53n, 57n, Aet. 18n, 143n, Prov. 1N, 2. 1n
- Zenodotus : IX. Vit. Cont. 17N
- Zerubbabel, Temple of : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 273N
- Zeus * : III. Plant. 129N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 25N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 19nn, Aet. 48N, 81n, 127N, Prov. 2. 3n, 2. 24N
- Zodiac * : IV. Quis Her. 176n, V. Som. i. 214n, VIII. Praem. 65n & N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS IN THE TRANSLATORS' NOTES

- ἄβατος : V. Fug. 162n
ἀγαθά : II. Det. 7N, III. Sob. 60ffN ἀγαθότης : III. Quod Deus 108N ἀγάλματα : III. Sob. 38n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 76n ἀγαπητός : IV. Mig. 222n ἄγγελος : IV. Quis Her. 310N ἀγειν κ. φέρειν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 2n ἀγίασμα κυρίῳ : VI. Mos. ii. 114N
ἄγκεια : V. Som. i. 22n & N ἀγνεία : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 84n & 75N ἀγνοεῖν : VI. Jos. 189n
ἀγορὰ μέση : V. Som. ii. 62n ἀγορανόμοι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 193N ἄγος : III. Agr. 21n, IV. Conf. 161n ἄγραφοι νόμοι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 150N ἄγροικος : I. Leg. All. iii. 2N ἀγρονόμοι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 21N ἀγωγή : II. Det. 16N
ἀγῶνες : V. Mut. 106N, VI. Abr. 48n ἀγωνία : VII. Decal. 142-146N, VIII. Virt. 24n ἀδελφή κ. δίδυμος : IV. Congr. 18N ἀδιαίρετος : II. Gig. 27n ἀδικοπραγεῖν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 200n & N ἀδόκιμος : IV. Conf. 198n, V. Som. i. 202n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἄδυνατεῖν : VIII. Virt. 31N ἄδύνατος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 341n ἀεί : IV. Conf. 21n
 ἀειπάρθενος : VI. Mos. ii. 210N ἀερομυθεῖν, -ος : IV. Mig. 138N ἀήρ : IV. Mig. 138N
 ἄθεος : V. Fug. 114N
 αἰθήριος : III. Quod Deus 78N
 αἶθυια : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 113N αἰνετός : V. Som. i. 33n, VI. Abr. 13n αἶξ, αἴσσω : V. Som. i. 198n αἰσθήσεις : III. Plant. 29N, IV. Quis Her. 225n αἰτία : IV. Conf. 124N
 αἰών : V. Fug. 57n ἀκάθαρτος : I. Leg. All. iii. 94n ἀκαμπής : VIII. Praem. 27n ἀκατάληπτος, -ψία : III. Ebr. 175N, IV. Quis Her.
 132N
 ἀκήρυκτος : X. Leg. 100n ἀκοὴν μαρτυρεῖν : IV. Conf. 141N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv.
 61n ἀκόλουθα : VIII. Praem. 11n ἀκουσία : V. Fug. 65n, 86n ἀκρότατος : V. Som. ii. 221n ἀκρότομος : V. Som. ii. 221n, VI. Mos. i. 210n, VII. De- cal. 16n
 ἀλείφειν : V. Fug. 25n ἀλειφόβιος : IX. Flacc. 138n & N ἀλλογενής : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 124n ἀλόγιστος : I. Leg. All. i. 17n ἄλογος : I. Leg. All. i. 17n, ii. 6N, VII. Decal. 142-
 146N ἄμμα : IX. Aet. 88n
 ἀμοιβή : I. Leg. All. iii. 7N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἀμφιθαλής : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 10N ἀναγκαῖος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 70n ἀναγκαίως : II. Det. 160N, VI. Mos. ii. 233n, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 4n, IX. Vit. Cont. 29n, Prov. 2. 72n ἀναιρεῖσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 117n ἀναισθησία : III. Ebr. Introd. p. 308n ἀνακαλυπτήρια : III. Ebr. 6n.
 ἀνακύπτειν : IX. Aet. 129N
 ἀναλογία : IV. Quis Her. 145N, VII. Decal. 21N ἀναμάττεσθαι : VIII. Virt. 24n, IX. Flacc. 141N ἀνάπαιστος : IX. Flacc. 139n & N ἀναπιμπλᾶν : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 62n ἀναπλοῦσθαι : IV. Conf. 186N ἀνασκευή : IX. Prov. 2. 2n ἀνασκολοπίζεσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 151n ἀναστοιχειοῦν : IV. Quis Her. 29N ἀνασώζεσθαι : VIII. Praem. 165n ἀνατίθεσθαι : V. Som. i. 247N ἀναφέρειν, -ορά : I. Leg. All. i. 50n ἀνάφθεγμα : V. Som. ii. 17n ἀναχώρησις : IX. Flacc. 93n ἀνδρεία : I. Leg. All. i. 68n, V. Mut. 197N, VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xiii. n ἀνείμων : II. Gig. 53n & N, V. Som. i. 99N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 83n, IX. Prov. 2. 26N ἀνεῖσθαι : II. Gig. 53n & N ἀνεπίληπτος : IV. Mig. 207N, Congr. 138n ἀνεπίπληκτος : IV. Congr. 159N ἄνεσις : IV. Quis Her. 156N, VI. Jos. 33n ἀνέχειν : I. Leg. All. i. 93n, IX. Hyp. 7. 6n ἀνθηρός : V. Som. ii. 155n ἄνθιμος : III. Ebr. 218N
 ἀνιστάναι : V. Som. i. 244N ἀνορθιάζειν : VI. Abr. 20n, IX. Vit. Cont. 77n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἀντί : I. Leg. All. ii. 20N
 ἀντίδοσις : VII. Decal. 112n ἀντιπεπονθός : II. Cher. 79N ἀντιπνεύειν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 50n ἀνωτάτω : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82n ἀξιομνημόνευτος : IV. Mig. 17N ἀξιώματα ἀπλᾶ : III. Agr. 140fN ἀοπλότης : VI. Mos. i. 172n ἀπαγγέλλειν, -ία : IV. Mig. 35N, 78n
 ἀπάθεια : I. Leg. All. iii. 129N, V. Mut. 167N ἀπαντᾶσθαι : VI. Mos. i. 285n, IX. Vit. Cont. 79n ἀπαρχαί : IV. Quis Her. 253N ἀπειρόκαλος : IX. Prov. 2. 46n ἀπέραντος : IV. Quis Her. 212N ἀπέρατος : IV. Quis Her. 212N ἀπερίσκεπτος : VI. Jos. 51n ἀπέχειν : I. Leg. All. i. 93n, X. Leg. 275n ἀπληστία : III. Ebr. Introd. p. 308n, 4N, 206N ἀπό : I. Leg. All. iii. 210n ἀπό παιδείας, οἱ : X. Leg. 310n ἀπογινώσκειν : V. Som. i. 60n, VIII. Virt. 34n ἀπόγνωσις : VI. Abr. 268n, VIII. Virt. 34n ἀπογράφειν : X. Leg. 171n ἀποθνήσκειν : I. Leg. All. iii. 32N, II. Det. 34n & N, Gig. 14N, IV. Quis Her. 292n ἄποιος : II. Cher. 114N
 ἀποκεκρυμμένη φύσις : IX. Vit. Cont. 28n ἀπόκλισις : V. Som. i. 86n ἀποκρίνειν : VIII. Praem. 130n ἀπόκρισις : II. Sac. 139n, Post. 62n & N ἀπόλειψις : II. Cher. 115N, IV. Mig. 192n, VI. Mos.
 ii. 184n
 ἀπόλεμος : IV. Conf. 46N
 ἀπομάττεσθαι : IX. Flacc. 141N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἀποπομπαῖος : III. Plant. 61N
 ἀπόφαντος : IV. Congr. 149N ἀποφράδες ἡμέραι : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 183n & N,
     VIII. Praem. 171N
 ἀρεστόν : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 318n & N ἀρετή : III. Ebr. 88N, V. Mut. 167N, IX. Quod Omn.
     Prob. 27n
 ἄρουρα : V. Mut. 190n
 ἀρτᾶσθαι : II. Cher. 104n ἄρτιος : V. Mut. 88n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 186n ἄρτος : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 186n ἀρχαιότροπος ζήλωσις : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 82n ἀρχεσθαι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 97n, X. Leg. 22nn, 108n ἀρχέτυπον χρόνου : III. Quod Deus 32N ἀρχή : IV. Quis Her. 62n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 125n & N, iii. 16n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 97n ἀρχηγέτης : VIII. Virt. 206n
 ἀρχων : VI. Abr. 10n ἀσημος : IV. Mig. 79N, V. Fug. 11-13N, Som. i.
     202n ἀσκεῖν : VIII. Praem. 104nn
 ἀσκηπτος : IX. Flacc. 36n ἀσκητής, -σις : I. Leg. All. i. 80N, II. Sac. 5-7N, 65n, III. Sob. 38n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 121n, Det.
     Praem. 104n
 ἀσκός : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 109n ἄσπονδος : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 96n ἀστεῖζεσθαι : VI. Mos. i. 266n ἀστεῖος : IV. Conf. 106n & N, V. Mut. 147n ἀστράτευτος : II. Cher. 32N ἀστρονομία : IV. Congr. 11N ἀσύγκριτος : II. Cher. 114N
 ἀσφαλής : IV. Conf. 104n, 106n ἀσφαλτος : IV. Conf. 104n, 106n ? ib.

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἀτελή : III. Agr. 140fN ἀτεχνος : III. Plant. 173N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 40n & N, 149fN ἀτυφία : VIII. Virt. 17N, IX. Vit. Cont. 39n ἀυθέκαστος : IX. Flacc. 15n ἀυλαία : IV. Congr. 116n ἀυλή : IV. Congr. 116n ? ib.
 ἀυτικά : VI. Mos. ii. 203n ἀυτοκρατής : VII. Spec. Leg. i. Title n ἀυτομαθής : II. Sac. 5-7N ἀυτοχειρία : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 91n, VIII. Spec. Leg.
 iv. 7n
 ἀυτόχθονος : II. Cher. 120n
 ἀφανίζεω : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 145n ἀφάνταστος : IV. Quis Her. 137n ἀφεις : IV. Mig. 32N
 ἀφή : IV. Conf. 52N ἀφίδρυσθαι : V. Fug. 101N ἀφ' ἱερᾶς ἡρξάτο : V. Som. ii. 119n & N, X. Leg.
 22nn, 108n
 ἀφορίζεσθαι -ισμός : V. Som. i. 101n & N ἀφορμή : III. Quod Deus 44N ἄχθος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 74n ἄχρη : IX. Aet. 4nn
 ἄχρονος : III. Ebr. 48N
- βαθει ἦθει : VI. Jos. 168n & N, IX. Quod Omnia. Prob.
 144n βαθύνειν : VIII. Virt. 158n βαρᾶθρώδης : IX. Aet. 141n βαρβαρισμός : I. Leg. All. iii. 188n βαρὺ ἦθος : VI. Abr. 210n, Jos. 220n βασιλεῖον : III. Sob. 66n βασιλικαὶ βίβλοι : IV. Conf. 149N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- βάσις* : II. Gig. 22N
βάτος : V. Fug. 162n
βιάζεσθαι : III. Ebr. 143n, Sob. 6n
βουλευτήριον διανοίας : IX. Flacc. 102n
βούλησις : II. Det. 120N βραβεύειν, -τής : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 64n & N, X. Leg.
 2n
βρίθειν : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 34n
- γάρ* : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 6n, IX. Aet. 75n, Flacc. 48n γαργαλισμός : I. Leg. All. iii. 160N γαστέρα, τὰ ὑπὸ : I. Som. i. 122n
γαστριμαργία : III. Ebr. 206N, IX. Aet. 74n
γενάρχης : IV. Congr. 133n & N, IX. Flacc. 74n
γενεά : X. Leg. 230nn
γενεαλογικός : VI. Mos. ii. 47n & N γενικώτερον : VIII. Praem. 67n
γεννᾶν : VII. Decal. 27n γένος, -η : IV. Mig. 116n, Quis Her. 118n, V. Som. i.
 28N
γέρας, γήρας : III. Sob. 16n, IV. Quis Her. 291n
γλώσσα : IV. Conf. 27N
γνήσιος : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 87n, Vit. Cont. 72n, Flacc. 9n
γνωσιμαχεῖν, -ία : IV. Congr. 53N
γονορρυής : I. Leg. All. iii. 7N γούν : III. Agr. 81N, V. Fug. 191N, VI. Jos. 249n, IX. Prov. 2. 8n
γραμμαί : IV. Congr. 77N
γράμματα : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 230n γραμματική : II. Cher. 105N, III. Ebr. 51N, IV. Congr.
 77N, 148n & N, VI. Jos. 132n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 230n
γραμματιστής : VI. Jos. 132n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- γραμματοκύφων : IX. Flacc. 20n γραμμή : V. Som. ii. 119n & N γράφεσθαι : II. Det. 141N γραφή : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 1n γυμνάζειν : II. Sac. 85n γυμνός : II. Sac. 85n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 43n γύνανδρος : IV. Quis Her. 274N
- δαίμονα, κατὰ : IX. Hyp. 6. 1n δάκτυλος θεοῦ : VI. Mos. i. 112n δανείζεσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 183n δέ : IX. Hyp. 7. 5n δεῖν : VIII. Virt. 29N
 δείξεις : V. Mut. 207N
 δεισιδαιμονία : V. Som. i. 230n & N, Mut. 138N δεξιότης : V. Fug. 31n & N, VI. Abr. 208n δεξιῶς : VI. Mos. ii. 291n δεύτερος πλοῦς : V. Som. i. 44N, VI. Abr. 123n δημιουργός : V. Som. ii. 187n δημοκρατία : III. Det. 176N, IV. Conf. 108n δῆμος : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82n & N διαβατήρια : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 145n & N διάγνωσις : IX. Flacc. 100n διάθεσις : II. Cher. 62n, Post. 36n διαιρετός : III. Agr. 134n & N διακόσμησις : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 208n & N διακύνπτειν : IX. Flacc. 144n διαλεκτική : IV. Congr. 18N διαλεληθότες σοφοί : III. Agr. 161N διάλογος : III. Ebr. 56N διανέμειν : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 183n, VIII. Spec. Leg.
 iv. 120n
 διανίστασθαι : IV. Mig. 206n & N διανόησις : III. Quod Deus 34N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- διάνοια : VII. Decal. 1N, IX. Flacc. 102n διάπυρος : V. Som. i. 22n & N διάστασις : I. Op. 120n
 διάστημα : IX. Aet. 4n διαφθείρειν : IV. Mig. 200n διαφωνεῖν : III. Ebr. 114-118N, IV. Conf. 56n, V. Mut.
     109n, VIII. Virt. 44n & N διδασκαλία : II. Sac. 5-7N, III. Sob. 38n δίδυμος : IV. Congr. 18N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 179n διεξενγμένα : III. Agr. 140fN διεξοδικός : IV. Congr. 30n διεστῶτα : II. Det. 49N διῦσχυρίζειν : IX. Hyp. 6. 6n δικαστήριον θεῖον : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 34n δίκη : IV. Quis Her. 161n, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 175n διόργημα : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 7n & N δις διὰ πασῶν : V. Som. ii. 27N δίχα : IV. Conf. 159n, Quis Her. 161n, VIII. Virt. 226n,
     IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 124n
 διχηλεῖν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 106N δόγματα : IV. Congr. 142n δόκιμος : V. Som. i. 202n δόξαι : VII. Decal. 4n δύναμις : IV. Conf. 187n, VI. Abr. 131n, VII. Spec. Leg.
     i. 48n, ii. 212n, X. Leg. 126n
 δυσθανατεῖν : VIII. Virt. 92n
- ἐβδομάς, -η : IV. Quis Her. 170n & N, V. Fug. 173n, Mut. 144n, 260n, VI. Mos. i. 205n, VII. Decal.
     158n & N, Spec. Leg. ii. 176n & N, VIII. Praem.
     154n & N, IX. Vit. Cont. 65n & N
 ἐβδοματικόν : VII. Decal. 162n ἐβδόματος : VII. Decal. 96N ἐγγράμματος : III. Plant. 10n & N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἐγγυμνάζεσθαι : IV. Congr. 141N ἐγκαλύπτειν : II. Sac. 21N ἐγκάρδιον πνεῦμα : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 6N ἐγκρίς : II. Det. 118N
 ἐγκύκλιος : III. Ebr. 51N, IV. Congr. 77n & N, VI.
     Mos. i. 23n
 ἐγχαράττειν : V. Mut. 200n ἔθνος : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 121n εἰ : V. Som. i. 91n, VIII. Virt. 187n εἰ μή : II. Gig. 41N, V. Fug. 70n, Som. ii. 88n εἶδησις : IV. Mig. 42N εἶδος : V. Fug. 11-13N
 εἶδωλον : V. Som. i. 153N εἰκόσι : VIII. Praem. 29n εἰκών : III. Ebr. 132N, V. Som. i. 74n, 75n, ii. 45n & N,
     VIII. Praem. 29n
 εἶλαρ : III. Ebr. 201n
 εἰμαρμένη, εἰρμός : V. Mut. 135n & N, IX. Aet. 75n εἰρήνη : IV. Conf. 46N εἰσάγω, εἰσαγωγεύς : IX. Flacc. 131n & N ἐκ κρίσεως : V. Mut. 106n ἐκ πολλοῦ τοῦ περιόντος : IX. Vit. Cont. 63n, X. Leg.
     137n ἐκδιαίτησις : III. Ebr. 21N ἐκεχειρία : IV. Conf. 165N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 42n,
     IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 123n
 ἐκλογή : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 157n ἐκμαγεῖον : IX. Aet. 15n
 ἐκούσιος : IV. Mig. 32N ἐκπύρωσις : IV. Quis Her. 228n & N, VII. Spec. Leg. i.
     208nn & N
 ἔλεγχος : II. Det. 24n, III. Quod Deus 125n, V. Fug.
     6n, 131n, VII. Decal. 87n, Spec. Leg. iii. 61n ἐλευθερία : X. Leg. 147n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἔλκυσμός : II. Cher. 69N
 ἐλπὶς : II. Det. 120N
 ἐμπαροινεῖν : IX. Flacc. 4n ἔμφασις : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 4n ἐμφέρεια : VIII. Virt. 4n ἐμφέρεσθαι : III. Plant. 151n, VII. Decal. 39n & N,
     Spec. Leg. i. 252n
 ἐμφορεῖσθαι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 113N ἐμψυχος νόμος : VI. Mos. ii. 4N ἐν : I. Leg. All. iii. 175N
 ἐν καλῶ : X. Leg. 338n ἐναντιότης : IX. Aet. 21N ἐναπομάττεσθαι : IX. Flacc. 141N ἐνδελέχεια : V. Som. i. 30N ἐνδιόλκον : IV. Quis Her. 304n ἐνέργεια : I. Leg. All. i. 79n, V. Mut. 164n ἐνεργήματα : X. Leg. 45n ἐνηχεῖν : V. Mut. 57n & N, VI. Mos. ii. 37n, VII. Spec.
     Leg. i. 65n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 49n ἐνθουσιᾶν : IV. Mig. 190n ἐνθουσιασμός : IV. Conf. 159n ἐνικόν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 84n ἐννοια : III. Quod Deus 34N, IX. Aet. 103n ἐνώω : see ἠνωμένα ἐνσπαθᾶν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 217n ἐνστασις : I. Leg. All. iii. 189N ἐντός : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 4n ἐντρυφᾶν : V. Som. ii. 55N ἐντυγχάνειν : X. Leg. 330n ἐνωσις : II. Det. 49N, IV. Conf. 69n ἐξαδιαφορεῖν, -ησις : IV. Quis Her. 253N, VII. Spec.
     Leg. ii. 46n
 ἐξαίρειν : III. Ebr. 39n ἐξαιρεῖσθαι : X. Leg. 147n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἐξάιρετος* : IV. Conf. 187n
ἐξευδιάζειν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 58n ἕξις : I. Leg. All. i. 79n, ii. 22N, II. Cher. 62n, III. Sob. 34N, IV. Quis Her. 137n, 242n, V. Fug. 177N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 254n, VIII. Praem. 48n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 26n, Aet. 86n
ἐξόδιος : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 211n
ἕξινος : III. Ebr. 95n
ἐξομοίωσις : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 188N
ἐπαγγέλλεσθαι, -ελμα : II. Post. 139N
ἐπάγειν : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 58n ἐπαγωγή : IX. Hyp. 7. 1n
ἐπακολουθεῖν : IX. Prov. 2. 45n
ἐπανόρθωσις : II. Gig. 38N
ἐπαποδύεσθαι : IX. Prov. 2. 12n
ἕπαρσις : VII. Decal. 142-146N
ἐπεμπίπτειν : X. Leg. 109n
ἐπερείδειν : V. Som. i. 158N
ἐπευωνίζειν : II. Cher. 123N, Gig. 39n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 37n, 121n
ἐπέχειν : IX. Aet. 79n
ἐπί : I. Leg. All. iii. 139n, 210n, V. Mut. 173n ἐπιβάσεις : I. Leg. All. iii. 188N ἐπιβολή : II. Post. 79N, IV. Congr. 143n, V. Mut. 160N, IX. Vit. Cont. 79n ἐπιγίνεσθαι : IX. Prov. 2. 45n
ἐπίγνωσις : VI. Mos. ii. 97n
ἐπιγράφεσθαι : X. Leg. 171n
ἐπιδικασία : VIII. Virt. 222n ἐπιθυμείν, -ία : II. Det. 120N, III. Ebr. 4n & N, IV. Mig. 155n, Quis Her. 225n, VII. Decal. 142n & N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 78n, 85N ἐπιθυμητικόν : I. Leg. All. i. 70N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 219n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἐπίκρισις : II. Sac. 139n
 ἐπιλάμπειν : VIII. Praem. 25n ἐπιμελητής : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 131n ἐπιμιξία : IX. Vit. Cont. 20n ἐπινεανεύεσθαι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 215n Ἐπινομίς : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 160n & N ἐπιорκεῖν : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 26n ἐπιπροσθεῖν : VII. Decal. 159n ἐπίσημος : IV. Mig. 79N, V. Fug. 11-13N, Som. i. 202n ἐπισπᾶσθαι : III. Ebr. 176N ἐπιστήμη : I. Leg. All. i. 60n & N, II. Post. 141N, III. Quod Deus 92n, IV. Congr. 141N, V. Som. i.
 47N, VI. Mos. ii. 97n, VII. Decal. 1N ἐπισυμβαίνειν : IX. Prov. 2. 45n ἐπισφραγίζεσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 14n, 176n ἐπίτασις : IV. Quis Her. 156N ἐπιτίθεσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 86n & N ἐπιτρέπειν : VI. Mos. i. 320n ἐπιφανής : X. Leg. 346n ἐπιφημίζειν : IX. Hyp. 7. 3n ἐπιφορεῖσθαι : II. Post. 149N ἐπιφράττειν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 88n ἐπιχειρονομεῖν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 215n ἐπιχρᾶν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 235n ἔπη : IX. Vit. Cont. 80n ἐπορθιάζειν : VI. Abr. 20n ἔπος εἰπεῖν, ὡς : IV. Quis Her. 12n, VII. Spec. Leg.
 ii. 63n
 ἐπουρίζειν : VI. Abr. 20n, Mos. i. 283n ἑπτά : IV. Conf. 137N ; see also s.v. ἑβδομάς ἐπώνυμος : VI. Abr. 10n ἐρανίζειν : V. Som. i. 95n ἔργα : IV. Mig. 167n & N, VII. Decal. 76n, Spec. Leg.
 ii. 170n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἐργάζεσθαι* : III. Agr. 21n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 78n, 229n
ἐργαστήριον φύσεως : IX. Aet. 66n, X. Leg. 56n ἐρμηνεία : II. Cher. 105N, Det. 39N, IV. Mig. 35N, V. Som. i. 205N, IX. Vit. Cont. 28n
ἔρως : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 85N, IX. Vit. Cont. 59N, 60n
ἔρωτᾶν : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 54n, Aet. 143n & N ἑρώτημα : II. Det. 57N, III. Agr. 140fN
ἑτέρα ληπτόν, οὐ τῆ : IV. Mig. 220n & N, V. Som. i. 8n ; see also II. Sac. 37
ἑτερήμερος ζωή : VII. Decal. 56N
ἑτερομήκης : I. Leg. All. i. 3N
ἔτι τοίνυν : VIII. Virt. 226n
ἔτυμον, -ως : IV. Conf. 137N, VI. Mos. i. 17n, ii. 105n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 73n & N, Vit. Cont. 2n εὐαρεστεῖν : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 219n εὐζωνος : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 128N εὐθύς : IX. Hyp. 6. 6n
εὐκαταφρόντιστος : V. Som. ii. 38N εὐκλεία : VIII. Virt. 10n
εὐλάβεια : II. Det. 120N, V. Fug. 25ffN, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 185N, IX. Prov. 2. 26n
εὐλογεῖν, εὐλογιστία : I. Leg. All. i. 17n, III. Sob. 18N, IV. Mig. 71n, V. Mut. 128n εὐλόγιστος : I. Leg. All. i. 17n εὐλογος : II. Sac. 12N, 13N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 185N εὐμενής : VIII. Virt. 125n
εὐνοία : III. Plant. 106N
εὐπάθεια : II. Sac. 103n, Det. 120N, IV. Mig. 119n, 219n, V. Mut. 1n, 167N, VI. Abr. 201n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 185N
εὐπάτριδες : II. Cher. 120n
εὐπλοία, -εῖν : V. Som. i. 44N, IX. Flacc. 31n
εὐρεσις : II. Cher. 105N, IV. Conf. 39n, Mig. 35N 500

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- εὐρημα : VIII. Virt. 8n
 εὐτελής : IV. Quis Her. 158n, V. Som. i. 6n εὐτόνως : II. Sac. 80N
 εὐφορεῖν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 23n εὐχαί : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 83N ἐφεδρεύειν : IX. Flacc. 5n ἐφημερευταί : IX. Vit. Cont. 66n ἐφιδρύσεις : I. Leg. All. iii. 188N, 189N ἐφιστάναι : IV. Conf. 96n ἔχειν κοινωνίαν : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 110n
- ζῆλος : IX. Hyp. 6. 4n
 ζήλωσις : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 82n ζωγραφεῖν, -os : I. Leg. All. i. 80n ζωτροφεῖν : IV. Mig. 210N
 ζῶσι νόμοις : V. Som. ii. 55N
- ἦ : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 34n ἦβᾶν : II. Cher. 114N, IV. Congr. 162n ἦβηδόν : V. Fug. 90n ἦγεμονικόν : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 6N ἦδονή : II. Det. 120N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 185N ἦθικόν : I. Leg. All. i. 57N, III. Ebr. 48N ἦθοποιός : III. Ebr. 48N ἦθος : II. Cher. 105N, IV. Congr. 54 (read 53) N, VI. Jos. 168n & N, Mos. ii. 256n, VII. Decal. 132n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 144n ἡμέρα : III. Ebr. 149n & N ἡμερος : III. Ebr. 149n & N, VIII. Praem. 8n, 60N ἡμιμόχθηρος : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 63ffN ἡνωμένα : II. Det. 49N, IV. Mig. 180N, V. Som. i. 128n ἡσυχία : V. Mut. 242n & N ἦττον : VIII. Praem. 135n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- θανατᾶν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 102nn & N, VIII. Virt.
     34n θεμέλιος : IV. Quis Her. 116n θέμις : III. Quod Deus 165n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 198n θεός : VII. Decal. 176n, Spec. Leg. i. 28n & N θεός, τίθημι : IV. Conf. 137N, V. Fug. 97n, Mut. 29n, VI. Abr. 121n, Mos. ii. 99n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 307n θεοφιλής : VIII. Virt. 179n θεσμοθέτης : IV. Quis Her. 167n θεσμός : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 3N θεσμωνδός : IX. Hyp. 7. 14n θεσπιζεσθαι : VI. Abr. 262n, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 125n θεωρήματα : IV. Congr. 142n θεωρητικός : I. Leg. All. i. 57N θήτες : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 81n, VIII. Virt. 122n & N θυματήριον : VI. Mos. ii. 105n θυμικόν : I. Leg. All. i. 70N θυμός : IV. Quis Her. 225n θυσιαστήριον : VI. Mos. ii. 105n, VII. Spec. Leg. i.
     290n

 ἰδέα : II. Det. 39N, III. Ebr. 134n & N, IV. Mig. 49N, V. Som. ii. 45n & N, VI. Mos. ii. 114N, VII. Spec.
     Leg. i. 48n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 129n, 161n, IX. Quod. Omn. Prob. 3n, Vit. Cont. 29n ἰδίαν : VIII. Praem. 44n ἴδιος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 60n, IX. Prov. 2. 8n ἰδίως ποιόν : IX. Aet. 48nn & N, Prov. 2. 8n ἰδρῦσθαι : IV. Mig. 160N
 ἰδρῶτες, ξηροὶ : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 91n ἱερὰ γραμμὴ : V. Som. ii. 119N ἱερᾶς ἥρξατο, ἀφ' : V. Som. ii. 119n & N, X. Leg. 22n, 108n
 ἱεροὶ ἀγῶνες : V. Mut. 106N, VI. Abr. 48n 502

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἱερομηνία* : VI. Mos. ii. 23n, VII. Decal. 159n & N,
Spec. Leg. i. 180n
ἱερόν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 171n & N ἱερωμένος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 96N
ἴνα : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 155n, 217n, IX. Vit. Cont. 16n ἰσότης : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 231n & N, 237N
ἰσχύειν : IX. Hyp. 6. 6n

καθάπαξ : VI. Abr. 51N
καθαρός : VI. Mos. ii. 34n, 72n
καθάρσις : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 111n
καθήκειν, -οντα : I. Leg. All. i. 56n, III. Quod Deus 100N, IV. Mig. 54N, Quis Her. 191n, VI Mut. 47N καθιέντες πείρας : VIII. Virt. 34n & N
καθυποκρίνειν : IX. Flacc. 72n καιρός : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 56n & N, VIII. Spec. Leg.
 iv. 213n, IX. Flacc. 165n
κακία : IV. Quis Her. 241n, Congr. 54N
κακοτεχνία : V. Mut. 150N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 101n κάκωσις : VIII. Praem. 146n, 160n
καλεῖν : I. Leg. All. ii. 16N, 44N καλόν, τὸ : II. Det. 9N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 318n & N,
 ii. 73N
καλός : IX. Hyp. 6. 2n, X. Leg. 234n, 338n
καλὸς καὶ ἀγαθός : I. Op. 136n
κάλυμμα : VI. Mos. ii. 87n
καλῶς : IV. Mig. 181n
κάμινος : III. Ebr. 73n
κανών : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 115n
καρποῦσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 1n
κατά : IV. Mig. 39n, Quis Her. 241n
κατὰ δαίμονα : IX. Hyp. 6. 1n
κατὰ μέρος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 108n, cf. 226n
κατὰ πλάτος : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 188n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- κατὰ σελήνην : VII. Decal. 96N
 καταβολαί : IV. Quis Her. 115N, VI. Mos. i. 279n κατακορής : I. Leg. All. ii. 67N, V. Som. ii. 4n καταλαμβάνειν : IV. Congr. 130n καταληπτός, -ικός : IV. Quis Her. 132n & N κατάληψις : IV. Congr. 141n & N καταλλαγή : VI. Mos. ii. 60n κατασκευή, -άζειν : IX. Prov. 2. 2n κατασκήπτειν : IX. Vit. Cont. 2n καταστηματικός : I. Leg. All. iii. 160n καταστρατηγεῖν : IX. Flacc. 102n κατάχρησις : II. Cher. 121N κατευνάζειν : VI. Mos. ii. 255n κατηγορήματα : III. Agr. 140fN κατορθοῦν : III. Quod Deus 100N κατορθώματα : I. Leg. All. i. 56n, III. Quod Deus 100N, IV. Mig. 54N, V. Mut. 47N κατόρθωσις : X. Leg. 45n κηραίνειν : IX. Prov. 2. 8n & N κίνησις : II. Post. 79N, III. Quod Deus 44N, Agr. 142N, Sob. 34N, IV. Congr. 25n, VI. Abr. 27n, VII. Decal.
 142-146N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 79n κληδών : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 60n κλήρος : V. Som. i. 159n, VIII. Virt. 189n, Praem. 54n κλίνη, κλινάρχης : IX. Flacc. 136fn & N κλοποφορεῖν : I. Leg. All. iii. 20n κοινωνία : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 110n κολάπτειν : II. Sac. 21N κομᾶν, κόμη : III. Quod Deus 88n & N κόμμα : V. Som. i. 123n κομψεύειν : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 244n κονιέσθαι : IX. Prov. 2. 12n κόρη : I. Leg. All. ii. 67N, iii. 171n κόριον : I. Leg. All. iii. 171n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- κόρος : I. Leg. All. iii. 7N κοσμοπολίτης : I. Op. 3N, 142N, IV. Conf. 106N, VI. Jos. 29n
 κόσμος : I. Op. 3n, Leg. All. i. 1n, III. Ebr. 30n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 210n, 237n κουρίδιος : VIII. Virt. 222n κράτος ἀρχῆς : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 16n κρῖνον, κρινόμενον : III. Ebr. 172N κρίσις : I. Leg. All. ii. 6N, iii. 116n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 36n κτᾶσθαι : III. Ebr. 31N κτῆμα : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 22n κυκλοφορητικός : IV. Quis Her. 283N κυφορεῖν : V. Mut. 252n κύριον ὄνομα : V. Mut. 12fn & N, VI. Mos. ii. 38N, VIII. Praem. 111n & N
 κύριος : VII. Decal. 176n
 κωφός : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 197n
- λαμπάδιον : I. Op. 148N, IV. Quis Her. 218N
 λάχανα : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 156n λέγειν : VIII. Praem. 79n, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 8n λείος : II. Post. 79N, III. Agr. 142N, IV. Congr. 25n λείπεσθαι : IX. Flacc. 124n λείχων, λοχῶν : IV. Mig. 144n λεκτόν : III. Agr. 139n
 λῆμμα : V. Mut. 126n
 ληπτόν, οὐ τῆ ἑτέρα : IV. Mig. 220n & N, V. Som. i. 8n λιθο-, λινογραφεῖν : IX. Prov. 2. 17n λιπαίνειν : IX. Vit. Cont. 36n & N
 λιποτάξιον : II. Cher. 32N λογεῖον : VI. Mos. ii. 112n λογικόν : I. Leg. All. i. 57N, 70N λογικός : V. Fug. 177N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 83n, 103n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- λογισμός : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 228N λογιστικόν : II. Sac. 136N
 λόγος : I. Op. 43N, Leg. All. i. 19n, iii. 116n, II. Sac. 82N, Post. 108N, Gig. 52N, III. Plant. 52n, Ebr. 70N, 157n & N, IV. Conf. 28n, 41n, Mig. 95n, 102n, 178n, Quis Her. 225n, V. Fug. 92n, 95n, 101n, Som. i. 1fN, 72n, 74n, 75nn, 112n, 116n, 186n & N, ii. 45N, 183n, 300N, VI. Mos. i. 95n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 321N, X. Leg. 55n λοιπόν : IV. Quis Her. 121n λοχαγός : VI. Mos. i. 317n λύπη : II. Det. 120N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 185N λύρα : III. Quod Deus 24N λύχνος : IV. Quis Her. 218N

 μαθήματα : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 165n, VIII. Virt. 212n, Praem. 58n μαιευτικός : IV. Quis Her. 247n μακρόθεν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 63n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 104N μαντική : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 100N μαρτυρεῖν : IV. Conf. 141N, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 61n μάτην : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 253n μάττεσθαι : VIII. Virt. 24n, IX. Flacc. 141N μεγαλόπολις : VI. Jos. 29n μέγιστον : II. Post. 16n & N μεθαρμόσασθαι, μεθορμίσασθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 51n μεθύειν : III. Plant. Introd. p. 309 & nn, V. Fug. 32n μειονεκτεῖσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 168n μέλαν : VI. Abr. 10n μελετᾶν ἀποθνήσκειν : II. Det. 34n & N, Gig. 14N, IV. Quis Her. 292n μέρος, κατὰ : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 108n, 226n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- μετακαλείσθαι : V. Som. i. 186-188N, VIII. Praem.
 44N μετανάστασις : VI. Abr. 77n μετανίστασθαι : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 128n μετάρσιος : II. Cher. 4n μετατιθέναι : VI. Abr. 17N μεταφράζειν : VI. Mos. ii. 38n μετέωρος : II. Cher. 4n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 219n μέτοικος : VIII. Virt. 105n
 μέτρα : V. Som. i. 205N μετριοπαθεῖν : VI. Abr. 257N μέχρι : VIII. Praem. 94n μηλόβοτος : IX. Vit. Cont. 14n μητρνία : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 20n μηχανή : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 28n & N μῆξις : IV. Conf. 184-187N μισάλληλος : IV. Conf. 48n μνήμαι : V. Som. ii. 26n μόγις : VIII. Praem. 37n μοναστήριον : IX. Vit. Cont. 25n & N
 μουσική : III. Plant. 10N, IV. Congr. 9n, 16n μύδροι : V. Som. i. 22n & N μυθεύειν : VIII. Praem. 136n μυθικός : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 59n μῦθος : IV. Congr. 61n μυρία : III. Quod Deus 14n & N μυστήρια : II. Cher. 49N, Sac. 62N, VI. Mos. i. 62n μῶμος : V. Mut. 26n

 νάσσειν : V. Mut. 200n νεώτεροποιῖα : III. Sob. 6n νηφάλια : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 191n & N, IX. Vit. Cont.
 74n νόησις : III. Quod Deus 34N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- νόμμος* : II. Det. 16N, V. Mut. 114N
νομοί : VI. Jos. 157n
νόμος : II. Sac. 71n, III. Quod Deus 53N, Ebr. 142N, V. Som. ii. 55N, VI. Abr. 5N, Mos. ii. 4N, VIII.
Praem. 55N
νουθεσία : IV. Congr. 160n & N
νοῦς : IV. Conf. 111N, Quis Her. 225n, V. Som. i. 30N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 1n, IX. Vit. Cont. 78n

ξηροὶ ἰδρωῶτες : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 91n

ὄγκος : III. Ebr. 221N, X. Leg. 14n
οἶεσθαι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 190n οἰκεῖος, -ως : II. Cher. 20n, III. Quod Deus 44N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 80n, IX. Flacc. 168n
οἰκήτωρ : II. Gig. 21n
οἰκονομία, -ικός : V. Som. i. 205N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
 188 (read 187) N, VIII. Virt. 208n & N
οἶκος : IV. Mig. 3n, V. Som. i. 182n
οἰκόσιτος : III. Agr. 73N
οἶνοφλυγεῖν : III. Ebr. 27n
ὄλισθος : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 153n ὄλκῃ, ὄλκός : IV. Mig. 202n, Quis Her. 304n, Congr.
 113n
ὄλοστός : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 52n & N ὄλύμπιος, -ακός : III. Agr. 119N ; cf. IX. Vit. Cont.
 42n
ὅμοιος : V. Mut. 42n, IX. Praem. 90n
ὅμορα : VIII. Praem. 90n
ὄν : I. Leg. All. iii. 175N
ὄνειδίξειν : IX. Flacc. 153n
ὄνομα : III. Sob. 52n, V. Fug. 16n & N, Mut. 12fn & N, VI. Mos. ii. 38N, VIII. Praem. 111N
ὄνος : II. Sac. 112n
 508

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ὄρᾶν : I. Op. 37n
 ὄρεξις : VII. Decal. 142-146N
 ὄρισμός : V. Som. i. 101N ὄρκισμός : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 26n ὄρμη : I. Leg. All. i. 30N, III. Quod Deus 44N, V. Mut. 160N ὄρμίσκος : V. Som. ii. 44n ὄρος : I. Op. 37n, 102N, III. Plant. 3n, VII. Decal. 27n ὄρουσις : V. Mut. 160N
 ὄσιος : VI. Jos. 95n, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 89n ὀσιότης : V. Mut. 12N
 ὄσον : IX. Flacc. 90n
 οὐκέτι : III. Agr. 134n οὐρανός : I. Op. 37n, III. Plant. 3n, VII. Decal. 16n οὐσία : III. Quod Deus 46N, IV. Quis Her. 283N οὕτως : III. Quod Deus 27N, IV. Congr. 135n, V. Fug. 146n ὄφελος, οὐκ : VIII. Virt. 31n ὄφθαλμός : X. Leg. 173n ὄφρυκολάπτῃς : II. Sac. 21N ὀχεῖσθαι : III. Plant. 3N ὄχλος : III. Quod Deus 2n, IV. Quis Her. 56n, IX. Flacc. 95n ὄψις : III. Quod Deus 46N, IX. Prov. 2. 31n

 παγκάλως : IV. Mig. 101n παγκρατιάζειν : II. Det. 32n πάθος : I. Leg. All. ii. 6N, iii. 116n, II. Cher. 105N, Sac. 80N, Det. 120N, VI. Abr. 27n, VII. Decal. 142-146N, Spec. Leg. ii. 36n, 185N, iii. 80n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 79n παιδαγωγός : V. Mut. 217N παιδεία : II. Sac. 57N, V. Fug. 177N, Som. i. 47N, VI. Mos. i. 23n, X. Leg. 310n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- παῖς : II. Cher. 73n
 παλιγγενεσία : II. Cher. 114N
 πάλιν : IV. Mig. 160n
 παλινωδία : X. Leg. 373n πάμμουσον : III. Plant. 129N πάνθειον : IV. Quis Her. 75N παντέλεια : VI. Abr. 244n & N, Mos. ii. 79n, VII. Decal. 20n
 πάνυ : X. Leg. 274n
 πάππος ἐπιστήμης : V. Som. i. 47N; cf. II. Sac. 43n,
 III. Quod Deus 92n
 παρά : II. Sac. 123N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 110n παράδειγμα : III. Quod Deus 32N, V. Som. i. 75n, ii. 45N παραιτέισθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 70n, X. Leg. 327n παρακινεῖν : III. Ebr. 146N παρακολουθεῖν : IX. Prov. 2. 45n & N παρανάλωμα : IX. Flacc. 12n παραπέμπειν : VIII. Virt. 223n παρασκευή : IX. Hyp. 11. 4n παρασυμβάματα : III. Agr. 140fN παρασυνημμένα : III. Agr. 140fN παρασύρειν : X. Leg. 363n παράτασις, -τικός : IV. Quis Her. 17n & N παρατρέφεσθαι : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 34n παραύξεισι : IV. Congr. 106n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 212n
 & N παραφράζειν : VI. Mos. ii. 38n παρεισέρχεσθαι : IV. Mig. 24N παρεμφαίνειν : V. Mut. 207N παρεργολαβεῖν : IV. Congr. 148n πάροικος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 120n παροίνιος : III. Ebr. 95n παρρησία : IX. Flacc. 4n πάσχειν ἀρετήν : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 27nn

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- πατεῖν* : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 59n
πατρίς : X. Leg. 158n
πέτρα : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 121n, Virt. 34n & N πέισμα : V. Fug. 42n & N
πέμπτη οὐσία : III. Quod Deus 46N, IV. Quis Her.
 283N
πεντηκοστός : II. Det. 64N
περαιουῖσθαι, περατοῦσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 177n περίαπτα : V. Mut. 114n
περιγίνεσθαι : X. Leg. 320n
περιεκτικόν : IV. Congr. 149N
περιέχεσθαι : VIII. Virt. 167n περίνοια : IV. Congr. 107n & N περιπέρεσθαι : VIII. Praem. 20n
περιπολεῖν : V. Som. i. 119n
περιρραντήρια : II. Cher. 96n, III. Quod Deus 3N
περίστασις : II. Post. 108N
περιττός : II. Sac. 50N, III. Agr. 43N
πέσσειν : II. Sac. 62n
πεύσις : II. Det. 57N
πήξις : III. Agr. 160N
πιαίνεσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 91N
πίλημα : III. Quod Deus 78N, V. Som. i. 22N
πιστός : I. Leg. All. iii. 228n πλάσμα : II. Sac. 17N, IV. Congr. 61nn, VIII. Spec.
Leg. iv. 59n
πλάτος, κατὰ : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 188n πλείστα : IX. Flacc. 46n, X. Leg. 10n
πλεονασμόν, κατὰ : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 80N
πλεονεξία : VI. Mos. ii. 186n
πληγή : VI. Mos. i. 304n & N
πληροῦν τὰς χεῖρας : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 79N πλήρωμα : VI. Abr. 268n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 213n,
 IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 128n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- πλήττειν* : III. Quod Deus 84N
πλοῦς : V. Som. i. 44N, VI. Abr. 123n, IX. Flacc. 31n
πλούτος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 25n & N, VIII. Virt. 6n, IX. Vit. Cont. 17n
πλωτά : V. Som. ii. 143n
πνεῖν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 50n, Virt. 171n, IX. Flacc.
 124n
πνεῦμα : IV. Quis Her. 242n, V. Fug. 134N, VII. Spec.
Leg. i. 6N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 26n πνευματικός : IV. Quis Her. 242n, VIII. Praem. 48n,
 IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 26n
πνίγος : VIII. Praem. 133n
ποιεῖσθαι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 190n
ποίημα : II. Sac. 17N, IV. Congr. 61nn
ποιητικός : I. Leg. All. i. 57N, V. Fug. 26N
ποικίλος : V. Som. i. 202n
ποῖος : II. Cher. 114N, V. Fug. 11-13N, Mut. 121nn &
 N, IX. Aet. 48nn & N
πολιτεία : X. Leg. Intro. p. xxvii n
πολιτικός : II. Det. 135N
πολίτης : IV. Conf. 151N
πολὸν πρότερον : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 101n, IX. Flacc. 10n, X. Leg. 115n
πολύηλος : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 109n & N
πολυψηφία : X. Leg. 149n
πόνος : II. Sac. 112n, IV. Mig. 224n
πόρνος, -εύειν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 37fN πόρρωθεν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 63n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv.
 104N
ποσθένης : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 4n
πότιμοι λόγοι : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 321N
πράγματα : IV. Conf. 21n, Quis Her. 242N
πραγματολογεῖν : V. Som. i. 230n & N πρακτικός : I. Leg. All. i. 57N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- πρεσβεύεσθαι, -τής* : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 74nn & N πρεσβύτατος : III. Quod Deus 108N
πρεσβυτικός : V. Mut. 48n
πρό : IX. Prov. 2. 25n
πρὸ μικροῦ : VIII. Praem. 170n, X. Leg. 327n
προαγωγή : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 30n & N προαγωνιστής : VIII. Praem. 59n
προαίρεσις : IX. Vit. Cont. 2N, 29n, Hyp. 11. 2n πρόβατον : I. Leg. All. iii. 165n, II. Sac. 112n, IV. Congr. 106n, V. Mut. 111n, Som. i. 198n πρόβλητος : VI. Jos. 219n & N
προεστῶσα ἀρχή : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 125n & N προκόπτειν : II. Sac. 5-7N
πρόληψις : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 46N
προπύλαια : VI. Mos. ii. 92n πρός : I. Leg. All. iii. 167n, V. Mut. 28N, VI. Abr. 51N, IX. Hyp. 7. 11n
προσάναμάττεσθαι : IX. Flacc. 141N
προσβάλλειν : V. Fug. 113n
προσβολή : VIII. Virt. 122n
προσεγχεῖν : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 58n
προσεπιβαίνειν : III. Ebr. 95N
προσέρχεσθαι, προσετέον : II. Gig. 34n προσεχής : IV. Conf. 85n προσήλυτος : VI. Jos. 219n, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 51n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 177n, Virt. 103n, 105n, Praem. 152n
προσθήκη : VII. Decal. 106N
προσιέσθαι : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 119n πρόσκαιρος : VIII. Praem. 133n
προσκύνησις : X. Leg. 116n
προστάττειν, προστιθέναι : VII. Decal. 106N πρότερον : V. Som. ii. 140n & N ; cf. II. Cher. 114N ;
 see also πολὸν πρότερον

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- πρόφασις* : V. Som. i. 128n, IX. Vit. Cont. 66n
πρωτογενῆ : IV. Quis Her. 118n
πτοία : VII. Decal. 142-146N, VIII. Praem. 148n
πυκνός : V. Som. i. 22N
πυνθάνεσθαι : III. Quod Deus 92N
πυρίγονος : II. Gig. 7N
πυρφόρος : VI. Mos. i. 179n
πύσμα : II. Det. 57N, III. Agr. 140fN
- ραϊψωδία* : IX. Vit. Cont. 17N
ρέυμα : IX. Prov. 2. 18n & N
ρήματα : IV. Mig. 48fn & N, 80n
ρητορική : V. Som. i. 205N
ροπή : IX. Flacc. 165n
ρύεις, ρύσις : V. Fug. 191N
ρυθμοί : V. Som. i. 205N
- σεβασμός* : IV. Conf. 137N
σειρομάστης : II. Post. 182n, III. Ebr. 73n, V. Mut. 108n
σελήνην, κατὰ : VII. Decal. 96N σιαγών, σείω : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 147n σκηρίπτεσθαι : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 23n
σοφός : IV. Conf. 137N
σπαθᾶν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 217n σπέρματα, -ικός : IV. Quis Her. 115N, X. Leg. 55n σπονδή, -αί : III. Ebr. 208N, VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 96n, IX. Vit. Cont. 41n
στάσις : V. Som. i. 28N
στείρα, στερρά : III. Quod Deus 13n
στερέωμα : IV. Conf. 96n
στήλη : V. Som. i. 244N
στιβάς : V. Som. ii. 56n
στοιχεία : IV. Quis Her. 282n
στοχασμός : IX. Aet. 2n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- στρατηγία, -ός : VI. Jos. 3n & N
 συγγένεια : IV. Congr. 177n σύγκρισις : VI. Jos. 158n σύγκριτος : II. Cher. 114N
 συγκροτεῖν, -οὔσθαι : III. Agr. 35n, VI. Mos. i. 310n συλλαμβάνειν : IV. Congr. 126n σύλλογοι : III. Quod Deus 111N συμβάματα : III. Agr. 140fN συμβολοκοπεῖν : III. Ebr. 14N συμπάθεια : IV. Mig. 180N συνέδριον : V. Som. i. 193n συνημμένα : II. Det. 49N, III. Agr. 140fN συνιστάναι : IX. Vit. Cont. 90n σύννοια : IX. Flacc. 99n συντέλεια, -ικός : IV. Quis Her. 17n & N σύστασις : X. Leg. 312n συστήματα : V. Som. i. 28N σφαδάζειν : IX. Flacc. 162n & N σφαιρούσθαι : IV. Quis Her. 14N σφακελίζειν : VIII. Praem. 143nn σχέδην : VII. Decal. 31n, IX. Vit. Cont. 77n σχέσις : III. Sob. 34N, VII. Decal. 31n σχῆμα : IX. Prov. 2. 18nn & N σώματα καὶ πράγματα : IV. Conf. 21n, Quis Her.
     242N
 σωματίον : X. Leg. 273n σωφρονιστής : IV. Mig. 116n

 ταμιεύεσθαι : VIII. Virt. 152n ταξίαρχος : VI. Mos. i. 317n τάξις : II. Cher. 105N, IV. Mig. 35N, V. Som. i. 205N,
     IX. Vit. Cont. 11n
 τάσις : V. Som. i. 28N
 ταύτη : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 210n ; cf. V. Mut. 129n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- τέλεια* : III. Agr. 140fN
τελείν, -εῖσθαι : V. Som. ii. 144n, VI. Mos. i. 62n
τελειότης : V. Mut. 12N
τελεσφόρος : VII. Spec. Leg. 319n τελευταίον : VI. Jos. 249n, VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 23n
τέλος : IV. Mig. 139nn
τέμνειν : IV. Quis Her. 167n, V. Mut. 179n
τερθρεία : II. Cher. 42N
τέφρα : V. Som. i. 214n & N τέχνη, -αι : II. Sac. 37N, Post. 130n, 141N, III. Ebr. 88N, IV. Mig. 167N, Quis Her. 156N, VI. Mos. ii. 211n, IX. Vit. Cont. 16n
τί : I. Leg. All. ii. 16N, iii. 175N
τιθέναι : see θεός, τίθημι τιμή : III. Quod Deus 169n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 260n
τόκος : VIII. Virt. 82n
τονικῶς : II. Post. 30N
τόνος : II. Sac. 37N, 68N, 80N, IV. Quis Her. 242n, VIII. Praem. 48n
τόπος : V. Fug. 75N, Som. i. 53n, 182n τοῦτο : V. Mut. 129n ; cf. VII. Spec. Leg. i. 210n τραγωδία : V. Mut. 114n
τρανός : V. Mut. 108n
τρέπειν, -εσθαι : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 123n, X. Leg. 119n
τρίκλινα : IX. Vit. Cont. 49n & N
τροπή, -αί : I. Leg. All. ii. 83-87N, VII. Spec. Leg. i. 34n τροπός : III. Agr. 114N
τυγχάνοντα : V. Mut. 77N
τυπωδέστερον : VIII. Praem. 67n τύπωσις : I. Leg. All. i. 30N, IV. Mig. 5N τυφλός : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 25N τυφοπλαστεῖν : X. Leg. 153n 516

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

τῦφος : III. Ebr. 95N, IV. Mig. 160N, V. Som. ii. 140n, VIII. Virt. 17n & N, IX. Vit. Cont. 39nn

τύχη : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 153n

ὑγίεια : III. Quod Deus 57N

ὑλη : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 209n

ὑπάργυρος : IV. Congr. 159n & N

ὑπαρκτά : IV. Mig. 94n & N

ὑπάρχειν : X. Leg. 86n ὑπάρχοντα : IV. Mig. 94n & N

ὑπερβατόν : V. Mut. 13n & N

ὑπηγεῖν : V. Som. i. 164N, VI. Jos. 110n, VII. Spec.
Leg. ii. 80n, X. Leg. 245n

ὑπνος : I. Leg. All. iii. 183n

ὑπο- : IV. Congr. 159N

ὑπὸ γαστέρα, τὰ : V. Som. i. 122n

ὑπὸ πόδας χωρεῖν : VI. Mos. i. 270n ὑπογάμιον : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 72n & N

ὑπόδρομος, -δράμη : IV. Conf. 70N

ὑπόθεσις : VI. p. 611n

ὑπόκρισις : II. Cher. 105N, IV. Mig. 35N

ὑπομένειν : IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 122n

ὑπόμνησις : IX. Vit. Cont. 78N

ὑπομονή : V. Mut. 197N

ὑπόνοια : V. Mut. 62n & N

ὑποτίμησις : IX. Hyp. 7. 1n ὑποτρέχειν : IV. Conf. 70N

ὑποτροπιάζειν : IX. Flacc. 153n

ὑπόχρυσος : IV. Congr. 159n & N

ὑφεις : I. Leg. All. iii. 183n ὑφίεναι : V. Som. ii. 140n & N φαιδρύνειν : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 269n φαίνειν : I. Leg. All. i. 82n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- φαντασία* : I. Leg. All. i. 30N, III. Quod Deus 41n, IV. Mig. 5N, Quis Her. 132n & N, VI. Abr. 131n
φάντασμα : II. Cher. 69N
φαρμακός : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 93fnn, IX. Vit. Cont. 40n φέρειν : IV. Quis Her. 36n, V. Mut. 192n, VIII. Spec.
Leg. iv. 2n
φεύγειν : V. Fug. 118n ; see φυγή
φθάνειν : IX. Prov. 1n
φιλάλληλος : VIII. Virt. 69n φιλανθρωπία : VIII. Gen. Introd. p. xi n φιλεῖν : IV. Quis Her. 41n
φιλοσοφία : IV. Congr. 79N, IX. Quod Omn. Prob. 43n
φιλοτιμία : X. Leg. 166n, 299n
φιλοφρονεῖσθαι : IX. Flacc. 113n φόβος : II. Det. 120N, VII. Decal. 142-146N, Spec.
Leg. ii. 185N
φορεῖσθαι : IV. Conf. 198n & N, VIII. Praem. 130n
φράσις : V. Som. i. 205N
φράττειν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 88n φρόνησις, φρόνιμος, φρονῶν : I. Leg. All. i. 80N φυγαδευτήριον : IX. Flacc. 159n φυγή : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 121n, 131n, VIII. Praem.
 117n, IX. Flacc. 159n ; see φεύγειν
φυλή : VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 82N
φύραμα : II. Sac. 108n
φύρειν : IV. Conf. 198N
φυσικός : I. Leg. All. i. 57N, iii. 61n, VI. Abr. 99n & N ;
cf. Mos. ii. 216n, IX. Vit. Cont. 40n
φυσιολογία : I. Leg. All. i. 60n & N ; cf. iii. 61n,
 VI. Abr. 99n
φύσις : III. Sob. 38n, VI. Mos. ii. 216n, VII. Decal.
 76n, 142-146N, Spec. Leg. i. 254n, iii. 180n, VIII. Virt. 6n, IX. Vit. Cont. 17n, 28n, Aet. 66n,
 X. Leg. 56n

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- φωνασκείν : IX. Flacc. 138n
 φωνή : IV. Mig. 51n
 φωτίζω, -ισμός : IV. Congr. 106n
- χαλεπός : VII. Decal. 142n, VIII. Virt. 152n χαμαίζηλος : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 1n χαρά : II. Det. 120N, VII. Spec. Leg. ii. 185N χαρακτήρ : V. Mut. 62N
 χαράττειν : IX. Vit. Cont. 29n χαριέστερος : IX. Prov. 2. 54nn χάρις : III. Quod Deus 108N χείλος : IV. Conf. Introd. p. 3n χειροδοτεῖν, -ετέιν : V. Som. i. 129n χειρόκμητος : IX. Aet. Introd. p. 175n χειροποίητος : V. Mut. 26n χέρσος : VII. Spec. Leg. i. 335n χίδρα : II. Sac. 76n
 χλαῖνα : IX. Vit. Cont. 38nn χορεύειν : IV. Quis Her. 310N χρᾶν : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 235n χρεώδης : VI. Mos. i. 124n
 χρήμα : X. Leg. 215n χρηματίζω : II. Cher. 115N, VI. Mos. ii. 184n, VIII. Virt. 192n χρηστός : VIII. Virt. 182n χρώματα : IV. Congr. 77N ; cf. III. Quod Deus 123n χρώς : III. Quod Deus 123n χωρεῖν : IV. Quis Her. 241n, VI. Mos. i. 270n χωρίον : VI. Jos. 110n
- ψευδοπροφήτης : VIII. Spec. Leg. iv. 51n
 ψηλάφημα : V. Mut. 126n ψυχή : IV. Mig. 5n & N, Quis Her. 125n, 225n, V. Som. i. 30N

INDEX TO GREEK WORDS

- ἄγγυος : III. Quod Deus 154n
ἄρατζειν : VII. Spec. Leg. iii. 39n ὡς εἶπέ τις : V. Som. ii. 245n, VIII. Virt. 88n ὡς ἔπος εἶπεν : IV. Quis Her. 12n, VII. Spec. Leg. ii.
63n ὡς ἔφηγν : IX. Aet. 119n
ὡσανεί : V. Mut. 28N
ὡσπερ . . . οὕτως : V. Fug. 146n

PHILO

SUPPLEMENT

I

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON GENESIS

TRANSLATED FROM THE ANCIENT ARMENIAN
VERSION OF THE ORIGINAL GREEK BY

RALPH MARCUS, Ph.D.

PROFESSOR OF HELLENISTIC CULTURE, UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS
LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD
MCMLIII

BS
1235
P<sub>5</sub> cop.1

79039

NOV 4 1953

Printed in Great Britain

PREFACE

PHILO'S Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin et Exodum presents a special problem of translation because all but a small portion of the Greek original—less than ten per cent if we disregard the paraphrastic citations in late writers—has been lost and because for the bulk of the work we must depend upon the ancient Armenian version published by Aucher in 1826.<sup>a</sup> This edition is based chiefly upon three mss., all of them from the thirteenth century, and in part upon two others of about the same date. The Armenian version itself seems to have been made in the fifth century.<sup>b</sup>

For various reasons we can be reasonably sure that the Armenian version has faithfully preserved Philo's meaning except in a few cases where the Greek text used by the translator was corrupt or ambiguous or unusually obscure. In the first place, the Armenian language is singularly well designed to reproduce the word-order, word-compounds and many of the idioms of Greek. In the second place, the literalness and consistency of the Armenian version are shown by the correspondences between it and the original Greek in several treatises of Philo which are extant in both languages. The same is true of the correspondences between the Armenian Quaestiones and the Greek fragments which are not paraphrastic. A third check on the accuracy of the Armenian version is to be found in the Armenian-Greek equivalents given by Avedikean, Siurmelean and

<sup>a</sup> J. B. Aucher, Philonis Judaei Paralipomena Armena : libri videlicet quatuor in Genesin, libri duo in Exodum, sermo unus de Sampsonē, alter de Jona, tertius de tribus angelis, etc., Venetiis, MDCCCXXVI.

<sup>b</sup> Id. pp. i-ii.

PREFACE

Aucher in their Armenian dictionary published in Venice in 1836 in two large volumes.

With the help of this material I have ventured to reconstruct many of the philosophical and religious terms used by Philo in passages which are no longer extant in Greek. These reconstructions are not all to be regarded as certain but most of them, I think, are probably correct. At the same time I have tried to improve upon Aucher's Latin translation of the Armenian version. A good many of the inaccuracies in his pioneer rendering are really the fault of the ancient Armenian translator. Others result from Aucher's failure to divine the Greek idiom underlying a literal Armenian rendering. In calling attention to Aucher's deficiencies I am in a sense repaying the great debt I owe him for helping me to see the meaning of many a difficult passage. It would be ungrateful of me to let it appear that my knowledge of Armenian remotely approaches his.

To one of my students, Mr. Edward Hobbs, I am indebted for help in reading proof. To my friend Professor H. A. Wolfson, whose book on Philo is a fine contribution to knowledge, I owe several good suggestions about the solution of problems of Greek philosophy.

The firm of R. and R. Clark has, as always, been remarkably accurate in printing.

R. M.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

16 November 1951

CONTENTS OF SUPPLEMENT I

	PAGE
PREFACE . . . . .	v
INTRODUCTION . . . . .	ix
ABBREVIATIONS AND SYMBOLS . . . . .	xvii
LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS . . . . .	xix
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON GENESIS—
Book I . . . . .	2
Book II . . . . .	69
Book III . . . . .	175
Book IV . . . . .	265

Book 17
Book 16
Book 15
Book 14
Book 13
Book 12
Book 11
Book 10
Book 9
Book 8
Book 7
Book 6
Book 5
Book 4
Book 3
Book 2
Book 1

INTRODUCTION

I

PHILO'S Questions and Answers on Genesis and Exodus is, as its name indicates, a brief commentary in the form of questions and answers on the first two books of the Pentateuch, and in its form resembles Hellenistic (pagan) commentaries on the Homeric poems.

To each question concerning the meaning of a Biblical expression or verse Philo gives a twofold answer; one refers to the literal meaning (τὸ ῥητόν), and the other to the allegorical meaning (τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν,<sup>a</sup> τὸ συμβολικόν). The allegorical interpretation may be subdivided into three kinds: the physical (i.e. cosmological or theological), the ethical or psychological, and the mystical. Sometimes Philo's comment contains only one kind of allegorical interpretation, sometimes two, and occasionally all three.

Thus Philo's twofold method of interpretation is a forerunner of the fourfold method used by Rabbinic and Patristic commentators. His "literal" interpretation corresponds to the "literal" or "historical" interpretation of the Church Fathers and to the pešať of the Rabbis. His "physical" interpretation corresponds to the "allegorical" interpretation of the Church Fathers and to the remez of the Rabbis. His "ethical" interpretation corresponds to the "moral" interpretation of the Church Fathers and to the deraš of the Rabbis. His mystical interpretation corresponds to the "anagogical" interpretation of the Church Fathers and to the sod of the Rabbis.

<sup>a</sup> This is the literal equivalent of Armenian ar i mitsn, but Philo elsewhere uses τὸ ἐν ὑπονοίαις and other expressions.

INTRODUCTION

In his earlier work,<sup>a</sup> the Allegoriae or allegorical commentary on Genesis, which now consists of eighteen treatises in twenty-one books (about ten treatises have been lost, and some of the extant ones are incomplete), Philo allowed himself the luxury of long digressions and comparisons of the verses discussed with other passages in Scripture. The Quaestiones sticks more closely to the text and stays within a more limited area of ideas. On the other hand, there appears to be relatively more Pythagorean number-symbolism in the Quaestiones than in the Allegoriae. Possibly this indicates that Philo became more interested in this rather mechanical form of mysticism as he grew older.

II

Something must now be said about the original extent of the Quaestiones et Solutiones and the division into books of the treatises on Genesis and Exodus.

Massebieau and Schürer<sup>b</sup> have called attention to a passage (QG iv. 123) in which Philo says, "the principle of these things will be explained when we inquire into the blessings." This may be a reference either to Genesis ch. xlix or to Deuteronomy ch. xxxiii or to both. It is likely, however, that Philo refers only to the passage on blessings in Genesis, since Eusebius knew only of Questions and Answers on Genesis and Exodus (Hist. Eccl. ii. 18. 1, 5) and also because the Greek fragments preserved by Byzantine writers are, with two doubtful exceptions, all ascribed either to Genesis or Exodus.<sup>a</sup> We shall probably be safe in assuming either that Philo never wrote similar commentaries on the last three books of the Pentateuch or that, if he did, they were lost before the time of Eusebius.

<sup>a</sup> That the Quaestiones is later than the Allegoriae is indicated by the fact that in the former Philo occasionally refers to the larger commentary, e.g. in QG ii. 4, QE ii. 34, 113. Schürer (GJV iii, 3rd ed. 501) believes that the Quaestiones is partly earlier, partly later than the Allegoriae. That is possible.

<sup>b</sup> M. L. Massebieau, "Le Classement des œuvres de Philon," Bibl. de l'École des Hautes Études . . . sciences rel. 1 (1889), 1-91; Emil Schürer, Geschichte d. jüdischen Volkes, etc., 3rd ed. (Leipzig, 1898), iii. 497, n. 33.

INTRODUCTION

As for the original book-divisions of Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin, it is clear that there were originally six books instead of the four indicated in the Armenian version. This is shown by the fact that some of the Greek fragments are ascribed to books ε' and ζ' of QG and that six books are listed for QG in a Vienna codex of the De Opificio Mundi.<sup>b</sup>

But it is also clear that the Armenian version has preserved all six books of the original treatise. As Wendland<sup>c</sup> and other scholars have pointed out, Book IV of the Armenian QG is about as long as Books I, II and III together. It therefore probably contains Books IV, V and VI of the original QG. Since the end of Book IV reaches only Gen. xxviii. 9, it seems that Philo did not intend to treat the whole of Genesis.<sup>d</sup>

We can also tell with a fair degree of certainty just where in the present Book IV the beginnings of the original Books V and VI are to be placed. Since the Old Latin version begins with QG iv. 154 and since it extends through approximately a third of the book, it is probable that <sup>a</sup> J. Rendel Harris, Fragments of Philo Judaeus (Cambridge, 1886), p. 75, labels two fragments as "from the lost book of Questions on Leviticus," but only one of the two is said in the ms. (Cod. Vat. 1553, cited from Mai) to be ἐκ τῶν ἐν Λευϊτικῷ ζητημάτων. See also Schürer, op. cit. p. 497, n. 34.

<sup>b</sup> See L. Cohn in Cohn-Wendland, Philonis Opera, vol. i (Berlin, 1896), p. xxxvi.

<sup>c</sup> Paul Wendland, Neu entdeckte Fragmente Philos (Berlin, 1891), p. 92; see also Schürer, op. cit. p. 498, n. 35.

<sup>d</sup> In the Armenian version Book I covers Gen. ii. 4-vi. 13; Book II covers Gen. vi. 14-x. 9; Book III covers Gen. xv. 7-xvii. 27; Book IV covers Gen. xviii. 1-xx. 18 and xxiii. 1-xxviii. 9. Thus, beside the omission of single verses in all four books, the following entire chapters are omitted: i, xi-xiv, xxi-xxii, xxix-l.

INTRODUCTION

Book VI of the original treatise corresponded to QG iv. 154-245 (end).

As for the beginning of Book V, Wendland <sup>a</sup> would locate it between QG iv. 76 and QG iv. 99 because this would give a book about one-third the size of the Armenian Book IV and also because QG iv. 99 and 104 are ascribed to Book ε' in the Greek fragments. I think, however, that we should place the beginning of Book V at QG iv. 71 (on Gen. xxiii. 1), since this section begins with a new episode and also corresponds to the beginning of a new Pentateuch-lection in both the Palestinian triennial cycle (where it is Seder 19b <sup>b</sup>) and the Babylonian annual cycle (where it is Seder 5).

Thus we may suppose that the original book-divisions of the Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin were as follows :

Original Greek		Armenian Version
Book I	=	Book I
Book II	=	Book II
Book III	=	Book III
Book IV	=	Book IV. 1-70
Book V	=	Book IV. 71-153
Book VI	=	Book IV. 154-245

Somewhat similar but more complicated is the problem of the original extent and the book-divisions of the commentary on Exodus. The Armenian version has two books of unequal size. Book I covers Ex. xii. 2-23 in 25 pages of Aucher's edition, while Book II (aside from the first section on Ex. xx. 25) covers Ex. xxii. 21-xxviii. 34 (with the omission of several verses) in 80 pages. If we suppose that QE was divided into books of about the same length as those of QG, we must conclude that the present Book I is less than half of an original Book I or Book II, and that the present Book II is either a complete book or else contains parts of several of the original books.

<sup>a</sup> L.c.

<sup>b</sup> See Jacob Mann, The Bible as Read and Preached in the Old Synagogue, vol. i (Cincinnati, 1940), p. 183.

INTRODUCTION

When we turn to the external evidence, we find further complications. According to Eusebius (Hist. Eccl. ii. 18. 5), Philo's commentary on Exodus contained five books, but since he proceeds to mention a work περὶ τῆς ακηνῆς, which seems to be a reference to QE Book II, we ought perhaps not to rely too heavily upon his authority. The Vienna codex of De Opificio Mundi, mentioned above, lists the books of the QE as Books A' (with a line drawn through it), B' and E', leaving it in doubt whether the scribe knew of two books or three. The Greek fragments of QE preserved by Byzantine writers are usually ascribed to Books α' or β' or τοῦ τελευταίου.<sup>a</sup> If, then, Eusebius was right in counting five books, some of these must have been lost soon after his death. Wendland <sup>b</sup> believes that part of the original Book I has been preserved in the Armenian Book I but doubts that as many as three of the original five books have been lost, while Schürer <sup>c</sup> thinks that our Book I is the original Book II, and our Book II is the original Book V.

III

It may be that a clue to the original extent and book-divisions of QE will be furnished by the correspondences between the books of QG and the Pentateuch-lessons of the ancient synagogue. We must bear in mind that in Philo's time neither the Hebrew nor the Greek Bible was divided into chapters like those in our printed Bibles, and that these chapter-divisions date from the Middle Ages.<sup>d</sup>

It was natural for Philo to think of his Greek Pentateuch as divided into weekly lessons for reading in the synagogue, just as Origen did two centuries after Philo when he composed homilies on the Church-lessons. Now the Jews of Palestine in Philo's time, or soon after,<sup>e</sup> read the whole

<sup>a</sup> One Greek fragment is said to come from Book δ', but this is a corruption of α'.

<sup>b</sup> Op. cit. p. 103.

<sup>c</sup> Op. cit. p. 498, n. 36.

<sup>d</sup> See Henry B. Swete, An Introduction to the Old Testament in Greek (Cambridge, 1914), pp. 343-344.

<sup>e</sup> See Mann, op. cit. p. 5.

INTRODUCTION

Pentateuch in the course of three years, dividing it into 154 weekly lessons, called in Hebrew sedarim (sing. seder). Each lesson was, on the average, as long as one of our modern chapters. The Jews of Babylonia, however, read the whole Pentateuch in the course of a single year, dividing it into 54 weekly lessons. Each of these was, on the average, as long as three and a half of our modern chapters.

Unfortunately we do not know whether the Alexandrian Jews followed the Palestinian triennial system or the Babylonian annual system. One might assume the former on the ground of the close relations between Egypt and Palestine, but we must remember that lateral areas are more conservative than the central area of a culture. Moreover, it has been found that in certain points Philo's legal exegesis agrees with the Palestinian exegesis of the pre-Roman period rather than that of his Palestinian contemporaries. It is quite possible, therefore, that the Alexandrian Jews, like the Babylonian Jews, followed an annual system that may have been in use in Palestine also before the Hellenistic or Roman period.

At any rate, we find a remarkable agreement between the coverage of some of the books of Philo's commentary on Genesis (assuming our reconstructions, as given above, to be correct) and of the weekly lessons of the Babylonian annual system.

Books of QG (as reconstructed)	~	Babylonian sedarim
Book III on Gen. xv. 7- xvii. 27	~	3. ( lek-leka ) on Gen. xii. 1-xvii. 27.
Book IV on Gen. xviii. 1- xx. 18	~	4. ( wayyiqra ) on Gen. xviii. 1-xxii. 24.
Book V on Gen. xxiii. 1- xxv. 8	~	5. ( hayye Sarah ) on Gen. xxiii. 1-xxv. 18.
Book VI on Gen. xxv. 20- xxviii. 9	~	6. ( toledot ) on Gen. xxv. 19-xxviii. 9.

Books I and II together on Gen. ii. 4-x. 9 correspond to a single seder, Nr. 2 (Noah) on Gen. ii. 9-xi. 32.

INTRODUCTION

These correspondences, while not complete, are close enough, it seems to me, to warrant our supposing that Philo designed each book of his commentary on Genesis to cover a Pentateuchal portion of about the same length as a weekly lesson in the Babylonian annual cycle of 54 sedarim, and that each portion in his synagogal Bible began at just about the same place as did a Babylonian seder.

If we apply the same comparison to the two books of the commentary on Exodus, we see that Book I, covering Ex. xii. 2-23, corresponds to only part of the Babylonian seder, Nr. 15 (bo'), on Ex. xi-xiii. 16. Book II (if we ignore the isolated first section) covers Ex. xxii. 21-xxviii. 33. It therefore seems to contain parts of three successive sedarim:

18. (mišpaṭim) on Ex. xxi. 1-xxiv. 18.
19. (terumah) on Ex. xxv. 1-xxvii. 19.
20. (tešawweh) on Ex. xxvii. 20-xxx. 10.

It therefore seems justified to conclude that the present Book II of QE contains parts of the lost Books III, IV and V. Book I may preserve part of the lost Book I or the lost Book II. In any case, it is clear that the original treatise did not discuss more than a quarter of the Biblical book.

If the preceding hypothesis is sound (and there is room for doubt), it will serve to determine the original extent and book-divisions of the Quaestiones et Solutiones in Exodum, and at the same time will furnish at least some evidence that the Alexandrian Jews in Philo's time followed a system of weekly synagogue-readings of the Pentateuch very much like that used in ancient Babylonia and still in use to-day.

ABBREVIATIONS AND SYMBOLS

- Arm. = Armenian version of Quaestiones.
 Aucher = J. B. Aucher, Philonis Judaei Paralipomena, etc. (see Preface), Venice, 1826.
 A.V. = Authorized (King James) Version of the Bible.
 Colson = F. H. Colson in Loeb Philo, vols. i-ix.
 frag. = Greek fragment of Quaestiones (see Appendix A).
 Früchtel = Ludwig Früchtel, "Griechische Fragmente zu Philons Quaestiones, etc.," Zeit. f. Alttest. Wiss., N.F. 14 (1937), 108-115.
 Harris = J. Rendel Harris, Fragments of Philo Judaeus, Cambridge, 1896.
 Heb. = Hebrew Old Testament.
 Lewy = Hans Lewy, Neue Philontexte in der Uebersetzung des Ambrosius, etc., Berlin, 1932.
 lit. = literally.
 LXX = Septuagint or Greek Old Testament.
 OL = Old Latin version of Quaestiones in Genesis iv. 154-245 (see Appendix B).
 QE = Quaestiones et Solutiones in Exodum.
 QG = Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesis.
 Staehle = Karl Staehle, Die Zahlenmystik bei Philon von Alexandria, Leipzig-Berlin, 1931.
 v.l. = varia lectio.
 vel sim. = vel simile (used of some reconstructions of Philo's Greek given in footnotes to translation).
 Wendland = Paul Wendland, Neu entdeckte Fragmente Philos, Berlin, 1891.
 Wolfson = H. A. Wolfson, Philo, 2 vols., Cambridge, Mass., 1947.
 * placed before section number indicates that part of the section is extant in Greek (see Appendix A).
 ( ) indicate words supplied by translator.

THE UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

NAME	DEGREE	CLASS
ALAN T. BROWN	B.A.	1953
ALAN T. BROWN	M.A.	1954
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1955
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1956
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1957
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1958
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1959
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1960
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1961
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1962
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1963
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1964
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1965
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1966
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1967
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1968
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1969
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1970
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1971
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1972
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1973
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1974
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1975
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1976
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1977
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1978
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1979
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1980
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1981
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1982
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1983
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1984
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1985
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1986
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1987
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1988
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1989
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1990
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1991
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1992
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1993
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1994
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1995
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1996
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1997
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1998
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	1999
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2000
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2001
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2002
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2003
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2004
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2005
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2006
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2007
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2008
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2009
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2010
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2011
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2012
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2013
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2014
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2015
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2016
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2017
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2018
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2019
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2020
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2021
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2022
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2023
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2024
ALAN T. BROWN	Ph.D.	2025

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

SHOWING THEIR DIVISION INTO VOLUMES IN THIS EDITION

VOLUME

- I. On the Creation (De Opificio Mundi)
Allegorical Interpretation (Legum Allegoriae)
- II. On the Cherubim (De Cherubim)
On the Sacrifices of Abel and Cain (De Sacrificiis Abelis et Caini)
The Worse attacks the Better (Quod Deterius Potiori
insidiari solet)
On the Posterity and Exile of Cain (De Posteritate Caini)
- III. On the Unchangeableness of God (Quod Deus im-mutabilis sit)
On Husbandry (De Agricultura)
On Noah's Work as a Planter (De Plantatione)
On Drunkenness (De Ebrietate)
On Sobriety (De Sobrietate)
- IV. On the Confusion of Tongues (De Confusione Lin-guarum)
On the Migration of Abraham (De Migratione Abrahami)
Who is the Heir (Quis Rerum Divinarum Heres)
On the Preliminary Studies (De Congressu quaerendae Eruditionis gratia)
- V. On Flight and Finding (De Fuga et Inventione)
On the Change of Names (De Mutatione Nominum)
On Dreams (De Somniis)
- VI. On Abraham (De Abrahamo)
On Joseph (De Iosepho)
Moses (De Vita Mosis)

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

VOLUME

- VII. On the Decalogue (De Decalogo)
On the Special Laws Books I-III (De Specialibus Legibus)
- VIII. On the Special Laws Book IV (De Specialibus Legibus)
On the Virtues (De Virtutibus)
On Rewards and Punishments (De Praemiis et Poenis)
- IX. Every Good Man is Free (Quod Omnis Probus Liber sit)
On the Contemplative Life (De Vita Contemplativa)
On the Eternity of the World (De Aeternitate Mundi) Flaccus (In Flaccum)
Hypothetica<sup>1</sup> (Apologia pro Iudaeis)
On Providence<sup>1</sup> (De Providentia)
- X. On the Embassy to Gaius (De Legatione ad Gaium)
GENERAL INDEX TO VOLUMES I-X

SUPPLEMENT

- I. Questions and Answers on Genesis<sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin)
- II. Questions and Answers on Exodus<sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Exodum)
GENERAL INDEX TO SUPPLEMENTS I-II

<sup>1</sup> Only two fragments extant.

<sup>2</sup> Extant only in an Armenian version.

GENESIS

GENESIS

BOOK I

*1. (Gen. ii. 4) Why, when he (Moses) considers and reflects on the creation of the world, does he say, " This is the book of the coming into being of heaven and earth when they came into being " ?

The expression " when they came into being," which is undetermined and uncircumscribed,<sup>a</sup> apparently indicates time. And this evidence confutes those who consider it to be a certain number of years summed under one head, during which the cosmos was to come into being. But the expression, " this is the book of coming into being " is meant to indicate a supposed book <sup>b</sup> which contains the creation of the world and an intimation of the truth about the creation of the world.<sup>c</sup>

2. (Gen. ii. 5) What is the meaning of the words, " And God made every green thing of the field before it came into being on the earth, and every grass before it grew " ?

In these words he alludes to the incorporeal ideas. For the expression, " before it came into being " points to the perfection <sup>d</sup> of every green thing and grass, of plants and trees. And as Scripture says that before they grew on the earth He made plants and grass and the other things,

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. has only ἄριστον (l. ἀόριστον).

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. has τοῦ ὑποκειμένου τεύχους.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. reads differently ἀναφορά τῶν εἰρημένων περὶ τῆς κοσμοποιίας πρὸς τὰ ἐπ' ἀληθείας γεγονότα.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ τέλος.

GENESIS, BOOK I

it is evident that He made incorporeal and intelligible ideas in accordance with the intelligible nature which these sense-perceptible things on earth were meant to imitate.

3. (Gen. ii. 6) What is the meaning of the words, "a spring went up from the earth and watered all the face of the earth"?

How is it possible to water all the earth from one spring? Not only because of its size but also because of the unevenness of mountains and plains. Unless indeed as all the cavalry force of the king is called "the horse," so also "spring" means all the veins of the earth producing potable water, which comes like that from a spring. But well does Scripture also say, not "all (the earth)," but "its face" was watered. Just as in a living being the head is the ruling part,<sup>a</sup> so the good and fertile and principal part of the earth is that which can become fruitbearing, and this is in need of the help given by springs.

4. (Gen. ii. 7) Who is the "moulded"<sup>b</sup> man? And how does he differ from him who is (made) "in accordance with the image (of God)"?

The moulded man is the sense-perceptible<sup>c</sup> man and a likeness of the intelligible type.<sup>d</sup> But the man made in accordance with (God's) form<sup>e</sup> is intelligible and incorporeal and a likeness of the archetype, so far as this is visible. And he is a copy of the original seal.<sup>f</sup> And this is the Logos of God, the first principle, the archetypal idea,<sup>g</sup> the pre-measurer<sup>h</sup> of all things. For this reason the man who was moulded as by a potter was formed out of dust and earth, in respect of the body. And he obtained a spirit when God breathed life into his face. And the mixture of his nature was a mixture of the corruptible and incorruptible. For that which is in accordance with form<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.

<sup>b</sup> πλαστός.

<sup>c</sup> αἰσθητός.

<sup>d</sup> νοητοῦ τρόπου.

<sup>e</sup> εἶδος.

<sup>f</sup> σφραγίδος.

<sup>g</sup> ἀρχέτυπος ἰδέα.

<sup>h</sup> προμετρητήης.

<sup>i</sup> εἶδος ἢ ἰδέαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

is incorruptible, coming from an invisible nature, from that which is simple and pure.

5. (Gen. ii. 7) Why is He said to have breathed life into his face ?

First of all, because the face is the principal part of the body. For the rest (of the body) was made like a pedestal, while the face, like a bust, is firmly placed above it. And sense-perception is the principal part of the animal species, and sense-perception is in the face. In the second place, man is admitted to be part not only of the animal order but also of that of rational animals, and the head is the temple of the mind, as some have said.

6. (Gen. ii. 8) Why is God said to have "planted Paradise" and for whom? And what is Paradise?

Of Paradise, so far as the literal meaning is concerned, there is no need to give an explicit interpretation. For it is a dense place full of all kinds of trees. Symbolically, however, it is wisdom<sup>a</sup> or knowledge<sup>b</sup> of the divine and human and of their causes. For it was fitting, after the coming into being of the world, to establish the contemplative life in order that through a vision of the world and the things in it praise of the Father might also be attained. For it is not possible for nature to see nor is it possible without wisdom to praise the creator of all things. And His ideas the Creator planted like trees in the most sovereign thing, the rational soul. But as for the tree of life in the midst (of the garden), it is the knowledge, not only of things on the earth, but also of the eldest and highest cause of all things. For if anyone is able to obtain a clear impression<sup>c</sup> of this, he will be fortunate and blessed and truly immortal. But after the world wisdom came into being, since after the creation of the world Paradise was made in the same manner as the poets say the chorus of

<sup>a</sup> σοφία.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπιστήμη.

<sup>c</sup> σαφείαν φαντασίαν.

GENESIS, BOOK I

Muses (was formed), in order to praise the Creator and His work. For just as Plato said,<sup>a</sup> the Creator is the greatest and best of causes, while the world is the most beautiful of created things.

7. (Gen. ii. 8) Why is He said to have planted Paradise in Eden toward the East ?

In the first place, because the movement of the world is from East to West ; and that from which movement starts is first. Second, that which is in the region of the East is said to be the right side of the world, while that in the region of the West is the left. And so the poet testifies,<sup>b</sup> calling the birds in the region of the East "right," and those which are in the region of the West "on the left side." If they go to the right side, it is to the day and the sun ; but if to the left, toward evening and darkness. But the name Eden when translated is certainly a symbol of delicacies, joy and mirth. For all good things and benefits have their origin in this sacred place. In the third place, because it <sup>c</sup> is wisdom and radiance and light.

8. (Gen. ii. 8) Why does He place the moulded man in Paradise, but not the man who was made in His image ?

Some, believing Paradise to be a garden, have said that since the moulded man is sense-perceptible, he therefore rightly goes to a sense-perceptible place. But the man made in His image is intelligible and invisible, and is in the class of incorporeal species. But I would say that Paradise should be thought a symbol of wisdom. For the earth-formed man is a mixture, and consists of soul and body, and is in need of teaching and instruction, desiring, in accordance with the laws of philosophy, that he may be happy. But he who was made in His image is in need of nothing, but is self-hearing and self-taught and self-instructed by nature.

<sup>a</sup> Timaeus 92 c.

<sup>b</sup> Hom. Il. xii. 239, Od. xx. 242.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. Paradise.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

9. (Gen. ii. 9) Why does (Scripture) say that in Paradise was every tree beautiful to look at and good <sup>a</sup> to eat ?

Because there are two virtues of trees, to be many-branched and fruitful, of which one is for the pleasure of sight, and the other for the enjoyment of taste. But not ineptly is the word "beautiful" used, for it would be natural <sup>b</sup> that plants should be ever flourishing and ever green, as belonging to the divine Paradise, without suffering the extremity of being leafless. But it did not say that the fruit also was "beautiful" but "good," <sup>a</sup> and this is philosophically said, for men use food not only for pleasure but also for utility, and utility is the outflowing <sup>c</sup> and the distillation of the good.

10. (Gen. ii. 9) What is "the tree of life" and why is it in the midst of Paradise ?

Some believe that as plants are corporeal and subject to death, so also some have life and immortality. Wherefore they say that life and death are opposed to each other. And some plants are destructive, and it is necessary to be saved (from their effects). <sup>d</sup> But that this state is healthful they do not know. For generation, as the arguments of philosophers go, is the beginning of corruption. And may it not be that this (i.e. the above) is said allegorically ? For some say that the tree of life is the earth, for it causes all things to grow for the life of both man and all other things. Wherefore He apportioned a central place to this plant ; and the centre of all is the earth. And some say that the tree of life is a name for the seven circles <sup>e</sup> which are in heaven. And some say it is the sun because it is, in a sense, in the midst of the planets and is the cause of the seasons, by which all things are produced. And some have said that the tree of life is the government <sup>f</sup> of the soul. For the soul innervates and strengthens sense-

<sup>a</sup> καλός.

<sup>b</sup> εἰκὸς ἂν εἶη.

<sup>c</sup> ἀπόρροια.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. obscure, lit. "and of necessity salvation is obtained."

<sup>e</sup> κύκλοι ἢ στροφαί.

<sup>f</sup> ἡγεμονία (ἢ ὑφήγησις).

GENESIS, BOOK I

perception by directing its energies<sup>a</sup> to what is suitable for it, with the participation<sup>b</sup> of the parts of the body. And the centre, in one meaning, is the chief and head, as is the leader of a chorus. But worthy and excellent men say that the tree of life is the best of the virtues in man, namely piety,<sup>c</sup> through which pre-eminently the mind becomes immortal.

11. (Gen. ii. 9) What is "the tree of knowing the science<sup>d</sup> of good and evil"?

This very clear statement, which in its literal meaning is elusive, it presents to us as an allegory. For, as he intimates, it is prudence,<sup>e</sup> and this is the science of knowing, through which good and beautiful things and bad and ugly things are distinguished; and (the science of knowing) all things which are contrary to each other, of which the one is of a superior order, and the other of an inferior order. Now the wisdom which is in this world is not God but is truly the work of God<sup>f</sup>; it sees nature and studies it. But the wisdom which is in man sees with dim eyes, confusing one thing with another, for it is weak in seeing and understanding purely, simply, clearly each thing by itself alone. Wherefore with man's wisdom a kind of deception is mixed, in the same manner as to the eyes certain shadows are often an impediment to catching sight of unmixed and pure light. For what the eye is to the body, mind and wisdom are to the soul.

12. (Gen. ii. 10) What is the river that went out from Eden, by which Paradise is watered; and four rivers separated, the Pishon,<sup>g</sup> Gihon,<sup>h</sup> Tigris and Euphrates?

<sup>a</sup> ἐνεργείας.

<sup>b</sup> κοινωνία.

<sup>c</sup> εὐσέβεια.

<sup>d</sup> τοῦ γινώσκειν τὴν ἐπιστήμην (οὐ τῆς γνώσεως τῆς τοῦ ἐπίστασθαι).

<sup>e</sup> φρόνησις.

<sup>f</sup> Probably we should correct the Arm. to read "Now the wisdom which is in this world sees (tesē for ē "is") not God but truly the work (or the true work) of God."

<sup>g</sup> Arm. Phison = Gr. Φεισών.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. Gehōn = Gr. Γηών.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

For the sources of the Tigris (Arm. Dktat<sup>4</sup>) and Euphrates (Arm. Araçani) are said to rise in the Armenian mountains. And in that place there is no Paradise, nor are there the two other sources of the river. Unless perhaps Paradise is in some distant place far from our inhabited world, and has a river flowing under the earth, which waters many great veins so that these rising send (water) to other recipient veins, and so become diffused. And as these are forced by the rush of water, the force which is in them makes its way out to the surface, both in the Armenian mountains and elsewhere. And these are the supposed sources, or rather the outflowings of the river; but properly the supposed sources, since divine Scripture, in which the matter of the four rivers is mentioned, is wholly veracious. For the origin is a river and not a source (according to Scripture). Unless perhaps in this passage matters are allegorized, and the four rivers are a symbol of four virtues<sup>a</sup>: of prudence,<sup>b</sup> called Pishon in respect of frugality<sup>c</sup>; of moderation,<sup>d</sup> called Gihon because it labours with regard to food and drink, and produces the various pleasures of the belly and those parts which are below the belly, and this is earthly; of courage,<sup>e</sup> called Tigris, for this checks the affection of anger which rages in us; of justice,<sup>f</sup> called Euphrates, for in nothing do the thoughts of man rejoice and have gladness more than in justice.<sup>g</sup>

13. (Gen. ii. 14) Why does (Scripture) omit to give the location of the Euphrates alone, while it says that the Pishon goes round all the land of Havilah (Arm. and LXX Evilat), and the Gihon goes round all the land of Cush (Arm. and LXX Ethiopia), and the Tigris flows opposite Assyria (Arm. Asorestan)?

The Tigris (Dktat<sup>4</sup>) is the wildest and most destructive <sup>a</sup> ἀρετῶν.

<sup>b</sup> φρόνησις.

<sup>c</sup> φειδώ.

<sup>d</sup> σωφροσύνη.

<sup>e</sup> ἀνδρεία.

<sup>f</sup> δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>g</sup> In the above passage, paralleled in Leg. All. i. 63 ff., Philo plays on the Greek names of the four rivers.

GENESIS, BOOK I

of rivers, as the Babylonians and the Magians testify, who have determined that its nature is somewhat different from (that of) water. However it is likely that (Scripture) has still another reason for keeping silence. For the Euphrates (Araçani) is very gentle and life-giving and nourishing, wherefore the wise men of the Hebrews and Assyrians call it "augmenting" and "prospering." For this reason it is known, not from anything else, like the three (other rivers) but by itself. To me it seems that the matter is symbolical and figurative. Since prudence<sup>a</sup> is a faculty<sup>b</sup> of the rational element,<sup>c</sup> in which evil is found, and courage<sup>d</sup> is a faculty of the irascible element,<sup>e</sup> and moderation<sup>f</sup> is a faculty of the concupiscent element,<sup>g</sup> but anger and concupiscence are bestial.<sup>h</sup> Thus (Scripture) refers to the three rivers by the regions through which they flow but the Euphrates (Araçani), which is a symbol of justice,<sup>i</sup> is not similarly referred to, since not merely some part of it is assigned to the soul, but it is acquired all at once and becomes a partnership<sup>j</sup> and harmony of the three parts of the soul and of the same number of virtues.

14. (Gen. ii. 15) Why does (God) place the man in Paradise for two things, to work and guard it, when Paradise was not in need of work, for it was complete in all things as having been planted by God, and was not in need of a guardian, for who was there to be harmed?

These are the two things which a cultivator should keep in mind and achieve, cultivation of the field and guarding of the things in it, for it may be ruined either by idleness or by invasion. But although Paradise was not in need of either of these things, nevertheless it was necessary that he who received the supervision and care of it, (that is) the first man, should be, as it were, a law to husbandmen in all things which it is fitting to labour in. Moreover it was

<sup>a</sup> φρόνησις.
<sup>d</sup> ἀνδρεία.

<sup>b</sup> ἀρετή.
<sup>e</sup> τοῦ θυμικοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> τοῦ λογικοῦ.
<sup>f</sup> σωφροσύνη.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ ἐπιθυμητικοῦ.

<sup>h</sup> θηριώδεις.

<sup>i</sup> δικαιοσύνης.

<sup>j</sup> ὁμόνοια, κοινωνία, etc.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

proper that as it was full of all things, He should leave to the cultivator the superintendence<sup>a</sup> and the work of caring for it, such as watering it, tending it, nurturing it,<sup>b</sup> spading it, digging trenches, and irrigating it with water. And although there was no other man, it was necessary to guard it at least against wild animals, and especially against air and water, for when there is a drought, one must water it abundantly, but when there are rainstorms, one must stop the overflow by making another channel.

15. (Gen. ii. 16) Why does (God) say, when He commands (Adam) to eat of every tree which is in Paradise, "Eat" in the singular number; but, when He forbids eating of the tree which gives knowledge of good and evil, says, in the plural number, "Do not eat, for on the day when ye shall eat, ye shall die"?

First, because though it extends over many things,<sup>c</sup> the good is one, and not less for this reason,<sup>d</sup> namely that He who gave the benefit is one, as is also the one who received the benefit. This "one" I speak of, not with reference to the number which precedes the number two, but with reference to the unitary power, in accordance with which many things are harmonized and agree and by their concord imitate the one, such as a flock, a herd, a drove, a chorus, an army, a nation, a tribe, a household, a city. For all these, extending over many, are one community and embrace lovingly; but when they are unmixed and have nothing in common, they fall into duality and into a multitude and are divided. For duality is the beginning of division. But two who use the same philosophy as one enjoy an unadulterated and clear virtue which is free of evil. But when good and evil are mixed, they have as their beginning a mixture of death.

<sup>a</sup> ἐπιμέλειαν.    <sup>b</sup> τρυφᾶν, μαλακίζειν, etc.    <sup>c</sup> διὰ πολλῶν.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. phrase is obscure to me, as also to Aucher apparently. He renders, "primum, quia unum ex multis factum bonum est; id autem haud exiguum his etiam rationibus . . ."

GENESIS, BOOK I

16. (Gen. ii. 17) What is the meaning of the words, "Ye shall die by the death<sup>a</sup> " ?

The death of worthy men is the beginning of another life. For life is twofold ; one is with corruptible body ; the other is without body (and) incorruptible. So that the evil man dies by death even when he breathes, before he is buried, as though he preserved for himself no spark at all of the true life, and this is excellence of character.<sup>b</sup> The decent and worthy man, however, does not die by death, but after living long, passes away to eternity, that is, he is borne to eternal life.

*17. (Gen. ii. 18) Why does (Scripture) say, " It is not good for man to be alone. Let us make for him a helpmeet like him " ?

By these words it refers to partnership, and that not with all persons but with those who wish to help and bring mutual profit even though they may not be able (to do so). For love is a strengthener of character<sup>c</sup> not more by usefulness than by union and concord, so that to every one of those who come together in the partnership of love the saying of Pythagoras can be applied, that " a lover is indeed another self."

18. (Gen. ii. 19) Why, after first saying, " Let us make a helper for man," does (God) create wild animals and cattle ?

Intemperate<sup>d</sup> and gluttonous people would say that wild animals and fowl, being necessary food, are a help to man. For the eating of meat co-operates with the stomach toward (attaining) health and bodily strength. But I believe that now, because evil is found in him, man has enemies and adversaries in terrestrial animals and fowl. But to the first man, who was altogether adorned with virtue, they were rather like military forces and allies, and a close

<sup>a</sup> θανάτῳ ἀποθανεῖσθε, a reflection of the Hebrew idiom.

<sup>b</sup> καλοκάγαθία.

<sup>c</sup> βεβαίωσις ἡθῶν, cf. Greek frag.

<sup>d</sup> ἀκόλαστοι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

friend naturally becomes tractable (?). And with this man alone they became familiar, as was fitting for servants with a master.

19. (Gen. ii. 19) Why are beasts and birds now again created, when their creation <sup>a</sup> was announced <sup>b</sup> earlier in the six-day (creation story) ? <sup>c</sup>

Perhaps those things which (were created) in the six days were incorporeal <sup>d</sup> and were symbolically typical species <sup>e</sup> of beasts and birds. But now were produced in actuality <sup>f</sup> their likenesses, <sup>g</sup> sensible <sup>h</sup> (likenesses) of invisible things. <sup>i</sup>

*20. (Gen. ii. 19) Why does (God) bring all the animals to the man that he may give names to them ?

Scripture has cleared up the great perplexity of those who are lovers of wisdom by showing that names exist by being given and not by nature, since each is an apt and naturally suitable name through the skilful calculation of a wise man who is pre-eminent in knowledge. And very proper to the mind of the wise man alone, or rather to the first of earth-born creatures, is the giving of names. For it was fitting that the lord of mankind and the king of all earth-born creatures should obtain this great honour also. For as he was the first to see living creatures, so he was the first to be worthy of being lord over all and the first introducer and author of the giving of names. For it would have been vain and foolish to leave them without names or to accept names from some other younger man to the disgrace and degradation of the honour and glory of the older man. We must, however, also suppose that the giving of names was so exact that so soon as he gave the name and the animal heard it, it was affected as if by the phenomenon of a familiar and related name being spoken.

<sup>a</sup> γένεσις.                      <sup>b</sup> ἀνηγγέλθη.                      <sup>c</sup> ἐν τῷ ἑξαήμερω.

<sup>d</sup> ἀσώματα.                      <sup>e</sup> δεικτικαὶ καὶ τροπικαὶ ἰδέαι.

<sup>f</sup> ἔργω.                      <sup>g</sup> ὁμοιότητες.                      <sup>h</sup> αἰσθηταί.                      <sup>i</sup> ἀοράτων.

GENESIS, BOOK I

*21. (Gen. ii. 19) Why does (Scripture) say, "He led the animals to man to see what he would call them," when God is not in doubt?

Truly it is alien to the divine power to be in doubt. But it appears that He was not in doubt, since He gave mind to man, especially the first earth-born noble man, in accordance with which he became wise and could naturally reason like a leader and ruler and know how to move and make himself known.<sup>a</sup> And he saw the good origin of his spirit. Moreover through this he also typifies all that is voluntary in us, thus confounding those who say that all things exist by necessity. Or perhaps because mankind was destined to use them, for that reason He granted to man the giving of their names.

22. (Gen. ii. 19) What is the meaning of the words, "Whatever he called a living soul, that was its name"?

It is necessary to believe that he gave names not only to animals but also to plants and to all other things without life, beginning with the highest genus: and the animal is the highest thing. Scripture contents itself with the best part, not completely illustrating the naming of all things for stupid men. Wherefore the naming of inanimate things, which could not change their places or make use of the affections of the soul,<sup>b</sup> was easy. It was more difficult in the case of animals because of the movements of the body and the various manifestations of the impulses of the soul through the senses and passions from which energies arise. Thus the mind was able to give names to the more difficult and more troublesome genera of animals. Wherefrom it follows that he named (other things) as if they were easy and near at hand.

23. (Gen. ii. 20) What is the meaning of the words, "For Adam there was not found a helper like himself"?

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. is very obscure and apparently a mistranslation. Cf. Greek fragment, in Appendix A in Suppl. II.

<sup>b</sup> παθήματα τῆς ψυχῆς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Everything helped and co-operated with the founder of mankind, such as earth, rivers, sea, air, light and sky. Also co-operated all the species of fruit and plants and herds of cattle. And wild animals were not ferocious to him. However, none of these was in any way a helper like himself, since they were not human. Thus (Scripture) approves of one man showing himself a succourer and co-operator with another man and showing his complete similarity in body and soul.

*24. (Gen. ii. 21) What is the meaning of the words, "And He cast a trance <sup>a</sup> upon Adam, and made him sleep" ?

Philosophers are at a loss and uncertain how to explain how sleep comes about. But the prophet clearly solved the problem. For sleep in itself is properly <sup>b</sup> a trance, not that which comes about through madness, <sup>c</sup> but that which comes about through the relaxing <sup>d</sup> of the senses and the withdrawal of the reason. For then the senses withdraw from sense-perceptible things, and the intellect withdraws from the senses, not activating the nerves and not giving motion even to those parts which have as their special function the production of energy, being separated from sense-perceptible things.

25. (Gen. ii. 21-22) What is the "side" <sup>e</sup> which He took from the earth-born man; and why did He mould the side into a woman ?

The literal sense is clear. For by a certain symbolical use of "part" <sup>f</sup> it is called a half of the whole, as both man and woman, being sections of Nature, become equal in one harmony of genus, <sup>g</sup> which is called man. But in the figurative sense, man is a symbol of mind, and his side

<sup>a</sup> ἔκστασιν.

<sup>b</sup> "Properly" is omitted in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> μανίας.

<sup>d</sup> ὑφέσιν in the Greek frag.

<sup>e</sup> πλευρά.

<sup>f</sup> μέρος.

<sup>g</sup> ἐν μιᾷ τοῦ γένους ἁρμονίᾳ.

GENESIS, BOOK I

is a single sense-faculty. And the sense-perception of a very changeable reason is symbolized by woman. Some speak of prowess<sup>a</sup> and strength as "side," whence they call a fighting athlete with strong sides a powerful man. Accordingly the lawgiver says that woman was made from the side of man, intimating that woman is a half of man's body. For this we also have evidence in the constitution of the body, its common parts,<sup>b</sup> movements, faculties, mental vigour and excellence. For all things are seen as if in double proportion. Inasmuch as the moulding<sup>c</sup> of the male is more perfect than, and double, that of the female, it requires only half the time, namely forty days; whereas the imperfect woman, who is, so to speak, a half-section of man, requires twice as many days, namely eighty. So that there is a change in the doubling of the time of man's nature (or natural growth), in accordance with the peculiarity of woman. For when the nature of the body and soul<sup>d</sup> of something is of double measure, such as man's, then the forming<sup>e</sup> and moulding of that thing is in half-measure. But when the nature of the body and the construction of something is in half-measure, such as woman's, then the moulding and forming of that thing is in double measure.<sup>f</sup>

26. (Gen. ii. 22) Why does Scripture call the likeness<sup>g</sup> of the woman "a building"<sup>h</sup>?

The harmonious coming together<sup>i</sup> of man and woman and their consummation is figuratively a house. And everything which is without a woman is imperfect and homeless.<sup>j</sup> For to man are entrusted the public affairs of state; while to a woman the affairs of the home are proper.

<sup>a</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>b</sup> κοινωνία.

<sup>c</sup> πλάσμα.

<sup>d</sup> ψυχή (or πνεῦμα).

<sup>e</sup> τύπωσις.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. that material which is imperfect or half-perfect takes twice as long to complete as that which is perfect to start with.

<sup>g</sup> εἰκόνα.

<sup>h</sup> οἰκοδομήν; cf. LXX ὠκοδόμησε.

<sup>i</sup> συναγωγή ἁρμονίας vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> ἄοικος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The lack <sup>a</sup> of her is ruin,<sup>b</sup> but her being near at hand <sup>c</sup> constitutes household management.<sup>d</sup>

*27. (Gen. ii. 21) Why was not woman, like other animals and man, also formed <sup>e</sup> from earth, instead of the side of man ?

First, because woman is not equal in honour with man. Second, because she is not equal in age, but younger. Wherefore those who take wives who have passed their prime are to be criticized for destroying the laws of nature. Third, he wishes that man should take care of <sup>f</sup> woman as of a very necessary <sup>g</sup> part of him ; but woman, in return, should serve him <sup>h</sup> as a whole. Fourth, he counsels man figuratively to take care of <sup>i</sup> woman as of a daughter, and woman to honour man as a father. And this is proper ; for woman changes her habitation from her family <sup>j</sup> to her husband. Wherefore it is fitting and proper that one who receives something should in return show goodwill to those who have given it, but one (i.e. the woman) who has made a change should give to him who has taken her the honour which she showed those who begot her. For man has a wife entrusted to him as a deposit <sup>k</sup> from her parents, but woman (takes a husband) by law.

*28. (Gen. ii. 23) Why does the moulded man, on seeing the woman, say in addition, " This is now bone of my bones and flesh of my flesh ; she shall be called woman, for she was taken from her husband " <sup>l</sup> ?

He might have said deprecatingly, <sup>m</sup> being dumbfounded <sup>a</sup> ἀπορία.

<sup>b</sup> κατάλυσις.

<sup>c</sup> οὐσία τῆς ὁμιλίας or ἀγχιουτείας, prob. for original οὐσης αὐτῆς πλησίον. <sup>d</sup> οἰκονομία. <sup>e</sup> ἰδρυτο.

<sup>f</sup> προκήδεσθαι or προνοεῖν.

<sup>g</sup> ἀναγκαιότερον.

<sup>h</sup> ἐκεῖ, an error for ἐκείνω.

<sup>i</sup> προκήδεσθαι.

<sup>j</sup> The Greek frag. has γονέων.

<sup>k</sup> παρακαταθήκην, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. has a word-play on αρν " man " and αρnem " to take."

<sup>m</sup> ὡς παραιτούμενος vel sim.

GENESIS, BOOK I

at this apparition, "Is it really possible that this wonderful and lovely vision <sup>a</sup> came from bones and formless flesh and things without quality <sup>b</sup>—this most shapely <sup>c</sup> and very charming creature! It is incredible that a similar thing can be. And yet it is credible, for God was the creator and painter."<sup>d</sup> He might have said trustingly,<sup>e</sup> "Truly this is a creature of my bone and my flesh, for she has been separated and put together from these several parts of mine." Moreover he makes mention of bones and flesh very naturally, for the human <sup>f</sup> tent <sup>g</sup> is made of bones, flesh, arteries, veins, nerves, ligaments and the vessels of breathing and of the blood. And the woman is called the power of giving birth <sup>h</sup> with fecundity, and truly so; either because after receiving the seed, she conceives and gives birth, or, as the prophet says, because she came from man, not through spirit nor through seed, like those after him, but by a kind of mediate nature, just as a shoot is taken from a vine for growing another vine.<sup>i</sup>

*29. (Gen. ii. 24) Why does (Scripture) say, "Wherefore man shall leave his father and mother, and cleave to his wife, and they shall be two in one flesh"?

(Scripture) commands man to act toward his wife with the most extreme exaggeration in partnership,<sup>j</sup> so that he may endure to abandon even his parents. Not as though this is proper, but as though they would not be causes of goodwill <sup>k</sup> to the wife. And most excellent and careful was it not to say that the woman should leave her parents and be joined to her husband—for the audacity <sup>l</sup> (of man) is bolder than the nature of woman—but that for the sake of woman man is to do this. Since with a very ready

<sup>a</sup> εἶδος, ἰδέα, ὄρασις, etc.

<sup>b</sup> ἀποιών.

<sup>c</sup> εὐμορφότατος.

<sup>d</sup> ζωγράφος.

<sup>e</sup> ὡς ἀναδεχόμενος.

<sup>f</sup> Variant "corporeal."

<sup>g</sup> σκηνή.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek must have had a word-play on γυνή and γεννᾶν.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. paraphrases.

<sup>j</sup> κοινωνία.

<sup>k</sup> εὐνοίας.

<sup>l</sup> παρρησία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and prompt impulse<sup>a</sup> he is brought to a concord of knowledge.<sup>b</sup> Being possessed<sup>c</sup> and foreseeing the future,<sup>d</sup> he controls and stills his desires,<sup>e</sup> being fitted to his spouse alone as if to a bridle. And especially because he, having the authority of a master,<sup>f</sup> is to be suspected of arrogance. But woman, taking the rank of servant, is shown to be obedient to his life. But when Scripture says that the two are one flesh, it indicates something very tangible and sense-perceptible, in which there is suffering and sensual pleasure, that they may rejoice in, and be pained by, and feel the same things, and, much more, may think the same things.

30. (Gen. ii. 25) Why are both the earth-born man and the woman said to be naked, and were not ashamed?

First, because they were related to the world, and its parts are naked, all showing their own qualities and using their own covering. Second, because of the simplicity of their morals<sup>g</sup> and because they were by nature without arrogance; for not yet had presumption been created. Third, because the pleasant climate of the place was also a quite sufficient covering to them, so that there was neither too much cold nor too much heat for them. Fourth, because of their kinship with the world, they suffered no harm from any of its parts, it being closely related to them.

*31. (Gen. iii. 1) Why does (Scripture) represent the serpent as more cunning<sup>h</sup> than all the beasts?

It is proper to tell the truth, that the serpent is truly more cunning than all the beasts. To me, however, it seems that this was said because of the serpent's inclina<sup>a</sup> ἔτοιμωτέρα καὶ προχείρα ὄρμη.

<sup>b</sup> ὁμόνοιαν τῆς ἐπιστήμης (ἢ γνώσεως). <sup>c</sup> μαινόμενος.

<sup>d</sup> προνοῶν. <sup>e</sup> ἐγκρατεῖται καὶ συστέλλει τὰς ἐπιθυμίας.

<sup>f</sup> κυρίαν ἔχων ἐξουσίαν.

<sup>g</sup> διὰ τὴν τῶν ἡθῶν ἀπλότητα.

<sup>h</sup> Or "prudent"—φρονιμώτερος.

GENESIS, BOOK I

tion toward passion, of which it is the symbol. And by passion is meant sensual pleasure,<sup>a</sup> for lovers of pleasure are very clever and are skilled in arts<sup>b</sup> and means<sup>c</sup>; they are clever in finding devices,<sup>d</sup> both those which produce pleasure and those which lead to enjoyment of some kind. But it seems to me that since that creature which excelled in cunning was prepared to become the deceiver of man,<sup>e</sup> the argument applies to a very cunning creature, not the whole genus, but this particular serpent alone, for the reason mentioned.

*32. (Gen. iii. 1) Did the serpent speak in the manner of men?

First, it is likely that not even in the beginning of the world's creation were the other animals without a share in speech, but that man excelled in voice (or utterance), being more clear and distinct. Second, when some miraculous deed is prepared, God changes the inner nature. Third, because our souls are filled with many sins and deaf to all utterances except one or another tongue to which they are accustomed; but the souls of the first creatures,<sup>f</sup> as being pure of evil and unmixed, were particularly keen in becoming familiar<sup>g</sup> with every sound. And since they were not provided only with defective senses, such as belong to a miserable bodily frame, but were provided with a very great body and the magnitude of a giant, it was necessary that they should also have more accurate senses,<sup>h</sup> and what is more, philosophical sight and hearing. For not inaptly do some conjecture that they were provided with eyes with which they could see those natures and beings and actions which were in heaven, and with ears to perceive sounds of every kind.

<sup>a</sup> ἡδονή.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν τέχναις.

<sup>c</sup> τρόποις or ἐξευρέσει.

<sup>d</sup> μηχανάς.

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. reads differently.

<sup>f</sup> τῶν πρώτων.

<sup>g</sup> andelout'iuu "familiarity" is prob. error for andoune-lout'iuu = "perception." The Greek frag. paraphrases.

<sup>h</sup> ἀκριβεστέρας αἰσθήσεις.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

33. (Gen. iii. 1) Why does the serpent speak to the woman and not to the man ?

In order that they may be potentially mortal<sup>a</sup> he deceives by trickery and artfulness. And woman is more accustomed to be deceived than man. For his judgment,<sup>b</sup> like his body, is masculine and is capable of dissolving or destroying the designs of deception; but the judgment of woman is more feminine, and because of softness she easily gives way and is taken in by plausible falsehoods which resemble the truth. Accordingly, since in old age the serpent casts off his skin from the top of his head to his tail, by casting it, he reproaches<sup>c</sup> man, for he has exchanged death for immortality. From his bestial nature he is renewed and adjusts himself<sup>d</sup> to different times. Seeing this, she was deceived, though she ought to have looked, as if at an example, at him who practised stratagems and trickery, and to have obtained ageless and unfading life.

34. (Gen. iii. 1) Why does the serpent lie, saying, " God said, Do not eat of any<sup>e</sup> tree of Paradise " ? For on the contrary, He said, " From every tree which is in Paradise you may eat except from one."

It is the custom of those who fight to lie artfully in order that they may not be found out. This is what happens now. For it was commanded that every (tree) might be used except one. But he who devises evil stratagems, coming between, says, " The command was given not to eat of any." As a slippery thing and a stumbling-block to the mind, he put forward an ambiguity<sup>f</sup> of words. For the expression " not to eat from all " clearly means " not even from one," which is false. And again it also means

<sup>a</sup> Arm. obscure, lit. = ὑπὲρ τοῦ εἶναι αὐτοὺς δυνάμει θανάσιμους. <sup>b</sup> διάνοια, λογισμός. <sup>c</sup> ὀνειδίζει.

<sup>d</sup> ὁμοιοῦται, ἀπεικάζεται, lit. " likens himself."

<sup>e</sup> Lit. " all, every," reflecting the Semitic idiom in which " all " after a negative = " any."

<sup>f</sup> ἀπορίαν, ἀμφισβήτησιν.

GENESIS, BOOK I

“not from every one,” by which is to be understood “not from some,” which is true. Thus he spoke a falsehood in a very clear manner.

35. (Gen. iii. 3) Why, when the command was given not to eat of one particular tree, did the woman include even approaching it closely, saying, “He said, You shall not eat of that one and not come near it”?

First, because taste and every sense consists generically <sup>a</sup> in its contact.<sup>b</sup> Second, for the severe punishment of those who have practised this. For if merely approaching was forbidden, would not those who, besides touching the tree, also ate of it and enjoyed it, adding a great wrong to a lesser one, become condemners <sup>c</sup> and punishers of themselves?

36. (Gen. iii. 5) What is the meaning of the words, “You will be as gods, knowing good and evil”?

Whence did the serpent know this plural noun “gods”? For the true God is one, and he now names Him for the first time. It could not have been a prescient quality <sup>d</sup> that foresaw that there was to be among mankind a belief in a multitude of gods, which, as the narrative <sup>e</sup> first proved, came about not through anything rational nor yet through the better irrational creatures, but through the most noxious and vile of beasts and reptiles. For these lurk in the ground, and their dens are in caves and in the hollows of the earth. And it is truly proper <sup>f</sup> to a rational being to consider God to be the one truly existing being,<sup>g</sup> but to a beast to create many gods,<sup>h</sup> and to an irrational creature to create a god who does not exist in truth.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> γένει.

<sup>b</sup> ὁμιλία.

<sup>c</sup> κατάκριτοι.

<sup>d</sup> προγνωστικὴ δύναμις.

<sup>e</sup> διήγησις, ἱστορία, etc. ; apparently Scripture is meant.

<sup>f</sup> ἴδιον.

<sup>g</sup> τὸν ἕνα ὄντως ὄντα.

<sup>h</sup> θεοπλαστεῖν.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher's rendering, “to create many gods and irrational ones,” is not justified grammatically.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Moreover he shows cunning in another way ; for not only is there in the Deity knowledge of good and evil but also the acceptance<sup>a</sup> and pursuit of good and the aversion to and rejection of evil. But these things he did not reveal, for they were useful ; he included a reference only to the knowledge of both contraries, good and evil. In the second place, “ as gods ” in the plural was now said not without reason but in order that he might show forth the good and evil, and that these gods are of a twofold nature. Accordingly, it is fitting that particular<sup>b</sup> gods should have knowledge of opposites ; but the elder cause<sup>c</sup> is superior (to good and evil).

37. (Gen. iii. 6) Why does the woman first touch the tree and eat of its fruit, and afterwards the man also take of it ?

According to the literal meaning the priority (of the woman) is mentioned with emphasis.<sup>d</sup> For it was fitting that man should rule over immortality and everything good, but woman over death and everything vile. In the allegorical sense, however, woman is a symbol of sense, and man, of mind. Now of necessity sense comes into contact with the sense-perceptible ; and by the participation of sense,<sup>e</sup> things pass into the mind ; for sense is moved by objects,<sup>f</sup> while the mind is moved by sense.

38. (Gen. iii. 6) What is the meaning of the words, “ And she gave to her husband with her ” ?

What has just been said is stated because there is almost one and the same time of appearance—at the same time sense-perception is received from objects and the mind is impressed by sense-perception.

<sup>a</sup> τὸ δέχεσθαι ἢ μετοχή. <sup>b</sup> κατὰ μέρος.

<sup>c</sup> ἢ πρεσβυτέρα αἰτία (God).

<sup>d</sup> ἐνεργείᾳ, the precise sense of which is doubtful here.

<sup>e</sup> τῇ τῆς αἰσθήσεως κοινωνίᾳ.

<sup>f</sup> ὑπὸ τῶν ὑποκειμένων κινεῖται.

GENESIS, BOOK I

39. (Gen. iii. 7) What is the meaning of the words, "The eyes of both were opened" ?

That they were not created blind is evident from the fact that even all the other beings were created perfect,<sup>a</sup> both animals and plants ; and should not man be endowed with the superior parts, such as eyes ? Moreover, a little while before he gave earthly<sup>b</sup> names to all animals, and so it is clear that he had first seen them. Or it may be that by eyes Scripture symbolically indicates the vision of the soul, through which alone are perceived all good and bad, noble and shameful things, and all opposites. But if the eye is a separate intelligence,<sup>c</sup> which is called the counsellor<sup>d</sup> of the understanding,<sup>e</sup> there is also a special irrational eye which is called opinion.<sup>f</sup>

40. (Gen. iii. 7) What is the meaning of the words, "For they knew that they were naked" ?

It was of this, that is, of their own nakedness, that they first received knowledge by eating of the forbidden fruit. And this was opinion<sup>g</sup> and the beginning of evil, for they had not used any covering, inasmuch as the parts of the universe<sup>h</sup> are immortal and incorruptible<sup>i</sup> ; but (now) they needed that which is made by hand and corruptible. And this knowledge was in being naked, not that it was in itself the cause of change<sup>j</sup> but that now a strangeness<sup>k</sup> was conceived by the mind toward the whole world.<sup>l</sup>

*41. (Gen. iii. 7) Why do they sew the leaves of the fig tree as loin-cloths ?<sup>m</sup>

First, because the fruit of the fig tree is sweeter and <sup>a</sup> τέλεια.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "earth-born"—γηγενᾶ.

<sup>c</sup> διάνοια, λογισμός, etc.

<sup>d</sup> νουθέτημα, συμβουλία, παιδεία, etc.

<sup>e</sup> φρονήσεως, ἐπιστήμης, etc. <sup>f</sup> δόξα.

<sup>g</sup> δόξα.

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ παντός.

<sup>i</sup> ἄφθαρτα.

<sup>j</sup> ἀλλοιότητος ἢ διαφορᾶς.

<sup>k</sup> ἀλλοτριώσεις.

<sup>l</sup> κόσμον.

<sup>m</sup> The Arm. Bible has "apron" = lxx περιζώματα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

pleasant to the taste. Accordingly it symbolically indicates those who sew together <sup>a</sup> and weave together <sup>b</sup> many sense pleasures <sup>c</sup> one with another. Wherefore they (the leaves) are girded round the place of the genitals, which are the instrument <sup>d</sup> of greater things. <sup>e</sup> Second, because the fruit of the fig tree is, as I have said, sweeter than that of other trees, and its leaves are rougher. <sup>f</sup> Accordingly (Scripture) wishes to make clear symbolically that although the movement of pleasure seems to be somewhat slippery and smooth, nevertheless in truth it proves to be rough, and it is impossible to feel joy or pleasure without first feeling pain and again feeling additional pain. For it is always a grievous thing to feel pain in the midst of two painful states, one of them being at the beginning, and the other being added. <sup>g</sup>

42. (Gen. iii. 8) What is the meaning of the words, "The sound was heard of God's walking"? Can there be a noise of words or feet, or does God walk?

Whatever sensible gods are in heaven—that is, the stars—all move in a circle and proceed in revolutions. <sup>h</sup> But the highest and eldest cause <sup>i</sup> is stable and immobile, <sup>j</sup> as the theory of the ancients holds. For He gives an indication and impression <sup>k</sup> as though He wished to give the appearance <sup>l</sup> of moving; for though no voice is given forth, prophets hear through a certain power a divine voice sounding what is said to them. Accordingly, as He is heard without speaking, so also He gives the impression of walking without actually walking, indeed without moving at all. And you see that before there was any tasting of evil, (men) were stable, constant, immobile, peaceful and eternal; similarly and in the same way they believed God

<sup>a</sup> συρράπτουσι.                      <sup>b</sup> συνυφαίνουσι.                      <sup>c</sup> ἡδονάς.
<sup>d</sup> ὄργανον.                              <sup>e</sup> μειζόνων.                              <sup>f</sup> τραχύτερα.
<sup>g</sup> The Greek frag. paraphrases.
<sup>h</sup> περιφοραῖς ἢ περιόδοις.
<sup>i</sup> πρεσβυτέρα αἰτία.                      <sup>j</sup> βεβαία καὶ ἀκίνητος.
<sup>k</sup> φαντασίαν, ἐπιφάνειαν.                      <sup>l</sup> δόξαν.

GENESIS, BOOK I

to be, just as He is in truth. But after they had come into association with deceit, they moved of themselves, and changed from being immobile, and believed that there was alteration and change in Him.

43. (Gen. iii. 8) Why, when they hid themselves from the face of God, was not the woman, who first ate of the forbidden fruit, first mentioned, but the man ; for (Scripture) says, " Adam and his wife hid themselves " ?

It was the more imperfect and ignoble element, the female, that made a beginning of transgression<sup>a</sup> and lawlessness,<sup>b</sup> while the male made the beginning of reverence and modesty<sup>c</sup> and all good, since he was better and more perfect.

44. (Gen. iii. 8) Why did they hide themselves, not in any other place, but in the midst of the trees of Paradise ?

Not all things are done with reflection and wisdom by sinners ; but there are times when thieves sit over the theft which they have committed, not seeing the consequence<sup>d</sup> and that that which lies beside them and at their feet is already sought and hunted. So also it now befell. Whereas they ought to have fled far away from the tree whence came their transgression, in the very midst of this place he was caught, so that proof of their lawlessness was more evident and clear, and there was no fleeing. And thus (Scripture) symbolically indicates that every evil person has a refuge in evil, and every sensual person resorts to, and finds rest in, sensuality.

45. (Gen. iii. 9) Why does He, who knows all things, ask Adam, " Where art thou ? ", and why does He not also ask the woman ?

The things said appear to be not a question but a kind <sup>a</sup> παραβάσεως.

<sup>c</sup> αἰσχύνης.

<sup>b</sup> παρανομίας.
<sup>d</sup> τὸ ἀκόλουθον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of threat and reproach <sup>a</sup>: where art thou now, from what good hast thou removed thyself, O man!; giving up immortality and a blessed life, thou hast gone over to death and unhappiness, in which thou hast been buried. But the woman He did not consider it fitting to question, although she was the beginning of evil and led him (man) into a life of vileness.<sup>b</sup> But this passage also has a more apt<sup>c</sup> allegory. For the sovereign and ruling element<sup>d</sup> in man, having reason,<sup>e</sup> when it listens to anyone, introduces the vice of the female part also, that is, perception.

46. (Gen. iii. 12-13) Why does the man say, "The woman gave me of the tree and I ate," while the woman says, "The serpent did not give it, but deceived me, and I ate" <sup>f</sup>?

What is so stated (literally) contains a sentiment that is to be approved,<sup>g</sup> for woman is of a nature to be deceived rather than to reflect greatly, but man is the opposite here. But according to the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> the object of sense-perception<sup>i</sup> deceives and deludes the particular senses of an imperfect being to which it comes; and sense-perception being already infected by its object,<sup>j</sup> passes on the infection to the sovereign and ruling element.<sup>k</sup> So then the mind receives from sense, the giver, that which the latter has suffered. And sense is deceived and deluded by a sense-perceptible object,<sup>l</sup> but the senses of a wise man, like the reflections of his mind, are not to be deceived.

<sup>a</sup> ἀπειλή καὶ ἐπιτίμησις.

<sup>b</sup> τοῦ φαύλου.

<sup>c</sup> προχειροτέραν.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ἀρχηγετικὸν καὶ τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.

<sup>e</sup> λόγον.

<sup>f</sup> So the Arm. literally; one expects "the woman said not, 'the serpent gave me it,' but, 'the serpent deceived me and I ate.'" The "not" appears to be out of place.

<sup>g</sup> δόξαν ἀποδεκτὴν.

<sup>h</sup> πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ αἰσθητόν.

<sup>j</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ ὑποκειμένου.

<sup>k</sup> τῷ ἀρχηγετικῷ καὶ ἡγεμονικῷ (i.e. mind).

<sup>l</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ ὑποκειμένου αἰσθητοῦ.

GENESIS, BOOK I

47. (Gen. iii. 14-17) Why does He first curse the serpent, next the woman, and third the man ?

The arrangement of curses follows the order of the wrongdoing. The serpent was the first to deceive. Second, the woman sinned through him, yielding to deceit. Third the man (sinned), yielding to the woman's desire rather than to the divine commands. However the order also is well suited <sup>a</sup> to allegory ; for the serpent is a symbol of desire,<sup>b</sup> as was shown ; and woman is a symbol of sense, and man of mind. So that desire becomes the evil origin of sins, and this first deceives sense, while sense takes the mind captive.

48. (Gen. iii. 14-15) Why is this curse laid upon the serpent—to move upon its breast and belly, to eat dust and to have enmity toward woman ?

The text is plain, since we have as testimony that which we see. But according to the deeper meaning it is to be allegorically interpreted as follows. Since the serpent is a symbol of desire,<sup>c</sup> he takes the form <sup>d</sup> of lovers of pleasure,<sup>e</sup> for he crawls upon his breast and belly, stuffed with food and drink, and has the insatiable desire of a cormorant,<sup>f</sup> and is intemperate and unbridled in eating flesh.<sup>g</sup> And whatever has to do with food is altogether earthy ; wherefore he is said to eat dust. And desire has a natural enmity toward sense, which (Scripture) symbolically calls woman. And notwithstanding that desires seem to be critical<sup>h</sup> of the senses, they are in reality flatterers who plot evil in the manner of enemies. And it is the custom of adversaries<sup>i</sup> that through that which they bestow as gifts<sup>j</sup> they cause great harm, such as defectiveness of vision to the eyes, and difficulty of hearing to the ears, and insensibility<sup>k</sup> to the other (sense organs) ; and they bring

<sup>a</sup> καλῶς ἔχει.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπιθυμίας.

<sup>c</sup> ἐπιθυμίας.

<sup>d</sup> σχηματίζει or σχηματοποιεῖ.

<sup>e</sup> φιληδόνων.

<sup>f</sup> ἀκορέστη τῆς αἰτύας (?) ἐπιθυμία.

<sup>g</sup> σαρκοφαγία.

<sup>h</sup> φιλαίτιοι.

<sup>i</sup> Or "warriors"—πολεμίων.

<sup>j</sup> χαρίζονται.

<sup>k</sup> ἀναισθησίαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

upon the whole body together dissolution and paralysis,<sup>a</sup> taking away all its health<sup>b</sup> and for no good reason<sup>c</sup> newly bringing<sup>d</sup> many bad sicknesses.

49. (Gen. iii. 16) Why does the curse on the woman consist of an increase in sorrow and lamentation and in giving birth in pain and in turning<sup>e</sup> to her husband and being under his rule.<sup>f</sup>

This experience comes to every woman who lives together with<sup>g</sup> a man. It is (meant) not as a curse but as a necessity. But symbolically the senses of man have difficult labours and suffering,<sup>h</sup> being treated badly<sup>i</sup> and scourged by domestic ills.<sup>j</sup> And these are the offspring<sup>k</sup> of sense: seeing, of the organ of sight; hearing, of the organ of hearing; smelling, of the nostrils; tasting, of the organ of taste; contact, of the organ of touch. And since the life of the worthless and evil man is sorrowful and necessitous,<sup>l</sup> it is necessary that whatever is acted upon<sup>m</sup> by sense should be mixed with fear and suffering. But according to the deeper meaning, there takes place a turning of sense to the man, not as to a helper, for it is a subject of no worth,<sup>n</sup> but as to a master,<sup>o</sup> since it prizes force<sup>p</sup> more than righteousness.<sup>q</sup>

50. (Gen. iii. 17) Why does He curse the serpent and the woman by referring directly to them<sup>r</sup> and not do so similarly to the man, instead of placing it<sup>s</sup> on the earth, saying, "Cursed be the earth for thy sake; in sorrow shalt

- |  |   |
|--|---|
| <sup>a</sup> ἔκλυσιν καὶ παράλυσιν. <sup>c</sup> εἰκῆ. <sup>f</sup> κυριότητι οὐ ἐξουσία. <sup>h</sup> χαλεποὺς πόνοὺς καὶ ἀλγήματα. <sup>i</sup> φανλιζόμεναι vel sim. <sup>k</sup> ἔκγονοι. <sup>n</sup> ὑποκειμένη καὶ εὐτελής. <sup>p</sup> δυναστείαν οὐ βίαν. <sup>r</sup> νέυσας πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἐφ' ἑαυτούς. | <sup>b</sup> ὑγίειαν. <sup>e</sup> ἐπιστροφῆ. <sup>g</sup> συμβιώσα. <sup>j</sup> οἰκονομικαῖς κακίαις. <sup>l</sup> ἄπορος. <sup>m</sup> ἐνεργεῖται. <sup>o</sup> κύριον. <sup>q</sup> δικαιοσύνην. <sup>s</sup> i.e. the curse. |
|--|---|

GENESIS, BOOK I

thou eat it ; thistles and thorns it shall grow for thee, and thou shalt eat the grass of the field ; in the sweat of thy brow shalt thou eat thy bread " ?

Since the mind is a divine inbreathing,<sup>a</sup> He does not deem it right to curse it, but He turns the curse against the earth and its cultivation.<sup>b</sup> And the earth is of the same nature <sup>c</sup> as the body of man, of which the mind is the cultivator. When the cultivator is virtuous and worthy, the body also bears its fruits, namely health, keenness of sense,<sup>d</sup> power and beauty. But when he is cruel,<sup>e</sup> the opposite is brought to pass, for his body is cursed, receiving as its cultivator a mind undisciplined and imprudent.<sup>f</sup> And its fruit consists of nothing useful but only of thistles and thorns, sorrow and fear and other ills, while thoughts strike the mind and shoot arrows at it. And the " grass " is symbolically food, for he changes from a rational being to an irrational creature, overlooking <sup>g</sup> the divine foods ; these are those which are granted by philosophy through principles <sup>h</sup> and voluntary laws.<sup>i</sup>

*51. (Gen. iii. 19) What is the meaning of the words, " Until thou return to the earth from which thou wast taken " ? For man was moulded not only from the earth but also from the divine spirit.

First, it is evident that the earth-born creature was compounded out of earth and heaven. And because he did not remain uncorrupted <sup>j</sup> but made light of the commands of God, turning away from the best and most excellent part, namely heaven,<sup>k</sup> he gave himself wholly over to the earth, the denser and heavier element.<sup>l</sup> Second, if he had been desirous of virtue, which makes the soul immortal,<sup>m</sup> he would certainly have obtained heaven as his lot. Since

<sup>a</sup> ἐμφύσησις.      <sup>b</sup> γεωργίαν.      <sup>c</sup> ὁμοφυής or ὁμοούσιος.

<sup>d</sup> εὐαίσθησιαν.      <sup>e</sup> δεινός or χαλεπός vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> ἀπαίδευτον καὶ ἄφρονα.      <sup>g</sup> ὑπερορῶν.

<sup>h</sup> λόγων.      <sup>i</sup> ἐκουσίων νόμων.      <sup>j</sup> ἄφθαρτος.

<sup>k</sup> The Greek frag. reads differently.

<sup>l</sup> παχυτέρῳ καὶ βαρυτέρῳ στοιχείῳ.      <sup>m</sup> ἀθανατίζει τὴν ψυχὴν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

he was zealous for pleasure, through which spiritual death is brought about, he again gives himself back to earth ; accordingly Scripture says, "Dust thou art, wherefore to dust shalt thou return." Thus earth is the beginning and end of the evil and vile man, but heaven of the virtuous man.

52. (Gen. iii. 20) Why does the earth-born man call his wife "Life" and exclaim, "Thou art the mother of all living things" ?

First, he gave the name of Life, which was most suitable <sup>a</sup> to the first created woman, because she was to be the source of all the generations that were to come after them. Second, perhaps because she took the substance of her being <sup>b</sup> not from the earth but from a living being, and from one part of the man, the rib, was given bodily form as a woman, she was called Life ; for from a living being she first came into being, and because the first rational creatures were born to her. However it is also possible to understand this metaphorically <sup>c</sup> ; for is not sense, which is symbolically woman, rightly called Life ? For the living is distinguished from the non-living by sense, through which impressions <sup>d</sup> and impulses <sup>e</sup> come to us, since sense is the cause of these. And in truth sense is the mother of all living things ; just as nothing is born without a mother, so there is no living creature without sense.

53. (Gen. iii. 21) Why does God make tunics <sup>f</sup> of skin for Adam and his wife and clothe them ?

Some may ridicule the text when they consider the cheapness <sup>g</sup> of the apparel of tunics, as being unworthy of the touch <sup>h</sup> of such a Creator. But a man who has tasted <sup>a</sup> οἰκειότερον.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν τῆς ὑπάρξεως οὐσίαν or possibly τὴν τῆς οὐσίας σύστασιν.

<sup>c</sup> τροπικῶς.

<sup>d</sup> φαντασίαι.

<sup>e</sup> ὄρμαί.

<sup>f</sup> χιτῶνας.

<sup>g</sup> εὐτέλειαν.

<sup>h</sup> ἐφάπτεσθαι.

GENESIS, BOOK I

of wisdom and virtue <sup>a</sup> will surely consider this work suitable to God for the wise instruction <sup>b</sup> of those who labour idly <sup>c</sup> and care little about providing necessities but are mad for wretched glory <sup>d</sup> and give themselves up to amusement, and despise wisdom and virtue. Instead, they love a life of luxury <sup>e</sup> and the skill of the artificer <sup>f</sup> and that which is hostile to the good. <sup>g</sup> And the wretches do not know that contentment with little, <sup>h</sup> which is in need of nothing, is like a relative and neighbour, <sup>i</sup> but luxury <sup>j</sup> is like an enemy, to be driven away and made to live far off. Accordingly, the tunics of skin, if we judge truly, are to be considered a more precious possession <sup>k</sup> than varicoloured dyes and purple stuffs. So much, then, for the literal meaning. But according to the deeper meaning, <sup>l</sup> the tunic of skin is symbolically the natural skin of the body. <sup>m</sup> For when God formed the first mind, He called it Adam; then he formed the sense, which He called Life; in the third place, of necessity He made his body also, calling it symbolically a tunic of skin, for it was proper that the mind and sense should be clothed in the body as in a tunic of skin, in order that His handiwork might first appear worthy of the divine power. <sup>n</sup> And could the apparel of the human body be better or more fittingly made by any other power than God? Wherefore, having made their apparel, He straightway clothed them. For in the case of human clothing, there are some who make it and others who put it on. But this natural tunic, that is, the body, was the work of Him who had also made it, and having made it, also clothed them in it.

<sup>a</sup> σοφίας καὶ ἀρετῆς.

<sup>b</sup> εἰς παιδείαν σοφίας.

<sup>c</sup> ματαίως.

<sup>d</sup> πρὸς ταλαίπωρον δόξαν μαινόμενοι.

<sup>e</sup> βίον λαμπρόν.

<sup>f</sup> χειροτεχνίτου.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ μισόκαλον.

<sup>h</sup> ὀλιγόδεια.

<sup>i</sup> συγγενῆς καὶ γείτων.

<sup>j</sup> λαμπρότης οἱ πολυτέλεια.

<sup>k</sup> τιμαλφεστέραν κτῆσιν.

<sup>l</sup> πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ τοῦ σώματος φυσικὸν δέρμα.

<sup>n</sup> ἄξιον τῆς θείας δυνάμεως.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

54. (Gen. iii. 22) To whom does He say, " Behold, Adam is as one of us, to know good and evil " ?

" One of us " indicates plurality.<sup>a</sup> But it must not be thought that He spoke with His powers,<sup>b</sup> which He used as instruments <sup>c</sup> in making the whole universe.<sup>d</sup> Now the word " as " is indicative of an example and likeness and comparison <sup>e</sup> not of a dissimilarity.<sup>f</sup> For the intelligible and sense-perceptible good is known by God in one way and by man in another way.<sup>g</sup> For to the extent that the natures of those who inquire and comprehend <sup>h</sup> differ, as do those things which are accurately grasped and comprehended, to that extent is man's power able to comprehend.<sup>i</sup> And all these things are likenesses and forms and images in man. But in God they are archetypes and models and very brilliant examples of <sup>j</sup> dark things. And the unbegotten and uncreated One <sup>k</sup> and Father mingles and associates with no one. He holds out <sup>l</sup> to sight the glory of His powers.<sup>m</sup>

*55. (Gen. iii. 22) What is the meaning of the words, " Lest perchance he put forth his hand and take of the tree of life and eat and live forever " ? For there is neither doubt <sup>n</sup> nor envy <sup>o</sup> in God.

It is true that the Deity neither doubts nor envies. However, (Scripture) often uses ambiguous <sup>p</sup> terms and names, according as it indicates a principle as if addressed to man.<sup>q</sup> For the highest principles, as I have said, are two : one, that God is not like man ; and the

<sup>a</sup> πλῆθος.      <sup>b</sup> δυνάμεσι.      <sup>c</sup> ὄργανοις.      <sup>d</sup> τὸν κόσμον.

<sup>e</sup> δηλωτικὸν τῶν ὑποδειγμάτων καὶ ὁμοιοτήτων καὶ ἀναλογιῶν.

<sup>f</sup> ἀνομοιότητος.      <sup>g</sup> ἄλλως . . . ἄλλως.

<sup>h</sup> τῶν ἐξεταζόντων καὶ καταλαμβάνοντων.      <sup>i</sup> καταληπτική.

<sup>j</sup> ὑποδείγματα.      <sup>k</sup> ὁ ἀγέννητος καὶ ἀγέννητος.

<sup>l</sup> προτείνει.      <sup>m</sup> τὴν τῶν δυνάμεων δόξαν.

<sup>n</sup> ἐνδοιασμός, as in one Greek frag.

<sup>o</sup> φθόνος ἰβιδ.      <sup>p</sup> ἐνδοιαστικοῖς.

<sup>q</sup> The Greek frag. from John Monachus reads κατ' ἀναφορὰν ἐπὶ τὸ " ὡς ἄνθρωπος " κεφάλαιον.

GENESIS, BOOK I

other, that just as a man disciplines <sup>a</sup> his son, so the Lord God disciplines you. Accordingly, the first principle is a matter of authority,<sup>b</sup> while the second is one of discipline <sup>c</sup> and the first step in training,<sup>d</sup> in order that one may be quite voluntarily and gradually led into it.<sup>e</sup> For the words "lest perchance" are not a sign of doubt in God but an indication <sup>f</sup> of man's being a doubter by nature, and a manifestation of the affection <sup>g</sup> that exists in him. For whenever there comes to someone an appearance of something, there immediately follows an impulse <sup>h</sup> toward the appearance, of which the appearance is the cause.<sup>i</sup> And (so comes) the second uncertainty <sup>j</sup> of one who is in doubt and is drawn here and there in spirit, whether (the appearance) is to be received or not. It is this second "lest perchance" that these words indicate. The Deity, however, is without part <sup>k</sup> in any evil and is not envious of immortality or anything else whatever in the case of the good man. And a sure sign of this is that without being urged by anyone,<sup>l</sup> He created the world as a benefactor,<sup>m</sup> making contentious, disordered, confused and passive substance <sup>n</sup> into something gracious and lovingly mild with a great and harmonious order and array of good things. And the truly existent One <sup>o</sup> planted the tree of life by His lucid understanding.<sup>p</sup> Moreover, He did not use any intermediary to urge Him or exhort Him <sup>q</sup> to give others a share of incorruptibility.<sup>r</sup> Now while (man's) mind was pure and received no impression <sup>s</sup>

<sup>a</sup> παιδεύει.                      <sup>b</sup> ἐξουσίας.                      <sup>c</sup> παιδείας.

<sup>d</sup> τῆς πρώτης εἰς ἐπιτήδευμα ἀγωγῆς.

<sup>e</sup> καὶ ἐκούσιος παρεισάγεται.

<sup>f</sup> νεῦμα, but cf. Procopius.                      <sup>g</sup> πάθος.                      <sup>h</sup> ὁρμή.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. construction not quite clear.

<sup>j</sup> ἀπορία.

<sup>k</sup> ἀμέτοχος.

<sup>l</sup> μηδενὸς παρακαλουμένον.

<sup>m</sup> εὐεργετῶν.

<sup>n</sup> ἐρίζουσαν καὶ ἄκοσμον καὶ ἄτακτον καὶ πάσχουσαν οὐσίαν.

<sup>o</sup> ὁ ὄντως Ὄν.

<sup>p</sup> τῇ λαμπρῇ (φωτεινῇ) φρονήσει.

<sup>q</sup> μεσίτῃ παρακαλοῦντι καὶ προτρέποντι.

<sup>r</sup> πρὸς τὴν τῆς ἀφθαρσίας κοινωνίαν.

<sup>s</sup> φαντασίαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of any evil deed or word, he had secure enjoyment <sup>a</sup> of that which led him to piety,<sup>b</sup> which is unquestioned and true immortality.<sup>c</sup> But after he began to turn to wickedness <sup>d</sup> and to hurl himself down <sup>e</sup> thereto, desiring mortal life, he failed to obtain immortality,<sup>f</sup> for it is unseemly <sup>g</sup> to immortalize <sup>h</sup> evil, and it is unprofitable for him to whom it happens. For the longer the evil and wicked man lives, the more wretched he is and the more greatly harmful both to himself and to others.

56. (Gen. iii. 23) Why does He now call Paradise "delight," <sup>i</sup> when He drives man out of it to till the earth, from which he was taken?

The difference in agriculture is clear.<sup>j</sup> When he was cultivating wisdom in Paradise, he took care <sup>k</sup> of the cultivation of wisdom as if of trees, nourishing himself on its immortal and beneficial fruits, through which he became immortal. And when he was driven out of the place of wisdom, he was to practise the opposite, (namely) works of ignorance,<sup>l</sup> through which his body is polluted,<sup>m</sup> and his mind is blinded,<sup>n</sup> and being starved of his own food,<sup>o</sup> he wastes away and suffers a miserable death. Wherefore now indeed as a reproach to the foolish man <sup>p</sup> He called Paradise "pleasure" as the antithesis <sup>q</sup> of a painful and terrible life. For in truth a life of wisdom is a delight of spacious joy <sup>r</sup> and an enjoyment most suitable to the rational soul.<sup>s</sup> But a life without wisdom is harsh and

<sup>a</sup> ἄδειαν τῆς ἀπολαύσεως.

<sup>b</sup> εὐσέβειαν.

<sup>c</sup> ἀψευδῆς καὶ ἀληθῆς ἀθανασία.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ φαῦλον.

<sup>e</sup> ἑαυτὸν καταρρίπτειν.

<sup>f</sup> διήμαρτε τῆς ἀθανασίας.

<sup>g</sup> ἀπρεπές.

<sup>h</sup> ἀθανατίζειν.

<sup>i</sup> τρυφή = Heb. 'ēden.

<sup>j</sup> ἡ τῆς γεωργίας διαφορὰ σαφῆς ἐστὶ.

<sup>k</sup> ἐπεμελεῖτο.

<sup>l</sup> τὰ τῆς ἀμαθίας ἔργα.

<sup>m</sup> βεβηλοῦται, μαίνεται.

<sup>n</sup> τυφλοῦται.

<sup>o</sup> πεινῶν τῆς ἑαυτοῦ τροφῆς.

<sup>p</sup> εἰς ὄνειδος τοῦ ἄφρονος.

<sup>q</sup> εἰς ἀντίθεσιν.

<sup>r</sup> εὐρυχώρου εὐφροσύνης.

<sup>s</sup> οἰκειοτάτη τῇ λογικῇ ψυχῇ.

GENESIS, BOOK I

terrible. For even though one is completely deceived by sense-pleasures, both before and after (them) comes suffering.

57. (Gen. iii. 24) Why did He place<sup>a</sup> over against Paradise the cherubim and the fiery<sup>b</sup> sword, which was turning, to guard the way to the tree of life?

The cherubim are symbols of the two primary attributes<sup>c</sup> of God, namely the creative<sup>d</sup> and the kingly,<sup>e</sup> of which one is called God,<sup>f</sup> and the other, the kingly one, is called Lord.<sup>g</sup> And the form of the creative attribute is a benevolent and friendly and beneficent<sup>h</sup> power. But that of the kingly attribute is legislative and punitive.<sup>i</sup> Moreover "fiery sword" is a symbolical name for heaven, for the ether<sup>j</sup> is flamelike and turns round the world.<sup>k</sup> And as all these have undertaken the guarding of Paradise, it is evident that they are overseers of wisdom,<sup>l</sup> like a mirror. For in a certain sense<sup>m</sup> the wisdom of the world was a mirror of the powers of God, in accordance with which it became perfect<sup>n</sup> and this universe is governed and managed.<sup>o</sup> But the road to wisdom is called philosophy, for the creative power is a lover of wisdom<sup>p</sup>; so also the kingly power is a lover of wisdom, and the world too is a lover of wisdom. But there are some who say that the fiery sword is the sun, since by its revolution and turning it reveals the yearly seasons,<sup>q</sup> as if it were the guardian of life and of whatever leads to the life of all things.

<sup>a</sup> κατώκισε: LXX κατώκισε . . . καὶ ἔταξε.

<sup>b</sup> πυρίνην: LXX φλογίνην.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν δυοῖν πρώτων δυνάμεων.

<sup>d</sup> τῆς ποιητικῆς. <sup>e</sup> τῆς βασιλικῆς.

<sup>f</sup> θεός. <sup>g</sup> κύριος.

<sup>h</sup> εὐμενῆς καὶ φίλη καὶ εὐεργετική.

<sup>i</sup> νομοθετική καὶ κολαστική. <sup>j</sup> αἰθήρ.

<sup>k</sup> αἰῶνα. <sup>l</sup> ἐπιστάται τῆς σοφίας.

<sup>m</sup> τρόπον τινά. <sup>n</sup> ἐτελειώθη.

<sup>o</sup> κυβερνᾶται καὶ οἰκονομεῖται. <sup>p</sup> φιλοσοφική.

<sup>q</sup> τοὺς ἔτησίους χρόνους.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

58. (Gen. iv. 1) Was it correctly said about Cain, "I have acquired <sup>a</sup> a man through God" ? <sup>b</sup>

(Concerning acquisition) a distinction is made between "by someone" <sup>c</sup> or "from someone" <sup>d</sup> and "through something" <sup>e</sup> or "from something," that is, from matter. <sup>f</sup> "Through someone" means through a cause, <sup>g</sup> and "through something" means through an instrument. <sup>h</sup> But the father and creator of the universe <sup>i</sup> is not an instrument but a cause. Accordingly he errs against correct thinking <sup>j</sup> who says that things <sup>k</sup> come into being not by the agency of God <sup>l</sup> but through God. <sup>m</sup>

*59. (Gen. iv. 2) Why does (Scripture) first describe the work of the younger man Abel, saying, "He became a shepherd of flocks, and Cain tilled the ground" ?

Even though the righteous man <sup>n</sup> was younger in time than the wicked one, <sup>o</sup> still he was older in activity. <sup>p</sup> Wherefore now, when their activities are appraised, <sup>q</sup> he is placed first in order. For one of them labours and takes care of living beings <sup>r</sup> even though they are irrational, <sup>s</sup> gladly undertaking the pastoral work which is preparatory <sup>t</sup> to rulership and kingship. But the other occupies himself with earthly and inanimate things.

<sup>a</sup> ἐκτησάμην.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. has instrumental case of θεός : LXX διὰ τοῦ θεοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. has instrumental case of indef. m. pr.

<sup>d</sup> ἔκ τινος.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. has instrumental case of indef. n. pr.

<sup>f</sup> ἐξ ὕλης. <sup>g</sup> δι' αἰτίαν, ἐξ αἰτίας.

<sup>h</sup> δι' ὄργανου, ἐξ ὄργανου.

<sup>i</sup> πατήρ καὶ ποιητὴς τοῦ παντός.

<sup>j</sup> ὀρθοῦ λογισμοῦ, λόγου. <sup>k</sup> τὰ γενόμενα.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. has ablative case of "God."

<sup>m</sup> Arm. has instrumental case of "God."

<sup>n</sup> ὁ δίκαιος in Procopius. <sup>o</sup> τοῦ φαύλου.

<sup>p</sup> ἐπιτηδεύμασι in Procopius.

<sup>q</sup> Or "tested" ? (δοκιμάζονται) : Aucher "conferenda sunt."

<sup>r</sup> ἐμψύχων. <sup>s</sup> ἀλόγων. <sup>t</sup> προγυμναστικόν.

GENESIS, BOOK I

*60. (Gen. iv. 3-4). Why did Cain after some days<sup>a</sup> offer firstfruits of offerings,<sup>b</sup> while Abel (brought an offering) from the first-born<sup>c</sup> and fat ones, not after some days? "

Scripture manifests a distinction between the lover of self and the lover of God. For one of them took for himself the fruit of the firstfruits and impiously thought God worthy (only) of the second fruits. For the words "after some days" instead of "immediately" and "from the offerings" instead of "from the firstfruits"<sup>d</sup> indicate great wickedness.<sup>e</sup> But the other offered<sup>f</sup> the first-born and elder animals without any delay at all or rejection by his Father.

*61. (Gen. iv. 4-5) Why does (Scripture), having begun by first mentioning Cain, (now) mention him in second place, for it says, "God looked upon Abel and his offerings,<sup>g</sup> but of Cain and his sacrifice<sup>h</sup> He did not approve"<sup>i</sup>?

First, (Scripture) does not mean that he is first by nature who happens to be the first to be perceived, but he who comes in his time and with sound morals. Second, as there were two persons, good and evil, He turned toward the good man, looking upon him because He is a lover of goodness and virtue,<sup>j</sup> and first seeing him to be more inclined toward that side in the order of nature,<sup>k</sup> He

<sup>a</sup> Arm. obscure: Aucher "post dies primitias fructuum offert," in note "vel ita, post dies primitiarum primitias offert," but cf. Greek fragments.

<sup>b</sup> Procopius differs: lxx από τῶν καρπῶν τῆς γῆς θυσίαν.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν πρωτοτόκων.

<sup>d</sup> τῶν πρωτοτόκων.

<sup>e</sup> ἀδικίαν, ἀνομίαν.

<sup>f</sup> ἀγιάζων ἦν, ἀνατιθέμενος ἦν.

<sup>g</sup> δῶρα, προσφοράς.

<sup>h</sup> θυσία.

<sup>i</sup> οὐκ ἠδόκησε; Aucher suggests ἡγεσάω "looked" for ἡδέσάω "approved." lxx οὐ προσέσχεν.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher translates, "seeing that he (Abel) is a lover of goodness and virtue," but in that case we should expect in the Arm. zi "that" for wasn zi "because."

<sup>k</sup> τῇ τῆς φύσεως τάξει.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

deprecates <sup>a</sup> and turns away from the evil man. Accordingly, most excellently (Scripture) says not that God saw the offerings <sup>b</sup> but that He first saw those who were offering gifts <sup>c</sup> before the gifts themselves, for men look at the quantity of gifts and approve <sup>d</sup> them; but God looks at the truth of the soul, <sup>e</sup> turning aside <sup>f</sup> from arrogance <sup>g</sup> and flattery. <sup>h</sup>

*62. (Gen. iv. 4-5) What difference is there between a gift <sup>i</sup> and a sacrifice? <sup>j</sup>

He who slaughters <sup>k</sup> a sacrifice, <sup>l</sup> after dividing it, pours the blood on <sup>m</sup> the altar <sup>n</sup> and takes the flesh home. But he who offers <sup>o</sup> something as a gift <sup>p</sup> offers the whole of it, it seems, to him who receives it. And the lover of self is a divider, <sup>q</sup> as was Cain, while the lover of God is a giver, <sup>r</sup> as was Abel.

*63. (Gen. iv. 5) Whence did Cain know that his sacrifice was not pleasing? <sup>s</sup>

Perhaps his difficulty was resolved through the cause mentioned in the addition <sup>t</sup>; for he was grieved <sup>u</sup> and his countenance fell. He therefore took this grief as a sign of having sacrificed something not pleasing. For joy <sup>v</sup> and gladness <sup>w</sup> ought to come to him who sacrifices something purely <sup>x</sup> and blamelessly. <sup>y</sup>

- |   |   |
|---|---|
| <sup>a</sup> παραιτείται. <sup>c</sup> τοὺς τὰ δῶρα προσφέροντας. <sup>e</sup> εἰς τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀλήθειαν. <sup>g</sup> ἀλαζονείας, τύφους, ὑπερηφανίας vel sim. <sup>h</sup> κολακειάς. <sup>k</sup> θύει, σφάττει. <sup>m</sup> Or "around," v.l. "near." <sup>n</sup> βωμόν, θυσιαστήριον. <sup>p</sup> ὡς δῶρον. <sup>r</sup> δωρούμενος, as in Greek fragments. <sup>t</sup> In the second half of verse 5. <sup>v</sup> εὐφροσύνη. <sup>x</sup> καθαρῶς. | <sup>b</sup> τὰ προσφερόμενα. <sup>d</sup> δοκιμάζουσι. <sup>f</sup> ἐκκλίνων. <sup>i</sup> θυσία. <sup>j</sup> θυσίαν. <sup>o</sup> προσφέρει. <sup>q</sup> ἐπιδιαιρῶν, as in Greek fragments. <sup>s</sup> ἀρεστή. <sup>u</sup> ἐλυπήθη. <sup>w</sup> χαρά. <sup>y</sup> ἀμώμως. |
|---|---|

GENESIS, BOOK I

*64. (Gen. iv. 7) What is the meaning of the words, "Not that thou dost not offer rightly,<sup>a</sup> but that thou dost not divide rightly"?

First of all, correct division and incorrect division are nothing else than order.<sup>b</sup> And through order equally<sup>c</sup> are made the whole world and its parts.<sup>d</sup> Wherefore the creator of the world,<sup>e</sup> when He began to order<sup>f</sup> refractory<sup>g</sup> and unordered<sup>h</sup> and passive<sup>i</sup> substance,<sup>j</sup> made use of cutting<sup>k</sup> and division. For in the midst of the universe,<sup>l</sup> He placed the heavy things<sup>m</sup> and those that naturally bear downwards,<sup>n</sup> (namely) earth and water; but air and fire He placed above, for they ascend through their lightness.<sup>o</sup> But He separated<sup>p</sup> and marked off<sup>q</sup> the pure nature, (namely) heaven, and surrounded and enclosed<sup>r</sup> the universe by it, that it might be invisible<sup>s</sup> to all, containing within itself all things equally.<sup>t</sup> But the fact that animals and plants come into being from moist and dry seeds<sup>u</sup>—what else is this than a cutting and separative division?<sup>v</sup> Accordingly it is necessary to imitate this order in all things in the world and especially in returning thanks for those things for which we are required<sup>w</sup> to make a corresponding<sup>x</sup> return to him who gives them to us. In the second place, to give thanks<sup>y</sup> to God is right in itself<sup>z</sup> specifically,<sup>a</sup> but it is blameworthy that He should not first receive them nor receive the first of the new products. For it is not proper to offer the best things<sup>b</sup> to that which is created, namely oneself, <sup>a</sup> ὀρθῶς.

<sup>b</sup> τάξις.

<sup>c</sup> ἴσως.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ κόσμος καὶ τὰ αὐτοῦ μέρη. <sup>e</sup> ὁ τοῦ κόσμου ποιητής.

<sup>f</sup> τάττειν.

<sup>g</sup> ἐρίζουσαν.

<sup>h</sup> ἄτακτον.

<sup>i</sup> πάσχουσαν.

<sup>j</sup> οὐσίαν.

<sup>k</sup> τομῇ, διαιρέσει.

<sup>l</sup> τοῦ παντός.

<sup>m</sup> τὰ βαρῆ.

<sup>n</sup> τὰ φύσει καταφερῆ.

<sup>o</sup> κούφισιν.

<sup>p</sup> διεχώρισε.

<sup>q</sup> ἀφώρισε.

<sup>r</sup> περιβάλλον συνέκλεισε.

<sup>s</sup> ἀόρατος: Aucher conj. tesaneli = ὄρατός.

<sup>t</sup> ἴσως οἱ κοινῇ.

<sup>u</sup> ἐξ ὑγρῶν καὶ ξηρῶν σπερμάτων.

<sup>v</sup> διάστημα διακρίσεως.

<sup>w</sup> ἐξεταζόμεθα?

<sup>x</sup> ἄλλω τρόπῳ?

<sup>y</sup> εὐχαριστεῖν.

<sup>z</sup> καθ' ἑαυτό.

<sup>a</sup> ἰδίως.

<sup>b</sup> τὰ πρεσβεῖα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and the second best to the All-wise. This is a reprehensible and blameworthy division,<sup>a</sup> showing a certain disorderliness of order.<sup>b</sup>

*65. (Gen. iv. 7) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou hast sinned, be quiet" ?<sup>c</sup>

The oracle<sup>d</sup> utters something very useful. For not to sin at all is the greatest good. But he who sins and is abashed and ashamed is kin to this man<sup>e</sup> and, as one might say, is the younger beside the elder. For there are some who rejoice<sup>f</sup> over sins as if over good deeds,<sup>g</sup> thus having a disease<sup>h</sup> that is difficult to cure<sup>i</sup> or rather is incurable.<sup>j</sup> *66. (Gen. iv. 7) Why does He seem to give the good man into the hand of the evil man, saying, "To thee is his return" ?

He does not give him into his hand, but the sense<sup>k</sup> is quite the contrary, for He speaks not of the pious man<sup>l</sup> but of an act already done. And He says to him, "the return<sup>m</sup> and reference<sup>n</sup> of this impiety is to thee.<sup>o</sup> Do not therefore blame necessity,<sup>p</sup> but thine own character,<sup>q</sup> so that in this place He represents it as voluntary.<sup>r</sup> But the words, 'thou shalt rule over him,' again have reference<sup>s</sup> to an act." In the first place thou didst begin to act impiously, and then another wrong<sup>t</sup> follows a great and impious lawlessness.<sup>u</sup> And so He considers and proves<sup>v</sup> that this is the beginning of every voluntary wrongdoing.

<sup>a</sup> διαίρεσις.      <sup>b</sup> ἀταξίαν τινὰ τάξεως, as in John Monachus.

<sup>c</sup> = LXX ἡμαρτες, ἡσύχασον.      <sup>d</sup> χρησμός.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the one who does not sin.      <sup>f</sup> ἀγάλλονται.

<sup>g</sup> κατορθώμασι.      <sup>h</sup> πάθος.      <sup>i</sup> δυσίατον.      <sup>j</sup> ἀνίατον.

<sup>k</sup> ἀκοή?      <sup>l</sup> θεοσεβοῦς.      <sup>m</sup> ἀποστροφή.      <sup>n</sup> ἀναφορά.

<sup>o</sup> πρὸς σέ ἐστιν.      <sup>p</sup> μὴ τὴν ἀνάγκην αἰτίαςης.

<sup>q</sup> ἦθος, τρόπον.      <sup>r</sup> ἐκούσιον.

<sup>s</sup> νεῦμα.      <sup>t</sup> ἀδικία.

<sup>u</sup> μεγάλην ἀνομίας ἀσεβίαν.      <sup>v</sup> ἐλέγχει.

GENESIS, BOOK I

67. (Gen. iv. 8) Why does he (Cain) kill his brother in the field? <sup>a</sup>

In order that <sup>b</sup> when once again it is sown or planted, infertility <sup>c</sup> and unfruitfulness <sup>d</sup> may altogether come upon its fruits, and by bringing the murder to mind, may reveal its foulness. <sup>e</sup> For the ground <sup>f</sup> was not to be the same after being forced to drink human blood unnaturally so as also to grow food for him who polluted it with the blood of a foul deed.

*68. (Gen. iv. 9) Why does He who knows all ask the fratricide, "Where is Abel, thy brother?"?

He wishes that man himself of his own will shall confess, <sup>g</sup> in order that he may not pretend <sup>h</sup> that all things seem to come about through necessity. <sup>i</sup> For he who killed through necessity would confess <sup>j</sup> that he acted unwillingly; for that which is not in our power <sup>k</sup> is not to be blamed. <sup>l</sup> But he who sins of his own free will <sup>m</sup> denies it, <sup>n</sup> for sinners are obliged to repent. <sup>o</sup> Accordingly he (Moses) inserts <sup>p</sup> in all parts of his legislation <sup>q</sup> that the Deity is not the cause of evil.

*69. (Gen. iv. 9) Why does he (Cain) reply as if to a man, saying, "I do not know. Am I my brother's keeper?"?

It is an atheistic <sup>r</sup> belief not to hold that the divine eye penetrates <sup>s</sup> all things and sees all things at one time, not only what is visible but also what is in recesses, depths and abysses. "Why dost thou not know where thy brother is?" someone will say. "And how shouldst thou not know this, being the fourth man in the world together

<sup>a</sup> ἐν τῷ πεδίῳ.

<sup>b</sup> v.l. "lest."

<sup>c</sup> ἀφορία.

<sup>d</sup> ἀκαρπία, ἀγονία.

<sup>e</sup> βδέλυγμα.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ἔδαφος.

<sup>g</sup> ἐξομολογήται.

<sup>h</sup> προσποιῆται.

<sup>i</sup> ἀνάγκη.

<sup>j</sup> Construction of Arm. uncertain.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "in us."

<sup>l</sup> ἀνυπαίτιόν ἐστιν.

<sup>m</sup> ἐκουσία γνώμη.

<sup>n</sup> ἀπαρνέεται.

<sup>o</sup> τῇ μετανοίᾳ ἐνοχοί.

<sup>p</sup> ὑφαίνει.

<sup>q</sup> τῆς νομοθεσίας.

<sup>r</sup> ἄθεος.

<sup>s</sup> διήκει.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

with thy two parents and thine only brother ? ” But the reply, “ I am not my brother’s keeper ” is a fine defence ! <sup>a</sup> And of whom else rather than of thy brother shouldst thou have been a keeper and protector ? <sup>b</sup> Thou didst show so much care for violence, <sup>c</sup> injustice, <sup>d</sup> treachery <sup>e</sup> and homicide, <sup>f</sup> which is a great abomination <sup>g</sup> and accursed <sup>h</sup> deed, but didst show contempt for <sup>i</sup> thy brother’s safety, as though it were something superfluous. <sup>j</sup>

*70. (Gen. iv. 10) What is the meaning of the words, “ The voice of thy brother calls to me from the earth ” ?

This is most exemplary, <sup>k</sup> for the Deity hears the deserving <sup>l</sup> even though they are dead, <sup>m</sup> knowing that they live an incorporeal life. <sup>n</sup> But from the prayers of evil men He turns away His face even though they enjoy the prime of life, <sup>o</sup> considering that they are dead to true life and bear their body with them like a tomb that they may bury their unhappy soul <sup>p</sup> in it.

71. (Gen. iv. 11) Why does he (Cain) become accursed upon <sup>q</sup> the earth ?

The earth is the last <sup>r</sup> of the parts of the universe. <sup>s</sup> Accordingly, if this curses him, it is understandable that appropriate <sup>t</sup> curses will be laid upon him by the other elements <sup>u</sup> as well, namely by springs, rivers, sea, air, winds, fire, light, the sun, the moon, the stars and the whole heaven together. <sup>v</sup> For if inanimate <sup>w</sup> and terrestrial

- <sup>a</sup> ἀπολογία.                      <sup>b</sup> ὑπερασπιστής.                      <sup>c</sup> βία.                      <sup>d</sup> ἀδικία.
<sup>e</sup> Text uncertain ; I conj. dawaçank' = ἐπιβουλία for Arm. dawank = ὁμολογία.                      <sup>f</sup> ἀνδροφονία.
<sup>g</sup> βδέλυγμα.                      <sup>h</sup> κατάρατον.                      <sup>i</sup> κατεφρόνησας.
<sup>j</sup> περισσόν.                      <sup>k</sup> δογματικώτατον.
<sup>l</sup> ὁσίων or δικαίων in Greek fragments.
<sup>m</sup> καίπερ τελευτήσαντας.                      <sup>n</sup> ζώην ἀσώματον.
<sup>o</sup> κἂν εὐεξία χρήσωνται in the Greek fragments.
<sup>p</sup> ταλαίπωρον ψυχὴν.                      <sup>q</sup> ἐν or ἐπί: LXX ἀπό <sup>r</sup> ἔσχατον or “ latest ” ὕστατον.                      <sup>s</sup> τοῦ κόσμου.
<sup>t</sup> ἀρμονικάς, ἀκολουθούς.                      <sup>u</sup> στοιχεῖα.
<sup>v</sup> κοινή.                      <sup>w</sup> ἄψυχος.

GENESIS, BOOK I

nature opposes and revolts <sup>a</sup> against wrongdoing, <sup>b</sup> will not purer natures <sup>c</sup> do so still more? But he with whom the parts of the universe wage war—what hope of salvation <sup>d</sup> will he any longer have? I do not know.

*72. (Gen. iv. 12) What is the meaning of the words, “Groaning and trembling <sup>e</sup> shalt thou be upon the earth”?

This too is a universal principle.<sup>f</sup> For every evildoer has something which immediately awaits him and is to come.<sup>g</sup> For things to come <sup>h</sup> already bring fears,<sup>i</sup> and that which is immediately present causes grief.<sup>j</sup>

*73. (Gen. iv. 13) What is the meaning of the words, “Too great is my guilt <sup>k</sup> to let me go”?

Indeed there is no misfortune of greater hopelessness <sup>m</sup> than God’s leaving and abandoning <sup>n</sup> one. For the lack of a ruler <sup>o</sup> is terrible and difficult for depraved men. But to be overlooked <sup>p</sup> by a great king and to be cast out and rejected <sup>q</sup> by the chief authority is an indescribable misfortune.<sup>r</sup>

*74. (Gen. iv. 14) What is the meaning of the words, “Every one who finds me will kill me,” inasmuch as there were no other people but his parents?

<sup>a</sup> ἀντιλέγει καὶ στασιάζει.

<sup>b</sup> ἀδικίαν.

<sup>c</sup> καθαρωτέραι φύσεις.

<sup>d</sup> σωτηρίας.

<sup>e</sup> στενάζων καὶ τρέμων: so LXX: Heb. different (A.V.

“a fugitive and a vagabond”).

<sup>f</sup> λόγιον καθολικώτατον in Procopius.

<sup>g</sup> δεχόμενον καὶ μέλλον.

<sup>h</sup> τὰ μέλλοντα.

<sup>i</sup> φόβους.

<sup>j</sup> λύπας.

<sup>k</sup> αἰτία.

<sup>l</sup> Cf. LXX τοῦ ἀφειθῆναί με; Arm. O.T. “for thee to let me go.”

<sup>m</sup> μείζονος ἀπορίας.

<sup>n</sup> ἀφίεναι καὶ ἐγκαταλείπειν.

<sup>o</sup> ἀναρχία.

<sup>p</sup> Or “looked down upon”—παρορᾶσθαι or ὑπερορᾶσθαι.

<sup>q</sup> ἀποβάλλεσθαι.

<sup>r</sup> ἀτυχία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

First of all, he was likely <sup>a</sup> to suffer harm from the parts of the world, which were made for the use <sup>b</sup> and participation <sup>c</sup> of good men but none the less exact punishment from the wicked. Second, because he feared the attacks of beasts and reptiles, for nature produced these for the punishment of unjust men. Third, perhaps one may think of his parents, to whom he first brought new grief and their first misfortune,<sup>d</sup> as they had not known what death is.

75. (Gen. iv. 15) Why shall everyone who slays Cain suffer seven punishments ?

Our soul <sup>e</sup> is made and constituted of eight parts : of the rational part,<sup>f</sup> which permits of no division, and of the irrational part,<sup>g</sup> which is naturally <sup>h</sup> divided into seven parts—the five senses,<sup>i</sup> the organ of speech and the organ of reproduction. And these seven parts are the causes of wickedness and are brought to judgment.<sup>j</sup> And death is acceptable <sup>k</sup> to the chief ruler (i.e. the mind) in whom evil is.<sup>l</sup> Accordingly whoever kills the mind <sup>m</sup> by mixing in folly <sup>n</sup> instead of sense <sup>o</sup> will cause the dissolution and breaking up <sup>p</sup> of the seven irrational parts. For just as the chief ruler is disposed toward virtue,<sup>q</sup> so also are disposed <sup>r</sup> the parts which are subordinate to him.<sup>s</sup>

*76. (Gen. iv. 15) Why is a sign placed upon the fratricide in order that any who finds him may not kill him, when it

<sup>a</sup> συνέβη αὐτῷ.                      <sup>b</sup> ὠφέλειαν.                      <sup>c</sup> κοινωνίαν.

<sup>d</sup> Procopius reads more briefly κοινὸν πένθος.

<sup>e</sup> ψυχῆ.                      <sup>f</sup> τὸ λογικόν.                      <sup>g</sup> τὸ ἄλογον.

<sup>h</sup> πέφυκε.                      <sup>i</sup> αἰσθήσεις.                      <sup>j</sup> εἰς κρίσιν.                      <sup>k</sup> ἀγαπητός.

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. construction is not clear to me ; Aucher's rendering is very doubtful, "mors autem principis praesidis (mentis sc.) proprie est illa quae in eo sedet malitia." The word "ruler" (ἰσχαν) is nom., not gen. as Aucher renders.

<sup>m</sup> τὸν νοῦν.                      <sup>n</sup> ἀφροσύνην.                      <sup>o</sup> αἴσθησιν.

<sup>p</sup> λύσιν καὶ παράλυσιν.                      <sup>q</sup> πρὸς ἀρετὴν ἔχει.

<sup>r</sup> ἀρμόζεται.                      <sup>s</sup> αὐτῷ ὑποτάττεται.

GENESIS, BOOK I

was fitting to do the opposite <sup>a</sup> and give him into the hands (of another) for destruction ?

First, one kind of death is the change of nature of the living. But continuous sorrows, unmixed with joy, and violent fears, <sup>b</sup> empty <sup>c</sup> of good hope, bring on <sup>d</sup> many grave and manifold <sup>e</sup> deaths, which are caused by sense. <sup>f</sup> Second, immediately at the outset <sup>g</sup> (Scripture) wishes to describe the law of the incorruptibility of the soul <sup>h</sup> and to refute the false belief <sup>i</sup> of those who think that this bodily life alone is blessed. <sup>j</sup> For behold one of the two (brothers) is guilty <sup>k</sup> of the greatest evils, namely impiety <sup>l</sup> and fratricide, and yet is alive and begets children and founds cities. But he who gave evidence of piety is destroyed by cunning. <sup>m</sup> Not only does the divine word <sup>n</sup> clearly proclaim that it is not the life of sense <sup>o</sup> which is good and that death is not an evil, but also that the life of the body is not even related <sup>p</sup> (to life). But there is another (life) unaging and immortal, <sup>q</sup> which incorporeal souls <sup>r</sup> receive as their lot. <sup>s</sup> For that which was said by the poet about Scylla, "She is not a mortal but an immortal evil," <sup>t</sup> was said more appropriately about him who lives evilly and enjoys many years of life. Third, although Cain in the first place committed a great fratricide, He offers him an amnesty, <sup>u</sup> imposing a benevolent and kindly law concerning the first (crime) on all judges, not that they may not destroy evil men, but that by hesitating <sup>v</sup> a little and showing patience, <sup>w</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τὸναντίον.

<sup>b</sup> ἄκρατοι φόβοι. Aucher mistakenly takes Arm. anarak (= ἄκρατος) in the sense of "unmixed" ("meri").

<sup>c</sup> ἀμέτοχοι.

<sup>d</sup> ἐπάγουσι.

<sup>e</sup> πολυτρόπους.

<sup>f</sup> Arm. construction doubtful, but apparently = διδούσης τῆς αἰσθήσεως, cf. the Greek frag. <sup>g</sup> εὐθὺς ἐν τῇ ἀρχῇ.

<sup>h</sup> τῆς τῆς ψυχῆς ἀφθαρσίας.

<sup>i</sup> ἐξελέγχειν τὴν ψευδοδοξίαν.

<sup>j</sup> μακάριος.

<sup>k</sup> ἔνοχος.

<sup>l</sup> ἀσεβείας.

<sup>m</sup> ἐπιβουλῇ διαφθείρεται.

<sup>n</sup> ὁ τοῦ κυρίου λόγος.

<sup>o</sup> ἢ αἰσθητῇ ζωῇ.

<sup>p</sup> οὐ συγγενῆς ἐστι.

<sup>q</sup> ἀγήρωσ καὶ ἀθάνατος.

<sup>r</sup> ἀσώματοι ψυχαί.

<sup>s</sup> λαγχάνουσι.

<sup>t</sup> Odyssey xii. 118.

<sup>u</sup> ἀμνησίαν.

<sup>v</sup> πανόμνοι.

<sup>w</sup> μακροθυμοῦντες.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

they may cleave to mercy rather than to cruelty. But He most wisely <sup>a</sup> prescribed a canon of gentleness <sup>b</sup> and understanding <sup>c</sup> concerning the first sinner, not killing the homicide but destroying <sup>d</sup> him in another manner. For He did not permit him to be numbered with his father's family, <sup>e</sup> but announces that he is proscribed not only by his parents but also by the whole human race, counting him a genus <sup>f</sup> peculiar and separate from the rational species, <sup>g</sup> like one driven out and a fugitive, <sup>h</sup> and one transformed into the nature of beasts.

*77. (Gen. iv. 23) Why does Lamech after five generations condemn himself <sup>i</sup> for his ancestor Cain's fratricide, for, says Scripture, he said to his wives Ada and Zillah, "A man have I killed to my wound, and a young man to my hurt. If sevenfold punishment shall be exacted for Cain, then for Lamech seventy times seven" ?

In numbers the ones are prior to the tens both in order and in power, <sup>j</sup> for the former are the beginnings and elements and measures. <sup>k</sup> And the tens are younger <sup>l</sup> and are measured, and are second both in order and in power. So that seven is more archetypal and elder <sup>m</sup> than seventy; but seventy is younger than seven and has the status <sup>n</sup> of that which is generated. These things being determined, <sup>o</sup> the first man who sinned, as one who did not exactly <sup>p</sup> know what it really meant, <sup>q</sup> was more simply <sup>r</sup> punished

<sup>a</sup> πανσόφως.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. here = ἡμερότητας, not οικειότητος as Aucher's rendering "familiaritatis" implies.

<sup>c</sup> Or "moderation"—συνέσεως or ἐπιεικείας.

<sup>d</sup> διαφθείρων.

<sup>e</sup> τῇ πατρίᾳ γενεᾷ.

<sup>f</sup> γένος.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ λογικοῦ εἶδους.

<sup>h</sup> διωκόμενος καὶ φυγᾶς.

<sup>i</sup> ἑαυτὸν καταγινώσκει.

<sup>j</sup> τάξει καὶ δυνάμει.

<sup>k</sup> ἀρχαὶ καὶ στοιχεῖα καὶ μέτρα.

<sup>l</sup> νεώτεροι.

<sup>m</sup> ἀρχετυπικωτέρα καὶ πρεσβυτέρα.

<sup>n</sup> λόγον.

<sup>o</sup> τούτων ὀρισθέντων.

<sup>p</sup> ἀκριβῶς, βεβαίως.

<sup>q</sup> τὸ κύριον.

<sup>r</sup> ἀπλούστερον.

GENESIS, BOOK I

in accordance with the first and doubtful number, I mean one. But the second man, as one who had the first man as an example,<sup>a</sup> and had no excuse, was guilty of voluntary sin. And in not receiving august wisdom<sup>b</sup> through the first simpler punishment, he will suffer this punishment also, and in addition, will receive the second punishment which is in the tens. For just as in the hippodrome it is the horse-trainer who gets both the first and second prize, so also some evil men by rushing toward an unjust victory,<sup>c</sup> carry off a miserable victory,<sup>d</sup> and then they are punished by a double penalty, first by that which is in the ones, and then by that which is in the tens. Wherefore also Cain, who was the first to commit homicide, because he did not know the magnitude of the foul deed,<sup>e</sup> since he had never encountered death, paid the simpler penalty, the seven of the ones. But his imitator, not being able to take refuge in the same defence of ignorance,<sup>f</sup> deserved to suffer a double punishment, the first equal and similar to the other (Cain's), and another, the seven of the tens. For according to the law a sevenfold judgment is given. First, upon<sup>g</sup> the eyes, because they saw what was not fitting; second, upon the ears, because they heard what was not proper; third, upon the nose, which was deceived by smoke and steam; fourth, upon (the organ of) taste, which was a servant of the belly's pleasure; fifth, upon (the organs of) touch, to which by the collaboration<sup>h</sup> of the former senses in overcoming the soul<sup>i</sup> are also brought in addition other separate<sup>j</sup> acts, such as the seizure of cities and the capture of men and the demolition of the citadel of the city where the council resides; sixth, upon the tongue and the organs of speech for being silent about things that should be said and for saying things that should be kept silent; seventh, <sup>a</sup> παράδειγμα.

<sup>b</sup> σεμνήν σοφίαν.

<sup>c</sup> ἐπὶ τὴν τῆς ἀδικίας νίκην ὀρμῶντες.

<sup>d</sup> ταλαίπωρον νίκην.

<sup>e</sup> βδελύγματος, μιάσματος.

<sup>f</sup> εἰς τὴν αὐτὴν ἀπολογίαν τὴν τῆς ἀγνοίας.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "through," διὰ w. gen.

<sup>h</sup> κοινοπραγίας.

<sup>i</sup> κατὰ τὴν τῆς ψυχῆς ὑπέρθεσιν.

<sup>j</sup> κατ' ἰδίαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

upon the lower belly <sup>a</sup> which with lawless licentiousness sets the senses on fire. This is (the meaning of) what is said (in Scripture), that a sevenfold vengeance is taken on Cain, but on Lamech seventy times seven, for the reasons mentioned, in accordance with which he, being the second sinner and not being chastened <sup>b</sup> by the punishment of the earlier one, wholly <sup>c</sup> received both the latter's punishment, which was the simpler, as is the unit among numbers, and also the more complex punishment, similar to the tens among numbers.

78. (Gen. iv. 25) Why does Adam in begetting Seth say in addition, "God has raised up for me another seed in place of Abel whom Cain killed" <sup>d</sup> ?

Truly Seth is another seed and the beginning <sup>e</sup> of another birth <sup>f</sup> of Abel in accordance with a certain natural principle. For Abel is like one who comes from above to below, wherefore he is injured, <sup>g</sup> but Seth (is like one who comes) from below to above, wherefore he grows. <sup>h</sup> And a confirmation <sup>i</sup> of this is that "Abel" is interpreted as "brought and offered up on high" <sup>j</sup> to God. And it is not fitting to offer up <sup>k</sup> everything, but only what is good, for (God) is not the cause <sup>l</sup> of evil. Wherefore the undefined <sup>m</sup> and unseparated <sup>n</sup> and obscure <sup>o</sup> and confused <sup>p</sup> and perturbed <sup>q</sup> one appropriately also receives a mixture of praise and blame; praise, because he honours the Cause, and blame, because just as something happens, <sup>r</sup> so it turns out by chance <sup>s</sup> without his taking thought <sup>t</sup> or giving thanks. <sup>u</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὁ κάτω γαστήρ.      <sup>b</sup> σωφρονισθεῖς, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> παντελῶς in the Greek frag.      <sup>d</sup> ἀρχή.      <sup>e</sup> γενέσεως.

<sup>f</sup> κατά τινα φυσικὸν λόγον.      <sup>g</sup> βλάπτεται ἢ ἐπιβουλεύεται.

<sup>h</sup> αὐξάνεται.      <sup>i</sup> πίστις.

<sup>j</sup> προσφέρεται ἄνω, as though from Heb. ybl, wbl "to bring"; cf. Quod Deterius 32.

<sup>k</sup> προσφέρειν, ἀνάγειν.      <sup>l</sup> ἀναίτιος.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ ἀόριστος.      <sup>n</sup> ὁ ἀχώριστος.      <sup>o</sup> ὁ ἄδηλος.

<sup>p</sup> ὁ συγκεχυμένος, ἀμυδρός.      <sup>q</sup> ὁ τεθορυβημένος.

<sup>r</sup> συμβαίνει.      <sup>s</sup> ὡς ἔτυχε.      <sup>t</sup> ἄνευ τοῦ λογίζεσθαι.

<sup>u</sup> τοῦ εὐχαριστεῖν, ἐξομολογεῖσθαι.

GENESIS, BOOK I

Wherefore nature separated from him his twin,<sup>a</sup> and made the good man worthy of immortality,<sup>b</sup> resolving<sup>c</sup> him into a voice interceding<sup>d</sup> with God; but the wicked man it gave over to destruction. But "Seth" is interpreted as "one who drinks water,"<sup>e</sup> in accordance with the changes that take place in plants which by watering grow and blossom and bear fruit. And these are symbols of the soul.<sup>f</sup> But no longer may one say that the Deity is the cause of all things, good and evil, but only of the good, which alone properly puts forth live shoots.<sup>g</sup>

*79. (Gen. iv. 26) Why did Seth's son Enosh hope to call the name of the Lord God?

"Enosh" is interpreted as "man." And this is now taken, not as a mixture,<sup>h</sup> but as the logical part of the soul,<sup>i</sup> the mind,<sup>j</sup> to which hope is peculiarly fitting,<sup>k</sup> for irrational animals are bereft of hope.<sup>l</sup> And hope is a certain anticipation of joy<sup>m</sup>; before joy there is an expectation<sup>n</sup> of good.

80. (Gen. v. 1) Why, after (mentioning) hope, does (Scripture) say, "This is the book of the generation of men"?

By these words (Scripture) makes the aforementioned statement trustworthy.<sup>o</sup> What is man? Man is that which more than other kinds of animals has obtained a very large and extraordinary<sup>p</sup> portion of hope. And this

<sup>a</sup> τὸν δίδυμον.

<sup>b</sup> ἀθανασίας.

<sup>c</sup> λύσας.

<sup>d</sup> παρακαλοῦσαν.

<sup>e</sup> As though from Heb. šth "to drink"; cf. De Poster. Caini 124 (ποτισμός).

<sup>f</sup> τῆς ψυχῆς, or "spirit"—τοῦ πνεύματος.

<sup>g</sup> ζωοφυτεῖν.

<sup>h</sup> μίξις or κράσις.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς λογικὸν μέρος.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>k</sup> ἰδίως πρέπον ἐστὶ τὸ ἐλπίζειν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀμέτοχα τῆς ἐλπίδος.

<sup>m</sup> προπάθειά τις τῆς χαρᾶς.

<sup>n</sup> προσδοκία.

<sup>o</sup> πιστόν.

<sup>p</sup> θαυμαστόν or παράδοξον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

is celebrated <sup>a</sup> as if inscribed in nature, for the mind of man naturally hopes.

*81. (Gen. v. 3) Why, in the genealogy of Adam, does (Scripture) no longer mention Cain, but Seth, who, it says, was made according to his appearance and form? Whence it begins to count the generations <sup>b</sup> from him (Seth).

Scripture does not associate the foul and violent homicide with the order of either reason or number, for he is to be thrown out <sup>c</sup> like ordure, as someone has said, considering him to be such. Wherefore (Scripture) does not show him to be either the successor <sup>d</sup> of his earthly father or the beginning of later generations, but distinguishing Seth in both respects as guiltless, <sup>e</sup> being a drinker of water, for he is watered by his father, and begetting hope by his growth and progress. <sup>f</sup> Wherefore not casually or idly does (Scripture) say that he was made according to his father's appearance and form, in reprobation of the elder (brother) who because of his foul homicide bears within himself nothing of his father either in body or in soul. Wherefore (Scripture) separated <sup>g</sup> him and divided <sup>h</sup> him from his kin, <sup>i</sup> but to the other apportioned and gave a part of the honour of primogeniture. <sup>j</sup>

82. (Gen. v. 22) What is the meaning of the words, "Enoch was pleasing to God, after he begot Methuselah, two hundred years" <sup>k</sup>?

(Scripture) legislates <sup>l</sup> about the sources of all good

<sup>a</sup> διαφημίζεται.

<sup>b</sup> γενεαλογεῖν.

<sup>c</sup> ἐκβαλλετός.

<sup>d</sup> διάδοχον.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. is obscure but seems to render διαρῶν Σηθ ὡς ἀμφοτέρων ἀναίτιον. Aucher renders, "sed utrumque illibato distribuens praestat Seth." The Greek frag. freely paraphrases.

<sup>f</sup> αὐξήσει καὶ προκοπῇ.

<sup>g</sup> διεῖλε.

<sup>h</sup> διεχώρισε.

<sup>i</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς συγγενείας.

<sup>j</sup> τῆς πρεσβείας.

<sup>k</sup> So LXX: Heb. has "And Enoch walked with God after he begot Methuselah three hundred years." <sup>l</sup> νομοθετεῖ.

GENESIS, BOOK I

things at the beginning of Genesis.<sup>a</sup> What I mean is somewhat as follows. It defined <sup>b</sup> mercy <sup>c</sup> and forgiveness <sup>d</sup> a little earlier. This time, however, it defines repentance, not mocking <sup>e</sup> or in any way reproaching <sup>f</sup> those who appear to have sinned. At the same time it presents the descent <sup>g</sup> of the soul from evil to virtue <sup>h</sup> like the return of those who have fled into a snare.<sup>i</sup> For behold, on becoming a man and father, in his very procreation, he made a beginning of probity,<sup>j</sup> being said to have been pleasing to God. For although he did not altogether remain in piety, none the less that period of time was reckoned to him as belonging to the order of the praiseworthy,<sup>k</sup> for he was pleasing (to God) so many years. And so many (years) are symbolically mentioned,<sup>l</sup> not perhaps because of what he was, but as he was believed by another to appear.<sup>m</sup> But (Scripture) reveals the ordering <sup>n</sup> of things. For not very long after the forgiving of Cain it introduces the fact that Enoch repented, informing us that forgiveness is wont to produce repentance.

83. (Gen. v. 21-23) Why is Enoch, who repented, said to have lived one hundred and sixty-five years before his repentance, but after his repentance two hundred?

The hundred and sixty-five consists of the ten (digits) added one by one—1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10,<sup>o</sup> which make fifty-five, and of the double numbers after one—2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, which make one hundred and ten. And the combination <sup>p</sup> of these (two sets of numbers) pro-

<sup>a</sup> τῆς γενέσεως.                      <sup>b</sup> διώρισε, or "set apart"—διεχώρισε.

<sup>c</sup> ἔλεος.                                  <sup>d</sup> ἄφεσιν.                                  <sup>e</sup> ἐγγελῶν or χλευάζων.

<sup>f</sup> ὀνειδίζων.                              <sup>g</sup> (sic) κατάβασιν.                              <sup>h</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>i</sup> βρόχον.                                  <sup>j</sup> καλοκάγαθίας.                                  <sup>k</sup> εἰς τὴν τοῦ ἐπαινετοῦ τάξιν.

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. is obscure, but seems to render τοσαῦτα σύμβολα τῶν εἰρημένων ἐστί.

<sup>m</sup> Here too the Arm. is obscure.

<sup>n</sup> ἀκολουθίαν or διοίκησιν.

<sup>o</sup> The Arm. here uses numeral letters=Greek α', β', etc.

<sup>p</sup> σύνθεσις.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

duces one hundred and sixty-five. And among these the even numbers are double <sup>a</sup> the odd numbers, for the female is more powerful <sup>b</sup> than the male by some inversion,<sup>c</sup> as when the wicked man lords it over the good man, or sense over mind, the body over sense, matter over cause. But two hundred (years) in which there was repentance consists of twice a hundred, of which the first hundred indicates a purification from wrongdoing,<sup>d</sup> while the other indicates the fullness of one who is perfect in virtue.<sup>e</sup> For even from an ailing body one must cut away <sup>f</sup> the sick part, and afterwards introduce health, for the former is first, while the latter comes second. The number two hundred is composed of fours, for it arises, as if from a seed,<sup>g</sup> from four triangles <sup>h</sup> and four tetragons and four pentagons and four hexagons and four heptagons, and it stands, in a certain manner, in the number seven. And these are the four triangles—1, 3, 6, 10, which make 20.<sup>i</sup> The four tetragons are 1, 4, 9, 16, which make thirty. And the four pentagons are 1, 5, 12, 22, which make forty. The five hexagons are 1, 6, 15, 28, which make 50. And the four heptagons are 1, 7, 18, 34, which make sixty. These combined produce two hundred.

<sup>a</sup> διπλάσιοι.

<sup>b</sup> δυνατωτέρα, or “more violent”—βιαιοτέρα.

<sup>c</sup> τροπήν.

<sup>d</sup> κάθαρσιν ἀδικίας.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πλήρωμα τὸ τοῦ κατ’ ἀρετὴν συντετελεσμένου. Aucher renders, “plenitudinem virtutis consummatae.”

<sup>f</sup> ἀποτεμεῖν.

<sup>g</sup> ὡς ἐκ σπέρματος.

<sup>h</sup> “Triangles” (τριγώνων) = “triangular numbers,” those which can be arranged in triangular form, e.g.

$$\begin{array}{ccc} & & \cdot \\ & & \cdot \\ & \cdot & \cdot \\
 3 = \cdot & 6 = \cdot\cdot & 10 = \cdot\cdot\cdot \\ & & \cdot \\ & & \cdot \\ & & \cdot \end{array}$$

etc.; similarly, “tetragons” are “four-sided numbers,” etc.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. here sometimes uses numeral letters, sometimes numeral words.

GENESIS, BOOK I

84. (Gen. v. 23) Why, being repentant,<sup>a</sup> is (Enoch) said to have lived three hundred and sixty-five years?<sup>b</sup>

First of all, the year has three hundred and sixty-five days. Accordingly (Scripture) symbolically indicates the life of this penitent by the revolution<sup>c</sup> of the sun. Second, just as the sun is the cause of day and night, revolving above the earth's hemisphere by day, and under the earth by night, so also the life of the penitent consists of darkness and light—of darkness by the impact<sup>d</sup> of passions and injustices,<sup>e</sup> and of light when the light of virtue<sup>f</sup> shines out, and its splendour is very bright.<sup>g</sup> Third, (Scripture) apportioned to him a full number, in accordance with which the sun, sovereign of heavenly stars, is adorned; and in this number is included also the time before his repentance, in forgetfulness<sup>h</sup> of the sins which he had formerly committed. For as God is good,<sup>i</sup> He liberally bestows great kindnesses,<sup>j</sup> and at the same time through the virtues of those who so desire,<sup>k</sup> He wipes out<sup>l</sup> the old convictions involving punishment.<sup>m</sup>

*85. (Gen. v. 23-24) Why, after Enoch's end,<sup>n</sup> does (Scripture) add, "He was pleasing to<sup>o</sup> God"?

First of all, because it demonstrates that souls are immortal,<sup>p</sup> since when they become incorporeal,<sup>q</sup> they again become pleasing. Second, it praises the penitent since he persevered in the same condition of morals<sup>r</sup> and did not again change until the end of his life. For behold, some men after briefly experiencing uprightness<sup>s</sup> and <sup>a</sup> μετανοῶν.

<sup>b</sup> LXX and Heb. "And all the days of Enoch were three hundred and sixty-five years." <sup>c</sup> περίοδω, κυκλώσει.

<sup>d</sup> ἐκ βολῆς. <sup>e</sup> παθῶν καὶ ἀδικιῶν. <sup>f</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>g</sup> Or "pure"—καθαρώτατος. <sup>h</sup> εἰς ἀμνηστίαν.

<sup>i</sup> ἀγαθός. <sup>j</sup> ἀφθόνως χαρίζεται. <sup>k</sup> τῶν ἐπιθυμούντων.

<sup>l</sup> ἐξαλείφει. <sup>m</sup> τὰς καταγνώσεις τὰς τιμωρίαν ἐχούσας.

<sup>n</sup> τελευτήσαντος Ἐνώχου. <sup>o</sup> εὐηρέστησε.

<sup>p</sup> παρίστησι τὰς ψυχὰς ἀθανάτους οὐσας.

<sup>q</sup> ἀσώματοι γενόμενοι. <sup>r</sup> ἐν τῇ αὐτῇ ἡθῶν διαθέσει.

<sup>s</sup> γευσάμενοι καλοκάγαθίας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

having been given hope of health, again quickly revert to the same disease.

86. (Gen. v. 24) What is the meaning of the words, "And he was not found, for God had translated <sup>a</sup> him" ?

First of all, the end of worthy and holy men <sup>b</sup> is not death but translation <sup>c</sup> and approaching <sup>d</sup> another place. Second, something very marvellous <sup>e</sup> took place. For he seemed to be rapt away <sup>f</sup> and become invisible. <sup>g</sup> For then he was not found. And this is shown by the fact that when he was sought, <sup>h</sup> he was invisible, <sup>i</sup> not merely rapt from their eyes. For the translation to another place is nothing else than another position <sup>j</sup>; but he is said (to have moved) from a sensible and visible place to an incorporeal and intelligible form. <sup>k</sup> This gift the protoprophet <sup>l</sup> also obtained, for no one knew his burial-place. And still another, Elijah, followed him on high from earth to heaven at the appearance of the divine countenance, <sup>m</sup> or, it would be more proper and correct to say, he ascended. <sup>n</sup>

87. (Gen. v. 29) How is it that at the very birth of Noah his father says, "This one will give us rest from our labours and from our sorrows and from the earth which the Lord God has cursed" ?

Not idly <sup>o</sup> did the holy fathers <sup>p</sup> prophesy, and although not always nor in all things, still at least for once and in one thing which they knew <sup>q</sup> are they worthy of prophetic

<sup>a</sup> μετέθηκε.      <sup>b</sup> ἀξίων καὶ ἀγίων.      <sup>c</sup> μεταθέσεις, μεταβολή.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ἐγγίζειν.      <sup>e</sup> θαυμασιώτατόν τι.      <sup>f</sup> ἀρπασθῆναι.

<sup>g</sup> ἀόρατος.      <sup>h</sup> ζητούμενος.      <sup>i</sup> ἀφανής, ἀόρατος.      <sup>j</sup> θέσις.

<sup>k</sup> εἰς ἀσώματον καὶ νοερὰν μορφήν (ὡς εἶδος, γένος).

<sup>l</sup> ὁ πρωτοπροφήτης (Moses).

<sup>m</sup> κατὰ τὴν ἐπιφάνειαν τὴν τοῦ θείου προσώπου.

<sup>n</sup> ἀνέβη.      <sup>o</sup> οὐκ εἰκῆ.

<sup>p</sup> οἱ ἅγιοι πατέρες. I do not know why Aucher renders, "sanctorum patres."

<sup>q</sup> Arm. canean = ἐγνώσαν: variant cnan = ἐγέννησαν "produced."

GENESIS, BOOK I

praise.<sup>a</sup> And not idly is this too a symbolical example, for "Noah" is a sort of cognomen<sup>b</sup> of justice, by participation<sup>c</sup> in which the mind gives us rest from the evil of labours and will give us rest from sorrows and fears, making us fearless and sorrowless. And it gives us rest from that earthly nature by whose curse the body is afflicted with sickness; and they are guilty who consume their lives in pursuit of pleasures.<sup>d</sup> But in the realization of the prediction,<sup>e</sup> the prophecy spoke falsely, for in the case of this particular man it was not so much a cessation of evils<sup>f</sup> that took place but an intensification of violence and strange and unavoidable disasters and innovations<sup>g</sup> of the great flood. And carefully bear in mind<sup>h</sup> that Noah is the tenth from the earth-born man.<sup>i</sup>

88. (Gen. v. 32) Who are the three sons of Noah—Shem, Ham and Japheth?

These names are symbols of three things in nature—the good, the evil and the indifferent.<sup>j</sup> Shem is distinguished<sup>k</sup> for good, Ham for evil, and Japheth for the indifferent.

*89. (Gen. vi. 1) Why, from the time when the great flood drew near, is the human race said to have increased into a multitude?<sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The above is a slightly free (in construction) rendering of the obscure Arm. sentence, which has no main verb and an intrusive rel. pron.

<sup>d</sup> ἡδονῶν.

<sup>e</sup> κατὰ τὴν τῶν ἀναγγελθέντων ἐνέργειαν.

<sup>f</sup> κατάπαυσις κακῶν.

<sup>g</sup> καιουργίαι.

<sup>h</sup> ἐπιμελῶς προνοεῖ.

<sup>i</sup> Before the words "carefully bear in mind" the Arm. glossator inserts (in § 89) in cod. A "Some used to say that there were innumerable aeons from Adam to Noah, and others said that Noah was the first beginning, wherefore Scripture says."

<sup>j</sup> Prob. τοῦ ἀδιαφόρου, although Arm. anoroš usu. = ἀόριστος. See below, QG ii. 71.

<sup>k</sup> διαφέρει.

<sup>l</sup> εἰς πολυανθρωπίαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Divine favours<sup>a</sup> always precede His judgments,<sup>b</sup> for His activity<sup>c</sup> is first to do good, while destruction<sup>d</sup> comes afterwards. He, however, is loving, and it is usual,<sup>e</sup> when great evils are about to take place, that an abundance of great and numerous good things is first produced.<sup>f</sup> In this same manner, when the seven years' barrenness was about to come, as the prophet says, Egypt became fruitful for the same number of years in succession through the beneficent and saving power of the universe.<sup>g</sup> In the same way as He does good He teaches (men) to refrain and keep themselves from sins, lest they change the good into the opposite. Because of this now too cities grow to excellence<sup>h</sup> through freedom of customs,<sup>i</sup> so that if afterwards corruption<sup>j</sup> arises, they may condemn<sup>k</sup> their own immeasurable and irremediable wrongdoing, and not make the Deity responsible,<sup>l</sup> for He is innocent of evil and evil deeds,<sup>m</sup> since His activity<sup>n</sup> is to bestow<sup>o</sup> only good first of all.

90. (Gen. vi. 3) What is the meaning of the words, " My spirit<sup>p</sup> shall not remain in men forever, because they are flesh " ?

This legislation<sup>a</sup> is an oracle.<sup>r</sup> For the divine spirit is not a movement of air but intelligence<sup>s</sup> and wisdom.<sup>t</sup> Thus also concerning him who artfully constructed the holy <sup>a</sup> αἱ θεῖαι χάριτες.                    <sup>b</sup> κρίσεις, κρίματα.                    <sup>c</sup> ἔργον.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ διαφθεῖρειν, ἀναιρεῖν vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> εἶωθε, πέφυκε.

<sup>f</sup> γεννᾶσθαι.

<sup>g</sup> διὰ τὴν εὐεργετικὴν καὶ σωτήριαν δύναμιν τὴν τῶν ὄλων.

<sup>h</sup> εἰς ἀνδραγαθίαν (?).

<sup>i</sup> ἐκ ἐλευθερίας ἐθῶν (meaning ?).

<sup>j</sup> διαφθορά vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> καταγνώσι.

<sup>l</sup> αἴτιον.

<sup>m</sup> κακίας καὶ κακῶν.

<sup>n</sup> ἔργον.

<sup>o</sup> χαρίζεσθαι.

<sup>p</sup> πνεῦμα.

<sup>q</sup> τὸ νομισθητόν.

<sup>r</sup> χρησμός. Aucher reverses subj. and pred., " oraculum est velut lex prolatum."

<sup>s</sup> σύνεσις ἢ φρόνησις ἢ νοῦς ἢ ἐπιστήμη.

<sup>t</sup> σοφία.

GENESIS, BOOK I

tabernacle, namely Bezaleel, (Scripture) reported, saying, "I filled him with the divine spirit of wisdom and knowledge."<sup>a</sup> Accordingly, this spirit comes into men<sup>b</sup> but does not remain or long endure.<sup>c</sup> But (Scripture) adds the reasons therefor, saying, "because they are flesh." For the nature of flesh is alien to wisdom so long as it is familiar with desire.<sup>d</sup> Whence it is clear that incorporeal and unsubstantial<sup>e</sup> spirits do not stumble over anything heavy or meet any obstacle to seeing and understanding nature, since pure understanding<sup>f</sup> is acquired along with stability.<sup>g</sup>

91. (Gen. vi. 3) Why shall "the days of man be a hundred and twenty years"?

By this number (Scripture) seems to define<sup>h</sup> human life, indicating many prerogatives<sup>i</sup> of honour. For in the first place, it is derived from the units by composition<sup>j</sup> of fifteen.<sup>k</sup> And the fifteenth reckoning<sup>l</sup> is a very brilliant one,<sup>m</sup> for the moon becomes full of light on the fifteenth day, receiving its light from the sun at evening and giving it over to him in the morning, so that on that night no darkness appears, but everything is light. Second, a hundred and twenty is a triangular number<sup>n</sup> and consists of fifteen triangles.<sup>o</sup> Third, because it consists of the equal

<sup>a</sup> Cf. LXX, Ex. xxxi. 3, καὶ ἐπέπληκα αὐτὸν πνεῦμα θεῖον σοφίας καὶ συνέσεως καὶ ἐπιστήμης.

<sup>b</sup> ἐγγίνεται ἐν ἀνθρώποις.

<sup>c</sup> οὔτε μένει οὔτε διαίωνει (ἢ διαχρονίζει).

<sup>d</sup> τὸ γὰρ ἦθος τὸ τῆς σαρκὸς τῇ σοφίᾳ ἀλλότριον ἐστὶ ἐφ' ὅσον χρόνον αἰκείον ἐστὶ τῇ ἐπιθυμίᾳ.

<sup>e</sup> Prob. ἀναφή, as Aucher suggests.

<sup>f</sup> ἄκρατος σύνεσις.

<sup>g</sup> στάσει ἢ βεβαιώσει ἢ στηρίγματι.

<sup>h</sup> Or "limit"—ὀρίζειν.

<sup>i</sup> προνομίας.

<sup>j</sup> κατὰ σύνθεσιν.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. 120 is the sum of the first fifteen numbers:  $1 + 2 + 3 + \dots + 15 = 120$ .

<sup>l</sup> λόγος. <sup>m</sup> φωτειδέστερος. <sup>n</sup> ἀριθμὸς τρίγωνος.

<sup>o</sup> 120 is  $15 \times 8$ , and 8 is a triangular number ( $2 \times 2 \times 2$ ).

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and activities. It emphasizes that this is essential for ensuring transparency and accountability in the organization's operations.

2. The second part of the document outlines the various methods and tools used to collect and analyze data. It highlights the need for consistent and reliable data collection processes to support informed decision-making.

3. The third part of the document focuses on the role of technology in modern data management. It discusses how advanced software solutions can streamline data collection, storage, and analysis, leading to more efficient and accurate results.

4. The fourth part of the document addresses the challenges associated with data management, such as data quality, security, and privacy. It provides strategies to mitigate these risks and ensure the integrity and confidentiality of the organization's data.

5. The fifth part of the document concludes by summarizing the key findings and recommendations. It stresses the importance of ongoing monitoring and evaluation to ensure that data management practices remain effective and aligned with the organization's goals.

1. The first part of the document discusses the importance of maintaining accurate records of all transactions and activities. It emphasizes that this is essential for ensuring transparency and accountability in the organization's operations.

GENESIS, BOOK I

(children); and forty-five is that of the triple scale. But sixteen, nineteen, twenty-two and twenty-eight add up to eighty-five, by which are formed the nine-month (children).<sup>a</sup> And fifth, it (the number 120) has fifteen parts and a double composition<sup>b</sup> of its own, inasmuch as twice sixty is the measure of all things; and it is three times forty, (which is) the form<sup>c</sup> of prophecy<sup>d</sup>; and it is four times thirty, (which is) a generation<sup>e</sup>; and it is five times twenty-four, (which is) the measure of day and night,<sup>f</sup> and it is six times twenty, (which is) the beginning<sup>g</sup>; and it is eight times fifteen, most brilliant<sup>h</sup> (of numbers); it is ten times twelve, (which is) the zodiac<sup>i</sup>; it is twelve times ten, (which is) the holy (number)<sup>j</sup>; it is fifteen times eight, (which is) the first cube<sup>k</sup>; it is twenty times six, (which is) genesis<sup>l</sup>; it is twenty-four times five, (which is) the form<sup>m</sup> of the senses<sup>n</sup>; it is thirty times four, (which is) the beginning of solids<sup>o</sup>; it is four times thirty, (which is) fullness,<sup>p</sup> consisting of beginning, middle and end; it is sixty times two, (which is) the feminine<sup>q</sup>; and it is a hundred and twenty times one, (which is) the masculine.<sup>r</sup> And each of these numbers is very natural,<sup>s</sup> as is shown

<sup>a</sup> On this obscure calculation see Staehle, pp. 81-82.

<sup>b</sup> σύνθεσιν διπλασίαν.

<sup>c</sup> εἶδος or ἰδέα.

<sup>d</sup> Referring to Moses' forty-day sojourn on Mt. Sinai.

<sup>e</sup> Reckoning 30 years to a generation.

<sup>f</sup> Referring to the 24 hours of a day.

<sup>g</sup> ἀρχή; probably meaning the age when the young man is ready for communal responsibilities, cf. Ex. xxxviii. 26 and QG iv. 27.

<sup>h</sup> παμφαίνων, referring to the full moon on the 15th day of the lunar month.

<sup>i</sup> ζωφόρος κύκλος.

<sup>j</sup> Elsewhere Philo calls 10 the perfect (τέλειος) number, cf. Staehle, pp. 53-58.

<sup>k</sup> ὁ πρῶτος κύβος.

<sup>l</sup> γένεσις; referring to the six days of Creation.

<sup>m</sup> Or "species"—ἰδέα.

<sup>n</sup> τῶν αἰσθήσεων.

<sup>o</sup> ἡ τῆς στερεομετρίας ἀρχή.

<sup>p</sup> πλήρωμα; probably because it is the sum of the first four square numbers: 1, 4, 9, 16, cf. QG ii. 5.

<sup>q</sup> τὸ θῆλυ.

<sup>r</sup> τὸ ἄρρεν.

<sup>s</sup> φυσικώτερος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

separately. Moreover, it is a double composition,<sup>a</sup> for it becomes two hundred and forty, which is a sign of becoming worthy of twofold life, for just as the number of years is doubled, so also life is to be thought of as doubled; there is one (life) with the body, and another without the body, to receive the gift of prophecy,<sup>b</sup> each of them being holy and altogether perfect.<sup>c</sup> Sixth, because the fifth and sixth are produced when three numbers are multiplied,<sup>d</sup> (namely) three times four five times (sic); for three times four five times makes sixty. Similarly a hundred and twenty (is produced) by the following numbers, four times five six times (sic), for four times five six times makes a hundred and twenty. Seventh, taking the number twenty, in which is the beginning of man, his redemption<sup>e</sup>—twenty added to itself two and three times in the following manner, twenty, forty, sixty, makes a hundred and twenty. But perhaps a hundred and twenty years are not the universal limit<sup>f</sup> of human life, but only of the men living at that time, who were later to perish in the flood after so great a number of years, which a benevolent benefactor<sup>g</sup> prolonged, allowing repentance for sins. However, after this limit they lived a more abundant<sup>h</sup> life in later generations.

*92. (Gen. vi. 4) Why were the giants born from angels and women?

The poets<sup>i</sup> relate that the giants were earthborn, children of the earth. But he (Moses) uses this name analogically<sup>j</sup> and frequently<sup>k</sup> when he wishes to indicate

<sup>a</sup> σύνθεσις διπλασία.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. construction difficult, lit. "the gift with respect to the prophet"; Aucher renders, "donum prophetiae."

<sup>c</sup> παντέλειος.

<sup>d</sup> πολλαπλασιασθέντων.

<sup>e</sup> λύτρωσις; the connexion of the number 20 with "redemption" eludes me, but see note g, p. 59.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ καθολικὸς ὅρος.

<sup>g</sup> εὐεργέτης εὐμενής.

<sup>h</sup> πλείονα ὅς περισσόν.

<sup>i</sup> οἱ ποιηταί.

<sup>j</sup> καταχρηστικῶς.

<sup>k</sup> συνεχῶς, or perhaps "for the most part"—ἐπὶ τὸ πολὺ.

GENESIS, BOOK I

excessive size of body, after the likeness of Haik.<sup>a</sup> And he relates that their creation<sup>b</sup> was a mixture of two things, of angels and mortal women. But the substance<sup>c</sup> of angels is spiritual<sup>d</sup>; however, it often happens that they imitate the forms of men and for immediate purposes,<sup>e</sup> as in respect of knowing women for the sake of begetting Haiks.<sup>f</sup> But if children become zealous emulators<sup>g</sup> of maternal depravity,<sup>h</sup> they will draw away from paternal virtue and depart from it through desire of pleasure<sup>i</sup> in a wicked stock,<sup>j</sup> and through contempt<sup>k</sup> and arrogance<sup>l</sup> toward the better<sup>m</sup> they are condemned as guilty<sup>n</sup> of wilful wrongdoing.<sup>o</sup> But sometimes he calls the angels "sons of God" because they are made incorporeal<sup>p</sup> through no mortal man<sup>q</sup> but are spirits<sup>r</sup> without body. But rather does that exhorter,<sup>s</sup> Moses, give to good and excellent men the name of "sons of God," while wicked and evil men (he calls) "bodies."

*93. (Gen. vi. 6) What is the meaning of the words, "He was concerned<sup>t</sup> when reflecting<sup>u</sup> that He had made man upon the earth, and He considered"<sup>v</sup>?

Some believe that the repentance of the Deity<sup>w</sup> is shown by these words,<sup>x</sup> but not rightly do they so believe, for the

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. has probably substituted the name of the legendary Armenian eponymous hero for Greek Heracles, as Aucher remarks.

<sup>b</sup> γένεσιν.

<sup>c</sup> οὐσία. <sup>d</sup> πνευματική. <sup>e</sup> πρὸς ὑποκειμένας χρείας.

<sup>f</sup> i. e. "giants," see note a above.

<sup>g</sup> ζηλωταί. <sup>h</sup> πονηρίας ἢ ἀφροσύνης. <sup>i</sup> ἡδονῆς (?).

<sup>j</sup> γένους. <sup>k</sup> καταφρονήσει. <sup>l</sup> ὑπερηφανία ἢ ἀλαζονεία.

<sup>m</sup> τοῦ κρείττονος. <sup>n</sup> ἔνοχοι. <sup>o</sup> ἑκουσῶν ἀδικιῶν.

<sup>p</sup> ἀσώματοι. <sup>q</sup> θνητόν. <sup>r</sup> πνεύματα.

<sup>s</sup> προτρεπτικός ἢ παραινετικός.

<sup>t</sup> ἐφρόντισε ἢ ἐμερίμνησε. <sup>u</sup> λογιζόμενος.

<sup>v</sup> διενόηθη. LXX has καὶ ἐνεθυμήθη ὁ θεὸς ὅτι ἐποίησεν τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ διενόηθη. The Arm. O.T. also differs from the Arm. text of Philo's citation of the verse.

<sup>w</sup> μεταμέλειαν . . . περὶ τὸ θεῖον in John Monachus.

<sup>x</sup> ὀνομάτων.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Deity is without change. Nor are His being concerned when reflecting and His considering signs of repentance but of lucid and certain reflection,<sup>a</sup> which is concerned and considers the reason why He made man upon the earth. And since earth is a place of wretchedness,<sup>b</sup> even that heavenly man<sup>c</sup> is a mixture<sup>d</sup> consisting of soul and body; and from his birth until his end he is nothing else than a corpse-bearer.<sup>e</sup> Accordingly, it does not seem at all very remarkable<sup>f</sup> that the Father should be concerned with, and consider, these things, since indeed many men acquire wickedness rather than virtue,<sup>g</sup> being governed by the two-fold impulse<sup>h</sup> mentioned above, (namely) by the nature of the corruptible body<sup>i</sup> and the horrid position<sup>j</sup> of the earth, which is the last<sup>k</sup> of things.

*94. (Gen. vi. 7) Why, when threatening to wipe out<sup>l</sup> man, does He say that He will also destroy the beasts<sup>m</sup> together with him, "from man to beasts and from reptiles to birds"?<sup>n</sup> For what sin were the beasts committing?

The literal meaning is this: it makes it clearly known that not necessarily<sup>o</sup> and primarily<sup>p</sup> were beasts made but for the sake of men and for their service.<sup>q</sup> And when these were destroyed, the former were rightly<sup>r</sup> destroyed together with them, since there no longer existed those for whose sake they had been made. But as for the allegorical meaning<sup>s</sup>—inasmuch as symbolically<sup>t</sup> man is the mind<sup>u</sup> within us, and beast is sense-perception,<sup>v</sup> when the chief

<sup>a</sup> John Monachus reads more briefly ἀκραιφνοῦς λογισμοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> ταλαιπορίας, ἀτυχίας.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ οὐράνιος ἄνθρωπος.

<sup>d</sup> μίξις.

<sup>e</sup> νεκροφόρος.

<sup>f</sup> παραδοξότερον.

<sup>g</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>h</sup> ὁρμηῆ.

<sup>i</sup> φθαρτοῦ σώματος.

<sup>j</sup> φρικτῶ τόπῳ.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ ἔσχατον.

<sup>l</sup> ἀπαλεῖψαι.

<sup>m</sup> τὰ ἄλογα, τὰ κτήνη.

<sup>n</sup> Cf. LXX ἕως πετεινῶν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ.

<sup>o</sup> ἀναγκαίως.

<sup>p</sup> προηγουμένως.

<sup>q</sup> ὑπηρεσίας. See below, QG ii. 9.

<sup>r</sup> εἰκότως, δικαίως.

<sup>s</sup> τὸ πρὸς νοῦν ἢ καθ' ὑπόνοιαν.

<sup>t</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>u</sup> νοῦς.

<sup>v</sup> αἴσθησις.

GENESIS, BOOK I

ruler <sup>a</sup> is perverted and corrupted by evil, all sense-perception also perishes together with it, because it has no remains <sup>b</sup> of virtue.

*95. (Gen. vi. 7) Why does He say, " I am angry <sup>c</sup> that I have made them " ?

In the first place, again as if warning man He relates something extraordinary. <sup>d</sup> However, properly speaking, God does not become angry but is immune (from anger) and is above all passions. <sup>e</sup> Accordingly, He wishes to prove by using exaggeration <sup>f</sup> that the lawless deeds of men have increased to such an extent that they have invited and provoked and incited to anger One who is naturally without anger. Second, He intimates symbolically that those things which have been done confusedly <sup>g</sup> are also blameworthy, <sup>h</sup> but those things which have been done out of wise reflection <sup>i</sup> and determined <sup>j</sup> are praiseworthy.

*96. (Gen. vi. 8) Why is Noah now said to find favour <sup>k</sup> with God ?

In the first place the occasion <sup>l</sup> requires a comparison. <sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τοῦ πρώτου ἀρχηγοῦ, ἡγεμόνος.

<sup>b</sup> λείψανα, ὑπόλειμμα.

<sup>c</sup> Similarly Arm. O.T.; LXX has ἐνεθυμήθην = Heb. nihamtî " I repent."

<sup>d</sup> ἄκρον, κεφάλαιον.

<sup>e</sup> πάθη.

<sup>f</sup> ὑπερβολῆ.

<sup>g</sup> συγκεχυμένως or " obscurely "—ἀμυδρῶς (?).

<sup>h</sup> ἔνοχα.

<sup>i</sup> τῷ τῆς σοφίας λογισμῷ.

<sup>j</sup> διορισθέντα. The sentence is obscure; Aucher renders, " quae vero ex consilio sapientiae procedunt definitive, laudabilia." Procopius briefly paraphrases the section.

<sup>k</sup> χάριν.

<sup>l</sup> καιρός or χρόνος (?).

<sup>m</sup> σύγκρισιν. The meaning of the sentence is not clear, but perhaps is that this statement about Noah stands in contrast to the preceding statement about God's anger. Aucher renders, " primum tempus postulat comparationem," which is literal but as obscure as the original.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Inasmuch as all the others were rejected <sup>a</sup> because of ingratitude,<sup>b</sup> He justly puts him in their place, saying that he found favour, not because he alone was deserving of favour, for the entire human race in common had met with (His) beneficence,<sup>c</sup> but because he alone appeared grateful.<sup>d</sup> In the second place, since the generation was given over to destruction,<sup>e</sup> with the exception of one household,<sup>f</sup> it was necessary to say that the remnant was worthy of the divine favour as the seed and spark <sup>g</sup> of the new generation of men that was to be. And what favour is greater than that this same one should be both the end <sup>h</sup> and beginning <sup>i</sup> of mankind ?

97. (Gen. vi. 9) Why does (Scripture) give the generations of Noah not by his predecessors but by his virtues ? <sup>j</sup>

First, because the men who were of his time were wicked. Second, it lays down the laws of the will,<sup>k</sup> because to the virtuous man virtue is truly a generation.<sup>l</sup> For a generation of men (consists of) men, and (a generation) of souls (consists) of virtues. Wherefore it says, "he was righteous, perfect and pleasing (to God)."<sup>m</sup> But righteousness and perfection and being pleasing to God are the greatest virtues.

98. (Gen. vi. 11) What is the meaning of the words, "The earth was corrupted <sup>n</sup> before God, and the earth was filled with injustice" <sup>o</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> ἀποδοκιμασθέντων, ἀποβληθέντων. Procopius ἀπολωλότων.

<sup>b</sup> ἀχαριστίαν. <sup>c</sup> εὐεργεσίαν, ἀγαθοποιίαν.

<sup>d</sup> εὐχάριστος.

<sup>e</sup> Or "corruption" — φθορᾶ, διαφθορᾶ.

<sup>f</sup> οἴκου.

<sup>g</sup> σπινθήρ.

<sup>h</sup> τέλος.

<sup>i</sup> ἀρχή.

<sup>j</sup> ἀρεταῖς.

<sup>k</sup> θελήματος (?). The sense escapes me.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher renders, less literally, "virtutis studioso pro vera generatione est virtus."

<sup>m</sup> Cf. LXX δίκαιος, τέλειος ὧν ἐν τῇ γενεᾷ αὐτοῦ, τῷ θεῷ εὐηρέστησε. <sup>n</sup> ἐφθάρη. <sup>o</sup> αδικίας.

GENESIS, BOOK I

He (Moses) himself has given the reason in speaking of injustice (as being) for the sake of the earth's corruption. For deliverance <sup>a</sup> from this in particular is justice <sup>b</sup> both for men and for the parts of the world, (namely) heaven and earth.

*99. (Gen. vi. 12) What is the meaning of the words, "All flesh corrupted his <sup>c</sup> way upon the earth" ?

First of all (Scripture) has called the self-loving <sup>d</sup> man "flesh"; therefore having formerly called him "flesh," it adds, not "the same" <sup>e</sup> but "of the same," <sup>f</sup> evidently meaning "in respect of man," <sup>g</sup> for one who misuses <sup>h</sup> an uncultivated life is flesh. Second, it considers flesh as the cause of spiritual corruption, <sup>i</sup> which is indeed the truth, for it is the seat of desires, <sup>j</sup> from which, as from a spring, flow the properties <sup>k</sup> of desires and other passions. <sup>l</sup> Third, the (pronoun) "his" is more natural, being declined as the oblique case <sup>m</sup> or from the nominative case of the pronoun "himself." <sup>n</sup> For when we offer honour to someone we do not venture to call him by any other name than "himself." Hence was derived the Pythagorean principle, <sup>o</sup> "He himself has said it" <sup>p</sup> when they exalted and magnified their honoured teacher, fearing to call him by name. The same custom is found both in cities and in homes; for at the coming of the master, slaves say "Himself is coming

<sup>a</sup> σωτηρία.

<sup>b</sup> δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>c</sup> αὐτοῦ as in LXX; Heb. requires αὐτοῦ "his own"; Arm. O.T., like Heb., has reflexive pronoun, referring to man.

<sup>d</sup> φίλαντον.

<sup>e</sup> τὴν αὐτὴν <σάρκα>.

<sup>f</sup> τοῦ αὐτοῦ.

<sup>g</sup> περὶ οὗ ἕνεκα τοῦ ἀνθρώπου.

<sup>h</sup> παραχρᾶται.

<sup>i</sup> πνευματικῆς φθοράς.

<sup>j</sup> τόπος τῶν ἐπιθυμιῶν.

<sup>k</sup> αἱ ιδιότητες.

<sup>l</sup> παθῶν.

<sup>m</sup> πλαγία πτώσις.

<sup>n</sup> i.e. αὐτός. Lit. "from the nominative pronoun"—ἀπὸ τῆς ὀρθῆς ἀντωνυμίας. The sense is somewhat obscure to me. Aucher renders, "tertio magis naturaliter ejus, casus est partialis declinatus (ab Is), vel de recto pronominis (Ipse) ipsius." For the general meaning see the parallel, Quod Deus sit Immut. §§ 140 f. Procopius condenses and paraphrases.

<sup>o</sup> ἀρχή.

<sup>p</sup> αὐτὸς ἔφα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

in." And in the several cities, when the lord has come, they call him by the name "himself." But why have I dwelt at length on such things? Because I wished to show that the Father of the universe <sup>a</sup> is here mentioned, since all good things celebrated for their virtues are His. And out of reverence <sup>b</sup> (Scripture) uses truly admirable names <sup>c</sup> cautiously because it was about to introduce the destruction (of mankind). But the oblique case of the pronoun is taken in an honourable sense in the saying, "All flesh corrupted his <sup>d</sup> way," for truly the way of the Father has been corrupted through the desires and pleasures of the flesh; for these are the adversaries <sup>e</sup> of the laws of continence,<sup>f</sup> frugality,<sup>g</sup> prudence,<sup>h</sup> courage <sup>i</sup> and justice,<sup>j</sup> through which (virtues) the way which leads to God is found and broadened, becoming wholly . . .<sup>k</sup> *100. (Gen. vi. 13) What is the meaning of the words, "The time of all mankind has come against <sup>l</sup> me, for the earth is filled with injustice" ?

Those who reject Fate <sup>m</sup> use (these and) many other arguments, especially when death comes upon very many in a short time, as in the overthrow of houses, in conflagrations, shipwreck, tumult, in war, in combats on horse and combats on foot, in naval battles and plagues. To those who say this we say the same thing that was just said by the prophet (Moses), taking the reasoning <sup>n</sup> from him. For <sup>a</sup> πατήρ τῶν ὅλων.

<sup>c</sup> θαυμασίους ὀνόμασι.

<sup>e</sup> ἀντίμαχοι, ἀντίπαλοι.

<sup>g</sup> ὀλιγαρκίας, ὀλιγοδείας.

<sup>i</sup> ἀνδρείας.

<sup>b</sup> δι' αἰδῶ.

<sup>d</sup> αὐτοῦ; see note n on p. 65.

<sup>f</sup> ἐγκρατείας.

<sup>h</sup> σωφροσύνης.

<sup>j</sup> δικαιοσύνης.

<sup>k</sup> The word eriw is, as Aucher remarks, unknown; he emends to diwr "smooth" or iwr "his"; the Arm. glossator gives "open (or "spacious") road."

<sup>l</sup> LXX ἐναντίον, lit. "opposite" or "against" here renders Heb. liph'ne "before." Philo stresses the literal meaning of the Greek preposition, ignoring the required sense for homiletical purposes.

<sup>m</sup> εἰμαρμένην (prob.).

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "reason"—αἰτίαν.

GENESIS, BOOK I

the meaning of the words, "The time of all mankind has come against me" is about as follows. The life-time of all mankind has been limited and restricted to one time.<sup>a</sup> In consequence of this they no longer live in accordance with the harmonious principle of Fate.<sup>b</sup> And the reckoning<sup>c</sup> of every single one is gathered<sup>d</sup> into one, and has the same end in accordance with some harmony<sup>e</sup> and revolution of the stars, by which the race of mortals<sup>f</sup> is constantly preserved and destroyed. Accordingly, these things they may accept as they wish, both those who are among the learned<sup>g</sup> and those who contradict them. But this must first be said by us, that there is nothing so contrary and hostile and opposed to the Almighty<sup>h</sup> as is injustice.<sup>i</sup> Wherefore (Scripture) says that "The time of all mankind has come against me," and adds the reason for the opposition,<sup>j</sup> (namely) that the earth was filled with injustice. Second, time is considered a god<sup>k</sup> by the wicked among men, who would conceal<sup>l</sup> the really existing One.<sup>m</sup> For which reason (Scripture) says, "The time of all mankind has come against me," inasmuch as they make a god<sup>n</sup> of human time and oppose it to the true (God). But this is indicated in other places as well, where (Scripture) expresses the same principle as follows, "The time stood far off from them but God is among us,"<sup>o</sup> as if meaning that by wicked

<sup>a</sup> διωρίσθη καὶ . . . εἰς ἓνα χρόνον.

<sup>b</sup> κατὰ τὸν συμφωνοῦντα (οἱ ὁμοιοῦντα) λόγον τὸν τῆς εἰμαρμένης. The syntax and meaning are rather obscure to me. Professor H. A. Wolfson of Harvard University calls attention to a relevant statement in Aristotle, De Gen. et Corr. ii. 10, 336 b, διὸ καὶ οἱ χρόνοι καὶ οἱ βίοι ἐκάστων ἀριθμὸν ἔχουσι καὶ τούτῳ διορίζονται. πάντων γὰρ ἔστι τάξις, καὶ πᾶς χρόνος καὶ βίος μετρεῖται περιόδῳ. <sup>c</sup> λόγος. <sup>d</sup> συναγεται.

<sup>e</sup> ὁμόνοιαν. <sup>f</sup> τὸ φθαρτὸν γένος. <sup>g</sup> τῶν διδακτῶν (?).

<sup>h</sup> Dam. Par. has "to the most holy powers of God."

<sup>i</sup> ἀδικία. <sup>j</sup> τῆς ἐναντιότητος.

<sup>k</sup> θεός. <sup>l</sup> καλύπτειν vel sim.

<sup>m</sup> τὸν ὄντως ὄντα. The Greek frag. has τῷ ἀληθεῖ θεῷ.

<sup>n</sup> θεοπλαστοῦσι.

<sup>o</sup> Cf. LXX, Num. xiv. 9, ἀφέστηκε γὰρ ὁ καιρὸς ἀπ' αὐτῶν, ὁ δὲ κύριος ἐν ἡμῖν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

men time is believed to be the cause of the events of the universe <sup>a</sup>; but by wise and cultured men <sup>b</sup> not time but God (is believed to be the cause), from Whom come times and seasons. But He is the cause not of all things but only of the good and of those which are in accordance with virtue. <sup>c</sup> For just as He is unsharing and without portion in evil, so also is He not responsible <sup>d</sup> for it. Third, in respect of the above statement (Scripture) indicates a certain excess of impiety in saying, "The time of all mankind has come" as if it meant that all men everywhere with one accord <sup>e</sup> had agreed upon impiety. And the statement that "the earth was filled with injustice" is as much as to say that no part of it remains empty <sup>f</sup> so as to receive and support righteousness. <sup>g</sup> But the expression "against" is a confirmation of what has been said, for the divine judgment <sup>h</sup> of choice <sup>i</sup> alone is firm. <sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τῶν τοῦ κόσμου πραγμάτων.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. has εὐσεβέσι.

<sup>c</sup> ἀρετήν.
κενόν.

<sup>d</sup> ἀνάτιος.

<sup>g</sup> δικαιοσύνην.

<sup>e</sup> μιᾷ γνώμῃ.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ θεία δίκη.

<sup>i</sup> αἰρεσέως, ἐκλογῆς. Arm. variant = θέσεως.

<sup>j</sup> βεβαία. The syntax of the last clause is obscure.

BOOK II

1. (Gen. vi. 14) What is the construction <sup>a</sup> of (the ark of) Noah ?

If anyone wishes to examine that ark more physically, <sup>b</sup> he will find the construction of the human body (in it), as we shall discover in detail.

2. (Gen. vi. 14) Why does he (Noah) make the ark out of quadrangular beams ?

First of all, the figure of a quadrangle, wherever placed, keeps its place firmly, making all right angles ; and the nature <sup>c</sup> of the human body is constituted most impeccably <sup>a</sup> and most faultlessly. <sup>e</sup> Second, although our body is an instrument, <sup>f</sup> and each of its parts is rather rounded, <sup>g</sup> nevertheless the limbs constituted by these parts perforce <sup>h</sup> reduce the quadrangular figure to the circular one, as (for example) in the case of the chest, for the lungs are rather quadrangular. <sup>i</sup> Such too is the stomach before it has become swollen with food or through intemperance, <sup>j</sup> for there are certain fat-bellied people whom one may leave out of the argument. However, if anyone will examine the arms and the hands and the back and the thighs and the feet, he will find them all in common having a quadrangular form together with a spherical one. Third, a <sup>a</sup> κατασκευή.

<sup>c</sup> φύσις, v.l. = ὕλη.

<sup>e</sup> ἀπταιστότατα.

<sup>g</sup> κυκλώτερον.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher similarly renders, "pro exemplo sit pectus quod quadratum potius est quam orbiculare."

<sup>j</sup> ἀμετρία.

<sup>b</sup> φυσικώτερον.

<sup>a</sup> ἀπλανέστατα, ἀσφαλέστατα.

<sup>f</sup> ὄργανον.

<sup>h</sup> βία, ἀνάγκη.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

quadrangular beam has almost all its dimensions <sup>a</sup> unequal, since the length is greater than the width, and the width is greater than the height. Similarly constituted is the construction of our bodies, which are separated into a great, a medium and a small dimension <sup>b</sup>: a great one in length, a medium one in width, and a small one in height.

3. (Gen. vi. 14) Why does (Scripture) say, "Nests, nests <sup>c</sup> thou shalt make the ark" ?

Very naturally (does Scripture speak), for the human body is altogether perforated <sup>d</sup> like a nest, and every one of its parts is built like a nest, <sup>e</sup> since a respiratory force <sup>f</sup> penetrates them from their very beginnings. So, for example, the eyes are, in a sense, holes and nests, in which visions nestle. Other nests are the ears, in which sounds nestle. A third kind of nest are the nostrils, in which smells make their home. A fourth kind of nest, greater than the preceding, is the mouth, in which, again, tastes make their nest. And this was made large because another great organ of the articulate voice nestles in it, (namely) the tongue, which, as Socrates said, when it strikes and touches now here now there, articulates <sup>g</sup> and forms the voice, making it truly rational. <sup>h</sup> Moreover there

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "differences (or "intervals") of separation," διαστολαὶ χωρισμῶν or the like; Aucher renders, "distinctiones in sua extensione."

<sup>b</sup> χωρισμός; Aucher "extensione."

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. and Palest. Syriac versions of Scripture repeat the word νοσσιάς = Heb. qinnîm "nests," i.e. "cells" (A.V. "rooms"). LXX MSS. have only a single occurrence of νοσσιάς in this verse. Probably the Armenian translator of Philo has added the second occurrence to make Philo agree with his version of Scripture. Philo quotes part of this verse in De Confus. Ling. 105 but does not mention the "nests."

<sup>d</sup> τετρημένον (?). <sup>e</sup> νοσσεύεται.

<sup>f</sup> πνευματικὴ δύναμις (?). <sup>g</sup> ἄρθροῖ.

<sup>h</sup> ἐργαζομένη τὴν φωνὴν ὄντως λογικὴν, r.l. "becoming a truly rational instrument"—γενομένη ὄντως λογικὸν ὄργανον.

GENESIS, BOOK II

is another (nest) inside the skull.<sup>a</sup> And there is a certain nest of the brain <sup>b</sup> which is called the dura mater. And the chest (is the nest) of the lungs and the heart. And both of these are the nests of other parts called the inwards <sup>c</sup>; the lungs (are the nest) of the breath, and the heart (is the nest) of the blood and the breath. For it (the heart) has two sacs <sup>d</sup> as if nests nestling in the chest; (one is) the blood, from which the veins are irrigated like receptacles,<sup>e</sup> and the other is the breath, by which, again, being diffused as into receptacles the trachea is irrigated.<sup>f</sup> And both the firmer and the softer parts are, in a certain sense, nests, and nourish their chicks, the bones; the firmer parts are the nests of the marrow, and the softer flesh (is the nest) of pleasures and pains. And if one were to inquire into other parts he would find them to have the same kind <sup>g</sup> of construction.

4. (Gen. vi. 14) Why does He command that the ark be tarred inside and outside?

Bitumen <sup>h</sup> is so called because of its tarry firmness <sup>i</sup> and because it cements what is brought together of detached and disjointed things, being a bond <sup>j</sup> that is indissoluble and untouched and indivisible.<sup>k</sup> For everything that is held together by glue is forcibly held <sup>l</sup> by this in a natural union.<sup>m</sup> But our body, which consists of many parts, is united both outside and inside. And it stands by its own cohesion.<sup>n</sup> And the higher habit of these parts is the soul,<sup>o</sup> which being in the middle, everywhere rushes out to the entire upper surface and from the upper surface returns to the middle, so that one psychic nature is enveloped <sup>p</sup> by a

<sup>a</sup> ἐν τῷ κρανίῳ.

<sup>b</sup> ἐγκεφάλου.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν σπλάγχχνων.

<sup>d</sup> κοιλίαι.

<sup>e</sup> δεξαμεναί.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "filled with breath."

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "nature"—φύσιν.

<sup>h</sup> ἄσφαλτος.

<sup>i</sup> ἀσφάλειαν (?).

<sup>j</sup> δεσμός.

<sup>k</sup> ἀδιάλυτος καὶ ἄφαντος καὶ ἄτμητος.

<sup>l</sup> βιάζεται.

<sup>m</sup> κατὰ φυσικὴν ἔνωσιν.

<sup>n</sup> ἔξει, cf. Colson on Leg. All. ii. 22.

<sup>o</sup> ψυχῆ.

<sup>p</sup> περιπλέκεται.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

double bond, (thus) being fitted <sup>a</sup> to a firmer consistency <sup>b</sup> and union. <sup>c</sup> Accordingly this ark is overlaid with bitumen inside and out for the beforementioned reason. But that (other ark) in the temple, <sup>d</sup> which is overlaid with gold, is a likeness of the intelligible world, <sup>e</sup> as is shown in the treatise concerning this subject. <sup>f</sup> For the intelligible world, which exists in one place, is, as it were, <sup>g</sup> incorporated <sup>h</sup> in the incorporeal forms, <sup>i</sup> being fitted together <sup>j</sup> and united <sup>k</sup> out of all the forms. For in the measure that gold is more valuable than bitumen, in the same measure is the (ark) which is in the temple more excellent than (Noah's) ark. Wherefore He instructed that the measure of this ark be quadrangular, looking toward its usefulness <sup>l</sup>; but in the case of the other (ark He was looking toward) its imperishability, <sup>m</sup> since the nature of incorporeal and intelligible things <sup>n</sup> is imperishable and incorruptible <sup>o</sup> and permanent. <sup>p</sup> And this ark is carried about here and there, but the other one has its position firmly in the temple. But that which is stable <sup>q</sup> is related to the divine nature, just as this (ark), which turns now in one direction and now in another and changes (is related) to that which is generated. <sup>r</sup> And this ark of the flood is held up <sup>s</sup> as a type of corruptibility. <sup>t</sup> But the other one in the temple follows the condition <sup>u</sup> of the incorruptible.

*5. (Gen. vi. 15-16) Why does (Scripture) hand down the dimensions of the ark in this manner: "the length (shall

<sup>a</sup> ἄρμοζομένη.

<sup>b</sup> βεβαιότερον τόνον.

<sup>c</sup> ἔνωσιν.

<sup>d</sup> ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ.

<sup>e</sup> τοῦ νοητοῦ κόσμου.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Ebrietate 88-90.

<sup>g</sup> Construction not certain.

<sup>h</sup> σωματοῦται.

<sup>i</sup> ἐν ταῖς ἀσωμάτοις ἰδέαις.

<sup>j</sup> ἄρμοζόμενος.

<sup>k</sup> ἐνώμενος.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ χρήσιμον.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ ἀσάπες (?).

<sup>n</sup> ἀσωμάτων καὶ νοητῶν.

<sup>o</sup> ἀφθαρτος.

<sup>p</sup> διαμένων.

<sup>q</sup> στάσιμον ἢ βέβαιον.

<sup>r</sup> Arm. here seems to have read τὸ γόνιμον ἢ τὸ γεννητικόν "generative" for γενητόν "generated."

<sup>s</sup> Or "cited"—ἀναφέρεται (?).

<sup>t</sup> ὡς τρόπος τῆς φθορᾶς.

<sup>u</sup> Or "lot"—τὸν κλήρον.

GENESIS, BOOK II

be) three hundred cubits, its width fifty (cubits) and its height thirty (cubits). And to a cubit above (it is to be) finished, coming together gradually in the manner of a mound <sup>a</sup> ” ?

In a literal sense <sup>b</sup> it was necessary to construct a great work <sup>c</sup> for the reception of so many animals, of which the several genera were to be brought inside together with their food. But symbolically, <sup>d</sup> correctly considered and understood, it points to the knowledge <sup>e</sup> of the make-up <sup>f</sup> of our body, and there was now to be used, <sup>g</sup> not the quantity of cubits but the accurate proportion <sup>h</sup> which subsists in them. And the reckonings <sup>i</sup> which subsist in them are sixfold and tenfold and five thirds. For three hundred is six times fifty and ten times thirty, while fifty is five thirds of thirty. And similar are the proportions of the body. For if anyone wishes to inspect (the matter), he will perceive on reflexion that man has <sup>j</sup> a measure <sup>k</sup> that is not very great and not very small ; and if one takes a cord and stretches it from the head to the feet he will find that the cord is six times (as long) compared with the width of the chest, and ten times (as long) compared with the thickness of the sides (of the body), and that the width is five thirds of the thickness. Similar is the actual proportion, <sup>l</sup> taken from nature, of the human body, which is made with a measure essentially excellent in the case of those who are neither excessive nor deficient. And He most excellently <sup>m</sup> determined the (ark's) being finished to a cubit above, <sup>n</sup> for the upper part of the body imitates unity ; (that is), the head, like the citadel <sup>o</sup> of a king, has as its occupant

<sup>a</sup> This is an expansion of I.XX, καὶ εἰς πῆχυν συντελέσει αὐτὴν ἄνωθεν. “Mound” here is given for Arm. ko't'ol which usually renders βάσις or σκόπελον ; Aucher renders “instar obelisci.” <sup>b</sup> πρὸς τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>c</sup> μέγα ἔργον.

<sup>d</sup> συμβολικῶς or πρὸς τὸ σημειωθέν.

<sup>e</sup> γνῶσιν.

<sup>f</sup> τῆς ποιήσεως (?).

<sup>g</sup> χρησθήσεται vel sim.

<sup>h</sup> ἢ ἐπ' ἀκριβείας ἀναλογία.

<sup>i</sup> οἱ λόγοι.

<sup>j</sup> χρώμενον.

<sup>k</sup> μέτρῳ, μετρήσει.

<sup>l</sup> ἀναλογία.

<sup>m</sup> παγκάλως.

<sup>n</sup> See note a.

<sup>o</sup> ἄκρον, ἀκρόπολις.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the sovereign mind.<sup>a</sup> But those (parts) which are below the neck are divided into several parts, into hands and especially into the lower limbs; for the thighs and the legs and the feet are separated (from one another). Accordingly the aforementioned proportion <sup>b</sup> of cubits of relation <sup>c</sup> will easily be recognized, as I have pointed out, by anyone who wishes to learn them.<sup>d</sup> However, it is fitting not to ignore the fact that as for the number of cubits, each of them has its own necessary reckoning <sup>e</sup>; but one must begin at first with the length. Now three hundred is composed of single numbers joined one by one with an increase of one (each time, namely), of these twenty-four <sup>f</sup>: 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, 8, 9, 10, 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, 18, 19, 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. But twenty-four, a very natural <sup>g</sup> number, is apportioned among the hours of day and night and among the letters of written sound.<sup>h</sup> And being composed of three cubes,<sup>i</sup> it is entire,<sup>j</sup> complete and quite full in equality,<sup>k</sup> since the triad steadily exhibits the first equality, having a beginning, middle and end, which are equal. And the number eight is the first cube because it first shows equality again with others.<sup>l</sup> And the number twenty-four has also many other virtues, being the substance<sup>m</sup> of three hundred, as has been shown; this is the first (virtue).<sup>n</sup> And another virtue is that it is composed of twelve quadrangles, with which the monad is combined through single and double lengths, and of twelve doubles, moreover, which are com-

<sup>a</sup> τὸν ἡγεμονικὸν νοῦν.

<sup>b</sup> μέτρον, μέτρησις.

<sup>c</sup> ἀναλογίας.

<sup>d</sup> Construction of Arm. slightly uncertain.

<sup>e</sup> λόγον.

<sup>f</sup> The following numerals are given as numeral letters in Arm.

<sup>g</sup> φυσικώτατος.

<sup>h</sup> The 24 letters of the Greek alphabet.

<sup>i</sup>  $1 \times 3 \times 8$ .

<sup>j</sup> ὅλος.

<sup>k</sup> κατ' ἰσότητα.

<sup>l</sup> So literally; Aucher renders, "quia cum ceteris aequitatem rursus primam declaravit." Probably Philo means the repetition of 2 in the factors of 8 ( $= 2 \times 2 \times 2$ ).

<sup>m</sup> οὐσία.

<sup>n</sup> ἀρετή.

GENESIS, BOOK II

posed of twos, to which two is separately added.<sup>a</sup> Now the angular numbers which compose the twelve quadrangles are as follows: 1, 3, 5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 19, 21, 23. And it composes quadrangles as follows: one, four,<sup>b</sup> 9, 16, 25, 36, 49, 64, 81, 100, 121, 144.<sup>c</sup> But the angular (numbers) which compose the other lengths are the following: 2, 4, 6, 8, 10, 12, 14, 16, 18, 20, 22, 24; these make 12 (numbers). But from these are composed 2, 6, 12, 20, 30, 42, 56, 72, 90, 110, 132, 156, and these again are twelve (numbers).<sup>d</sup> If you add the twelve quadrangles (that is), one hundred forty-four and twelve other lengths (that is), one hundred fifty-six, you will find that three hundred is produced. (And you will get) a harmony of the nature of the odd (number), which is completed and goes over to the even (number) and the infinite.<sup>e</sup> For the odd completed (number) is the maker of equality in accordance with the nature of the square.<sup>f</sup> But the even and infinite (number is the maker) of inequality in accordance with the composition of another length.<sup>g</sup> But the whole consists of the equal and the unequal. Whence the Creator of the world<sup>h</sup> also in the corruption of earthly creatures has given judgment with the ark as an example.<sup>i</sup> Now enough has been said concerning (the number) three hundred. But

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. is obscure. Aucher renders, “adhaec ex duplicibus longis, geminis duodecim, compositis nempe ex duobus singillatim auctis per duo.”

<sup>b</sup> The first two numerals are given as numbers, the rest as numeral letters.

<sup>c</sup> The preceding are the squares of the numbers 1 to 12.

<sup>d</sup> As my colleague I. J. Gelb has pointed out to me, each of the twelve numbers of this series combines the corresponding number of the earlier series with the numbers preceding the latter; thus  $2=2+0$ ,  $6=2+4$ ,  $12=2+4+6$ ,  $20=2+4+6+8$ , etc.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ἄρτιον καὶ τὸ ἄπειρον.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher inadvertently renders, “trianguli.”

<sup>g</sup> Cf. QG i. 15.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ κοσμοποιός.

<sup>i</sup> So literally; Aucher renders more smoothly, “unde conditor ipse mundi etiam in corruptione terrenorum certum quasi exemplum praebuit in arca.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

now we must speak concerning (the number) fifty.<sup>a</sup> In the first place it consists of a rectangular (triangle) of quadrangles,<sup>b</sup> for a rectangular (triangle) consists of three, four, five; but from these (comes) the quadrangle,<sup>c</sup> nine, sixteen, twenty-five, the sum of which is fifty. And in the second place, fifty is completed and filled<sup>d</sup> by the unity of the following triangles: 1, 3, 6, 10, and again by the following four, equal in unity: 1, 4, 9, 16.<sup>e</sup> Now the triangular (numbers), added together, make twenty,<sup>f</sup> and the quadrangular (numbers) make thirty,<sup>g</sup> of which (the sum) is fifty. And if the triangular and quadrangular (numbers) are combined, the septangular (number) is produced, so that potentially it is contained in the divine fiftieth,<sup>h</sup> which the prophet had in view when he designated it as the festival of the fiftieth (year).<sup>i</sup> But the fiftieth year is entirely free<sup>j</sup> and freedom-giving.<sup>k</sup> The third argument<sup>l</sup> is that three squares<sup>m</sup> in succession from unity and three cubes in succession from unity give fifty; the three squares

<sup>a</sup> The measure of the width of the ark in cubits.

<sup>b</sup> ἐξ ὀρθογώνου τετραγώνων; cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 177, where Philo says it is formed from ὀρθογωνίου τριγώνου.

<sup>c</sup> Meaning the square on each side of the triangle.

<sup>d</sup> τελεσθεῖς πληροῦται.

<sup>e</sup> Apparently these four numbers are considered equal in being squares of the first four digits.

<sup>f</sup>  $1 + 3 + 6 + 10 = 20$ .

<sup>g</sup>  $1 + 4 + 9 + 16 = 30$ .

<sup>h</sup> ἐν τῷ κυριακῷ πενηκοστῷ. The Arm. adds "the holy trinity," a Christian gloss. Aucher omits "trinity" in his translation but connects "holy" with "fiftieth."

<sup>i</sup> The word "year" is supplied from the context; Aucher renders, "festum Iubilaeum."

<sup>j</sup> In Lev. xxv. 9 f. Heb. yôbél "Jubilee" is rendered by LXX as ἐναντὸς ἀφέσεως, similarly by Arm. O.T. In De Spec. Leg. ii. 176 ff. Philo applies the virtues of 50 to Pentecost, not to the Jubilee year. In dealing with the latter, De Spec. Leg. ii. 110 ff., he does not indulge in Pythagorean number-mysticism.

<sup>k</sup> ἐλευθεροποιός, used only of God in extant Greek works of Philo.

<sup>l</sup> θεωρία or θεώρημα.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher again inadvertently gives "trianguli."

GENESIS, BOOK II

in succession from unity are the following : 1, 4, 9 (of which the sum) is 14 ; and the cubes are the following : 1, 8, 27 (of which the sum) is 36 ; and their sum is fifty. Moreover thirty is a very natural <sup>a</sup> (number). For as the triad is to unity, so thirty is to the decad, so that the period of the moon is full-orbed by collections of months.<sup>b</sup> Second, it consists of the following four squares in succession from unity : 1, 4, 9, 16, which (added together) make thirty. Wherefore not idly or inappropriately did Heracleitus call this a generation, saying, " From a man thirty years old there can come a grandfather, for he attains manhood in his fourteenth year, when he is able to sow seed, and the (child) sown within a year comes into being and similarly after fifteen years begets one like himself."<sup>c</sup> And from these names of grandfathers, fathers, begotten sons, and of mothers, daughters,<sup>d</sup> and sons of daughters there comes about a complete generation.

6. (Gen. vi. 16) What is the meaning of the words, " a door at the side " ? For (Scripture) says, " Thou shalt make a door at the side."

Not vulgarly <sup>e</sup> does that door at the side (of the ark) represent the human structure,<sup>f</sup> which He decently mentioned, saying it was " at the side,"<sup>g</sup> through which the excreta are removed to the outside. (This is) very excel-

<sup>a</sup> φυσικώτατος.

<sup>b</sup> Text and meaning obscure ; Aucher renders, " idque lunae cyclus, collectio singulorum mensium plena delineatione." Staehle, following Robbins, cites a partial parallel from John Lydus, p. 55, ἐπει καὶ ὁ τοῦ μηνὸς κύκλος συνέστηκεν.

<sup>c</sup> Cf. Plutarch, Def. Orac. ii. 415 D ap. Diels, Frag. d. Vorsokratiker, 4th ed., i. 76, also Censorinus 17. 2 and John Lydus, De Mens. iii. 14 (the latter " misverstanden " according to Diels).

<sup>d</sup> Variant " sons."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher " obscure," but Arm. douznak<sup>e</sup>εgay means " small," " slight," " cheap."

<sup>f</sup> κατασκευήν.

<sup>g</sup> πλαγίαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

lent, for,<sup>a</sup> as Socrates used to say, whether taught by Moses or moved by the things themselves, the Creator, valuing<sup>b</sup> the decency of our body, turned to the rear of the senses the orifices of the passage of the canals,<sup>c</sup> lest we should feel disgust at ourselves,<sup>d</sup> when in purging ourselves of the bile-carrying waste, we see this shameful sight. Wherefore He surrounded and enclosed that passage by the back and hinder parts as by high swelling mounds; and also for other uses have the buttocks been made soft.

7. (Gen. vi. 16) Why does (Scripture) say, "Ground-floor (chambers)<sup>e</sup> and second-storey ones<sup>f</sup> and third-storey ones<sup>g</sup> shall be made"<sup>h</sup>?

Most excellently<sup>i</sup> has (Scripture) alluded to the receptacles<sup>j</sup> of food by calling them "ground-floor chambers," since food is corruptible and the corruptibility is of the lower part, because it (the food) is carried downward.<sup>k</sup> For only a very little food and drink is distributed (through the body),<sup>l</sup> and by this we are nourished, while the greater part is separated and carried outside in the excrement. But the intestines have been made second-storey and third-storey chambers by the providence of the Creator<sup>m</sup> for the preservation of created things.<sup>n</sup> For if He had made

<sup>a</sup> k' anzi "for" comes before "very excellent" in the Arm., but the sense requires its transposition.

<sup>b</sup> δοκιμάζων.

<sup>c</sup> τὰς τῆς ὁδοῦ ἐξόδους τῆς τῶν ὀχετῶν. For a different allegory of this physiological fact see De Poster. Caini 127 f.

<sup>d</sup> βδελυττώμεθα.

<sup>e</sup> κατάγεια.

<sup>f</sup> διώροφα.

<sup>g</sup> τριώροφα.

<sup>h</sup> So LXX and Arm. O.T. (except for the verb which is 2nd p. sing. as in Heb.). The Heb. has for "ground-floor chambers," etc., merely "lower ones, second ones, third ones."

<sup>i</sup> παγκάλως.

<sup>j</sup> ἀγγεία ἢ σκεύη.

<sup>k</sup> κάτω.

<sup>l</sup> ἀναδίδονται in the medical sense; Aucher renders literally, "sursum exhibentur."

<sup>m</sup> τῆ τοῦ ζωοπλάστου προνοία.

<sup>n</sup> εἰς τὴν τῶν κτισθέντων διαμογήν. Aucher renders, "ad sustentationem confulciendam factorum."

GENESIS, BOOK II

straight<sup>a</sup> receptacles of food from the stomach<sup>b</sup> to the buttocks,<sup>c</sup> something terrible<sup>d</sup> might have happened. In the first place, (there might have been) continual lack,<sup>e</sup> desire<sup>f</sup> and famine; these are the misfortunes which might have occurred in that case, and instantaneous evacuation.<sup>g</sup> Second, a certain insatiate desire<sup>h</sup> (would have resulted). For when the receptacles have been emptied, hunger and thirst must of necessity immediately follow, as in the case of pregnant matrons, and the pleasant desire of food must become insatiate desire and something unphilosophical.<sup>i</sup> For nothing is more uncultured<sup>j</sup> than to give oneself wholly<sup>k</sup> to the belly. And third, death lies in wait<sup>l</sup> at the entrance, for they must be subject to an early death<sup>m</sup> who, when they eat, are immediately hungry, and when they drink, are immediately thirsty, and before they are filled, are emptied and feel hunger. But by the windings and twistings of the intestines we are saved from all hunger and insatiate desire and from being subject to an early death. So long as the food which is taken remains within (us), not that which is in passage but that which is necessary is changed.<sup>n</sup> For the force<sup>o</sup> of the food is first released<sup>p</sup> and squeezed out<sup>q</sup> in the belly.<sup>r</sup> And then it is warmed in the liver and carried out.<sup>s</sup> And then whatever is best flavoured<sup>t</sup> resolves itself<sup>u</sup> into the several parts, into growth for children and into strength for adults, but the rest is separated as excrement and

<sup>a</sup> Or "direct"—ὀρθά.

<sup>b</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ στομάχου meaning "stomach" as in De Opif. Mundi 118; Aucher renders, "visceribus."

<sup>c</sup> τὴν ἔδραν.

<sup>d</sup> δεινότατόν τι.

<sup>e</sup> ἔνδεια.

<sup>f</sup> ἐπιθυμία (?).

<sup>g</sup> κένωσις.

<sup>h</sup> ἀπληστία.

<sup>i</sup> ἀφιλόσοφον.

<sup>j</sup> ἀμουςότερον.

<sup>k</sup> σχολάζεσθαι.

<sup>l</sup> ἐφεδρεύει.

<sup>m</sup> ὠκύμοροι.

<sup>n</sup> ἀλλοιοῦται. The meaning is that only useful food is digested. Aucher renders, "non ut transitus exigit sed ut necessarium erat variatio efficitur."

<sup>o</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>p</sup> ἀναλύεται.

<sup>q</sup> ἐκπιέζεται.

<sup>r</sup> γαστρί.

<sup>s</sup> Variant "it is warmed and poured out from the liver."

<sup>t</sup> Or "most wholesome"—εὐχυμώτατον.

<sup>u</sup> ἀναλύεται.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

waste, and cast out. Now for such a dispensation <sup>a</sup> much time is consumed, as nature easily performs this forever.<sup>b</sup> But it seems to me that if the ark is taken (to refer) to the human body, nature is wonderfully <sup>c</sup> fond of life.<sup>d</sup> For these reasons, when living beings were destroyed and perished in the flood, He prepared a counterpart <sup>e</sup> to the earth. Wherefore whatever flourished on the earth the ark most generally <sup>f</sup> carried. And He wished that which was to be on the waves should be like the earth, a mother and nurse. And as they were nourished in the manner of pregnant women, (He wished) to show them (who were) within the sun and moon and the multitude of other stars and also the universal whole heaven.<sup>g</sup> For seeing by means of that which he <sup>h</sup> had constructed by art,<sup>i</sup> they learned more clearly the principle <sup>j</sup> and proportions <sup>k</sup> of the human body. For nothing so enslaved <sup>l</sup> man as the

<sup>a</sup> διακονίαν or διοίκησιν.      <sup>b</sup> εἰς αἰῶνα.      <sup>c</sup> δεινῶς.

<sup>d</sup> φιλόζωος, cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 205 διὰ τὸ προμηθῆς τῆς φιλοζώου φύσεως. The Arm. variant reads "it is not impossible for nature to make the human body, being fond of life."
<sup>e</sup> ἀντικείμενον vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> Or "generically"—γενικώτατα.

<sup>g</sup> Sense obscure. Aucher's rendering is not much clearer, "atque educatores ipsos tamquam gravidas ostendere una cum sole ac luna, caeteraque astrorum multitudine et universo toto caelo." The Armenian gloss reads "as an infant, being in the womb, does not see the sun and moon but still lives and grows, so they were in the ark. They say that Noah had in the ark a device that showed the heavens, and through this knew day and night, and the sun and moon reached him." According to the rabbinic legends, "the ark was illuminated by a precious stone, the light of which was more brilliant by night than by day, so enabling Noah to distinguish between day and night," see L. Ginzberg, Legends of the Jews, i. 42; v. 183. Possibly Philo's reference to pregnant women is based on the Heb. word šōhar, which most versions render "window" (in the ark) but the lxx by ἐπισυνάγων.

<sup>h</sup> Apparently Noah is meant.

<sup>i</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>k</sup> τὴν ἀναλογίαν.

<sup>l</sup> τέχνη.

<sup>l</sup> κατεδούλωσε.

GENESIS, BOOK II

bodily elements <sup>a</sup> of his being, <sup>b</sup> and those things through which passions <sup>c</sup> come, and especially wicked passions of pleasure <sup>d</sup> and appetites. <sup>e</sup>

8. (Gen. vi. 17) Why does (Scripture) say, “ There shall be a flood to destroy all flesh in which there is living breath <sup>f</sup> under heaven ” ?

This is almost as if it now reveals <sup>g</sup> what before it had intimated. <sup>h</sup> For there was no other reason for the destruction of man to take place than that having become slaves of pleasures and appetites, they did everything and suffered, <sup>i</sup> wherefore they attained a life of the very utmost misery. However, (Scripture) adds something very natural <sup>j</sup> in saying that the place of the vital spirit <sup>k</sup> is under heaven, since the heavens too are living. <sup>l</sup> For not (alone ?) fortunate is the body made from a heavenly substance, <sup>m</sup> as if it alone had obtained a peculiar wonderful portion <sup>n</sup> better than (that of) creatures endowed with life. <sup>o</sup> But heaven, in the first place, appeared worthy of this benefit <sup>p</sup> in the form <sup>q</sup> of wonderful divine living beings which are altogether intellectual spirits <sup>r</sup> and give also to those who are on earth a portion of participation in vital power, <sup>s</sup> and animate those who can be animated. <sup>t</sup>

<sup>a</sup> στοιχεῖα (?).

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders, “ corporis humores essentielles.”

<sup>c</sup> πάθη or “ vices ”—κακίαι vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> ἡδονῆς. <sup>e</sup> ἐπιθυμῖαι.

<sup>f</sup> πνεῦμα ζῶν, so also Arm. O.T. ; LXX πνεῦμα ζωῆς.

<sup>g</sup> ἀποκαλύπτει (?). <sup>h</sup> ἠνέξατο.

<sup>i</sup> ἔπασχον or “ were ill ”—ἐνόσουν. <sup>j</sup> φυσικώτερον.

<sup>k</sup> τοῦ ζωτικῆς πνεύματος, cf. De Opif. Mundi 30 ζωτικώ-τατον τὸ πνεῦμα.

<sup>l</sup> Variant “ in heaven there are living beings.”

<sup>m</sup> ἐξ οὐρανίας οὐσίας. <sup>n</sup> ἴδιον καὶ θαυμάσιον κληρον.

<sup>o</sup> τῶν ὄντων τῶν ζωογονηθέντων. Aucher renders less literally, “ creaturis viventibus.”

<sup>p</sup> χάριτος or χαρίσματος.

<sup>q</sup> εἰκόνος or τύπου.

<sup>r</sup> νοερά πνεύματα.

<sup>s</sup> μέρος τῆς κοινωνίας τῆς ζωτικῆς δυνάμεως.

<sup>t</sup> ψυχοὶ τοὺς ψυχοῦσθαι δυναμένους.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

*9. (Gen. vi. 17) Why does (Scripture) say, "Whatever is on earth shall die," for what sin did the beasts <sup>a</sup> commit ?

In the first place, just as when a king is killed in battle, his military forces also are struck down together with him, so He decides now too that when the human race is destroyed like a king, other beasts should be destroyed together with it. For which reason it happens that beasts die before (men) also in a plague, especially those that are brought up with men and live with them,<sup>b</sup> as, for example, dogs and their like, and men die later. Second, just as when the head is cut off, no one blames <sup>c</sup> nature if so many other parts of the body also die together with it, so also no one will now condemn (this). For man is a kind of ruling head,<sup>d</sup> and when he is destroyed, it is not to be wondered at <sup>e</sup> that other living beings should perish together with him. Third, the beasts were made, not for their own sake, as wise men reason,<sup>f</sup> but for the service <sup>g</sup> and needs <sup>h</sup> and honour <sup>i</sup> of man. It is right that when those are taken away for whose sake they (the beasts) were made, they too should be deprived of life. This is the literal meaning. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>j</sup> we may say the following, that when the soul is deluged <sup>k</sup> by streams of passion,<sup>l</sup> and in a certain sense <sup>m</sup> is submerged,<sup>n</sup> those who are on earth—by which I mean the earthy parts<sup>o</sup> of the body—must die with it. For a life of evil is death. The eyes that see die <sup>p</sup> when they see unjustly.<sup>q</sup> And the ears that hear die when they hear unjustly. Every sense also dies when it perceives unjustly.

<sup>a</sup> τὰ κτήνη or τὰ ἄλογα. A similar question is asked in QG i. 94, see above, p. 62.

<sup>b</sup> σύντροφα καὶ σύνοικα.

<sup>c</sup> αἰτιᾶται.

<sup>d</sup> ἀρχική τις κεφαλή.

<sup>e</sup> οὐ θαυμαστόν.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. seems literally to translate ὡς ἐστὶ τῶν σοφῶν ὁ λόγος. Aucher renders, "ut a sapientibus dictum est."

<sup>g</sup> εἰς ὑπηρεσίαν.

<sup>h</sup> χρείας.

<sup>i</sup> εὐπρέπειαν or "enjoyment"—ἀπόλαυσιν.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>k</sup> κατακλύζεται.

<sup>l</sup> Or "sin."

<sup>m</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>n</sup> καταποντίζεται.

<sup>o</sup> τὰ χοϊκά or τὰ γεώδη.

<sup>p</sup> τελευτῶσι.

<sup>q</sup> ἀδίκως.

GENESIS, BOOK II

*10. (Gen. vi. 18) What is the meaning of the words, "I will establish my covenant <sup>a</sup> with thee" ?

In the first place He announces <sup>b</sup> that no one will be the heir <sup>c</sup> of the divine substance <sup>d</sup> except only him who is virtuous. Though men have heirs when they are no longer (alive) but are dead, God is eternal and gives participation in inheritance <sup>e</sup> to the wise, and rejoices in their possession. <sup>f</sup> For he who possesses all things is not in need <sup>g</sup> of anything, but those who lack <sup>h</sup> all things possess nothing in truth. Wherefore, being gracious, He benefits those who are worthy, <sup>i</sup> bestowing <sup>j</sup> on them whatever they lack. Second, He bestows a certain additional inheritance on the wise man, for He does not say, "I will establish my covenant for thee" but "with thee," that is to say, "thou art a just and true <sup>k</sup> covenant, which I will establish as a rational class <sup>l</sup> in possession and enjoyment (of that) for which virtue is necessary."

*11. (Gen. vii. 1) Why does (Scripture) say, "Enter thou and all thy household <sup>m</sup> into the ark, for I have seen thee righteous <sup>n</sup> before me in this generation" ?

In the first place, (it is) clear evidence that because of one righteous and worthy man, many men are saved <sup>o</sup> through their relation <sup>p</sup> to him, just as sailors and a (military) force <sup>q</sup> (are saved, the former) when they meet with a good skipper, <sup>r</sup> and the latter with one who is experienced in battle and is a good commander. In the second place, He praises the righteous man who acquires virtue not only for himself but also for his household, <sup>s</sup> wherefore it also becomes worthy of salvation. <sup>t</sup> And most excellently <sup>u</sup> is the following added, "I see thee righteous before me."

<sup>a</sup> διαθήκην.

<sup>b</sup> ἀναγγέλλει.

<sup>c</sup> κληρονόμον.

<sup>d</sup> τῆς θείας οὐσίας.

<sup>e</sup> κοινωνίαν τῆς κληρονομίας.

<sup>f</sup> Dam. Par. περιουσίᾳ.

<sup>g</sup> οὐκ ἐνδεής. <sup>h</sup> ἄποροι.

<sup>i</sup> τοὺς ἀξίους.

<sup>j</sup> χαριζόμενος.

<sup>k</sup> δικάια καὶ ἀληθής.

<sup>l</sup> λογικὸν γένος.

<sup>m</sup> οἰκία.

<sup>n</sup> δίκαιον.

<sup>o</sup> σώζονται.

<sup>p</sup> συγγένειαν.

<sup>q</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>r</sup> κυβερνήτη.

<sup>s</sup> οἴκῳ.

<sup>t</sup> σωτηρίας.

<sup>u</sup> παγκάλως.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

For in one way do men appraise <sup>a</sup> the manner of life <sup>b</sup> (of someone), and in another way the Deity (judges). For they judge by visible things, but He judges by the invisible thoughts of the soul.<sup>c</sup> And it is remarkable <sup>d</sup> that what follows this is placed first,<sup>e</sup> in that He means, “in this generation thee have I seen righteous,” lest He should seem to condemn former (generations) and cut off hope from those who are to come later.<sup>f</sup> This is the literal meaning. But the deeper meaning <sup>g</sup> (is as follows). When God saves the sovereign mind,<sup>h</sup> which is the master <sup>i</sup> of the soul,<sup>j</sup> then He also saves the whole household with it. By this I mean all the parts <sup>k</sup> and those things which are partial,<sup>l</sup> and speech,<sup>m</sup> which is projected outward, and the things of the body. For as the mind is in the soul, so the soul is in the body.<sup>n</sup> Through reflexion <sup>o</sup> all the parts of the soul are well-off,<sup>p</sup> and all its household experiences benefit together with it. And when the whole soul fares well, then its household experiences benefit with it,<sup>q</sup> the body (doing so) through moderation and restraint of habits <sup>r</sup> and by cutting off its insatiable desire, which is the cause of illnesses.

*12. (Gen. vii. 2, 3) Why does He command (Noah) to lead into the ark seven of the clean beasts,<sup>s</sup> male and <sup>a</sup> δοκιμάζουσι.

<sup>b</sup> διαγωγῆν.

<sup>c</sup> ἐκ τῶν τῆς ψυχῆς ἀοράτων λογισμῶν.

<sup>d</sup> θαυμαστόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὰ τούτων ἐξῆς ἐτέθη πρότερον. Aucher's rendering, “quod interea additur,” misses the point, namely that in Scripture the words “in this generation” follow “thee have I seen righteous.”

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders, “neque posteriorem futurorum spem concideret.” Procopius μήτε τὰς ἀθις ἀπογινώσκειν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> τὸν ἡγεμονικὸν νοῦν.

<sup>i</sup> οἰκοδεσπότης.

<sup>j</sup> I have slightly transposed here; Arm. has “of the soul” after “mind” and before the rel. pr.

<sup>k</sup> τὰ μέρη.

<sup>l</sup> τὰ κατὰ μέρη.

<sup>m</sup> λόγος.

<sup>n</sup> Or “what the mind is to the soul, so is the soul to the body.”

<sup>o</sup> λογισμῶν.

<sup>p</sup> εὐπαθοῦντα.

<sup>q</sup> Note the repetition.

<sup>r</sup> σωφροσύνη καὶ ἐγκρατεία ἐθῶν.

<sup>s</sup> τῶν καθαρῶν κτηνῶν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

female, but of the unclean, two, male and female,<sup>a</sup> to nourish seed on all the earth ?

In a manner befitting God<sup>b</sup> (Scripture) calls the hebdomad pure<sup>c</sup> but the dyad impure,<sup>d</sup> for by nature the number seven is truly<sup>e</sup> pure, inasmuch as it is virginal<sup>f</sup> and unmixed<sup>g</sup> and unmothered,<sup>h</sup> nor does it give birth<sup>i</sup> nor is it born, as are the several (digits) which are in the decad, because of its likeness to the Eternal,<sup>j</sup> for He<sup>k</sup> is uncreated and unbegotten<sup>l</sup> and nothing is begotten by Him,<sup>m</sup> although He is the causes of generation<sup>n</sup> and things begotten,<sup>o</sup> for He moves<sup>p</sup> all those powers<sup>q</sup> which are naturally well suited to the generation of what is begotten. But the number two is impure. In the first place, because it is empty and not dense<sup>r</sup>; and what is not full is also not pure. Then too it is the beginning of a vast infinity in matter.<sup>s</sup> And it has inequality because of oblongs,<sup>t</sup> for those (numbers) which are multiplied by two are all oblongs.<sup>u</sup> But the unequal<sup>v</sup> is not pure, and neither is the material,<sup>w</sup> but that which comes from it is doubtful<sup>x</sup> and

<sup>a</sup> Philo omits the birds mentioned in Gen. vii. 3.

<sup>b</sup> θεοπρεπῶς.      <sup>c</sup> καθαρὰν.      <sup>d</sup> Lit. "not pure."

<sup>e</sup> ὄντως; Aucher omits this word.

<sup>f</sup> παρθένος.      <sup>g</sup> ἄκρατος.

<sup>h</sup> ἀμήτωρ. Cf. Leg. All. i. 15.

<sup>i</sup> τίκτει.      <sup>j</sup> τῷ ὄντι.

<sup>k</sup> That God is meant seems probable from the context, but cf. Leg. All. i. 15.

<sup>l</sup> ἀγένητος καὶ ἀγέννητος.

<sup>m</sup> See note k.      <sup>n</sup> τῆς γενέσεως.

<sup>o</sup> τῶν γεννηθέντων.      <sup>p</sup> κινεῖ.

<sup>q</sup> δυνάμεις.      <sup>r</sup> κενὸς καὶ οὐ ναστός, as in J. Lydus.

<sup>s</sup> ἀπειρίας διὰ τὴν ὕλην. Cf. QG i. 15.

<sup>t</sup> διὰ τοὺς ἑτερομήκεις (ἀριθμούς), meaning numbers "not square" or produced by multiplying unequal factors; cf. Colson's Appendix on Leg. All. i. 3 (vol. i. p. 477 of Loeb Philo).

<sup>u</sup> Aucher's rendering "caeteros longos (numeros)" misses the point of the Greek behind Arm. ayl arkaracn, lit. "other lengths," as explained in preceding note.

<sup>v</sup> τὸ ἀνισον.      <sup>w</sup> τὸ ὑλικόν.      <sup>x</sup> σφαλερόν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

incongruous,<sup>a</sup> lacking a reason<sup>b</sup> for purity, (namely) that which brings it to an end.<sup>c</sup> And it is automatically<sup>d</sup> brought to an end by periods<sup>e</sup> of harmony and equality. These are the natural aspects.<sup>f</sup> But the moral aspects<sup>g</sup> are now to be spoken of. The irrational and unintelligent part<sup>h</sup> of our souls<sup>i</sup> is divided into seven parts, into the five senses,<sup>j</sup> the organ of speech<sup>k</sup> and that of reproduction.<sup>l</sup> These are all pure in a virtuous man<sup>m</sup> and by nature are feminine when they belong to the irrational species,<sup>n</sup> but (when they belong to) a good possessor,<sup>o</sup> they are masculine, for the thoughts<sup>p</sup> of a virtuous man bring virtue to them also, since they are not permitted by his better part<sup>q</sup> to come to the external senses rashly and unrestrained and uncurbed but he subdues<sup>r</sup> them and turns them back to right reason.<sup>s</sup> But in a wicked man<sup>t</sup> the evil produces twins,<sup>u</sup> for the foolish man is of two minds and hesitates between two courses, mixing things that are not to be mixed, and confusing and mingling those things which can easily be separated.<sup>v</sup> Such is he who bears a colour in his soul,<sup>w</sup> for he is like one spotted<sup>x</sup> and a leper in his body, <sup>a</sup> ἀνάρμοστον.

<sup>b</sup> αἰτίας or "occasion"—ἀφορμῆς.

<sup>c</sup> The last clause is obscure; Aucher renders, "quae illud in desinentiam (vel, perfectionem) conducatur."

<sup>d</sup> αὐτονόμως.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. nouag has several different meanings; two of its common Greek equivalents are περίοδος (or κάθοδος) and μέλος. Aucher chooses the latter meaning here, rendering it by "canticus."

<sup>f</sup> τὰ φυσικά.

<sup>g</sup> τὰ ἠθικά.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ἄλογον καὶ ἄνουν.

<sup>i</sup> τῶν ψυχῶν.

<sup>j</sup> αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ φωνητήριον ὄργανον.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ σπερματικόν or, as usually in Philo, τὸ γόνιμον.

<sup>m</sup> τῷ σπουδαίῳ.

<sup>n</sup> τῷ ἀλόγῳ εἶδει.

<sup>o</sup> ἀγαθῷ κτησαμένῳ.

<sup>p</sup> οἱ λογισμοί.

<sup>q</sup> Or possibly "for the most part"—ἐκ τοῦ πλείστου μέρους.

<sup>r</sup> ταπεινοῖ.

<sup>s</sup> πρὸς τὸν ὀρθὸν λόγον ἀναστρέφει.

<sup>t</sup> τῷ φαύλῳ.

<sup>u</sup> διδυμοτοκεῖ.

<sup>v</sup> διακρίνεσθαι.

<sup>w</sup> The Arm. seems to be slightly corrupt; the Greek fragment has τοιαῦτα ἐν ψυχῇ χρώματα ἐπιφέρων, "bearing such colours in his soul."

<sup>x</sup> ποικίλος.

GENESIS, BOOK II

defiling and staining his healthy thoughts<sup>a</sup> by death-bringing and murderous ones.<sup>b</sup> However, in a natural way<sup>c</sup> there is added (by Scripture) the reason for the entry and guarding<sup>d</sup> of the animals, for (Scripture) says this was for the nourishing<sup>e</sup> and preserving<sup>f</sup> of seed.<sup>g</sup> In the literal sense,<sup>h</sup> although particular (animals)<sup>i</sup> may perish,<sup>j</sup> nevertheless the genus<sup>k</sup> is preserved in the seed of others in order that the divine purpose<sup>l</sup> which was formed at the creation of the world<sup>m</sup> might forever remain inextinguishable by the saving of the genus. But in the figurative sense,<sup>n</sup> it is necessary that there be saved<sup>o</sup> the irrational parts of the soul, pure of movement, to be, as it were, seed-bearing principles<sup>p</sup> of non-holy things<sup>q</sup> as well. For man's nature is receptive of contraries,<sup>r</sup> both virtue and vice, each of which (Scripture) has indicated in the account of the Creation<sup>s</sup> by the tree which is called the knowledge<sup>t</sup> of good and evil, since our mind,<sup>u</sup> in which are knowledge and understanding,<sup>v</sup> comprehends both of them, good and evil. However, the good is kin<sup>w</sup> to the hebdomad, while evil is brother to the dyad. Moreover, the Law, abounding in beauty and loving wisdom,<sup>x</sup> says that seed is to be <sup>a</sup> τοὺς ὑγιεῖς λογισμούς.

<sup>b</sup> ἐκ θανατούντων καὶ φονούντων.

<sup>c</sup> φυσικῶς.

<sup>d</sup> τῆς εἰσόδου καὶ τῆς φυλακῆς.

<sup>e</sup> τοῦ θρέψαι.

<sup>f</sup> τοῦ διατηρεῖν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ σπέρμα.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>i</sup> τὰ ἐπὶ μέρους.

<sup>j</sup> διαφθειρήται.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ γένος.

<sup>l</sup> ἡ θεία πρόθεσις.

<sup>m</sup> ἐν τῇ κοσμοποιῖᾳ.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>o</sup> The last four words are bracketed by Aucher.

<sup>p</sup> The syntax of the Arm. is obscure; Aucher construes differently, rendering, "oportet et in irrationalibus (partibus) animi mundos motus esse ut seminalia quaedam principia etsi non sint munda (animalia)."<sup>q</sup>

<sup>q</sup> ἀνοσίων.

<sup>r</sup> ἐναντίων.

<sup>s</sup> ἐν τῇ κοσμοποιῖᾳ.

<sup>t</sup> τὸ γινώσκειν.

<sup>u</sup> ὁ ἡμέτερος νοῦς.

<sup>v</sup> The first Arm. term, gitout<sup>c</sup>iwn, usually renders ἐπιστήμη or γνῶσις: the second term, hančar, renders σύνεσις, φρόνησις, ἐπιστήμη, etc., but in the Arm. version of Philo's De Vita Contemplativa it regularly renders ἐπιστήμη.

<sup>w</sup> συγγενές.

<sup>x</sup> φιλόσοφος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

nourished not in one place but in all the earth. This is very natural and at the same time very moral,<sup>a</sup> for it is very natural that in all parts and sections of the earth there should again be the seed of living things<sup>b</sup>; and it is very fitting for God again to fill the emptied places with similar things through another (act of) generation. (It is also) very moral that the substance of our body, being earthy, should not be altogether overlooked,<sup>c</sup> destitute and empty<sup>d</sup> of living beings. For if we resort to drunkenness<sup>e</sup> and fine cooking and chasing after women<sup>f</sup> and to altogether lewd and loose behaviour, we shall be corpse-bearers<sup>g</sup> in our body. But if the merciful<sup>h</sup> God turns aside the flood of vices<sup>i</sup> and makes the soul dry,<sup>j</sup> He will proceed to quicken<sup>k</sup> and animate<sup>l</sup> the body with a purer soul, whose guide<sup>m</sup> is wisdom.<sup>n</sup>

*13. (Gen. vii. 4, 10) Why, after (their) entering the ark, did seven days pass, after which (came) the flood?<sup>o</sup>

The benevolent Saviour<sup>p</sup> grants repentance of sins<sup>q</sup> in order that when they see the ark over against them,<sup>r</sup> which had been made as a symbol of time,<sup>s</sup> and the genera of animals placed in it, which the earth bore in itself, in accordance with their several particular species,<sup>t</sup> they may have faith<sup>u</sup> in the announcing<sup>v</sup> of the flood; (and that)

<sup>a</sup> ἠθικώτατον.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. syntax seems slightly corrupt here.

<sup>c</sup> παροραθῆναι.

<sup>d</sup> ἔρημον καὶ κενήν.

<sup>e</sup> οἰνοφλυγία.

<sup>f</sup> θηλομανία.

<sup>g</sup> νεκροφοροῦντες.

<sup>h</sup> οἰκτείρων.

<sup>i</sup> Or "passions."

<sup>j</sup> ξηράν.

<sup>k</sup> ζωογονεῖν.

<sup>l</sup> ψυχούν.

<sup>m</sup> κυβερνήτης.

<sup>n</sup> σοφία. Dam. Par. paraphrases.

<sup>o</sup> ὁ κατακλυσμός.

<sup>p</sup> ὁ εὐμενῆς (or ἰλεως) σωτήρ, meaning God.

<sup>q</sup> μετάνοιαν ἁμαρτιῶν.

<sup>r</sup> κατεναντίας. Procopius ἀντίμμενον γῆς.

<sup>s</sup> τύπον τοῦ χρόνου (?): text and meaning doubtful.

<sup>t</sup> Aucher "quae in se ferebat terra juxta partes ad speciem perspectantes." Cod. Barb. reads somewhat more intelligibly τὰ τῶν ζώων γένη . . . ὧν ἔφερον ἡ γῆ τὰ κατὰ μέρος εἶδη.

<sup>u</sup> πιστεύουσι.

<sup>v</sup> τῷ κηρύγματι.

GENESIS, BOOK II

fearing destruction, they may first of all turn back (from sin), breaking down and destroying all impiety <sup>a</sup> and evil. Second, this passage <sup>b</sup> clearly represents <sup>c</sup> the extraordinary abundance <sup>d</sup> of the seemingly kindness <sup>e</sup> of the Saviour and Benefactor <sup>f</sup> in loosing man's evil of many years, <sup>g</sup> extending almost from birth to old age, in those who repent for a few days. <sup>h</sup> For the Deity is void of malice <sup>i</sup> and a lover of virtue. <sup>j</sup> Accordingly, when He sees genuine virtue <sup>k</sup> in the soul, He apportions <sup>l</sup> such <sup>m</sup> honour to it as to be gracious <sup>n</sup> to all those who stand guilty of earlier sins. <sup>o</sup> Third, the number of seven days, during which the (divine) command <sup>p</sup> kept back the flood after their entering the ark, is a reminder of the genesis of the world, <sup>q</sup> of which the birthday <sup>r</sup> is celebrated on the seventh day, clearly exhibiting the Father <sup>s</sup> as though (saying), "I am both the creator of the world <sup>t</sup> and He who brings into being non-existent things, and now I am about to destroy the world by a great flood. But the cause of creating <sup>u</sup> the world was the goodness and kindness <sup>v</sup> in Me, while (the cause) of the destruction that is about to befall them <sup>w</sup> is the ingratitude and impiety <sup>x</sup> of those who have experienced

- <sup>a</sup> ἀσέβειαν.
- <sup>b</sup> λόγος.
- <sup>c</sup> παρίστησι.
- <sup>d</sup> ἑξαισίαν ὑπερβολήν.
- <sup>e</sup> Cod. Barb. τῆς ἐπιεικείας.
- <sup>f</sup> τοῦ σωτηῆρος καὶ εὐεργέτου.
- <sup>g</sup> τὴν πολυετῆ μοχθηρίαν.
- <sup>h</sup> Cod. Barb. and Procopius ἡμέραις ὀλίγαις.
- <sup>i</sup> Greek equivalent uncertain.
- <sup>j</sup> φιλάρετος.
- <sup>k</sup> γνησίαν ἀρετήν.
- <sup>l</sup> ἀπονέμει.
- <sup>m</sup> Arm. aync̄ar = "such"; variant an̄car = ἀμετρον vel sim.
- <sup>n</sup> χαρίσασθαι.
- <sup>o</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "ut deletat omnia de primis delicti imminentia damna."
- <sup>p</sup> ὁ χρησμός (?).
- <sup>q</sup> τῆς τοῦ κόσμου γενέσεως.
- <sup>r</sup> τὰ γενέθλια.
- <sup>s</sup> Aucher more freely renders, "demonstrando patris auctoritatem."
- <sup>t</sup> ὁ κοσμοποιός.
- <sup>u</sup> τῆς γενέσεως.
- <sup>v</sup> ἡ ἀγαθότης καὶ ἡ χρηστότης.
- <sup>w</sup> τῆς μελλούσης καταλήψεσθαι.
- <sup>x</sup> τὸ ἀχαρίστους καὶ ἀσεβεῖς εἶναι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

good.”<sup>a</sup> He therefore holds off<sup>b</sup> for seven days in order that those who lack faith and belief<sup>c</sup> may be mindful of the genesis of the world, and coming as suppliants to the Creator of all<sup>d</sup> may ask for the perpetuity of His works,<sup>e</sup> and that they may ask (this) not with mouth or tongue but rather with a chastened mind.<sup>f</sup>

*14. (Gen. vii. 4, 12) Why was there a flooding rain<sup>g</sup> for forty days and as many nights?

First of all, “day” is spoken of in two senses. The first is the time from morning to evening, from the rising of the shining sun to its setting. Thus do they determine<sup>h</sup> who say, “It is day while the sun is above the earth.” But the day is spoken of in a second sense and is reckoned with the night. Thus we say that the month is of thirty days, joining and reckoning with them also the night-time. Now with these things determined,<sup>i</sup> I say that the statement (of Scripture)<sup>j</sup> contains in itself<sup>k</sup> forty days and forty nights not vainly or idly but to emphasize the two numbers which are set apart<sup>l</sup> for the birth of man, (namely) forty and eighty, as is reported by many others, by physicians and also by naturalists.<sup>m</sup> And especially is this written in the sacred Law,<sup>n</sup> which was for them<sup>o</sup> also the beginning<sup>p</sup> of being physiologists.<sup>q</sup> Accordingly, since

<sup>a</sup> Aucher more freely renders, “qui beneficiis a me cumulatim fuerant.” Procopius τῶν εὐεργετηθέντων ἀσέβεια.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπέχει (or κωλύει sc. τὸν κατακλυσμόν).

<sup>c</sup> οἱ ἀπιστοῦντες καὶ ἀπειθοῦντες, probably Arm. doublet.

<sup>d</sup> τὸν τῶν πάντων ποιητήν.

<sup>e</sup> τὴν τῶν ἔργων αὐτοῦ αἰδιότητα.

<sup>f</sup> νῶ ἐπανορθώσεως.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. “a rain of flood.”

<sup>h</sup> Or “define”—διορίζουσι or “measure”—μετροῦσι.

<sup>i</sup> τούτων ὀρισμένων.

<sup>j</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>k</sup> περιέχει (?).

<sup>l</sup> ὀρισθέντας.

<sup>m</sup> τῶν φυσικῶν. On the number of days required for forming the male and female embryos see QG i. 25.

<sup>n</sup> ἐν τῷ ἱερῷ νόμῳ.

<sup>o</sup> Apparently the generation of Noah.

<sup>p</sup> Or “principle”—ἀρχή.

<sup>q</sup> τοῦ εἶναι φυσιολόγους.

GENESIS, BOOK II

destruction was about to come upon all persons everywhere, both men and women, because of their excessive unity<sup>a</sup> in discord<sup>b</sup> and unbridled wrongdoing,<sup>c</sup> the Judge<sup>d</sup> decided to fix<sup>e</sup> a time for their destruction equal to that which<sup>f</sup> He had determined for the creation of nature<sup>g</sup> and the first production of living beings.<sup>h</sup> For the beginning of generation is eternity in the parts of seeds.<sup>i</sup> And it was necessary to honour man with pure and unshadowed light,<sup>j</sup> but woman, since she was a mixture, with night and darkness and a mixed mass.<sup>k</sup> Therefore in the constitution of the universe<sup>l</sup> the (numerical) oddness<sup>m</sup> of the masculine number composed of unity<sup>n</sup> produces squares,<sup>o</sup> but the feminine even number, composed of two, produces oblongs.<sup>p</sup> Now the square numbers are splendour and light, consisting of an equality of sides.<sup>q</sup> But the oblong numbers have<sup>r</sup> night and darkness because of their inequality, <sup>a</sup> ὑπερβολῆς τῆς συμφωνίας (or ὁμοιότητος).

<sup>b</sup> ἐν ἀσυμφωνίᾳ (or διαφωνίᾳ).

<sup>c</sup> Aucher, construing a little differently, renders, "ob unionem in excessu iniquitatum inter dissidia."

<sup>d</sup> ὁ κριτής.

<sup>e</sup> ὀρίζειν or μετρεῖν.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher, taking "people" as the antecedent of the relative pr. instead of "time," renders, "aequale . . . tempus . . . eis quos" instead of ". . . ei quod."

<sup>g</sup> τῇ τῆς φύσεως κτίσει.

<sup>h</sup> τῇ πρώτῃ ζωογονίᾳ, cf. QG i. 25.

<sup>i</sup> ἡ αἰδιότης ἢ ἐν τοῖς τῶν σπερμάτων μέρεσι. This means that the species is eternal while the individual is subject to death; cf. QG i. 96 and De Aeter. Mundi 35 ff.

<sup>j</sup> καθαρῶ καὶ ἀσκήῳ (?) φωτί. See also the Greek frag.

<sup>k</sup> φυράματι. The above is a literal translation of the obscure and probably incomplete Arm. clause; Aucher, disregarding some of the syntactical problems, renders, "femina vero mixturam habebat massae cum nocte atque tenebris." The context requires an original something like "to honour woman, since she had a mixed nature, with a mixture of light and darkness."

<sup>l</sup> ἐν τῇ τῶν ὄλων συστάσει.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ περιττόν.

<sup>n</sup> ἐξ ἐνότητος συντεθέν.

<sup>o</sup> One MS. "triangles."

<sup>p</sup> ἔτερομήκεις (Pythagorean terminology).

<sup>q</sup> ἐξ ἰσότητος πλευρῶν.

<sup>r</sup> I.it. "has."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

for that which is excessive casts a shadow on that which falls under the excess. In the second place, the number forty is a power<sup>a</sup> producing many things,<sup>b</sup> as has been shown elsewhere,<sup>c</sup> and is often used as an indication of the giving of the Law<sup>d</sup> both in the case of<sup>e</sup> those who have rightly<sup>f</sup> accomplished something (deserving) of praise and honour and also in the case of those who because of transgressions are subject to blame and punishment. And evidently to adduce testimony<sup>g</sup> of these things would mean a lengthy speech.<sup>h</sup>

*15. (Gen. vii. 4) What is the meaning of the words, "I will blot every growth of vegetation<sup>i</sup> which I have made from the face of the earth"?

Would you not indeed jump up at hearing this because of the beauty of the sentiment?<sup>j</sup> It does not say, "blot from the earth" but "from the face of the earth," that is, from the surface,<sup>k</sup> in order that in the depths the vital power<sup>l</sup> of the seeds of all things may be preserved unharmed and not suffer from anything that might be able to injure them. For the Creator does not forget His own purpose<sup>m</sup> but destroys those things which move above and on the very surface while in the depths He leaves the roots for the generation of other impulses.<sup>n</sup> Moreover, divinely<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, "numerus quadraginta plurimarum productor est virtutum."

<sup>c</sup> QG i. 91.

<sup>d</sup> τῆς νομοθεσίας. This probably refers to Ex. xxiv. 18 on Moses' sojourn of forty days and nights on Mt. Sinai, though the "often" may refer to other writings beside Philo's.

<sup>e</sup> ἐπί (?). Aucher has "super."

<sup>f</sup> ὀρθῶς. <sup>g</sup> μαρτύρια προφέρειν. <sup>h</sup> μακρολογία.

<sup>i</sup> ἀνάστημα φυτοῦ. LXX has ἐξανάστασιν = Heb. y<sup>e</sup>qum, "growth" (lit. "rising"); Arm. O.T. has hasak = ἡλικίαν. Philo treats this passage again in QG ii. 24.

<sup>j</sup> διὰ τὸ τῆς ἐννοίας κάλλος.

<sup>k</sup> τῆς ἐπιφανείας.

<sup>l</sup> ἡ ζωτικὴ δύναμις, as in Greek frag.

<sup>m</sup> τῆς ἰδίας προθέσεως.

<sup>n</sup> πρὸς γένεσιν ἄλλων ἀφορμῶν.

<sup>o</sup> θεοπρεπῶς.

GENESIS, BOOK II

is it written " I will destroy " for it so happens that when something is to be blotted out, the writing is blotted but the writing-tablets <sup>a</sup> survive. Thereby He shows that because of their impiety He will blot out the superficial generation <sup>b</sup> in the manner of writing but will eternally preserve the use and substance <sup>c</sup> of the human race as seed for those to come in the future. In accord with this is what follows, for next to " I will blot " comes " the growth of vegetation." Now " growth " <sup>d</sup> is the dissolution of opposites, <sup>e</sup> and that which is dissolved casts off its quality <sup>f</sup> but keeps its substance and its matter. <sup>g</sup> This is the literal meaning. But the deeper meaning is as follows. The flood is a symbol of spiritual dissolution. <sup>h</sup> And so, when by the grace of the Father <sup>i</sup> we wish to cast off and wash off <sup>j</sup> from the mind <sup>k</sup> all the sensible and corporeal things <sup>l</sup> by which it was stained as if by ulcers, <sup>m</sup> it is inundated <sup>n</sup> like salt-flats <sup>o</sup> by the flow of sweet streams and potable springs.

*16. (Gen. vii. 5) Why does (Scripture) say, " Noah did everything whatsoever the Lord God instructed <sup>p</sup> him " ?
(This is) great praise for the righteous man, <sup>q</sup> first of all

<sup>a</sup> Lit. " the tablets and writing." The Greek fragments have αἱ δέλτοι.

<sup>b</sup> Cod. Barb. has τὴν ἐπιπολάζουσαν γένεσιν.

<sup>c</sup> χρήσιν καὶ οὐσίαν; Arm. var " use " is Lucher's emendation of mss. rayr " place," based on Ambrose's " substantiam et conversationem." The Greek fragments have τὴν διαδοχὴν τῆς οὐσίας.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. " rising," see note i on p. 92.

<sup>e</sup> κατάλυσις ἀντικειμένων. Procopius ἀντίπαλον καθαίρεισι.

<sup>f</sup> ποιότητα. <sup>g</sup> τὴν οὐσίαν καὶ τὴν ὕλην.

<sup>h</sup> σύμβολον τῆς πνευματικῆς καταλύσεως.

<sup>i</sup> χάριτι τοῦ πατρὸς. <sup>j</sup> ἀπορρίπτειν καὶ ἀπολούεσθαι.

<sup>k</sup> τὸν νοῦν. <sup>l</sup> πάντα τὰ αἰσθητικὰ καὶ τὰ σωματικά.

<sup>m</sup> Arm. palat " ulcer " here probably corresponds to κῆλη, a corruption of κηλῖς " stain," which the context demands.

<sup>n</sup> κατακλύζεται. <sup>o</sup> ἀλμυρά, cf. De Confus. Ling. 26.

<sup>p</sup> ἐνετείλατο. <sup>q</sup> τοῦ δικαίου.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

because he carried out, not a part, but all of the orders with a strong conviction and a god-loving mind.<sup>a</sup> And second, because He does not wish to order<sup>b</sup> him so much as to instruct<sup>c</sup> him. For masters<sup>d</sup> command their servants, but loved ones<sup>e</sup> instruct their friends,<sup>f</sup> especially elders their juniors.<sup>g</sup> Thus it is a wonderful gift to be found in the rank<sup>h</sup> of servants and in the rank<sup>i</sup> of ministers<sup>j</sup> of God. But it is a superfluity of beneficence<sup>k</sup> to be also beloved of the praiseworthy uncreated One.<sup>l</sup> Moreover (Scripture) now carefully presents both names<sup>m</sup>; it speaks of the higher powers,<sup>n</sup> the destructive<sup>o</sup> and the beneficent,<sup>p</sup> and it places "Lord" first, and the beneficent "God" second. For, as it was the time of judgment, (Scripture) says that the destroyer came first. However, being a kind and good and benevolent king,<sup>q</sup> He leaves some remains<sup>r</sup>— seminal principles<sup>s</sup> through which the vacant places may again be filled. Wherefore in the beginning of created things the expression "let there be" was not a destructive power but beneficent. And so, in the creation of the world<sup>t</sup> He changed the style of His names.<sup>u</sup> For He is called God as beneficent, and this name He regularly<sup>v</sup> used in constituting the universe.<sup>w</sup> But after all this was completed He was called Lord in the creation of the world, and

- <sup>a</sup> φιλοθέω (Cod. Barb. θεοφιλεῖ) διανοία.
<sup>b</sup> κελεύειν οἱ προστάττειν. <sup>c</sup> ἐντέλλεσθαι.
<sup>d</sup> δεσπότες. <sup>e</sup> ἀγαπητοί. <sup>f</sup> τοῖς φίλοις.
<sup>g</sup> Lit. "the greater the less." <sup>h</sup> τάξει.
<sup>i</sup> Arm. here uses different word also = τάξει.
<sup>j</sup> Prob. θεραπεόντων, as in Cod. Barb.
<sup>k</sup> ὑπερβολὴ τῆς εὐεργεσίας. <sup>l</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ ἐπαινετοῦ ἀγενήτου.
<sup>m</sup> i.e. the two highest attributes of God, identified with the names "Lord" and "God" respectively.
<sup>n</sup> τὰς ἀνωτάτω δυνάμεις.
<sup>o</sup> τὴν διαφθειρούσαν (elsewhere in Philo called κολαστήριον).
<sup>p</sup> τὴν εὐεργέτιν.
<sup>q</sup> χρηστός καὶ ἀγαθὸς καὶ εὐμενὴς βασιλεὺς.
<sup>r</sup> λείψανα. <sup>s</sup> σπερματικὰς ἀρχάς.
<sup>t</sup> ἐν τῇ κοσμοποιίᾳ.
<sup>u</sup> τὰς τῶν ὀνομάτων κλήσεις.
<sup>v</sup> συνεχῶς οἱ ἐπὶ πολὺ. <sup>w</sup> ἐν τῇ τῶν ὄλων συστάσει.

GENESIS, BOOK II

this is His kingly and destructive name.<sup>a</sup> For where there is coming into being,<sup>b</sup> "God" is placed first in order, but where there is punishment, "Lord" comes before "God."

*17. (Gen. vii. 11) Why (does Scripture say), "In the six-hundredth (year) of Noah's life was the flood, in the seventh<sup>c</sup> month, on the twenty-seventh<sup>d</sup> of the month" ?

Perhaps it would have been fitting for<sup>e</sup> the righteous man<sup>f</sup> to be born at the head of the month in the first month, opportunely<sup>g</sup> at the beginning of that year which it is the custom to call in honorary fashion the sacred month.<sup>h</sup> For (otherwise)<sup>i</sup> (Scripture) would not have been so exact in stating the month and day when the flood took place, both the seventh month and the twenty-seventh day. But perhaps in this way it clearly shows the time of the vernal equinox, for this always occurs in the seventh month, on the twenty-seventh.<sup>j</sup> But why does the flood

<sup>a</sup> See note o on p. 94.

<sup>b</sup> γένεσις.

<sup>c</sup> Heb. and LXX have "second," Arm. O.T. like Philo has "seventh"; Josephus also gives "second month called . . . Marsuan (Heb. Marḥeshwan = Oct.-Nov.)." Philo also differs from Heb. and LXX of Gen. viii. 14 (QG ii. 47), by giving "seventh" for "second" month for the drying up of the flood-waters in the 601st year of Noah's life.

<sup>d</sup> So LXX; Heb. "seventeenth."

<sup>e</sup> Or "might have happened that"; Arm. dēp renders συμβαίνει as well as εἰκός, προσῆκον, etc.

<sup>f</sup> τὸν δίκαιον.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ καιρὸν (?); Aucher omits this phrase in his rendering.

<sup>h</sup> τὴν ἱερομηνίαν (not "annum sacrum" as Aucher renders). By this word Philo elsewhere (cf. Colson's appendix to De Decalogo 159 in vol. vii. pp. 613-614) means the period introduced by the 1st of Tishri (autumnal New Year) or the 1st of Nisan (vernal New Year).

<sup>i</sup> I follow Aucher in inserting "otherwise," which is required by the context.

<sup>j</sup> Philo means the seventh month reckoned from the 1st of Tishri, namely Nisan (March-April); cf. De Opif. Mundi 116 on the two equinoxes of the two seventh months, Tishri and Nisan. But on what tradition he bases his statement that the equinox occurs on the 27th of the seventh month is not known to me.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

occur at the vernal equinox? Because at that time come the increases and births of all things, both animals and plants. Accordingly, the punishment carries a more terrible threat at the time of increase and abundance of all produce,<sup>a</sup> and in time of fertility the evil supervenes to convict<sup>b</sup> of impiety those who are subject<sup>c</sup> to punishment. For, behold, says (Scripture), the nature<sup>d</sup> of all things contains in itself its own fullness sufficiently<sup>e</sup>—grain, barley and all other things as well which are sown and brought to completion, and it begins to bear the fruits of trees. But you, as mortals, corrupt His benefactions<sup>f</sup> and with them corrupt the intention of the divine gift.<sup>g</sup> For if the flood had happened to take place at the autumnal equinox, when there was nothing on the earth but all things were collected in their mass,<sup>h</sup> it would not have seemed a punishment so much as a benefit<sup>i</sup> because of the water purifying fields and mountains. Accordingly at this time there came into being the first earthborn man,<sup>j</sup> whom the divine oracles<sup>k</sup> call Adam; for it was fitting and proper that the progenitor of the human race or forefather or father or however one ought to call that eldest man<sup>l</sup> should be formed at the time of the vernal equinox when all earthly things are full of fruits. And the vernal equinox occurs in the seventh month and this is also called the first in ac-

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "sheaves" or "stalks"—δραγμαίων.

<sup>b</sup> εἰς ἔλεγχος.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. pres. subj. of krem "to bear, suffer."

<sup>d</sup> ἡ φύσις.

<sup>e</sup> Meaning doubtful; apparently = τὰ ἐαυτῆς ἀρκούντως πλήρη. Aucher renders, "sua vel plenissime."

<sup>f</sup> τὰς εὐεργεσίας αὐτοῦ.

<sup>g</sup> Syntax and meaning uncertain; Aucher renders, "divina simul dona consilia (vel, mysteria)." The Arm. construction pargew xorhourdsn seems to be genitival rather than appositional, but the word xorhourd has many meanings such as "thought," "intention," "mystery," "type," "symbol."

<sup>h</sup> i.e. future plants under the earth.

<sup>i</sup> εὐεργεσία.

<sup>j</sup> γηγενής.

<sup>k</sup> οἱ θεῖοι χρησμοί.

<sup>l</sup> ἐκείνον τὸν πρεσβύτατον.

GENESIS, BOOK II

cordance with a varying assumption.<sup>a</sup> Accordingly, since Noah after the destruction (of mankind) by the flood becomes the first beginning of the race,<sup>b</sup> with mankind again being propagated,<sup>c</sup> he is made similar, so far as possible, to the first earthborn man.<sup>d</sup> Now the six hundredth year has as its source the number six, but the world was created with<sup>e</sup> the number six; accordingly, through this again He exposes<sup>f</sup> those who act impiously<sup>g</sup> and shames<sup>h</sup> them, for in no wise would He who brought all things into being through the number six, have destroyed earthly creatures under the form<sup>i</sup> of six, had it not been for the excess of their wrongdoing.<sup>j</sup> For six hundred is a third and lesser six,<sup>k</sup> and the number sixty is the mean of both, for the tens bear a likeness to one, and in a lesser degree, the hundreds.

18. (Gen. vii. 11) What is the meaning of the words, "All the fountains of the abyss broke forth and the cataracts<sup>l</sup> of heaven were opened"?

The literal meaning<sup>m</sup> is clear, for it is stated that earth and heaven are the principles and extremities of the universe,<sup>n</sup> and are joined in the condemnation<sup>o</sup> and destruction of mortals, as the waters met together with one

<sup>a</sup> Arm. arac—usu.= λήμμα; the Greek fragment has ἐπιβολήν. Philo means that the seventh month of the autumnal calendar, Nisan (March–April), is the first month of the vernal calendar.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ πρώτη τοῦ γένους ἀρχή.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "sown"—σπειρομένων. The Greek fragment has δευτέρας ἀνθρώπων σποράς.

<sup>d</sup> τῷ πρώτῳ γηγενῇ.

<sup>e</sup> In Arm. expressed by instr. case of noun "number"; Aucher renders, "sub numero."

<sup>f</sup> ἐλέγχει.

<sup>g</sup> τοὺς ἀνοσιουργούς.

<sup>h</sup> καταισχνώνων.

<sup>i</sup> σχήματι.

<sup>j</sup> ἀδικίας.

<sup>k</sup> In the sequence 6 : 60 : 600.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. sohank<sup>c</sup> or sahank<sup>c</sup> "streams" = LXX καταρράκται.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>n</sup> τῶν πάντων αἱ ἀρχαὶ (καὶ) τὰ ἄκρα. Aucher renders, "orbis extrema."

<sup>o</sup> εἰς κατάκρισιν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

another, some rushing up from the earth, some pouring down from heaven. And most clear and evident (is it why) it is said that "the fountains of the abyss broke forth," for when there is a break,<sup>a</sup> the course (of the waters) is unrestrained. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>b</sup> this is to be said. The heaven is symbolically<sup>c</sup> the human mind,<sup>d</sup> and the earth is sense-perception and body.<sup>e</sup> And great misfortune and doubt<sup>f</sup> are incurred when neither one remains<sup>g</sup> but both together practise deceit.<sup>h</sup> Now what do I mean by this? Many times the mind entertains cunning and evil and shows bitterness<sup>i</sup> toward all things when the sensual pleasures<sup>j</sup> of the body are restrained and suppressed.<sup>k</sup> And many times it happens that it experiences the contrary when the sensual pleasures are fortunate<sup>l</sup> and creep along<sup>m</sup> and grow luxury-loving and prodigal in living. And the senses and the body<sup>n</sup> are the harbours<sup>o</sup> of these things. Now when the mind stands firm<sup>p</sup> in indifference<sup>q</sup> to these things, they decline and are inert.<sup>r</sup> But when they both come together, reason<sup>s</sup> using all kinds of wickedness, and the body flushed<sup>t</sup> with all the senses and indul-

<sup>a</sup> ῥῆγμα.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ ἀνθρώπειος νοῦς.

<sup>e</sup> αἰσθησις καὶ σῶμα.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "of doubt"—ἀπορίας vel sim.; Aucher renders, "aerumna calamitatum."

<sup>g</sup> Apparently "remains constant" is meant.

<sup>h</sup> ἀπάτας vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> πικρία χρῆται.

<sup>j</sup> αἰ ἡδοναί.

<sup>k</sup> κωλύονται καὶ συστέλλονται.

<sup>l</sup> εὐτυχεῖς ἢ εὐδαίμονες.

<sup>m</sup> ἔρπουσι.

<sup>n</sup> αἰ αἰσθήσεις καὶ τὸ σῶμα.

<sup>o</sup> λιμένες.

<sup>p</sup> Lit. "stands in itself."

<sup>q</sup> ἀμελεία.

<sup>r</sup> Arm. has verbs in sing. (prob. reflecting sing. verb with neut. pl. in Greek) = κατακλίνεται καὶ παραλύεται. The context requires us to take "senses and body" as the subjects of these verbs; Aucher renders, "sed quum intellectus neglectis rebus constet in se, illi inefficaces jacent ut derelicti," and remarks in a footnote, "Hunc sensum tenuit nobiscum Glossarius in serie obscuri huius loci."

<sup>s</sup> τοῦ λογισμοῦ.

Lit. "watered"—ἀρδευομένου vel sim.

GENESIS, BOOK II

ging all the passions to satiety, (then) we are flooded.<sup>a</sup> And this is truly a great flood when the streams of the mind are opened by folly,<sup>b</sup> madness,<sup>c</sup> insatiable desire,<sup>d</sup> wrongdoing,<sup>e</sup> senselessness,<sup>f</sup> recklessness<sup>g</sup> and impiety<sup>h</sup>; and when the fountains of the body are opened by sensual pleasure,<sup>i</sup> desire,<sup>j</sup> drunkenness,<sup>k</sup> gourmandism and licentiousness with kin and sisters and by incurable vices.<sup>l</sup>

19. (Gen. vii. 16) What is the meaning of the words, "God closed<sup>m</sup> the ark outside of<sup>n</sup> him"?

Since we have said that the structure<sup>o</sup> of the human body is symbolically<sup>p</sup> indicated by the ark, it is also to be noted that our body is enclosed<sup>q</sup> on the outside by a hard skin which is laid around it as a covering<sup>r</sup> for all parts. For Nature made this as a garment lest cold and heat have power to do harm. The literal meaning<sup>s</sup> is clear. For the ark is carefully<sup>t</sup> closed from the outside by the divine power<sup>u</sup> for the sake of guarding (it)<sup>v</sup> lest the water come in through any part, since it was destined to be storm-tossed for a whole year.

20. (Gen. vii. 18) What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> κατακλυζόμεθα.

<sup>b</sup> ἀφροσύνη or "baseness" — πονηρία, φαυλότητι.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. šarroumṇ is glossed here by γίμαρουτ'οἶυν = μωρία, ἔκστασις; Aucher renders, "insipientia"; elsewhere šarroumṇ = μανία or εὐήθεια.

<sup>d</sup> ἀκορέστω ἐπιθυμία.

<sup>e</sup> ἀδικία.

<sup>f</sup> ἀναισθησία or ἀφροσύνη. Aucher omits the word.

<sup>g</sup> τόλμη or θράσει.

<sup>h</sup> ἀσεβεία.

<sup>i</sup> ἡδονῆ.

<sup>j</sup> ὀρέξει.

<sup>k</sup> οἰνοφλυγία.

<sup>l</sup> ἀνιάτοις πάθεσι.

<sup>m</sup> ἔκλεισε.

<sup>n</sup> ἔξωθεν (so LXX) = Heb. ba'adô, here meaning "behind."

<sup>o</sup> κατασκευή.

<sup>p</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>q</sup> περικλήεται.

<sup>r</sup> σκέπασμα.

<sup>s</sup> τὸ ῥήτῳ.

<sup>t</sup> ἐπιμελῶς.

<sup>u</sup> θεία δυνάμει.

<sup>v</sup> τῆς φυλακῆς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

“ And the water increased and lifted the ark, and it was borne upon the water ”<sup>a</sup> ?

The literal meaning is clear. But it is to be allegorized<sup>b</sup> as follows. Our body must in a certain sense<sup>c</sup> cross the sea and be storm-tossed by necessities<sup>d</sup> overcoming hunger and thirst, cold and heat, by which it is thrown up and down,<sup>e</sup> perturbed and moved.

21. (Gen. vii. 20) Why did the water increase fifteen cubits above all the high mountains ?<sup>f</sup>

It should be noted that as for the literal meaning<sup>g</sup> it was not increased fifteen cubits over<sup>h</sup> all the high mountains but over the very longest and highest,<sup>i</sup> and (thus) it was still higher over<sup>j</sup> the lower ones. But one should treat this allegorically.<sup>k</sup> The high mountains indicate the senses<sup>l</sup> in our bodies, for it happens that they have their fixed position in the top of our head. And they are five, each of them severally being viewed as threefold,<sup>m</sup> so that altogether there are fifteen : sight, the thing seen, (the act of) seeing<sup>n</sup> ; hearing, the thing heard, (the act of) hearing<sup>o</sup> ; smell, the thing smelled, (the act of) smelling<sup>p</sup> ; taste, the thing tasted, (the act of) tasting<sup>q</sup> ; touch, the

<sup>a</sup> Philo's text differs slightly from LXX, which reads καὶ ἐπεκράτει τὸ ὕδωρ καὶ ἐπληθύνετο σφόδρα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς καὶ ἐπέφερετο ἢ κιβωτὸς ἐπάνω τοῦ ὕδατος. The Arm. O.T. agrees with LXX. <sup>b</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται. <sup>c</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>d</sup> τοῖς ἀναγκαίοις.

<sup>e</sup> ἄνω καὶ κάτω κλονεῖται.

<sup>f</sup> Philo combines two parts of the LXX verse, δέκα πέντε πῆχεις ἐπάνω ὑψώθη τὸ ὕδωρ καὶ ἐπεκάλυψεν πάντα τὰ ὄρη τὰ ὑψηλά. <sup>g</sup> πρὸς τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>h</sup> Lit. “ more than.”

<sup>i</sup> Apparently Philo takes πάντα τὰ ὑψηλά in the LXX to indicate the superlative degree of height.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. “ more excessive.”

<sup>k</sup> πραγματεύεσθαι πρὸ ἀλληγορίας vel sim.

<sup>l</sup> τὰς αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. “ three.”

<sup>n</sup> ἢ ὄρασις, τὸ ὄρατόν, τὸ ὄρᾶν.

<sup>o</sup> ἢ ἀκοή, τὸ ἀκουστόν, τὸ ἀκούειν.

<sup>p</sup> ἢ ὄσφρησις, τὸ ὄσφραντόν, τὸ ὄσφραίνεσθαι.

<sup>q</sup> ἢ γεῦσις, τὸ γευστόν, τὸ γεύεσθαι.

GENESIS, BOOK II

thing touched, (the act of) touching.<sup>a</sup> These are the fifteen cubits which were over and above (the mountains). For they too are flooded and destroyed by the sudden onrush of never-ending vices and evils.<sup>b</sup>

22. (Gen. vii. 21) What is the meaning of the words, "All flesh that moved died" ?

Excellently and naturally has (Scripture) spoken of the destruction of moving flesh, for flesh moves <sup>c</sup> the sensual pleasures <sup>d</sup> and is moved by sensual pleasures. But such movements are the causes <sup>e</sup> of the destruction of souls, just as the rules of self-control <sup>f</sup> and patience <sup>g</sup> (are the causes) of salvation.<sup>h</sup>

23. (Gen. vii. 22) What is the meaning of the words, "Everything that was upon the dry land died" ?

The literal meaning is known to all,<sup>i</sup> for in the great flood everything that was upon the earth was utterly destroyed.<sup>k</sup> But the deeper meaning <sup>l</sup> is that just as the wood of trees, when it is altogether dried out,<sup>m</sup> is immediately consumed by fire, so also the soul,<sup>n</sup> when it is not mixed <sup>o</sup> with wisdom, justice and piety <sup>p</sup> and also with the

<sup>a</sup> ἡ ἀφή, τὸ ἀπτόν, τὸ ἄπτεσθαι.

<sup>b</sup> ἀτηνύτων παθῶν καὶ κακῶν.

<sup>c</sup> κινεῖ.

<sup>d</sup> τὰς ἡδονάς.

<sup>e</sup> αἱ αἰτίαι.

<sup>f</sup> ἐγκρατείας or "endurance"—καρτερίας.

<sup>g</sup> ὑπομονῆς.

<sup>h</sup> σωτηρίας.

<sup>i</sup> Philo's text differs slightly from LXX, which reads καὶ πάντα ὅσα ἔχει πνοὴν ζωῆς καὶ πᾶς ὅς ἦν ἐπὶ τῆς ξηρᾶς ἀπέθανεν. Philo applies the neuter gender of the first subject to the second, which is masc. and animate in LXX (the Heb. indef. pron. kol "all" may refer to either animate or inanimate subjects).

<sup>j</sup> τὸ ῥητόν γινώριμόν ἐστι.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "being destroyed was overturned."

<sup>l</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>m</sup> Arm. uses three different adjectives all meaning "dry."

<sup>n</sup> ἡ ψυχῆ.

<sup>o</sup> κεκραμένη vel sim.

<sup>p</sup> σοφία καὶ δικαιοσύνη καὶ θεοσεβεία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

other fine virtues <sup>a</sup> which alone are able to gladden the mind, <sup>b</sup> dries up and becomes arid like a plant that is barren and sterile, or like an aged tree, and dies when it is given over to the flood of the body.

24. (Gen. vii. 23) What is the meaning of the words, "He blotted out every growth <sup>c</sup> that was on the face of the earth" ?

The literal meaning <sup>d</sup> has a clear explanation. <sup>e</sup> But it is to be allegorized <sup>f</sup> as follows. Not idly <sup>g</sup> does (Scripture) speak of "growth," for this is the name of arrogance and pride, <sup>h</sup> through which men despise the Deity and human rights. But arrogance and haughtiness on the surface of our earthly and corporeal nature appear more (clearly) when the face is lifted up and the eyebrows are knitted. For there are some who approach with their legs, but with their breast, neck and head sway backwards and forwards, <sup>i</sup> rearing back <sup>j</sup> and wavering like a balance ; with half the body, the legs, they come forward, but from the breast upward <sup>k</sup> they lean backward like those whose backbone <sup>l</sup> or occiput <sup>m</sup> pains them, whereby they are prevented from bending over naturally. But it was reasonable <sup>n</sup> that all

<sup>a</sup> ἀστέϊοις ἀρεταῖς. Arm. asti is twice <sup>1</sup> used in De Vita Cont. to render ἀστέϊος because of its similarity in sound to the Greek word, although its meaning is quite different, usu. "firm," "fresh," etc. ; Aucher renders, "virtutibus constantibus."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "thoughts"—λογισμούς.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "rising," LXX ἀνάστημα ; see above, p. 92 note i on QG ii. 15.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> ἐξήγησιν or "narrative"—διήγησιν, as Aucher renders.

<sup>f</sup> ἀλληγορεῖσθαι.

<sup>g</sup> εἰκῆ or ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>h</sup> Both Arm. words render ἀλαζονεία, ὑπερηφανία, ὕβρις, etc.

<sup>i</sup> ταλαντεύουσι.

<sup>j</sup> ἀναχαιτίζοντες vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> Not "pectore superiori" as Aucher renders.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. gloss "loins," Aucher "musculi."

<sup>m</sup> ἰνίον. Arm. gloss "nerves," similarly Aucher. Probably the original text of Philo referred to the tendons and nerves of the back of the neck.

<sup>n</sup> εἰκόσ.

GENESIS, BOOK II

men of this sort should be blotted out from the Lord's memory <sup>a</sup> and from the divine narrative of Scripture.

25. (Gen. vii. 23) What is the meaning of the words, "Noah remained alone and those who were with him in the ark" ?

The literal meaning <sup>b</sup> is clear. But the deeper meaning <sup>c</sup> must be somewhat as follows. The mind <sup>d</sup> which is desirous of wisdom and justice, <sup>e</sup> like a tree, cuts off all the harmful growths which grow on it and drain <sup>f</sup> its nourishment. <sup>g</sup> By this is meant immoderateness of the passions <sup>h</sup> and wickedness and the acts (resulting) from these. He is left alone with his own. And peculiar <sup>i</sup> to each are all the thoughts <sup>j</sup> which are ordered <sup>k</sup> in accordance with virtue. <sup>l</sup> Wherefore it is added that "he remained alone and those who were with him" to (give) a clear impression of the truest joy. <sup>m</sup> And he remained in the ark, by which is meant the body, which is pure <sup>n</sup> of all passions and spiritual diseases, <sup>o</sup> not yet having been enabled to become altogether incorporeal. <sup>p</sup> But thanks should be given to the Saviour and Father <sup>q</sup> for this benefaction also, (namely) that he received a yoke-fellow <sup>r</sup> and one bound to him, <sup>s</sup> no longer a ruler <sup>t</sup> over him but under his rule. Therefore his body was not overwhelmed by the flood but (remained) above the flood, not being destroyed by the streams of the

<sup>a</sup> ἐκ τῆς τοῦ κυρίου μνήμης.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>e</sup> σοφίας καὶ δικαιοσύνης.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "suck" or "drink up."

<sup>g</sup> τροφήν. Aucher renders, "humores nutritionis."

<sup>h</sup> τὴν τῶν παθῶν ἀμετρίαν.

<sup>i</sup> ἴδιοι.

<sup>j</sup> οἱ λογισμοί.

<sup>k</sup> τάττονται.

<sup>l</sup> κατὰ τὴν ἀρετήν.

<sup>m</sup> εἰς φανεράν φαντασίαν τῆς ἀληθεστάτης χαρᾶς.

<sup>n</sup> καθαρόν.

<sup>o</sup> πάντων παθῶν καὶ ψυχικῶν (ἢ πνευματικῶν) νόσων.

<sup>p</sup> πάντως ἀσώματον.

<sup>q</sup> τῷ σωτῆρι καὶ πατρί.

<sup>r</sup> σύζυγον (i.e. the body).

<sup>s</sup> συνδέσμον.

<sup>t</sup> ἄρχοντα vel sim.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

cataracts which gurgled up, (namely) luxuriousness and intemperance and lewd habits and empty desires.

*26. (Gen. viii. 1) Why does (Scripture) say, "God remembered Noah and the beasts and the cattle,"<sup>a</sup> but does not mention his wife and children?

When a man is united<sup>b</sup> and associated<sup>c</sup> with his wife, and a father with his sons, there is no need for several<sup>d</sup> names, but only of the first one. And so, having mentioned Noah, (Scripture) potentially<sup>e</sup> mentions those who were in his household.<sup>f</sup> For when a man and woman quarrel, and their children and relatives, the household no longer bears (the name of household),<sup>g</sup> but in place of one there are many. But when there is concord,<sup>h</sup> one household is described<sup>i</sup> after one eldest person,<sup>j</sup> and all (the others) depend<sup>k</sup> on him like the branches which grow out of a tree or like the fruits of a plant which do not fall off. And the prophet has said somewhere,<sup>l</sup> "Look at Abraham your father and at Sarah who travailed with you," which shows very clearly that there was (only) one root<sup>m</sup> in respect of concord with the woman.<sup>n</sup>

27. (Gen. viii. 1) Why does (Scripture) first make mention of the wild beasts<sup>o</sup> and afterwards of the cattle,<sup>p</sup> saying

<sup>a</sup> LXX has "all the beasts (θηρίων) and all the cattle (κτηνῶν) and all the birds and all the reptiles, etc."

<sup>b</sup> ἐνοῦται.

<sup>c</sup> κοινωνεῖται (?).

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "many."

<sup>e</sup> δυνάμει.

<sup>f</sup> ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ.

<sup>g</sup> The last phrase must be supplied to make sense; cf. Aucher's rendering, "nec ultra patitur domus (una dici)."

<sup>h</sup> δμόνοια. Procopius συμφωνία.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. grem usu. = γράφειν. Aucher renders, "exhibetur."

<sup>j</sup> ἀφ' ἐνὸς πρεσβυτάτου.

<sup>k</sup> κρέμανται. Procopius συνυπακούεσθαι.

<sup>l</sup> Isaiah li. 2.

<sup>m</sup> ῥίζα.

<sup>n</sup> The syntax is somewhat obscure; Aucher renders, "quod nempe una erat stirps ad mulierem versus concordiam patefacit."
<sup>o</sup> τῶν θηρίων. <sup>p</sup> τῶν κτηνῶν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

that "He remembered Noah and the beasts and the cattle"?

In the first place, this poetic saying <sup>a</sup> is not inaptly quoted, (namely) that "he drove the base ones into the middle."<sup>b</sup> For He stationed <sup>c</sup> the wild beasts in the midst of the domestic ones,<sup>d</sup> (that is) men and cattle, in order that they might become tamed and domesticated by acquiring familiarity <sup>e</sup> with both. Second, it did not seem right to the Overseer <sup>f</sup> to bestow a benefaction on the wild beasts at the same time. For (Scripture) was immediately about to <sup>g</sup> mention further the beginning of the diminution of the flood. This is the literal meaning.<sup>h</sup> As for the deeper meaning <sup>i</sup>—the righteous mind,<sup>j</sup> living in the body as in an ark, also has wild beasts and cattle <sup>k</sup> but not those particular ones <sup>l</sup> which bite and are harmful, but, as I might say, the generic ones <sup>m</sup> having the status <sup>n</sup> of seed and principle <sup>o</sup>; for without these the soul <sup>p</sup> is not able to appear in the body. Accordingly, (the soul) of the wicked man <sup>q</sup> uses all things poisonous and lethal, but that of the virtuous <sup>r</sup> those things which transform the nature of wild beasts into that of domestic ones.

*28. (Gen. viii. 1) What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> τόδε τὸ ποιητικόν.

<sup>b</sup> κακοὺς δ' ἐς μέσον ἔλασεν, Iliad iv. 299.

<sup>c</sup> ἔταξεν. <sup>d</sup> τῶν οἰκείων. <sup>e</sup> οἰκειότητος.

<sup>f</sup> τῷ ἐπόπτῃ ἢ ἐπισκόπῳ (God). Perhaps, however, one should take Arm. tesouč "overseer" as having adjectival force here, i.e. meaning "providential" and agreeing with "benefaction"; so Aucher renders, "providum beneficium."

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ δίκαιος νοῦς.

<sup>k</sup> Or "animals"; Arm. anasoun (lit. "irrational") = both κτῆνος and ἄλογον (ζῶον).

<sup>l</sup> τὰ μερικά.

<sup>m</sup> τὰ γενικά.

<sup>n</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>o</sup> σπέρματος καὶ ἀρχῆς.

<sup>p</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ although Arm. ogi (hogi) also = τὸ πνεῦμα.

<sup>q</sup> τοῦ πονηροῦ (ἢ φαύλου). <sup>r</sup> τοῦ σπουδαίου.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

“ He <sup>a</sup> brought a spirit <sup>b</sup> over the earth and the water ceased ” ?

Some would say that by “ spirit ” is meant the wind <sup>c</sup> through which the flood ceased. But I myself do not know of water being diminished by a wind. Rather is it disturbed and seethes.<sup>d</sup> Otherwise vast expanses <sup>e</sup> of the sea would long ago have been consumed.<sup>f</sup> Accordingly, (Scripture) now seems to speak of the spirit of the Deity,<sup>g</sup> by which all things are made secure,<sup>h</sup> and of the terrible condition of the world, and of those things which are in the air and are in all mixtures <sup>i</sup> of plants and animals. For this time the flood was not a trifling outpouring <sup>j</sup> of water but a limitless and immense one, which almost flowed out beyond the Pillars of Heracles and the Great Sea.<sup>k</sup> Therefore the whole earth and the mountainous regions were flooded. That such (an amount of water) should be cleared out by the wind is not fitting, likely or right ; but, as I said, (it must have been done) by the invisible power of God.<sup>l</sup> *29. (Gen. viii. 2) What is the meaning of the words, “ the fountains of the abyss were covered up,<sup>m</sup> and the cataracts of heaven ” ?

In the first place, it is clear that the downpour <sup>n</sup> was

<sup>a</sup> LXX (and Heb.) “ God.”

<sup>b</sup> πνεῦμα.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ ἄνεμος.

<sup>d</sup> κυμαίνει, as in Procopius.

<sup>e</sup> Procopius τὰ μέγιστα.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. dried up by the action of the winds.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ πνεῦμα. Procopius πνεῦμα τὸ θεῖον.

<sup>h</sup> Or “ freed (of danger from the flood) ” ; Arm. γαροῦ = both ἀσφαλῆς and ἀπηλλαγμένος. Aucher renders, “ securitatem assequitur.”

<sup>i</sup> So lit., apparently meaning “ varied forms.”

<sup>j</sup> Lit. “ blow,” “ incidence.”

<sup>k</sup> The Atlantic.

<sup>l</sup> ὑπὸ τῆς ἀοράτου δυνάμεως τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ.

<sup>m</sup> ἐπεκαλύφθησαν (as in LXX) or ἐκρύφθησαν. Arm. O.T. “ were closed.”

<sup>n</sup> Lit. “ streams of falling ” ; Aucher renders, “ fluentia poenosa.”

GENESIS, BOOK II

incessant during the first forty days when from the earth below the fountains broke forth, and from the heaven above the cataracts were opened <sup>a</sup> until all the regions of plain and mountain were flooded. And for another full hundred and fifty days the streams did not cease from pouring down nor the fountains from welling up, but they were more gentle, no longer for increase <sup>b</sup> but for the continuation <sup>c</sup> of the outpouring <sup>d</sup> of water. And from on high there was assistance. <sup>e</sup> This is indicated by what is now said, "after a hundred and fifty days the fountains and cataracts were covered up." Thus, so long as they were still not kept back, it is clear that they were active. <sup>f</sup> Second, it was necessary that what (Scripture) adduces (as) streams of the flood, (namely) the twofold reservoir <sup>g</sup> of water, one being the fountains in the earth, the other the streams in the heaven, should be closed; for in proportion as the additional supplies <sup>h</sup> of material give out, so is this consumed by expending itself, <sup>i</sup> especially when the divine power <sup>j</sup> has commanded it. This is the literal meaning. <sup>k</sup> As for the deeper meaning <sup>l</sup>—since the flood of the soul <sup>m</sup> wells up from two (sources), from reason <sup>n</sup> as though from heaven, and also from the body and the senses as though from the earth, evil entering it <sup>o</sup> through the passions, and passions through evil at the same time, it

<sup>a</sup> Cf. above, QG ii. 18 on Gen. vii. 11.

<sup>b</sup> οὐκέτι πρὸς αὐξήσιν.

<sup>c</sup> πρὸς διαμονήν.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. taraçank <sup>e</sup> = both κατάχυσσις and ἐκτένεια. Aucher "extensionis." John Monachus reads differently.

<sup>e</sup> This seems to mean that at God's command the outpouring of the waters of heaven and earth ceased, cf. below.

<sup>f</sup> ἐνήργουν.

<sup>g</sup> ταμείον or ἀποθήκην.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "assistances" or "means."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher more freely renders, "quo magis enim deficiunt præbitiones materiae, ista consumitur a se."

<sup>j</sup> ἡ θεία δύναμις.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ τῆς ψυχῆς κατακλυσμός.

<sup>n</sup> ἐκ τοῦ λογισμοῦ.

<sup>o</sup> i.e. the soul.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

was necessary for the word <sup>a</sup> of the divine physician <sup>b</sup> to enter into the soul for a visit of healing <sup>c</sup> in order to heal its illness and to keep back <sup>d</sup> both streams. For the beginning of healing is to keep back the causes of the illness and not to leave any more material for the effects of illness. <sup>e</sup> (Scripture) has indicated this also in the case of the leper <sup>f</sup>; for when (the spot) stays and no longer spreads, then in respect of its staying and remaining in the same place, (Scripture) has legislated <sup>g</sup> that it <sup>h</sup> is clean, for that which moves against <sup>i</sup> nature is unclean.

30. (Gen. viii. 3) What is the meaning of the words, "The water went down, diminishing <sup>j</sup> after a hundred and fifty days"?

We must inquire <sup>k</sup> whether indeed these hundred and fifty days of subsiding and diminishing are other than (the period) which lasted five months <sup>l</sup> or else allude to this

<sup>a</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>b</sup> Or "the healing word of God." On the Logos as healer of ills see Leg. All. iii. 177 τὸν δὲ ἄγγελον ὃς ἐστὶ λόγος ὡσπερ ἰατρὸν κακῶν.

<sup>c</sup> πρὸς ἐπισκοπὴν ἰάσεως.

<sup>d</sup> κωλύειν ἢ εἴργειν ἢ ἐπισχεῖν.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "the making of illness."

<sup>f</sup> Cf. Lev. xiii. 6 ff.

<sup>g</sup> ἐνομοθέτησε.

<sup>h</sup> Or "he," the suspected leper.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "not in accordance with."

<sup>j</sup> Philo's text differs slightly from the LXX, which in turn differs slightly from Heb. (the Arm. O.T. differs slightly from both LXX and Philo). Heb. has "And the waters returned from the earth, continuously returning, and the waters disappeared at the end of a hundred and fifty days"; LXX has καὶ ἐνεδίδου τὸ ὕδωρ πορευόμενον ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, ἐνεδίδου καὶ ἡλαττονοῦτο τὸ ὕδωρ μετὰ πενήκοντα καὶ ἑκατὸν ἡμέρας.

<sup>k</sup> ζητητέον.

<sup>l</sup> Cf. Gen. vii. 24, not cited by Philo, "and the waters were high upon the earth a hundred and fifty days." Aucher, construing and interpreting differently, renders, "an distincti sint isti centum quinquaginta dies minuendae aquae per quinque menses."

GENESIS, BOOK II

former (period) <sup>a</sup> when the flood was unsubiding,<sup>b</sup> that is, was still increasing.

31. (Gen. viii. 4) Why does (Scripture) say, "The ark rested <sup>c</sup> in the seventh month <sup>d</sup> on the twenty-seventh day of the month" ?

It is fitting to consider how the beginning of the flood fell in the seventh month <sup>e</sup> on the twenty-seventh, and the diminution (of the flood), when the ark rested upon the summits of the mountains, also <sup>f</sup> (fell) in the seventh month on the twenty-seventh of the month. It must therefore be said that there is a homonymity <sup>g</sup> of months and days, for the beginning of the flood fell in the seventh month on the birthday <sup>h</sup> of the righteous man <sup>i</sup> at the vernal equinox, but the diminution (of the flood began) in the seventh month, taking its beginning from the flood, at the autumnal equinox.<sup>j</sup> For the equinoxes are separated and divided from each other by seven months, having five (months) in the middle.<sup>k</sup> For the seventh month of the equinox is potentially <sup>l</sup> also the first, since the creation of the world took place in this (month) because all things were full at

<sup>a</sup> See the verse cited in the preceding note.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. anznsteli, not found in the large Arm. dictionary, is composed of the privative particle an and a derivative of znestel "to subside"; Aucher renders, "indesinens."

<sup>c</sup> ἐκάθισεν (as in LXX).

<sup>d</sup> See notes on QG ii. 17.

<sup>e</sup> Philo here means Nisan (March-April), the seventh month in the civil calendar beginning with Tishri (Sept.-Oct.).

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "again."

<sup>g</sup> ὁμωνυμία.

<sup>h</sup> ἐν τῇ γενεθλίᾳ.

<sup>i</sup> τοῦ δικαίου = Noah. Philo takes Gen. vii. 11 and viii. 4 to mean that the beginning of the flood in Noah's 600th year and its subsidence in his 601st year coincided with his birthday.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. the flood subsided in Tishri, the seventh month in the festival calendar beginning with Nisan.

<sup>k</sup> Or "an interval of five months," as Aucher renders. Actually there are five months between Tishri and Nisan in both calendars.

<sup>l</sup> δυνάμει.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

this time. Similarly the (month of the) autumnal equinox, (which) is the seventh in time,<sup>a</sup> is the first in honour,<sup>b</sup> the seventh having its beginning from the air.<sup>c</sup> Accordingly, the flood takes place in the seventh month, not in time but in nature,<sup>d</sup> having (as) its beginning the vernal equinox.

32. (Gen. viii. 5) Why does (Scripture) say, "In the tenth<sup>e</sup> month, on the first (day of the month), the summits of the mountains appeared"?

Just as among numbers the decad is the limit of the ones<sup>f</sup> (and is) the complete and perfect number, being the cycle and end<sup>g</sup> of the ones and the beginning and cycle of the tens and of an infinity<sup>h</sup> of numbers, so the Creator thought it good<sup>i</sup> that when the flood had ceased, the summits of the mountains should appear through the perfect and complete number ten.

33. (Gen. viii. 6) Why did the righteous man (Noah) open the window of the ark after forty days?

Note carefully that the theologian<sup>j</sup> uses the same num-

<sup>a</sup> κατὰ χρόνον.

<sup>b</sup> κατὰ τιμήν.

<sup>c</sup> Or "climate." The original probably was τοῦ ἑβδόμου ἐξ αἴρος ἔχοντος τὴν ἀρχήν. Three explanations of this puzzling statement occur to me: (1) The Arm. translator read αἴρος for Philo's ἔαρος (as in the last sentence of the section); (2) Philo is alluding to the etymology of the first Heb. month Nisan, as though from nissa' (niph'al ptc. of ns') meaning "lifted up," "exalted"; (3) Philo connects the seventh month Tishri with the beginning of the rainy season in Palestine. Aucher, construing less accurately, renders, "septimi ex aere habens principium." See my note in Classical Philology 39 (1945), 257-258.

<sup>d</sup> κατὰ φύσιν.

<sup>e</sup> So Heb.; LXX and Arm. O.T. have "eleventh."

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Congressu 90 ὡσπερ δεκάς ἀριθμῶν τῶν ἀπὸ μονάδος ἐστὶ πέρασ τελειότατον.

<sup>g</sup> κύκλος καὶ τέλος.

<sup>h</sup> ἀπειρίας.

<sup>i</sup> ἠξίωσε.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ θεολόγος (Moses, cf. De Vita Mos. ii. 115).

GENESIS, BOOK II

ber of the course of the flood <sup>a</sup> as of its cessation and the complete remedying of the disaster.<sup>b</sup> And so, in the seventh month on the twenty-seventh (day) in the six hundredth year of Noah's life, that is, on his birthday, the flood began in the spring. Moreover, in the seventh month on the twenty-seventh (day) the ark rested upon the summits of the mountains at the autumnal equinox. And from three things it is clear that the flood became invisible <sup>c</sup> in the six hundred and first year, also in the seventh month on the twenty-seventh (day); for just <sup>d</sup> a year afterwards it was to subside,<sup>e</sup> establishing the earth as it was at (the time of) destruction,<sup>f</sup> blossoming and flourishing in the spring and being full of all (kinds of) fruit. Moreover, it was in forty days that the streams of the flood came, when the cataracts were opened in heaven and the fountains broke forth from beneath the earth. And again, the hope of stability returned <sup>g</sup> in forty days after a long cessation,<sup>h</sup> when he (Noah) opened the window. Again, the duration of the remaining<sup>i</sup> of the flood was a hundred and fifty days, while its diminution was (also) a hundred and fifty days, so that one must wonder at the equality,<sup>j</sup> for the disaster<sup>k</sup> increased and ceased in an equal number (of days), as (does) the moon. For in the same number (of days) it takes its increase from its conjunction <sup>l</sup> until it becomes full, and its waning when it returns to its conjunction after first having been full. Similarly, in divine visitations<sup>m</sup> the

<sup>a</sup> Cf. QG ii. 14 on Gen. vii. 12.

<sup>b</sup> κατὰ τὴν πᾶσαν θεραπείαν τὴν τοῦ κακοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> ἀόρατος ἢ ἀφανής.

<sup>d</sup> εὐθύς (?).

<sup>e</sup> ἡμερωθήσεται.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. restoring the earth to the condition it was in before the flood.

<sup>g</sup> Syntax and meaning slightly uncertain.

<sup>h</sup> κατάπαυσιν.

<sup>i</sup> Lit.=ἡ διαμονὴ ἢ τοῦ μένειν vel sim. Probably the original had merely ἡ διαμονή.

<sup>j</sup> Ὁρ "exact correspondence"—τὴν ἰσότητα.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ κακόν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀπὸ συνόδου, i.e. the new moon.

<sup>m</sup> ἐν τοῖς θεηλάτοις <κακοῖς>.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Creator preserves due order <sup>a</sup> and drives out disorder <sup>b</sup> from the divine borders.<sup>c</sup>

*34. (Gen. viii. 6) What is the "window of the ark" which the righteous man (Noah) opened?

The literal meaning <sup>d</sup> does not admit difficulty or doubt, for it is clear. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> the following is to be said. The several parts of the senses <sup>f</sup> are likened to the windows of the body.<sup>g</sup> For through them as through a window there enters into the mind <sup>h</sup> the apprehension of sense-perceptible things,<sup>i</sup> and, again, the mind stretches out to seize these through them. And a part of the windows, by which I mean the senses, is sight,<sup>j</sup> because it is especially related to the soul <sup>k</sup> and also is familiar <sup>l</sup> with light, the most beautiful of existing things, and a ministrant of things divine.<sup>m</sup> And this same (sense) first cut and made <sup>n</sup> the road to philosophy.<sup>o</sup> For when it sees the movements of the sun and moon, and the wanderings of the other planets,<sup>p</sup> and the inerrant revolution of the entire heaven,<sup>q</sup> and the order which is above all description,<sup>r</sup> and the harmony,<sup>s</sup> and the one true certain Creator

<sup>a</sup> τάξιν.

<sup>b</sup> Probably ἀταξίαν, cf. De Plantatione 3 εἰς τάξιν ἐξ ἀταξίας . . . ἄγων ὁ κοσμοπλάστης.

<sup>c</sup> ἐκ τῶν θείων ὄρων.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> τὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων μέρη.

<sup>g</sup> ταῖς τοῦ σώματος θυρίσιν ἐξομοιοῦται.

<sup>h</sup> εἰς τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>i</sup> ἢ τῶν αἰσθητῶν κατάληψις.

<sup>j</sup> ἢ ὄρασις.

<sup>k</sup> τῆς ψυχῆς μάλιστα συγγενής.

<sup>l</sup> οἰκεία.

<sup>m</sup> ὑπηρετής τῶν θείων.

<sup>n</sup> τεμοῦσα ἀπηργάσατο. Greek frag. has simply ἔτεμε.

<sup>o</sup> τὴν εἰς φιλοσοφίαν ὁδόν.

<sup>p</sup> τὰς τῶν ἄλλων πλανητῶν περιφοράς. Greek frag. has τὰς τῶν ἀστέρων περιόδους.

<sup>q</sup> τὴν ἀπλανῆ περιφορὰν τὴν τοῦ σύμπαντος οὐρανοῦ.

<sup>r</sup> τὴν παντός τοῦ λόγου κρείττονα τάξιν.

<sup>s</sup> τὴν ἁρμονίαν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

of the world,<sup>a</sup> it reports to its only<sup>b</sup> sovereign, reason,<sup>c</sup> what it has seen. And this (reason), seeing with a sharp eye both these (celestial phenomena) and through them the higher paradigmatic forms<sup>d</sup> and the cause of all things, immediately apprehends<sup>e</sup> them and genesis and providence,<sup>f</sup> for it reasons<sup>g</sup> that visible nature<sup>h</sup> did not come into being by itself<sup>i</sup>; for it would be impossible for harmony and order<sup>j</sup> and measure<sup>k</sup> and proportions of truth<sup>l</sup> and such concord<sup>m</sup> and real prosperity<sup>n</sup> and happiness to come about by themselves.<sup>o</sup> But it is necessary that there be some Creator and Father,<sup>p</sup> a pilot and charioteer,<sup>q</sup> who both begat<sup>r</sup> and wholly<sup>s</sup> preserves and guards<sup>t</sup> the things begotten.

<sup>a</sup> τὸν τοῦ κόσμου μόνον ἀληθῆ καὶ ἀψευδῆ κοσμοποιόν. Greek frag. has τόν . . . μόνον ἀψευδέστατον κοσμοποιόν.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher, taking Arm. μίαγν = μόνω to refer to the subject, renders, "retulit solus"; the Greek frag. omits the word.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, "uni principi consiliorum"; the Greek frag. has ἡγεμόνι λογισμῶ, which is probably correct.

<sup>d</sup> τὰ ἀνώτερα παραδειγματικὰ εἶδη. This text is preferable to that of the Greek frag. παραδείγματι καὶ εἶδει διὰ τούτων; Mangey correctly emended to παραδειγματικὰ εἶδη but wrongly deleted διὰ.

<sup>e</sup> καταλαμβάνει or perhaps εἰς ἔνοιαν ἦλθε, as in Greek frag. <sup>f</sup> γένεσιν καὶ πρόνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> λογισάμενος. Aucher here punctuates wrongly.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ ὁρατὴ φύσις. Greek frag. has ὅλη φύσις.

<sup>i</sup> Probably αὐτοματισθεῖσα, as in Greek frag.

<sup>j</sup> ἁρμονίαν καὶ τάξιν. <sup>k</sup> λόγους. Greek frag. has λόγον.

<sup>l</sup> ἀναλογίαν ἀληθείας (or ἀκριβείας). Greek frag. has only ἀναλογίαν. <sup>m</sup> συμφωνίαν.

<sup>n</sup> τὴν τῷ ὄντι εὐοδίαν (?) εὐδαιμονίας. Greek frag. has τῷ ὄντι εὐδαιμονίαν. <sup>o</sup> See note i.

<sup>p</sup> ποιητὴν τινα καὶ πατέρα.

<sup>q</sup> κυβερνήτην τε καὶ ἡνίοχον.

<sup>r</sup> ἐγέννησε or γεγέννηκε. The latter is found in Greek frag. p. 70 Harris; Greek frag. p. 22 Harris has πεποίηκε.

<sup>s</sup> ὀλόκληρα; Greek frag. omits.

<sup>t</sup> σώζων φυλάττει; Greek frag. has only σώζει.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

35. (Gen. viii. 7) Why did (Noah) first send the raven ?

As for the literal meaning,<sup>a</sup> the raven is said to be a sort of heralding<sup>b</sup> and fulfilling<sup>c</sup> creature. Wherefore down to our own time many observantly attend to its flight and its voice when it caws<sup>d</sup> (as though) indicating something hidden.<sup>e</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>f</sup> the raven is a blackish and reckless<sup>g</sup> and swift creature, which is a symbol of evil,<sup>h</sup> for it brings night and darkness upon the soul, and it is very swift, going out to meet all things in the world at one time. In the second place, (it leads)<sup>i</sup> to the destruction of those who would seize it,<sup>j</sup> and is very reckless, for it produces arrogance<sup>k</sup> and shameless impudence. And<sup>l</sup> to this is opposed virtue,<sup>m</sup> (which is) luminous<sup>n</sup> and steady<sup>o</sup> and modest and reverent by nature. And so it was right to expel beyond the borders whatever residue of darkness there was in the mind which might have led to folly.<sup>p</sup>

36. (Gen. viii. 7) Why, after going out, did the raven

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> ἀγγελικόν τι.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. v̄carem = συντελεῖν, πληροῦν, περαινεῖν, λύειν, etc. ; Aucher renders, "functioni addictum."

<sup>d</sup> Var. "calls."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher, punctuating differently, renders, "volatum atque garritum suum (sic) multi expectant, dijudicantes aliquid significare de incognitis rebus."

<sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> θρασύ or τολμηρόν.

<sup>h</sup> σύμβολον τῆς κακίας.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. is probably incomplete, and the Greek original can only be guessed.

<sup>j</sup> Meaning doubtful ; Arm. ουνολαση is nomen agentis of verb ουνημι = ἔχειν, κρατεῖν, etc. ; Aucher renders, "in exitium aucupantium."

<sup>k</sup> ἀλαζονίαν vel sim. ; Aucher's "superbia" should be "superbiam."

<sup>l</sup> Arm. has a superfluous "for" after "and."

<sup>m</sup> ἀρετή.

<sup>n</sup> φωτοειδής.

<sup>o</sup> βέβαιος.

<sup>p</sup> ἀφροσύνην or "wickedness"—πονηρίαν or φωυλότητα.

GENESIS, BOOK II

not return again, for not yet was any part of the earth dried? <sup>a</sup>

The passage is to be interpreted allegorically,<sup>b</sup> for unrighteousness<sup>c</sup> is the adversary<sup>d</sup> of the light of righteousness<sup>e</sup> so that it considers being very merry<sup>f</sup> with its relative,<sup>g</sup> the flood, more desirable than the good works of the virtuous man.<sup>h</sup> For unrighteousness is a lover of confusion and corruption.<sup>i</sup>

37. (Gen. viii. 7) Why has (Scripture) used enallage,<sup>j</sup> saying, "until the water was dried from the earth," for water is not dried from the earth, but the earth is dried of water?

It allegorizes<sup>k</sup> in these words, indicating by the instance of the water the immeasurableness of the passions.<sup>l</sup> When stuffed and swollen with these, the soul is corrupted.<sup>m</sup> And it is saved<sup>n</sup> when these (passions) are dried up.<sup>o</sup> For then they are not able to injure the soul in any way, being in a certain sense<sup>p</sup> weakened and dead.

38. (Gen. viii. 8) Why does (Noah) a second time send a dove both "from himself"<sup>q</sup> and to see whether the

<sup>a</sup> Philo here slightly alters the LXX, which reads οὐχ ὑπέστρεψεν ἕως τοῦ ξηρανθῆναι τὸ ὕδωρ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς, though in the next section he follows the LXX literally; Heb. has "and it went out, going and returning, until, etc."

<sup>b</sup> ἀλληγορίαν δέχεται ὁ τόπος.

<sup>c</sup> ἀδικία.

<sup>d</sup> ἀντίπαλος ἢ ἀντίμαχος.

<sup>e</sup> τῆς δικαιοσύνης.

<sup>f</sup> περιχαρῆς.

<sup>g</sup> σὺν τῷ συγγενεῖ.

<sup>h</sup> τὰ ἀγαθὰ ἔργα τὰ τοῦ σπουδαίου.

<sup>i</sup> συγχύσεως καὶ φθορᾶς.

<sup>j</sup> ἐνήλλαξε.

<sup>k</sup> ἀλληγορεῖ.

<sup>l</sup> τὴν τῶν παθῶν ἀμετρίαν.

<sup>m</sup> Or "destroyed"—διαφθείρεται.

<sup>n</sup> σώζεται.

<sup>o</sup> Arm. uses two synonyms for "dried."

<sup>p</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>q</sup> LXX says that Noah sent the dove ὀπίσω αὐτοῦ, i. e. after the raven; so the Arm. O.T. Philo here seems to follow the Heb., which has mē'ittō "from him(self)." Less plausible is Aucher's suggestion that the reflexive pronoun is based on Gen. viii. 9 (see below, § 40), which says that Noah brought the dove "to himself" into the ark.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

water had ceased, which is not said in the case of the raven ?

First of all, the dove is a clean creature,<sup>a</sup> and then it is tame and manageable<sup>b</sup> and a fellow-inhabitant<sup>c</sup> of man. Therefore it received the honour of being offered on the altar among the sacrifices.<sup>d</sup> Therefore (Scripture) said in a definite and positive manner,<sup>e</sup> "he sent it from himself," making it appear (that it was) a fellow-inhabitant. But by seeing "whether the water had ceased," (he made it appear that it was) sociable and like-minded.<sup>f</sup> And these (birds), the raven and the dove, are symbols of vice and virtue.<sup>g</sup> For the one is homeless, hearthless, stateless,<sup>h</sup> wild,<sup>i</sup> implacable<sup>j</sup> and unsociable.<sup>k</sup> But virtue is a matter of<sup>l</sup> humaneness<sup>m</sup> and sociability, and it is helpful.<sup>n</sup> This the virtuous man<sup>o</sup> sends (as) a messenger of healthful and salutary things,<sup>p</sup> wishing to learn through this whence to know.<sup>q</sup> But this (dove) like a messenger renders a true service,<sup>r</sup> in order that he may be careful of injurious things and may receive helpful things with great zeal and willingness.

<sup>a</sup> καθαρὸν ζῶον.

<sup>b</sup> οἰκεία καὶ χειροθήης.

<sup>c</sup> σύνοικος.

<sup>d</sup> ἐν ταῖς θυσίαις.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "sealing and affirming."

<sup>f</sup> κοινήν καὶ ὁμογνώμονα vel sim.

<sup>g</sup> σύμβολα κακίας καὶ ἀρετῆς.

<sup>h</sup> ἄοικος καὶ ἀνέστιος καὶ ἄπολις, cf. De Virtutibus 190 ἄοικος . . . καὶ ἄπολις ὁ φαῦλος.

<sup>i</sup> ἀνήμερος ἢ ἄγριος.

<sup>j</sup> ἀκατάλακτος ἢ ἄσπονδος.

<sup>k</sup> ἀκοινωνήτος.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher more freely renders, "colit."

<sup>m</sup> φιλανθρωπίας.

<sup>n</sup> ὠφέλιμος ἢ συμφέρων.

<sup>o</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος.

<sup>p</sup> ὑγιεινῶν καὶ σωτηρίων. Aucher renders, "pro rebus sanis ac salutaribus."

<sup>q</sup> This seems to be the literal meaning of the obscure and probably corrupt Arm. (unless the corruption lies in the lost Greek original). Aucher's rendering makes better sense but takes liberties with the Arm. text, "volens per ipsam edoceri condignum."

<sup>r</sup> Lit. "reports a true favour"—ἀληθῆ ἀναγγέλλει χάριν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

*39. (Gen. viii. 9) Why did the dove, not finding a resting-place <sup>a</sup> for its feet, return to him (Noah) ?

Is not this, then, clear evidence that through the symbols <sup>b</sup> of the raven and the dove vice and virtue <sup>c</sup> are shown ? For, behold, the dove, after being sent out, does not find a resting-place. How, then, could the raven, which went out first while there was still an excessive flood,<sup>a</sup> find a place to rest ? For the raven was neither an artawaza-hawd <sup>e</sup> nor an ibis nor yet one of those (birds) that dwell in the water. But it signifies <sup>f</sup> that vice, going out to the risen streams of passions and desires,<sup>g</sup> which inundate and destroy both souls and (human) lives, welcomes <sup>h</sup> them and consorts with them as with intimates and relatives <sup>i</sup> with whom it dwells. But virtue, being vexed <sup>j</sup> at the first sight (of these things), immediately springs away without returning again, and does not find a resting-place for its feet, that is to say, it does not find any standing-place worthy of it. For what greater evil could there be than that virtue should not find any place in the soul, even the smallest, as a place to rest and remain ?

40. (Gen. viii. 9) What is the meaning of the words, "Stretching forth his hand, he took it and brought it in to himself" ?

The literal meaning <sup>k</sup> is plain. But the deeper meaning <sup>l</sup> is to be exactly determined.<sup>m</sup> The wise man <sup>n</sup> uses virtue <sup>o</sup> as an inspector <sup>p</sup> and messenger <sup>q</sup> of affairs. And when

<sup>a</sup> ἀνάπαυσιν, as in LXX.

<sup>b</sup> διὰ τῶν συμβόλων.

<sup>c</sup> κακία καὶ ἀρετή.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. aweli arkaçk<sup>c</sup> jrhelelin almost certainly renders ὑπερβολὴ τοῦ κατακλυσμοῦ. Aucher less accurately renders, "aerumna diluvii."

<sup>e</sup> Some sort of water-bird, according to the Arm. gloss ; Aucher renders, "cygnus." Procopius omits.

<sup>f</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>g</sup> παθῶν καὶ ἐπιθυμιῶν.

<sup>h</sup> ἀσπάζεται.

<sup>i</sup> ὡς μετ' οἰκείων καὶ συγγενῶν.

<sup>j</sup> δυσχεραίνουσα vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>m</sup> ἀκριβωτέον.

<sup>n</sup> ὁ σοφός ἢ ὁ ἀστείος.

<sup>o</sup> ἀρετῇ.

<sup>p</sup> ἐφόρῳ.

<sup>q</sup> ἀγγέλῳ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

he sees them to be natures worthy of himself,<sup>a</sup> he remains and dwells with them, correcting them and making them better. For wisdom<sup>b</sup> is most common, most equal and most helpful.<sup>c</sup> But when it sees them perversely increase in the opposite direction and being altogether uncontrolled and wilful, it returns to its own place. And virtue admits it, stretching forth its hand in word,<sup>d</sup> and in deed<sup>e</sup> opening the whole mind and unfolding<sup>f</sup> and expanding it through the perfect and even and full number<sup>g</sup> with all willingness.<sup>h</sup> Nor then when he sent it forth from himself did he separate it from himself in order to survey the natures of others<sup>i</sup> but in the manner in which the sun sends its rays to earth, making all things bright. For in the great strength of its light there is no separation or division.<sup>j</sup>

*41. (Gen. viii. 10) Why, after holding back<sup>k</sup> still another seven days, did he (Noah) again send out the dove?

(This was) an excellent manner of life. For although at first he sees that their natures are hard,<sup>l</sup> he does not give up<sup>m</sup> hope of their changing for the better. But just as a good physician does not immediately apply treatment to

<sup>a</sup> φύσεις ἀξίας ἑαυτοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> σοφία.

<sup>c</sup> κοινοτάτη καὶ ἰσοτάτη καὶ ὠφελιμωτάτη.

<sup>d</sup> λόγῳ.

<sup>e</sup> ἔργῳ.

<sup>f</sup> Or "resolving," "explaining."

<sup>g</sup> διὰ τοῦ τελείου καὶ ἀρτίου καὶ πλήρους ἀριθμοῦ, i.e. the decad. The same three adjectives are applied to human nature (φύσις) in De Ebrietate 135.

<sup>h</sup> μετὰ προθυμίας πάσης.

<sup>i</sup> κατασκοπεῖν τὰς τῶν ἄλλων φύσεις.

<sup>j</sup> Text and meaning uncertain. Arm. sastkout'oiun usually means "strength" but may also render ἀποτομή; in one ms. it is nominative, in another, genitive. Arm. γογζ, here translated "great," normally means "very"; it may possibly be an anomalous locative of the noun ογζ "strength." Aucher renders, "quia universae ejus lucis est minime disjungi."

<sup>k</sup> Probably ἐπισχών, as in LXX.

<sup>l</sup> φύσεις σκληράς.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "cut off"; cf. Greek parallel προανατέμνη τὴν ὁδόν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

reach the disease all at once but allows nature first to open the way to recovery,<sup>a</sup> and then uses health-giving and salutary drugs (as) a physician, so the virtuous man<sup>b</sup> uses principles<sup>c</sup> which are in accordance with the laws<sup>d</sup> of philosophy.<sup>e</sup> And the hebdomad<sup>f</sup> is holy and sacred<sup>g</sup>; and it was in accordance with this<sup>h</sup> that the Father of the universe, when He created the world, is said to have seen His work. But the seeing of the world and the things in it is nothing else than philosophy, a most glorious and choice part,<sup>i</sup> which is attained by scientific wisdom,<sup>j</sup> which contains in itself an activity most necessary for seeing.

42. (Gen. viii. 11) What is the meaning of the words, "The dove returned again to him at evening, holding an olive-leaf, a dry branch<sup>k</sup> in its mouth"?

All (these) are chosen symbols and tests<sup>l</sup>—the "returning again," the "at evening," the "holding an olive-leaf," the "dry branch," the "oil"<sup>m</sup> and the "in its mouth." But the several symbols must be studied in detail.<sup>n</sup> Now the return is distinguished<sup>o</sup> from the earlier (flight). For <sup>a</sup> εἰς σωτηρίαν.

<sup>b</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος.

<sup>c</sup> Or "words"—λόγοις.

<sup>d</sup> νόμοις or "doctrines"—δόγμασι.

<sup>e</sup> τῆς φιλοσοφίας. The Greek parallel has λόγοις κατὰ φιλοσοφίαν καὶ δόγμασιν.

<sup>f</sup> Here meaning both the number seven and the week.

<sup>g</sup> ἱερὰ καὶ ἁγία.

<sup>h</sup> Or "at this (interval of time)"—κατ' αὐτήν.

<sup>i</sup> εὐκλεέστατον καὶ δοκιμώτατον μέρος.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. literally = ἐπιστήμη σοφίας; Aucher renders, "sapientia."

<sup>k</sup> LXX has φύλλον ἐλαίας κάρφος translating Heb. "olive-leaf freshly plucked"; Arm. O.T. has šil "dry-stick" (=LXX κάρφος); Aucher's rendering "ramum gracilem" somewhat obscures the point.

<sup>l</sup> Perhaps the original had "approved symbols," as Aucher conjectures.

<sup>m</sup> Implied by the olive-leaf.

<sup>n</sup> ἀκριβωτέα.

<sup>o</sup> διαφέρει.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the latter brought <sup>a</sup> the report <sup>b</sup> of a nature altogether corrupt and rebellious, and one destroyed by the flood, (that is) by great ignorance and lack of education.<sup>c</sup> But the other <sup>d</sup> repents of its beginning. And to find repentance <sup>e</sup> is not easy but is a very difficult and laborious task. For these reasons it comes at evening, having passed the whole day from early morning until evening in inspection,<sup>f</sup> in word <sup>g</sup> by passing over various places but in deed <sup>h</sup> by looking over and inspecting the parts of its nature <sup>i</sup> and in seeing them clearly from beginning to end,<sup>j</sup> for the evening is a symbol of the end.<sup>k</sup> And the third symbol is the "bearing a leaf." The leaf is a small part of the plant. And similar to this is the beginning to repent.<sup>l</sup> For the beginning of improvement <sup>m</sup> gives a slight indication, as if it were a leaf, that it is to be guarded and also can be shaken off. But <sup>n</sup> there is great hope withal that it will attain correction of its ways.<sup>o</sup> The fourth symbol is that the leaf was of no other tree than the olive. And oil is the material <sup>p</sup> of light. For evil, as I have said, is profound darkness, but virtue <sup>q</sup> is a most radiant splendour; and repentance <sup>r</sup> is the beginning of light. But do not think that the beginning of repentance is already in blossoming and growing things; only while they are still dry and arid do they have a seminal principle.<sup>s</sup> Wherefore the fifth symbol is that when it (the dove) came it bore a "dry branch." And the sixth symbol is that the dry branch

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "held."

<sup>b</sup> Or "announcement."

<sup>c</sup> ὑπὸ μεγάλης ἀμαθίας καὶ ἀπαιδευσίας.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the returning dove.

<sup>e</sup> μετάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> ἐπισκοπῇ ἢ ἐπισκέψει.

<sup>g</sup> λόγῳ μὲν.

<sup>h</sup> ἔργῳ δέ.

<sup>i</sup> τὰ τῆς ἐκείνου φύσεως μέρη. What Arm. agnorik = ἐκείνου refers to is not clear.

<sup>j</sup> ἀπ' ἀρχῆς εἰς τέλος.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. here uses a different word for "end" which also = τέλος.

<sup>l</sup> μετανοεῖν.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "becoming good" (or "better").

<sup>n</sup> Why Aucher here renders the adversative conjunction βαγε as "quominus" I do not understand.

<sup>o</sup> κατόρθωσιν τῶν ἐπιτηδευμάτων.

<sup>p</sup> ὕλη.

<sup>q</sup> ἀρετή.

<sup>r</sup> ἢ μετάνοια.

<sup>s</sup> σπερματικὸν λόγον.

GENESIS, BOOK II

was "in its mouth," since six is the first perfect number<sup>a</sup>; for virtue bears in its mouth, that is, in its speech,<sup>b</sup> the seeds of wisdom and justice<sup>c</sup> and generally of goodness of soul.<sup>d</sup> And not only does it bear these but it also gives a share in them<sup>e</sup> to outsiders,<sup>f</sup> offering water to their souls and watering with repentance their desire for sin.

43. (Gen. viii. 11) Why (does Scripture say that) Noah knew that the water had ceased from the earth?

The literal meaning<sup>g</sup> is clear. For if the leaf had been taken from the water, it would have been still damp and moist. But now it was dry; and (Scripture) says that it was a "dry stick,"<sup>h</sup> as though it had been dried above a dried earth. But as for the deeper meaning<sup>i</sup>—the wise man<sup>j</sup> takes it as a symbol of repentance,<sup>k</sup> and the bringing of the leaf as preventing the occurrence<sup>l</sup> of great ignorance,<sup>m</sup> even though it was no longer flourishing and blossoming but, on the contrary, was a "dry stick," for the reasons previously stated. And at the same time one must admire the Father for His great goodness and kindness.<sup>n</sup> For though destruction had overtaken earthly creatures through their excess of injustice and impiety,<sup>o</sup> nevertheless there remained a residue of antiquity<sup>p</sup> and of that which had been in the beginning<sup>q</sup> and a small and light seed of ancient virtues.<sup>r</sup> And no less is it a symbol of the fact

<sup>a</sup> τέλειος ἀριθμός (in the Pythagorean sense).

<sup>b</sup> ἐν τῷ λόγῳ.                      <sup>c</sup> σοφίας (ὡς φρονήσεως) καὶ δικαιοσύνης.

<sup>d</sup> ἀγαθότητος τῆς ψυχῆς.                      <sup>e</sup> κοινωνίαν.

<sup>f</sup> Ὁρ "laymen"—τοῖς ἰδιώταις.                      <sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> κάρφος, see note k on p. 119.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.                      <sup>j</sup> ὁ σοφός ὡς ἀστείος.

<sup>k</sup> σύμβολον τῆς μετανοίας.

<sup>l</sup> Ὁρ "blows"—βολάς.                      <sup>m</sup> ἀμαθίας.

<sup>n</sup> τῆς λίαν ἀγαθότητος καὶ χρηστότητος.

<sup>o</sup> ἀδικίας καὶ ἀσεβείας.

<sup>p</sup> ὑπόλειμμα τοῦ ἀρχαίου.                      <sup>q</sup> ἐν τῇ ἀρχῇ.

<sup>r</sup> μικρὸν καὶ λεπτὸν σπέρμα ἀρχαίων ἀρετῶν; Aucher renders, "virtutum majorum semen exile," omitting azazoun = λεπτόν, which refers to the "dry stick."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

that the memory of the good persons <sup>a</sup> who were created in the beginning is not altogether destroyed. Wherefore the following statement was given as law <sup>b</sup> by some prophet <sup>c</sup> who was a disciple and friend of Moses: "If Almighty God <sup>d</sup> had not left us a seed, we should have become like the blind and barren," <sup>e</sup> so as not to know the good and not be able to beget offspring. And blindness and barrenness are called in the ancestral language <sup>f</sup> of the Chaldeans "Sodom" and "Gomorrhah." <sup>g</sup>

44. (Gen. viii. 12) Why did he (Noah) a third time send out the dove after another seven days, and why did it not again return to him?

The not returning to him applies in word to the dove but in deed <sup>h</sup> to virtue. <sup>i</sup> This is not a symbol of alienation, <sup>j</sup> for it did not at that time, <sup>k</sup> as I have said, separate itself, but in the manner of a ray of light it was sent to see the natures of others. But at that time, not finding any who were receiving discipline, <sup>l</sup> it again returned and hastened straight to him alone. But now it is no longer the possession <sup>m</sup> of one alone but is the common good of all those who wish to take the outpouring of wisdom as if from the earth and from a very early time have thirsted for the knowledge of wisdom.

<sup>a</sup> Or "good things"—τῶν ἀγαθῶν.

<sup>b</sup> ὅδε ὁ λόγος ἐνομοθετήθη.

<sup>c</sup> Isaiah i. 9.

<sup>d</sup> Heb., LXX and Arm. O.T. have "Lord of hosts."

<sup>e</sup> Heb., LXX and Arm. O.T. have "like Sodom and Gomorrhah."

<sup>f</sup> τῇ πατρίᾳ γλώττῃ.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. De Somniis ii. 192, where "Sodom" alone is etymologized as τύφλωσις or στείρωσις, and "Gomorrhah" as μέτρον.

<sup>h</sup> λόγῳ μὲν . . . ἔργῳ δέ.

<sup>i</sup> τῆς ἀρετῆς.

<sup>j</sup> σύμβολον τῆς ἀλλοτριώσεως.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. the second flight, cf. § 42.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. xrat = παιδεία, νουθέτησις, ἐπιστήμη, etc.

<sup>m</sup> κτήμα.

GENESIS, BOOK II

45. (Gen. viii. 13) Why did the water cease <sup>a</sup> from the earth in the six hundred and first year of Noah's life <sup>b</sup> in the first (month) on the first <sup>c</sup> of the month?

This "first" in connexion with cessation <sup>d</sup> can be said either of the month or of man, and it takes account <sup>e</sup> of both. For though the cessation of the water is to be understood <sup>f</sup> (as taking place) in the first month, we are to suppose that the seventh month is to be understood as meant, namely that (which is first) in respect of the equinox, for the same month is both the first and the seventh <sup>g</sup>; this amounts to saying that the first in nature and power <sup>h</sup> is the seventh in time. Accordingly, in another place <sup>i</sup> (Scripture) says, "This month <sup>j</sup> is for you the beginning of months; it is first in the months of the year." Thus it calls "first" that (month) which is first in nature and power but is seventh in temporal number, for the equinox has first and highest rank among the annual seasons.<sup>k</sup> But if "first" is said of the man it will be said most properly,<sup>l</sup> for the righteous man <sup>m</sup> is truly and particularly first, as the skipper <sup>n</sup> is first in the ship, and the ruler <sup>o</sup> is first in the state.<sup>p</sup> But he <sup>q</sup> is first not only in virtue <sup>r</sup> but also in order,<sup>s</sup> for he himself was the beginning and first in the regeneration <sup>t</sup> of the second human seed. Moreover, it is

<sup>a</sup> So LXX, ἐξέλιπεν. Heb. has "dried up."

<sup>b</sup> "Of Noah's life" is in LXX but not in Heb.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "on the one," as in LXX and Heb.

<sup>d</sup> κατὰ ἔκλειψιν. <sup>e</sup> λόγον. <sup>f</sup> ἀκουστέον.

<sup>g</sup> Depending on whether one uses the vernal or autumnal calendar, cf. above, § 17 on Gen. vii. 11 and § 31 on Gen. viii. 4.

<sup>h</sup> Or "rank"—δύναμιν.

<sup>i</sup> Ex. xii. 2.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. Nisan (March-April).

<sup>k</sup> The Greek original seems to be τὴν πρώτην καὶ ἀρίστην τάξιν δι' ἔτους ἐν τοῖς χρόνοις, but the meaning is not quite clear.

<sup>l</sup> κυριώτατα.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ δίκαιος.

<sup>n</sup> ὁ κυβερνήτης. <sup>o</sup> ὁ ἄρχων or δυνάστης or ἡγεμών.

<sup>p</sup> ἐν τῇ πόλει.

<sup>q</sup> i.e. Noah.

<sup>r</sup> ἀρετῇ.

<sup>s</sup> τάξει.

<sup>t</sup> κατὰ τὴν παλιγγενεσίαν, i.e. of the human race after the flood.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

excellently stated in this passage that the flood came in the lifetime of the righteous man and again subsided and returned to its former state. Wherefore, when the flood came, he alone was destined to live with all his household, and when the evil had passed, he alone was destined to be found on earth before the regeneration—his later life.<sup>a</sup> And both then and now this has been not inaptly <sup>b</sup> attested. For whereas he desires only true life, one that is in accord with virtue, others eagerly pursue death because of deathly evils. Accordingly, it was necessarily <sup>c</sup> in the six hundred and first year that the evil ceased, for in the number six there was corruption <sup>d</sup> and in the number one there was salvation,<sup>e</sup> for the number one is most soul-begetting <sup>f</sup> and most able to form life.<sup>g</sup> Wherefore the receding of the water took place at the new moon in order that the monad might have pre-eminence in being honoured above both months and years,<sup>h</sup> when God would save those who were upon the earth. For one who is outstanding in character <sup>i</sup> the Hebrews call “Noah” in their ancestral tongue, while the Greeks say “righteous.”<sup>j</sup> But he is not removed from and freed of bodily necessities,<sup>k</sup> for although he is not under (another’s) authority <sup>l</sup> and has authority <sup>m</sup> himself, nevertheless he is obliged to die,<sup>n</sup> and so the number six is associated with the monad. For the flood re-

<sup>a</sup> Variant “their later life”; as Aucher observes, both readings are obscure; “life” is in apposition with “regeneration,” but seems to have the force of a genitive.

<sup>b</sup> οὐκ ἀπό σκοποῦ.

<sup>c</sup> ἀνάγκη.

<sup>d</sup> Or “destruction.”

<sup>e</sup> σωτηρία.

<sup>f</sup> ψυχογονιμώτατος, cf. De Vita Mos. i. 97.

<sup>g</sup> ζωπλαστεῖν.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders, “in mensibus et annis,” but Arm. k’an has comparative force.

<sup>i</sup> ἐκλεκτὸν ἦθος vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> δίκαιον, cf. De Abrahamo 27. Philo professes to etymologize the Hebrew name “Noah” but really renders the adjective applied to Noah in Scripture.

<sup>k</sup> οὐκ ἐξαιρείται οὐδ’ ἐλευθεροῦται σωματικῶν ἀναγκῶν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀρχῇ or ἐξουσία.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. “is a ruler.”

<sup>n</sup> Lit. “mixed with dying.”

GENESIS, BOOK II

ceded not in one (year) viewed separately by itself, but in six, that (number) proper to the body and inequality,<sup>a</sup> since the number six is the first oblong number.<sup>b</sup> For this reason (Scripture) says "in the six hundred and first (year)" and "righteous in his generation."<sup>c</sup> Not in that (generation) which is universal<sup>d</sup> nor in that which was to be destroyed was he righteous, but in respect of a certain one. For the comparison is with his own generation. But praiseworthy also is that (generation) which God singled out and deemed worthy of life above every generation, setting a limit<sup>e</sup> to it by which it was to be as the end<sup>f</sup> of generations and ages,<sup>g</sup> that is, of those which must perish, and as the beginning of those which were to come afterward. Most of all, however, is it proper to praise him who stretched up with his whole body and looked (upward) because of his kinship<sup>h</sup> with God.

46. (Gen. viii. 13) What is the meaning of the words, "Noah opened the covering<sup>i</sup> of the ark"?

The literal meaning<sup>j</sup> needs no exposition. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>k</sup> since the ark is symbolically<sup>l</sup> the body, the covering of the body must be thought of as whatever protects<sup>m</sup> and preserves it and closely guards<sup>n</sup> its power,<sup>o</sup> (namely) pleasure.<sup>p</sup> For by pleasure it is truly<sup>q</sup> preserved and sustained in measure<sup>r</sup> and in accordance

<sup>a</sup> τῆ ἐξάδι τῆ τῶ σώματι οἰκεία καὶ τῆ ἀνισότητι, cf. Leg. All. i. 4 on the six movements of animals.

<sup>b</sup> ἑτερομήκης, i.e. produced by the multiplying of unequal factors, see above, § 12 notes, and below, QG iii. 38.

<sup>c</sup> On this phrase, occurring in Gen. vi. 9, Philo does not comment above.

<sup>d</sup> καθολική. <sup>e</sup> ὄρον.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ τέλος.

<sup>g</sup> γενεῶν καὶ αἰώνων.

<sup>h</sup> οἰκειώσεως.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν στέγην (so LXX).

<sup>j</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>m</sup> σκεπάζει ὅτ καλύπτει.

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "long guards" but Arm. yerkar here probably reflects the preverbal particle δια- in διαφυλάττει; Aucher renders more literally, "diu conservat."

<sup>o</sup> τὴν δύναμιν.

<sup>p</sup> ἢ ἡδονή.

<sup>q</sup> ὄντως.

<sup>r</sup> μέτροις.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

with nature,<sup>a</sup> just as it is disintegrated<sup>b</sup> by pain.<sup>c</sup> Accordingly, when the mind<sup>d</sup> is smitten by heavenly pleasure,<sup>e</sup> it desires to leap upward and cut off all forms of (sensual) pleasure, in order that it may remove from its midst that which covers it with a veil and darkens it like a shadow, and that it may be able to bring sense-perception<sup>f</sup> to naked and incorporeal natures.<sup>g</sup>

*47. (Gen. viii. 14) Why was the earth dried up in the seventh month,<sup>h</sup> on the twenty-seventh (day) ?

Do you see that a little before<sup>i</sup> (Scripture) spoke of the first month, and now of the seventh ? For the seventh is the same in time, as I have said,<sup>j</sup> but in nature<sup>k</sup> is first in so far as it is connected with the equinox. Moreover, excellently<sup>l</sup> did the advent of the flood fall in the seventh month, on the twenty-seventh (day), and the letting up and subsiding of the flood a year later in the same seventh month and on the same day.<sup>m</sup> For it was at the equinox that the flood came, and at the very same time<sup>n</sup> (came) the return of life. Concerning the causes of this we have already written. But the seventh month is homonymous<sup>o</sup> with such months and days. And again it was on the twenty-seventh day that the ark rested upon the mountains. This is the month which is seventh in nature but first in time, which is at the equinox. So that it is at the equinoxes that distinctions<sup>p</sup> (are made) through the seventh months and twenty-seventh days.<sup>q</sup> For the flood

<sup>a</sup> κατὰ φύσιν.                      <sup>b</sup> λύεται.                      <sup>c</sup> ὑπ' ἀλγηδόνων.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς.                      <sup>e</sup> ὑπ' οὐρανίας ἡδονῆς.                      <sup>f</sup> αἴσθησιν.

<sup>g</sup> γυμναῖς καὶ ἀσωμάτοις φύσει.

<sup>h</sup> Heb. and most LXX MSS. "second."

<sup>i</sup> See § 45 on Gen. viii. 13.

<sup>j</sup> See above, §§ 17, 45.                      <sup>k</sup> φύσει.                      <sup>l</sup> παγκάλως.

<sup>m</sup> See § 17 on Gen. vii. 11.

<sup>n</sup> Arm. andren usu. = εὐθύς or ἀντίκα but here seems to have the meaning given above.                      <sup>o</sup> ὁμώνυμος.

<sup>p</sup> διαίρέσεις or διακρίσεις, or perhaps "choices"—αἱρέσεις or ἐκλογαί.

<sup>q</sup> Meaning not quite clear to me.

GENESIS, BOOK II

(occurred) in the seventh month, in which the vernal equinox falls, and which is the seventh in time and the first in nature.<sup>a</sup> But with the same number <sup>b</sup> was the return and retreat (of the water) when the ark came to rest on the summits of the mountains; this, again, was in the seventh month, not in the same one, but in that which falls at the autumnal equinox, which is seventh in nature but first in time.<sup>c</sup> Moreover, the complete remedying of the evil,<sup>d</sup> when the evil was dried up, similarly (took place) in the seventh month, on the twenty-seventh (day), at the vernal equinox. For both the beginning of the flood and its end had previously <sup>e</sup> received a limit-fixing <sup>f</sup> at the same time, but the middle of his later life was the middle time.<sup>g</sup> And more exactly <sup>h</sup> is to be explained what is said (in Scripture): the flood together with its remedying was a — <sup>i</sup> year. For its beginning was in the six hundredth year, in the seventh month, on the twenty-seventh day, so that the interval of time was a complete year, taking its beginning from the vernal equinox and similarly ending at the same time, at the vernal equinox. For, as I have said, as they had corrupted earthly things when filled with fruits, so, when those who had used these fruits had perished, and (the survivors) were released and delivered from evil, the earth was again found to be full of seed-bearing things and trees which bore such fruit as spring calls forth. For He thought it right that just as the earth was when it was flooded, so, when it was dried, it should

<sup>a</sup> When the calendar year begins in Tishri (Sept.—Oct.).

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "measure." <sup>c</sup> See note a.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the flood. <sup>e</sup> πρότερον.

<sup>f</sup> Arm. sahmanadrout'iun = ὄροθεσία, but this word seems not to be used elsewhere in Philo's works.

<sup>g</sup> Arm. text is obscure to me; Aucher renders, "medietas autem vitae reparatae, medii temporis." The Arm. glossator explains that "in this interval a year of Noah's life was completed."
<sup>h</sup> ἀκριβέστερον.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. ōrabanak "sojourning a day" may possibly reflect Gr. ἐφ' ἡμέραν "to a day," i.e. "exact," as Prof. L. A. Post suggests.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

again show itself and yield (its produce). And do not wonder that the earth, given one day, grew all things through the power of God,<sup>a</sup> (such as) seeds, trees, an abundance of grass, ears, plants and fruits, and was unexpectedly full of all kinds. For also in the creation of the world, in one day out of the six He completed the production of plants. But these (later plants) were complete in themselves to start with and bore such fruits as were appropriate to the fertility of the spring season. For all things are possible<sup>b</sup> to God, who does not need time at all<sup>c</sup> in order to create.<sup>d</sup>

*48. (Gen. viii. 15-16). Why, after the drying up of the earth, did Noah not go out of the ark before hearing the word<sup>e</sup> (of God), for "The Lord God<sup>f</sup> said to Noah, Go out, thou and thy wife and thy sons<sup>g</sup> and the wives of thy sons and the other living creatures"<sup>h</sup>?

Righteousness<sup>i</sup> is reverent<sup>j</sup> just as, on the other hand, injustice,<sup>k</sup> which is its opposite, is boastful and self-satisfied.<sup>l</sup> And it is an evidence of reverence not to acquiesce and believe in reason<sup>m</sup> more than in God. And especially for him who saw the whole earth suddenly become a boundless sea was it natural and proper to think that, as was natural and possible, the evil might return again. And he also believed what was consistent<sup>n</sup> with this, (namely) that as he had entered the ark at God's command, so also he

<sup>a</sup> θεία δυνάμει.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "a power"—δύναμις or ἐξουσία.

<sup>c</sup> πάντως.

<sup>d</sup> ποιῆσαι.

<sup>e</sup> τὸν λόγον (sc. τοῦ θεοῦ).

<sup>f</sup> So LXX; Heb. has only "God." Aucher omits "Lord" in his rendering.

<sup>g</sup> So Heb. and most mss. of LXX; some LXX mss. and the Bohairic version have "thy sons" before "thy wife." See § 49.

<sup>h</sup> Here Scripture specifies beasts, birds and reptiles.

<sup>i</sup> δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>j</sup> εὐλαβής.

<sup>k</sup> ἀδικία.

<sup>l</sup> ἀλαζών και αὐτάρεσκος.

<sup>m</sup> συγχωρεῖν και πείθεσθαι τῷ λόγῳ.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ ἀκόλουθον.

GENESIS, BOOK II

should go out at God's command, for one cannot have complete power over anything if God does not guide him and first give him a command.

49. (Gen. viii. 18) Why, when they entered the ark, was the order (of words) "he and his sons" and then "and his sons' wives,"<sup>a</sup> but when they went out, was it changed? For (Scripture) says, "Noah went out and his wife" and then "his sons and his sons' wives."<sup>b</sup>

In the literal sense,<sup>c</sup> by "going in" (Scripture) indicates the non-begetting<sup>d</sup> of seed, but by "going out" it indicates generation.<sup>e</sup> For when they went in, the sons are mentioned together with their father, and the daughters-in-law together with their mother-in-law. But when they went out, it was as married couples, the father together with his wife, and then the several sons, each with his wife. For He<sup>f</sup> wishes through deeds rather than through words to teach His disciples<sup>g</sup> what is right for them to do. Accordingly, He said nothing by way of vocal explanation<sup>h</sup> to the effect that those who went in should abstain from intercourse with their wives, and that when they went out, they should sow seed in accordance with nature. This (He indicated) by the order (of words)<sup>i</sup> but not<sup>j</sup> by exclaiming and crying aloud, "After so great a destruction

<sup>a</sup> So Heb. and LXX in Gen. vii. 7 (not separately discussed by Philo).

<sup>b</sup> Here Philo's text agrees with LXX against Heb. in making Noah's wife precede his sons.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> ἀγονίαν.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "begetting of generation"; both Arm. words usu. = γένεσις.

<sup>f</sup> Perhaps not God but Moses is meant. Philo, like the Palestinian rabbis, sometimes treats Scripture as the word of God, sometimes as the word of Moses, God's spokesman.

<sup>g</sup> τοὺς γνωρίμους.

<sup>h</sup> φωνῇ διασαφῶν vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. by pairing off Noah with his wife, Noah's sons with their wives.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "not only"; what the Greek construction was is not clear from the Arm.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of all those who were on earth, do not indulge in luxury, for this is not fitting or lawful. It is enough for you to receive the honour of life.<sup>a</sup> But to go to bed with your wives <sup>b</sup> is the part of those seeking and desiring sensual satisfaction."<sup>c</sup> For these it was fitting to sympathize with wretched humanity, as being kin to it. And at the same time they were watching for something unseen that might be impending, lest evil might overtake <sup>d</sup> them at some time. But in addition to this it would have been inept <sup>e</sup> for them now, while the living were perishing, to beget those who were not (yet) in existence and to be snared and surfeited at an unseasonable hour with sensual pleasure.<sup>f</sup> But after (the flood) had ceased and come to an end, and they had been saved from the evil, He again instructed them through the order (of their leaving the ark) to hasten to procreate, by specifying <sup>g</sup> not that men (should go out) with men nor women with women but females with males. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> this must be said. When the soul <sup>i</sup> is about to wash off and cleanse its sins, man should join with man, (that is) the sovereign mind <sup>j</sup> like a father should join with its particular thoughts <sup>k</sup> as with its sons, but (not join) any of the female sex, (that is) what belongs to sense.<sup>l</sup> For it is a time of war, in which one must separate one's ranks <sup>m</sup> and watch out lest they be mixed up and bring about defeat instead of victory. But when just the right time has come for the

<sup>a</sup> So lit., perhaps meaning "to be thought worthy of life."

<sup>b</sup> i.e. while in the ark.

<sup>c</sup> ἡδονῆς.

<sup>d</sup> φθάνη.

<sup>e</sup> ἀνοίκειον.

<sup>f</sup> ἡδονῆς.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "writing," as though God's command were a written order, or as if Moses were here acting God's rôle.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ or, less probably, "spirit"—τὸ πνεῦμα; Aucher has "animus."

<sup>j</sup> τὸν ἡγεμόνα νοῦν.

<sup>k</sup> τοῖς κατὰ μέρη λογισμοῖς.

<sup>l</sup> πρὸς αἴσθησιν.

<sup>m</sup> τὰς τάξεις διαιρεῖν vel sim.

GENESIS, BOOK II

cleansing,<sup>a</sup> and there is a drying up of all ignorance<sup>b</sup> and of all that which is able to do harm, then it is fitting and proper for it<sup>c</sup> to bring together<sup>d</sup> those (elements) which have been divided and separated, not that the masculine thoughts may be made womanish<sup>e</sup> and relaxed by softness, but that the female element, the senses, may be made manly<sup>f</sup> by following masculine thoughts and by receiving from them seed for procreation, that it may perceive (things) with wisdom, prudence, justice and courage,<sup>g</sup> in sum, with virtue.<sup>h</sup> But in the second place, in addition to this, it is proper to note also that when confusion comes upon the mind, and, like a flood, in the life of the world mounds of affairs are erected at one time,<sup>i</sup> it is impossible to sow or conceive or give birth to anything good. But when discords and attacks and the gradual invasions of monstrous<sup>j</sup> thoughts are kept off, then being dried, like the fertile and productive places of the earth, it produces virtues and excellent things.<sup>k</sup>

50. (Gen. viii. 20) Why did he build an altar, not having been ordered (to do so) ?

It was proper that acts of gratitude<sup>l</sup> to God should be (performed) without an order and without deliberate delay, to show a soul free of passions. For it was fitting that he

<sup>a</sup> τῆς καθάρσεως. Because of the double meaning of Arm. hamōrēn (=σύμπασι and ἄμα) and dēp linel (=συμβαίνει and ἐπιτήδειόν ἐστι), one may also accept Aucher's rendering, "quando vero integra fiat purgatio."

<sup>b</sup> ἀμαθίας.

<sup>c</sup> The soul.

<sup>d</sup> συναγαγείν.

<sup>e</sup> ἐκθηλύνωνται οἱ ἄρρενες λογισμοί.

<sup>f</sup> ἀρρενικαὶ γίνωνται αἱ αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>g</sup> σοφία καὶ σωφροσύνη καὶ δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἀνδρεία.

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετῇ.

<sup>i</sup> Meaning not quite clear to me ; Aucher renders, more freely, "quando confusio pervaserit intellectum ad similitudinem diluvii atque negotiis hujus mundi tamquam aggeribus contra erectis altercari inter se coeperint" ; he omits the words "in life" and adds "altercari inter se coeperint."

<sup>j</sup> Or "arrogant."

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "works"—ἔργα.

<sup>l</sup> εὐχαριστήρια.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

who had received good by the grace of God should give thanks with a willing disposition. But one who waits for a command <sup>a</sup> is ungrateful,<sup>b</sup> being compelled by necessity <sup>c</sup> to honour his benefactor.

51. (Gen. viii. 20) Why is he said to build an altar to "God," not to "the Lord" <sup>d</sup>?

Because in benefactions and on the occasion <sup>e</sup> of regeneration,<sup>f</sup> as at the creation of the world,<sup>g</sup> He assumes only His beneficent power,<sup>h</sup> by which He makes all things, and causes His kingly power <sup>i</sup> to be put aside, preferring (the former).<sup>j</sup> Similarly, also now there is the beginning of a regeneration <sup>k</sup> and He changes to His beneficent power, which is called "God." For He had set up <sup>l</sup> His kingly and sovereign power, which is called "Lord," when he brought down retribution in the form of water.

52. (Gen. viii. 20) What is the meaning of the words, "He took of the clean beasts and birds and offered whole burnt-offerings" <sup>m</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> Arm. ar karg = πρὸς τάξιν, an obvious error for πρόσταξιν: Aucher, not seeing this, renders, "ordinem."

<sup>b</sup> ἀχάριστος.

<sup>c</sup> ἀνάγκη.

<sup>d</sup> Most uncial mss. of LXX have θεῶ "God" (so also Arm. O.T.), but a good many cursives and the Coptic versions have κυρίῳ "Lord," rendering YHWH, as the Heb. here reads.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "place."

<sup>f</sup> παλιγγενεσίας.

<sup>g</sup> ἐν τῇ κοσμοποιῷ.

<sup>h</sup> τῇ εὐεργέτιδι δυνάμει, one of the two chief divine attributes (also called ποιητική), symbolized by the name θεός.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν βασιλικὴν δύναμιν, the other chief divine attribute (also called κολαστήριος), symbolized by the name κύριος.

<sup>j</sup> Meaning not quite clear to me; Aucher renders, less accurately, I think, "facit autem nomine regio dissimilato tamquam summam auctoritatem praeferente."

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "second genesis."

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "ordered"—ἔταξε vel sim.

<sup>m</sup> Arm. βοβορartουῖ = both ὀλοκάρπωμα (or ὀλοκάρπωσις) and ὀλοκαύτωμα, both of which words elsewhere in LXX render Heb. ’olāh, used here; most LXX mss. here have ὀλοκάρπωσιν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

All this is said in a deeper meaning,<sup>a</sup> both because he had received everything from God as a kindness and gift and that that which was of the genus of clean (animals) and unblemished in kind, and of the tame ones the most gentle and unblemished he might completely burn as whole burnt-offerings. For they are sacrifices<sup>b</sup> of good things and are whole and full of wholeness,<sup>c</sup> and they have the status<sup>d</sup> of fruit; and the fruit is the end<sup>e</sup> for the sake of which the plant exists. This is the literal meaning.<sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> the clean beasts and birds are the senses and the mind of the wise man,<sup>h</sup> (for) in the mind the thoughts<sup>i</sup> rove about. And it is proper to bring all these, when they have altogether become fruits, as a thank-offering<sup>j</sup> to the Father, and to offer them as immaculate and unblemished offerings<sup>k</sup> for sacrifices.<sup>l</sup>

53. (Gen. viii. 21) Why does he sacrifice to the beneficent power<sup>m</sup> of God, when the reception (of the sacrifice) is through both powers, (namely those of) Lord and God, for (Scripture) says, "the Lord God<sup>n</sup> smelled a sweet odour"?

(This is) because we who, when hope wavers, are unexpectedly saved from the evil that comes upon us, consider only the benefactions (of God), and in our joy ascribe this to the Benefactor<sup>o</sup> rather than to the Lord. But the

<sup>a</sup> πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>b</sup> θυσίαι ἢ προσφοραί.

<sup>c</sup> Meaning uncertain; Aucher renders, "integritate plenae."

<sup>d</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ τέλος.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν; but which is the literal, and which the deeper meaning is not clear.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ (ἢ ἀστείου) αἱ αἰσθήσεις καὶ ὁ νοῦς. Philo apparently means that the beasts symbolize the senses, and the birds, the mind.

<sup>i</sup> οἱ λογισμοί.

<sup>j</sup> εὐχαριστίαν.

<sup>k</sup> προσφοράς.

<sup>l</sup> πρὸς θυσίας.

<sup>m</sup> τῇ εὐεργετικῇ δυνάμει; see above, § 51.

<sup>n</sup> So LXX and Arm. O.T.; Heb. has only "The Lord" (YHWH).

<sup>o</sup> Symbolized by the name "God."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Benefactor inclines to us<sup>a</sup> with either power, Himself accepting (our sacrifice) and honouring the gratitude of the good man<sup>b</sup> lest He seem to make a halting return.<sup>c</sup> But it greatly pleases the Eternal<sup>d</sup> (to make use) of both His powers.<sup>e</sup>

*54. (Gen. viii. 21) What is the meaning of the words, "And the Lord God said, reflecting,<sup>f</sup> Never again will I curse<sup>g</sup> the earth because of the deeds of men, for the thought of man is resolutely turned toward evils from his youth. Therefore never again will I smite all living flesh as I did on another occasion"<sup>h</sup>?

The proposition<sup>i</sup> indicates repentance,<sup>j</sup> which is a passion alien to the divine power. For the dispositions of men are weak and unstable, just as their affairs are full of great uncertainty. But to God nothing is uncertain and nothing is unattainable,<sup>k</sup> for He is most firm of opinion and most stable. How then (did it happen) that with the same cause present and with His knowing from the beginning that the thought of man is resolutely turned toward evils from his youth, He first destroyed the human

<sup>a</sup> κατανεύει vel sim.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. construction is not clear; the above rendering is probably closer to the original than Aucher's rendering, "honorabiliter acceptans gratos animos."

<sup>c</sup> χωλὴν ἀπόδοσιν.

<sup>d</sup> τῷ ὄντι.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders, "sed utrique virtuti Entis gratissimum esse declarabit," and in his footnote, "vel, per utramque virtutem agere Enti valde placet."

<sup>f</sup> διανοηθεῖς, as in LXX; Heb. "said to his heart (= mind)."

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "not again will I add to curse," a Hebrew idiom taken over by the LXX.

<sup>h</sup> ἔτι, found in some LXX mss. and Syr. and Arm. O.T., is joined to the following verse in our biblical texts.

<sup>i</sup> Or "premiss"; Arm. patčar (elsewhere = πρόφασις, αἴτιον, ὄρμη, etc.) here prob. = πρότασις as in the Greek frag.

<sup>j</sup> Or "regret"—μετάνοιαν or μεταμέλειαν; the latter is found in the Greek frag.

<sup>k</sup> Or "incomprehensible"; the Greek frag. has ἀκατάληπτον.

GENESIS, BOOK II

race through the flood, but after this said that He would not again destroy (them), even though the same evils remained in their souls? Now it should be said that all such forms of words (in Scripture) are generally used <sup>a</sup> in the Law rather for learning and aid in teaching than for the nature of truth. For as there are two texts <sup>b</sup> which are found in the Legislation, one in which it is said, "Not like man (is God)," <sup>c</sup> and another in which the Eternal <sup>d</sup> is said to chastise as a man (chastises) his son, <sup>e</sup> the former (text) is the truth. For in reality God is not like man nor yet like the sun nor like heaven nor like the sense-perceptible world but (only) like God, if it is right to say even this. For that blessed and most happy One <sup>f</sup> does not admit any likeness or comparison or parable <sup>g</sup>; nay, rather He is beyond blessedness itself and happiness and whatever is more excellent and better than these. <sup>h</sup> But the second (text pertains) to teaching and exposition, <sup>i</sup> (namely) "like a man (He chastises)," for the sake of chastising us earth-born creatures in order that we may not be eternally requited with His wrath and retribution through His implacable enmity without peace. For it is enough to be resentful <sup>j</sup> and embittered this one time and to exact punish-

<sup>a</sup> So rendered on the basis of περιέχεται in the Greek frag.; Arm. əmbryneal p'akin means "are circumscribed" or "confined."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "heads"; Greek frag. κεφαλαίων.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. omits "is God," found in Greek frag. The quotation is from Num. xxiii. 19.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ Ὄν, omitted in Greek frag.

<sup>e</sup> Deut. viii. 5.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. has only μακάριον ἐκείνο.

<sup>g</sup> παραβολήν as in the Greek frag.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. has only μᾶλλον δὲ μακαριότητος αὐτῆς ὑπεράνω.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. arajnordout'ean patmout'ean lit. = "guidance-narration" prob. renders ὑφήγησεν as in the Greek frag.

<sup>j</sup> This appears to be the meaning of Arm. anazdakel in this context, with God as implied subject; usu. the verb means "be stubborn" or "disobedient"; Aucher renders, "com-moveri."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ment of sinners. But (to punish others) many times for the same cause is the act of a savage and bestial spirit. "For in-requiting one who is to be punished as is possible, I will make a fitting recollection of each proposition."<sup>a</sup>

And so, "reflecting" is properly<sup>b</sup> used of God, since (His) mind and intention are most firm, whereas our wills<sup>c</sup> are unsettled and inconstant and vacillating. Wherefore we do not properly reflect in thinking,<sup>d</sup> for reflection is the issue of the mind.<sup>e</sup> But it is impossible for the human mind to be extended and disseminated<sup>f</sup> as it is too weak<sup>g</sup> to pass very completely and effortlessly among all things.

But the words "not again will I curse the earth" are most excellently used. For it is not proper to add new curses to those already given, inasmuch as it is filled with evils. Nevertheless, though they<sup>h</sup> are endless,<sup>i</sup> inasmuch as the Father is good and kind and a lover of mankind,<sup>j</sup> He <sup>a</sup> The literal retranslation in Greek of this obscure sentence would be something like the following: ἀναποδοὺς γὰρ τοῖς ἐξεταζομένοις, ὡς δυνατόν ἐστιν, ἐκάστης προθέσεως ποιήσω τὴν πρέπουσαν μνήμην (or ἀνάμνησιν); the Arm. glossator paraphrases it as follows: "God says, whatever my judgment exacted of the several sinners, this they paid, and so now, in accordance with my first proposal, I consider mercy fitting." Possibly the original Greek read καθ' ὅσον δυνατόν ἐστιν ἐκάστω πρόθεσιν ποιήσω τῆς πρεπούσης ἀμνηστείας.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. has οὐ κυριολογεῖται; either this is a rhetorical question or the οὐ is a dittography of the case-ending of θεοῦ or οὐ was interpolated by a scribe who misunderstood Philo's meaning, which is that God's "reflecting" indicates His sureness of purpose.

<sup>c</sup> προαιρέσεις or βουλαί.

<sup>d</sup> οὐ κυρίως διανοοῦντες λογιζόμεθα.

<sup>e</sup> ἡ γὰρ διανόησις ἡ τοῦ νοῦ διέξοδος ἐστι, cf. Quod Deus Immut. 34. Without this parallel it would be difficult to render the obscure Arm. clause.

<sup>f</sup> ἐκτείνεσθαι καὶ διασπείρεσθαι.

<sup>g</sup> ἀσθενοῦντι, or "unable"—ἀδυνατοῦντι.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the evils of earth.

<sup>i</sup> Prob. ἀτελῆ; Aucher renders, "imperfecta."

<sup>j</sup> φιλόανθρωπος.

GENESIS, BOOK II

lightens these evils rather than adds to their misfortunes. But, as the proverb says, it is the same as "washing brick" or "carrying water in a net" to remove evil from the soul of man, which is stamped with its mark.

For if (the evil) exists from the beginning,<sup>a</sup> says (Scripture), it does not exist incidentally<sup>b</sup> but is engraved in (the soul) and closely fitted<sup>c</sup> to it. Moreover, since the mind<sup>d</sup> is the sovereign and ruling part of the soul,<sup>e</sup> (Scripture) adds "resolutely,"<sup>f</sup> and that which is reflected upon with resolution and care<sup>g</sup> is investigated<sup>h</sup> with accuracy.<sup>i</sup> But resolution is (turned) not toward one evil (only) but, as is clear, toward all "evils," and this (state) exists not momentarily<sup>j</sup> but "from his youth," which is all but from his very swaddling bands, as if he were to a certain extent united, and at the same time, nourished and grown, with sins.

However, He says, "Not again will I smite all living flesh," showing that He will not again destroy the whole of mankind in common<sup>k</sup> but (only) the greater part of those individuals who commit indescribable wrongs. For He does not leave evil unpunished nor does He grant it unrestraint or security,<sup>l</sup> but while showing consideration<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "first"; the Arm. differs considerably from the Greek frag. in this sentence.

<sup>b</sup> παρέργως; the Arm. words gorç ar gorçou (lit. = ἔργον πρὸς ἔργω) are prob. a gloss to explain varkaparazi = παρέργως, or an alternate rendering.

<sup>c</sup> Prob. προσῆρμοσται as in the Greek frag.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ἡγεμονικὸν καὶ κυριώτατον μέρος τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>f</sup> ἐπιμελῶς.

<sup>g</sup> σὺν ἐπιμελείᾳ καὶ φροντίδι, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>h</sup> διηρευνημένον; the Greek frag. has διηγορευμένον.

<sup>i</sup> εἰς ἀκρίβειαν, as in the Greek frag., or possibly εἰς ἀλήθειαν.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "not barely"; prob. the original was οὐκ ὀψέ καὶ μόλις as in the Greek frag.

<sup>k</sup> κατὰ κοινόν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀσφάλειαν.

<sup>m</sup> φειδόμενος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

for the (human) race because of His purpose,<sup>a</sup> He specifies <sup>b</sup> punishment by necessity <sup>c</sup> for those who sin.

55. (Gen. viii. 22) What is the meaning of the words, "Seed and harvest, cold and heat, summer and spring, by day and night <sup>d</sup> they shall not cease" ?

In the literal meaning <sup>e</sup> this indicates the permanent recurrence <sup>f</sup> of the annual seasons (and that) no longer is there to be a destruction of the earthly climates <sup>g</sup> of animals and plants, for when the seasons are destroyed,<sup>h</sup> they destroy these (creatures) also, and when they are safely preserved, they keep them safe. For in accordance with each of these (seasons) they are kept sound and are not weakened, but are wont to be produced, each in a wonderful way, and to grow with it. But nature was constituted like a harmony of contrary sounds, of low ones and high ones, just as the world (was composed) of contraries. When mortal temperaments <sup>i</sup> fully <sup>j</sup> preserve unmixed the natural order <sup>k</sup> of cold and warmth and of moisture and dryness, they are responsible <sup>l</sup> for the fact that destruction does not fall upon all earthly things. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>m</sup> seed is the beginning, and harvest is the end.<sup>n</sup> And both <sup>o</sup> the end and the beginning are the

<sup>a</sup> διὰ τὴν πρόθεσιν αὐτοῦ.                      <sup>b</sup> ὀρίζει.                      <sup>c</sup> ἀνάγκη.

<sup>d</sup> Philo follows the LXX in making "day and night" adverbial rather than part of the compound subject of the verb "cease" as in the Heb. and some ancient versions.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. lit. = ἀνάστησιν (or ἔγερσιν) τῆς διαμονῆς; Aucher renders, "continuationem durationis."

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "mixtures," prob. κράσεων; Aucher renders, "temperacionem."

<sup>h</sup> Or "corrupted"—φθείρονται.

<sup>i</sup> κράσεις.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "abundantly" or "superfluously": Aucher "apprime."

<sup>k</sup> τὴν κατὰ φύσιν τάξιν.

<sup>l</sup> αἷτιαι.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>n</sup> ἢ ἀρχή . . . καὶ τὸ τέλος.

<sup>o</sup> Aucher, amplifying, renders, "ambo concurrentes."

GENESIS, BOOK II

causes of salvation.<sup>a</sup> For each by itself is imperfect,<sup>b</sup> since the beginning requires an end, and the end looks toward the beginning. But cold and heat motivate<sup>c</sup> winter and autumn. For autumn marks an interval,<sup>d</sup> coming after the annual (crop),<sup>e</sup> and chilling the fiery (summer).<sup>f</sup> But symbolically,<sup>g</sup> in connexion with the soul, cold indicates fear,<sup>h</sup> which causes trembling and shuddering,<sup>i</sup> but heat (indicates) anger, for anger and wrath<sup>j</sup> are flamelike and fiery. For it is necessary for these too to come into being and to endure always with things that come into being and are destroyed.<sup>k</sup> For summer and spring are set apart for fruits; spring is for the ripening<sup>l</sup> of seeds, while summer is for (the ripening) of fruits and foliage.<sup>m</sup> And these are symbolically regarded as pertaining to the mind, as they bear fruits of two kinds, those which are necessary, (such as) those of the vernal season, and those which are by way of superfluity,<sup>n</sup> as in the summer. Thus, necessary are the foods which (are produced) throughout the spring from seeds as for the body,<sup>o</sup> and for the mind (what is produced) through the virtues. But those (which are) in superfluity, such as the corporeal fruits of the trees of <sup>a</sup> σωτηρίας.

<sup>b</sup> ἀτελής.

<sup>c</sup> Or "announce" or "reveal"; Arm. azdel = ἐνεργεῖν and ἀναγγέλλειν, δηλοῦν, etc.

<sup>d</sup> For Arm. bocagoyh "flamelike" (φλογώδης) we should almost certainly read bacagoyh = διάστημα ἔχων; cf. Quis Heres 165, where Philo speaks of the divider (τομεύς) of the seasons.

<sup>e</sup> "crop" is supplied from De Virtutibus 6, where Philo speaks of τὰς ἐτησίας ὀπώρας.

<sup>f</sup> θέρος is to be supplied, cf. Aucher "igneum (aestum)."

<sup>g</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. uses two words both usu. = φόβος.

<sup>i</sup> τρόμον καὶ φρίκην.

<sup>j</sup> ὀργή καὶ θυμός.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. living creatures.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "perfecting."

<sup>m</sup> Or "buds"—θαλλιῶν.

<sup>n</sup> κατὰ περιουσίαν.

<sup>o</sup> The Arm. construction is not clear to me; Aucher renders, "cibus itaque necessarius fere est pro corpore quidquid producitur in vere ex seminibus."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

summer, (bring) corporeal and external goods to souls,<sup>a</sup> for the external ones are serviceable to the body. But (the goods) of the body (are serviceable) to the soul, while those of the mind (are serviceable) to God.<sup>b</sup> Moreover,<sup>c</sup> day and night are measures of times and numbers; and time and number endure long<sup>d</sup>; and (so) day is a symbol of lucid reason,<sup>e</sup> and night of shadowy folly.<sup>f</sup>

56. (Gen. ix. 1-2) Why does (God) bless Noah and his sons by saying, "Increase and multiply and fill the earth and dominate it."<sup>g</sup> And let the terror and fear of you be upon the beasts and the birds and the reptiles and the fish, which I have given into your hands"<sup>h</sup>?

This prayer<sup>i</sup> was granted to the man (made) in the image (of God)<sup>j</sup> even at the beginning of creation<sup>k</sup> on the sixth day. For (Scripture) says,<sup>l</sup> "And God made man, in the image of God He made him, male and female He made

<sup>a</sup> This rendering, while literal, is of doubtful correctness, as is the less literal rendering of Aucher, "quotquot autem per excessum veniunt ex arboribus fructus aestate, praeter corpus animo quoque ferunt bona corporalia ut externa."

<sup>b</sup> The distinction between Arm. ogi = ψυχή (sometimes πνεῦμα) and mitk' = νοῦς is obscured in Aucher's rendering, "haec enim externa serviunt corpori, corpus autem animo, animus Deo."

<sup>c</sup> Arm. baç is prob. a printer's error for bayç.

<sup>d</sup> Prob. διαμένονσι.

<sup>e</sup> φωτοειδούς λογισμοῦ.

<sup>f</sup> σκοταίας ἀφροσύνης; for the same combination see De Plantatione 40.

<sup>g</sup> Prob. κατακυριεύσατε as in LXX; Heb. omits the last verb, but see below, where Philo quotes Gen. i. 28.

<sup>h</sup> Philo abbreviates the latter part of the biblical verse, which reads, "upon all the beasts of the earth and upon all the birds of heaven and upon all that creeps upon the earth and upon all the fish of the sea, which I have given (Heb. "which have been given") into your hands."

<sup>i</sup> Or "request"; Arm. alōtk' = εὐχή, δέησις, ἰκετία, etc.

<sup>j</sup> τῷ κατ' εἰκόνα ἀνθρώπου.

<sup>k</sup> ἐν τῇ τῆς γενέσεως ἀρχῇ.

<sup>l</sup> Gen. i. 28.

GENESIS, BOOK II

them. And God blessed them, saying, Increase and multiply and fill the earth and dominate it, and rule over the fish and the birds and the reptiles of the earth." <sup>a</sup> But has it not indeed been clearly shown through these words that He considers Noah, who became, as it were, the beginning of a second genesis of man, of equal honour with him who was first made in (His) image? And so He granted rule over earthly creatures in equal measure <sup>b</sup> to the former and the latter. And it should be carefully noted that (Scripture) shows him who in the flood was made righteous king <sup>c</sup> of earthly creatures to have been equal in honour not with the moulded and earthy man <sup>d</sup> but with him who was (made) in the form and likeness of the truly incorporeal Being <sup>e</sup>; and to him (Noah) He also gives authority, appointing as king not the moulded man but him who was (made) in the likeness and form (of God), Who <sup>f</sup> is incorporeal. Wherefore the genesis of him who was incorporeal in form, was shown to be on the sixth day, in accordance with the perfect number <sup>g</sup> six. But the moulded man (was created) after the completion of the world and after the days <sup>h</sup> of the genesis of all creatures, on the seventh day, <sup>i</sup> for then at the very last he was moulded into an earthly statue. <sup>j</sup> And so, after the days of genesis,

<sup>a</sup> Here again Philo slightly abbreviates Scripture.

<sup>b</sup> κατ' ἰσότητα. <sup>c</sup> ὃς καθίστατο ὁ δίκαιος βασιλεύς.

<sup>d</sup> τῷ πλαστῷ καὶ γήινῳ, cf. QG i. 4, Leg. All. i. 31 et al.

<sup>e</sup> κατὰ τὴν ἰδέαν καὶ τὴν εἰκόνα τοῦ ὄντως ἀσωμάτου ὄντος.

<sup>f</sup> The antecedent of "who" is grammatically "him who was made," but ought rather to be "God."

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ τὸν τέλειον ἀριθμὸν.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher omits "the days of."

<sup>i</sup> Cf. Louis Ginzberg, Legends of the Jews, vol. v. p. 79, "This does not harmonize with his general view of creation, according to which the former [the ideal man] is of a timeless state (cf. e.g. Legum Alleg. 2. 4), and it appears that he tried to fit a Haggadah [homiletic interpretation] into his system but did not succeed."

<sup>j</sup> εἰς γεώδη ἀνδριάντα, cf. e.g. De Virtutibus 203 χερσὶ μὲν θείαις εἰς ἀνδριάντα τὸν σωματοειδῆ τυπωθείς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

on the seventh day of the world, (Scripture) says,<sup>a</sup> " For God <sup>b</sup> had not caused it to rain on the earth, and there was no man who should cultivate the earth "; then (it says),<sup>c</sup> " God moulded man, dust from the earth, and breathed into his face the breath of life, and the man became a living soul." And so, by the literal bearing (of Scripture) it has been shown how the beginning of the second genesis of the human race was worthy of the same kingship as the man (made) in the likeness and form (of God).<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> it is to be interpreted as follows. He desires that the souls of intelligent men increase in greatness and multitude (and) in the form <sup>f</sup> of virtues, and fill the mind with its form, as though it were the earth, leaving no part empty and void for follies <sup>g</sup>; and that they should dominate and rule over the earthy body and its senses, and strike <sup>h</sup> terror and fear into beasts, which is the exercise <sup>i</sup> of the will against evil, for evil is untamed and savage.<sup>j</sup> And (he wishes that they should rule) over the birds, (that is) those who are lightly lifted up in thought, those who are (filled) with vain and empty arrogance, (and) having been previously armed,<sup>k</sup> cause great harm, not being restrained by fear. Moreover, (He wishes that they should rule over) the reptiles, which are a symbol of poisonous passions <sup>l</sup>; for through

<sup>a</sup> Gen. ii. 5. Philo comments upon the first part of the verse above in QG i. 2.

<sup>b</sup> So most mss. of LXX; Heb. and Arm. O.T. have " the Lord God." <sup>c</sup> Gen. ii. 7.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher's rendering is less intelligible to me than the Arm.; he gives " quomodo ergo eidem regno dignus efficitur secundum imaginem formati hominis istud principium secundae facturae hominum indicatum fuit juxta litteram referentem." <sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν. <sup>f</sup> εἶδει.

<sup>g</sup> ἀφροσυνῶν.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. " make " or " effect."

<sup>i</sup> Prob. ἐπιτήδευσις.

<sup>j</sup> ἀνοικεία καὶ ἀγρία.

<sup>k</sup> πρότερον ἄπλισμένοι; Aucher connects the participle with the preceding phrase, " et inani superbia iam armata." There are syntactical difficulties in both renderings.

<sup>l</sup> σύμβολον τῶν ἰοβόλων παθῶν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

every soul sense-pleasures and desires and grief and fear<sup>a</sup> creep, stabbing and piercing and wounding. And by the fish I understand<sup>b</sup> those who eagerly welcome a moist and fluid life<sup>c</sup> but not one that is continent, healthy and lasting.<sup>d</sup>

57. (Gen. ix. 3) Why does (Scripture) say, "Every reptile<sup>e</sup> that lives shall be to you for food"?

The nature of reptiles is twofold. One is poisonous, and the other is tame.<sup>f</sup> Poisonous are those serpents which in place of feet use the belly and breast to crawl along; and tame are those which have legs<sup>g</sup> above their feet. This is the literal meaning.<sup>h</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> the passions<sup>j</sup> resemble unclean reptiles, while joy<sup>k</sup> (resembles) clean (reptiles). For alongside sensual pleasures there is the passion of joy.<sup>l</sup> And alongside the desire for sensual pleasure there is reflection.<sup>m</sup> And alongside grief there is remorse and constraint.<sup>n</sup> And alongside desire<sup>o</sup> there is caution.<sup>p</sup> Thus, these passions threaten souls with death and murder, whereas joys are truly living, as He Himself has shown in allegorizing,<sup>q</sup> and are the causes<sup>r</sup> of life for those who possess them.

<sup>a</sup> ἡδοναὶ καὶ ἡμεροὶ καὶ λύπη καὶ φόβος.

<sup>b</sup> λέγω.

<sup>c</sup> ὑγρὸν καὶ ῥοώδη βίον.

<sup>d</sup> ἐγκρατῆ καὶ ὑγιεινὸν καὶ διαμένοντα.

<sup>e</sup> ἔρπετόν.

<sup>f</sup> ἰοβόλος . . . ἡμερος (οἱ οἰκείος).

<sup>g</sup> σκέλος οἱ κνήμην.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> τὰ πάθη.

<sup>k</sup> χαρά οἱ εὐφροσύνη.

<sup>l</sup> In each case a good passion is contrasted with an evil one; Arm. αἴ here = παρά; Aucher's rendering "apud" here and below is misleading.

<sup>m</sup> Possibly Philo here contrasts ἐνθύμημα and ἐπιθυμία.

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "biting" (or "striking") and contraction"; Aucher renders, "punctio et compunctio."

<sup>o</sup> πόθον.

<sup>p</sup> εὐλάβεια.

<sup>q</sup> ἀλληγορῶν.

<sup>r</sup> αἱ αἰτίαι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

58. (Gen. ix. 3) What is the meaning of the words, "As the herbs of fodder <sup>a</sup> I have given you all things" ?

Some say that through this (statement) "as the herbs of fodder I have given you all things" the eating of meat is enjoined.<sup>b</sup> But though this (interpretation) also is admissible, I myself believe that the legislation <sup>c</sup> indicates that above all the use of herbs is necessary, and that it implies other additions <sup>d</sup> in the form of herbs without legislating. But now they <sup>e</sup> are customary not (only) among a chosen race of men nor among those who are desirous of wisdom,<sup>f</sup> by whom continence of habit <sup>g</sup> is honoured, but among all men, all of whom at once <sup>h</sup> it is impossible to keep from eating meat. But perhaps the passage <sup>i</sup> is not about food but about authority<sup>j</sup>; for not everything that is an herb is edible nor is the food of all living creatures <sup>k</sup> sure and safe. For He saw the poisonous and death-bringing (creatures) which are also (found) among all of them. And so it may be that what (Scripture) means is the following, that irrational creatures <sup>l</sup> are to be given over to, and made obedient to man, just as we sow herbs and tend them by agriculture.

*59. (Gen. ix. 4) What is the meaning of the words, "Flesh in the blood of the life you shall not eat" <sup>m</sup> ?

(Scripture) seems to indicate through these (words) that

<sup>a</sup> ὡς λάχανα χόρτον, as in LXX; Heb. "as herbs of grass."

<sup>b</sup> Prob. χρηματίζεται, i.e. "oracularly spoken."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ νομοθετεῖν.

<sup>d</sup> Apparently meaning other kinds of food.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. herbs.

<sup>f</sup> σοφίας.

<sup>g</sup> ἐγκράτεια τῶν ἐθῶν.

<sup>h</sup> ὁμοῦ or κοινῶς.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>j</sup> περὶ ἀρχῆς or ἐξουσίας; this is explained in the last sentence of the section.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. food derived from living creatures.

<sup>l</sup> ἄλογα ζῶα.

<sup>m</sup> LXX κρέας ἐν αἵματι ψυχῆς οὐ φάγεσθε; Heb. "flesh with its soul (= life), its blood you shall not eat."

GENESIS, BOOK II

the blood is the substance of the soul,<sup>a</sup> but of the sense-perceptive and vital soul,<sup>b</sup> not of that which is called (soul) katexochen, (namely) that which is rational and intelligent.<sup>c</sup> For there are three parts of the soul: one is nutritive, another is sense-perceptive, and the third is rational.<sup>d</sup> Now the divine spirit<sup>e</sup> is the substance of the rational (part), according to the theologian,<sup>f</sup> for in (the account of) the creation of the world, he says,<sup>g</sup> "He breathed the breath of life into his face" (as) his cause.<sup>h</sup> But blood is the substance of the sense-perceptive and vital (soul), for he says in another place,<sup>i</sup> "The soul<sup>j</sup> of all flesh is its blood." Very properly does (Scripture) say that the blood is the soul of flesh. And in the flesh are sense-perception and passion but not mind or reflection.<sup>k</sup> Moreover, (the expression) "in the blood of the life"<sup>l</sup> indicates that soul is one thing, and blood another, so that the substance of the soul is truly and infallibly<sup>m</sup> spirit.<sup>n</sup> The spirit,<sup>o</sup> however,

<sup>a</sup> ἡ τῆς ψυχῆς οὐσία, as in Greek frag.

<sup>b</sup> τῆς αἰσθητικῆς καὶ ζωτικῆς ψυχῆς; the second adjective is omitted in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> λογικὴ καὶ νοερά, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>d</sup> θρεπτικόν . . . αἰσθητικόν . . . λογικόν, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ θεῖον πνεῦμα; with the Greek frag. we must emend Arm. ogouy = πνεύματος to ogì = πνεῦμα.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. Moses.

<sup>g</sup> Gen. ii. 7, cf. QG i. 5.

<sup>h</sup> The last phrase (one word in Arm.) precedes the words "the breath of life," as though it were part of the biblical text.

<sup>i</sup> Lev. xvii. 14.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. life.

<sup>k</sup> ἡ αἴσθησις καὶ τὸ πάθος, οὐχ ὁ νοῦς καὶ ὁ λογισμός, as in Greek frag.

<sup>l</sup> ἐν αἵματι ψυχῆς, as in Greek frag. (after LXX); Aucher ineptly renders, "per spiritum sanguinis."

<sup>m</sup> ἀληθῶς καὶ ἀψευδῶς; the Greek frag. has only ἀψευδῶς.

<sup>n</sup> πνεῦμα, as the Greek frag. shows. Arm. ogì and hogì are phonetic alternants, each of which renders both ψυχή and πνεῦμα; here apparently the Arm. translator artificially equates ogì with ψυχή and hogì with πνεῦμα.

<sup>o</sup> The Greek frag. does not repeat the word πνεῦμα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

does not occupy any place by itself alone without the blood but is carried along <sup>a</sup> and mixed together <sup>b</sup> with the blood. For the arteries, <sup>c</sup> the vessels of breath, contain not only air by itself, unmixed and pure, but also blood, though perhaps a small amount. For there are two kinds of vessels, veins and arteries <sup>d</sup>; the veins have more blood than breath whereas the arteries have more breath than blood, but the mixture in both kinds of vessel is differentiated by the greater or less (amount of blood and breath). This is the literal meaning. <sup>e</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>f</sup> (Scripture) calls "blood of the life" its hot and fiery virtue <sup>g</sup> (or) uprightness. <sup>h</sup> And he who is filled with this wisdom despises all food and all sensual pleasure, <sup>i</sup> which are of the belly and of the parts below the belly. <sup>j</sup> For one who is dissolute and sportive <sup>k</sup> like the wind, or hide-bound <sup>l</sup> by sloth and a soft life, <sup>m</sup> does nothing but fall on his belly like a reptile on the ground, and gives himself up to licking what is on the ground, and ends his life without tasting the heavenly food which wisdom-loving souls obtain.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "woven in and carried," probably a double rendering of ἐμφέρεσθαι, found in the Greek frag.

<sup>b</sup> Two Arm. synonyms prob. render the single Greek verb συγκεκράσθαι, found in the Greek frag. (which ends at this point).

<sup>c</sup> αἱ ἀρτηρίαι, here used in the sense of respiratory vessels, cf. De Praemiis 144 τοῦ μὲν ἐν φλεβῖν αἵματος . . . τοῦ δ' ἐν ἀρτηρίαις πνεύματος.

<sup>d</sup> φλέβες καὶ ἀρτηρίαι.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>h</sup> Or "rising"; Arm. kangnout' iun = ἀνόρθωσις, ἔγερσις, ἀνάστασις; Aucher renders, "fortitudinem" and adds, in a footnote, "vox anceps, fortitudo a nobis exposita, poterat etiam verti vigor vel in vigore aut rectitudinem."

<sup>i</sup> ἡδονῆς.

<sup>j</sup> Cf. QG i. 12 (above, p. 8).

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "enjoying himself"—prob. ἡδόμενος.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "hardened" or "frozen."

<sup>m</sup> ὑγρῷ βίῳ, cf. De Vita Cont. 47 ὑγρός . . . καὶ ἄσωτος βίος ἅπασιν ἐπίβουλος; Aucher's "vitamque humidam" misses the metaphorical sense of the adjective.

GENESIS, BOOK II

60. (Gen. ix. 5) What is the meaning of the words, " I will require your blood of your souls, of all living creatures, and from the hand of man of his brother " <sup>a</sup> ?

There are two classes <sup>b</sup> of preyers, <sup>c</sup> one (consisting) of beasts, and the other of men. But beasts do rather little harm because they have no familiarity <sup>d</sup> with those whom they seek to prey on, and especially because they are not in authority but prey upon those who have authority. <sup>e</sup> And (Scripture) calls " brothers " those men who plot mischief, <sup>f</sup> demonstrating three things. One, that all we men are kinsmen and brothers, <sup>g</sup> being related by the possession of an ancient kinship, <sup>h</sup> since we receive the lot <sup>i</sup> of the rational nature <sup>j</sup> from <sup>k</sup> one mother. The second is that nearly all great quarrels and plots occur between those who are blood-relatives, especially brothers, whether <sup>a</sup> The above is a literal translation of Philo's abbreviated citation of the biblical verse, which is awkwardly phrased both in Heb. and LXX. The Heb. reads, " and also your blood as to your souls (i.e. your life-blood) I will require from the hand of every living creature, I will require it (sic), and from the hand of man, from the hand of man his brother (i.e. every man's brother) I will require the soul (i.e. life) of the man "; LXX has καὶ γὰρ τὸ ὑμέτερον αἷμα τῶν ψυχῶν ὑμῶν ἐκζητήσω ἐκ χειρὸς πάντων τῶν θηρίων ἐκζητήσω αὐτό, καὶ ἐκ χειρὸς ἀνθρώπου ἀδελφοῦ ἐκζητήσω τὴν ψυχὴν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου.

<sup>b</sup> τάξεις ἢ τάγματα.

<sup>c</sup> ἐπιβούλων.

<sup>d</sup> οἰκειότητα.

<sup>e</sup> The two verbs are in the sing. but probably reflect Greek usage of sing. verb with neut. pl. subject (θηρία or ζῶα); Aucher renders, " maxime quod non sub principatu cadunt sed principes demoliuntur," and remarks in a footnote, " ubi subintelligitur natura bestiarum, quamquam Gloss. voluerit intelligi hominem." The Arm. glossator paraphrases, " Man is not under the power (of others ?) but the beasts fear him as their ruler."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. " plotters " or " cheaters " ; Aucher renders, " occisores."

<sup>g</sup> συγγενεῖς καὶ ἀδελφοί.

<sup>h</sup> κατὰ ἄνω συγγενείας σχέσιν ὠκείωμένοι.

<sup>i</sup> κλήρον.

<sup>j</sup> τῆς λογικῆς φύσεως.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. " of " (gen. case).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

because of inheritance or because of family honour.<sup>a</sup> For family strife is even worse than that of strangers,<sup>b</sup> since (in the former) they quarrel with great knowledge.<sup>c</sup> In truth those are (like ?) genuine brothers<sup>d</sup> who are skilled in knowledge<sup>e</sup> of what attack<sup>f</sup> is to be used in battle.<sup>g</sup>

And third, it seems to me, (Scripture) applies the name of "brothers" to the unrelenting and implacable punishment of homicides in order that they may suffer without mercy for what they have done, for they have slain, not strangers but their own true brothers.<sup>h</sup> And most excellently<sup>i</sup> does (Scripture) say that God is the inspector<sup>j</sup> and overseer<sup>k</sup> of those who are slain by men. For even if (some) men despise and belittle the carrying out of justice,<sup>l</sup> let these men not be carefree and think to escape and be safe though they are impure and savage, but let them know that they have already been apprehended in a great assize,<sup>m</sup> in the divine court of justice set up for the retributive punishment<sup>n</sup> of savage men on behalf of those who have suffered unjust and undeserving attacks.<sup>o</sup> This is the literal meaning.<sup>p</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>q</sup> (Scripture) says that the beneficent, good, philanthropic and only Saviour<sup>r</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Or "rights of birth" (i.e. primogeniture and the like).

<sup>b</sup> ξένων or ἄλλοτριῶν.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. of the weaknesses of their opponents.

<sup>d</sup> γνήσιοι ἀδελφοί (or ἀδελφῶν ?).

<sup>e</sup> ἔμπειροι.

<sup>f</sup> ὄρμη.

<sup>g</sup> The construction of this sentence is not clear to me ; a demonstrative pron. is used as the subject, and the word "brothers" is in the gen.-abl.-dat. case for a reason that escapes me ; Aucher renders, more smoothly but with questionable accuracy, "fratres vere ex natura genuini, satis conscii," etc.

<sup>h</sup> τοὺς γνησίους ἀδελφούς.

<sup>i</sup> παγκάλως.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. aycelou and verakazou are prob. a double rendering of ἐπίσκοπος.

<sup>k</sup> ἔφορος ; the meaning is, of course, that God is the observer of the crime.

<sup>l</sup> δίκην.

<sup>m</sup> δικαστήριον.

<sup>n</sup> ἐκδίκησιν.

<sup>o</sup> Lit. "experiences."

<sup>p</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>q</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>r</sup> ὁ εὐμενὴς καὶ ἀγαθὸς καὶ φιλόανθρωπος καὶ μόνος σωτήρ.

GENESIS, BOOK II

does not overlook <sup>a</sup> the worth of the purity of the soul which can be saved from unending and unbearable corruption, but drives off and scatters all the enemies that surround it, (namely) the beasts and the men (called) brothers. For symbolically those are beasts who act savagely and threaten (others) with wicked murder. But men and brothers (Scripture symbolically calls) the various thoughts <sup>b</sup> and words <sup>c</sup> which are heard when expressed <sup>d</sup> by the tongue and mouth, for they are related <sup>e</sup>; and therefore they bring insurmountable misfortune, omitting no word or deed that results in misery.

61. (Gen. ix. 6) What is the meaning of the words, "He who sheds the blood of a man, in return for his blood he shall be shed" <sup>f</sup>?

There is no error in this text <sup>g</sup> but rather a sign of emphasis, <sup>h</sup> for, says (Scripture), he himself shall be shed like blood who sheds blood; for that which is shed flows out and is absorbed and does not have the power of consistency. <sup>i</sup> And by this (Scripture) indicates <sup>j</sup> that the souls of those who act impiously <sup>k</sup> imitate the mortal body in being corrupted, in so far as each of them is wont to seem <sup>a</sup> οὐ παρορᾷ.

<sup>c</sup> τοὺς λόγους.

<sup>e</sup> συγγενεῖς.

<sup>b</sup> τοὺς λογισμοὺς.

<sup>d</sup> κατὰ προφορὰν ἀκούονται.

<sup>f</sup> Philo follows the LXX, which reads ὁ ἐκχέων αἷμα ἀνθρώπου ἀντὶ τοῦ αἵματος αὐτοῦ ἐκχυθήσεται. The Heb. reads more intelligibly "He who sheds the blood of a man, by a man his blood shall be shed." The Arm. O.T. combines the two texts, reading "He who sheds the blood of a man, in return for his blood, his (i.e. the slayer's) blood shall be shed."

<sup>g</sup> Prob. ἐξηγήσει, though Arm. meknout' iun also renders ἐρμηγεία.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. erewoyt' usu. = ἐπιφάνεια or φαντασία, neither of which fits the context; prob. the original had ἐμφάσεως, cf. the Ambrosian paraphrase (cited by Aucher), "sed emphasis est." Aucher himself renders, "majoris declarationis."

<sup>i</sup> δύναμιν συστάσεως (or οὐσίας).

<sup>j</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>k</sup> τῶν ἀνοσιουργῶν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

to suffer corruption.<sup>a</sup> For the body is dissolved <sup>b</sup> into those (parts) out of which it was mixed and compounded,<sup>c</sup> and is again resolved into its original elements.<sup>d</sup> But the cruel<sup>e</sup> and labouring<sup>f</sup> soul is tossed about and overwhelmed by its intemperate way of life<sup>g</sup> and by the evils with which it has grown up,<sup>h</sup> (which are) in a certain sense its members<sup>i</sup> and grow together with it.<sup>j</sup>

*62. (Gen. ix. 6) Why does (Scripture) say, as if (speaking) of another God, "in the image of God He made man" and not "in His own image"<sup>k</sup>?

Most excellently and veraciously<sup>l</sup> this oracle was given by God.<sup>m</sup> For nothing mortal can be made in the likeness of the most high One and Father of the universe but (only) in that of the second God, who is His Logos.<sup>n</sup> For it was

<sup>a</sup> πέφυκε δοκεῖν (or ὀραῖσθαι) φθορὰν ἐνδέχεσθαι; Aucher renders more freely and with omission of one infinitive, "quatenus singulis soleat corruptia supervenire."

<sup>b</sup> καταλύεται.

<sup>c</sup> Prob. συγχεόμενον πέφυρται.

<sup>d</sup> ἀναστοιχειοῦται.

<sup>e</sup> Or "terrible"; Arm. džndak = δεινός, χαλεπός, etc.

<sup>f</sup> Apparently the Arm. translator took μοχθηρά or πονηρά in the sense of "labouring" rather than "wicked."

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. v.ll. do not affect the sense.

<sup>h</sup> συντρόφων κακῶν, cf. De Virtutibus 26 δειλία . . . ἢ δ' ἐστὶ κακὸν σύντροφον.

<sup>i</sup> <τούτων> τρόπον τινὰ μελῶν αὐτῆς ὄντων; i.e. the evils are parts of the soul somewhat as limbs are parts of the body.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher's rendering of this clause is unnecessarily obscure, "una cum illa et ipsa mala connutrita idem pati solita sunt ad modum partium membrorum."

<sup>k</sup> Philo asks the natural question, why does God refer to Himself in the third person? The Arm. here differs from the LXX and the Greek frag. (preserved by Eusebius) as well as from the Arm. O.T. in having the verb "made" in the 3rd pers. instead of the 1st.

<sup>l</sup> παγκάλως καὶ ἀψευδῶς; the Greek frag. has παγκάλως καὶ σοφῶς.

<sup>m</sup> Prob. κεχρησµώδηται, as in Greek frag.

<sup>n</sup> πρὸς τὸν δεῦτερον θεόν, ὃς ἐστὶν ἐκείνου λόγος, as in Greek frag.

GENESIS, BOOK II

right that the rational (part) of the human soul should be formed as an impression <sup>a</sup> by the divine Logos, since the pre-Logos God <sup>b</sup> is superior to every rational nature.<sup>c</sup> But He who is above the Logos (and) exists in the best and in a special form—what thing that comes into being can rightfully bear His likeness? <sup>d</sup> Moreover, Scripture wishes also to show that God most justly avenges the virtuous and decent men because they have a certain kinship <sup>e</sup> with His Logos, of which the human mind <sup>f</sup> is a likeness and image.<sup>g</sup>

63. (Gen. ix. 11) <sup>h</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "There shall not again <sup>i</sup> be a flood to destroy the whole earth"?

Through this last (statement Scripture) shows us clearly <sup>j</sup> that there may be <sup>k</sup> many floods but not such a one as will be able to inundate the whole earth. This is the literal meaning.<sup>l</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>m</sup> it is the divine grace <sup>n</sup> which, though it does not aid all the parts of the soul in all the virtues,<sup>o</sup> nevertheless does adorn <sup>p</sup> some (of them) in some respects. For so too, though one may not be able to be vigorous <sup>q</sup> in all his body, nevertheless that which he can do to achieve vigour he should practise with

<sup>a</sup> Prob. σχηματίζεσθαι (or χαραχθῆναι, as in Greek frag.) τύπον.

<sup>b</sup> ὁ πρὸ τοῦ λόγου θεός, as in Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> One Arm. ms. reads πανλογικὴ φύσις for πᾶσα λογικὴ φύσις; the latter is found in Greek frag.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends with this sentence) reads slightly differently, having the conclusion in a negative rather than interrogative form.

<sup>e</sup> οἰκειότητα.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ τοῦ ἀνθρώπου νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> ὁμοίωσις καὶ εἰκῶν.

<sup>h</sup> Philo prob. omits comment on Gen. ix. 7-10, because these verses are largely repetitions of earlier ones.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "no longer," as in LXX οὐκ ἔσται ἔτι.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "face to face." <sup>k</sup> Or "will be."

<sup>l</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>m</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν. <sup>n</sup> ἡ θεία χάρις.

<sup>o</sup> οὐκ ὠφελεῖ πάντα τῆς ψυχῆς μέρη κατὰ πάσας ἀρετάς.

<sup>p</sup> κοσμεῖ.

<sup>q</sup> θάλλειν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

all care (and) diligence. Nor, if one is too weak to correct his way of life completely, should he despair of those things of which he is capable and which he can achieve. For in so far as one does not work in accordance with the power <sup>a</sup> which every one has, he is a slacker <sup>b</sup> and, at the same time, an ingrate. He is a slacker in being sluggish, and an ingrate in that, having received an excellent start,<sup>c</sup> he opposes Being.<sup>d</sup>

*64. (Gen. ix. 13-17) Why, as a sign that there will not be a flood on all the earth, does He speak of placing His bow <sup>e</sup> in the clouds ?

Some suppose that this means that bow which by some is called the rainbow,<sup>f</sup> since from its form they take it to be a reliable <sup>g</sup> symbol for the rainbow. I, however, do not find this soundly <sup>h</sup> argued. In the first place, this bow should have its own special nature and substance,<sup>i</sup> since it is called the bow of God, for He says, "my bow I will place." And to belong to God and to be placed (means) that it is not non-existent.<sup>j</sup> But the rainbow does not have a special separate nature by itself but is an appearance <sup>k</sup> of the sun's rays in moist clouds, and all appearances

<sup>a</sup> τὴν δύναμιν.

<sup>b</sup> δειλός or νωθής.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. patčar (here used in pl.) usu. = αἰτία, sometimes = πρότασις or πρόφασις. In the present passage it seems to mean a man's natural endowment from God ; Aucher renders "mediis."

<sup>d</sup> Apparently God, ὁ Ὄν, is meant.

<sup>e</sup> τόξον, as in LXX.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "girdle of Aramazd (= Zeus)"; the Greek probably had ἶριν ; the following word for "rainbow" also = ἶρις.

<sup>g</sup> Or "accurate" or "true" ; Arm. hastatoun = βέβαιος, ἀληθής, ἀκριβής, etc. ; Aucher renders, "constantem."

<sup>h</sup> ὑγιῶς.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν ἰδίαν φύσιν καὶ οὐσίαν.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. anē and angoy are prob. a double rendering of ἀνύπαρκτον.

<sup>k</sup> φαντασία or φαινόμενον.

GENESIS, BOOK II

are non-existent and immaterial. And evidence <sup>a</sup> (of this is that) the rainbow never appears at night, although there are clouds (then). In the second place, moreover, it must be said that even by day, when the clouds are overshadowed, the rainbow never appears earlier. <sup>b</sup> But it is necessary to speak without falsehood also of the other things which the legislator <sup>c</sup> (says, namely), "my bow I will place in the clouds." <sup>d</sup> For, behold, while there are clouds there is no appearance of a rainbow. And (Scripture) says that upon the gathering of the clouds the bow will appear in the clouds. For many times when there is a gathering of the clouds, and the air is overshadowed and dense, there is nowhere an appearance of a rainbow. But perhaps the theologian <sup>e</sup> indicates something else by the bow, (namely that) in the laxness and force of earthly things <sup>f</sup> there will not take place a dissolution by their being completely loosened to (the point of) incongruity <sup>g</sup> nor (will there be) force up to (the point of) reaching a break. <sup>h</sup> But either power is determined by fixed measures. <sup>i</sup> For the great flood came about through a break <sup>j</sup> as (Scripture) itself

<sup>a</sup> πίστις.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. before the sun comes out.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ νομοθέτης.

<sup>d</sup> In this section the Arm. uses indifferently the sing. and pl. forms of "cloud."

<sup>e</sup> ὁ θεολόγος, i.e. Moses.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. reads more intelligibly τούτεστιν ἄνεσιν καὶ ἐπίτασιν τῶν ἐπιγείων; Aucher takes the nouns in a moral sense, rendering, "in ipsa videlicet tum indulgentia tum acerbitate erga terrestres."

<sup>g</sup> This is reasonably close to the text of the Greek frag. μήτε τῆς ἀνέσεως εἰς ἐκλυσιν ὑφιεμένης παντελῆ καὶ ἀναρμωσίαν; Aucher renders the Arm. somewhat freely, "nec ultimam dissolutionem futuram esse ad modum (arcus) nimis mollis et inepti."

<sup>h</sup> This again is close to the text of the Greek frag. μήτε τῆς ἐπίτάσεως ἄχρι ῥήξεως ἐπιτεινομένης.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. closely agrees with the Greek frag. ἀλλὰ μέτροις ὀρισμένοις ἐκατέρας δυνάμεως σταθμηθείσης.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. ραxαmamb παταxαmamb is a double rendering of ῥήξει.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

confesses, saying,<sup>a</sup> "the fountains of the abyss broke forth,"<sup>b</sup> but not with any particular (degree of) violence.<sup>c</sup> Second, the bow is not a weapon but an instrument of a weapon, an arrow which pierces; and the arrow released by the bow reaches a long way from a distance,<sup>d</sup> while there is no effect on that which is close-by and remains near.<sup>e</sup> This is a sign that never again will the whole earth be flooded, for no arrow reaches every place but only the place at a distance.<sup>f</sup> Thus the bow is symbolically the invisible power of God,<sup>g</sup> which is in the air. And this (air) is thinned out when it is separated in good weather,<sup>h</sup> and is condensed when there are clouds. It<sup>i</sup> does not permit the clouds to turn wholly into water, taking care that a flood shall not again . . .<sup>j</sup> the earth, for it manages and directs<sup>k</sup> the density of the air, which is likely at that time to be especially <sup>a</sup> Arm. lit. = ὁμολογεῖ, λέγων; Greek frag. has only φησίν.

<sup>b</sup> Gen. vii. 11, see above, QG ii. 18.

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. corresponds pretty closely with the Greek frag. οὐκ ἐπιτάσει ποσῆ τινι; Wendland was perhaps influenced by Aucher's rendering "non tamen vehementia sine mensura" in conjecturing ἐπιτάσει περιττῆ.

<sup>d</sup> "A long way" (lit. "part") has no parallel in the Greek frag.; Aucher omits "from a distance," which corresponds to τοῦ πόρρω in the Greek frag.; probably the Arm. is merely a double rendering of the latter.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. on the bow and the person who uses it.

<sup>f</sup> This differs from the Greek frag., which has οὕτως οὖν, φησίν, οὐ πάντες κατακλυσθήσονται, κὰν τοῦτό τις ὑπομένειν συμβῆ. For some of the remainder of this section there are two Greek parallels, one from Catena Lipsiensis, the other from Procopius.

<sup>g</sup> θεοῦ δύναμις ἀόρατος.

<sup>h</sup> This is probably an awkward rendering of some such text as that of Cat. Lips. ἀνεμῆν κατὰ τὰς αἰθρίας.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. the divine power.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. verb yizdil (v.l. yezdil) is unknown to the Arm. lexicons; the Arm. translator, however, must have had before him a text much like that of Cat. Lips. τῷ μὴ γενέσθαι καθόλου κατακλυσμόν.

<sup>k</sup> Prob. κυβερνᾷ καὶ ἡνιοχεῖ as in Cat. Lips.

GENESIS, BOOK II

refractory and insolent because of a repletion of satiety,<sup>a</sup> since when there are clouds, it shows itself to be full, dripping and sated.

*65. (Gen. ix. 18-19) Why does (Scripture) in mentioning the sons of the righteous man,<sup>b</sup> Shem, Ham and Japheth, tell of the genealogy of the middle one only, saying, "Ham was the father of Canaan," and after this add, "these (were) the three sons of Noah" ?

After first mentioning four (persons), Noah and his sons, it says that three were . . .<sup>c</sup> Since the offspring<sup>d</sup> was similar in character to the father who begot him, it reckoned both as one (person), so that they are four in number but three in power.<sup>e</sup> But he<sup>f</sup> now speaks of only the middle generation in Scripture because later on the righteous man will speak of his case.<sup>g</sup> For though he was indeed his father,<sup>h</sup> he did not rebuke the father and did not

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. agrees closely with Cat. Lips. (which ends here), ἀπαυχενίζειν καὶ ἐνυβρίζειν διὰ πλησμονῆς κόρου.

<sup>b</sup> Noah.

<sup>c</sup> The word bnaxratakan is not found in the Arm. lexicons. It is a compound of boun "nature" and xratakan "moral," "instructive" from xrat = παιδεία, νουθέτησις, ἐπιστήμη (also τάξις). What Greek compound it renders is difficult to say. Possibly it means something like "in a natural moral order." Aucher renders, "morigeratos" and in a footnote adds, "vel, pro admonendis morigeratis, vel, eos qui morum indicio fuere": he then quotes the Arm. glossator, who writes, "the three sons were bnaxrat, since it [Scripture] has already called Shem good, Ham evil, and Japheth neither good nor evil."

<sup>d</sup> Canaan.

<sup>e</sup> Or "potentially"—δυνάμει; Aucher has "virtute."

<sup>f</sup> Moses.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. Noah will later on (in Gen. ix. 25, cf. below, § 75) curse Ham's son Canaan because of Ham's disrespect for him (Noah).

<sup>h</sup> Meaning that Ham was father of Canaan.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

give the progenitor a share of that which he thought it right for the son to share.<sup>a</sup> In the second place, it may be that (Scripture) foretells to those who are able to see from afar what is distant with the sharp-sighted eyes of the mind that He will take away the land of the Canaanites after many generations and give it to the chosen and god-beloved race.<sup>b</sup> And so (Scripture) wishes to show that Canaan, the ruler and inhabitant of that country, practised peculiar evils of his own, as well as those of his father, so that from both sides his ignobility and low-born alienness<sup>c</sup> are shown. This is the literal meaning.<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> (Scripture) does not say that Canaan was son to Ham but uses a special expression,<sup>f</sup> saying that "Ham was the father of Canaan," for such a character is always the father of such thoughts.<sup>g</sup> This is shown by the interpretations of their names, for when they are rendered from one (language) into the other,<sup>h</sup> "Ham" is "heat" or "hot,"<sup>i</sup> while "Canaan" is "merchant"<sup>j</sup> or "media-

<sup>a</sup> Apparently this means that Noah did not curse Ham as he did curse Ham's son Canaan. The Greek frag. from Procopius has a different sense (the text is given in Appendix A), namely that he (Ham) did not respect (οὐκ ἐτίμησεν; Arm. oč sasteac = οὐκ ἐπετίμησεν) his father (Noah), and did not give him that portion of respect which he (Noah) thought it right to receive from his son.

<sup>b</sup> τῶ ἐκλεκτῶ καὶ θεοφιλεῖ γένει.

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. lit. = ἀνελευθερία καὶ ἀπαλλοτριώσις (or προγραφῆ) τῆς δυσγενείας; this last word is perhaps an error for εὐγενείας, which seems to be required by the context; Aucher renders, "mancipatio ac proscriptio ignobilis."

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> ἰδίᾳ προφορᾷ.

<sup>g</sup> λογισμῶν.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. from Hebrew into Greek.

<sup>i</sup> Philo gives the same etymology of ham "to be hot" in De Sobrietate 44.

<sup>j</sup> "Canaanite" is sometimes used typologically in the sense of "merchant" in the Old Testament.

GENESIS, BOOK II

tor.”<sup>a</sup> But now it is evidently not<sup>b</sup> a matter of kinship<sup>c</sup> or that one is the father or son of the other, but it is now evidently the (kinship of) thought with thought that (Scripture) shows, because of (Canaan’s) remoteness from kinship with virtue.<sup>d</sup>

*66. (Gen. ix. 20) What<sup>e</sup> is the meaning of the words, “Noah began to be a husbandman of the earth”<sup>f</sup>?

(Scripture) likens Noah to that first moulded earthy man,<sup>g</sup> for it uses the same expression<sup>h</sup> of him, when he came out of the ark, as of the other,<sup>i</sup> for there was a beginning of agriculture both then and now,<sup>j</sup> both times after a flood. For at the creation of the world the earth was, in a sense,<sup>k</sup> flooded. For (God) would not have said, “Let the waters<sup>l</sup> be gathered into one gathering, and let the dry land appear,” if there had not been an inundation in some abyss of the earth. But not ineptly does (Scripture) say “he began to be a husbandman,” since in the second genesis of mankind he was the beginning of both seed and agriculture and other (forms of) life. This is the literal

<sup>a</sup> Arm. arit' = μεσίτης or πρόξενος, also ἀφορμή, ὑπόθεσις; Aucher renders “caussa.” What Greek word Philo used it is hard to say. In De Sobrietate 44, 48 Philo etymologizes “Canaan” as σάλος “tossing” (seemingly connecting it with Heb. na' = “to move (constantly)”).

<sup>b</sup> Lit. “not evidently.”

<sup>c</sup> συγγενείας.

<sup>d</sup> διὰ τὴν ἀλλοτριώσιν τὴν τῆς πρὸς ἀρετὴν οἰκειότητος.

<sup>e</sup> We should prob. follow Arm. ms. C in omitting the words “On agriculture” before “what.”

<sup>f</sup> Philo closely follows LXX καὶ ἤρξατο Νῶε ἄνθρωπος γεωργὸς γῆς.

<sup>g</sup> τῷ πρώτῳ διαπλασθέντι <καὶ> γεώδει (or γηγενεῖ) ἀνθρώπῳ. The Greek frag. from Procopius omits γεώδει (or γηγενεῖ); perhaps it is a doublet in Arm.

<sup>h</sup> λόγῳ.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. Adam when driven from Eden, of Gen. iii. 23.

<sup>j</sup> Both in Adam’s time and in Noah’s.

<sup>k</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>l</sup> LXX and Heb. have “waters under the heavens.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

meaning.<sup>a</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>b</sup> there is a difference between being a husbandman<sup>c</sup> and a worker of the earth,<sup>d</sup> wherefore, when the fratricide<sup>e</sup> is introduced, it is said of him that he shall work the earth but not that he shall cultivate it. For symbolically the body is called "earth" (since) by nature our<sup>f</sup> (body) is earthy, and it works basely and badly like an unskilled hireling.<sup>g</sup> But the virtuous man cultivates like a skilled and experienced caretaker of plants, and the husbandman is an overseer of the good. For the worker-mind of the body, in accordance with its bodily (nature), pursues bodily pleasures, but the husbandman-mind strives to obtain useful fruits, those which (come) through continence and moderation<sup>h</sup>; and it cuts off the superfluous weaknesses (that grow) around our characters like the branches of wide-spreading trees.

67. (Gen. ix. 20) Why did the righteous man<sup>i</sup> first plant a vineyard?

It was proper (for him) to fall into perplexity<sup>j</sup> where he should find a plant after the flood, since all those things which were on the earth had wasted away and perished. But what was said a little earlier<sup>k</sup> seemed to be true, (namely) that the earth was dried up at the spring season, for the spring produced a growth of plants; accordingly,

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> γεωργός.

<sup>d</sup> ἐργάτης τῆς γῆς; on this distinction see De Agricultura 5 ff.

<sup>e</sup> Cain; see De Agricultura 21 ff. on Gen. iv. 2.

<sup>f</sup> In the Arm. text the pronoun "our" is unaccountably separated by the relative clause from the word "body" in the main clause.

<sup>g</sup> ὡς ἀτεχνος μισθωτός (or ἔμμισθος as in De Agricultura 5).

<sup>h</sup> δι' ἐγκρατείας καὶ σωφροσύνης (the latter noun has a double rendering in Arm.).

<sup>i</sup> i.e. Noah.

<sup>j</sup> The two Arm. verbs both = ἀπορεῖν.

<sup>k</sup> In QG ii. 47 on Gen. viii. 14.

GENESIS, BOOK II

it was natural that both vines and vine-shoots were found that could flourish,<sup>a</sup> and that they were gathered by the righteous man. But it must be shown why he first planted a vineyard and not wheat and barley, since some fruits are necessary and it is impossible to live without them, while others are the material of superfluous luxury.<sup>b</sup> Now those which are necessary to life he consecrated and set apart for God<sup>c</sup> as being useful (to man), not having any co-operation<sup>d</sup> in their production; but superfluous things were assigned to man, for the use of wine is superfluous and not necessary. And so, in the same way that God Himself with His own hand caused fountains of potable water to flow out without the co-operation of men, so also He gave wheat and barley. For both forms of nourishment, food as well as drink, He alone by Himself bestowed (on man). But those (foods) which are for a life of luxury He did not keep for Himself<sup>e</sup> nor grudge that they should fall to man's possession.<sup>f</sup> *68. (Gen. ix. 21) What is the meaning of the words, "he drank of the wine<sup>g</sup> and became drunken" ?

In the first place, the righteous man<sup>h</sup> did not drink the wine but a portion of wine<sup>i</sup> and not all of it. For the incontinent and self-indulgent man<sup>j</sup> does not give up going to drinking-bouts before he has put away inside himself all

<sup>a</sup> Prob. βλαστοὺς ἀμπέλου ζωοφυτοῦντας.

<sup>b</sup> ὕλη πλεοναζούσης τρυφῆς.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. man should not presume to claim credit for producing the necessities of life, for which God alone is responsible.

<sup>d</sup> συνεργίαν.

<sup>e</sup> οὐκ ἐνοσφίσατο.

<sup>f</sup> Construction of Arm. uncertain; Aucher renders, "quin homines assequerentur per industriam propriam."

<sup>g</sup> ἔπιεν ἐκ τοῦ οἴνου, as in LXX.

<sup>h</sup> Noah.

<sup>i</sup> Philo stresses the scriptural wording "drank of the wine."

<sup>j</sup> ὁ ἀκρατῆς καὶ ἀσελγῆς vel sim.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the unmixed (wine).<sup>a</sup> But the continent and abstemious man measures the things necessary for use. And "becoming drunken" is used in the sense of <sup>b</sup> "making use of wine." For there is a twofold and double way of becoming drunken: one is to drink wine to excess,<sup>c</sup> which is a sin peculiar to the vicious and evil man; the other is to partake of wine, which always happens to the wise man.<sup>d</sup> Accordingly, it is in the second signification that the virtuous and wise man is said to be drunken, not by drinking wine to excess,<sup>e</sup> but merely by partaking of wine.<sup>f</sup>

69. (Gen. ix. 21) What is the meaning of the words, "he was uncovered in his house" ?<sup>g</sup>

It is a matter of praise for the wise man both literally and in a deeper sense <sup>h</sup> that his nakedness does not (take place) somewhere outside but that he was in his house, concealed by the screen of his house. For the nakedness of his body was concealed by his house, which was built of stone and wood. But the covering and screen of the soul is knowledge.<sup>i</sup> Now there are two kinds of nakedness. One is by chance <sup>j</sup> and comes through involuntary transgressions,<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τὸν ἄκρατον (οἶνον).

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "instead of."

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "to be excessive in being senseless in drinking wine," probably an awkward rendering of a text like that of the Greek frag. τὸ παρ' οἶνον ληρεῖν.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ οἰνοῦσθαι ὅπερ εἰς σοφὸν πίπτει, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>e</sup> See note c above.

<sup>f</sup> On the theme of "sober drunkenness" (νηφάλιος μέθη) in Philo and other Hellenistic writers, see Hans Lewy, Sobria Ebrietas, Giessen, 1929.

<sup>g</sup> ἐγυμνώθη ἐν τῷ οἴκῳ αὐτοῦ, as in LXX; for "house" Heb. has "tent." On the theme of Noah's nakedness cf. Leg. All. ii. 60 ff.

<sup>h</sup> καὶ τὸ ῥητὸν καὶ τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> The compound xrat hanjaroy elsewhere in the Arm. translation of Philo = ἐπιστήμη; Aucher here renders, "disciplina sapientiae," which is a perfectly justifiable rendering.

<sup>j</sup> ἐκ τύχης.

<sup>k</sup> δι' ἀκουσίων ἀμαρτημάτων.

GENESIS, BOOK II

for in a certain sense <sup>a</sup> he who practises rectitude <sup>b</sup> is clothed, and if he stumbles, it is not by his own free will <sup>c</sup> but as is the case of those who are drunken or shakily stagger from one side to the other or fall asleep or are seized by madness. For those who transgress in these ways do not do so with malice aforethought. <sup>d</sup> But it is an obligation <sup>e</sup> to put on, like a covering, good instruction and good training. <sup>f</sup> And there is another nakedness, that of the soul, (which) can very nobly <sup>g</sup> escape the entire burdensome weight <sup>h</sup> of the body, as from a tomb, as if it had been buried in it a long time, as in a tomb, <sup>i</sup> and sense-pleasures and innumerable miseries of other passions and the perturbations of anxieties about evil, and the troubles caused by each of these. For he who has the power to come through <sup>j</sup> so many deeds and wounds, and strip himself of all of them, has obtained a fortunate and blessed lot <sup>k</sup> without false show <sup>l</sup> and deformity. For this I should say is beauty and adornment <sup>m</sup> in those who have proved worthy of living incorporeally. <sup>n</sup>

70. (Gen. ix. 22) Why does (Scripture) not simply say, "Ham saw the nakedness" instead of "Ham, the father of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father"?

<sup>a</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>b</sup> Prob. κατόρθωσιν; Aucher suggests ὀρθωσιν.

<sup>c</sup> ἐκουσία γνώμη.

<sup>d</sup> Prob. προμηθεία καὶ βουλῆ.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "service"—λειτουργία or ὑπηρεσία.

<sup>f</sup> εὐμάθειαν καὶ εὐπαιδείαν.

<sup>g</sup> πάνυ γενναίως vel sim.; Aucher "per summam virtutem."

<sup>h</sup> ὄγκον δυσχερῆ.

<sup>i</sup> The awkward repetition in the Arm. suggests a scribal error.

<sup>j</sup> διήκειν.

<sup>k</sup> εὐδαίμονα καὶ μακάριον κληρον.

<sup>l</sup> This rendering is based on the Arm. glossator's explanation of kmaygeak which is not found in the large Arm. lexicon; Aucher renders, "sine labe."

<sup>m</sup> κάλλος καὶ κόσμος.

<sup>n</sup> ἀσωμάτως.

<sup>o</sup> Lit. "but."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

It convicts <sup>a</sup> both the son through the father and the father through the son, for in common and as one they have committed an act of folly, wickedness and impiety <sup>b</sup> and other evils. This is the literal meaning. <sup>c</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>d</sup> (it is) what has been said before about these things. <sup>e</sup>

*71. (Gen. ix. 22) What is the meaning of the words, "He related it to his two brothers outside" <sup>f</sup>?

(Scripture) increasingly magnifies the accusation. <sup>g</sup> First of all, <sup>h</sup> it was not to one brother alone that he told his father's involuntary transgression but to both. And if there had been many, he would have told them all rather than only those whom he could. And this he did derisively <sup>i</sup> when he spoke to them (of a matter) deserving not of derision and jest <sup>j</sup> but of modesty, awe and reverence. <sup>k</sup> And second, (Scripture) says that he related it not within but outside, which shows clearly that he betrayed it <sup>l</sup> not only to his brothers but also to those who were standing around them outside, <sup>m</sup> men and women alike. This is the literal meaning. <sup>n</sup> But as for the deeper mean-

<sup>a</sup> ἐλέγχει.

<sup>b</sup> ἀφροσύνης καὶ ἀδικίας καὶ ἀσεβείας.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>e</sup> In § 65 on Gen. ix. 18-19.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ἐξελθὼν ἀνήγγειλεν τοῖς δυσὶν ἀδελφοῖς αὐτοῦ ἔξω; Heb. has no word corresponding to ἐξελθὼν.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "complaint (or "penalty") of accusation," probably an expanded rendering of ἔγκλημα, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. has πρῶτον μὲν ἐκ τοῦ ὑπεριδεῖν, δεύτερον δ' ἐκ τοῦ εἰπεῖν καὶ οὐχ ἐνὶ μόνῳ κτλ.; thus the second charge in the Arm. corresponds to the third charge in the Greek frag., εἶτα οὐκ ἔνδον κτλ.

<sup>i</sup> Prob. διαχλευάζων as in Greek frag.

<sup>j</sup> The Greek frag. has only χλεύης.

<sup>k</sup> The Greek frag. has only αἰδοῦς καὶ εὐλαβείας.

<sup>l</sup> Both Greek fragments (the second ends with this sentence) have ἀκηκοέναι . . . τοὺς ἀδελφούς.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher's translation omits the last word.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

ing,<sup>a</sup> the wicked and malevolent character was glad and rejoiced and evilly regarded the misfortunes of others, judging them peculiarly by himself as though (they were) right.<sup>b</sup> Because of this he even now exults at the involuntary behaviour<sup>c</sup> of the lover of wisdom,<sup>d</sup> and celebrates and proclaims<sup>e</sup> his misfortunes, and becomes an adversary and accuser,<sup>f</sup> though it would have been fitting to show tolerance and forgiveness rather than (bring) blame and accusation. And so, because, as I have said before,<sup>g</sup> these three—the good, the bad and the indifferent<sup>h</sup>—are brothers of one another (and) the offspring of one reason,<sup>i</sup> they watch over<sup>j</sup> various things; some praise the virtues,<sup>k</sup> and some, evils,<sup>l</sup> and others, wealth and honours and other goods which are around the body and outside the body. These watchers and zealots<sup>m</sup> of evil rejoice at the fall<sup>n</sup> of the wise man, and mock, accuse and slander<sup>o</sup> him on the

<sup>a</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>b</sup> Text and meaning somewhat uncertain (from “and evilly regarded”); Aucher renders, “malum est autem (in note, “vel, et male accusat”) aliorum miserias vel apud se solum judicare, ut judex corrigens” (in note, “vel, sicut correctio”).

<sup>c</sup> Arm. bark', translated above as “character” (= ἦθος or τρόπος), also renders ἀγωγή, the meaning seemingly required by the context here; Aucher here renders, “casum.”

<sup>d</sup> τοῦ τῆς σοφίας ἔραστοῦ, i.e. Noah.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. “becoming a singer and announcer.”

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. synonyms are probably a double rendering of κατήγορος.

<sup>g</sup> In QG i. 88 on Gen. v. 32.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ἀδιάφορον.

<sup>i</sup> ἐνὸς ἔκγονοι λογισμοῦ.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. verakazouk' lit. = “overseers,” “superintendents” and the like, and usu. renders ἐπιστάται, ἐπίσκοποι, etc.; below it is used as a parallel of παραζηωροκ' = ζηλωταί, which suggests that its Greek original here had the meaning of “jealous observers” or the like; Aucher renders, “prae-sides.”

<sup>k</sup> τὰς ἀρετὰς.

<sup>l</sup> τὰ κακά.

<sup>m</sup> See note j.

<sup>n</sup> τῷ πταίσματι.

<sup>o</sup> The two Arm. verbs are prob. a double rendering of διαβάλλουσι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ground that somehow <sup>a</sup> he does not profit <sup>b</sup> from those parts <sup>c</sup> of which he consists <sup>d</sup> and of which he is zealous, which are good for the soul, nor from those which (are good) for the body and are external—neither in the internal virtues nor in those things which are bodily and external goods.<sup>e</sup> But (they argue) that he alone can achieve his purpose <sup>f</sup> who is practised in wrongdoing,<sup>g</sup> which alone is wont to be of profit to human life. These and similar things are stated by those who are watchers of wicked folly <sup>h</sup> and mock the lovers of virtue <sup>i</sup> and those things by which virtue comes into being and is formed, just as some think that which is bodily and external has the status <sup>j</sup> of instruments of service.<sup>k</sup>

*72. (Gen. ix. 23) What is the meaning of the words, "Shem and Japheth took a garment and laid it upon both their shoulders and went backward and covered the nakedness of their father and did not see it" <sup>l</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>m</sup> is clear. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>n</sup> this must be said. The light and hasty man is

<sup>a</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>b</sup> οὐκ ὠφελείται.

<sup>c</sup> τὰ μέρη: the sense of the phrase is not clear to me.

<sup>d</sup> συνίσταται.

<sup>e</sup> The construction of the Arm. is obscure, as is Aucher's somewhat less literal rendering, "praesides malitiam aemulantes gaudent de sapientis lapsu, irrident et detrahunt, quasi vero ille per partes, quas praefert ac prosequitur sicut meliores pro animo, vel corpore aut externis suis, nihil profecerit nec internis, neque externis virtutibus, quominus et bonis circa et extra corpus," etc.

<sup>f</sup> τὴν πρόθεσιν.

<sup>g</sup> ἀδικίαν.

<sup>h</sup> ἀφροσύνης ἢ πονηρίας.

<sup>i</sup> τοὺς τῆς ἀρετῆς ἐραστὰς.

<sup>j</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>k</sup> ὀργάνων διακονίας (or ὑπηρεσίας or λειτουργίας); the connexion of ideas is far from clear.

<sup>l</sup> Philo abbreviates the biblical verse, which in both LXX and Heb., after "the nakedness of their father," reads "and their faces were backward, and the nakedness of their father they did not see."

<sup>m</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

satisfied to see only what is straight ahead and before his eyes.<sup>a</sup> But the wise man (sees that which is) behind, that is, the future.<sup>b</sup> For just as the things behind come after the things ahead, so the future (comes after) the present,<sup>c</sup> and the constant and wise man<sup>d</sup> obtains sight of this, like the mythical Lynceus,<sup>e</sup> having eyes on all sides. But every wise one, not man but mind,<sup>f</sup> goes backward, that is, looks behind as at a very radiant light<sup>g</sup>; and seeing everything clearly from all sides,<sup>h</sup> and looking around, is found to be hedged about and fortified, so that no part of the soul shall remain naked and unseemly before the blows and attacks that overtake it.<sup>i</sup>

73. (Gen. ix. 24) What is the meaning of the words, "Noah sobered up from the wine" <sup>j</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. is slightly different: ὁ εὐχερῆς καὶ ὁ ἀπερίσκεπτος τὸ ἐπ' εὐθείας καὶ πρὸς ὀφθαλμῶν μόνον ὄρᾱ.

<sup>b</sup> τὰ μέλλοντα.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν ἐνεστώτων.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. astin and imastoun are a double rendering of Greek ἀστείος, as the Greek frag. shows—astin "constant" being chosen here as elsewhere in Philo for its phonetic resemblance to ἀστείος.

<sup>e</sup> For the words "like the mythical Lynceus" the Greek frag. has only ἀυγαίως, prob. a corruption of Λυγκέως <δίκην>, as Harris suggests.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. agrees almost literally with the Arm., πᾶς οὖν σοφὸς οὐκ ἄνθρωπος ἀλλὰ νοῦς; Aucher, rightly puzzled, somewhat freely renders, "omnis ergo sapiens, qui non ita homo est, quantum intellectus."

<sup>g</sup> The clause "goes backward . . . light" is not found in the Greek frag.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. has only καταθεώμενος.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly περιπέφρακται πρὸς τὰ ἐνεστώτα καὶ τὰ ἀδοκῆτως κατασπιάζοντα. Apparently the "naked" and "unseemly" are due to the Arm. translator's misunderstanding of τὰ ἀδοκῆτως κατασπιάζοντα "the things that swoop down unexpectedly" as if ἀδοξον καὶ καταψιλοῦν or the like.

<sup>j</sup> So most LXX MSS., ἐξένηψεν δὲ Νῶε ἀπὸ τοῦ οἴνου; Heb. has "And Noah awakened from his wine."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The literal meaning is very comprehensible.<sup>a</sup> But the deeper meaning <sup>b</sup> must be rendered. When the mind <sup>c</sup> is strong, it is able to see clearly with soberness<sup>d</sup> both the things before and those behind, that is, the present <sup>e</sup> and the future.<sup>f</sup> But blindness comes upon him who is not able to see clearly either the present or the future.<sup>g</sup> And to him who sees the present and does not guard himself by foreseeing the future, wine-bibbing and drunkenness are (ascribed). But in him who is capable of looking around and comprehending the different natures of things present and future, there are soberness and sobriety.<sup>h</sup>

74. (Gen. ix. 24) Why, after reckoning Ham as the middle child of the three brothers,<sup>i</sup> does (Scripture) call him "the youngest,"<sup>j</sup> saying, "what his youngest son had done to him" ?

(Scripture) clearly allegorizes.<sup>k</sup> It takes the youngest to be, not the one who is so in age and time, but the one who is more youthful,<sup>l</sup> for wickedness is unable to receive an aged and elder teaching,<sup>m</sup> and elder are the thoughts of <sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητὸν γνωριμώτατόν ἐστι.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>d</sup> νήφων.

<sup>e</sup> τὰ ἐνεστώτα; the Ambrosian paraphrase has "praeterita."

<sup>f</sup> τὰ μέλλοντα.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. words for "present" and "future" are different from those used in the preceding sentence.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "soberness of sobriety," prob. rendering τὸ τῆς σωφροσύνης νηφάλιον.

<sup>i</sup> Cf. QG i. 88 on Gen. v. 32; Aucher renders less literally, "in medietate prolium, sive medium inter fratres."

<sup>j</sup> νεώτερον, used as superlative, as in LXX; Heb. has "his small son," also indicating the youngest of three.

<sup>k</sup> ἀλληγορεῖ.

<sup>l</sup> νεώτερον; here the Arm. uses a different word from that rendered "youngest" above.

<sup>m</sup> The Arm. lit. = εἰσδέχεσθαι γεροντικὴν καὶ πρεσβυτέραν μάθησιν; Aucher renders more freely, "percipere doctrinam seniori propriam."

GENESIS, BOOK II

wills <sup>a</sup> that are truly hoary <sup>b</sup>—this, moreover, not in body but in mind.<sup>c</sup>

75. (Gen. ix. 26) Why, in praying for Shem, does (Noah) say, “Blessed be the Lord God, God of Shem,<sup>d</sup> and Canaan shall be his servant”?

“Lord” and “God” is an apposition <sup>e</sup> of the two chief powers, the beneficent and the kingly,<sup>f</sup> through which the world <sup>g</sup> came into being. Now the king made the world in accordance with His beneficence, while after its completion it was put in order <sup>h</sup> by His sovereignty. Accordingly, He deemed the wise man worthy of the common honour <sup>i</sup> which the whole world received in common, for the parts of the world were joined with him by the powers of the Lord and God,<sup>j</sup> and He gave His beneficent grace and largess with peculiarly abundant magnificence. Therefore the name of the beneficent power, “God” is twice used; once, as has been said, in apposition with the kingly power, and a second time without visible connexion,<sup>k</sup> in order that the wise man may become worthy of both the common and the special gift <sup>l</sup> (of God), being loved both by the world and by God—by the world, because of the common grace; by God, because of the special (grace).<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> οἱ τῶν βουλῶν λογισμοί.

<sup>b</sup> πολιαί; for the metaphor see De Sacr. Abelis 79 ὡς δέον πολὺν μὲν μάθημα χρόνῳ μηδὲν ἀρνείσθαι.

<sup>c</sup> οὐ κατὰ σῶμα ἀλλὰ κατὰ νοῦν.

<sup>d</sup> So Arm. O.T.; LXX and Heb. have “The Lord, the God of Shem” (LXX κύριος “Lord” renders Heb. YHWH).

<sup>e</sup> Or “harmonization.”

<sup>f</sup> τῶν δυεῖν πρώτων δυνάμεων τῆς εὐεργέτιδος καὶ τῆς βασιλικῆς; see QG ii. 51.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ κόσμος.

<sup>h</sup> ἐτάχθη vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> τῆς κοινῆς τιμῆς, cf. De Sobrietate 51-55.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher renders, “junctis itidem partibus quoque mundi cum virtutibus Domini et Dei,” but the Arm. requires “junctis cum eo,” not “junctis . . . cum virtutibus.”

<sup>k</sup> ἄνευ ὀρατῆς συμπλοκῆς.

<sup>l</sup> καὶ τῆς κοινῆς καὶ τῆς ἰδίας δωρεᾶς.

<sup>m</sup> διὰ τὴν ἐξαίρετον <χάριν>.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

76. (Gen. ix. 27) Why, in praying for Japheth, does (Noah) say, " God shall enlarge Japheth, and he shall dwell in the house<sup>a</sup> of Shem, and Canaan shall be their<sup>b</sup> servant " ?

Leaving aside the literal meaning,<sup>c</sup> since it is clear, the deeper meaning<sup>d</sup> must be examined ; according to this, the secondary and tertiary goods<sup>e</sup> receive an enlargement, (such as) health and keenness of perception and beauty and power and wealth, glory, nobility, friends and offices<sup>f</sup> and many other such things. Therefore he says, " shall enlarge." For the full possession of so many things separately and by themselves works harm to many who do not live in accordance with righteousness and wisdom and the other virtues,<sup>g</sup> of which the full possession controls<sup>h</sup> bodily and external things. But the inaccessibility and remoteness (of virtue) leaves it<sup>i</sup> without management and use. And when it is abandoned and left alone by good overseers,<sup>j</sup> it brings harm instead of the profit which it might have brought. Wherefore he prays for him who possesses bodily and external things that " he shall dwell in the houses<sup>k</sup> of the wise man,"<sup>l</sup> in order that he may look toward the example of all good, and seeing this, may set straight his own way.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> So Arm. O.T. ; LXX has οἴκοις, Heb. " tents " ; below the Arm. has " houses " (plural).

<sup>b</sup> Some LXX MSS. and ancient versions have " his."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>e</sup> As the Ambrosian paraphrase explains, Japheth is a symbol of " the indifferent " (τὸ ἀδιάφορον) ; see above, QG i. 88.

<sup>f</sup> ὑγίειαν καὶ εὐαισθησίαν καὶ κάλλος καὶ δύναμιν καὶ πλοῦτον καὶ δόξαν καὶ εὐγένειαν καὶ φίλους καὶ ἀρχάς.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ δικαιοσύνην καὶ φρόνησιν καὶ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετάς.

<sup>h</sup> οἰκονομεῖ vel sim. ; Aucher " optime dispensat."

<sup>i</sup> i.e. the possession of worldly goods.

<sup>j</sup> These " overseers " have prob. no connexion with those mentioned above in QG ii. 71.

<sup>k</sup> See above, note a.

Shem is here the symbol of the wise man, see the preceding section.

<sup>m</sup> εὐθύνη τὴν ἑαυτοῦ ὁδόν.

GENESIS, BOOK II

*77. (Gen. ix. 27) Why, when Ham sins, does (Scripture) present his son Canaan as the servant of Shem and Japheth?

In the first place, because both father and son practised the same wickedness, both being mingled without distinction, as if using one body and one soul.<sup>a</sup> And in the second place, because the father too was to be greatly saddened by the cursing of his son, knowing that it was not so much for his own sake as for his father's that he <sup>b</sup> was punished, for the punishment (fell) on the prime mover and teacher of evil thoughts, words and deeds.<sup>c</sup> This is the literal meaning.<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> potentially <sup>f</sup> they are two—not so much men as characters.<sup>g</sup> And this is shown by the giving of names, which also clearly indicates the nature of things.<sup>h</sup> For "Ham" is to be interpreted as "heat" or "hot," while "Canaan" means "merchants" or "middle-men."<sup>i</sup>

78. (Gen. ix. 28) Why did Noah, after the flood, live three hundred and fifty years?

The form of the world <sup>j</sup> was represented as founded at the beginning in two heptads of years,<sup>k</sup> and the wise man <sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὡς ἐνὶ σώματι καὶ μιᾷ ψυχῇ χρώμενοι.

<sup>b</sup> Canaan.

<sup>c</sup> τὸν ἡγεμόνα (οἱ ἀρχηγέτην) καὶ διδάσκαλον κακῶν λογισμῶν καὶ λόγων καὶ ἔργων.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> δυνάμει.

<sup>g</sup> ἦθη οἱ τρόποι.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the etymology of their names is indicative of their characters.

<sup>i</sup> See notes to QG ii. 65 near end.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ τοῦ κόσμου εἶδος.

<sup>k</sup> This appears to be the literal meaning of the obscure Arm. sentence which Aucher more freely renders, "bis septenis annis declaratur jam ex principio condita atque renovata (sub Noe) forma mundi"; he adds in a footnote that, as the Arm. glossator reminds us, the world was created in seven days, and Noah waited seven days before sending out the dove.

<sup>l</sup> ὁ σοφός (οἱ ἀστεῖος), i.e. Noah.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

lived the same number times twenty-five, for fourteen times twenty-five is seventy times five years, and fifty times seven. Now the reckoning <sup>a</sup> of the seventh and fiftieth year has a special order <sup>b</sup> which is Levitical, for there it is established.<sup>c</sup>

79. (Gen. x. 1) Why, among the three sons of Noah, does Ham always appear in the middle, while the extremes <sup>d</sup> vary? When they are born, Shem is mentioned first, as follows, "Shem, Ham, Japheth," <sup>e</sup> but when they beget children, Japheth is put first in order, and the family begins to be reckoned from Japheth <sup>f</sup>?

Those who investigate the literal nature of Holy Scripture <sup>g</sup> pretend to believe <sup>h</sup> concerning the order of sons that he who is mentioned first, Shem, is the youngest, while the last, Japheth, is the eldest. But such persons may think as they severally please and hold whatever belief they happen to find suitable.<sup>i</sup> By us, however, who investigate the intelligible nature of others <sup>j</sup> it must be said that of these three, the good, the bad and the indifferent, which are called secondary goods,<sup>k</sup> the bad always appears <sup>l</sup> in the middle, in order that it may be caught in the middle and overcome

<sup>a</sup> Or "principle"—λόγος.

<sup>b</sup> ἰδίαν τάξιν.

<sup>c</sup> This is probably a reference to the passages in the book of Leviticus on the Sabbath and Jubilee year; cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 176.

<sup>d</sup> τὰ ἄκρα, i.e. the eldest and youngest sons.

<sup>e</sup> In Gen. x. 1; see also QG ii. 65 on Gen. ix. 18-19.

<sup>f</sup> In Gen. x. 2.

<sup>g</sup> τὴν τῶν ἱερῶν γραμμάτων ῥητὴν φύσιν.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "make pretences (or "excuses"), believing"; Aucher "ratum habent . . . putantes."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "opinionis suae ratione ducti."

<sup>j</sup> τὴν νοερὰν τῶν ἄλλων φύσιν: Aucher "mentalem in his sensum."

<sup>k</sup> See above, QG ii. 76 and QG i. 88.

<sup>l</sup> Or "is always reckoned (by Scripture)."

GENESIS, BOOK II

from either side, so that either may seize it, press it closely and crush it. But the good and the indifferent or secondary good exchange their order. So long as the bad is present only virtually but not actually,<sup>a</sup> the good is first and has the rank <sup>b</sup> of governor and ruler.<sup>c</sup> But when an act results from will and intention,<sup>d</sup> and injustice does not merely remain in the mind <sup>e</sup> but is realized in unjust acts, (then) the good, which is first, changes its place to another one in the order, as do the good traits with which it is adorned, and it takes leave of instruction and management,<sup>f</sup> as if not able to understand them, like a physician when he sees an illness that is incurable. However, the eldest good ministers to that virtue <sup>g</sup> which is bodily and external,<sup>h</sup> and carefully watches the extreme ends,<sup>i</sup> confining the beast <sup>j</sup> in a net and showing that it no longer has power to bite and do harm. But when it perceives that this has not been done, it changes to a more secure and stable place, and leaves its former place for <sup>k</sup> a more powerful one, and having obtained one easy to capture <sup>l</sup> lower down, holds it ; the barrier <sup>m</sup> and guarding of this is held by a more powerful guard,<sup>n</sup> for there is nothing more powerful than virtue.

<sup>a</sup> δυνάμει μόνον ἀλλ' οὐκ ἐντελεχείᾳ.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν τάξιν.

<sup>c</sup> οἰκονόμου καὶ ἄρχοντος vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> ἔργον ἐκ τῆς βουλῆς καὶ τοῦ λογισμοῦ γίνεται.

<sup>e</sup> ἐν τῷ νῷ.

<sup>f</sup> διδασκαλίαν καὶ οἰκονομίαν.

<sup>g</sup> τῇ ἀρετῇ διακονεῖ.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. Shem, the symbol of good, looks after Japheth, the symbol of "the indifferent" ; cf. QG ii. 76.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "the ends of the extremes."

<sup>j</sup> τὸ θηρίον.

<sup>k</sup> Or "to" ? As Aucher observes, the whole passage "obscurus est textus."

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. lit. = εὐάλωτον ; Aucher renders, "servatu facilem." The original of the obscure passage (which seems to have no parallel in Philo) would not be easy to reconstruct.

<sup>m</sup> Arm. çank means both "barrier" and "always" ; Aucher chooses the latter meaning here and renders, "semper."

<sup>n</sup> This rendering is admittedly obscure but is closer to the Arm. than is Aucher's, "faciliter enim observare semper accidit ei fortiori custodis vi."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

80. (Gen. x. 4-5) Why do "the Kittians and Rhodians<sup>a</sup> and the islands of the Gentiles" (spring) from Japheth?

Because (his name) is to be interpreted as "breadth,"<sup>b</sup> for he is broadened in growth and progress,<sup>c</sup> and is no longer contained by the other part of those regions which have been granted by Nature for the use of man, (namely) the earth, but he passes over to still another (part), the sea, and to the islands which are in it. This is the literal meaning.<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> those things which by nature<sup>f</sup> are external goods, (such as) wealth, honour and authority, are everywhere poured out and extended both to those in whose hands they are, and, at a distance, to those in whose hands they are not. And even more—or not less—do they fence them in round about and keep them close because of those who are filled with desire and are lovers of money and glory, and, since they love authority, nothing is enough for them because of their insatiable desire.

81. (Gen. x. 6) Why is Ham's eldest son Cush?

The theologian<sup>g</sup> has expressed a most natural principle<sup>h</sup> in calling Cush the eldest offspring of evil,<sup>i</sup> (since he is) the sparse<sup>j</sup> nature of earth.<sup>k</sup> For earth that is fertile, well-stocked, well-watered, rich in herbage and in grain, and well-forested is distributed and divided into the products of fruit. But sparse and dusty earth is dry, unfruitful, barren and sterile, and is carried off and lifted up by the wind, and

<sup>a</sup> LXX has Κήτιοι and Ῥόδιοι; Heb. has Kittim and Dōdānīm (prob. a scribal error for Rōdānīm).

<sup>b</sup> πλάτος; see above, QG ii. 76 on Gen. ix. 27.

<sup>c</sup> κατ' αὔξησιν καὶ κατὰ προκοπὴν πλατυνόμενος.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> φύσει.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ θεολόγος (Moses).

<sup>h</sup> φυσικώτατον λόγον.

<sup>i</sup> Or "of the evil one."

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "scattered" or "sporadic."

<sup>k</sup> Philo here etymologizes the name "Cush," not as a Hebrew name, but as if from Greek χῶς "heap of earth," "dust."

GENESIS, BOOK II

causes the salubrious air <sup>a</sup> to suffer from dust. Such are the first buds of evil, for they are barren and unproductive of good practices,<sup>b</sup> and are the causes of barrenness in all the parts of the soul.<sup>c</sup>

82. (Gen. x. 8-9) Why did Cush beget Nimrod <sup>d</sup> who began to be "a giant hunter" <sup>e</sup> before the Lord, wherefore they said, "like Nimrod a giant hunter before God" <sup>f</sup>?

It is proper that one having a sparse <sup>g</sup> nature, which a spiritual bond does not bring together and hold firmly, and not being the father of constancy either of soul or nature or character, but like a giant valuing and honouring earthly things more than heavenly, should show forth the truth of the story <sup>h</sup> about the giants and Titans. For in truth <sup>i</sup> he who is zealous for earthly and corruptible things always fights against and makes war on heavenly things and praiseworthy and wonderful natures, and builds walls and towers <sup>j</sup> on earth against heaven. But those things which are here <sup>k</sup> are against those things which are there.<sup>l</sup> For this reason it is not ineptly <sup>m</sup> said, "a giant before <sup>n</sup> God," which clearly is opposition to the Deity. For the impious man <sup>o</sup> is none other than the enemy and foe who stands against <sup>p</sup> God. Wherefore it is proverbial that everyone

<sup>a</sup> τὸν ζωτικὸν ἀέρα; for the same expression see Leg. ad Gaium 125.

<sup>b</sup> ἀγαθῶν ἐπιτηδεύματων.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher more freely renders, "causae sterilitatis animae partiumque ejus omnium."

<sup>d</sup> LXX Νεβρώ or Νεβρώθ.

<sup>e</sup> LXX γίγας κυνηγός = Heb. gibbôr-šayid "champion in hunting."

<sup>f</sup> Most LXX mss. have "before the Lord God"; Heb. has "before YHWH" (= "the Lord").

<sup>g</sup> See above, QG ii. 81, note k.

<sup>h</sup> τὸν μῦθον ἀληθεύειν.

<sup>i</sup> ὄντως.

<sup>j</sup> Or "heaps and mounds."

<sup>k</sup> i.e. on earth.

<sup>l</sup> i.e. in heaven.

<sup>m</sup> οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>n</sup> ἐναντίον in the biblical sense of "before" is interpreted by Philo in the usual sense of "against."

<sup>o</sup> ὁ ἀσεβής.

<sup>p</sup> Lit. "around."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

who is a great sinner should be compared with <sup>a</sup> him as the chief head and fount,<sup>b</sup> as when they say, "like Nimrod." Thus the name is a clear indication of the thing (signified), for it is to be translated as "Ethiopian,"<sup>c</sup> and his skill <sup>d</sup> is that of the hunter. Both of these are to be condemned and reprehended, the Ethiopian because pure evil has no participation in light,<sup>e</sup> but follows night and darkness, while hunting is as far removed as possible from the rational nature.<sup>f</sup> But he who is among beasts seeks to equal the bestial habits of animals through evil passions.

<sup>a</sup> Meaning doubtful; lit. "should be exchanged (or "completed"), being brought back"; Lucher renders, "referri."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "ruler and leader."

<sup>c</sup> Philo confuses the etymology of "Nimrod" with that of his father Cush, elsewhere interpreted as "Ethiopian" (though not above in QG ii. 81). In De Gigantibus 66 Philo etymologizes "Nimrod" as if from Heb. mrd "to rebel" and interprets it as αὐτομόλησις "desertion."

<sup>d</sup> τέχνη.

<sup>e</sup> ἄκρατος κακία οὐδεμίαν ἔχει κοινωνίαν τοῦ φωτός.

<sup>f</sup> τῆς λογικῆς φύσεως.

BOOK III

1. (Gen. xv. 7) What is the meaning of the words, "I am the Lord God <sup>a</sup> who led thee out of the land of the Chaldaeans <sup>b</sup> to give thee this land to inherit" ?

The literal meaning <sup>c</sup> is clear. That which must be rendered as the deeper meaning <sup>d</sup> is as follows. The "land of the Chaldaeans" is symbolically mathematical theory,<sup>e</sup> of which astronomy <sup>f</sup> is part. And in this (field) the Chaldaeans labour not unsuccessfully or slothfully. Thus He honours the wise man with two gifts. For one thing He takes him away <sup>g</sup> from Chaldaean doctrine,<sup>h</sup> which in addition to being difficult to seize and grasp, is the cause of great evils and impiety in attributing to that which is created the powers of the Creator, and persuades men to honour and worship the works of the world instead of the

<sup>a</sup> LXX has merely "God," Heb. has merely "Lord" (YHWH). In the parallel passage, Quis Rer. Div. Heres 96, Philo follows the LXX in reading "God." Possibly the Arm. translator has here inserted "Lord" on the basis of Arm. O.T. which reads, "Lord God."

<sup>b</sup> So LXX; Heb. has "Ur Kasdim" (=Ur of the Chaldaeans).

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "to the understanding of its nature"; Aucher more freely renders "ad sensūs essentiam." In the Quaestiones the usual antithesis to τὸ ῥητόν is τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>e</sup> συμβολικῶς μαθηματικὴ θεωρία ἐστί.

<sup>f</sup> ἀστρονομία in the sense of astrology.

<sup>g</sup> Or "saves him."

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "doctrine (or "school"—δόγματος) of opinions"; Aucher renders ad hoc, "de secta astrologorum videlicet de Chaldaeismi hallucinatione."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Creator of the world.<sup>a</sup> And again, He grants him fruitful wisdom which He symbolically calls "land." And the Father shows that wisdom and virtue<sup>b</sup> are immutable and without change or turning, for it is not proper for God to reveal<sup>c</sup> that which is able to admit turning or change, because that which is revealed should be and remain unchangeable and constant. But that which is subject to change and is wont to be always fluid does not admit of true and proper<sup>d</sup> revelation.

2. (Gen. xv. 8) Why does (Abraham) say, "Lord,<sup>e</sup> by what shall I be informed<sup>f</sup> that I shall inherit it"?

He seeks an indication<sup>g</sup> of knowing (His) agreement.<sup>h</sup> But two things worthy of admiration<sup>i</sup> are described. (One), which is an affection of the mind,<sup>j</sup> is to trust in God in accordance with the word which He has earlier spoken. And (the other) is to have an immense<sup>k</sup> desire<sup>l</sup> not to be without a share in certain signs through which one may be sense-perceptibly informed that a promise has been confirmed. And to Him who made the promise (he shows) reverential awe by using the expression "Lord"; "for," he says, "I know that Thou art lord and ruler of all things and that Thou canst do all things and that there is nothing impossible for thee. And though I myself have faith in what Thou hast promised, I now<sup>m</sup> desire and long to

<sup>a</sup> τὰ τοῦ κόσμου ἔργα ἀντὶ τοῦ κοσμοποιοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> σοφία καὶ ἀρετή. <sup>c</sup> Lit. "to show."

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. translator seems to have taken κύριος in the sense of "divine."

<sup>e</sup> LXX "Lord God," Heb. "Lord YHWH" (traditionally read as "Lord God" since YHWH by itself is conventionally read "Lord" (Adōnay)).

<sup>f</sup> LXX and Heb. "know."

<sup>h</sup> Or "promise."

<sup>i</sup> πάθος τοῦ νοῦ.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "desire of yearning."

<sup>g</sup> σημεῖον.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "zeal"—σπουδῆς.

<sup>k</sup> Or "inexpressible."

<sup>m</sup> Aucher may be right in connecting the adverb "now" with the infinitive "to obtain" and in rendering, "citius assequi."

GENESIS, BOOK III

obtain, if not the fulfilment, at least some clear sign by which the fulfilment will be revealed. For I am a mortal,<sup>a</sup> and even though I have attained<sup>b</sup> the highest degree of integrity,<sup>c</sup> I am not always able to contain the impulses of desire,<sup>d</sup> so that when I see or hear something good I go to it slowly and not immediately. Wherefore I pray that Thou wilt show me a way of knowing,<sup>e</sup> so that I may comprehend the future."

*3. (Gen. xv. 9) Why does (God) say, "Take for me a heifer three years old and a she-goat three years old and a ram three years old and a turtle-dove and a dove" <sup>f</sup>?

He mentions five animals which are offered on the sacred altar. And they are divided among these (kinds of) offerings: of terrestrial creatures<sup>g</sup> three—ox, goat and bull,<sup>h</sup> and of birds two—turtle-dove and dove. For (Scripture) celebrates<sup>i</sup> the fact that the eternal offerings take their origin from the patriarch,<sup>j</sup> who was also the founder of the race.<sup>k</sup> But instead of "bring<sup>l</sup> to me" it is said most excellently, "take for me," for to a mortal creature<sup>m</sup> there is nothing properly his own,<sup>n</sup> but all things are the gift and grace<sup>o</sup> of God, to whom it is pleasing that one who has received something should show gratitude with all eagerness.<sup>p</sup> And He commands him to take a three-year old

<sup>a</sup> γενητός.

<sup>b</sup> Or "should attain" (?).

<sup>c</sup> Arm. k'ajabarout'iuu usu. = καλοκάγαθία or εὐήθεια; the Arm. variant k'ajaberout'iuu = εὐφορία.

<sup>d</sup> τὰς τῆς ἐπιθυμίας ὀρμὰς.

<sup>e</sup> γνώρισμα οἱ γνώσιν.

<sup>f</sup> LXX περιστερὰν: Heb. gōzāl "young pigeon."

<sup>g</sup> τῶν χερσαίων.

<sup>h</sup> Philo here uses the generic names, but the last name, "bull" (Arm. dowar usu. = ταῦρος), is puzzling; one expects Arm. ošxar "sheep," as below. Possibly the Arm. translator read βουῖν for οῖν.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "sings."

<sup>j</sup> τοῦ πατριάρχου.

<sup>k</sup> τοῦ γένους.

<sup>l</sup> Or "offer."

<sup>m</sup> τῷ γενητῷ.

<sup>n</sup> κυρίως ἴδιον.

<sup>o</sup> δῶρον καὶ χάρις.

<sup>p</sup> μετὰ προθυμίας πάσης.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

one of each animal, since the number three is full and perfect, consisting of beginning, middle and end. However, it is proper to be in doubt why He adduces two females among the three animals—the heifer and the she-goat, and one male—the ram. May it not be because the ox <sup>a</sup> and goat are offered for sins, and the sheep is not? Sinning comes from weakness,<sup>b</sup> and the female is weak.

So much was it fitting and proper <sup>c</sup> to say first. But I am not unaware that all such things give occasion to idle calumniators <sup>d</sup> to reject the Sacred Writings and to talk nonsense about them. Thus they say that in the present instance nothing else but the sacrificial victim is described and indicated by the dismembering and dividing of the animals and by the inspection of the entrails. And as for what happens to them,<sup>e</sup> they say that this is an indication of chance <sup>f</sup> and of opportunely visible likenesses. But such people, it seems to me, are (in the class) of those who judge and evaluate <sup>g</sup> the whole by only one part, and do not,<sup>h</sup> on the contrary, (judge) the part by the whole. For this is the best test of anything, whether name <sup>i</sup> or object.<sup>j</sup>

Accordingly, the Legislation <sup>k</sup> is in some sense a unified creature,<sup>l</sup> which one should view from all sides in its entirety with open eyes <sup>m</sup> and examine the intention of the

<sup>a</sup> Here again Philo uses the generic name (βοῦς).

<sup>b</sup> ἐξ ἀσθενείας.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "harmonious and congruent"; Aucher renders, "apposite."

<sup>d</sup> τοῖς ἀπὸ σκοποῦ συκοφαντοῦσι.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders, "quod autem adsederit eis"; an ambiguity lies in Arm. nstim which means both "sit" and "happen"; the latter meaning is favoured by the use of the noun ane "happening," which Aucher omits.

<sup>f</sup> Or "fitness"; Aucher "convenientiae."

<sup>g</sup> The Greek frag., which begins with this sentence, has only one verb, κρίνουσι.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. inadvertently omits the negative.

<sup>i</sup> Instead of ὄνομα the Greek frag. has σῶμα.

<sup>j</sup> πρᾶγμα.

<sup>k</sup> ἡ νομοθεσία (the Mosaic Law); the Greek frag. has ἡ θεία νομοθεσία.

<sup>l</sup> ζῶον ἠγνωμένον.

<sup>m</sup> μέγαλοις ὄμμασι.

entire writing exactly, truly and clearly,<sup>a</sup> not cutting up its harmony or dividing its unity.<sup>b</sup> For when things are deprived of their common element, they appear to be of somewhat different form and species.<sup>c</sup> What, then, is the intention<sup>d</sup> of the Legislation? It is gnostic<sup>e</sup> and describes the various forms of knowledge,<sup>f</sup> since the sacrificial (act) is to be interpreted<sup>g</sup> as conjecture and opportune reasoning<sup>h</sup> and all (kinds of) knowledge,<sup>i</sup> through which not only are the traces of the truth followed out but they are also hidden, as love (is hidden) by flattery, (and as) natural and genuine things are subjected to tests (by comparison with) foreign and untested things.

And the natures of the aforementioned five<sup>j</sup> animals are related to the parts of the universe. The ox (is related) to the earth, for it ploughs and tills the soil. The goat (is related) to water, the animal being so called from its rushing about or leaping,<sup>k</sup> for water is impetuous; this is attested by the currents of rivers and the effusions<sup>l</sup> of the wide sea and the flowing sea. The ram (is related) to air,

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. has only ἀκριβῶς καὶ τηλαυγῶς.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. agrees closely with Greek frag., μὴ κατακόπτοντας τὴν ἁρμονίαν, μηδὲ τὴν ἔνωσιν διαρτῶντας.

<sup>c</sup> ἑτερόμορφα καὶ ἑτεροειδῆ, as in Greek frag., which ends with this sentence.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ προαίρεσις.

<sup>e</sup> γνωστικῆ; this seems to be an allusion to the allegorical interpretation of the three animal sacrifices as states of the soul, as given in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 125.

<sup>f</sup> τὰ γνωστικὰ εἶδη.

<sup>g</sup> ἀποδέχεται.

<sup>h</sup> στοχασμὸς καὶ καιρολογία (?).

<sup>i</sup> If the above rendering is correct, Aucher's is far off the track, "quoniam convenientiam et coaptatum verbum opinionemque recipit immolatio ac omnis scientia."

<sup>j</sup> The word "five" is inadvertently omitted by Aucher.

<sup>k</sup> Philo plays on the word αἶξ "goat" and ἄπτειν (aor. ἄξαι) "to dart"; cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 126 τὴν ἄπτουσαν (Wendland's conj. for MSS. δίπτουσαν, διάγουσαν) αἰσθησιν . . . αἶγα.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. taracoumnh = both κατάχυσις and ἐκτένεια; Aucher here renders, "extensiones."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

since it is very violent and lively, whence the ram is a most useful soul<sup>a</sup> and the most helpful of animals to mankind because it provides them with clothing. For these reasons, it seems to me, He commands him to take the females first, (namely) the she-goat and the heifer, because the elements earth and water are material and, as it were, female, while the third animal, the ram, is male because the air or the wind in some sense<sup>b</sup> becomes male.<sup>c</sup> For all nature is divided either into body or earth or water, and these are female by nature; while the soul-like<sup>d</sup> air (comes under the head) of the more vital spirit.<sup>e</sup> And this, as I have said, is male. It is therefore proper to call the moving and active cause<sup>f</sup> male, and female that which is moved and passive.

But to the birds, such as the dove and the turtle-dove, the whole heaven is equally<sup>g</sup> appropriated,<sup>h</sup> being divided into the circuits of the planets and the fixed stars. And so (Scripture) assigns<sup>i</sup> the dove to the planets, for this is a tame and domesticated creature, and the planets also are rather familiar to us, as though contiguous to terrestrial places, and sympathetic.<sup>j</sup> But the turtle-dove (is related) to the fixed stars, for this animal is something of a lover of solitude,<sup>k</sup> and avoids meeting and mixing with the multitude. (So too) is the inerrant sphere<sup>l</sup> distant (from us) and at the ends of the world,<sup>m</sup> at the very extremes of nature.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>a</sup> So lit. ; Aucher renders, " animal."

<sup>b</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>c</sup> Prob. ἀρρενοῦται.

<sup>d</sup> ψυχοειδής.

<sup>e</sup> ζωτικώτερον πνεῦμα (ὁ ζωτικώτερον πνοήν).

<sup>f</sup> τὸ κινῶν καὶ δρῶν αἴτιον ; cf., e.g., De Fuga 133.

<sup>g</sup> ἴσως or " in common "—κοινῇ ; Aucher omits the adverb in his rendering.

<sup>h</sup> οἰκειοῦται ; Aucher renders, " familiaris reperitur."

<sup>i</sup> ἀφορίζει vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> συμπαθεῖς.

<sup>k</sup> φιλέρημος ; cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 126-127.

<sup>l</sup> ἡ ἀπλανῆς σφαῖρα.

<sup>m</sup> Arm. tiezerk' renders both οἰκουμένη and τὸ πᾶν.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, " sic longinquus et in ultimis orbis extremitatibus est globus inerrans."

GENESIS, BOOK III

And both orders of the two birds <sup>a</sup> are likened to the heavenly forces, wherefore, as the Socratic Plato says, <sup>b</sup> it is likely <sup>c</sup> that "Heaven is a flying chariot" because of its very swift revolution which surpasses in speed even the birds in their course. Moreover, the aforesaid birds are singers, and the prophet <sup>d</sup> is alluding to the music <sup>e</sup> which is perfected in heaven and is produced by the harmony <sup>f</sup> of the movement of the stars. For it is an indication of human skill <sup>g</sup> that all harmonic melody is formed by the voices of animals and living <sup>h</sup> organs through the mechanism <sup>i</sup> of the intelligence. But the heavenly singing does not extend or reach as far as the Creator's earth, as do the rays of the sun, because of His providential care for the human race. For it <sup>j</sup> rouses to madness those who hear it, and produces in the soul an indescribable and unrestrained pleasure. It causes them to despise food and drink and to die an untimely death through hunger <sup>k</sup> in their desire for the song. For did not the singing of the Sirens, as Homer says, <sup>l</sup> so violently summon listeners that they forgot their country, their home, their friends and necessary foods? And would not that most perfect and most harmonious and truly heavenly music, when it strikes the organ of hearing, compel them to go mad and to be frenzied <sup>m</sup>?

Now concerning the fact that these several (animals) were three years old and three in number we have spoken above. But here something must be said in accordance

<sup>a</sup> Sic; the "two" is superfluous in English, of course.

<sup>b</sup> Phaedrus 246 Ε ἐν οὐρανῷ Ζεύς, ἐλαύνων πτηνὸν ἄρμα.

<sup>c</sup> Or "fitting."

<sup>d</sup> i.e. Moses.

<sup>e</sup> τὴν μουσικὴν.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "is harmonized" (two Arm. verbs being used).

<sup>g</sup> τέχνης.

<sup>h</sup> Or "respiratory"; Aucher renders, "instrumentorum animantium."

<sup>i</sup> Or "contrivance" or "method."

<sup>j</sup> i.e. the heavenly singing.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "to die of early death-bringing hunger."

<sup>l</sup> Od. xii. 39-45 (paraphrased).

<sup>m</sup> κορυβαντιᾶν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

with another form of reasoning.<sup>a</sup> For it appears that each of those things which are sublunar, (namely) earth and water and air are triads.<sup>b</sup> For the earth's divisions are vast continents and islands and peninsulas. And those of water are sea and rivers and lakes. And of the air the two equinoxes, the summer and winter solstices<sup>c</sup> are reckoned as one, for the equinoxes have one (and the same) interval of night and day and in the same manner are neither hot nor cold. And the summer and winter solstices . . .<sup>d</sup> For the sun is borne through these three cycles,<sup>e</sup> those of summer, winter and the equinox.<sup>f</sup> Now this interpretation is most natural.<sup>g</sup> But a more ethical one<sup>h</sup> must be discussed.

To every one of us there happen to belong<sup>i</sup> these things: body and sense-perception and reason.<sup>j</sup> Accordingly, the heifer is related<sup>k</sup> to bodily substance, for our body is tamed

<sup>a</sup> Or "of the mystery"; Arm. xorhourd = both λογισμός and μυστήριον; Aucher here renders, "sub altera specie mysterii."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher more freely renders, "trino gaudere ordine." In Quis Rer. Div. Heres 133-136 Philo speaks of the twofold division of natural elements to fit his allegory of Abraham's dividing of the sacrificial animals "in the middle"; see below, QG iii. 5.

<sup>c</sup> προπαί. The Arm. text adds in parentheses "like the vernal and autumnal"; the Ambrosian paraphrase has "aer quoque habet divisiones temporum veris, aestatis, autumni, hyberni." Probably the Arm. text is here corrupt; the context seems to require a reference only to the two solstices here; see note f below.

<sup>d</sup> There is no verb in the Arm. text; Aucher amplifies in rendering, "quibus adde conversiones aestivam et brumalem."

<sup>e</sup> κύκλους or στροφάς.

<sup>f</sup> τῆς ἰσημερίας (sing.); Philo artificially preserves the threefold division of the climate by counting the two equinoxes as one, and the two solstices separately.

<sup>g</sup> Or "physical"—φυσικωπάτη.

<sup>h</sup> ἠθικωτέρα. <sup>i</sup> συμβαίνει ὑπάρχειν vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> σῶμα καὶ αἴσθησις καὶ λόγος.

<sup>k</sup> Or "likened"—ὡκείωται.

GENESIS, BOOK III

and driven and made to obey and is yoked to the service of life. And Nature is feminine in a material sense,<sup>a</sup> and proves on investigation <sup>b</sup> to be solely suffering and passive rather than active.<sup>c</sup> And the she-goat is to be likened to the community of senses,<sup>d</sup> whether because the various objects perceived are referred to their (appropriate) sense or because the impulse and movement of the soul come from the impressions made upon the senses.<sup>e</sup> And these are first followed by inclination and aversion,<sup>f</sup> which some call occasion,<sup>g</sup> which is an impulse <sup>h</sup> of any kind. Since sense-perception is feminine, for it is affected by the perceived object, (Scripture) couples it with a female animal, a she-goat. But the ram is kin to reason,<sup>i</sup> first of all, because this is masculine and because it is energetic,<sup>j</sup> and then <sup>k</sup> because it is the cause of the world and its foundation.<sup>l</sup> For the ram (is necessary) because of the clothing (which it yields),<sup>m</sup> while reason (is necessary) in the ordering of life. For whatever is not disordered and unruly, from that very fact <sup>n</sup> has reason. But there are two forms of reason: there is one in nature, by which things in the sense-perceptible world are analysed <sup>o</sup>; and (the other is <sup>a</sup> καθ' ἑλγην.

<sup>b</sup> ἐξετάζεται.

<sup>c</sup> φέρειν καὶ πάσχειν μᾶλλον ἢ ποιεῖν.

<sup>d</sup> τῆ τῶν αἰσθήσεων κοινωνία.

<sup>e</sup> ἢ τῆς ψυχῆς ὄρμη καὶ κίνησις γέγονται ἐκ τῶν διὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων φαντασιῶν. For this formulation see, e.g., De Opif. Mundi 166 τὰς διὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων φαντασίας.

<sup>f</sup> οἰκείωσις καὶ ἀλλοτριώσις, cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 154.

<sup>g</sup> Prob. ἀφορμήν, see next note.

<sup>h</sup> ὄρμη. It is not clear whether Philo here contrasts ὄρμη with ἀφορμή, as the Stoics sometimes did, or considers ἀφορμή as a special kind of ὄρμη.

<sup>i</sup> τῷ λόγῳ. <sup>j</sup> ἐνεργός, or "efficient"—δραστήριος.

<sup>k</sup> Aucher's "secundo" and "tertio" are amplifications of the Arm. text.

<sup>l</sup> τοῦ κόσμου καὶ τῆς αὐτοῦ ἰδρύσεως.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "for the ram is through clothing."

<sup>n</sup> εὐθύς (?).

<sup>o</sup> Cf. the parallel passage in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 125 λάβε μοι κριόν, λόγον . . . ἱκανὸν μὲν τὰ σοφίσματα . . . λῦσαι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

found) in those forms which are called incorporeal, by which the things of the intelligible world are analysed. With these are compared the dove and the turtle-dove. For the dove (is a symbol) of physical theory,<sup>a</sup> for it is a very tame bird, and sense-perceptible things are familiar to sight. And the soul of the physicist and physiologist<sup>b</sup> leaps up and grows wings and is borne aloft and travels round the heavens, viewing all its parts and their several causes. But the turtle-dove is likened to the intelligible and incorporeal form (of reason); for just as this creature is fond of solitude,<sup>c</sup> so (the reason) by an effort surpasses the forms of sense-perception<sup>d</sup> and is united in essence with the invisible.<sup>e</sup>

4. (Gen. xv. 10) Why does (Scripture) say, " And he took for Him<sup>f</sup> all these things " ?

Most excellently does it add the expression, " he took for Him," for it is the act of a god-loving soul<sup>g</sup> which has received any good and precious theories and doctrines, to attribute them not to itself but to God, who gives favours.<sup>h</sup>

5. (Gen. xv. 10) What is the meaning of the words " And he divided them in the middle and placed them one opposite the other " <sup>i</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> φυσικῆς θεωρίας.

<sup>b</sup> τοῦ φυσικοῦ καὶ τοῦ φυσιολόγου.

<sup>c</sup> φιλέρημος.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher, wrongly, I think, renders, " excellit violentas sensus species."

<sup>e</sup> For the symbolism of dove and turtle-dove as human and divine reason see Quis Rer. Div. Heres 126-127.

<sup>f</sup> LXX ἔλαβεν αὐτῷ renders Heb. wayyiqah lo, " he (Abraham) took for himself." In Heb. the reflexive pron. is identical in form with the personal pron. Philo artificially presses the use of αὐτῷ (= God) where LXX should have used ἐαυτῷ (= Abraham).
<sup>g</sup> φιλοθέου ψυχῆς. <sup>h</sup> χάριτας.

<sup>i</sup> This phrase provides the text for an extended allegory in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 129-229, which is here greatly abridged, though the passage on the bilateral symmetry of the body in our text is longer than the corresponding passage (§ 151) in Quis Rer. Div. Heres.

GENESIS, BOOK III

The structure of the body also is somewhat of this sort in make-up. For the kindred <sup>a</sup> parts are as it were divided and separated in opposition, inclining and facing toward one another for the sake of natural co-operation <sup>b</sup>; for the Creator of life <sup>c</sup> so divided it for the sake of use, in order that one (part) might be concerned with <sup>d</sup> another and that they might mutually serve one another by exchanging necessary services. For example, that which is directly seen from the middle of the nose is divided between the two eyes, each of them moving round toward the other. For the pupils inclining toward one side, in a certain sense, <sup>e</sup> look toward each other, not wandering outward or straying from the position of the eyes, <sup>f</sup> but each looking toward the direction of the other, especially when they come across something to be seen. Again, hearing is divided between the two ears, and both of them are turned toward each other, tending to one place and to the same activity. Moreover, smell is divided between the two nostrils, going round to the tubes <sup>g</sup> of each nostril, for these are not turned or bent down to the cheeks <sup>h</sup> or drawn up so that one of them faces toward the right and the other toward the left, but being gathered and brought together inwardly, they admit smells by a common act. <sup>i</sup> Moreover, the hands are made, not interchangeable, <sup>j</sup> (but as) brothers and divided parts facing each other, and by nature prepared beforehand for their appropriate activity and deeds in taking and giving and working. Furthermore, the soles of the feet (co-operate), for each foot is so made that it yields to the other, and walking is achieved by the movement of both but cannot be completed by one alone. And not only the

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "brother."

<sup>b</sup> ἕνεκα τῆς φυσικῆς συνεργείας.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ ζωοπλάστης.

<sup>d</sup> περιεργάζεται (?)

<sup>e</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>f</sup> μὴ ἔξω πλανούμεναι μηδ' ἐκ τῆς τῶν ὀφθαλμῶν θέσεως ῥεμβόμεναι vel sim.

<sup>g</sup> πρὸς τοὺς αὐλοὺς.

<sup>h</sup> Or "jaws."

<sup>i</sup> κοινοπραγία.

<sup>j</sup> οὐκ ἐνηλλαγμένοι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

feet <sup>a</sup> and the legs but also the thighs and the backbone <sup>b</sup> and the ribs and the breasts and the right and left sides, being divided in the same way, indicate harmony and fitness and, as it were, the natural union of each of the forms considered.

And in general whoever at one and the same time equally considers two divided parts which have been brought together in one place, will find that both constitute one nature.<sup>c</sup> When, for example, the hands are united with, and extended toward, the fingers, they appear to form <sup>d</sup> a harmony with them. And when the feet are brought together, they adhere to the same place.<sup>e</sup> And the ears are gathered in the form of a theatre with circles, and are united across the cavity.<sup>f</sup> So also in the case of each of the forms of those parts that belong to us, nature effects a division and separates the divided parts so that they are opposite and facing, whereby an ornamental effect <sup>g</sup> is obtained, and at the same time that which is of service (is put into) easy operation. And again it unites each of these several forms in one operation and in the same work, bringing together and assembling what is comprehensively viewed.<sup>h</sup>

Now it is not only the parts of the body that one sees

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "steps."

<sup>b</sup> Perhaps Philo means the vertebrae of the spine; Aucher renders, apparently ad hoc, "scapulae."

<sup>c</sup> μίαν φύσιν.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "to admit."

<sup>e</sup> Meaning slightly uncertain; Aucher renders, more freely, "et pedes recollecti in unionem tendere."

<sup>f</sup> Philo compares the ridges of the ear with the circular tiers of an amphitheatre, as in De Poster. Caini 104 πρὸς γὰρ τὸ ὠτων σχῆμα ἄκρως ἢ θεάτρων κατασκευὴ μεμίμηται. The "cavity" seems to mean the hollow of the skull, represented as similar to the hollow space enclosed by the tiers of the theatre.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "ornament"—κόσμος. Aucher rightly remarks in his footnote that Arm. ašxarh may be rendered either as "mundus," or "ornamentum." The latter meaning is called for here.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "what it views moving in a circle"; Aucher renders, "colligens omnia universim considerata."

GENESIS, BOOK III

thus connected and paired, separated in union and united in division, but also those of the soul. For of this too the higher divisions are two, like public squares,<sup>a</sup> that is the rational and irrational,<sup>b</sup> and the parts of either division have their own sections. Thus, for example, the rational (is divided) into mind and speech,<sup>c</sup> while the sensible part<sup>d</sup> (is divided) into the four senses, since the fifth (sense), touch, is common to the (other) four. Two of these, by which we see and hear, are philosophic,<sup>e</sup> and through them a good life is attained by us. But the others, being non-philosophic, (namely) smell and taste, are servants and have been created only for living. Smelling is for the sake of the smell,<sup>f</sup> for they continuously take up one another<sup>g</sup>; and continuous breathing is the food of living beings. And taste is for the sake of<sup>h</sup> food and drink. Thus smell and taste strengthen the mortal body. But sight and hearing help the immortal mind.

Accordingly, these divisions of our limbs in body and soul were made by the Creator. But one should recognize that the parts of the world also are divided into two and are set up one against the other. The earth (is divided) into mountains and plains, and water into sweet and salt; the sweet or potable<sup>i</sup> is that which springs and streams yield, and the salt is from the sea. And the climate (is divided) into winter and summer, and again into spring

<sup>a</sup> Or "colonnades" (possibly double colonnades); Aucher renders "plateae." The point of the comparison escapes me.

<sup>b</sup> λογικός καὶ ἄλογος.

<sup>c</sup> εἰς νοῦν καὶ τὸν προφορικὸν λόγον—Stoic terminology often used elsewhere in Philo.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ αἰσθητικόν.

<sup>e</sup> φιλόσοφοι.

<sup>f</sup> ὄσφρησις διὰ τὴν ὀσμήν (?); perhaps Aucher is right in taking the Arm. prep. i zern in its usual sense of "through" (= διά with gen.), but, if so, the phrase becomes still more obscure.

<sup>g</sup> Meaning uncertain; Aucher renders, "plura continet se se excipientia."

<sup>h</sup> See note f above.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher's rendering omits the word "potable."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and autumn. And setting out from this fact, Heraclitus wrote books On Nature, getting his opinions on opposites from our theologian,<sup>a</sup> and adding a great number of laborious arguments to them.<sup>b</sup>

6. (Gen. xv. 10) Why does (Scripture) say, "But the birds he did not divide"<sup>c</sup>?

It indicates<sup>d</sup> the fifth and cyclic nature<sup>e</sup> of which the ancients said the heaven is made.<sup>f</sup> For the four elements,<sup>g</sup> as they are called, are mixtures rather than elements, and by them they divide<sup>h</sup> those divided things into that of which they are mixed.<sup>i</sup> Thus, for example, the earth contains in itself also a watery (element) and an aerial one and what is called a fiery one more by comprehension than by sight. And water is not so pure and unmixed that it does not have some share of wind and earth. And in each of the others there are mixtures. But the fifth substance<sup>j</sup> only is made unmixed and pure, for which reason it is not of a nature to be divided. Wherefore it is well said that "the birds he did not divide," since,

<sup>a</sup> τοῦ θεολόγου (Moses).

<sup>b</sup> That Heraclitus was indebted to Moses for his theory of the harmony of opposites is stated by Philo also in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 214.

<sup>c</sup> For another allegory of this half-verse see Quis Rer. Div. Heres 230-236.

<sup>d</sup> ἀνίπτεται.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the quintessence, cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 283 πέμπτη . . . οὐσία κυκλοφορητική. Ultimately the term is based on Aristotle, De Caelo i. 2 f.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "is perfected."

<sup>g</sup> στοιχεῖα.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. verb is 3rd pers. sing., but probably reflects Greek 3rd sing. with neuter pl. subject.

<sup>i</sup> This rendering (like the elements spoken of) is rather mixed up, but so is the Arm. text, as well as Aucher's rendering, "quibus subdividit jam divisa in id (vel, ex illo) ex quo commixta sunt."

<sup>j</sup> Or "quintessence," see note e.

GENESIS, BOOK III

as in the case of birds, it is the nature of celestial bodies, the planets and fixed (stars), to be elevated and to resemble both (kinds of) clean <sup>a</sup> birds, the turtle-dove and the dove, which do not admit of cutting or division, since they belong to the simpler and unmixed fifth substance,<sup>b</sup> and therefore this nature, more especially resembling unity, is indivisible.

*7. (Gen. xv. 11) What is the meaning of the words, "And the birds came down upon the divided bodies" <sup>c</sup> ?

Because the three divided animals, the heifer, the she-goat and the ram, are symbolically,<sup>d</sup> as we have said, earth, water and air. But (we must) harmoniously fit the answer to the question by weighing the truth of the comparison in our reason.<sup>e</sup> May it not be that by the flight of the birds over the divided (bodies, Scripture) alludes to, and warns against, the attack of enemies? For every sublunary nature is full of battles and domestic and foreign disasters.<sup>f</sup> It is for the sake of food and gluttony that birds are seen to fly over divided bodies; and by nature the more powerful rush upon the weaker as if upon dead bodies, often coming at them unexpectedly. But they do not fly over the turtle-dove and dove, for heavenly (beings) are without passion and without guile.

<sup>a</sup> i.e. ritually clean—καθαρῶν.

<sup>b</sup> τῇ ἀπλουστέρα καὶ ἀκράτῳ πέμπτῃ οὐσίᾳ.

<sup>c</sup> LXX (followed by Arm. O.T.) has κατέβη δὲ ὄρνεα ἐπὶ τὰ σώματα, τὰ διχοτομήματα αὐτῶν, differing slightly from Heb., which reads "And there came down the birds-of-prey upon the carcasses."

<sup>d</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>e</sup> By taking Arm. xndreçeloyñ (here = ζητήσεως) to mean "reason," and xorhrdovk' (here λογισμῶ) to mean "mystery," Aucher has given an inexact rendering, "opus est tamen coaptare redditionem rationis, perpensa veritate sub mysterio similitudinis."

<sup>f</sup> ἐμφυλίων καὶ ξένων κακῶν, as in the Greek frag. (which consists of only one sentence).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

*8. (Gen. xv. 11) Why does (Scripture) say, "And Abraham stopped and sat over them"<sup>a</sup>?

Now those who believe that a (literal) sacrifice is signified by the present passage say that the virtuous man stops, as it were, and sits in an assembly,<sup>b</sup> examining the entrails and taking them as a reliable indication<sup>c</sup> (and) as that which shows forth the truth. But we disciples<sup>d</sup> of Moses, clearly understanding the intention of our teacher, who turns his face away from every form of prognosis<sup>e</sup> and believes in God alone, say that by these now gathered birds that fly above he<sup>f</sup> represents the virtuous man,<sup>g</sup> and symbolically indicates nothing else than that he restrains wrongdoing and greed, and is hostile to quarrels and fights, but loves stability and peace. And he is really, as it were, the true guardian of peace. For because of evil men no city has quiet and peace,<sup>h</sup> but they remain unmoved<sup>i</sup> through the goodness of one or two inhabitants<sup>j</sup> whose virtue heals these civic diseases,<sup>k</sup> for the virtue-

<sup>a</sup> Philo's "stopped" (or "went over") is an addition to Scripture; his "sat over" is a slight variation of LXX συν-εκάθισεν αὐτοῖς, which, in turn, mistakes Heb. wayyaššēb 'othām "and he drove them off" for wayyēšēb 'ittām "and he sat with them." The half-verse is also allegorized in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 243-248 where Philo concludes that the good man sits down in the company of unjust men to restrain them like a presiding officer or judge.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ.

<sup>c</sup> Or "symbol."

<sup>d</sup> γνώριμοι.

<sup>e</sup> ἀπὸ παντὸς γνωστικοῦ (?) εἶδους; Aucher renders, "ab omni specie sophistica vel pronostica."

<sup>f</sup> i. e. Moses.

<sup>g</sup> τὸν σπουδαῖον.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag., which begins with this sentence, has ἠρέμησεν ἄν.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. has ἀστασίαστοι.

<sup>j</sup> The Greek frag. from Cod. Rup. reads a little differently δι' ἐνὸς ἢ δευτέρου δικαιοσύνην ἀσκοῦντος; the Arm. read οἰκοῦντος (as in John Monachus) for ἀσκοῦντος.

<sup>k</sup> The Arm., like Anton Melissa, read πολιτικὰς νόσους; Cod. Rup. reads πολεμικὰς νόσους.

GENESIS, BOOK III

loving <sup>a</sup> God grants as an honour to excellent men, <sup>b</sup> that they help not only Him <sup>c</sup> but also those who approach (Him). <sup>d</sup>

9. (Gen. xv. 12) What is the meaning of the words, "At sunset an ecstasy <sup>e</sup> fell upon Abram and behold a great dark fear <sup>f</sup> fell upon him" <sup>g</sup> ?

A certain divine tranquility <sup>h</sup> came suddenly upon the virtuous man. For ecstasy, <sup>i</sup> as its very name clearly shows, is nothing else than the departing and going out of the understanding. <sup>j</sup> But the race of prophets <sup>k</sup> is wont to suffer this. For when the mind is divinely possessed <sup>l</sup> and becomes filled with God, <sup>m</sup> it is no longer within itself, for it receives the divine spirit <sup>n</sup> to dwell within it. Nay rather, as he <sup>o</sup> himself has said, it fell upon (Abram), for it does not come upon one gently and softly but makes a sudden

<sup>a</sup> φιλαρέτου, as in Anton Melissa ; Cod. Rup. has φιλανθρώπου.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "to excellence"—καλοκάγαθία.

<sup>c</sup> God rather than the city seems to be referred to by the pronoun, which has no distinction of gender in Arm. ; the Greek frag. has τοῦ μὴ μόνον αὐτὸν ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς πλησιάζοντας ὠφελεῖσθαι ; Aucher renders differently, "nec eis solum modo sed illis quoque qui (vel, quibus) appropinquant ad utilitatem parandam."

<sup>d</sup> The pronoun is supplied from the context.

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἔκστασις ; Heb. tardēmāh "deep sleep."

<sup>f</sup> LXX φόβος μέγας σκοτεινός.

<sup>g</sup> Philo expounds this verse at length in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 249-265, enumerating four kinds of ecstasy, of which the fourth is ἐνθουσιῶντος καὶ θεοφορήτου τὸ πάθος.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. ὑπαρηγοῦμνη usu. = ἀσφάλεια but connotes freedom from anxiety.

<sup>i</sup> Here the Arm. word for "ecstasy," artakaçout'ium is different from that used above to render LXX ἔκστασις ; the latter, hιαçoumne more properly means "astonishment."

<sup>j</sup> λογισμοῦ ἢ διανοίας.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ προφητικὸν γένος.

<sup>l</sup> ἐνθουσιάζει.

<sup>m</sup> θεοφόρητος γίνεταί.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ θεῖον πνεῦμα.

<sup>o</sup> Moses.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

attack.<sup>a</sup> Excellent, moreover, is that which is added, (namely) that “a great dark fear<sup>b</sup> fell upon him,” for all these are ecstasies of the mind, since he who is in fear is not within himself. And darkness is an impediment to sight; and the greater the fear is, so much duller does (the mind) become in seeing and understanding. These things, moreover, are not ineptly<sup>c</sup> spoken of but as evidence of the clear knowledge of prophecy, by which oracles and laws are legislated by God.<sup>d</sup>

10. (Gen. xv. 13-14) Why (does Scripture say), “It was said to him,<sup>e</sup> Thou shalt surely know<sup>f</sup> that thy seed shall be a sojourner<sup>g</sup> in a land not its own, and they<sup>h</sup> will enslave them and oppress them and afflict them<sup>i</sup> for four hundred years”<sup>j</sup>?

Most excellently is it indicated that “it was said to him,” for the prophet seems to say something but he does not give his own oracle<sup>k</sup> but is the interpreter<sup>l</sup> of another,<sup>m</sup> who puts things into his mind. However, that which he utters and murmurs in words is all true and divine; first of all, because the human race lives on another’s earth, for all that which is under heaven is the possession of God, and those who live on it may properly and legitimately

<sup>a</sup> ὄρμην vel sim.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. word for “fear” here is different from that used above to render LXX φόβος.

<sup>c</sup> οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>d</sup> χρησμοὶ καὶ νόμοι ὑπὸ τοῦ θεοῦ νομοθετοῦνται.

<sup>e</sup> Most LXX MSS. and Heb. have “to Abram.”

<sup>f</sup> Lit. “knowing thou shalt know.” The Arm., like the LXX, reflects the Heb. idiom.

<sup>g</sup> πάροικος.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the natives.

<sup>i</sup> δουλώσουσι καὶ ταπεινώσουσι καὶ κακώσουσι αὐτούς, as in some LXX MSS.

<sup>j</sup> The verse is discussed also in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 266-271.

<sup>k</sup> Or “edict.”

<sup>l</sup> ἔρμηνεύς, here rendered by two Arm. words.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. of God; cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 266.

GENESIS, BOOK III

be said to be sojourners<sup>a</sup> rather than to inhabit their own territory, (which) they do not<sup>b</sup> hold by nature. Second, because the whole race of mortals<sup>c</sup> is a slave.<sup>d</sup> And no one is free<sup>e</sup> but (everyone) has many masters and gets beatings and ill-treatment both outside and inside himself; outside there is winter, which chills him, and summer, which burns him, and hunger and thirst and many other afflictions; and inside there are sense-pleasures, desires, sorrow and fear. But this slavery is limited to four hundred years after the above-mentioned passions come upon (them).<sup>f</sup> For this reason it was earlier said<sup>g</sup> that "Abram stopped<sup>h</sup> and sat over them," (that is) he was hindering and driving off and turning away, in word<sup>i</sup> the flesh-eating birds which were flying over the divided animals, but in deed<sup>j</sup> the afflictions which come upon men. For he who is by nature zealous for virtue and by practice is a lover of man,<sup>j</sup> is a healer of our race and is a genuine and true apothecary<sup>k</sup> and dispeller of evils. Now all these are allegories of the soul.<sup>l</sup> For the soul of the wise man, when it comes from above<sup>m</sup> from the ether and enters into a mortal and is sown<sup>n</sup> in the field of the body, is truly a sojourner in a land not its own, for the earthy nature of the body is an alien<sup>o</sup> to the pure mind and subjects it to slavery and brings upon it all kinds of suffering until the <sup>a</sup> παροικεῖν.

<sup>b</sup> The negative seems intrusive here.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "mortalis quisque in genere."

<sup>d</sup> δούλος; cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 267-271.

<sup>e</sup> ἐλεύθερος.

<sup>f</sup> The point is more clearly made in the parallel, Quis Rer. Div. Heres 269, "And the slavery is for 400 years, in accordance with the powers of the four passions."

<sup>g</sup> See QG iii. 8 on Gen. xv. 11.

<sup>h</sup> Or "went over."

<sup>i</sup> λόγῳ μὲν . . . ἔργῳ δέ.

<sup>j</sup> φιλάνθρωπος.

<sup>k</sup> φαρμακευτής.

<sup>l</sup> περὶ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀλληγορεῖται.

<sup>m</sup> ἄνωθεν.

<sup>n</sup> σπείρεται.

<sup>o</sup> ξένος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Saviour <sup>a</sup> brings to judgment the race taken captive <sup>b</sup> by passion, and condemns it ; for thus does it once more enter into freedom. <sup>c</sup> Therefore (Scripture) adds <sup>d</sup> “ But the nation whom they shall serve I will judge, and after this they shall go out with great possessions,” <sup>e</sup> (that is) with the same measure and even better, inasmuch as the mind <sup>f</sup> is released from its evil bond, <sup>g</sup> the body. It <sup>h</sup> goes forth and exchanges its state not only for salvation and freedom but also for possessions, that it may not leave behind for its enemies anything good or useful. For every rational soul <sup>i</sup> bears good fruit or is fruitful. <sup>j</sup> And one who is thought to be very responsible <sup>k</sup> and virtuous <sup>l</sup> in his thoughts is none the less unable to preserve them to the end. <sup>m</sup> Wherefore it is proper that the virtuous man <sup>n</sup> with resolution should attain to that which he has in mind, and for the sake of this it is fitting that he have thoughts of wisdom. <sup>o</sup> For just as some trees enjoy fertility in the first growth of their fruit but are not able to keep nourishing <sup>p</sup> them, so that for some slight cause their entire fruit may

<sup>a</sup> ὁ σωτήρ (God).

<sup>b</sup> Aucher accurately renders Arm. geriç by “ captivantem ” but the context requires a pass. participle in the Greek original.

<sup>c</sup> εἰς ἐλευθερίαν.

<sup>d</sup> Gen. xv. 14.

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἀποσκευῆς.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> συνδέσμου or “ bond-fellow ”—συνδεσμίον.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. pl. verbs undoubtedly refer to the grammatical pl. mitk “ mind ”: Aucher correctly renders the verbs as sing.

<sup>i</sup> πᾶσα λογικὴ ψυχὴ.

<sup>j</sup> Text obscure and prob. corrupt, as Aucher notes.

<sup>k</sup> This is the best approximation I can give to Arm. partapan, which usu. renders ἔνοχος, ὑπόχρεως vel sim. ; Aucher renders, “ onustum.”

<sup>l</sup> σπουδαῖος.

<sup>n</sup> τὸν σπουδαῖον.

<sup>m</sup> εἰς τέλος.

<sup>o</sup> This difficult sentence is less literally rendered by Aucher, “ id enim decet probum hominem, consequi ultro meditata, sicut etiam eis congruum sapientiae consilium.”

<sup>p</sup> τρέφειν.

GENESIS, BOOK III

fall <sup>a</sup> or be shaken off before it reaches maturity, so also the souls of inconstant men <sup>b</sup> understand many things that lead to fertility but are unable to preserve them intact <sup>c</sup> until they are perfected, as is proper for a virtuous man who collects his own possessions.

*11. (Gen. xv. 15) What is the meaning of the words, "But thou shalt go to thy fathers with peace,<sup>a</sup> nourished <sup>e</sup> in a good old age" ?

Clearly this indicates the incorruptibility of the soul, which removes its habitation from the mortal body <sup>f</sup> and returns as if to the mother-city,<sup>g</sup> from which it originally moved its habitation to this place.<sup>h</sup> For when it is said to a dying person, "Thou shalt go to thy fathers," what else is this than to represent another life without the body, which only the soul of the wise man ought to live ? <sup>i</sup> And (Scripture) speaks of "the fathers" of Abraham, meaning not those who begot him, his grandfathers and forefathers, for they were not all worthy of praise <sup>j</sup> so as to be a source of pride and glory to those who reach the same rank,<sup>k</sup> but in the opinion of many it seems that "the fathers" indicate all the elements <sup>l</sup> into which the dissolution (of the

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "flow away."

<sup>b</sup> αἱ τῶν ἀβεβαίων ψυχαί.

<sup>c</sup> ὀλόκληρα.

<sup>d</sup> So LXX, μετ' εἰρήνης; Heb. "in peace."

<sup>e</sup> So LXX, τραφεῖς; Heb. has "buried" = ταφεῖς.

<sup>f</sup> ἐναργῶς ἀφθαρσίαν ψυχῆς αἰνίττεται μετοικιζομένης ἀπὸ τοῦ θνητοῦ σώματος, as in the paraphrase of Procopius.

<sup>g</sup> μητρόπολιν.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. this world or the body.

<sup>i</sup> τί ἕτερον ἢ ζῶν ἐτέραν παρίστησι τὴν ἄνευ σώματος καθ' ἣν ψυχὴν μόνην τοῦ σοφοῦ συμβαίνει ζῆν, as in Procopius, except that the latter omits τοῦ σοφοῦ.

<sup>j</sup> ἐπαινετοί, as in Procopius (which omits the rest of the clause down to "rank").

<sup>k</sup> τάξιν. Meaning uncertain; Aucher renders, "qui assecutus est successionem ejusdem ordinis."

<sup>l</sup> πάντα τὰ στοιχεῖα. Perhaps the original was τὰ τοῦ παντός στοιχεῖα "the elements of the universe."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

body)<sup>a</sup> takes place. To me, however, it seems to indicate the incorporeal Logoi<sup>b</sup> of the divine world, whom elsewhere it is accustomed to call "angels."<sup>c</sup> Moreover, not ineptly does (Scripture) speak of "being nourished with peace" and "in a good old age." For the evil and sinful man is nourished and lives by strife, and ends and grows old in evil.<sup>d</sup> But the virtuous man in both his lives—in that with the body and in that without the body—enjoys peace,<sup>e</sup> and alone is very good<sup>f</sup> while no one of the foolish<sup>g</sup> is (so), even though he should be longer-lived than an elephant. Wherefore (Scripture) has accurately said, "Thou shalt go to thy fathers," nourished not in a long<sup>h</sup> old age but in a "good"<sup>i</sup> old age. For many foolish men linger on<sup>j</sup> to a long life,<sup>k</sup> but to a good and virtuous life only he who is a lover of wisdom.<sup>l</sup> *12. (Gen. xv. 16) Why does (God) say, "In the fourth generation they shall return hither"?

The number four is the most harmonious<sup>m</sup> with all numbers, as it is the most perfect.<sup>n</sup> And it is the root and base<sup>o</sup> of the most perfect decad. Now in accordance with

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "loosing of the dissolution."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher prefers the reading bnaks "inhabitants" to bans "Logoi."

<sup>c</sup> The section from "worthy of praise" to "angels" is telescoped in the Greek paraphrase to ἀλλ' ἔοικεν αἰνίττεσθαι πατέρας οὓς ἐτέρωθι καλεῖν ἀγγέλους εἶωθεν.

<sup>d</sup> Perhaps the original was τελευτᾷ ἐν γῆρα κακῶ "ends in an evil old age."

<sup>e</sup> εἰρήνην χρῆται.

<sup>f</sup> Or "very brave."

<sup>g</sup> τῶν ἀφρόνων or πονηρῶν.

<sup>h</sup> μακρῶ.

<sup>i</sup> καλῶ.

<sup>j</sup> τείνουσι, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>k</sup> The Greek frag. has αἰῶνα.

<sup>l</sup> The Greek frag. has ὁ φρονήσεως ἐραστής.

<sup>m</sup> παναρμόνιος. This adj. is applied to the hebdomad in De Vita Mosis ii. 210, cf. De Opif. Mundi 48.

<sup>n</sup> For other references to the perfection of the tetrad see Staehle, pp. 26-31.

<sup>o</sup> ῥίζα καὶ θεμέλιον; cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 40 πρὸς τετράδα, τὴν δεκάδος ἀρχὴν τε καὶ πηγὴν.

GENESIS, BOOK III

the principle <sup>a</sup> of the number four all things being collected return hither, as He himself has said. And as it is perfect in itself,<sup>b</sup> it is filled with perfected beings.<sup>c</sup> Now what do I mean by this? In the generation of living beings the first (stage) is the sowing of seed. The second is when the various organs are modelled <sup>d</sup> by something akin to nature.<sup>e</sup> The third, after the fashioning,<sup>f</sup> is their growth. And the fourth, above all these, is the perfecting of their generation. The same principle <sup>g</sup> applies to plants. The seed is sown in the earth and then it is moved upward and downward, partly into roots, partly into stalks. Then it grows, and in the fourth (stage) bears fruit. Again, trees first of all bear fruit, which then grows. In the third (stage) it changes colour, having become ripe, and in the fourth (stage), which is the last, it becomes full and complete. And thereupon follow the use and enjoyment of it.<sup>h</sup>

13. (Gen. xv. 16) What is the meaning of the words, "Not yet full are the sins of the Amorites until now"?

Some say that by this expression Fate <sup>i</sup> was introduced by Moses into his narrative,<sup>j</sup> as though all things were to be completed in accordance with this time, and times <sup>k</sup> were to be determined by periods.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> κατὰ τὸν λόγον.

<sup>b</sup> αὐτοτελής.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "perfectos quoque generat plane."

<sup>d</sup> τυπούσθαι.

<sup>e</sup> Apparently the Arm. = ὑπό τινος τῆ φύσει συγγενοῦς.

<sup>f</sup> μετὰ τὸ πλάττειν.

<sup>g</sup> λόγος.

<sup>h</sup> χρήσις καὶ ἀπόλαυσις.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. ḥakatagir renders εἰμαρμένη, μοῖρα and τύχη.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. patmout'eamb is the instr. case of the noun that usu. renders ἱστορία or διήγησις, sometimes ἐξήγησις. Aucher renders, "explicite," and adds in a footnote "notat vox illa . . . historice, id est enarrando explicite."

<sup>k</sup> The Arm. uses two different words for "time."

<sup>l</sup> περίοδος. Probably, as Aucher suggests, this section was originally longer and contained Philo's own interpretation in contrast to that of "some" who saw a reference to Fate in this verse. Such a contrasted interpretation is given in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 300-306.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

14. (Gen. xv. 17) What is the meaning of the words, "When the sun went down there came a flame" <sup>a</sup>?

Either the sun appeared flame-like in its setting, or another flame, not lightning but some kind of fire akin to it, fell <sup>b</sup> from above at evening. This is the plain interpretation of the oracle. But this is to be said by way of conjecture.<sup>c</sup>

15. (Gen. xv. 17) What is the meaning of the words, "Behold, a smoking furnace and torches <sup>d</sup> of fire, which passed through the midst of the half-pieces" <sup>e</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>f</sup> is clear, for the fountain and root of the divine Logos <sup>g</sup> wishes the victims to be consumed, not by that fire which has been given to us for use,<sup>h</sup> but by that which comes down from above from the ether, in order that the purity of the substance <sup>i</sup> of heaven may be attested by the holiness which is in the victims. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>j</sup> all sublunary things are likened to the smoking furnace, because of the vapour from earth and water, in which are the divisions of nature. As has been shown above,<sup>k</sup> the several things which are parts of

<sup>a</sup> So LXX, ἐπεὶ δὲ ἐγένετο ὁ ἥλιος πρὸς δυσμαῖς, φλόξ ἐγένετο; Heb. reads "when the sun set and it was dark." Apparently LXX read Heb. lahat "flame" instead of 'alātāh "darkness."

<sup>b</sup> ἔσταξε.

<sup>c</sup> διὰ δοξῶν vel sim. Aucher renders, "verum illud quod sensum respicit dicendum est." Evidently the rest of the section is missing or is to be supplied from the following section on the second half of the biblical verse.

<sup>d</sup> So LXX, λαμπάδες; Heb. has sing., "torch."

<sup>e</sup> ἀνὰ μέσον τῶν διχοτομημάτων, as in LXX. For a parallel allegory see Quis Rer. Div. Heres 308-312.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. God.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. for profane use.

<sup>i</sup> τῆς οὐσίας.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>k</sup> QG iii. 5.

GENESIS, BOOK III

the world are divided into two. And by these,<sup>a</sup> like torches of fire, are kindled the most swiftly moving and most effective powers,<sup>b</sup> the divine words,<sup>c</sup> burning and aflame. Now they keep the universe intact, one with another together,<sup>d</sup> and now they purify the superfluous fog. The most particular and proper cause<sup>e</sup> is to be explained in the following way. Human life is like a smoking furnace, not having a clear and pure fire and pure<sup>f</sup> light, but abundant smoke (coming) through a smoking and obscuring flame, which produces fog and darkness and veiling of the eyes, not of the body, but of the soul, which prevents them from seeing clearly outwards until the Saviour God<sup>g</sup> lights the heavenly torches. By these I mean the most pure and holy sparks,<sup>h</sup> which unite the two parts divided on the right side and on the left, and at the same time illuminate them and become the causes of harmony and splendour.<sup>i</sup>

16. (Gen. xv. 18) Why does (Scripture) say, "On that

<sup>a</sup> What "these" are is not wholly clear. To judge from the parallel in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 311-312 "these" are "the divided things," which are kindled by the divine powers. We should therefore correct the Arm. construction here to read "and these . . . are kindled by the . . . divine words."

<sup>b</sup> δυνάμεις.

<sup>c</sup> οἱ θεῖοι λόγοι; Aucher renders more freely, "ardentes sane velut ignei sermones divini."

<sup>d</sup> This is the literal meaning of the obscure Arm. text, which Aucher renders, "modo universum totum secum invicem integre servantas." The general idea is the same as that in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 312, "the divine powers, as they pass through the midst of objects and bodies, destroy nothing—for the half-pieces remain unharmed—but divide and distinguish very well the nature of each."

<sup>e</sup> ἡ ἰδιωτάτη καὶ οἰκειοτάτη αἰτία.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. uses two different words for "pure."

<sup>g</sup> ὁ σωτήρ θεός.

<sup>h</sup> Prob. σπινθήρας, as in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 309; the Arm. word can also mean "rays, beams."

<sup>i</sup> αἰτιαὶ γινόμενοι ἁρμονίας καὶ λαμπρότητος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

day <sup>a</sup> He made a covenant with Abraham, saying, To thy seed will I give this land from the river of Egypt to the great river Euphrates ” <sup>b</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>c</sup> is that it describes the boundaries of the region between the two rivers, that of Egypt and the Euphrates, for anciently the land and the river were homonymously <sup>d</sup> called “ Egypt.” A witness to this is the poet, <sup>e</sup> who says, “ At the river of Egypt stay the ships which you steer from both sides.” But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>f</sup> it indicates felicity, <sup>g</sup> which is the fulfilment of three perfections, <sup>h</sup> of spiritual goods, of corporeal goods and of those which are external. This (doctrine) was praised by some of the philosophers who came afterward, (such as) Aristotle and the Peripatetics. Moreover this is said to have been also the legislation <sup>i</sup> of Pythagoras. For Egypt is the symbol of corporeal and external goods, while the Euphrates (is the symbol) of the spiritual, for through them veritable and true joy <sup>j</sup> comes into being, having as its source wisdom and every virtue. And the boundaries rightly take their beginning from Egypt and they end at the Euphrates. For in the end things happen to the soul which we manage to approach with difficulty, but first one must pass and run through the bodily and

<sup>a</sup> Philo agrees with some LXX MSS. which, like Heb. and the oriental versions, read ἐν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ἐκείνῃ; most LXX MSS. read ἐκεῖ.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. aracani = “ Euphrates ”; the Arm. O.T. transcribes the Greek name.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> ὁμωνυμία.

<sup>e</sup> Homer, Od. xiv. 258 στήσα δ' ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ ποταμῶν νέας ἀμφιελίσσας. The wording is slightly different in the Arm. text.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> ἀνίσταται τὴν εὐτυχίαν (or εὐπραγίαν).

<sup>h</sup> So Arm. lit.; Aucher renders, “ perfecta plenitudo triplicium bonorum.” Prob. the original had merely τελειότης τριῶν ἀγαθῶν.

<sup>i</sup> ἡ νομοθεσία.

<sup>j</sup> Here, as elsewhere, Philo plays on the similarity of sound between Εὐφράτης and εὐφροσύνη.

GENESIS, BOOK III

external goods,<sup>a</sup> health and keenness of sense <sup>b</sup> and beauty and strength, which are wont to flourish and grow and be attained in youth. And similarly those things which pertain to profit and selling, (such as) piloting and agriculture and trade. For all (this) is proper to youth, especially those things which have rightly been so described.<sup>c</sup>

17. (Gen. xv. 19-21) <sup>d</sup> Who are "the Kenites and the Kenizzites and the Kadmonites and the Hittites and the Perizzites and the Rephaim and the Amorites and the Canaanites and the Girgashites and the Jebusites" ?

These ten nations are reckoned (as) evils which he destroys <sup>e</sup> because of being neighbours,<sup>f</sup> since also a rejected and counterfeit denarius <sup>g</sup> (is a neighbour ?) of acceptable ones.<sup>h</sup> For the all-perfection <sup>i</sup> of the number ten is most <sup>a</sup> The Arm. text from "in the end" to "external (goods)" is far from clear to me. Aucher's rendering is fairly literal but also obscure, "in ultimis enim occurrunt res animae; quibus aegre appropinquare succedit nobis, postquam tamen transitum fuerit per corporales et externas." His "postquam" is questionable; yarajagoyñ means "first" or "formerly," and here is contrasted with yetoy housk "in the end" or "finally." The general sense of the passage seems to be that youth is the time for enjoying corporeal and external goods, and later life for spiritual goods. <sup>b</sup> εὐαισθησίαν.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "juvenem namque omnia decere, maxime praedicta jure dictum est."

<sup>d</sup> These verses are not commented on elsewhere by Philo.

<sup>e</sup> Or "which destroy," assuming that there was a neut. pl. subj. (ἔθνη) in the original; variant "which (he) likens."

<sup>f</sup> The sentence is obscure and prob. corrupt; Aucher renders, "decem gentes numerantur malitiae quas destruit ob vicinitatem."

<sup>g</sup> Arm. dahekan = "denarius," "drachma," etc.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "of loved ones." The sentence is very puzzling; Aucher renders, "quoniam Denarius quoque falsus, et male signatus vicinus est bono ac amabili." The Arm. glossator explains, "The evil which is ten strives to be like the good, just as a rejected denarius, etc."

<sup>i</sup> ἡ παντέλεια, cf. De Decalogo 20 τὸν ἀριθμὸν δεκάδι τῇ παντέλειᾳ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

completely harmonious <sup>a</sup> and is the measure of an infinity <sup>b</sup> of numbers, by which the world and the mind of the wise man are ordered and ruled. But evil overturns and changes its <sup>c</sup> substance, <sup>d</sup> overlooking the most necessary powers, because of its only being said <sup>e</sup> that that which is good is the pursuit of virtue. <sup>f</sup> For the wicked man is such as to admit opinion rather than truth, in which are those who see. <sup>g</sup> *13. (Gen. xvi. 1) Why did not Sarah the wife of Abraham bear him children ?

As a barren woman is the mother of the race spoken of ; first of all, in order that the seed of offspring <sup>h</sup> may appear more wonderful and miraculous. <sup>i</sup> Second, in order that

<sup>a</sup> παναρμονιώτατος (sic !).

<sup>b</sup> ἀπειρίας ; cf. De Decalogo 27 ἡ ἀπειρία τῶν ἀριθμῶν ταύτη (sc. τῆ δεκάδι) μετρεῖται.

<sup>c</sup> The decad's ?

<sup>d</sup> Or "essence"—οὐσίαν.

<sup>e</sup> Variant "heard."

<sup>f</sup> This is a lit. translation of the troublesome Arm. text, which Aucher renders, "hujus tamen substantiam convertit subvertitque malitia, despectis viribus pernecessariis, ut solum restet illud quod dixerit (vel, audierit) bonum esse studium virtutis."

<sup>g</sup> The last phrase is unintelligible to me. One ms. adds "The birth of Ishmael"; another ms. prefixes these two words to the following section. Aucher renders—on what basis I do not know—, "in quibus semen prophetarum (vel, admittens ad aucupandos videntes)." The Arm. glossator explains, not very helpfully, "the virtuous man with single constancy abides in the truth and sees the good, while the evil man (abides) in opinion, and hearing belongs to him, who has not a credible birth, as seeing belongs to the former one." Here there seems to be an allusion to the symbolism of the names Israel ("seeing God") and Ishmael ("hearing God").

<sup>h</sup> So Arm. lit. = τὸ τῶν ἐγγόνων σπέρμα ; prob. the original read, as in the paraphrase of Procopius, ἡ τῶν ἐγγόνων σπορά ; Aucher renders awkwardly, "generationibus filius (appareat)."

<sup>i</sup> Prob., as in Procopius, παράδοξος . . . θαυματουργηθείσα. The verse is rather differently allegorized in De Congressu 1-10.

GENESIS, BOOK III

the conceiving and bearing might be not so much through union with a man as through the providence <sup>a</sup> of God. For when a barren woman gives birth, it is not by way of generation <sup>b</sup> but the work of the divine power.<sup>c</sup> This is the literal meaning.<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> first, giving birth is wholly peculiar to woman, just as begetting is to man. (Scripture) therefore wishes the soul of the virtuous man to be likened to the male sex rather than the female, considering that activity rather than passivity is congenial to him.<sup>f</sup> Furthermore, both (kinds of mind) beget—the virtuous mind and the wicked—, but they beget differently and opposites.<sup>g</sup> The virtuous man (begets) good and useful things, while the wicked and evil man (begets) dirty, shameful and useless things. And the third (point) is that he who has progressed <sup>h</sup> even to the very end <sup>i</sup> is near to what is called by some the forgotten and unknown light.<sup>j</sup> This progressive man <sup>k</sup> does not <sup>a</sup> προνοία or ἐπιμελεία; the Greek frag. from Cod. Barb. ap. Wendland has ἐπιφροσύνη, Procopius has ἐπ' εὐφροσύνη.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "not of being in accordance with generation" (or "offspring"); Aucher renders, "non pariendi facultatis est"; the Greek frag. has more simply οὐ γεννήσεως (ἔργον).

<sup>c</sup> τῆς θεᾶς δυνάμεως ἔργον, as in the Greek frag. (omitting the article), which ends here.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ δρᾶν μᾶλλον ἢ τὸ πάσχειν αὐτῷ οἰκείον εἶναι.

<sup>g</sup> διαφόρως καὶ ἐναντία.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ προκόψας.

<sup>i</sup> καὶ δὴ εἰς τὰ ἄκρα vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> The text is obscure; Aucher, who punctuates and construes differently, renders, "qui est adhuc proficiscens, ad ipsam summitatem invitandus, prope est ad lumen, quod apud aliquos dicitur oblivioni traditum ac incognitum." The Arm. glossator explains it in this way, "He who is alienated from sin has made a beginning of virtue; of this some say that such a man is near the unknown light, which he formerly knew, but strayed from through sin, and now has come back to." Perhaps a partial parallel is to be found in De Congressu 5-6, which contrasts the preliminary studies (Hagar) with complete virtue (Sarah).

<sup>k</sup> Reading Arm. γαράjatealn (ptc.) for γαράjateln (inf.).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

beget vices nor virtues either, since he is not yet complete, but he is the same as one who is not ill and (yet) not altogether well in body, but is now coming (back) from a long illness to health.

19. (Gen. xvi. 1) What is the meaning of the words, "And she had an Egyptian maidservant, whose name was Hagar" ?

"Hagar" is interpreted as "sojourning,"<sup>a</sup> and she is a servant, waiting on a more perfect nature. And she is very naturally an Egyptian by race. For she is the study of school disciplines,<sup>b</sup> and being a lover<sup>c</sup> of wide learning,<sup>d</sup> is in a certain sense<sup>e</sup> a servant waiting on virtue,<sup>f</sup> since school studies<sup>g</sup> are serviceable to him who needs help in receiving it,<sup>h</sup> inasmuch as virtue has the soul as its place, while the school studies need bodily organs; and Egypt is symbolically the body, (wherefore Scripture) rightly describes the form<sup>i</sup> of the school studies as Egyptian. Moreover, it also named her "sojourning" for the reason that sophistry<sup>j</sup> is a sojourner in comparison with native virtue<sup>k</sup> which alone is at home<sup>l</sup> and which is mistress of

<sup>a</sup> παροίκησις; cf. De Congressu 20.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπιτήδευσις τῶν ἐγκυκλίων ἐπιστημῶν vel sim.

<sup>c</sup> Or "friend."

<sup>d</sup> πολυμαθείας.

<sup>e</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>f</sup> ἀρετῆς. Aucher, misled in part by the seemingly erroneous repetition of bazoumoumnout'ium (= πολυμάθεια) in the Arm. text, renders, "nam studium encyclicae disciplinae deligit copiam scientiae et copiosa scientia tamquam ministra est virtutis."

<sup>g</sup> τὰ ἐγκύκλια.

<sup>h</sup> This is a slight emendation of the Arm. text which seems to mean lit. "who is of help, etc.;" Aucher renders freely but more intelligibly, "qui scit proficere acquisitione ejus ad acquirendam virtutem."<sup>i</sup> εἶδος or ιδέα.

<sup>j</sup> τὰ σοφίσματα; cf. De Congressu 18.

<sup>k</sup> κατὰ σύγκρισιν τῆς πατρίας ἀρετῆς.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "belongs" (= ἐπιτηδεῖα?).

GENESIS, BOOK III

intermediate education <sup>a</sup> and provides for us <sup>b</sup> through the school studies.

*20. (Gen. xvi. 2) Why does Sarah say to Abraham, <sup>c</sup> "Behold, the Lord has closed me up so as not to bear. Go into my maidservant that thou mayest beget children <sup>d</sup> from her" ?

In the literal sense <sup>e</sup> it is the same (as) not to be envious and jealous (but) to look out for the wise man and husband and genuine kinsman. <sup>f</sup> At the same time, to make up for her childlessness through the maidservant which she had, she designated her as her husband's concubine. Moreover, the excessiveness of her wifely love is indicated (thereby), for since she seemed to be barren, she did not think it right to let her husband's household suffer from childlessness, for she valued his gain more than her own standing. That is the literal meaning. <sup>g</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>h</sup> it has somewhat the following argument. <sup>i</sup> Those who are unable by virtue to beget fine and praiseworthy deeds ought to pursue intermediate education, <sup>j</sup> and in a certain sense <sup>k</sup> produce children from the school studies, <sup>l</sup> for wide learning <sup>m</sup> is a sort of whetstone

<sup>a</sup> τῆς μέσης παιδείας, cf. De Congressu 12, where Colson translates it as "lower instruction."

<sup>b</sup> χορηγέι (?); Aucher "choreas agit"; cf. De Congressu 19.

<sup>c</sup> LXX, Heb. and Arm. O.T. have "Abram." The form "Abraham" is first used in Scripture in Gen. xvii. 5, see below, QG iii. 43.

<sup>d</sup> Some LXX mss. in agreement with Heb. read τεκνοποιήσω(μαι), as do the Oriental versions.

<sup>e</sup> τῷ μὲν ῥητῷ.

<sup>f</sup> The construction and sense are not wholly clear to me; Aucher renders, "in ipsa littera idem est non invidere et providere de sapiente," etc.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> λόγον.

<sup>k</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>m</sup> πολυμάθεια.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> τὴν μέσῃν παιδείᾳν.

<sup>l</sup> ἐκ τῶν ἐγκυκλίων.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of the mind and reason.<sup>a</sup> But most excellently was it written, "He closed me up," for what is closed is wont to open at a suitable time. So that his<sup>b</sup> wisdom<sup>c</sup> is not resigned<sup>d</sup> to being childless for ever but knows that she will bear children. She will however, not bear now but when the soul<sup>e</sup> shows purity of perfection.<sup>f</sup> But while it is imperfect it is sufficient for it to have a milder and gentler teaching<sup>g</sup> which comes through the school studies. Whence it is not for nothing that in the sacred athletic contests those who cannot take the first prizes in the contest are deserving of the second. For a first and second and third prize are put before the contestants by the officials of the games, who resemble nature, for before him<sup>h</sup> it puts a first prize of virtue and a second of the school studies.

*21. (Gen. xvi. 3) Why does (Scripture) call Sarah the wife of Abraham,<sup>i</sup> for it says, "And Sarah the wife of Abraham, taking her maidservant Hagar the Egyptian, gave her into his hands"<sup>j</sup>?

The theologian<sup>j</sup> emphasizes<sup>k</sup> the marriage of worthy <sup>a</sup> ἀκόνη τις τοῦ νοῦ καὶ τοῦ λόγου. In De Congressu 25 Rachel, as symbol of the lower education, is called a whetstone.

<sup>b</sup> To what or whom "his" refers is not clear, but prob. is the mind.

<sup>c</sup> σοφία.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. včarem has a number of meanings, such as "complete," "discharge," "release," none of which seems to fit here; Aucher renders freely, "spe destituta erat ac fixa in consilio."

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "souls"; but in the next sentence the verb is sing.

<sup>f</sup> καθαριότητα τελειότητος (a collocation that sounds un-Philonic).

<sup>g</sup> ἐπιεικεστέρα καὶ γαλακτώδει διδασκαλία χρῆσθαι; cf. De Congressu 19.

<sup>h</sup> The person referred to is not clear.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. why does Scripture repeat the phrase "wife of Abraham?" ; cf. De Congressu 73-80.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ θεολόγος (Moses).

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "seals" or "stamps"; Aucher renders, "concludit comprobatione."

GENESIS, BOOK III

persons in view of the intemperance of lascivious ones. For these, because of their concubines, whom they madly love, look down upon their wise<sup>a</sup> wives. Wherefore (Scripture) introduces the virtuous man<sup>b</sup> as a more constant<sup>c</sup> husband to his wife when the occasion dictated<sup>d</sup> the use of the maidservant. And (Scripture represents) the wise wife as more sober<sup>e</sup> when he entered another's bed.<sup>f</sup> For with the concubine the embrace was a bodily one for the sake of begetting children. But with the wife the union was one of the soul harmonized to heavenly love.<sup>g</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>h</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> he who has truthfully entrusted his thoughts<sup>j</sup> to wisdom and justice and other virtues,<sup>k</sup> when once he has received the thoughts<sup>l</sup> of wisdom and has tasted marriage with her, remains her mate<sup>m</sup> and husband, even though he provides<sup>n</sup> abundantly for the education of the school.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Probably, as Wendland suggests, the Arm. translator read ἀστείων "wise" or "virtuous" (in Philo) for ἀστῶν "lawful." The latter word is used in the frag. from Procopius and in De Congressu 77.

<sup>b</sup> τὸν σπουδαῖον, i.e. Abraham.

<sup>c</sup> βεβαιότερον, as in Procopius.

<sup>d</sup> ὅτε παρήγγελον οἱ καιροί, as in Procopius.

<sup>e</sup> Or "temperate." The Procopius frag. has παγιωτέραν "more steadfast"; the point of the reference is clearer in the parallel, De Congressu 37, where the name Rebecca is etymologized as ὑπομονή "constancy" or "endurance."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher, construing wrongly, renders, "et sobrium profecto (designat) mulier sapientem quum alium in thalamum ingressus est."

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. agrees literally with the Greek frag. ἔνωσις ψυχῆς ἀρμοζομένης ἔρωτι θεῖῳ.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥήτόν. <sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> Prob. τοὺς λογισμούς; Aucher "secreta sua."

<sup>k</sup> σοφία καὶ δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἄλλαις ἀρεταῖς.

<sup>l</sup> Or perhaps "counsel," as Aucher, renders; the Arm. word is the same as that mentioned in note j.

<sup>m</sup> σύνοικος.

<sup>n</sup> Prob. χορηγεῖ; Aucher renders literally, "choreas agitet."

<sup>o</sup> τῇ ἐγκυκλίᾳ παιδείᾳ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

For even if the virtuous man has ready to hand <sup>a</sup> the theories <sup>b</sup> of geometry, arithmetic, grammar, rhetoric and other scientific disciplines, none the less is he mindful of his integrity,<sup>c</sup> and addresses himself to the one as a task, and to the other as to a side-task.<sup>d</sup> But most worthy of praise is it that (Scripture) calls the maidservant “wife,”<sup>e</sup> for he came together with her in bed by the will and at the injunction of his true wife, and not by any means of his own will. For this reason (Scripture) does not (here) call her “maidservant,” for the maidservant, having been given to him (as wife), obtains this (status), if not in fact, at any rate in name. However, let us allegorize <sup>f</sup> by saying that the training in intermediate studies has the force <sup>g</sup> of a concubine but the form and rank <sup>h</sup> of a wife. For the several school studies resemble and imitate true virtue.

*22. (Gen. xvi. 4) What is the meaning of the words, “She saw that she was pregnant, and her mistress was dishonoured before her” ?

Advisedly <sup>i</sup> does (Scripture) now call Sarah “mistress” when she seems to be eclipsed <sup>j</sup> and subdued by her maidservant—a childless woman by a childbearing one. But this principle of reasoning <sup>k</sup> extends to almost all the matters necessary to life. For more lordly <sup>l</sup> is the wise poor man than the foolish rich man,<sup>m</sup> and the inglorious <sup>a</sup> πρόχειρα.

<sup>b</sup> τὰ θεωρήματα.

<sup>c</sup> τῆς καλοκάγαθίας.

<sup>d</sup> ἔργον . . . παρέργον, as Aucher conjectures.

<sup>e</sup> By implication at least; cf. De Congressu 80.

<sup>f</sup> ἀλληγορώμεν.

<sup>g</sup> δύναμιν.

<sup>h</sup> τιμὴν.

<sup>i</sup> Or “cautiously,” “guardedly”; the Greek frag. has κατὰ καιρόν.

<sup>j</sup> Or “made light of”—ἐλαττοῦσθαι.

<sup>k</sup> κεφαλὴ τοῦ λόγου(?); there is nothing corresponding to this phrase in the Greek frag.

<sup>l</sup> κυριώτερος (as in the Greek frag.) is rendered by two Arm. words.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ φρόνιμος πένης ἄφρονος πλουσίου, as in the Greek frag.

GENESIS, BOOK III

man than the glorious one,<sup>a</sup> and the sick man than the healthy one.<sup>b</sup> For whatever is with wisdom <sup>c</sup> is wholly lordly and independent <sup>d</sup> and masterful.<sup>e</sup> But whatever is with folly is a slave and infirm.<sup>f</sup> And well is it said, not that she dishonoured her mistress, but "her mistress was dishonoured."<sup>g</sup> For the former would contain a personal accusation while the latter would be a declaration of things that happened.<sup>h</sup> But (Scripture) does not wish to lay blame and condemnation upon anyone for the sake of praising (another),<sup>i</sup> but to make clear the bare and simple truth of matters. That is the literal meaning.<sup>j</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>k</sup> those who accept and honour glory more than the science of wisdom,<sup>l</sup> and consider sense-perception <sup>m</sup> more honourable than reason,<sup>n</sup> set themselves apart from familiarity with the facts,<sup>o</sup> thinking that the production of many things and the complacent love <sup>p</sup> of appearances are great and perfect goods and are alone honourable, while barrenness in these is bad, and dishonourable. For they do not see that invisible seed <sup>q</sup> and <sup>a</sup> ἄδοξος ἐνδόξου.

<sup>b</sup> ὁ νοσῶν ὑγιαίνοντος.

<sup>c</sup> σὺν φρονήσει, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. boun = φυσικός, γνήσιος, αὐτός, etc.

<sup>e</sup> To these three adjectives the single adj. κύρια corresponds in the Greek frag.

<sup>f</sup> ἄστατον.

<sup>g</sup> A somewhat parallel distinction (between Sarah's seeing Hagar's pregnancy and Hagar's seeing her own pregnancy) is made in De Congressu 139-150.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) says more briefly οὐ γὰρ ἐθέλει κατηγορεῖν, δηλῶσαι δὲ τὸ συμβεβηκός.

<sup>i</sup> The context requires the pronoun; cf. Aucher "in alterius laude."

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> τὴν τῆς σοφίας ἐπιστήμην.

<sup>m</sup> τὴν αἴσθησιν.

<sup>n</sup> τὸν λογισμὸν.

<sup>o</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς τῶν πραγμάτων οἰκειότητος vel sim.

<sup>p</sup> Lit. "sufficient loving"; Aucher paraphrases, "magnam generationem . . . produxisse."

<sup>q</sup> Or "sowing"; cf. De Somniis i. 199 ἀοράτῳ σπορᾷ φρονήσεως.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the intelligible generations <sup>a</sup> which the mind is wont to produce by itself.

*23. (Gen. xvi. 5) Why does Sarah, as it were, repent, saying to Abraham, "I am wronged by thee. I have given my maidservant into thy bosom, but seeing that she is pregnant, I have been dishonoured before her" <sup>b</sup> ?

This statement contains doubt and indecision. And it is clear that the "since" <sup>c</sup> is the same as "the time when I gave my maidservant." And the other statement refers to a person, <sup>d</sup> that is, when she says, "By thee I am wronged." <sup>e</sup> For this is a reproach. And it is proper (for Scripture) to keep the good, worthy, truthful and unforgetting husband from blame and accusation and always to present him with all honour, calling him "lord." But the first statement is true, for since the time when she gave (him) her maidservant and made her his concubine, she seemed to be disesteemed and dishonoured. That is the literal meaning. <sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>g</sup> when

<sup>a</sup> τὰ νοερά γένη.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. closely follows the LXX ἀδικοῦμαι ἐκ σου· ἐγὼ δέδωκα τὴν παιδίσκην μου εἰς τὸν κόλπον σου. ἰδοῦσα δὲ ὅτι ἐν γαστρὶ ἔχει, ἠτιμάσθη ἐναντίον αὐτῆς. Aucher's rendering, "quia vidit," is misleading, since the Arm., like the LXX, makes "seeing" (ptc.) refer to Sarah, whereas the Heb. makes the verb (in its finite form) refer to Hagar. In the parallel, De Congressu 139 Philo, following the LXX in reading ἰδοῦσα, makes the point that it was Sarah, not Hagar, who saw Hagar's pregnancy. The concluding part of the verse, Gen. xvi. 5, "let God judge between us," is cited at the end of his comment.

<sup>c</sup> No such conjunction or prep. occurs in the LXX or Arm. O.T. texts of this verse.

<sup>d</sup> Variant "to the opposite."

<sup>e</sup> The argument is unclear but the meaning seems to be that Sarah's doubts about Abraham's feeling are indicated by the interval of time implied; cf. the Greek frag. ἀλλ' ἔστι χρονικὸν τῷ ἐξῆς συναπτόμενον· ἐξ οὗ σοι καὶ ἀφ' οὗ χρόνου ἐγὼ δέδωκα τὴν παιδίσκην μου.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥήτων.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

GENESIS, BOOK III

someone gives (to another) the maidservant of wisdom,<sup>a</sup> the latter, being ignorant and through sophistic reasoning,<sup>b</sup> dishonours the mistress. For when he receives and delights in the splendour<sup>c</sup> of the school studies,<sup>d</sup> since each of them is very attractive and seductive and, as it were, has the power of forcibly drawing (others) to itself, he is from then on no longer able to find time to unite with the mistress either in respect of enjoying the image of wisdom or her wonderful appearance<sup>e</sup> until that cutter<sup>f</sup> of things, the divine Logos, supervenes and separates, divides and cuts off the probable from the true,<sup>g</sup> and the means from the ends, and secondary things from those ranged in the first rank. Wherefore she says later, "God will judge between me and thee."

*24. (Gen. xvi. 6) Why does Abraham say, "Behold, thy maidservant is in thy hands. Do with her as is pleasing to thee"?

The literal text<sup>h</sup> contains praise of the wise man,<sup>i</sup> for it was not "wife" nor "concubine" but "maidservant" of his wife that he called her who was pregnant by him. When he saw that she was growing big, he did not become indignant and provoke<sup>j</sup> the appetite of passion<sup>k</sup> but pacified it. And the passage "in thy hands" contains an allegory<sup>l</sup> in a certain sense,<sup>m</sup> by which I mean that sophistry "

<sup>a</sup> τὴν τῆς σοφίας παιδίσκην.

<sup>b</sup> τῷ τῆς σοφιστείας λογισμῷ; Aucher renders, "consilio illa [!] sophismatis ignorans."

<sup>c</sup> Or "clarity."

<sup>d</sup> τῶν ἐγκυκλίων.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders a little differently, "sive imagine sapientiae, ac gloriosa ejus mirabilique forma."

<sup>f</sup> τομεύς, a term applied to the Logos in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 225; Aucher more freely renders, "acutus judex rerum."

<sup>g</sup> τὰ πιθανὰ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀληθῶν.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ.

<sup>j</sup> In the Arm. it is not clear who the subject is.

<sup>k</sup> τὴν τοῦ πάθους ὄρεξιν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀλληγορίαν.

<sup>m</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>n</sup> ἡ σοφιστεία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

is under the authority <sup>a</sup> of wisdom, as if it flowed from the same source but crookedly, not straight, and not keeping its flow whole and pure but carrying filth and many other similar things along with it. And so, since this is in thy hands and thy power, to whom, being wisdom, all the school disciplines belong, <sup>b</sup> do with her as is pleasing to thy heart. For I am confident that thou wilt not judge more severely than is right, for this is very pleasing to thee, (namely) to apportion to each what is in accordance with his deserts, <sup>c</sup> and not to honour or dishonour (anyone) more (than is right).

25. (Gen. xvi. 6) Why does (Scripture) say, "Sarah afflicted her" <sup>d</sup> ?

The literal meaning is clear. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>e</sup> it has something like the following content. <sup>f</sup> Not all afflictions are harmful, <sup>g</sup> but there are times when they are even helpful. This is what sick people experience at the hands of physicians, and children at the hands of teachers, and the foolish at the hands of those who enlighten them. This I would never call an affliction, but salvation <sup>h</sup> and aid to soul and body. This is the part that wisdom gives to the group of school studies, <sup>i</sup> judging that a soul filled with much learning <sup>j</sup> and pregnant with sophistry <sup>k</sup> will not be refractory or haughty, as if it were in possession of a great and excessive good, but will be

<sup>a</sup> Or "power." In De Congressu 155 Philo allegorizes the words "in thy hands" as a symbol of the bodily senses used in the school studies.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, "cujus enim sapientia, ejus sunt et omnes encyclicae disciplinae."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ἄξιον vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> ἐκάκωσεν αὐτήν, as in LXX.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> λόγον.

<sup>g</sup> οὐ πᾶσαι κακώσεις βλαβεραὶ εἰσι.

<sup>h</sup> σωτηρίαν.

<sup>i</sup> τῷ τῶν ἐγκυκλίων χορῷ.

<sup>j</sup> πολυμαθείας.

<sup>k</sup> σοφιστείας, here used in a semi-respectable sense.

GENESIS, BOOK III

quiet <sup>a</sup> and show respect for a higher and better nature as its true mistress, to whom belongs stability itself and sovereignty over (all) matters.

*26. (Gen. xvi. 6) <sup>b</sup> Why does Hagar flee from her face? <sup>c</sup>
 Not every soul gladly receives discipline, <sup>d</sup> but the friendly and particularly gentle mind <sup>e</sup> loves reproof, <sup>f</sup> and becomes more familiar with <sup>g</sup> those who discipline it, while the hostile and malevolent (mind) <sup>h</sup> hates and avoids and flees from it, and draws near pleasant words <sup>i</sup> rather than those which can profit it, thinking that (the former) are preferable and more valuable.

27. (Gen. xvi. 7) What is the meaning of the words, "There found her an angel of the Lord <sup>j</sup> by a spring of water in the wilderness on the road to Shur" <sup>k</sup>?

All these things that are said are symbols and types, <sup>l</sup> by which (Scripture) represents <sup>m</sup> the widely learned soul, <sup>n</sup> which is the property of virtue <sup>o</sup> but is not yet able to see

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "rest" or "subside."

<sup>b</sup> Gen. xvi. 6-9 forms the subject of De Fuga et Inventione, where Philo says (§§ 3-5) that Hagar fled, not out of hatred or fear, but shame.

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ ἀπέδρα ἀπὸ προσώπου αὐτῆς.

<sup>d</sup> Variant "receives attention and discipline"; the Greek frag. has merely δέχεται νοουθεσίαν.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders, "facilis ac suavis proprie (in note: "vel, ac constans sibi propria") mens."

<sup>f</sup> ἔλεγχον.

<sup>g</sup> Or "used to"—οἰκειοῦται.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. has only ἡ δὲ ἐχθρὰ <ψυχῆ>.

<sup>i</sup> τοὺς πρὸς ἡδονὴν λόγους.

<sup>j</sup> Some LXX MSS. have "the Lord God."

<sup>k</sup> In De Fuga 1 Philo follows the LXX more closely, in reading ἐπὶ τῆς πηγῆς τοῦ ὕδατος ἐν τῇ ἐρήμῳ, ἐπὶ τῆς πηγῆς ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ Σούρ.

<sup>l</sup> σύμβολα καὶ τύποι.

<sup>m</sup> σχηματίζει.

<sup>n</sup> τὴν πολυμαθῆ ψυχὴν.

<sup>o</sup> κτήμα τῆς ἀρετῆς; i.e. Hagar, symbolizing the school studies, is owned by Sarah, symbolizing virtue.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the beauty of its mistress. Now these are the symbols: the "finding," "by the angel," "by the spring," "in the wilderness," "on the road"—none other than (the road) to Shur. However, we must begin with the first one. Now a very deceitful sophist<sup>a</sup> and contentious person<sup>b</sup> is not always<sup>c</sup> found out because of the skill and the sophistical arguments<sup>d</sup> with which he is accustomed to trick and deceive. But he who is without evil habits is zealous only for wide learning,<sup>e</sup> which comes through the group of school studies<sup>f</sup>; and although this is hard to find,<sup>g</sup> still it is not altogether undiscoverable. For perdition<sup>h</sup> is akin to the undiscoverable, while discovery<sup>i</sup> is salvation and life.<sup>j</sup> And especially (is this so) when one is sought and found by a purer and more worthy spirit. But what is purer or more worthy than a divine angel? For it was he who was entrusted with the search for a wandering soul,<sup>k</sup> which because of its learning did not surely know that which it ought to honour.<sup>l</sup> However, it might have<sup>m</sup> obtained correction, for the sake of which the search was made. Now it is not incomplete<sup>n</sup> but is right at hand. For the soul was found fleeing from virtue, not being able to receive discipline.<sup>o</sup> And there is a second symbol after the "finding," namely that the finding by the angel took place "by <sup>a</sup> σοφιστής.

<sup>b</sup> φιλόνεικος.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek prob. had the indef. pr. τι.

<sup>d</sup> Or "proofs," "persuasions."

<sup>e</sup> τῆς πολυμαθείας.

<sup>f</sup> διὰ τοῦ τῶν ἐγκυκλίων χοροῦ.

<sup>g</sup> δυσεύρετος.

<sup>h</sup> ἀπώλεια.

<sup>i</sup> Or "discoverability"?

<sup>j</sup> σωτηρία καὶ ζωή. For an extended discussion of the symbolism of other biblical passages on "finding" see De Fuga 119-176.

<sup>k</sup> πλανωμένην ψυχήν.

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. seems to make better sense than Aucher's rendering, "et ob praesumptam eruditionem nescientem constanter, quam oportebat venerari."

<sup>m</sup> Or "was able to"—ἐδύνατο.

<sup>n</sup> ἀτελής (?); the noun referred to is prob. "search," as Aucher conjectures.

<sup>o</sup> παιδείαν.

GENESIS, BOOK III

a spring." <sup>a</sup> By this I understand nature to be meant. For she offers the sciences of learning in accordance with each one's practices, <sup>b</sup> wiping out and cleansing the wrong kind of learning. <sup>c</sup> And the passage is in praise <sup>d</sup> of the soul which is thirsty for knowledge <sup>e</sup> and is desirous of its laws and is eager to draw up and drink its water, as a fellow-celebrant in the company of those who drink wine. So does it behave with those who are nourished by and luxuriate in the exercises that train the reason, <sup>f</sup> for nature, as from a spring, offers an abundance of instruction and guidance. <sup>g</sup> And the fourth symbol is the finding "in the wilderness," <sup>h</sup> for the perturbation and anxiety which come upon the various senses, and the floods of the various passions oppress the soul and do not permit it to drink pure water. <sup>i</sup> But when it is able to escape it betakes itself, as it were, to the wilderness, and it has surcease from the thoughts <sup>j</sup> that disturbed it, and recovers its health. And it obtains hope, not only of life, but even of immortal life. The fifth symbol was the finding "on the road," since perverted characters use a trackless route, while he who is able to improve himself goes by the road that leads to virtue. And this road is a wall and a protection to those who are able to save themselves. For "Shur" is

<sup>a</sup> For Philo's extended discussion of the symbolism of the various senses of "spring" in Scripture see De Fuga 177-201.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "left-handed learning"; variant "lack of learning."

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "is praise."

<sup>d</sup> Prob. ἐπιστήμης; Aucher has "ingenium"; cf. De Fuga 187 μαθήσεως διψῶντες . . . ἐπιστήμαις ἰδρύνονται.

<sup>e</sup> ἐν τοῖς τῆς λογικῆς παιδείας ἐπιτηδεύμασι vel sim. On this sentence Aucher rightly comments, "totius periodi constructio obscuritatem habet in Arm."

<sup>f</sup> In De Fuga 197-198 Philo treats the spring as, among other things, a symbol of the living God, quoting Jer. ii. 13.

<sup>g</sup> Philo omits this symbol in De Fuga.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "drink water purely."

<sup>i</sup> τῶν λογισμῶν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

to be translated as "wall."<sup>a</sup> Do you not see that all this is a tropical figure<sup>b</sup> of the soul that progresses?<sup>c</sup> And one who progresses does not become lost like one who is completely foolish. If the divine Logos<sup>d</sup> is to be found, he seeks it. And he who is not pure and good in his habits is put to flight and pursued by the divine Logos; however, he has a spring of water by which he may wash<sup>e</sup> away his passion and evil, and from which he may drink the superabundance<sup>f</sup> of its laws. But he is a lover of the wilderness who flees from passion and evil, and on seeing the road of virtue, turns away from the trackless way of evil. All these are a wall and protection to him, so that he is in no way harmed either in word or deed, and does not suffer evil from those things which rush upon him.

28. (Gen. xvi. 8) Why does the angel say to her, "Hagar, maidservant of Sarah, whence comest thou and whither goest thou"?

The literal meaning<sup>g</sup> does not need any exposition,<sup>h</sup> for it is exceedingly clear. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> forcefulness<sup>j</sup> (is meant), for the divine Logos<sup>k</sup> is a disciplinarian<sup>l</sup> and an excellent healer of the weakness of the soul. He says to her, "Whence comest thou? Dost thou not know what good thou has left? Surely thou art not useless and crippled?<sup>m</sup> For with seeing thou dost not see, and having senses, thou dost not perceive, and though thou

<sup>a</sup> In De Fuga 203 Philo etymologizes "Shur" as "wall or straightening."

<sup>b</sup> Prob. τρόπος καὶ σχῆμα; Aucher has "symbolice (vel, legitima) figura."

<sup>c</sup> τῆς προκοπούσης ψυχῆς.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "fertility."

<sup>h</sup> ἐξηγήσεως.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "asperitas"; perhaps the original was ἐπίπληξις, as in De Fuga 205.

<sup>k</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος.

<sup>m</sup> Or "blind," as Aucher renders; Arm. hašm has both meanings.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "he washes."

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> Perhaps νουθετητής.

GENESIS, BOOK III

seemest to have a portion of mind,<sup>a</sup> thou seemest to me to be altogether without mind. But whither goest thou? From what piety to what misery?<sup>b</sup> Why dost thou wander in such a way as to throw away the good which thou didst have in thy hands, and follow after a more remote good? Do not, do not do this, but subdue this stupid and irrational impulse.<sup>c</sup> Come back and return from there to the same road (as before). Consider wisdom to be thy mistress, whom formerly thou didst have as an overseer and caretaker in those things which thou didst practise.”

*29. (Gen. xvi. 8) What is the meaning of the words, “From the face of Sarah my mistress I am fleeing”<sup>d</sup>?

It is proper to praise a sincere nature<sup>e</sup> and consider it a lover of truth. Wherefore it is now also fitting to admit the veracity<sup>f</sup> of a mind that confesses what it has experienced.<sup>g</sup> For “from the face” I take to mean, “I am struck dumb<sup>h</sup> by the appearance of virtue and wisdom.”<sup>i</sup> For at the sight of this royal sovereign it<sup>j</sup> shudders and is dismayed, not being able<sup>k</sup> to endure the sight of her greatness and exaltedness, and must flee. For there are some who flee from virtue not because of hate but because of reverential awe,<sup>l</sup> for they believe themselves to be unworthy to live with<sup>m</sup> their mistress.

<sup>a</sup> νοῦ: I have omitted an apparently intrusive negative before “to have.”

<sup>b</sup> ἀφ’ ὁποίας εὐσεβείας εἰς ὁποίαν ταλαιπωρίαν.

<sup>c</sup> ὀρμήν.

<sup>d</sup> This scriptural half-verse is not commented on by Philo in De Fuga.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ τοῦ ἠθους ἀνυπόκριτον, as in the Greek frag. from Procopius.

<sup>f</sup> ἀψεύδειαν.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ πέπονθεν, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>h</sup> καταπέπληγμα; cf. καταπέπληκται in the Greek frag.

<sup>i</sup> ὑπὸ τῆς φαντασίας τῆς ἀρετῆς καὶ σοφίας, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>j</sup> The mind.

<sup>k</sup> Reading kareal (ptc.) for karel (inf.).

<sup>l</sup> Prob. αἰδοῖ, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>m</sup> συμβιοῦν, as in the Greek frag.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

*30. (Gen. xvi. 9) Why did the angel say to her, "Return to thy mistress and submit thyself under her hands"?

Since the literal meaning <sup>a</sup> is clear, the deeper meaning <sup>b</sup> must be considered. The divine Logos <sup>c</sup> disciplines and admonishes <sup>d</sup> the soul which is able to receive healing, and turns it back to sovereign wisdom, <sup>e</sup> lest, being left without a mistress, <sup>f</sup> it leap into absurd folly. And he <sup>g</sup> disciplines it, <sup>h</sup> not only that it may turn back to virtue but also submit itself under her hands, by which I mean under her powers. <sup>i</sup> Now submission <sup>j</sup> is of two forms. One is by way of deficiency, <sup>k</sup> arising from the soul's weakness, <sup>l</sup> which it is easy to overcome, arrest and condemn. <sup>m</sup> The other is that which the dominant Logos <sup>n</sup> enjoins, and arises from awe and reverence, such as sons feel toward their parents, and pupils toward their teachers, and youths toward their elders. For it is most expedient to be obedient to, and fall before, <sup>o</sup> one's betters. He who has learned to be ruled, also learns at once how to rule. For not even if one should assume power over all the earth and sea, would he be able to rule in truth if he had not first learned and first been trained to be ruled.

31. (Gen. xvi. 10) Why does the angel say to her, "I will multiply, he says, <sup>p</sup> thy seed and it shall not be numbered for multitude"?

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος.

<sup>e</sup> πρὸς τὴν ἡγεμονικὴν σοφίαν.

<sup>g</sup> The Logos.

<sup>i</sup> ταῖς δυνάμει.

<sup>k</sup> κατ' ἐκλειψιν ἢ ἐλάττωσιν; variant "by way of corruption."

<sup>m</sup> ὑπερβάλλειν καὶ καταλαμβάνειν καὶ καταγιγνώσκειν.

<sup>n</sup> ὁ κύριος λόγος.

<sup>o</sup> The Greek frag., which begins here, has only τὸ ὑποτάττεσθαι.

<sup>p</sup> Why the Arm. inserts "he says" is not clear; possibly it is a substitute for the Heb. idiom, reproduced in the LXX, "multiplying I will multiply."

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> παιδεύει καὶ νοουθετεῖ.

<sup>f</sup> ἀδέσποτος.

<sup>h</sup> The soul.

<sup>j</sup> ταπεινώσις.

<sup>l</sup> ἐκ ψυχικῆς ἀσθενείας.

GENESIS, BOOK III

The honourable thing for a believing soul <sup>a</sup> is not to revolt and resist because of its progress in learning <sup>b</sup> and the most useful growth <sup>c</sup> which comes from wide learning.<sup>d</sup> For it is no longer like the word-catchers and word-traders <sup>e</sup> who greedily stuff themselves with the various opinions that are (found) in the school studies,<sup>f</sup> but (seeks) that truth which is in the various (studies).<sup>g</sup> When it follows after this, and begins to seek out and search for it, it becomes worthy of beholding the sight of its unbribable, irreprehensible and irreproachable mistress.<sup>h</sup>

32. (Gen. xvi. 11) What is the meaning of the words, "The angel <sup>i</sup> said to her, 'Behold, thou hast conceived and wilt bear a son, and thou shalt call his name Ishmael, for the Lord has heard thy affliction' " ?

The literal meaning <sup>j</sup> admits no questioning, but (the verse) is to be allegorized <sup>k</sup> as follows. Wide learning,<sup>l</sup> which is practised and used through the administration <sup>m</sup> of virtue as through a mistress, is not barren but receives the seeds of wisdom.<sup>n</sup> And when it conceives, it bears. However, it bears, not a perfect work,<sup>o</sup> but an imperfect one, like a child that is in need of care and nourishment.<sup>p</sup> And is this not right ? <sup>q</sup> For it is clear that the offspring <sup>r</sup>

<sup>a</sup> πιστευσίη ψυχῆ.

<sup>b</sup> διὰ τὴν τῆς μαθήσεως προκοπήν.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "seed."

<sup>d</sup> ἐκ πολυμαθείας.

<sup>e</sup> λογοθῆραι καὶ λογοπῶλαι; these two epithets are coupled in De Congressu 53.

<sup>f</sup> ἐν τοῖς ἐγκυκλίοις.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "non enim ulterius, ut verborum captores venditoresque, ad placitum usurpat omnia encyclopediæ argumenta, sed illam quæ in singulis continetur veritatem."

<sup>h</sup> τῆς ἀδεκάστου καὶ ἀκαταγνώστου καὶ ἀνεπιτιμῆτου κυρίας.

<sup>i</sup> Heb. and LXX "angel of the Lord."

<sup>j</sup> τὸ ῥήτόν.

<sup>k</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

<sup>l</sup> πολυμάθεια.

<sup>m</sup> οἰκονομίαν vel sim.

<sup>n</sup> τὰ τῆς σοφίας σπέρματα.

<sup>o</sup> τέλειον ἔργον.

<sup>p</sup> ἐπιμελείας καὶ τροφῆς.

<sup>q</sup> Aucher, in his rendering, inadvertently omits this sentence.

<sup>r</sup> Lit. "births."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of a perfected soul are perfect, and these are words and deeds.<sup>a</sup> But those of inferior<sup>b</sup> (souls) which are still under service and in bondage are more imperfect. Therefore he was truly<sup>c</sup> named Ishmael, and this is to be interpreted as "hearing God."<sup>d</sup> Now hearing is second in rank to seeing. For as prizes in the contest of the senses<sup>e</sup> Nature has given the first to the eyes, the second to the ears, the third to the nostrils, and the fourth to (the organ) by which we taste.

33. (Gen. xvi. 12) What is the meaning of the words, "He will be a wild man<sup>f</sup>; his hand will be against all, and the hands of all against him, and he will dwell over against<sup>g</sup> all his brothers"<sup>h</sup>?

In the literal sense<sup>h</sup> he has no brothers up to this point, for he was the first who came<sup>i</sup> to his parents. However, Nature indicates<sup>j</sup> something rather unclear, which must be examined, for it gives a picture<sup>k</sup> of those things which are to be. Now this picture clearly represents the sophist,<sup>l</sup> whose mother is wide learning and wisdom.<sup>m</sup> But the sophist is wild in thought,<sup>n</sup> while the wise man is civil<sup>o</sup> and is suited to the state and to civilization<sup>p</sup>; but the man of wild thought is from that very fact<sup>q</sup> a lover of conten-

<sup>a</sup> λόγοι καὶ ἔργα.

<sup>b</sup> δευτερείων.

<sup>c</sup> ἐτύμως.

<sup>d</sup> ἀκοή θεοῦ; cf. De Fuga 208, where Ishmael and Israel ("seeing God") are contrasted.

<sup>e</sup> ἄθλον ἐν τῷ τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἀγωνίσματι.

<sup>f</sup> LXX ἄγροικος ἄνθρωπος.

<sup>g</sup> LXX κατὰ πρόσωπον.

<sup>h</sup> κατὰ τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "began to be."

<sup>j</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>k</sup> σχῆμα (καὶ μορφήν?).

<sup>l</sup> τὸν σοφιστήν; cf. De Fuga 209.

<sup>m</sup> πολυμάθεια καὶ σοφία.

<sup>n</sup> In De Fuga 209 Philo calls him ἀγροικόσοφον.

<sup>o</sup> πολιτικός.

<sup>p</sup> πόλει καὶ πολιτεία.

<sup>q</sup> Text uncertain; for Arm. andēn "thence" Aucher suggests anden "infidelis, irreligiōsus" [?]; the Arm. glossator explains andēn as "crooked," but seems to be guessing.

GENESIS, BOOK III

tion.<sup>a</sup> Therefore (Scripture) adds, "his hands against all, and the hands of all against him," for, being trained in wide learning and much knowledge,<sup>b</sup> he contradicts all men (He is) like those who are now called Academics and Sceptics,<sup>c</sup> who place no foundation<sup>d</sup> under their opinions and doctrines and do not (prefer) one thing to another, for they admit those as philosophers who shoot at (the doctrines) of every school,<sup>e</sup> and these it is customary to call "opinion-fighters."<sup>f</sup> For first they fight and become defenders and champions of their native school<sup>g</sup> lest they be stopped by those who oppose them. For they are all kin and, in a certain sense,<sup>h</sup> uterine brothers,<sup>i</sup> offspring of the same mother, philosophy.<sup>j</sup> Therefore (Scripture) says, "over against all his brothers he will dwell." For in truth<sup>k</sup> the Academics and the Non-committals<sup>l</sup> take opposite stands in their doctrines, and oppose the various opinions which others hold.<sup>m</sup>

34. (Gen. xvi. 13) Why does (Scripture) say, "And she<sup>n</sup> called the name of the Lord, who was speaking to her, Thou art God who seest me, for she said, For indeed I have seen before (me) him who appeared to me"<sup>o</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> φιλόνεικος.

<sup>b</sup> πολλῇ ἐπιστήμῃ (or γνώσει).

<sup>c</sup> I.it. "investigators," but the word evidently reflects Greek σκεπτικοί.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "terminum."

<sup>e</sup> ἐκάστης αἰρέσεως δόγματα vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> Perhaps Philo here used γνωμομαχοῦντες, though the word is not attested in his writings or elsewhere, it seems; cf. γνωσιμαχοῦντες, used of sceptics, in De Congressu 53; Aucher here renders, "voluntatis oppugnatores (quasi Thelemachos vel Thelemamachos)."

<sup>g</sup> τῆς πατρίας αἰρέσεως vel sim.; cf. De Fuga 210 ἀμνημονέων ὡς ὑπὲρ οἰκείων ἐγγόνων ὧν ἔτεκεν αὐτῶν ἡ ψυχὴ δογμάτων.

<sup>h</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>i</sup> ὁμογάστριοι ἀδελφοί.

<sup>j</sup> τῆς φιλοσοφίας.

<sup>k</sup> ὄντως.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "non-sayers"; Aucher "indicibiles." Prob. the Sceptics are meant, as above.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "decree"—νομοθετοῦσι.

<sup>n</sup> LXX "Hagar."

<sup>o</sup> Philo literally follows the LXX, ἐνώπιον ἴδον ὀφθέντα μοι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Observe the first point carefully, that he <sup>a</sup> was the servant of God in the same way (that Hagar was) the maidservant of wisdom.<sup>b</sup> Hence the angel was called (God) <sup>c</sup> in order that she <sup>d</sup> might harmonize the reality <sup>e</sup> to his appearance.<sup>f</sup>

For it was fitting and proper that God, the Most High One and Lord of all, should appear to wisdom,<sup>g</sup> while he who was his Logos (and) minister <sup>h</sup> (should appear) to the maidservant and attendant of wisdom.<sup>i</sup> But it was not strange <sup>j</sup> (for her) to believe that the angel was God. For those who are unable to see the first cause <sup>k</sup> naturally <sup>l</sup> suffer from an illusion <sup>m</sup>; they believe that the second is the first. (They are like those) who have poor eyesight and are not able to see the corporeal form <sup>n</sup> which is in heaven, (namely) the sun, and believe that the rays which it sends to the earth are this itself. And all those who do not see the Great King ascribe the dignity of the first in sovereignty <sup>o</sup> to his satrap and the one under him. Moreover, wild men,<sup>p</sup> who have never seen cities even from a

<sup>a</sup> That the angel is the implied subject is indicated by the parallel De Fuga 212 ἄγγελοι δ' οἰκέται θεοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> τῆς σοφίας.

<sup>c</sup> So also Aucher and the Arm. glossator understand the elliptical phrase.

<sup>d</sup> Or "it" (Scripture)?

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρᾶγμα (?).

<sup>f</sup> Or "person"; Aucher renders, "ut personae propriae rem (ipsi) adaptaret." This rendering, like mine, finds no place for the adverb i veray "above"; possibly we should emend the Arm. verb γarmareçouçē "might harmonize" to hamaresçē "might reckon," and thus fit in the adv. "above," rendering, "in order that she might consider the reality as more important than the appearance."

<sup>g</sup> Apparently Sarah, the symbol of wisdom, is meant.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "verbum ut ministrum"; there is no conjunction between the two nouns in the Arm. text.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. to Hagar.

<sup>j</sup> ἄτοπον, or "inept"—ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρῶτον αἴτιον.

<sup>l</sup> εἰκός.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "deceit"—ἀπάτην vel sim.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ σωματοειδές. <sup>o</sup> Lit. "first king."

<sup>p</sup> οἱ ἄγριοι.

GENESIS, BOOK III

hill-top, believe that a village or a country-estate is a metropolis,<sup>a</sup> and that those who live in them are citizens of a metropolis, because of their ignorance of what a true metropolis really<sup>b</sup> is.

35. (Gen. xvi. 14) What is the meaning of the words, "Therefore she called<sup>c</sup> the well 'the well of him<sup>d</sup> whom I saw before (me)'<sup>e</sup>?"

A well has two things, both depth and a source.<sup>f</sup> Now the teachings of the school studies<sup>g</sup> are not superficial<sup>h</sup> and not without principles,<sup>i</sup> for they have discipline<sup>j</sup> as a source. And so she rightly says that it was before the well that the angel appeared like God. And though the school studies have second rank in learning,<sup>k</sup> they seem to be<sup>l</sup> first, and they are divided and separated from that first wisdom<sup>m</sup> which it is proper for wise men but not for sophists<sup>n</sup> to see.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> κώμην ἢ αὐλήν <εἶναι> μητρόπολιν.

<sup>b</sup> ὄντως.

<sup>c</sup> Philo follows the LXX in reading ἐκάλεσεν, rendering Heb. qārā' which is here used impersonally, meaning "one called" or "people called."

<sup>d</sup> So the Arm. O.T., taking οὗ as gen. s. masc. of the relative pronoun; the variant in the Arm. text of Philo takes the οὗ as a relative adverb.

<sup>e</sup> Or "face to face" as in the Arm. O.T.; both renderings are based on LXX φρέαρ οὗ ἐνώπιον ἴδον. Heb. reads differently, "the well Beer-lahai-roi," traditionally explained as "the well (bə'ēr) of the living one (lahay) who sees me (rō'ī)." Apparently the LXX translators took Heb. lahay as the noun lehī "cheek" in the sense of "before my face." For a somewhat similar interpretation of this verse see De Fuga 213.

<sup>f</sup> πηγὴν.

<sup>g</sup> τῶν ἐγκυκλίων.

<sup>h</sup> ἐπιπόλαιαι.

<sup>i</sup> ἀναρχοί.

<sup>j</sup> παιδείαν.

<sup>k</sup> τὰ ἐγκύκλια τῆς πολυμαθείας ἔχει τὴν δευτέραν τάξιν; Aucher renders, "eruditio encyclopaediae" although the Arm. construction requires "encyclopedia eruditionis."

<sup>l</sup> πρεσβύτερα.

<sup>m</sup> τῆς πρώτης σοφίας.

<sup>n</sup> τοῖς σοφοῖς ἀλλ' οὐ τοῖς σοφισταῖς.

<sup>o</sup> The meaning is unclear in part.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

36. (Gen. xvi. 14) Why is the well said to be "between Kadesh and between <sup>a</sup> Pharan" <sup>b</sup> ?

"Kadesh" is interpreted as "holy," while "Pharan" is "hail" or "dots." <sup>c</sup>

37. (Gen. xvi. 15) What is the meaning of the words, "Hagar bore to Abraham a son" ?

This is very natural, <sup>d</sup> for possession <sup>e</sup> does not bear anything for itself but for him who possesses, as does literature for the literary man, <sup>f</sup> and music for the musician, and mathematics for the mathematician, for he is a part of it and is in need of it. But possession is received <sup>g</sup> as if it were not in need (of anything), as fire is not in need of heat, since it is its own heat and gives a common share <sup>h</sup> of its heat to those who come close or approach it.

*38. (Gen. xvi. 16) Why is Abraham said to be eighty-six <sup>i</sup> years old when Hagar bore him Ishmael ?

Because that which follows the "eighty," (namely) the number six, is the first perfect number. <sup>j</sup> It is equal to its parts and is the first even-odd <sup>k</sup> number, having a part in

<sup>a</sup> So the LXX, which retains the Heb. idiom "between and between."

<sup>b</sup> Most LXX MSS. and Arm. O.T. have βαράδ (Heb. Bered), as does Philo in De Fuga 213.

<sup>c</sup> Or "minute pieces." The etymology "hail" fits the name "Bered" but not "Pharan." In De Fuga 213 Philo fancifully etymologizes "Bered" as "in evil" (=Heb. bāra').

<sup>d</sup> φυσικώτατον.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "having of possessions"; perhaps Philo here used ἔξις in the philosophical sense of "condition," "disposition."

<sup>f</sup> ἡ γραμματικὴ τῷ γραμματικῷ.

<sup>g</sup> Or "admitted to be."

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "a part of participation"—μέρος κοινωνίας.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "six and eighty"; LXX "eighty-six."

<sup>j</sup> ὁ πρῶτος τέλειος ἀριθμός. On the symbolism of the number six see QG ii. 45 and Staehle pp. 32-34.

<sup>k</sup> ἀρτιοπέριτος; cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 58.

GENESIS, BOOK III

an active cause through its oddness, and in a material and affective (cause) through its evenness.<sup>a</sup> Therefore among the ancients who were in the beginning,<sup>b</sup> some called it "marriage," others "harmony."<sup>c</sup> And the theologian<sup>d</sup> represented the creation of the world (as taking place) in six (days). And the number eighty is the most harmonious<sup>e</sup> of numbers, consisting of two most excellent scales,<sup>f</sup> (namely) of that which is by doubles and that which is by triples in the scheme<sup>g</sup> of fourths. It includes all<sup>h</sup> progressions,<sup>i</sup> the arithmetic, the geometric and the harmonic; the first is that (consisting) of proportions of two, that is, 6, 8, 9, 12,<sup>j</sup> of which the sum is 35.<sup>k</sup> And the other consists of (proportions of) three, that is, 6, 9, 12, 18,<sup>l</sup> of which the sum is forty-five. And of these two (numbers), thirty-five and forty-five, is made up the number eighty. And when the theologian began to speak of the divine commandments,<sup>m</sup> he was eighty years old.<sup>n</sup> Now the first of our nation who was circumcised by law and was named after

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Joh. Lydus, p. 32, 4-8 (cited by Staehle) μετέχων καὶ τῆς δραστικῆς οὐσίας (Arm. = αἰτίας) κατὰ τὸν περιττὸν καὶ τῆς ὑλικῆς κατὰ τὸν ἄρτιον.

<sup>b</sup> Joh. Lydus has only οἱ ἀρχαῖοι.

<sup>c</sup> γάμον . . . ἁρμονίαν, as in the frag. from Joh. Lydus, which ends here.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ θεολόγος, i.e. Moses.

<sup>e</sup> ἁρμονικώτατος.

<sup>f</sup> ἐκ δυοῖν ἀρίστων διαγραμμάτων, meaning the numbers 35 and 45, as explained just below.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ τὸ πλινθίον, the figure of musical intervals; cf. De Opif. Mundi 107-110.

<sup>h</sup> Variant "all four."

<sup>i</sup> ἀναλογίας.

<sup>j</sup> Philo explains in De Opif. Mundi 107 ff. that 6, 8, 9, 12 form a proportion for 12 : 9 as 8 : 6, making a double proportion of 4 : 3.

<sup>k</sup> The Arm. uses numeral letters here and below.

<sup>l</sup> 18 : 12 = 9 : 6, a double proportion of 3 : 2.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "commands of precepts"; Aucher "oraculum praeceptorum."

<sup>n</sup> i.e. when he appeared before Pharaoh, according to Ex. vii. 7.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the virtue of joy <sup>a</sup> was called Isaac in Chaldaean, which in Armenian <sup>b</sup> is "laughter." (His was) a nature <sup>c</sup> which rejoiced in all things and was not displeased at all with anything in the world, but was pleased with what happened as happening in a good and useful way.

39. (Gen. xvii. 1) <sup>d</sup> Why does (Scripture) say that when Abraham was ninety-nine years old, "the Lord God <sup>e</sup> appeared to him and said, I am the Lord thy God" <sup>f</sup> ?

It gives the two appellations <sup>g</sup> of the two highest powers <sup>h</sup> in connexion with <sup>i</sup> the wise man, for by them the world came into being, and having come into being, it is governed <sup>j</sup> by them. By one of them, indicated as <sup>k</sup> "God," it was created and ordered, for "God" is the name of the creative power, <sup>l</sup> while the other, indicated as "the Lord," comes under the head of power and kingship. <sup>m</sup> And so, (Scrip-

<sup>a</sup> Arm. construction obscure; Aucher renders, "virtute praestans ille nomen gerit gaudii." The reference to Isaac properly belongs below, in § 39.

<sup>b</sup> Sic! The Arm. translator has substituted "Armenian" for "Greek." Aucher omits "in Armenian" in his translation.

<sup>c</sup> The formerly unidentified Greek frag. in Harris p. 97, recognized by Früchtel as belonging here, has μακαρία φύσις.

<sup>d</sup> Gen. xvii. 1-5, 15-22 are commented on in De Mut. Nom., where Philo devotes a long section to the discussion of the second half of verse 1, commented on in the next section.

<sup>e</sup> So also the Arm. O.T.; LXX and Heb. have only "the Lord," as does De Mut. Nom.

<sup>f</sup> Heb. "I am El Shaddai"; LXX has ἐγώ εἰμι ὁ θεός σου, similarly Arm. O.T. and De Mut. Nom. 1.

<sup>g</sup> Prob. = κλήσεις.

<sup>h</sup> τῶν ἀνωτάτω δυνάμεων, i.e. the kingly power, symbolized by the name "Lord," and the creative power, symbolized by the name "God"; see QG ii. 51 notes.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. i veray prob. here = ἐπί; Aucher renders, "super."

<sup>j</sup> οἰκονομείται.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "in accordance with"—κατά.

<sup>l</sup> τῆς ποιητικῆς δυνάμεως.

<sup>m</sup> ἡγεμονίας (or ἐξουσίας vel sim.) καὶ βασιλείας.

GENESIS, BOOK III

ture) wishes to show that the virtuous man <sup>a</sup> is a citizen of the world <sup>b</sup> and of equal honour with the whole world <sup>c</sup> by representing as his overseers and guards <sup>d</sup> the cosmic powers, the divine and kingly, in a unique sense. <sup>e</sup> Now the manifestation <sup>f</sup> took place in his ninety-ninth year, a number rightly (chosen). In the first place, it is next <sup>g</sup> to a hundred, and a hundred is a power <sup>h</sup> of ten when the latter is multiplied by itself, and this the theologian calls "the holy of holies." <sup>i</sup> For the kor, <sup>j</sup> the first tenth, is simply called "holy," and this he assigns to the caretakers of the temple. <sup>k</sup> And the tenth of the tenth, which he further commands the caretakers to set aside as an offering <sup>l</sup> to the presiding official, <sup>m</sup> is a tenth reckoned from a hundred, for what else is a tenth of a tenth but a hundredth part? However, the number ninety-nine years is not only distinguished <sup>n</sup> by its kinship and nearness to a hundred but <sup>a</sup> τὸν σπουδαῖον, i.e. Abraham.

<sup>b</sup> κοσμοπολίτην.

<sup>c</sup> ἰσότημον παντὶ τῷ κόσμῳ.

<sup>d</sup> ἐπιστάτους (vel sim.) καὶ φύλακας.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "by a singularity of word" (or "principle")—κατ' ἰδιότητα λόγου; Aucher renders, "singulari modo." The exact sense is not clear to me.

<sup>f</sup> ἡ ἐπιφάνεια.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "neighbour."

<sup>h</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>i</sup> Apparently Philo here, as in the parallel, De Mut. Nom. 2, refers to the tithe of the Levitical tithe, Num. xviii. 26, though in the biblical passage it is not called "holy of holies"; however, the offerings are generally called τὰ ἅγια in the LXX of Num. xviii. 32.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. k'or = Greek κόρος = Heb. kōr, a measure = 10 baths, cf. Ez. xlv. 14 et al.

<sup>k</sup> τοῖς νεωκόροις, a name given by Philo to the Levites, cf. De Fuga 90, De Vita Mosis i. 316.

<sup>l</sup> Prob. ἀπαρχήν, as in De Mut. Nom. 2 and LXX Num. xviii. 26.

<sup>m</sup> Prob. τῷ προεστηκότι = the high priest; Aucher supplies "summo sacerdoti."

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "adorned."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

it also receives special participation in a remarkable nature,<sup>a</sup> for it consists of fifty and seven heptads.<sup>b</sup> Now the Pentecostal (year)<sup>c</sup> is called "release"<sup>d</sup> in the Legislation,<sup>e</sup> for all are freed,<sup>f</sup> both inanimate and animate beings.

And the Sabbatical<sup>g</sup> years are the power<sup>h</sup> of rest<sup>i</sup> and deep peace in body and soul,<sup>j</sup> for the seventh year is a memorial<sup>k</sup> of the self-grown goods<sup>l</sup> that require no thought or labour, which nature produced by itself at the first establishing of the world. And the number forty-nine, which is made up of seven hebdomads, indicates, not superficial goods,<sup>m</sup> but rather those which have power and wisdom in respect of invincible and most powerful firmness.<sup>n</sup>

*40. (Gen. xvii. 1-2)<sup>o</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "Be well-pleasing before Me<sup>p</sup> and be blameless,<sup>q</sup> and I will place My covenant<sup>r</sup> between Me and between thee, and I will multiply thee greatly greatly"<sup>s</sup>?

He lays down a law most appropriate<sup>t</sup> to the race of <sup>a</sup> φύσεως θαυμασίας ἰδίαν (or ἐξαιρέτων) κοινωνίαν.

<sup>b</sup> 50 + 49 = 99.

<sup>c</sup> Or Jubilee year, cf. Lev. xxv. 10.

<sup>d</sup> ἄφεσις, as in LXX.

<sup>e</sup> ἐν τῇ νομοθεσίᾳ.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. of debts and obligations to work.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "hebdomadal."

<sup>h</sup> δύναμις (?); Aucher "mysterium."

<sup>i</sup> ἀναπαύσεως.

<sup>j</sup> κατὰ σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν.

<sup>k</sup> μνημείον.

<sup>l</sup> τῶν αὐτομάτων ἀγαθῶν, cf. De Mut. Nom. 260.

<sup>m</sup> ἐπιπόλαια ἀγαθά.

<sup>n</sup> βεβαίωσιν or σύστασιν.

<sup>o</sup> This half-verse (1b) and verse 2 are commented on in De Mut. Nom. 39-53.

<sup>p</sup> LXX εὐαρέσκει ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ; for ἐναντίον some LXX MSS. have ἐνώπιον, as does Philo in De Mut. Nom. 39.

<sup>q</sup> ἄμεμπτος.

<sup>r</sup> διαθήκην.

<sup>s</sup> So Heb.; LXX has only σφόδρα. The last clause is not quoted by Philo in De Mut. Nom. 52-53.

<sup>t</sup> οἰκειότατον.

GENESIS, BOOK III

mortals. For he who has no share,<sup>a</sup> and is not involved,<sup>b</sup> in evil <sup>c</sup> is perfectly good and noble—a property of incorporeal natures.<sup>d</sup> But as for those who are in the body, (they are good) to the extent that they reject evil and in accordance with their part in sin. For the life of man appears virtuous not because they are without weaknesses <sup>e</sup> from beginning to end, but when they are inspired (to rise) from weakness to health.<sup>f</sup> For these reasons He said directly and straightly, “Be blameless” because it suffices for the happiness of mortal nature <sup>g</sup> not to incur blame and not to say or do anything deserving of reproach. This is directly pleasing to the Father, wherefore He says, “Be well-pleasing before Me and be blameless.” Hence these statements relate and correspond (to each other),<sup>h</sup> for a character which pleases God does not incur blame, while one who is blameless and faultless in all things is altogether pleasing (to God). And He promises to grant a double grace to him who is far from all blame. In the first place, He says that He appoints him the repository and guardian <sup>i</sup> of the divine covenants,<sup>j</sup> and then that He will increase him to an indescribable multitude. For the words, “I will place My covenant between Me and thee” show that the custody and guardianship belong to a truly noble and

<sup>a</sup> Lit. “part of sharing,” prob. = κοινωνίαν.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. “is unmixed.”

<sup>c</sup> Lit. “in evilness (abstract) and evil (concrete).”

<sup>d</sup> ιδιότης ἀσωμάτων φύσεων; for a similar idea see De Mut. Nom. 50.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders, “immunitum ab aegritudine.”

<sup>f</sup> ὀγιάν or “wholeness”—ὀλοκληρίαν.

<sup>g</sup> τῇ θνητῇ φύσει πρὸς εὐτυχίαν.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders, “ubi mutuam praefert conversionem assertio.” The meaning is clearer in the parallel, De Mut. Nom. 47, προσεπιλέγει, καὶ γίνου ἄμεμπτος, ἀκολουθία καὶ εἰρμῶ χρώμενος.

<sup>i</sup> φυλακὴν (or ἀποθήκην) καὶ φύλακα vel sim. Aucher renders, “custodem depositi.” There is no similar phrase in De Mut. Nom.

<sup>j</sup> τῶν θείων διαθηκῶν. The Arm. uses two different words in this section for διαθήκη, namely owxt and ktakaran.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

virtuous man. Now the divine covenant consists of<sup>a</sup> all the incorporeal principles, forms<sup>b</sup> and measures for the whole of all the things of which this world<sup>c</sup> was made. Moreover that He twice<sup>d</sup> says, "I will multiply thee greatly greatly" clearly shows the indescribability and immensity of the multitude, (that is) the growth of the multitude (of people) and sometimes of human virtues.

*41. (Gen. xvii. 3) What is the meaning of the words, "Abraham fell upon (his) face"<sup>e</sup>?

What is now said is the development of the preceding,<sup>f</sup> for He had said, "be blameless." Now that for which life is blameworthy and reprehensible is nothing else than sense-perception,<sup>g</sup> for this is the head and font of passion.<sup>h</sup> Rightly and properly does he fall upon his face, by which I understand his senses, which (lead) to transgression and sin; and this indicates His beneficence.<sup>i</sup> This is the first (point). And second, it should be said that he is struck<sup>j</sup> by the manifestation<sup>k</sup> of the Existent One,<sup>l</sup> and being

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "are."

<sup>b</sup> οἱ ἀσώματοι λόγοι καὶ τὰ εἶδη (or αἱ ἰδέαι); Aucher less literally renders, "incorporeum est verbum."

<sup>c</sup> οὗτος ὁ κόσμος.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. repetitiously.

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἔπεσεν Ἀβραὰμ ἐπὶ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ. This biblical half-verse is commented upon (in part differently) in De Mut. Nom. 54-57, which omits the αὐτοῦ after πρόσωπον, as does the Arm. here.

<sup>f</sup> κατασκευή (?) τῶν προτέρων; Aucher "constructio prae-missorum."

<sup>g</sup> αἴσθησις.

<sup>h</sup> ἀρχή τε καὶ πηγή τῶν παθῶν.

<sup>i</sup> αἰνιττομένης τῆς ἐκείνου εὐεργασίας. In De Mut. Nom. 56 Philo more clearly says that God keeps the senses from erring. Aucher's rendering is inaccurate, "sensuum delicta (in unum cecidisse) operibus bonis jam illos deditas (sic) fuisse ostendens."

<sup>j</sup> πλήττεται.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "very manifest appearance," prob. = ἐπιφανεία.

<sup>l</sup> τοῦ ὄντος.

GENESIS, BOOK III

unable to look (at Him) directly, falls down in consternation and kisses the ground, being overawed and abashed by the vision which appeared to him. Third, the manifestation was made by Him who was in the appearance, (namely) the Existent One, who exists, whom he knew in truth by (His) opposition to nature, which comes into being,<sup>a</sup> for the one remains firm and intact,<sup>b</sup> while the other vacillates and falls upon its place, the earth.

42. (Gen. xvii. 3-4) What is the meaning of the words, "And God spoke with him, saying, And I, behold My covenant (is) with thee. And thou shalt become the father of a multitude of peoples" <sup>c</sup> ?

Since He had earlier spoken of the covenant, He says, "Do not seek it in writing,<sup>a</sup> for I Myself am, in the highest sense,<sup>e</sup> the genuine covenant."<sup>f</sup> For after showing Himself and saying, "I," He adds, "behold My covenant," (as if to say, "This is) nothing else but Me, for I am that same covenant by which pacts are made and formed and agreed upon, and, moreover, all things are well distributed and set apart." This is the archetypal form <sup>g</sup> of covenant, composed of ideas and incorporeal measures and principles,<sup>h</sup> through which this world <sup>i</sup> was completed. Was it not

<sup>a</sup> ὃν οἶδε πρὸς ἀλήθειαν ἐξ ἀντιθέσεως πρὸς τὴν γενομένην φύσιν; Aucher renders less accurately, "quem novit ut veritatem naturae creatae oppositam."

<sup>b</sup> ἐν τῷ βεβαίῳ καὶ ἀπταιστώ vel sim.

<sup>c</sup> So LXX, καὶ ἐλάλησεν αὐτῷ ὁ θεὸς λέγων, καὶ ἐγώ, ἰδοὺ ἡ διαθήκη μου μετὰ σοῦ· καὶ ἔση πατὴρ πλήθους ἐθνῶν. The second half of verse 3 to "with thee" is similarly interpreted in De Mut. Nom. 58-59.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. in written form.

<sup>e</sup> κατὰ τὸν ἀνώτατον λόγον, cf. De Mut. Nom. 58 τὸ δ' ἀνώτατον γένος διαθηκῶν.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. = γνησία διαθήκη τῶν διαθηκῶν; the Arm. here uses two different words for covenant, ouxt and ktakaran.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ἀρχέτυπον εἶδος.

<sup>h</sup> ἐξ ἰδεῶν καὶ ἀσωμάτων μέτρων καὶ λόγων συντεθειμένον.

<sup>i</sup> οὗτος ὁ κόσμος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

then indeed a superfluity of beneficence which the Father granted the wise man,<sup>a</sup> that He not only carried him off and brought him up from earth to heaven or from heaven to an incorporeal and intelligible world,<sup>b</sup> but also (brought him) from here to Himself, showing (Himself) clearly,<sup>c</sup> not as He is, for this is impossible,<sup>d</sup> but (in so far) as the eyes of the beholder are able to attain to the genuine and intelligible power itself.<sup>e</sup> Wherefore He says, "No longer shalt thou be a son, but a father." And a father, not of one, but "of a multitude," and of a multitude, not of individuals,<sup>f</sup> but of a numerous group of nations.<sup>g</sup> And of the agreements<sup>h</sup> revealed, two are literal,<sup>i</sup> while the third is more physical.<sup>j</sup> Now of the literal ones, the first is as follows. "Truly<sup>k</sup> thou shalt be a father of nations and shalt beget nations, that is, each of thy sons shall be the founder of a nation."<sup>l</sup> And the other is as follows. "In the manner of a father, thou shalt be invested with the care and supervision of many nations,<sup>m</sup> for a lover of God<sup>n</sup> is by the same token<sup>o</sup> wont to be a lover of mankind,<sup>p</sup> so that he is greatly concerned not only for his countrymen<sup>q</sup> but also for all others at the same time, especially for those who are able to receive the discipline of attention<sup>r</sup> and whose characters are not unpleasant and hard but easily give place to virtue<sup>s</sup> and

<sup>a</sup> τῷ σοφῷ, i.e. Abraham.

<sup>b</sup> εἰς ἀσώματον καὶ νοερὸν κόσμον.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits the adverb.

<sup>d</sup> ἀδύνατον.

<sup>e</sup> εἰς αὐτὴν τὴν γνησίαν καὶ νοερὰν δύναμιν.

<sup>f</sup> κατὰ μέρος; Aucher renders literally but not quite to the point, "secundum partes."<sup>g</sup> πολυανθρωπίας γενῶν.

<sup>h</sup> Prob. = τῶν ὁμολογιῶν; Aucher "promissis."

<sup>i</sup> ῥηταί.

<sup>j</sup> φυσικωτέρα, in the sense of physical (or psychic) allegory.

<sup>k</sup> ὄντως.

<sup>l</sup> γενάρχης.

<sup>m</sup> πολλῶν γενῶν ἐπιμέλειαν καὶ ἐπιστάσιαν ἐνδύσει.

<sup>n</sup> φιλόθεος.

<sup>o</sup> εὐθύς.

<sup>p</sup> φιλάνθρωπος.

<sup>q</sup> τοῖς ὁμοφύλοις.

<sup>r</sup> τὴν τῆς προσοχῆς (or ἐπιμελείας) παιδείαν; Aucher "disciplinam attentionis"; the exact meaning is not clear to me.

<sup>s</sup> ἀρετῇ.

GENESIS, BOOK III

are submissive to right reason.<sup>a</sup> But the third (promise) is to be allegorized<sup>b</sup> as follows. The multitude of nations is like there being in each of us a variety of inclinations in the soul,<sup>c</sup> both those which it is wont to form<sup>d</sup> by itself, and those which it receives through the senses<sup>e</sup> and which slip<sup>f</sup> into its sight from without.<sup>g</sup> And if the mind<sup>h</sup> assumes sovereignty over these like the father of all,<sup>i</sup> it changes them for the better, nursing<sup>j</sup> the infantile and puerile thoughts, while urging on and helping to advance those which are mature but incomplete, and praising those which persist in the right way but restraining<sup>k</sup> the rebellious and refractory ones through discipline and reproof. For being desirous of imitating the Deity,<sup>l</sup> it receives from His powers, the beneficent and destructive,<sup>m</sup> as if from a fountain, a double stream: beneficence toward those who wish to obey, reproof toward those who are out of hand and refractory, since some profit from praise, others from castigation. For he who is widely versed<sup>n</sup> in virtue can profit from all things in accordance with his power.

43. (Gen. xvii. 5) What is the meaning of the words, "Thy name shall not be called Abram, but Abraham<sup>o</sup> shall be thy name"?

<sup>a</sup> καὶ ὑποτάττονται τῷ ὀρθῷ λόγῳ. <sup>b</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

<sup>c</sup> ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ πολυτρόπων οὐσῶν γνωμῶν vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> πλάττειν. <sup>e</sup> διὰ τῶν αἰσθήσεων.

<sup>f</sup> παρεισαγόμεναι.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "to the sight (or "eyes") of vision inside from without"; Aucher renders more freely, "imaginatione intermediente ab extra intus."<sup>h</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "communis pater."

<sup>j</sup> θηλάζων.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "putting a bit into the mouth of."

<sup>l</sup> τῷ Θεῷ.

<sup>m</sup> On the two divine attributes see QG ii. 51 notes.

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "extends everywhere."

<sup>o</sup> Arm. and LXX "Abraam." In De Mut. Nom. Philo devotes a long section, §§ 60-120, to the changes of name of various biblical persons beside Abraham.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Some of the uncultivated,<sup>a</sup> or rather, of the uninitiated<sup>b</sup> and of those who do not belong to the divine chorus ridicule and reproach the one who is blameless in nature,<sup>c</sup> and say reproachfully and chidingly, "Oh what a great gift! The Ruler and Lord of all<sup>d</sup> has graciously given one letter,<sup>e</sup> by which He has increased and made greater the name of the patriarch, so that instead of having two syllables it has three." Oh what great devilishness<sup>f</sup> and impiety (it is) that some presume to bring forward slanders against God, being deceived by the superficial aspects of names, whereas it would be proper to thrust their minds into the depths in search of the inner facts for the sake of greatly possessing the truth.<sup>g</sup> And yet these (names) which are ready to hand<sup>h</sup> (and) which someone is said to have granted (in) writing—why do you not believe that (they are the work of) Providence<sup>i</sup> and that this is to be honoured?<sup>j</sup> For the first written element of sound is A, both in order and in power.<sup>k</sup> Second, it is a vowel,<sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τῶν ἀμούσων, represented by two words in Arm.

<sup>b</sup> τῶν ἀμνήτων.

<sup>c</sup> ἄμωμον φύσει. Apparently Moses is meant.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ ἡγεμὼν καὶ κύριος τῶν ὄλων.

<sup>e</sup> ἐχάρισε ἐν γράμμα (or στοιχείον, as in De Mut. Nom. 61).

<sup>f</sup> Arm. lit. = μεγαλοδαιμονία (not found in the Greek works of Philo).

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "for the sake of great possessions in truth"; Aucher freely renders, "ob veram magnitudinem possessionis."

<sup>h</sup> ἔτοιμα καὶ πρόχειρα.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν πρόνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> The text is very obscure; Aucher's rendering takes liberties with the syntax, "ad haec et litteram concessam, et si levem et facilem, quare providentiam non reputatis, neque pretium suum ponderatis?" We may well suspect either that the Greek Vorlage was corrupt or that the Arm. translator has misunderstood it. In the parallel, De Mut. Nom. 64, Philo says that it is impossible to suppose that God took credit for altering Abram's name since "He did not see fit to assign names even in their completed forms, but committed the task to a wise man (Adam)."

<sup>k</sup> καὶ τάξει καὶ δυνάμει.

<sup>l</sup> φωνήεν (στοιχείον).

GENESIS, BOOK III

and the first of the vowels, being fitted on to them like a kind of head. And third, it is not naturally one of the long vowels, and not naturally one of the short ones, but one of those which have both these (quantities). For it is (sometimes) extended in length, and then again it is contracted to the same shortness, easily taking many different forms <sup>a</sup> like wax, and forming the word into various and manifold forms. And the reason is that it is a brother of the number one, <sup>b</sup> with which all things begin and end. And now if someone sees its great beauty and that the letter is exhibited as so necessary, can he pretend <sup>c</sup> that he has not seen it? If he has seen it, he (shows himself) to be captious and a hater of the good. <sup>d</sup> And if he has not seen it, it is very easy to scoff and gleefully make fun of something he knows nothing of, as though he did know it. <sup>e</sup> But these things are, as I have said, mentioned incidentally. <sup>f</sup> Now we must examine the necessary and principle matter.

The addition of A as <sup>g</sup> one letter, by changing the entire position of the forms of the soul, <sup>h</sup> provides it with the knowledge of wisdom <sup>i</sup> instead of the study of astronomy. For skill in the study of astronomy is acquired in one part of the world, (namely) in the heaven and in the revolutions and circlings of the stars, <sup>j</sup> whereas wisdom (pertains) to the nature of all things, both sense-perceptible and intelligible. <sup>k</sup> For wisdom is the science of divine and

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "formed into many things."

<sup>b</sup> Alpha as a numeral letter = 1.

<sup>c</sup> σκήπτεται.

<sup>d</sup> φιλόσοφος καὶ μισόκαλος.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher, punctuating differently and supplying a verb, renders, "quod si non viderit tam facile negotium, quomodo quod nescit, irridere et despiciere praesumit, quasi sciat?"

<sup>f</sup> παρέργως.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "through."

<sup>h</sup> πᾶσας τὰς τῶν ψυχῆς εἰδῶν θέσεις vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν τῆς σοφίας ἐπιστήμην.

<sup>j</sup> ἐν ταῖς περιφοραῖς καὶ χορείαῖς τῶν ἀστέρων.

<sup>k</sup> φύσιν αἰσθητικὴν τε καὶ νοεράν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

human things and of their causes.<sup>a</sup> Among these divine things is that which is visible and that which is invisible, and the paradigmatic idea.<sup>b</sup> Among human things there is that which is corporeal and that which is incorporeal ; and to obtain knowledge of these is a truly great work of ability and prowess. And not only to see all substances and natures but also to trace and search out their various causes shows a power that is more perfect than is human.<sup>c</sup> For it is necessary for the soul which receives so many good things to be all eyes and to complete its life in the world unsleepingly and wakefully, and with an unshadowed and radiant light all around it, to receive lightning-flashes (of illumination), having God as its teacher and leader in obtaining knowledge of things and attaining to their causes.

Now the dissyllabic name " Abram " is interpreted as " uplifted father " <sup>d</sup> in respect of the nomenclature of astronomy and mathematics.<sup>e</sup> But the trisyllabic (name) " Abraham " is translated as " elect father of sound," <sup>f</sup> the appellation of a wise man. For what else is an echo in us but an uttered word <sup>g</sup> coming from an organ constructed by nature through the wind-pipe,<sup>h</sup> the mouth and the tongue. And the " father of sound " is our mind,<sup>i</sup> and the elect mind is that of the virtuous man.<sup>j</sup> And that the mind is eminently, properly and naturally the father of the uttered word is clear, for it is the special function

<sup>a</sup> ἐπιστήμη ἐστὶν ἡ σοφία τῶν θείων καὶ ἀνθρωπίνων καὶ τῶν τούτων αἰτίων. Exactly the same definition is given in De Congressu 79.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ παραδειγματικὴ ἰδέα.

<sup>c</sup> δύναμιν τελειοτέραν ἢ κατὰ ἄνθρωπον.

<sup>d</sup> μετέωρος πατήρ, as in De Mut. Nom. 66, De Cherubim 4 et al.

<sup>e</sup> μαθηματικῆς (almost certainly not " astrology " here).

<sup>f</sup> πατήρ ἐκλεκτὸς ἡχοῦς, as in De Mut. Nom. 66 et al.

<sup>g</sup> λόγος προφορικὸς.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ τραχεῖα ἀρτηρία.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ ἡμέτερος νοῦς.

<sup>j</sup> τοῦ σπονδαίου ; the parallel in De Mut. Nom. 69 f. has τοῦ σοφοῦ.

GENESIS, BOOK III

of a father to beget, and the word is begotten by the mind. And (of this) there is clear evidence, for when it <sup>a</sup> is moved by thoughts, it makes a sound, and when these are lacking, it stops. Witnesses (of this) are the orators and philosophers,<sup>b</sup> who show their tendencies <sup>c</sup> through statements.<sup>d</sup> For, so long as the mind produces heads,<sup>e</sup> it begets them in accordance with the various constructions stored up in itself,<sup>f</sup> and the word flows like a fountain into the ears of those who happen to be there as if into cisterns.<sup>g</sup> But when it fails <sup>h</sup> and is no longer able to give out (its thoughts), the sound also stops, since there is no one to cause it to resound.<sup>i</sup>

But now surely it must seem to you, O men who are full of, and overflowing with, all absurd verbosity, and are empty and bereft of wisdom, that this single letter and element is a gift <sup>j</sup> and that through this letter and element he became worthy of the divine power of wisdom, than which there is nothing more precious <sup>k</sup> in our nature, for instead of the knowledge of astronomy He granted (him) that which was entire, full and overflowing in place of a small part. For in wisdom is included astronomy, as is the part in the whole, and mathematics is (also) a part. But it behooves you, O men, to bear this too in mind, that he who is learned and skilled in investigating the nature

<sup>a</sup> Apparently the organ of speech is meant.

<sup>b</sup> οἱ ῥήτορες καὶ φιλόσοφοι.

<sup>c</sup> Prob. τὰς ἕξεις.

<sup>d</sup> Prob. διὰ προβλημάτων.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. gloux = κεφαλή, κεφάλαιον, ἄκρον.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders this obscure sentence a little differently, "in quantum enim mens foras edit capita, singulosque apparatus in se reconditos producit ad modum geniturae."

<sup>g</sup> δεξαμενάς.

<sup>h</sup> Prob. "the mind" is the subject (a grammatical pl. with pl. verb in Arm.).

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "to strike it."

<sup>j</sup> Apparently the Arm. translator has interchanged subject and predicate, here reversed; Aucher renders more literally, "videtur ne donum meri unius elementi fuisse."

<sup>k</sup> τιμιώτερον vel sim.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of higher things <sup>a</sup> may be <sup>b</sup> of a wicked and impure character. But the wise man <sup>c</sup> is good and fine in all things. Let us then no longer laugh at this gift, for one cannot find anything more perfect. For what is worse than wickedness or better than virtue? <sup>d</sup> Surely it cannot be that good is not opposed to evil? Can it be compared with wealth or honours or freedom or health or anything at all of the body or any abundance of external possessions? For all philosophy comes into our lives like the healing of the soul <sup>e</sup> that it may give freedom from suffering and from sickness. <sup>f</sup> And it is the part of a virtuous man to be a philosopher. <sup>g</sup> That a wonderful skill should be precious is very fine <sup>h</sup> (but) more precious is the end <sup>i</sup> for the sake of which the skill (exists). And this is wisdom and the good, which He called "Abraham" in Chaldaean, and in Armenian, <sup>j</sup> "elect father of sound," <sup>k</sup> as if giving a definition <sup>l</sup> of the wise man. For just as the definition of man is "rational, mortal animal," <sup>m</sup> so the definition of the wise man is symbolically <sup>n</sup> "elect father of sound."

<sup>a</sup> i.e. heavenly bodies.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "can be."

<sup>c</sup> ὁ σοφός.

<sup>d</sup> ἀρετή.

<sup>e</sup> ὡς περ ἰατρῆιον τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>f</sup> τὴν ἀπάθειαν καὶ τὸ ἄνοσον.

<sup>g</sup> φιλόσοφος.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. seems lit. = θαυμασίαν τέχνην τιμίαν <εἶναι> σφόδρα καλόν, but this is not quite certain; Aucher, omitting the word "precious," renders, "et mira ars nobilis veraciter."

<sup>i</sup> τὸ τέλος.

<sup>j</sup> Sic! The original, of course, had "Greek"; cf. QG iii. 38.

<sup>k</sup> Aucher here again mistakenly renders, "pater sonitus electi."

<sup>l</sup> ὄρον or ὀρισμόν.

<sup>m</sup> ζῶον λογικὸν θνητόν; the same definition, common in Greek philosophy, is given by Philo in De Abrahamo 32 et al.

<sup>n</sup> Arm. xorhouird = λογισμός, διάνοια, σύμβολον, τύπος, μυστήριον, etc.; Aucher here renders, "mystica."

GENESIS, BOOK III

44. (Gen xvii. 6) What is the meaning of the words, " I will increase thee greatly <sup>a</sup> and I will make <sup>b</sup> thee into nations, and kings shall come into being <sup>c</sup> from thee " <sup>d</sup> ?

" I will increase thee greatly " is said to the wise man <sup>e</sup> very rightfully, <sup>f</sup> since every wicked and evil man grows and flourishes, not toward increase but toward deficiency, <sup>g</sup> just as those flowers which are (subject to) fading (grow), not into life but death. But he whose life is long is like a cloud which endures and grows exceedingly, and like streams of rivers, for he overflows and broadens out and becomes more ample as he goes out, since he is also the divine wisdom. <sup>h</sup> And the words, " I will make thee into nations " are spoken to show clearly that he does something of worth, <sup>i</sup> as if (to say that) the wise man is the foundation and base and firm support of the nations and of mankind and of those who are of various opinions in soul, <sup>j</sup> as has been said before. For the wise man is the saviour <sup>k</sup> of nations and an intercessor <sup>l</sup> with God and one who seeks forgiveness for his countrymen <sup>m</sup> who have committed sins. Moreover that " kings shall come into being from thee " He very rightfully <sup>n</sup> says, for all that which

<sup>a</sup> So LXX and Arm. O.T. ; Heb. " greatly greatly."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. " place " as in LXX, Heb. and Arm. O.T.

<sup>c</sup> So Old Lat. ; LXX, Heb. and Arm. O.T. " shall go out."

<sup>d</sup> Philo does not comment elsewhere on this verse.

<sup>e</sup> τῷ σοφῷ.

<sup>f</sup> νομιμώτερον.

<sup>g</sup> ἐλάττωσιν ἢ ἐκλείψιν.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ θεία σοφία. It is not wholly clear what the grammatical subject of this sentence is.

<sup>i</sup> The text seems to be in some disorder.

<sup>j</sup> For Arm. karcik' " opinion " Aucher suggests karik' " needs " ; he renders, " hominibus vario modo egentibus secundum animum." The meaning of the Arm. is far from clear.

<sup>k</sup> σωτήρ.

<sup>l</sup> μεσίτης ἢ παράκλητος. This important passage is overlooked by Nils Johansson, Parakletoi, Lund, 1940.

<sup>m</sup> τοῖς ὁμοφύλοις.

<sup>n</sup> νομιμώτερον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

belongs to wisdom is of royal origin, and is sovereign and ruling by nature. And the wise man is unproductive and unfruitful<sup>a</sup> in respect of his own private seed,<sup>b</sup> and is fertile and productive in respect of ruling (seed).<sup>c</sup>

45. (Gen. xvii. 8) What is the meaning of the words, "I will give to thee and to thy seed after thee the land in which thou sojournest,<sup>d</sup> all the land of Canaan as an eternal possession"<sup>e</sup>?

The literal meaning<sup>f</sup> is clear, so that the passage<sup>g</sup> does not require any interpretation. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> it is to be allegorized<sup>i</sup> as follows. The mind of the virtuous man<sup>j</sup> is a sojourner in its corporeal place rather than an inhabitant.<sup>k</sup> For its fatherland<sup>l</sup> is the ether and the heaven, while its temporary abode<sup>m</sup> is the earth and the earthly body, in which it is said to sojourn. But the Father in His benefactions to it,<sup>n</sup> gives it authority<sup>o</sup> over all earthly things as an "eternal possession," as He says, in order that it may never be dominated by the body but may always be the ruler and chief, acquiring it<sup>p</sup> as a servant and follower.

46. (Gen. xvii. 10-11) What is the meaning of the words, <sup>a</sup> ἄγονος καὶ ἄκαρπος.

<sup>b</sup> τοῦ ἰδίου (?) σπέρματος.

<sup>c</sup> τοῦ ἀρχικοῦ (?) <σπέρματος>; Aucher "semine ab ipso principali."

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "in which thou dwellest in sojourn" = LXX παροικεῖς.

<sup>e</sup> εἰς κατάσχεσιν αἰώνιον, as in LXX. <sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ τοῦ σπουδαίου νοῦς.

<sup>k</sup> πάροικος ἐν τῷ σωματικῷ τόπῳ μᾶλλον ἢ κάτοικος.

<sup>l</sup> ἡ πατρίς.

<sup>m</sup> Arm. gaļout = ἀποικία or μετὰστασις; here it seems to have the meaning of "exile" as does Heb. gālûth.

<sup>n</sup> εὐεργετῶν αὐτόν.

<sup>o</sup> ἀρχήν or ἡγεμονίαν vel sim.

<sup>p</sup> i.e. the body.

GENESIS, BOOK III

“ There shall be circumcised every male of you, and you shall be circumcised in the flesh of your foreskin ” <sup>a</sup> ?

I see two circumcisions, one of the male, and the other of the flesh ; that of the flesh is by way of the genitals, while that of the male, it seems to me, is by way of the reason.<sup>b</sup> For that which is, one might say,<sup>c</sup> naturally male in us is the mind,<sup>d</sup> whose superfluous growths it is necessary to cut off and throw away in order that it may become pure and naked of every evil and passion, and be a priest of God. Now this is what He indicated<sup>e</sup> by the second circumcision, stating (in) the Law<sup>f</sup> that “ you shall circumcise your hardness of heart,”<sup>g</sup> which means your hard and rebellious and refractory thoughts, and by cutting off and removing arrogance, you shall make the sovereign part<sup>h</sup> free and unbound.

47. (Gen. xvii. 10) Why does He command that only the males be circumcised ?

In the first place, the Egyptians by the custom of their country circumcise the marriageable youth and maid<sup>i</sup> in the fourteenth (year) of their age, when the male begins to get seed, and the female to have a menstrual flow. But the divine legislator<sup>j</sup> ordained circumcision for males alone for many reasons. The first of these is that the male has more pleasure in, and desire for, mating<sup>k</sup> than does the female, and he is more ready for it.<sup>l</sup> Therefore He rightly

<sup>a</sup> Or “ of your uncircumcision,” = LXX τῆς ἀκροβυστίας ὑμῶν.

<sup>b</sup> διὰ τοῦ λογισμοῦ ἢ τῆς διανοίας.

<sup>c</sup> σχεδόν.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>e</sup> ἤνιξατο.

<sup>f</sup> Deut. x. 16.

<sup>g</sup> τὴν σκληροκαρδίαν, as in LXX.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ἡγεμονικόν, i.e. the mind.

<sup>i</sup> τὸν νύμφιον καὶ τὴν νύμφην.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ κύριος νομοθέτης. Philo refers to God as a legislator in a few other passages, e.g. De Fuga 66 ; De Vita Mosis ii. 48. Usually “ the legislator ” is Moses.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. amounnout' iun = γάμος, ὄμιλία, συνουσία, etc.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits rendering the last clause.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

leaves out the female, and suppresses the undue<sup>a</sup> impulses of the male by the sign of circumcision. The second is that the matter<sup>b</sup> of the female in the remains of the menstrual fluids produces the fetus.<sup>c</sup> But the male (provides) the skill and the cause.<sup>d</sup> And so, since the male provides the greater and more necessary (part) in the process of generation, it was proper that his pride should be checked by the sign of circumcision, but the material element, being inanimate,<sup>e</sup> does not admit of arrogance. So much for that. However, we must note what follows upon it. That which sees in us is the mind,<sup>f</sup> and it is necessary to cut off its superfluous growths.<sup>g</sup> Now these superfluous growths are vain opinions<sup>h</sup> and what is done in accordance with them. And when the mind is circumcised and contains only necessary and useful things, and when at the same time there is cut off whatever causes pride to increase, then with it are circumcised the eyes also, as though they could not (otherwise) see.

*48. (Gen. xvii. 12) Why does He say, "And the child of eight days shall be circumcised, every male" ?

He commands that the foreskin be circumcised. In the first place this is granted because of disease, for it is more difficult and formidable to cure an affliction of the genitals, (which is like) a fire to those on which a covering skin

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "superfluous."

<sup>b</sup> ἡ ὕλη.

<sup>c</sup> The text is slightly uncertain as there are variants to three words, but the above rendering is supported by other passages in which Philo follows the common Greek view of the physiology of conception, e.g. De Opif. Mundi 132, "just as with women the course of the menstrual fluids (τῶν καταμηνίων), for these are said by physical scientists to be the bodily substance of the fetus (οὐσία σωματικὴ βρεφῶν)."

<sup>d</sup> τὴν τέχνην καὶ τὸ αἴτιον; there is no governing verb in the Arm.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ὑλικὸν ὡς ἄψυχον.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> See above, QG iii. 46.

<sup>h</sup> κεναὶ δόξαι.

GENESIS, BOOK III

grows,<sup>a</sup> but this does not happen to one who is circumcised. Now if there were some way of avoiding other afflictions and diseases as well by cutting off some member<sup>b</sup> or some part of the body, by the removal of which there would be no obstacle to the functioning of its parts, man would not be known as mortal<sup>c</sup> but would be changed into immortality. And that it has pleased some to circumcise themselves through foresight of soul without any ill effect is plain, for not only the Jews<sup>d</sup> but also the Egyptians, Arabs and Ethiopians and nearly all those who inhabit the southern regions near the torrid zone are circumcised. And what is the particular reason if not that in these places, especially in summer, the foreskin of the genitals, which is the skin that surrounds and covers (them), becomes inflamed and infected.<sup>e</sup> But when this is cut off, by being laid bare (the penis) is restored,<sup>f</sup> and the affliction is resisted and expelled. For this reason the nations which are in the northern regions and all those to whom has been allotted a portion in those regions of the earth which are windy<sup>g</sup> are not circumcised. For in those regions, as the heat of the sun is relaxed and diminished, so too is the disease which is produced by heat in the skin of the parts of the body.<sup>h</sup> And a sure indication of the credibility of this matter one may find in the time (of year) when the disease is especially (strong); it never occurs in winter, and it thrives and flourishes when it comes in summer, for it loves, as it were, to spread in this season<sup>i</sup> like fire.

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. is elliptic; Aucher renders more freely, "igne fere comburens ea quibus membranum supernascitur." The reference is to the disease called anthrax by the Greeks, see De Spec. Leg. i. 4.

<sup>b</sup> μέλος τι.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher, wrongly, I think, renders, "nesciente mortali homine."

<sup>d</sup> Arm. hreyk' (Hebrews).

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "wounded."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "is revived."

<sup>g</sup> Why Aucher renders, "partium terrae serenae" is a puzzle to me.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "in the skin of the limbs."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "in these parts."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

In the second place, it was not only for the sake of health that the ancients devoted thought <sup>a</sup> (to this) but also for the sake of populousness, <sup>b</sup> for we see that nature is a living thing and very well disposed toward man. <sup>c</sup> Now as wise men they knew that as the seed often flows into the folds of the foreskin, it is likely that it will be scattered unfruitfully ; but if there is no obstacle to prevent, it will succeed in reaching its proper place. For this reason such nations as practise circumcision increase greatly in population. But our legislator, <sup>d</sup> who had in mind, and was familiar with, this result, prohibited the immediate circumcision of infants, <sup>e</sup> having in mind the same thing, <sup>f</sup> that both circumcision and desire were populousness. <sup>g</sup> Wherefore, it seems to me, the Egyptians indicate that for the sake of populousness it is proper to perform circumcision in the fourteenth year when the pleasurable desires for procreation begin. But it is very much better and more far-sighted of us to prescribe circumcision for infants, for perhaps one who is full-grown would hesitate through fear to carry out this ordinance of his own free will.

In the third place, (Scripture) says that it is also for the

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "forethought of soul."

<sup>b</sup> ἕνεκα τῆς πολυανθρωπίας. This is cited as the fourth and "most compelling" reason for circumcision in De Spec. Leg. i. 7.

<sup>c</sup> φιλόανθρωπον.

<sup>d</sup> νομοθέτης (here God or Moses).

<sup>e</sup> Apparently Philo means immediately after birth, unless the Arm. is inexact in using "prohibited" for "commanded"; Aucher renders, "citius fieri monuit infantium circumcissionem."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "seeing in the same mind."

<sup>g</sup> The above is a literal rendering of a clause that is unintelligible to me ; Aucher, in disregard of the syntax, renders freely, "eandem intentionem circumcissionis ob populationem attendens." He remarks in a footnote that the passage is obscure, and the punctuation uncertain. Possibly the original Greek meant that Moses (or God) regarded populousness as due to circumcision as well as to sexual desire.

GENESIS, BOOK III

sake of purity in the sacred offerings, for those who enter the courts of the sacred precinct are purified by ablutions and sprinklings. And the Egyptians shave the whole body, (removing) the hair which conceals and overshadows the body, in order that it may appear shining and bare. The circumcision of the skin, moreover, is not a little helpful for one is revolted by this when one sees it as it (really) is.

In the fourth place,<sup>a</sup> there are two generative (organs), in the soul and in the body; thoughts<sup>b</sup> are the generative (organ) of the soul, and that in the body is the (organ) of the body. Now the ancients<sup>c</sup> were disposed to regard the bodily organ of generation as resembling thought,<sup>d</sup> which is the most generative (force) of the heart.<sup>e</sup> And it is like nothing else so much as the circumcision of the heart. Now these are the widely known facts concerning the problems we are inquiring into. But we must speak about more symbolical things,<sup>f</sup> which have their own status.<sup>g</sup>

They say that the circumcision of the skin is a symbol, as if (to show that) it is proper to cut off superfluous and excessive desires<sup>h</sup> by exercising continence and endurance in matters of the Law.<sup>i</sup> For just as the skin of the fore-skin is superfluous in procreation because of the burning affliction which comes upon it, so the excess of desire is <sup>a</sup> The fourth reason for circumcision given here corresponds to the third reason given in De Spec. Leg. i. 6.

<sup>b</sup> τὰ νοήματα. The idea is more clearly expressed in De Spec. Leg. i. 6, πρὸς γὰρ γένεσιν ἄμφω παρεσκεύασται, τὸ μὲν ἐγκάρδιον πνεῦμα νοημάτων, τὸ δὲ γόνιμον ὄργανον ζώων.

<sup>c</sup> οἱ πρῶτοι.

<sup>d</sup> νοήμασι ἢ τῷ νῷ.

<sup>e</sup> τῆς καρδίας, here regarded as the seat of the mind; see Colson's note in vol. vii. p. 615.

<sup>f</sup> περὶ συμβολικωτέρων.

<sup>g</sup> τὸν αὐτῶν λόγον ἐχόντων.

<sup>h</sup> τὰς περιττὰς καὶ πλεοναζούσας ἐπιθυμίας, cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 9.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "continence of endurance of the Law"—ἐγκράτειαν ὑπομονῆς τοῦ νόμου (ἢ τῆς θρησκείας); Aucher renders, "continentiae religionis." There is no parallel to this phrase in De Spec. Leg.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

superfluous and at the same time harmful. It is superfluous because it is not necessary, and it is harmful because it is the cause of diseases of body and soul. But through this great desire (Scripture) alludes also to the fact that one ought to cut off other desires as well. And the greatest desire is that of intercourse between man and woman, since it forms the beginning of a great thing, procreation, and brings about in the progenitors a great desire toward their progeny, for it is rather natural <sup>a</sup> to be very fond of, and tender toward, them. And it <sup>b</sup> indicates the cutting off not only of excessive desires but also of arrogance and <sup>c</sup> great evil and such habits.<sup>d</sup> And arrogance, as the saying of the ancients goes, is the excision and impeding of progress,<sup>e</sup> for one who thinks (well of himself)<sup>f</sup> does not admit of betterment,<sup>g</sup> thinking that he is the cause that is involved.<sup>h</sup>

Very naturally does (Scripture) instruct those who think that they are the causes of generation, and do not intently fix their minds on seeing the begetter of all things,<sup>i</sup> for He is the veritable and true<sup>j</sup> Father. But we who are called begetters are used as instruments in the service<sup>k</sup> of generation. For as by a miracle of imitation<sup>l</sup> all those

<sup>a</sup> φυσικόν τι.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. the symbol of circumcision.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders, "ut."

<sup>d</sup> τῶν συντρόφων.

<sup>e</sup> The brief Greek frag. printed by Harris, p. 99, was identified by Früchtel as belonging here; it reads οἴησις, ὡς ὁ τῶν ἀρχαίων λόγος, ἐστὶν ἐκκοπή προκοπῆς.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. translator either read οἰόμενος or mistook the meaning of κατοιόμενος, which is found in the Greek frag.

<sup>g</sup> βελτίωσις, as in the Greek frag., which ends here.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders, perhaps more aptly, "putans se sufficientem interesse causam."

<sup>i</sup> τὸν γεννητὴν τῶν συμπάντων.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. uses three synonyms, two of which = ἀψευδής.

<sup>k</sup> εἰς χρείαν ὑπηρεσίας or διακονίας.

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. i hrašs nmanout'ean is a misunderstanding of θαύματι, which here means "puppet-show," as in Quod Omnis Probus 5. See also p. 247 note f.

GENESIS, BOOK III

things which are visible are inanimate,<sup>a</sup> while that which activates them like puppets<sup>b</sup> is invisible. The cause of this is the cause of the habits<sup>c</sup> and movements of visible things. In the same way the Creator of the world sends out<sup>d</sup> His powers<sup>e</sup> from an eternal and invisible place, but we are wonderfully<sup>f</sup> moved like puppets toward that which pertains to us, (namely) seed and procreation. Otherwise we might think that the shepherd's pipe<sup>g</sup> is played by itself instead of being meant<sup>h</sup> for the production of harmony by the artisan by whom the instrument was devised for this service and necessary use.

49. (Gen. xvii. 12) Why does He command the circumcision (to be) on the eighth day?

The eighth (digit) reveals many beauties.<sup>i</sup> One is, in the first place, that it is a cube. And the second is that everywhere it contains in itself the forms of equality,<sup>j</sup> because the number eight is the first which indicates length and breadth and depth, which are equal to<sup>k</sup> one another. Third, the composition of eight produces agreement, (namely) the number thirty-six, which the Pythagoreans call "homology" since it is the first in which there is an agreement of odd with even,<sup>l</sup> for the four separate odd

<sup>a</sup> ἄψυχα.

<sup>b</sup> νευροσπαστεῖ; Aucher's rendering, "nervos corroborat," misses the point of the implied metaphor.

<sup>c</sup> Prob. σχέσεις in the Aristotelian sense.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. zgel = ἐκτείνειν, ἐκπέμπειν, etc.

<sup>e</sup> τὰς δυνάμεις.

<sup>f</sup> Again θαῦμα "puppet-show" has been misunderstood.

<sup>g</sup> Reading, with Aucher, sring (σύριγγς) for sik' (πινοή vel sim.).
<sup>h</sup> Lit. "set aside" or "apportioned."

<sup>i</sup> κάλλη. For other passages on the properties of the number eight see QG i. 75, 91, ii. 5. Stachle, p. 51, also cites parallels from Joh. Lydus.

<sup>j</sup> τὰ τοῦ ἴσου (or τῆς ἰσότητος) εἶδη.

<sup>k</sup> Or "congruent with."

<sup>l</sup> Cf. Joh. Lydus, p. 150 ἐν αὐτῷ γὰρ τὰ περιττὰ τοῖς ἀρτίοις ὁμολόγησαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(numbers) from one on, and the even ones from two on make a total of thirty-six. The odd ones are 1, 3, 5, 7,<sup>a</sup> making 16 in all; and the even ones are 2, 4, 6, 8, making 20. The sum of both totals amounts to thirty-six, truly a most productive<sup>b</sup> number, for it is quadrangular, having as its side the hexad, which is the first even-odd number<sup>c</sup>; this some accurately<sup>d</sup> call "harmony" or "marriage."<sup>e</sup> By making use of it the Creator of the universe made the world, as the holy and wonderful writing of Moses relates. Fourth, the form<sup>f</sup> of the ogdoad produces sixty-four, which is the first cube and, at the same time, square, the pattern of an incorporeal, intelligible and invisible and (also) corporeal substance<sup>g</sup>; incorporeal in so far as it produces a square plane,<sup>h</sup> but corporeal in so far as it produces a cubic solid.<sup>i</sup> Fifth, it is kin to the ever-virginal hebdomad,<sup>j</sup> for when the parts of eight are added together, they make seven, for a half (of eight) is four, a quarter is two, and an eighth is one; and the sum of these is seven. Sixth, the power<sup>k</sup> of eight is sixty-four, which, as we have said, is the first number that is a cube and a square at the same time. Seventh, from the number one on, the several double (numbers) 1, 2, 4, 8, 16, 32 make 64.<sup>l</sup> The ogdoad

<sup>a</sup> In the Arm. text the two sets of numbers are indicated by numeral letters.

<sup>b</sup> γεννητικώτατον. The same adjective is applied to the number six in De Opif. Mundi 13.

<sup>c</sup> See QG iii. 38, and cf. Joh. Lydus, p. 32 (cited by Staehle, p. 33).

<sup>d</sup> ἐτύμως.

<sup>e</sup> Cf. Joh. Lydus, loc. cit. ὅθεν καὶ ἀρχαῖοι γάμον καὶ ἀρμονίαν αὐτὸν ἐκάλεσαν.

<sup>f</sup> εἶδος in the sense of a numeral base to be raised to a certain power.

<sup>g</sup> παράδειγμα ἀσωμάτου καὶ νοεράς καὶ ἀοράτου καὶ <γε> σωματικῆς οὐσίας.

<sup>h</sup> τετράγωνον ἐπίπεδον (οἱ ἐπιφάνειαν).

<sup>i</sup> κυβικὸν στερέωμα.

<sup>j</sup> τῇ ἀειπαρθένῳ ἑβδομάδι συγγενής. Cf., e.g., De Vita Mosis ii. 210.

<sup>k</sup> ἡ δύναμις, here = exponential power.

<sup>l</sup> In order to get the total 64 we must add the number 1 twice.

GENESIS, BOOK III

has other further powers, about which we have spoken elsewhere.<sup>a</sup> But we must give the reasons which are suitable to, and in harmony with, the present inquiry, and depend upon the facts laid down as fundamental.

However, this is to be said first. That nation to which was given the command to circumcise (children) on the eighth (day) is called "Israel" in Chaldaean, and in Armenian<sup>b</sup> (this means) "seeing God."<sup>c</sup> It wishes to be a part both of naturally righteous ones<sup>d</sup> and of those who are<sup>e</sup> (so) by choice.<sup>f</sup> By the principle of creation<sup>g</sup> (this occurs) through the first hebdomad,<sup>h</sup> which, coming immediately after the creation, the Begetter and Creator clearly showed to be the festival of the creation of the world,<sup>i</sup> for He completed this on the sixth (day). But as to that which is by choice,<sup>j</sup> (it occurs) through the ogdoad, which is the beginning of the second hebdomad. Just as eight is (the sum of) seven and one, so the adorned nation<sup>k</sup> is always a nation, and it receives this lot in addition, being chosen by nature and in accordance with the will and pleasure<sup>l</sup> of the Father. In the second place, the number eight everywhere indicates equality, showing all dimensions equal, as has been said, (namely) length,

<sup>a</sup> See note i on p. 247.

<sup>b</sup> Here, as elsewhere, the Arm. translator substitutes "Armenian" for "Greek."

<sup>c</sup> This etymology occurs a good many times throughout Philo's writings.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. lit. = μέρος ἔχειν τῶν φυσικῶν (or γνησίων) δικαίων; the context seems to show that "righteous" refers to persons rather than things.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "is."

<sup>f</sup> καθ' αἴρεσιν.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ τὸν τῆς γενέσεως λόγον.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher inadvertently renders, "per primum quidem sextum."

<sup>i</sup> τὴν ἑορτὴν τὴν τῆς τοῦ κόσμου γενέσεως, cf. De Opif. Mundi 89 ἑορτὴ . . . τοῦ παντός . . . καὶ τοῦ κόσμου γενέθλιον.

<sup>j</sup> See note f above.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ κεκοσμημένον γένος.

<sup>l</sup> κατὰ βούλησιν καὶ γνώμην.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

breadth and depth. Equality produces righteousness,<sup>a</sup> and by this (Scripture) first proves that the god-loving<sup>b</sup> nation is adorned by equality and righteousness, and is brought into possession.<sup>c</sup> In the third place, not only is the (number eight) a measure<sup>d</sup> of complete equality in all dimensions, but also the first, since it is the first cube.<sup>e</sup> For the number eight, which indicates equality, is assigned to the second, but not the first, place in the order of rank.<sup>f</sup> Thus He symbolically indicates<sup>g</sup> that He has adapted<sup>h</sup> this first nation naturally<sup>i</sup> to the highest and utmost equality and righteousness. And it is the foremost of the human race, not through creation<sup>j</sup> or in time, but by the prerogative of virtue,<sup>k</sup> the righteous and equal being cognate<sup>l</sup> and united as if one part.<sup>m</sup> In the fourth place, since there are four elements, earth, water, air and a form of fire,<sup>n</sup> fire has been assigned the homonym of "pyramid,"<sup>o</sup> while air is eight-sided, and water is twenty-sided,<sup>p</sup> and the earth is a cube. It was therefore thought necessary that the earth, which was destined to be the (home) of the worthy and virtuous human race, should have as its share

<sup>a</sup> δικαιοσύνην.

<sup>b</sup> φιλόθεον or "divinely-favoured"—θεοφιλές.

<sup>c</sup> κατάσχεσι or "inheritance"—κληρονομίαν.

<sup>d</sup> As Aucher notes, Arm. օր (= ἡμέρα) must be a transcription of Greek ὄρος.

<sup>e</sup> This fact has been mentioned twice before in the present section.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. eight begins a new series after seven.

<sup>g</sup> συμβολικῶς αἰνίττεται.

<sup>h</sup> ἐφῆρμοσε.

<sup>i</sup> Or "genuinely."

<sup>j</sup> Or "generation"—γενέσεως.

<sup>k</sup> προτιμήσει τῆς ἀρετῆς.

<sup>l</sup> συμφυῆ.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher renders differently, "ac si connaturalis pars sit unita iustitia cum paritate."

<sup>n</sup> εἶδος τοῦ πυρός.

<sup>o</sup> Philo plays on the resemblance between πυραμῖς and πῦρ or πυροειδές.

<sup>p</sup> ὀκτάεδρον . . . εἰκοσάεδρον.

GENESIS, BOOK III

a cubic number, in accordance with which the whole earth was formed equally,<sup>a</sup> and that it should share in the parts of generation. For the nature <sup>b</sup> of the earth is very productive and fertile, and it brings forth various and distinct species of all animals and plants.

50. (Gen. xvii. 12) Why does one circumcise (both) the home-born and the purchased <sup>c</sup> (child) ?

The literal meaning <sup>d</sup> is clear, for it is right that servants imitate their masters for the sake of the necessary offices of life and service. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> the home-born characters <sup>f</sup> are those which are moved by nature, while the purchased ones are those who are able to improve through reason <sup>g</sup> and teaching. There is need for both of these to be purified and trimmed <sup>h</sup> like plants, both those which are natural and genuine, and those which are able to bear fruit constantly <sup>i</sup>; for well-grown (plants) produce many superfluous (fruits) because of their fertility, which it is useful to cut off. But those who are taught by teachers <sup>j</sup> shave off <sup>k</sup> their ignorance.

51. (Gen. xvii. 13) What is the meaning of the words, "And my covenant shall be upon your flesh" <sup>l</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> ἴσως, or "in common"—κοινῶς, or "at the same time"—ὁμοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ φύσις.

<sup>c</sup> οἰκογενῆ καὶ ἀργυρώνητον, as in LXX.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> τρόποι οἱ ἡθῆ.

<sup>g</sup> διὰ λόγου.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "cut."

<sup>i</sup> ἐν διαμονῇ vel sim. Aucher renders somewhat differently, "utraque istarum opus habet ut plantarum more purgetur et putetur, ad propriae ac fructiferae partis constantiam."

<sup>j</sup> ὑπὸ διδασκάλων.

<sup>k</sup> So lit. ; Arm. = ἀποξυροῦσι.

<sup>l</sup> LXX καὶ ἔσται ἡ διαθήκη μου ἐπὶ (Heb. "in") τῆς σαρκὸς ὑμῶν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

He wishes (to point out) that not only does the virtuous man <sup>a</sup> profit (thereby) but that together with the soul the divine word <sup>b</sup> is appointed over the body also, to be, as it were, its physician, to whom it is a matter of concern to circumcise the excessive and harmful impulses <sup>c</sup> of sight, hearing, taste, smell and touch <sup>d</sup> and of the organ of speech and of reproduction and of the whole body, to which taking pleasure in desire (is) to feel pain.<sup>e</sup>

*52. (Gen. xvii. 14) Why does He prescribe a sentence of death for the infant, saying, "The uncircumcised male who shall not circumcise the flesh of his uncircumcision on the eighth day, that soul shall be destroyed from its kind" <sup>f</sup>?

The law does not declare (anyone) guilty of any involuntary (crime) since it pardons even him who commits involuntary homicide,<sup>g</sup> specifying the cities to which he may flee to find safety. For he becomes sanctified and immune after taking refuge there, and no one has authority to take him away from there and bring him before a court of judgment. But if the child is not circumcised on the eighth day after birth, what sin has he committed that he should be judged deserving of suffering death? Accord-

<sup>a</sup> τὸν σπουδαῖον.

<sup>b</sup> Or "Logos"—τὸν θεῖον λόγον.

<sup>c</sup> ὀρμάς.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "of things seen, heard, etc."

<sup>e</sup> The last clause has no verb in Arm.; Aucher renders freely, "quo peragitur tum delectari in cupiditatibus, tum dolore affici," adding in a footnote, "vel sine puncto sic: cui vel ipsum delectari in cupiditatibus dolore affici est."

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. differs slightly from LXX and Heb., which have "who shall not be circumcised." Moreover, the words "on the eighth day" are not found in the Heb.

<sup>g</sup> So too the Greek fragments in the Catenae and Procopius, οὐδὲν τῶν ἀκουσίων ἐνοχον ἀποφαίνει ὁ νόμος ὅποτε καὶ τῷ φόνον ἀκούσιον δράσαντι συγγινώσκει (the Greek fragments omit the references to cities of refuge, and resume with the sentence beginning, "But if the child").

GENESIS, BOOK III

ingly, some say that the law of interpretation <sup>a</sup> has in view the parents, for it <sup>b</sup> believes that they show contempt for the commandment of the law. Others, however, say that it has imposed a very excessive penalty on infants, it seems, and that those adults who disregard and violate the law are deserving of punishment without regret or remission. <sup>c</sup> This is the literal meaning. <sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>e</sup> that which is excessively male in us is the mind. <sup>f</sup> This He commands to be circumcised in the ogdoad <sup>g</sup> for the reasons which I gave earlier <sup>h</sup>; and (He mentions) no other part but the flesh of the foreskin, symbolizing those sense-pleasures and impulses <sup>i</sup> which afterwards come to the body. Wherefore He adds a principle of law <sup>j</sup> in His statement. For the mind which is not circumcised and purified and sanctified of the body and the passions which come through the body will be corrupted <sup>k</sup> and cannot be saved. <sup>l</sup> And since the argument <sup>m</sup> does not concern man but the mind which has health, <sup>n</sup> He adds, "that soul shall be destroyed" <sup>o</sup>—not the human body or man but the soul <sup>p</sup> and the mind. And from what? "From its

<sup>a</sup> One may also accept Aucher's rendering, "formam edicti."

<sup>b</sup> Apparently the law or Scripture is meant.

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. agrees closely with the Greek frag. printed by Harris from the Catenae, less closely with the recension of Procopius; for these texts see Appendix A.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> This is Philo's allegorical variation of the scriptural "eighth day."

<sup>h</sup> In § 49.

<sup>i</sup> ἡδονὰς καὶ ὀρμάς.

<sup>j</sup> Or, as Aucher renders, "rationem legitimam."

<sup>k</sup> Or "be destroyed."

<sup>l</sup> σώζεσθαι.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>n</sup> ὑγίειαν or ὁλοκληρίαν.

<sup>o</sup> ἐξολεθρευθήσεται in LXX.

<sup>p</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ (though sometimes Arm. ogi = πνεῦμα).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

kind,"<sup>a</sup> He says. For the whole genus is incorruptible ; thus from incorruption the sinner is brought to corruption.

53. (Gen. xvii. 15) Why does He say, " Sara thy wife shall not be called Sara, but Sarra shall be her name"<sup>b</sup> ?

Once more some of the stupid people may laugh<sup>c</sup> at the addition of one letter, rho,<sup>d</sup> and ridicule and make fun of it because they are unwilling to apply themselves to the inward facts of things and follow after truth. For that which seems to be the addition of one letter produces all harmony.<sup>e</sup> In place of the small (it gives) the great, and in place of the particular, the general,<sup>f</sup> and in place of the mortal, the immortal. For through the one rho she is called Sara, which in translation means " my rule,"<sup>g</sup> while with two rhos it means " ruler."<sup>h</sup> In what way these are individually distinguished from each other must be investigated. My prudence and temperance and justice and fortitude<sup>i</sup> rule over me only, and are mortal. When I die, they die. But prudence itself is a ruler, and so is justice itself, and each of the other virtues ; it is not (merely) sovereign over me but is itself a ruler and queen, an immortal rule and sovereignty. Do you see the greatness of the gift ? He has converted the part into the whole, and the species into the genus,<sup>j</sup> and the corruptible into

<sup>a</sup> γένος in LXX (Heb. " people ").

<sup>b</sup> Philo follows the LXX forms of the Heb. names Sarai and Sarah ; for parallels see De Congressu 2, De Mut. Nom. 61 et al.

<sup>c</sup> See above, § 43 on those who ridicule the change of Abraham's name.

<sup>d</sup> ἐνὸς στοιχείου ρ' (the last word is rendered by its numerical equivalent, " hundred," in Arm.).

<sup>e</sup> πᾶσαν ἁρμονίαν.

<sup>f</sup> ἀντὶ τοῦ ἐπὶ μέρους τὸ καθολικόν.

<sup>g</sup> ἀρχή μου.

<sup>h</sup> ἄρχουσα.

<sup>i</sup> φρόνησις καὶ σωφροσύνη καὶ δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἀνδρεία ; cf. De Congressu 2 et al.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. misprints ser (γνήσιος) for ser (γένος) ; Aucher renders correctly.

GENESIS, BOOK III

the incorruptible. And all these are granted in advance for the sake of the future birth of a more perfect happiness and joy, of which the name is Isaac.<sup>a</sup>

54. (Gen. xvii. 16) Why does He say, " I will give thee from her children,<sup>b</sup> and I will bless him and he shall be for peoples, and the kings of the nations shall come from him " <sup>c</sup> ?

It is not in place to inquire why He used the plural " children " in speaking of their only beloved son, for the allusion is to his descendants, from whom (were to come) peoples and kings. This is the literal meaning.<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> when the soul has (only) that virtue which is particular,<sup>f</sup> slight and mortal, it is still barren. But when once it receives a portion of the divine and incorruptible (virtue), it begins to conceive and bear a variety of peoples and of all other holy things. For each of the immortal virtues has very many voluntary laws,<sup>g</sup> which bear the likenesses of peoples and kings. For virtues and the generations of virtues are kingly affairs, being taught beforehand <sup>h</sup> by nature what is sovereign and unservile.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Philo etymologizes the name Isaac as γένεως and χαρά in several passages, e.g. Leg. All. iii. 218.

<sup>b</sup> LXX, Heb. and Arm. O.T. all have " son " or " child." In the parallel, De Mut. Nom. 130-153, Philo not only follows the LXX in reading τέκνον but emphasizes the singular number of the noun.

<sup>c</sup> It is here assumed that the pronouns are masculine, as in the LXX rather than feminine as in the Heb. (referring to Sarah). There is no distinction of gender in Armenian. But Philo follows the Heb. against the LXX in De Mut. Nom. 148-151.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> Or " partial."

<sup>g</sup> ἔκουσίους νόμους.

<sup>h</sup> προδιδασκόμεναι.

<sup>i</sup> ἀδούλωτον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

55. (Gen. xvii. 17) Why did Abraham fall upon his face and laugh ?

Two things are shown by his falling upon his face.<sup>a</sup> One is his prostration<sup>b</sup> because of an excess of divine ecstasy.<sup>c</sup> And the other is his confession,<sup>d</sup> which is consonant with, and equal to, what has been said. For his mind acknowledged that God stands alone. But those things which<sup>e</sup> are under the generation of birth all fall into periodical change. And they fall with respect to that<sup>f</sup> part through which they are wont to be raised up and be erect, (namely) with respect to the sovereign<sup>g</sup> face. Rightly did he laugh in his joy over the promise, being filled with great hope and in the expectation that it would be fulfilled, and because he had clearly received a vision,<sup>h</sup> through which he knew more certainly Him who always stands firm, and him who<sup>i</sup> naturally bends and falls.

56. (Gen. xvii. 17) Why is he incredulous,<sup>j</sup> as it were, in his confession,<sup>k</sup> for says (Scripture), "He said in his mind,<sup>l</sup> shall a son be born to a centenarian, and shall Sarah<sup>m</sup> bear at ninety years ?"

<sup>a</sup> For parallels in Philo see Leg. All. iii. 217 and De Mut. Nom. 154 ff.

<sup>b</sup> προσκύνησις.

<sup>c</sup> θείας ἐκστάσεως.

<sup>d</sup> ὁμολογία (in the biblical sense).

<sup>e</sup> The sing. verb in Arm. indicates here that the nominal subject was neuter plural, not masculine plural, as Aucher renders.

<sup>f</sup> The context requires emendation of the nom. pl. demons. pron. sok'a to gen. sing. sora. The Arm. letters k' and r are very similar.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "first."

<sup>h</sup> ἐπιφάνειαν.

<sup>i</sup> Or "that which."

<sup>j</sup> ἀπιστεῖ.

<sup>k</sup> ὁμολογία.

<sup>l</sup> LXX ἐν τῇ διανοίᾳ αὐτοῦ.

<sup>m</sup> LXX Sarra.

GENESIS, BOOK III

Not ineptly or casually <sup>a</sup> are added the words, "He said in his mind."<sup>b</sup> For unworthy words spoken by tongue and mouth fall under transgressions and punishment. But those which are in the mind are not at all guilty.<sup>c</sup> For involuntarily does the mind show arrogance<sup>d</sup> when various desires come upon it from various directions, and there are times when it resists these and disputes with them resentfully, and seeks to avoid their appearances. Perhaps too he is not in a state of doubt<sup>e</sup> but being struck with amazement at the excessiveness of the gift, says, "Behold, our body has passed (its prime) and has gone beyond the age for begetting. But to God all things are possible, even to change old age into youth, and to bring one who has no seed or fruit into the begetting and fruitfulness." And so, if a centenarian and (a woman) of ninety years produce children, the element of ordinary events is removed,<sup>f</sup> and only the divine power and grace clearly appear.

But we must (now) show what virtues<sup>g</sup> the number one hundred has.<sup>h</sup> In the first place, the hundred is a power of the decad. In the second place, the myriad is (a power) of this itself. And the myriad is brother to unity, for just as one times one is one, so ten thousand times one is ten thousand. In the third place, all the parts of the number one hundred are well ordered.<sup>i</sup> In the fourth place, it consists of thirty and of six and of sixty and of four, which is a cube and a square<sup>j</sup> at the same time. In the fifth place, it consists of these several odd numbers, 1, 3, <sup>a</sup> παρέργως.

<sup>b</sup> See the parallel discussion in De Mut. Nom. 177-200.

<sup>c</sup> ἔνοχα.      <sup>d</sup> ἀλαζονείαν.      <sup>e</sup> οὐκ ἐνδοιάζει.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. we are dealing here with something miraculous.

<sup>g</sup> δυνάμεις.

<sup>h</sup> In the parallel, De Mut. Nom. 188-192, Philo cites a number of biblical passages involving the number 100, but does not treat them in the fashion of Pythagorean number mysticism as here.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. parkešt = σώφρων, κόσμος, etc.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher inadvertently renders, "triangulum."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

5, 7, 9, 11, 13, 15, 17, 19, making 100.<sup>a</sup> In the sixth place, it consists of four (numbers), one and its double, and four and its double, 1, 2, 4, 8, making 15, and of the four numbers,<sup>b</sup> 1, 4, 16, 64, making 85. Now there is a twofold proportion<sup>c</sup> in all things, containing that of four and that of five,<sup>d</sup> but four is twice in all things. In the seventh place, it consists of several fours, each of which has one added (namely), 1, 2, 3, 4, making 10, and of four triangular numbers,<sup>e</sup> 1, 3, 6, 10, making 20, and of four quadrangular numbers, 1, 4, 9, 16, making 30, and of four pentagonal numbers, 1, 5, 12, 22, making 40, and (all) these together make 100. In the eighth place, the number one hundred is completed by the cubes of the four separate numbers beginning with one, for given the numbers from one on, (namely) 1, 2, 3, 4, their cubes, 1, 8, 27, 64, make 100. In the ninth place, it is divided into forty and sixty, both of which are most natural (numbers).<sup>f</sup> And in respect of the several decads in the pentagonal figure up to the number ten thousand, the number one hundred holds the middle place. For the number one hundred is the middle one of (the series) one, ten, a hundred, a thousand and ten thousand.

But it is proper not to pass over in silence the number ninety in respect of its visible<sup>g</sup> (elements). It seems to me that the number ninety takes second place after the hundred, in so far as a tenth part (of the latter) is taken away, which is the decad. For in the Law I find two tenths<sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> These figures are expressed as numeral letters in the Arm. text here and below; other numbers are indicated by name.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher correctly amplifies in rendering, "ex quatuor istis multiplicatis," since the second set of four is that of the squares of the first four.

<sup>c</sup> Or "principle"—λόγος.

<sup>d</sup> "Five" is an error for "two," as Staehle notes, p. 71.

<sup>e</sup> See QG i. 83.

<sup>f</sup> φυσικώτατοι ἀριθμοί.

<sup>g</sup> Or "conspicuous"; Aucher "quoad notas visibles."

<sup>h</sup> i.e. tithes, the first tithe going to the Levite and the tenth of this Levitical tithe going to the priest ("peace-offering of tithe").

GENESIS, BOOK III

of first fruits distinguished, one of the whole (produce) and one of the remainder. And when the tenth is taken from the produce of grain or wine or oil, another tenth is taken from the remainder.<sup>a</sup> Now of these two (numbers) the initial and first one is honoured with seniority, and the one that comes after with second place. For the hundred contains the two (kinds of) first fruits of the years of the wise man, by which he is consecrated, (namely) the first and second (offerings), while the number ninety (contains) the second first-fruits of the years of feminine gender, the younger and lesser remainder of the first and greatest among the sacred numbers. The former, therefore, is called "a sown aroura"<sup>b</sup> in the sacred Law, while the latter has a general nature,<sup>c</sup> for the number ninety is generative,<sup>d</sup> wherefore also women are productive in the ninth month. But the decad is sacred and perfect. And when these<sup>e</sup> are multiplied there is formed the sacred and generative power<sup>f</sup> of ninety, which gets its fruitful generation from nine, and its sacredness from the decad.

57. (Gen. xvii. 18) Why does Abraham say to God, "Let this Ishmael<sup>g</sup> live before Thee"?

<sup>a</sup> Cf. De Mut. Nom. 191.

<sup>b</sup> The parallel, De Mut. Nom. 190, enables us to correct the unintelligible Arm. text. Arm. tesouac renders θεωρία but this is a corruption of ἄρουρα; ἄνταναῖα is the ptc. of the verb which renders σπερματίζω, not of its homonym which renders οἰκειοῦσθαι. As Colson notes in the passage from De Mut. Nom. (L.C.I., Philo, vol. v. p. 239), "Philo interprets ἄρουρα in the technical sense of a piece of land of 100 square cubits."

<sup>c</sup> καθολικὴν φύσιν.

<sup>d</sup> γόνιμος.

<sup>e</sup> The numbers 9 and 10 (9 being unobtrusively substituted for 90).

<sup>f</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>g</sup> So LXX; Heb. has no demonstr. pron. before "Ishmael." Philo comments at length on this verse in De Mut. Nom. 201-251.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

First of all, (he says), "We<sup>a</sup> do not despair, O Lord, of a better generation, but I have faith in Thy promises. However, it is enough of a gift for me that this one should live who is for the time being a living son, even though he is not a son by genuine descent, being born of a concubine." In the second place, what he now seeks is an additional good, for it is not merely life that he desires for his son but a life "before God,"<sup>b</sup> than which nothing is worthy to be considered more perfect, (a life) before God (being) one of wholeness and salvation,<sup>c</sup> which is on a par with immortality.<sup>d</sup> In the third place, he symbolically<sup>e</sup> indicates that not (only) should the heard laws of God be committed to hearing,<sup>f</sup> but they should (also) pass into the inner (life) and mould and form its most sovereign part,<sup>g</sup> for that (alone) is life in the sight of God whose words are worthy to become deeds.<sup>h</sup>

*58. (Gen. xvii. 19) Why is the divine oracle<sup>i</sup> an agreement,<sup>j</sup> for He says to Abraham, "Yes, behold,<sup>k</sup> Sarah thy wife shall bear thee a son" ?

What is indicated is somewhat as follows. "This agreement,<sup>l</sup>" He says, "is something for Me Myself to

<sup>a</sup> On the 1st pl. for the expected 1st sing. see Colson's note on De Mut. Nom. 216 (vol. v. p. 255).

<sup>b</sup> ἐνώπιον τοῦ θεοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> ὑγιείας καὶ σωτηρίας.

<sup>d</sup> ἰσότημος τῇ ἀθανασίᾳ.

<sup>e</sup> ἐν ὑπονοίαις. Aucher's rendering, "per conjecturam," is not quite right.

<sup>f</sup> In De Mut. Nom. 202 et al. Philo alludes to the interpretation of the name Ishmael as "hearing God."

<sup>g</sup> τυποῦν καὶ μορφοῦν τὸ ἡγεμονικώτατον μέρος.

<sup>h</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain; Aucher renders, "vita enim est ista divino conspectui condigna verbum effectum esse."
<sup>i</sup> ὁ θεῖος χρησμός.

<sup>j</sup> Or "assent"—συγχώρησις or ἐπίνευσις.

<sup>k</sup> So LXX, ναί, ἰδοῦ; Heb. 'abāl usu. = "but." Philo comments on the expression in De Mut. Nom. 253-254.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. has two words, both rendering ὁμολογία, which is also used in the Greek frag.

GENESIS, BOOK III

keep <sup>a</sup> being clearly without denial. <sup>b</sup> And thy faith <sup>c</sup> is not ambiguous but is unhesitating, and partakes of modesty and reverence. <sup>d</sup> Wherefore that which thou didst formerly receive as destined to come about because of thy faith in Me, shall wholly <sup>e</sup> be." For this is shown by the "Yes."

59. (Gen. xvii. 20) Why does He say, "But concerning Ishmael, behold I will hear thee, and I will bless <sup>f</sup> him. Twelve nations he shall beget."

"Both the first and the second good things," He says, "I grant to thee, both that which comes by nature and that which comes by teaching <sup>g</sup>; by nature <sup>h</sup> is that which comes through the genuine <sup>i</sup> Isaac, and by teaching is that which comes through the not-genuine Ishmael, for hearing <sup>j</sup> when compared with seeing is like the not-genuine beside the genuine, and that which comes by teaching does not have the same standing <sup>k</sup> as that which comes by nature. And "he shall beget twelve nations" (means) the train of

<sup>a</sup> Text obscure; Aucher renders, "confessio ac homologiae ista, ait, mea parte admissio est voti." The Greek frag. reads ἡ ὁμολογία, φησίν, ἡ ἐμὴ κατάφασις ἐστίν.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. ouraxout' enē "joy" is clearly a scribal error for ouraxout' enē = ἀρνήσεως, which is also found in the Greek frag. Philo apparently means that the "Yes" of Scripture indicates God's unhesitating willingness to reward Abraham's unhesitating faith.

<sup>c</sup> πίστις.

<sup>d</sup> αἰδοῦς καὶ ἐντροπῆς μετέχουσα, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>e</sup> Or "absolutely"—πάντως, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>f</sup> LXX and Heb. "I have heard thee and I have blessed."

<sup>g</sup> In the parallel, De Mut. Nom. 255-264, Philo calls Ishmael ἔγγονον διδασκόν, and Isaac αὐτομαθής.

<sup>h</sup> φύσει.

<sup>i</sup> γνήσιον. In De Mut. Nom. 261 he is called γενναῖον.

<sup>j</sup> Here again, as in QG iii. 57, Philo plays on the etymology of the name Ishmael, "hearing God."

<sup>k</sup> λόγον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

school studies,<sup>a</sup> for the number twelve is a cyclical number in the cycle of days and years.<sup>b</sup>

60. (Gen. xvii. 21) Why does He say, "And My covenant I will establish with Isaac whom Sarah shall bear<sup>c</sup> at this time<sup>d</sup> in the other year"<sup>e</sup>?

Just as in human testaments<sup>f</sup> some persons are inscribed as heirs, and some are counted worthy of (receiving) gifts, which they receive from the heirs, so also in the divine testament he is inscribed as heir who is by nature a good disciple<sup>g</sup> of God, adorned with perfect virtues.<sup>h</sup> But he who is introduced<sup>i</sup> through hearing<sup>j</sup> and is subjected to the law of wisdom<sup>k</sup> and participates in the discipline of school studies<sup>l</sup> is not an heir but receives gifts which are bestowed by grace.<sup>m</sup> Most wisely,<sup>n</sup> moreover, is it said that "in the other year" she will bear Isaac, for that birth is not one of the life of the time<sup>o</sup> which now exists but of another great, holy, sacred and

<sup>a</sup> τὸν χορὸν τῶν ἐγκυκλίων. In De Mut. Nom. 263 they are called τὸν χορὸν τῶν σοφιστικῶν προπαιδευμάτων.

<sup>b</sup> Since the year consists of 12 months, and day and night of 12 hours each, as Philo explains in De Fuga 184.

<sup>c</sup> LXX and Heb. add "to thee."

<sup>d</sup> LXX καιρὸν, Heb. mô'ed "set time."

<sup>e</sup> So LXX and Heb., i.e. "next year." The verse is differently allegorized in De Mut. Nom. 264-269, where the covenant is not mentioned, perhaps because Philo planned to include it in his projected treatise On Covenants, which has not come down to us.

<sup>f</sup> διαθήκαις.

<sup>g</sup> μαθητής.

<sup>h</sup> τελείαις ἀρεταῖς.

<sup>i</sup> εἰσάγεται.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. Ishmael. See QG iii. 59.

<sup>k</sup> ὑποτάσσεται τῷ τῆς σοφίας νόμῳ.

<sup>l</sup> τῆς τῶν ἐγκυκλίων παιδείας.

<sup>m</sup> Arm. lit. = χαριστήρια (for χάριτας?) καὶ δωρεάς.

<sup>n</sup> πανσόφως.

<sup>o</sup> Text slightly emended, following Aucher.

GENESIS, BOOK III

divine one,<sup>a</sup> which has an abundant fullness <sup>b</sup> and is not like that of the gentiles.<sup>c</sup>

*61. (Gen. xvii. 24-25) Why does (Scripture) say that Abraham was ninety-nine years old when he was circumcised, and Ishmael, his son, thirteen years old ?

The number of ninety-nine years is set beside <sup>d</sup> the number one hundred. And in accordance with this number it is destined to be the seed and progeny of a more perfect generation, which is to appear in the hundred.<sup>e</sup> But the number thirteen is composed of the first two squares, of four and nine, of even and odd ; the even one has sides which are a double material form,<sup>f</sup> and the odd one has a practical form.<sup>g</sup> Through all these comes the triad,<sup>h</sup> and this is the greatest <sup>i</sup> and most perfect of festival offerings, which the pillars <sup>j</sup> of the divine scriptures contain. This is one (explanation). But it is proper to mention

<sup>a</sup> Prob. the noun " life " is understood.

<sup>b</sup> πλησμονήν or possibly πλήρωμα.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν ἐθνῶν. Philo does not often use ἔθνη in the biblical sense of " gentiles."

<sup>d</sup> In QG iii. 39 (on Gen. xvii. 1) and in De Mut. Nom. 1, Philo speaks of 99 as being " neighbour " (γείτων) to 100.

<sup>e</sup> An allusion to the birth of Isaac in Abraham's 100th year.

<sup>f</sup> διπλοῦν ὑλικὸν εἶδος.

<sup>g</sup> πρακτικὸν (?) εἶδος : Aucher " formam operativam." Possibly Philo here refers to the nine months of conception, as above in QG iii. 56 ; if so, we might render " productive " (ποιητικόν) rather than " practical."

<sup>h</sup> Apparently Philo means the 3 in 13.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. " greatness."

<sup>j</sup> στήλαι : Aucher " exarationes." Probably Philo means the tablets of the Law, as elsewhere, or the Law generally. The " festival offerings " are presumably those of Passover, Pentecost and Tabernacles, as the Arm. glossator suggests. It is curious, however, that in De Somniis i. 242 (on the pillar at Beth-el, Gen. xxxi. 13), Philo says that a pillar is a symbol of three things, " of standing, of dedication and of inscription."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

another as well, (namely) that the age of thirteen years is a neighbour and associate of fourteen <sup>a</sup> years, when <sup>b</sup> the generative movements are brought to their seed.<sup>c</sup> And so, lest alien seed <sup>d</sup> be sown, He takes care that the first generation shall be preserved intact,<sup>e</sup> representing the generative organ by the symbol of generation.<sup>f</sup>

In the third place He instructs him who is about to undertake marriage by all means to circumcise his sense-pleasures <sup>g</sup> and amorous desires, rebuking those who are lascivious and lustful,<sup>h</sup> in order that they may restrain their excessive embraces,<sup>i</sup> which usually come about not for the sake of begetting children but for the sake of unrestrained pleasure.

62. (Gen. xvii. 27) Why does Abraham circumcise those of foreign birth ? <sup>j</sup>

The wise man is helpful and at the same time philanthropic.<sup>k</sup> He saves and calls to himself not only his kinsmen <sup>l</sup> and those of like opinions <sup>m</sup> but also those of foreign birth and of different opinions,<sup>n</sup> giving them of his own goods with patience and ascetic continence,<sup>o</sup> for these are the firm foundations <sup>p</sup> to which all virtue <sup>q</sup> hastens and finds rest.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "twice seven."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "behold !"

<sup>c</sup> The syntax is obscure ; Aucher renders, "quo seminis motus ad generationem fertur."

<sup>d</sup> ἀλλογενές σπέρμα.

<sup>e</sup> ὀλόκληρον.

<sup>f</sup> συμβόλω τοῦ γένους.

<sup>g</sup> ἡδονάς.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "woman-loving."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "minglings."

<sup>j</sup> τοὺς ἀλλογενεῖς.

<sup>k</sup> φιλόανθρωπος.

<sup>l</sup> Or "countrymen."

<sup>m</sup> Text slightly emended by Aucher.

<sup>n</sup> ἕτεροδόξους.

<sup>o</sup> ὑπομονῇ καὶ ἀσκήσει ἐγκρατείας vel sim.

<sup>p</sup> θεμέλια.

<sup>q</sup> ἀρετή.

BOOK IV <sup>a</sup>

1. (Gen. xviii. 1-2) Why does (Scripture) say, "And the Lord God <sup>b</sup> appeared to Abraham <sup>c</sup> at the oak of Mambre,<sup>d</sup> when he was sitting in the heat of day <sup>e</sup> at the entrance of his tent; and he lifted up his eyes"<sup>f</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>g</sup> seems to me quite clear. But it is only necessary to explain the tree allegorically through the Chaldaean <sup>h</sup> speech. According to Heraclitus,<sup>i</sup> our nature [a tree] likes to hide itself.<sup>j</sup> Now, in the first place, it is proper to recognize that the interpretation of Mambre is "from sight,"<sup>k</sup> and this means something like the following. Just as being wise comes from wisdom,<sup>l</sup> and being prudent comes from prudence,<sup>m</sup> and having various dispositions comes from these (various dispositions), so <sup>a</sup> Book IV, which is about as long as the combined first three books of the Quaestiones in Genesin, originally comprised Books IV, V and VI, as some ancient mss. indicate. See the Introduction.

<sup>b</sup> Heb. "YHWH"; LXX and Arm. O.T. "God."

<sup>c</sup> LXX and Heb. "to him."

<sup>d</sup> Heb. "Mamre."

<sup>e</sup> So Heb.; LXX and Arm. O.T. "at midday."

<sup>f</sup> So Heb. and Arm. O.T.; LXX "and looking up with his eyes."

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. Hebrew.

<sup>i</sup> Cf. Diels-Kranz, Fragmenta der Vorsokratiker, B 123 [10] ἡ φύσις κρύπτεσθαι φιλεῖ (from Porphyry). The Arm. car "tree" is out of place here.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. here uses two verbs, both of which render κρύπτεσθαι.

<sup>k</sup> ἀπὸ δράσεως (or ὄρωμένων), as if from Heb. mim-mar'eh. The same etymology is given in De Migratione 165.

<sup>l</sup> σοφίας.

<sup>m</sup> σωφροσύνης.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

in the case of the senses<sup>a</sup> the act of touching comes from touch, and tasting from taste, and hearing from the auditory sense, and seeing necessarily comes from sight. This is what enriches the spiritual,<sup>b</sup> clear-sighted and excellent mind, which in Chaldaean is called Mambre, and in Armenian,<sup>c</sup> "from sight" by enabling it to see better<sup>d</sup> and to be sharp-sighted<sup>e</sup> and unsleeping, seeing not only the created world,<sup>f</sup> the forms<sup>g</sup> of which it is the part of philosophy to see, but its Father and Creator, the uncreated God.<sup>h</sup> For of what use would it be for Him to come and not be seen? And since He is incomprehensible,<sup>i</sup> not only to the human race but also to all the purest parts of heaven, He caused to shine forth, as it were, a certain radiance, which we most properly call "form,"<sup>j</sup> and caused this radiance of light to shine around the whole soul, and filled it with an incorporeal and more than heavenly light. And being guided<sup>k</sup> by this, the mind<sup>l</sup> is brought by<sup>m</sup> form to the archetype.<sup>n</sup> For what is said<sup>o</sup> is better fitted to and harmonized with sight than with all the organs,<sup>p</sup> since it is through sight that a vision is apprehended.<sup>q</sup> And

<sup>a</sup> ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι.

<sup>b</sup> πνευματικόν.

<sup>c</sup> Sic! The original, of course, had "in Greek" or "in our language."

<sup>d</sup> The syntax is not altogether clear. Aucher renders, "Hoc est, quod spirituali perspicacique mente sana, puta Mambre, sive visu ditat animum, praestans ei ut melius videat."

<sup>e</sup> ὀξύδερκῆς.

<sup>f</sup> τὸν γενητὸν κόσμον.

<sup>g</sup> τὰ εἶδη (ὁρ τὰς μορφάς).

<sup>h</sup> τὸν ἀγένητον θεόν.

<sup>i</sup> ἀκατάληπτος, here rendered by two Arm. words.

<sup>j</sup> εἶδος (ὁρ μορφήν).

<sup>k</sup> ἡγούμενος.

<sup>l</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>m</sup> Or "through."

<sup>n</sup> πρὸς τὸ ἀρχέτυπον.

<sup>o</sup> i.e. in Scripture, about God's appearing to Abraham.

<sup>p</sup> i.e. the other organs of sense. Aucher's rendering seems to me to miss the point, "siquidem visu potius quam cunctis instrumentis sensus coaptavit symphoniam dictam."

<sup>q</sup> νοεῖται.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

in the second place, since the extremes<sup>a</sup> are wonderful—both He who appeared, for He is God, and he to whom He appeared, for he it was who saw, (Scripture) has very symbolically<sup>b</sup> placed between them both an oak-tree, which is most powerful and sovereign. And inasmuch as it is a tree that has been domesticated from a rather wild one,<sup>c</sup> it indicates<sup>d</sup> the wise man who is provided with eyes.<sup>e</sup> And beginning to see the truly existent One,<sup>f</sup> the excellent and powerful and sovereign ruler of all things, he sees a wild (tree) unrestrainedly possessed by density,<sup>g</sup> and the limit of unrestraint which contends, and the radiance which resists until it is reconciled with seeing.<sup>h</sup> For the trunk of the tree<sup>i</sup> is wild, but its fruit is the domesticated acorn,<sup>j</sup> which was given to man as food earlier than wheat; and for this reason they ascribed life to it (as) its principle,<sup>k</sup> considering the oak<sup>l</sup> to be the temple and altar of the only God. For, like the laurel of the sun,<sup>m</sup> it comes to the aid of health. And the turnings<sup>n</sup> of the sun clearly show forth the yearly seasons, of which <sup>a</sup> Apparently Philo means that God and Abraham were the two end-points in the relation, and the oak of Mambre the mid-point.

<sup>b</sup> συμβολικώτερον.

<sup>c</sup> ἐξ ἀγρίου τι.

<sup>d</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "eyed." Possibly the original was ὀφθαλμιζόμενον "grafted" but there is no other reference here to tree-grafting.

<sup>f</sup> τὸν ὄντως ὄντα.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. seems literally to render πυκνότητι κατεχόμενον ἀκωλύτως ἄγριον, whatever that means.

<sup>h</sup> The above is a literal translation, which is admittedly unintelligible. Aucher very freely renders, or rather paraphrases, "ita tamen ut expedite et libere splendorem obvians renitentem, placidum redderet oculis."

<sup>i</sup> The compound stelnatounk is not listed in the great Arm. dictionary. Aucher renders less accurately, "planta ipsa."

<sup>j</sup> φηγός (or βάλανος) οἰκείος.

<sup>k</sup> ἀρχήν (?); Aucher has "ut propriam facultatem."

<sup>l</sup> τὴν δρῦν.

<sup>m</sup> Probably a reference to the laurel of Apollo Daphnephoros.

<sup>n</sup> αἱ τροπαί, i.e. the solstices.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

one brings mild temperateness,<sup>a</sup> and the other brings about severe intemperateness (and) sickness. Now the ever-virginal olive-tree<sup>b</sup> is of the purest substance which the inerrant sphere<sup>c</sup> attains, for olive-oil is the material of light, and radiant in form is the heaven in which are the light-giving stars. Wherefore it is customary to call most of them<sup>d</sup> not what they themselves are but after the most sovereign and chief of them, (namely) the oak, in places where trees and groves are especially dense and thick, even though the oak does not seek any payment of tribute.<sup>e</sup> And they are called oak-cutters<sup>f</sup> who cut down fir-trees<sup>g</sup> and cedars and the like, and even others, of the timber of which it is usual to erect what are called dryphaktoi.<sup>h</sup> And the fruits of trees of all kinds, both cultivated and wild, are called oak-fruits<sup>i</sup> and olives. And "oak-ripe"<sup>j</sup> is what they call those (fruits) that ripen on the stalk. And the name of oak and olive is given to all (trees) as sovereign and chief. And rightly is He said to have appeared to him when seated, since sitting is a state of tranquillity and<sup>k</sup> peace of body. Now the mind of the virtuous man, when it sits in restful quietness and secure peace, wishing to bear a likeness to the unwearied and unchanging true being of God, which is of an intelligible nature and a thing of non-living life,<sup>l</sup> so far as is possible

<sup>a</sup> εὐκρασίαν.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ ἀειπάρθενος ἐλαιά, here perhaps considered a variety of δάφνη, cf. Strabo 16. 3. 6 on the trees of Arabia.

<sup>c</sup> ἡ ἀπλανῆς σφαῖρα, i.e. the sphere of the fixed stars.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. trees.

<sup>e</sup> Prob. τιμὴν φόρου. Aucher less aptly renders, "ultionem," ignoring Arm. hark "tribute." <sup>f</sup> δρυηκόποι.

<sup>g</sup> Arm. elat is not defined in dictionaries available to me. I have followed Aucher's rendering.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. transliterates δρύφακτοι "rails, balconies," etc.

<sup>i</sup> Prob. βάλανοι, which includes acorns, dates, etc.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. "tree-ripe"—δρυπεπεῖς.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "a state (ἔξις) and tranquillity of."

<sup>l</sup> ἀβιώτου βίου. Aucher renders the whole clause elliptically, "illam quam secundum intelligibilem vitam laboris nesciam, similitudinem veri Entis Dei volens imitari."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

for human nature,<sup>a</sup> describes a form that is very obscure in comparison with the archetype.<sup>b</sup> But the sitting at the entrance of his tent seems to be a symbol,<sup>c</sup> that is, of the body, which the divine and holy Scriptures in another place call a "tunic of skin,"<sup>d</sup> as if of the soul, for (through the body) are the paths of colours, forms, voices, elements<sup>e</sup> and vapours, and everything that is at all sense-perceptible. And it is fitting for the virtuous reason<sup>f</sup> to sit by the senses and be a doorkeeper<sup>g</sup> lest anything harmful slip within and be the cause of harm to the soul, inasmuch as it is able to preserve it unharmed and whole and unaffected by any evil. For the senses of foolish men are left stranded without protection and abandoned to themselves, and there is no one of them at all who stands at the entrance to exclude useless and harmful impressions.<sup>h</sup> Wherefore many desperate misfortunes find their way within, no less voluntary than involuntary, and because of these, which shamelessly and unopposed find their way in, impressions<sup>i</sup> are engraved upon the mind, and by these the soul is shaken and agitated day and night, since the senses are left without protection and abandoned to their own devices.

And excellently is it said that the vision occurred at midday,<sup>j</sup> for this is the most luminous (hour) in the whole length of the day. Thus, symbolically it sets before us<sup>k</sup> the intelligible sun,<sup>l</sup> (which) sends out its incorporeal rays

<sup>a</sup> Aucher wrongly transposes the rendering of "for human life" to the next clause.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher goes astray in rendering, "humana natura similem originali describit obscuram formam."

<sup>c</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>d</sup> Cf. QG i. 53 on Gen. iii. 21.

<sup>e</sup> Or "humours."

<sup>f</sup> τῷ σπουδαίῳ λογισμῷ.

<sup>g</sup> θυρωρόν. <sup>h</sup> φαντασίας.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, "turpes ideae."

<sup>j</sup> Above, in quoting Scripture, Philo writes "in the heat of the day."

<sup>k</sup> συμβολικῶς ἐναντίον παρίστησι.

<sup>l</sup> τὸν νοητὸν ἥλιον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

most luminously and splendidly upon pure souls,<sup>a</sup> which gaze directly into the rays and behold them; and piety, after passion is removed,<sup>b</sup> makes the heaven familiar. But they are not able to gaze at it for a long time, since that unmixed, undiluted, holy, pure, diffused and incorporeal light shines too brilliantly, and with its brightness blinds and dulls the eyes. But it seems to me that, since the light is purer and more luminous at midday, when impressions are seen more clearly, it wishes to illumine the mind of the wise man and have the rays shine about him with divine light, and make clearer and firmer the impressions of things that really exist,<sup>c</sup> the rays being without shadow.

2. (Gen. xviii. 2) What is the meaning of the words, "He saw,<sup>d</sup> and behold, three men were standing over him"<sup>e</sup>?

Most natural things<sup>f</sup> to those who are able to see does (Scripture) present, (namely) that it is reasonable<sup>g</sup> for one to be three and for three to be one, for they were one by a higher principle.<sup>h</sup> But when counted with the chief powers, the creative and kingly,<sup>i</sup> He makes the appearance of three to the human mind. For this cannot be so keen of sight that it can see Him who is above the powers that belong to Him, (namely) God, distinct from anything else. For so soon as one sets eyes upon God, there also appear, together with His being,<sup>j</sup> the ministering powers, so that

<sup>a</sup> In the Arm. text the "and" before "pure souls" seems to be misplaced.

<sup>b</sup> Text uncertain.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν ὄντως ὄντων.

<sup>d</sup> LXX and Heb. "he lifted his eyes and saw."

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἐπάνω αὐτοῦ. The verse is allegorically explained in De Abrahamo 119-132 in much the same way as here.

<sup>f</sup> φυσικώτατα.

<sup>g</sup> εἰκός.

<sup>h</sup> κατ' ἀνώτερον λόγον.

<sup>i</sup> σὺν ταῖς πρώταις δυνάμεσι, τῇ ποιητικῇ καὶ τῇ βασιλικῇ.

Cf. QG ii. 51 notes.

<sup>j</sup> Or "essence"—οὐσία. Aucher renders less accurately, "una cum illo existentes apparent."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

in place of one He makes the appearance of a triad. For when the mind begins to have an apprehension of the Existent One,<sup>a</sup> He is known to have arrived there,<sup>b</sup> making (Himself) unique, and appearing as chief and sovereign. But, as I said a little earlier, He cannot be seen in His oneness without something (else), the chief powers that exist immediately<sup>c</sup> with Him, (namely) the creative, which is called God, and the kingly, which is called Lord. For (when Scripture) says, "he lifted up his eyes," (this means) not those of the body, for it is not possible to see God through the senses, but those of the soul. For in the moment of wisdom<sup>d</sup> He is seen with the eyes.<sup>e</sup> But the sight of many ignoble and idle souls is always blocked, since they are in a deep sleep and are never able to leap up and rouse themselves to the things of nature and to the sights and impressions therein. But the spiritual eyes of the virtuous man are awake and see; or rather, he is sleepless because of his desire of seeing, and he spurs himself and leaps up to wakefulness. Wherefore it was well said in the plural that he opened, not one eye, but all the eyes which are in the soul, so that he was altogether an eye.<sup>f</sup> And having become an eye, he begins to see the sovereign, holy and divine<sup>g</sup> vision in such a way that the single appearance appears as a triad, and the triad as a unity.

It is fitting to speak of what follows these words and not omit them. For not idly<sup>h</sup> is it said that "they stood

<sup>a</sup> κατάληψιν τοῦ ὄντος.

<sup>b</sup> Meaning unclear to me.

<sup>c</sup> εὐθύς.

<sup>d</sup> καιρῶ σοφίας.

<sup>e</sup> One may also render, "For at the (right) time He is seen with the eyes of wisdom."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher amplifies slightly in rendering, "ut totum totaliter oculum esse eum dixeris."

<sup>g</sup> Perhaps in selecting these three adjectives, which render κυρίαν καὶ ἀγίαν καὶ θείαν, Philo wishes to suggest that the central being of God is flanked (παρ' ἑκάτερα is used in De Abrahamo 121) by His kingly and creative powers.

<sup>h</sup> οὐκ εἰκῆ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

over him." For God is above and over all generated creatures, and (so are) the divine powers that administer and oversee and govern. Now generally everything necessary has already been said, for concerning the activity of things it is proper to see a vision in no casual manner<sup>a</sup>; with a single turning of the eyes the mind apprehends a double appearance<sup>b</sup>; the one was of God coming with His two highest powers, by which He is served, (namely) the creative, through which He creates and operates the world, and the kingly, through which He rules what has come into being. And the other (appearance) was that of the strange men, not such men as one may happen to meet by chance, but most perfect of body according to human nature, and of venerable holiness. And being struck by either appearance, he was drawn toward seeing, now by one, now by the other. And he was not able to see just which of them was likely to be the true one.<sup>c</sup> For the sake of safety and because of uncertainty and doubt he did not ignore (either of them), nor did he, like some, out of slothfulness forget them but received and apprehended both appearances, thinking it better to accustom<sup>d</sup> his doubt, by truth rather than by falsehood, to the acquisition of two great virtues, (namely) holiness and love of mankind<sup>e</sup>—holiness, in so far as his gaze was fixed upon the one aspect,<sup>f</sup> in which he saw God; and love of mankind, in the other aspect, which is common participation<sup>g</sup> with strangers. And that he was moved by either

<sup>a</sup> Lit. the Arm. seems to render περὶ γὰρ τῆς τῶν πραγμάτων ἐργασίας πρέπον ἐστὶ οὐ παρέργως ὄρασιν ἰδεῖν. Aucher renders, "de ipsa vero rerum causa non obiter visionem videre liceat"; in a footnote to "causa" he adds, "ad verb. opere, quod accipio sicut opifice." The Arm. glossator renders, "concerning the interpretation of things."

<sup>b</sup> Of God with His powers, on the one hand, and of the three angels, on the other.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "quae ex illis certior credenda sit."

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. verb = ἐθίζειν, οἰκειοῦν, ἡμεροῦν.

<sup>e</sup> ὁσιότητος καὶ φιλανθρωπίας.

<sup>f</sup> ιδέαν.

<sup>g</sup> μετοχὴ κοινωνίας vel sim.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

appearance is clear from Scripture, for whatever is said concerning one or to one or by one is brought as evidence of an appearance as God, while whatever is said concerning several or to several is of an appearance as of strange men.

For when it says,<sup>a</sup> "God appeared to him," and "Lord, if indeed I have found favour before Thee," and "Do not pass over thy servant," and, "Thus do as thou hast said,"<sup>b</sup> and when it is said to him, "Where is Sarah, thy wife?" and "Again I will come to thee at this time," and "God said to him, why did Sarah laugh?"—all these passages point to His appearance as God. But the following indicate an appearance as of strange men: "And lifting up his eyes, he looked, and three men were standing over him," and "He ran to them," and "Let your feet be washed," and "Refresh yourselves under the tree," and "Eat,"<sup>c</sup> and "He stood before them," and "The men got up from there." So that through both piety and love of man<sup>d</sup> (Scripture) guides everyone who is considered civilized.<sup>e</sup> For in such civilized manner<sup>f</sup> did the founder and chief of our race<sup>g</sup> make his way of life an example. Seeing the vision before his eyes, which was not constant, being at one time that of God, at another time that of strangers, he decided to show piety as toward God, and equal oneness and love of man toward the strangers. Some, taking this as a point of departure, have gone astray in their beliefs, for they have been struck by the notion that there are measures and weights of proportion and structure.<sup>h</sup> As the clever and considerably learned Homer

<sup>a</sup> Gen. xviii. 2-15.

<sup>b</sup> This particular phrase does not indicate that one person is speaking.

<sup>c</sup> In the plural.

<sup>d</sup> δι' εὐσεβείας καὶ φιλανθρωπίας.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "who is written in polity (πολιτεία)."

<sup>f</sup> διὰ τοιαύτης πολιτείας.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. Abraham.

<sup>h</sup> Probably we should supply the words "in God," as does Aucher, who renders, "hinc ansa capta, nonnulli mensuram pondusque harmoniae corporeae excogitarunt (in Deo) abnormi opinione."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

with beauty of sound describes the conduct of life, it is not right to be harmfully arrogant,<sup>a</sup> for he says that the Deity in the likeness of a beautiful human form is believed to appear many times, (in this) not diverging from the belief of a polytheist. His verses are as follows. "And yet the gods in the likeness of strangers from other lands, in all kinds of form go about unknown, seeing and beholding the many enmities of men and their lawlessness and also their good laws."<sup>b</sup>

3. (Gen. xviii. 2) Why does (Scripture) say, "And when he saw (them), he ran to meet them<sup>c</sup> and prostrated himself upon the ground"<sup>d</sup>?

It gives a warning to those who without reflexion and taking thought rush upon whatever happens to be there, without first thinking and looking, and it teaches them not to rush out before they clearly see and grasp what the matter is. Wherefore (Scripture) says, "Having seen, he ran," in order that when the perception of sight has first taken place, there may afterwards come an act that is irreproachable and pleasing. But excellently is it said that after his seeing, he then "ran forward," for having seen, he did not delay or tarry, but (like) one who has seen something worthy of this, hastened and ran toward them. Moreover, very discriminatingly does (Scripture) say that he made prostration "on the ground," for it would not be to mortal men that he prostrated himself but to Him

<sup>a</sup> This obscure clause is somewhat differently rendered by Aucher, "quem admodum severus ille, et sufficiens in scientia exponit Homerus, decore vitae ut pulchrae harmoniae non licere superbire, ac noxam subire."

<sup>b</sup> Od. xvii. 485-488; the same passage is paraphrased by Philo in De Somniis i. 233 with the comment, "The report may not be a true one but it is at any rate profitable and beneficial that it is made."

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "ran forward to them." Philo omits the words "from the entrance of the tent."

<sup>d</sup> LXX προσεκύνησεν ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

who is above heaven and earth, and is God of the whole world in common.<sup>a</sup>

4. (Gen. xviii. 3) (What is the meaning of the words), "Lord, if I have found favour before Thee, do not pass over <sup>b</sup> Thy servant" ?

Now <sup>c</sup> his mind <sup>d</sup> clearly forms an impression with more open eyes and more lucid vision, not roaming about nor wandering off with the triad, and being attracted thereto by quantity and plurality, but running toward the one. And He manifested Himself without the powers <sup>e</sup> that belong to Him, so that he saw His oneness directly before him, as he had known it earlier in the likeness of a triad. But it is something great that he asks, (namely) that God shall not pass by nor remove to a distance and leave his soul desolate and empty.<sup>f</sup> For the limit <sup>g</sup> of happiness is the presence <sup>h</sup> of God, which completely fills the whole soul with His whole incorporeal and eternal light. And (the limit) of misery is (His) passing on the way, for immediately thereafter comes heavy and profound darkness and possesses (the soul). Wherefore also the fratricide Cain says, "Great is the guilt of my punishment that Thou leavest me,"<sup>i</sup> indicating that there is no greater punishment for the soul than to be abandoned by God. Moreover, in another place Moses says, "Lest the Lord be

<sup>a</sup> κοινῇ.

<sup>b</sup> So LXX, μὴ παρέλθης. Heb. "do not pass from."

<sup>c</sup> i.e. on this occasion.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>e</sup> ἀνευ τῶν δυνάμεων, i.e. the creative and kingly attributes.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. uses two words to render ἐρήμην and two to render κενήν.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ ὄρος.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. uses two words to render παρουσία.

<sup>i</sup> Gen. iv. 13, where LXX reads μείζων ἢ αἰτία μου τοῦ ἀφεθῆναι με. Cf. QG i. 73 where Philo takes this to mean that Cain is punished by being abandoned by God, not that his guilt is too great to be overlooked.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

removed from them,"<sup>a</sup> showing that for the soul to be separated from the contemplation of the Existent One<sup>b</sup> is the most complete of evils. For these reasons he<sup>c</sup> attempts to lead the people toward God, not (any men), for this is not possible, but god-loving souls which can (be led), when a heavenly love<sup>d</sup> and desire have come upon them and seized them.

5. (Gen. xviii. 4) Why does he again say, in the plural, "Let water be taken and let them wash<sup>e</sup> your feet, and do you refresh yourselves<sup>f</sup> under the thick<sup>g</sup> tree"?

This again applies to the other appearance, in accordance with which he thought them strangers, having reached a stage of knowledge which was not certain, but again being attracted and strongly drawn by a most excellent and divine countenance.<sup>h</sup> Wherefore he does not give a command like a lord and master, nor does he presume to offer washing of the feet to freemen or servants but (regards) Him who had made Himself directly visible as the one who gives commands, saying, "Let water be taken," and does not add by whom. And again (in saying) "Let them wash (your) feet," he does not make clear whom nor make it known exactly, because, as it seems to me, he did not have confidence and assurance concerning the sense-perceptible appearance as (being one) of men seen, but rather that it was intelligible, as if a divine manifestation had been made. Something like this is clear from Scripture, (namely) that

<sup>a</sup> Probably, as Aucher suggests, a reference to Ex. xix. 22, where LXX reads μήποτε ἀπαλλάξῃ ἀπ' αὐτῶν κύριος.

<sup>b</sup> τοῦ Ὁντος.

<sup>c</sup> Apparently Moses is meant.

<sup>d</sup> ἔρωσ.

<sup>e</sup> Philo reads νιβάτωσαν, as do some LXX MSS.; most LXX MSS. have νιβάτω. The Masoretic Heb. has 2nd pl. imperative, "wash ye," but the consonantal (i.e. unvocalized) Heb. can also be read as 3rd pl. perfect, here meaning "let them wash."

<sup>f</sup> LXX καταψύξατε.

<sup>g</sup> No adjective is used in LXX or Heb.

<sup>h</sup> προσώπου οὐ δψεως.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

men are sanctified when washed with water, while the water itself (is sanctified) by the divine foot. Now symbolically <sup>a</sup> the foot is the last <sup>b</sup> and lowest (part) of the body, while to the air is allotted the last portion <sup>c</sup> of divine things, for it animates <sup>d</sup> the congregated things that have been created. <sup>e</sup> For if (the air) does not touch and move this (water), it dies; and it becomes alive through nothing else than having air mixed in with it. Wherefore not ineptly <sup>f</sup> is it said at the beginning of the genesis of creatures <sup>g</sup> that “the spirit of God was borne upon the waters,” which (Scripture) in allegorizing <sup>h</sup> on this occasion symbolically calls “the foot.”

6. (Gen. xviii. 5) Why does he say in this fashion, “I will take bread, and eat ye,” <sup>i</sup> and not, “Take ye”?

Here again he shows his doubt and his inclination toward either appearance. For when it is said, “I will take,” he imagines it to be God, to Whom he does not dare to say, “Take <sup>j</sup> food.” But when (he says), “Eat,” <sup>k</sup> he imagines it to be the three strange men. That is the literal meaning. <sup>l</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>m</sup> when the mind begins to prepare and order itself and to take the divine and holy foods, which are the laws and forms of wisdom, <sup>n</sup> then it is symbolically <sup>o</sup> said to eat also of divine (food); and this is the food that is fitting for the heavenly Olympians, <sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ἔσχατον.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ ἔσχατος κλῆρος.

<sup>d</sup> ψυχῶν.

<sup>e</sup> τὰ συναθρόντα κτιστά vel sim., i.e. the gathering together of the waters, mentioned in Gen. i. 10 (LXX τὰ σπαστήματα τῶν ὑδάτων).

<sup>f</sup> οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>h</sup> ἀλληγορῶν.

<sup>g</sup> Gen. i. 2.

<sup>i</sup> LXX λήψομαι ἄρτον, καὶ φάγεσθε.

<sup>j</sup> Imperative sing.

<sup>k</sup> Imperative plural.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>n</sup> οἱ νόμοι καὶ αἱ ἰδέαι τῆς σοφίας.

<sup>o</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>p</sup> Aucher renders, “caelestem Olympum.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(namely) the desires and yearnings of the rational soul,<sup>a</sup> which it uses for the apprehension of wisdom and the acquisition of perfect virtue.<sup>o</sup>

7. (Gen. xviii. 5) Why does He say,<sup>e</sup> “ So do as thou hast said ” ?

He reproves those of two minds and two tongues, who say one thing and do the opposite. But the virtuous man<sup>d</sup> He sets apart<sup>e</sup> and determines that he shall be saved<sup>f</sup> through either order,<sup>g</sup> his words first being inclined toward deeds, and his deeds toward words.<sup>h</sup> For just as his words are, so is his life,<sup>i</sup> and as his life is, so do the words of the wise man appear.

*8. (Gen. xviii. 6-7) Why do they all hasten? For (Scripture) says, “ Abraham hastened to the tent to Sarah and said to her, Hasten and mix three measures of wheat-flour<sup>j</sup> and make ash-cakes.<sup>k</sup> And he ran to the cattle and took a tender<sup>l</sup> calf and gave it to the boy,<sup>m</sup> and he hastened to do this.”

This is a eulogy of the virtuous man according to either <sup>a</sup> τῆς λογικῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>b</sup> τῆς τελείας ἀρετῆς.

<sup>c</sup> Most LXX MSS. have εἶπεν. Some LXX MSS. and ancient versions have εἶπαν. Heb. has “ they said.”

<sup>d</sup> τὸν σπουδαῖον.

<sup>e</sup> Or “ approves of.”

<sup>f</sup> σώζεσθαι. Aucher renders less literally, “ vivere.”

<sup>g</sup> δι’ ἐκατέρας τάξεως.

<sup>h</sup> λόγοι contrasted with ἔργα.

<sup>i</sup> βίος or διαγωγή.

<sup>j</sup> LXX σεμιδάλεως.

<sup>k</sup> LXX ἐγκρυφίας. Heb. ‘ugôth is rendered in A.V. as “ cakes upon the hearth.”

<sup>l</sup> LXX and Heb. add “ and goodly.”

<sup>m</sup> i.e. his servant.

<sup>n</sup> LXX ποιῆσαι αὐτό, rendering Heb. la’asôth ’ôthô, which here means not “ to do this ” but “ to prepare him ” (the calf).

GENESIS, BOOK IV

appearance.<sup>a</sup> For if it was the strange men whom he believed to have come to him, he is to be admired for his humanity and hospitality.<sup>b</sup> And if (he thought) that it was God who had come to him together with His chief powers, he was blessed and fortunate. Now, as to what they did for the appearance of the strange men, Abraham and his wife and his boy must be thought hospitable persons. But as to what they did for the powers of God, they must no longer be thought hospitable persons but incorporeal.<sup>c</sup> And the man and woman are (to be considered) ideas,<sup>d</sup> one being that of the most pure mind,<sup>e</sup> which is called Abraham, and the other that of the perfection of virtue,<sup>f</sup> which is called Sarah, while that which is the utterance of thought<sup>g</sup> is named "boy." And without delay or hesitation the mind and the virtues hasten under pressure<sup>h</sup> to please<sup>i</sup> and serve God and His powers. And the mind rules<sup>k</sup> in the manner of an overseer<sup>l</sup> and becomes a helper and stimulator in that which it is proper to do, while virtue shows unhesitating speed in the completion of the three portions and the ash-cakes. Speech,<sup>m</sup> moreover, brings the offering that is commanded.

And most natural<sup>n</sup> is the passage concerning the three measures,<sup>o</sup> for in reality<sup>p</sup> all things are measured by three,

<sup>a</sup> i. e. either the three "strange men" or God.

<sup>b</sup> τῆς φιλανθρωπίας καὶ τῆς φιλοξενίας.

<sup>c</sup> ἀσωμάτων.

<sup>d</sup> ιδέας.

<sup>e</sup> τοῦ καθαρωτάτου νοῦ.

<sup>f</sup> τελειότητος τῆς ἀρετῆς.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. lit. = προφορὰ τοῦ λόγου. Elsewhere in Philo the expressions ὁ κατὰ προφορὰν λόγος or λόγος προφορικός are used.

<sup>h</sup> There is an intrusive rel. pron. before the verb in the Arm. text.

<sup>i</sup> ἐπειγόμενοι vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> Or "to attend."

<sup>k</sup> Or "leads (them)."

<sup>l</sup> ἐπιστάτου vel sim.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>n</sup> φυσικώτατος.

<sup>o</sup> For a somewhat different allegorizing of the three measures and ash-cakes see De Sacr. Abelis 59-62.

<sup>p</sup> Prob. ὄντως.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

having a beginning, middle and end. And each of these partial things <sup>a</sup> is empty if it does not have (the others), similarly constituted.<sup>b</sup> Wherefore Homer not ineptly says that "all things are divided into three."<sup>c</sup> And the Pythagoreans assume that the triad among numbers, and the right-angled triangle among figures are the foundation of the knowledge of all things.<sup>d</sup> And so, one measure is that by which the incorporeal and intelligible world was constituted.<sup>e</sup> And the second measure is that by which the perceptible heaven was established in the fifth (element), attaining to a more wonderful and divine essence, unaltered and unchanged in comparison with these (things below),<sup>f</sup> and remaining the same.<sup>g</sup> And the third measure is the way in which sublunary things were made out of the four powers,<sup>h</sup> earth, water, air and fire,<sup>i</sup> admitting generation and corruption.<sup>j</sup> Now the measure of the incorporeal

<sup>a</sup> ἕκαστον τῶν κατὰ μέρος.

<sup>b</sup> This sentence is rendered more freely by Aucher, "quorum utrumque inane comperitur absque tertia parte, carens existentia."

<sup>c</sup> Iliad xv. 189 τριχθὰ δὲ πάντα δέδασται.

<sup>d</sup> Staehle, p. 25, cites Joh. Lydus, p. 25, 12-16, who is probably dependent upon Philo, and quotes the same passage from Homer. Lydus' text continues, διὰ μὲν τοῦτο οἱ Πυθαγόρειοι τριάδα μὲν ἐν ἀριθμοῖς, ἐν δὲ σχήμασι τὸ ὀρθογώνιον τρίγωνον ὑποτίθενται στοιχείων τῆς τῶν ὄλων γενέσεως (Arm. Philo = γνώσεως).

<sup>e</sup> Joh. Lydus has ἐν μὲν οὖν μέτρον ἐστὶ, καθ' ὃ συνέστη ὁ ἀσώματος καὶ νοητὸς κόσμος.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher's rendering, "secundum illud," misses the point of the contrast between the heavenly sphere and the sublunary regions.

<sup>g</sup> Joh. Lydus reads slightly differently δεύτερον δὲ μέτρον, καθ' ὃ ἐπάγη ὁ αἰσθητὸς οὐρανός, πέμπτην λαχὼν καὶ θειοτέραν οὐσίαν, ἄτρεπτον καὶ ἀμετάβολον.

<sup>h</sup> So also Joh. Lydus, τρίτον δὲ καθ' ὃ ἐδημιουργήθη τὰ ὑπὸ σελήνην, ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων δυνάμεων (not στοιχείων, as one would expect).

<sup>i</sup> The four elements are not named in Lydus' text.

<sup>j</sup> γένεσιν καὶ φθορὰν ἐπιδεχόμενα, as in Joh. Lydus, whose parallel text ends here.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

forms <sup>a</sup> by which the intelligible world was constituted must be said to be the eldest of causes.<sup>b</sup> And (the cause) of the fifth, perceptible and circular essence,<sup>c</sup> which the heaven has had allotted to it, is the creative power of the Existent One,<sup>d</sup> for it has found an imperishable, pure and unmixed blessing <sup>e</sup> in obtaining an immortal and incorruptible portion. But the kingly (power) <sup>f</sup> (is the cause) of sublunary things, those that (are subject to) change and alteration because they participate in generation and corruption. But (He gives) speech as an aid for guidance in a certain one <sup>g</sup> when something is to be done, for the sake of those who carry out and complete something. And to those who sin in some measure (there is assigned) corrective reformation through deserved punishments and chastisements. But those who commit indescribable and inexpressible wrongs are punished through retributive chastisement and banishment.<sup>h</sup>

So that truly and properly speaking, God alone is the measure of all things, both intelligible and sense-perceptible, and He in His oneness is likened to a triad because of the weakness <sup>i</sup> of the beholders. For the eye of the soul, which is very lucid and bright, is dimmed before it falls upon and gazes at Him who is in His oneness without anyone else at all being seen. For just as the eyes of the body when they are weak, often come upon <sup>j</sup> a double

<sup>a</sup> τῶν ἀσωμάτων ἰδεῶν.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πρεσβύτατον τῶν αἰτίων.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the sphere of the fixed stars.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ τοῦ ὄντος ποιητικὴ δύναμις. On the two powers of God see QG ii. 51, iv. 2 et al.

<sup>e</sup> More literally "benevolence."

<sup>f</sup> ἡ βασιλικὴ (δύναμις).

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. seems lit. to render τὸν λόγον (ὡς) ἐν ἐνί τινι ἡγεμονίας ἀντίληψιν, but the meaning is obscure to me. Aucher renders, "verbum vero certum regiminis auxilium praebet."

<sup>h</sup> Apparently banishment from God's presence is meant.

<sup>i</sup> διὰ τὴν ἀσθένειαν.

<sup>j</sup> The first of the two Arm. verbs used here I cannot translate.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

appearance from a single lamp, so also in the case of the soul's vision, it is not able to attain to the One as one but finds it natural to receive an impression of the triad in accordance with the appearances that attend the One like ministers, (namely) the chief powers.

Wherefore Moses, the chief prophet and chief messenger,<sup>a</sup> desired to see the One without His powers, as one in His oneness, to which no one by art or wisdom or anything else that exists<sup>b</sup> hoped to be adequate or to reach the upper regions by advancing upward from below. For he wished to receive the chiefest of all (blessings)<sup>c</sup> and to be granted the mercy of having (Him) appear to the god-loving soul all alone without any other (being present), for he says, "Show Thyself to me that I may see Thee knowingly."<sup>d</sup>

But most excellently, after the three measures, does (Scripture) speak of the ash-cakes, not only because knowledge and understanding of the wisdom of the Father and His two highest powers are hidden<sup>e</sup> from many, but also because such an inquiry<sup>f</sup> should not be spoken of to all. For to reveal mysteries to uninitiated and unworthy men is the act of one who destroys and sacks and undermines the laws of the mysteries of divine perfection.<sup>g</sup> O thrice happy and thrice fortunate soul, in which God has not disdained to dwell and move and to make it His palace and home, that the giver of joy may have joy, for this is really

<sup>a</sup> ὁ ἀρχιπροφήτης καὶ ὁ ἀρχάγγελος.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "is in genesis."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ἀρχικόν.

<sup>d</sup> Cf. LXX of Ex. xxxiii. 13 ἐμφάνισόν μοι σεαυτόν, γνωστῶς ἴδω σε, which is quoted by Philo in Leg. All. iii. 101 and elsewhere. The Heb. has "Show me Thy ways that I may know Thee."

<sup>e</sup> Philo plays on the word ἐγκρυφίας "ash-cakes," as if meaning "hidden."

<sup>f</sup> ζήτησις.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. translator has evidently mistaken τελετῆς "initiation" for τελειότητος "perfection"; cf. the Greek frag. from Dam. Par. τοῖς ἀμυήτοις ἐκλαλεῖν μυστήρια καταλύοντός ἐστι τοὺς θεσμοὺς τῆς ἱερατικῆς τελετῆς.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

genuine and true.<sup>a</sup> For while those who receive men <sup>b</sup> show joy and conviviality, the most pure mind <sup>c</sup> is wholly filled and overflowing with the appearance of God, and it (alone) may properly be said to feast and rejoice lavishly. And may it not be that this is fitting and proper? For the host is in need and in want, while He who came to him is in need of nothing but is most rich and great,<sup>d</sup> and after Him come fountains of ever-flowing good, from which not all men but only those who are well and genuinely purified can drink, being invited to symposia of joy, in which the souls <sup>e</sup> of prophets and messengers rejoice and eat the food of the voluntary laws <sup>f</sup> of imperishable and pure wisdom at the invitation and through the entertainment of God.

9. (Gen. xviii. 8) Why does (Scripture) say, "He placed (it) before them,<sup>g</sup> and they ate"?

It is clear that "they ate" (is said) symbolically <sup>h</sup> and not of food, for these happy and blessed natures do not eat food or drink red wine,<sup>i</sup> but it is (an indication) of their readiness in understanding and assenting to those who appeal to them and put their trust in them.<sup>j</sup> For just as human guests who are hospitably received and are glad-

<sup>a</sup> Apparently the word "joy" is to be understood.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. into their homes.

<sup>c</sup> ὁ καθαρῶτατος νοῦς.

<sup>d</sup> Cf. De Abrahamo 167 ἐν οἷς δοκῶν ἐστιᾶν ὁ ξενοδόχος εἰσιᾶτο.

<sup>e</sup> Or "spirits."

<sup>f</sup> ἐκουσίων νόμων, cf. De Mut. Nom. 26 ἐκουσίους ἅπαντας νόμους (Colson conj. μῶμους). The text in both passages is suspect.

<sup>g</sup> LXX παρέθηκεν αὐτοῖς.

<sup>h</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>i</sup> Cf. De Abrahamo 118 "It is a marvel indeed that though they neither ate nor drank they gave the appearance of both eating and drinking."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "sed annuendi benignitati fidenter rogantis indicio est."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

dened with food rejoice in their host and entertainer, so does the Deity in those whom He finds sincerely and genuinely pleasing to Him. For, more figuratively,<sup>a</sup> the pious and worthy life of a virtuous man is the food of God.

*10. (Gen. xviii. 8) Why is it said, " And he was standing before them <sup>b</sup> under the tree " ?

That he had a multitude of servants is clear from the flock of 318 house-slaves <sup>c</sup> with whom he fought the kings of the gentiles.<sup>d</sup> (But) he himself becomes an attendant and servant <sup>e</sup> to show his hospitality, if he believed them to be men, and his worthy way of life and love of God, if (he believed them to be) the divine powers appearing with the Father, for he thinks it right to perform the service of piety himself.<sup>f</sup>

11. (Gen. xviii. 9) Why does He again say <sup>g</sup> in the singular, " Where is Sarah, thy wife, and he answered, In the tent " ?

The literal meaning <sup>h</sup> is clear from what has been said before. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> (he so answers) because in some sense virtue is the wife and consort of the wise man,<sup>j</sup> and through her are born virtuous thoughts and

<sup>a</sup> τροπικώτερον. Aucher has " commodius."

<sup>b</sup> So Arm. O.T.: LXX παρειστήκει αὐτοῖς: Heb. " was standing by (or " over ") them." In the Heb. the whole clause precedes the phrase " and they ate," which Philo, following the LXX order of words, has discussed in the preceding section.

<sup>c</sup> οἰκογενῶν, cf. Gen. xiv. 14.

<sup>d</sup> τῶν ἀλλοφύλων.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. " attendant of service."

<sup>f</sup> Cf. the Greek frag. (paraphrastic) from Procopius, αὐτουργῶν δὲ τὴν ὑπηρεσίαν.

<sup>g</sup> Some LXX mss. and the Heb. have " they said."

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> τρόπον τινα γυνή καὶ σύμβιός ἐστι τοῦ σοφοῦ ἢ ἀρετή. In the parallel allegory, Quod Deterius 59-61, Philo actually substitutes " virtue " for " Sarah " in citing the biblical verse.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

fine deeds and praiseworthy words. To this question he replies, "Behold, virtue is not only in my mind <sup>a</sup> but also in an empty and safe tent, in my body, extending itself and spreading as far as the senses <sup>b</sup> and the other functional parts <sup>c</sup> (of the body). For in accordance with virtue I see and hear and smell and taste and touch, and I make other movements in accordance with wisdom, health, fortitude and justice. <sup>d</sup>"

12. (Gen. xviii. 10) Why does He say in the singular, "Returning I will come to thee at this season at hours,<sup>e</sup> and a son will be born to Sarah thy wife" ?

Why (He speaks) in the singular has long ago <sup>f</sup> been said. For in what is now related it is not men but the Father of all whom he imagines <sup>g</sup> to have come with His powers. But His gracious act <sup>h</sup> He postpones in order to give his soul a more certain test of visitation. For He wishes to make his thirst greater by the delay and to give him an unmeasured desire for piety.<sup>i</sup> But "season" <sup>j</sup> is not merely the name of a time <sup>k</sup> (but is found) together with completion,<sup>l</sup> for the season is the time (required) for <sup>a</sup> ἐν τῷ ἐμῷ νῶ.

<sup>b</sup> τὰς αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>c</sup> τὰ ὀργανικὰ μέρη. The same phrase is used in De Congressu 115.

<sup>d</sup> The original prob. had the four Platonic virtues, φρόνησις, σωφροσύνη, ἀνδρεία, δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>e</sup> LXX κατὰ τὸν καιρὸν τοῦτον εἰς ὥρας (Arm. O.T. "at this time in these days"). The Heb. has simply "at the time of living," prob. meaning "at the time of giving birth." This biblical phrase is briefly commented on by Philo in De Migratione 126 and De Abrahamo 132 ; in the former passage Philo has εἰς ὥρας as here, in the latter, εἰς νέωτα "next year."

<sup>f</sup> πάλαι: Aucher "iam." Prob. the reference is to QG iv. 2.

<sup>g</sup> φαντάζεται.

<sup>h</sup> τὴν χάριν.

<sup>i</sup> ἄπειρον πόθον τῆς εὐσεβείας.

<sup>j</sup> καιρός.

<sup>k</sup> χρόνου.

<sup>l</sup> σὺν τῷ περαίνειν (πληροῦν, λύειν, etc.). The sense is not clear. Aucher renders, "sed cum debita solutione rerum."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

completing a reformation.<sup>a</sup> And clear evidence of the completion of every reformation<sup>b</sup> is what He has said.<sup>c</sup> For it is peculiar<sup>d</sup> to the divine power to complete something by the reformation of those also to whom He wishes to show favour.<sup>e</sup> And He mentions "hours" not so much (in the sense) of length of time and intervals as for the aptness of order. For it was natural<sup>f</sup> to order and arrange the period of the year by seasons. And these He makes a symbol<sup>g</sup> of the soul which comes from disorder into order and proper arrangement,<sup>h</sup> and to this He says he will grant, if He sees it remaining in order and evenness, a better progeny through a nature that rises<sup>i</sup> by itself.<sup>j</sup>

13. (Gen. xviii. 10) Why does (Scripture) say, "And Sarah heard, for she was by the entrance of the tent behind him"<sup>k</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> ἐπανορθώσεως.

<sup>b</sup> Emending the noun oullout'iuu from nom. to gen. case.

<sup>c</sup> This obscure sentence is differently punctuated and construed by Aucher, who renders, "persolvendi autem omnem rectitudinem. Manifestam huic facit fidem ille, qui (vel, illud quod) dixit."

<sup>d</sup> ἴδιον.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders differently and, I think, less accurately, "proprium enim ac certum est per divinam virtutem persolvi quidquam recte, sicut et per illos quibus velit concedere."

<sup>f</sup> εἰκόσ.

<sup>g</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>h</sup> εἰς τάξιν καὶ ἄξιον κόσμον.

<sup>i</sup> Or "proceeds."

<sup>j</sup> The syntax is not clear. Aucher renders, "generationem meliorem natura ipsius per se edocti," but there is no indication of a comparison in the Arm. The "nature that rises by itself" is perhaps an allusion to Isaac who is elsewhere referred to by Philo as a symbol of self-taught virtue.

<sup>k</sup> LXX Σάρρα δὲ ἤκουσεν πρὸς τῇ θύρᾳ τῆς σκηνῆς οὐσα ὀπισθεν αὐτοῦ. For "she was behind him" Heb. has "it (or "he") was behind him," possibly using the masc. pron. hû' as a feminine, as occasionally in older Heb., in which case LXX renders correctly.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

The literal meaning <sup>a</sup> seems to be clear, but the deeper meaning <sup>b</sup> is perhaps as follows. Virtue <sup>c</sup> stands behind <sup>d</sup> the one who is virtuous by nature, not like a slave-boy but like a perfect administrator and governor, <sup>e</sup> who holds the reins in his hands, directs the entire soul and way of life. For those in front do not see those behind, while those who are behind see those who stand beside them. And the proper place for virtue to stand is at the entrance; and the entrance to reflexion <sup>f</sup> is speech, <sup>g</sup> and each of the senses is (the entrance) to a vital part of the soul. For when this <sup>h</sup> is near at hand, it must necessarily say and perceive what is fitting.

14. (Gen. xviii. 11) Why does (Scripture) say, "Abraham and Sarah were old and advanced in days" <sup>i</sup>?

It tells us of the lawful years, <sup>j</sup> teaching us that the foolish man is a child and a crude person, for even though he may be advanced in age, his folly produces childishness. But the wise man, even though he may be in the prime of youthfulness, is old, and virtue is old and venerable, since it is worthy of old age and higher honour. Wherefore rightly does (Scripture) speak of old age and being "advanced in days," for it is fitting that days and months and years and all intervals and solar lengths (of time) should not be lacking to virtue, which nature has exalted with priority and headship. And in addition to these there is the substance of the light, or rather the mind <sup>k</sup> is luminous in the several disciplines of knowledge. And so this

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> ἡ ἀρετή, symbolized by Sarah.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "at the back side of."

<sup>e</sup> ὡς τέλειος οἰκονόμος καὶ κυβερνήτης.

<sup>f</sup> τῷ λογισμῷ.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. virtue.

<sup>i</sup> LXX προβεβηκότες.

<sup>j</sup> ἔτη νόμιμα vel sim., apparently meaning lawfully responsible or law-observant age rather than chronological age. One Arm. ms. has "wishes" for "years."

<sup>k</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

symbol <sup>a</sup> purports to show that virtue is (composed) of all the sciences as light (is) of light.<sup>b</sup>

15. (Gen. xviii. 11) What is the meaning of the words, "There ceased to be to Sarah the ways of women" <sup>c</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>a</sup> is clear. For (Scripture) by a euphemism calls the monthly purification of women "the ways of women." But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> it is to be allegorized <sup>f</sup> as follows. The soul has, as it were, a dwelling, partly men's quarters, partly women's quarters.<sup>g</sup> Now for the men there is a place where properly dwell the masculine thoughts (that are) wise, sound, just, prudent, pious, filled with freedom and boldness,<sup>h</sup> and kin to wisdom. And the women's quarters are a place where womanly opinions go about and dwell, being followers <sup>i</sup> of the female sex. And the female sex is irrational <sup>j</sup> and akin to bestial <sup>k</sup> passions, fear, sorrow, pleasure and desire, from which ensue incurable weaknesses and <sup>l</sup> indescribable diseases. He who is conquered by these is unhappy, while he who controls <sup>m</sup> them is happy. And longing for and

<sup>a</sup> τοῦτο τὸ σύμβολον.

<sup>b</sup> The connexion of the last two sentences with the preceding is not clear. Perhaps Philo refers to a comparison between Sarah (=virtue) being "advanced in days" and the light of day.

<sup>c</sup> LXX ἐξέλειπεν δὲ Σάρρα γίνεσθαι τὰ γυναίκια. Heb. has "there ceased to be to Sarah a way like (that of) women." This half-verse is commented on or referred to by Philo in De Cherubim 50, Quod Deterius 28, De Poster. Caini 134, De Ebrietate 60, De Fuga 128, 167, De Somniis ii. 185. In all of these passages Philo briefly gives about the same allegorical explanation as here.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

<sup>g</sup> γυναικῶν, here connected with LXX τὰ γυναίκια (=τὰ καταμήνια).

<sup>h</sup> ἐλευθερίας καὶ παρρησίας.

<sup>i</sup> ζηλωταί.

<sup>j</sup> ἄλογον.

<sup>k</sup> Or "irrational."

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "of."

<sup>m</sup> Or "repels," "reduces"; Aucher renders, "usus fuit (prudenter)."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

desiring this happiness, and seizing a certain time to be able to escape from terrible and unbearable sorrow, which is (what is meant by) "there ceased to be the ways of women"—this clearly belongs to minds full of Law,<sup>a</sup> which resemble the male sex and overcome passions and rise above all sense-pleasure and desire and are without sorrow and fear and, if one must speak the truth, without passion,<sup>b</sup> not zealously<sup>c</sup> practising apathy,<sup>d</sup> for this would be ungrateful<sup>e</sup> and shameless and akin to arrogance and reckless boldness, but that which is consistent with the argument given,<sup>f</sup> (namely) cutting the mind off from disturbing and confusing passions.

16. (Gen. xviii. 12) What is the meaning of the words, "And Sarah laughed within herself, saying, Not yet has anything happened until now,<sup>g</sup> and my lord is old"?

The mind,<sup>h</sup> which was about to be filled with joy and divine laughter, had not yet been freed from sorrow, fear, sense-pleasure and desire, by which it is shaken and compelled to stagger.<sup>i</sup> And when the mind is moved,<sup>j</sup> it does not know laughter, except perhaps for its visible <sup>a</sup> νόμον or "religion"—θηρησκείας.

<sup>b</sup> ἀπαθείς.

<sup>c</sup> Variant "shamefully."

<sup>d</sup> ἀπάθειαν.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. angoy "non-existent" is clearly a scribal error for angoh "ungrateful."

<sup>f</sup> Text and meaning uncertain; Aucher renders, "quae consistit juxta praedictum verbum," adding in a footnote, "ita ms. A, ubi C, D dicens vel prolativum verbum."

<sup>g</sup> LXX οὐπω μὲν μοι γέγονεν ἕως τοῦ νῦν. The Heb. is different, "After I have become worn, will there be pleasure to me?" The Arm. O.T. has a compromise, "What has not happened to me until now, will it then happen?" This verse is commented on by Philo in De Mut. Nom. 166-169; see also De Spec. Leg. ii. 54.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ νοῦς or ἡ διάνοια.

<sup>i</sup> καρῆβαρεῖν.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. by passion.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

appearance,<sup>a</sup> until a firm foundation is laid for a very strong and stable position ; for, in the fashion of the science of agriculture, virtue<sup>b</sup> does not appear only on the surface and lose its flowers, but it always lasts a long time in a flourishing state, being held together by an invisible bond. Similarly does (Scripture) introduce the high priest<sup>c</sup> rejoicing inwardly and released<sup>d</sup> from all corporeal thoughts and entering into joy,<sup>e</sup> for it says, " And seeing thee he will rejoice within himself." Very reverently does she<sup>f</sup> afterwards say, " Not yet has anything happened until now, and my lord is old," for this shows that having wholly forgotten passion through teaching, she has begun to rejoice, and that she is not yet perfect in attaining the end of perfect joy, whose true and genuine appearance she confesses to have been changed into an elder one.<sup>g</sup>

17. (Gen. xviii. 13-14) Why is Sarah, as it were, rebuked, while Abraham laughed and was not rebuked ? For (Scripture) says, " And the Lord said to Abraham, Why is it that<sup>h</sup> Sarah laughed, saying,<sup>i</sup> Shall I then truly bear, and<sup>j</sup> I am old ? Can it be that anything is impossible for God ? "

That the divine words are deeds and powers is clear from the preceding, for there is no impossibility<sup>k</sup> for the Deity.

<sup>a</sup> i.e. merely external laughter, cf. De Mut. Nom. 169 κᾶν προσποιῆται τῷ προσώπῳ μειδιᾶν.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ ἀρετή.

<sup>c</sup> Aaron, in Ex. iv. 14. The same verse is cited by Philo in the parallel, De Mut. Nom. 168.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. " spread out " ; Aucher " quod superat."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher omits the last four words.

<sup>f</sup> Sarah.

<sup>g</sup> πρεσβύτερον.

<sup>h</sup> Some LXX mss. and ancient versions, including Arm., have τί ὅτι, which closely follows Heb. " why then ? ", but most LXX mss. have simply ὅτι.

<sup>i</sup> So Heb. ; LXX ἐγέλασεν Σάρρα ἐν ἑαυτῇ λέγουσα.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. " seeing that."

<sup>k</sup> ἀδυνατία.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

But the rebuke would seem to indicate praise rather than personal <sup>a</sup> blame according to natural expectation.<sup>b</sup> For she wonders that when all the necessary and plausible conditions have been removed by which birth can be successfully accomplished, a new act should be sown by God in the whole soul for the birth of joy and great gladness, which in Armenian <sup>c</sup> is called "laughter," and in Chaldaean, "Isaac."<sup>d</sup> But Abraham was delivered and, as it were, escaped rebuke and reprobation, being secured by an unswerving and inflexible conviction of faith,<sup>e</sup> for to him who has faith in God all uncertainty is alien.

18. (Gen. xviii. 14) What is the meaning of the words, "At this season I will return to thee at hours,<sup>f</sup> and a son will be born to Sarah" ?

(Scripture) manifestly and very clearly demonstrates that if God returns to the soul, and the soul returns to Him,<sup>g</sup> He immediately shows it to be filled with joy,<sup>h</sup> the name of which is feminine, while its nature <sup>i</sup> is masculine. For sorrowful and suffering is he from whom God is distant, and full of joy and gladness is he to whom He is near. Joy (consists) in seeming to receive the most lucid radiance that is brought from above.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Or "direct" (?)—ἐκ προσώπου (?).

<sup>b</sup> κατὰ φυσικὴν προσδοκίαν, apparently meaning the expectation of the reader of Scripture.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. "Greek."

<sup>d</sup> This is only one of several passages where Philo plays on the meaning of "Isaac," Heb. yishaq = "he laughs."

<sup>e</sup> ἀτρέπτω καὶ ἀρρεπεί λογισμῶ πίστεως vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> LXX εἰς ὥρας. Heb. "at the time of living." See note e to QG iv. 12 on Gen. xviii. 10.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits to render the second part of the conditional clause.

<sup>h</sup> χαρᾶς.

<sup>i</sup> φύσις.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "ita ut pro laetitia lucidiores recepisse se existimabit radios desuper allatos."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

19. (Gen. xviii. 15) Why is it that " Sarah made a denial, saying, I did not laugh, for she was afraid. And He said, No, but thou didst laugh " <sup>a</sup> ?

Appropriately this happened to a pious character,<sup>b</sup> who saw the greatness of God and her incapacity to bear (children) and the imminence <sup>c</sup> (of this event). For where does (Scripture) <sup>d</sup> say that she is able to rejoice wholly <sup>e</sup> with most radiant and unmixed joy, when she is involved in sorrow and fear and in many other misfortunes? But may it not be that rejoicing is peculiar <sup>f</sup> to the divine nature alone, from the territory of Whose kingdom <sup>g</sup> and from its borders are kept out and banished sorrow and fear? And so, when the soul laughs and seems to rejoice, it takes hold of itself,<sup>h</sup> fearing that perchance through too great ignorance or reckless confidence it may drive away <sup>i</sup> something of the divine, to Whom alone is given the portion <sup>j</sup> of a happy nature. Wherefore, accepting in a gracious, affectionate and benevolent manner the mind's modest humility <sup>k</sup> of prayerfulness and reverence, He says to it, " Do not be afraid, for the matter does not call for <sup>l</sup> fear, that thou shouldst make denial.<sup>m</sup> Accordingly, thou hast laughed and wast filled with joy, for I am about to give thee (cause) for rejoicing, like a stream rushing from a spring, or a form of the archetype,<sup>n</sup> or a mixture of unmixed, pure and whole (wine)—like these (shall be thy joy),<sup>o</sup> for the generation of children is by a double number."<sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> This verse is more briefly allegorized by Philo in De Abrahamo 206-207.

<sup>b</sup> θεοσεβει τρόπω. Aucher renders, "eventus accidit exempli pietatis opportunus."

<sup>d</sup> Or "she."

<sup>e</sup> ἀπλῶς.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρόσκαιρον vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> ἴδιον.

<sup>g</sup> βασιλείας.

<sup>h</sup> ἐπιλαμβάνεται ἑαυτῆς.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. "alienate."

<sup>j</sup> κλήρος.

<sup>k</sup> Prob. αἰδῶ καὶ ἐντροπήν.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "is not worthy of."

<sup>m</sup> i.e. of having laughed.

<sup>n</sup> μορφήν ἐξ ἀρχετύπου.

<sup>o</sup> i.e. the soul's joy is an inferior form of its source, the divine joy.

<sup>p</sup> As Aucher notes, this may refer to the double birth, of Isaac and of the soul's joy.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

*20. (Gen. xviii. 16) Why did Abraham "go with them, escorting them" <sup>a</sup>?

Through the literal meaning <sup>b</sup> (Scripture) shows the abundance of the humaneness <sup>c</sup> with which he was endowed, <sup>d</sup> for he had willingly given them whatever was fitting, together with his household, and also he could hardly be separated from them and was so much grieved at parting that he continued and persisted in escorting them; and in this, it seems to me, he took as his example what the poet <sup>e</sup> fittingly says, "It is proper to welcome a stranger when he comes, and to give him a send-off when he wishes to go," for this shows a most generous and agreeable nature. <sup>f</sup> However, it is not proper to leave unnoticed the deeper meaning. <sup>g</sup> When once the soul of the virtuous man <sup>h</sup> has received a very clear impression <sup>i</sup> of God and His powers, <sup>j</sup> it is filled with longing, <sup>k</sup> and hardly or not at all can it be separated and parted (from Him). If He is with it and remains, it adores Him and holds Him and possesses Him. And if He moves away, it follows Him with longing, having a heavenly desire that clings <sup>l</sup> and <sup>a</sup> Philo cites only the second half of the verse, the whole of which reads, in the LXX, Ἐξαναστάντες δὲ ἐκεῖθεν οἱ ἄνδρες κατέβλεψαν ἐπὶ πρόσωπον Σοδόμων καὶ Γομόρρας. Ἀβραὰμ δὲ συνεπορεύετο μετ' αὐτῶν συναποπέμψων αὐτούς. The second half of the verse is commented on also in De Migratione 173-175.

<sup>b</sup> διὰ τοῦ ῥητοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> τῆς φιλανθρωπίας.

<sup>d</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain. Aucher omits the participle in his rendering.

<sup>e</sup> ὁ ποιητής, i.e. Homer in Od. xv. 74, χρὴ ξείνον παρέοντα φιλεῖν ἐθέλοντα δὲ πέμπειν (said by Menelaus to Telemachus on the latter's departure).

<sup>f</sup> κοινωνικώτατον καὶ σύμφωνον (vel sim.) ἦθος. The Greek frag. from Procopius has simply κοινωνικώτατον ἦθος.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ σπουδαίου.

<sup>i</sup> φαντασίαν, or "appearance"—ἐπιφάνειαν.

<sup>j</sup> τῶν δυνάμεων, referring to the two angels; see the preceding sections. <sup>k</sup> πόθου.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "that is glued."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

adheres closely. For not ineptly <sup>a</sup> is it said that "he went with them," but for a more certain demonstration of the powers of the Father, which he surely <sup>b</sup> knew were not even for a little while far off.

21. (Gen. xviii. 17) Why does He say, "Shall I conceal <sup>c</sup> from my servant Abraham what I do?"?

O happy soul, to which God has shown nature <sup>d</sup> and what is in accordance with <sup>e</sup> nature, when the veil has been removed and various works have been revealed for more effective comprehension! <sup>f</sup> This is the consummation of the contemplative life and all the virtues, <sup>g</sup> (namely) to see nature naked and the coverings of nature by which it is concealed, after the Lord and Father has removed them and clearly shown His works to the mind, <sup>h</sup> than which nothing is to be honoured as a finer sight or more worth seeing and studying. For those who do not philosophize properly <sup>i</sup> with the eyes of the soul are blinded and cannot see either the world <sup>j</sup> or the things that are in it. For all things are deservedly <sup>k</sup> spread out, <sup>l</sup> and concealed from those who cannot see.

22. (Gen. xviii. 19) Why does He say, "I know that he will command his sons and his household after him, and they will observe the ways of the Lord to do righteousness

<sup>a</sup> οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>b</sup> Or "constantly."

<sup>c</sup> LXX μὴ (variant οὐ μὴ) κρύψω here renders a Heb. question, expecting a negative answer.

<sup>d</sup> τὴν φύσιν.

<sup>e</sup> Variant "beyond."

<sup>f</sup> Arm. = εἰς ἐνεργότεραν κατάληψιν. I suspect that the original adj. was ἐναργεστέραν "clearer."

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ θεωρητικοῦ βίου καὶ πασῶν ἀρετῶν τελείωσις. One Arm. ms. omits "and all the virtues."

<sup>h</sup> τῶ νῶ.

<sup>i</sup> οἰκείως, or "genuinely"—γενήσιως.

<sup>j</sup> τὸν κόσμον. <sup>k</sup> ἀξίως.

<sup>l</sup> i.e. for the discerning.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

and justice,<sup>a</sup> that He <sup>b</sup> may bring upon Abraham that which He said <sup>c</sup> to him " ?

(Scripture) clearly shows the prescient power of the Existing One <sup>d</sup> in saying, " For I know <sup>e</sup> that he will command." For it is natural <sup>f</sup> for created beings to know various things from their fulfilment, while for God (it is natural) to know future happenings <sup>g</sup> before their beginning. And the virtuous man <sup>h</sup> is deserving of honour and glory, for he not only himself honours virtue <sup>i</sup> but also produces <sup>j</sup> the desire for it in others. And of honour He spoke before.<sup>k</sup> For sight consists in <sup>l</sup> nakedness and removing the veil of nature, and, with the keen eyes that belong to the mind <sup>m</sup> converting the perception of incorporeal light into a clear apprehension,<sup>n</sup> in finding a more weighty promise,<sup>o</sup> which relegates to a second place <sup>p</sup> the aetiological ideas that belong to philosophy.<sup>q</sup> For it is necessary that the soul which clearly knows and is able

<sup>a</sup> LXX δικαιοσύνην καὶ κρίσιν.

<sup>b</sup> LXX and Heb. " the Lord."

<sup>c</sup> Variant " promised." Philo does not comment here or elsewhere on Gen. xviii. 18, in which God promises that all nations will be blessed in Abraham, unless this is referred to in the obscure passage that follows in this section.

<sup>d</sup> τὴν προγνωστικὴν δύναμιν τὴν τοῦ ὄντος.

<sup>e</sup> Here and above the Arm. imperfect tense is used to render ἦδειν, which in the LXX is equivalent to Heb. yāda'ti, having the force of the present tense.

<sup>f</sup> οἰκείον.

<sup>g</sup> τὰ μέλλοντα (omitted in Aucher's rendering).

<sup>h</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν ἀρετήν.

<sup>j</sup> ἐνεργῶν.

<sup>k</sup> The subject may be God or Abraham or Scripture.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. " is."

<sup>m</sup> τῷ νῷ.

<sup>n</sup> τὴν τοῦ ἀσωμάτου φωτὸς μετοχὴν εἰς σαφῆ κατάληψιν περιάγοντα.

<sup>o</sup> βαρυτέραν ὁμολογίαν vel sim.

<sup>p</sup> ὑποστέλλει.

<sup>q</sup> τὰς κατὰ φιλοσοφίαν αἰτιολογικὰς ἰδέας. The meaning seems to be similar to that found in De Fuga 163, " What kind of place is meant (in Ex. iii. 5)? Evidently the aetiological, which He has assigned only to divine natures, deeming no human being capable of dealing with aetiology."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

to comprehend should immediately with most lucid reasoning have a notion of the causes through which something has happened.

23. (Gen. xviii. 20) What is the meaning of the words, "And the Lord said, The outcry of the Sodomites and the Gomorrahites <sup>a</sup> has increased, and their sins are very great" <sup>b</sup> ?

There are two heads <sup>c</sup> under which the whole Legislation <sup>d</sup> is ordered, (namely) evil and virtue. <sup>e</sup> After treating of virtue <sup>f</sup> and the virtuous character which is adorned by it, it passes over to still another form, <sup>g</sup> that of evil, and to those who are its fond inventors and who practise it. Now he who is truly righteous <sup>h</sup> is a faithful priest <sup>i</sup> of their folly and madness. And God is the common mediator <sup>j</sup> and supporter <sup>k</sup> of all, and His tribunal <sup>l</sup> is unbribable and without deception, but only full of truth with which no falsehood is mixed. Now "Sodom" is to be translated as "blindness" or "sterility," <sup>m</sup> (which are) names of impiety and irrationality, for every unworthy man is blind and sterile. And "Gomorrah" (meaning) "measure"

<sup>a</sup> LXX and Heb. "Sodom and Gomorrah."

<sup>b</sup> So LXX, αἱ ἀμαρτίαι αὐτῶν μεγάλαι σφόδρα. Heb. has "their sin is very heavy."

<sup>c</sup> κεφάλαια.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ νομοθεσία, i.e. the Mosaic Law.

<sup>e</sup> κακία καὶ ἀρετή.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. in the preceding verses.

<sup>g</sup> Or "species"—εἶδος.

<sup>h</sup> δίκαιος.

<sup>i</sup> πιστός ἱερεύς, which does not make much sense. Just possibly Arm. k'ourm "priest" is here a corruption of bourm, meaning "lord," "antagonist," "fighter" or the like (Arm. k' and b look much alike).

<sup>j</sup> μεσίτης, a term elsewhere in Philo applied to the Logos.

<sup>k</sup> ἀντιλαμβανόμενος.

<sup>l</sup> βῆμα ὁ κριτήριον.

<sup>m</sup> τύφλωσις ἢ στέρωσις. The same fanciful etymologies are given in De Ebrietate 222 and De Somniis ii. 192.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

true and just, is the divine Logos,<sup>a</sup> by which <sup>b</sup> have been measured and are measured all things that are on earth—principles,<sup>c</sup> numbers and proportions in harmony and consonance being included, through which the forms and measures of existing things<sup>d</sup> are seen. But the measure of evil is a spurious thing,<sup>e</sup> a false name without measure and without value. For nothing is measured or numbered or ordered by an evil man, since he is full of all disorder and unmeasuredness.<sup>f</sup>

*24. (Gen. xviii. 21) Why does He speak like a man,<sup>g</sup> saying, "Going down, then, I will see whether it is in accordance with their outcry which has come to Me that they are acting,<sup>h</sup> but if not, that I may know" ?

This statement is rightly one of true condescension<sup>i</sup> and accommodation to our nature, for God through His prescient power<sup>j</sup> knows all things, including the future, as I said a little while earlier.<sup>k</sup> And He wishes to instruct those who were to act in accordance with the sacred Legislation<sup>l</sup> not to give orders to anyone lightly and immediately but first to enter into matters and inspect, observe and examine them severally with all care,<sup>m</sup> and

<sup>a</sup> μέτρον . . . ὁ θεῖος λόγος. The same etymology is given in De Somniis ii. 192.

<sup>b</sup> Variant "to which" but the dat. reflects Greek dat. of agency with perf. pass. verb.

<sup>c</sup> Or "ratios"—λόγων.

<sup>d</sup> τῶν ὄντων.

<sup>e</sup> νοθεία ἢ κατάχρησις.

<sup>f</sup> ἀμετρίας.

<sup>g</sup> ἀνθρωπίνως vel sim.

<sup>h</sup> LXX συντελοῦνται: Heb. "have done (or "do") completely."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "humiliationis."

<sup>j</sup> προγνωστικῇ δυνάμει. The same phrase occurs in De Vita Mosis ii. 190, where it is said to be God's gift to Moses.

<sup>k</sup> In QG iv. 22.

<sup>l</sup> κατὰ τὴν ἱερὰν νομοθεσίαν, i.e. the Mosaic Law.

<sup>m</sup> πάσῃ ἀκριβείᾳ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

not to be deceived by obvious appearances.<sup>a</sup> For there are some things that appear fair and just, and after they depart and recede, are shameful and unjust. And on the other hand, things which seem evil and deserving of condemnation are found through selective tests to be virtuous and very praiseworthy. It is, therefore, an excellent doctrine of the good life that He announces and legislates,<sup>b</sup> (namely) that one should not lightly and immediately give credence to any appearance before examining it with wise reflexion<sup>c</sup> to see what sort of thing it is in truth. For the first impression<sup>d</sup> is deceptive. And so, no one among men, especially princes, should be ashamed of not knowing, since in the case of an appearance that one encounters one is not able to attain the real truth that is invisible. (And therefore Scripture) represents the ruler and sovereign of the universe as not believing beforehand but as inquiring and examining whether the facts follow rumour or whether they say some things that deserve condemnation, and do other things that are not reprehensible. For many who speak evil act virtuously, and (many) who profess goodness violate the law through their acts. And this must be carefully ascertained by him who is destined to be the champion<sup>e</sup> of human affairs in sincerity.<sup>f</sup>

25. (Gen. xviii. 22) Why does (Scripture) again say in

<sup>a</sup> This sentence is briefly paraphrased by Procopius ; see Appendix A.

<sup>b</sup> νομοθετεί.

<sup>c</sup> λογισμῶ τῆς σοφίας.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. has držoumn (= ἐπιβουλή) which Aucher correctly renders as "fraudatio" (except that he seems to confuse subject and predicate). But ἐπιβουλή is clearly an error for ἐπιβολή, here meaning "first impression," as in De Vita Moysis i. 26 τὰς πρώτας τῆς ψυχῆς ἐπιβολάς τε καὶ ὄρμὰς ὡς ἀφηνιαστὴν ἵππον ἐπετήρει.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "mediator of help."

<sup>f</sup> καθαρῶς: variant "in human fashion."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

the singular, " And Abraham was still <sup>a</sup> standing before the Lord " <sup>b</sup> ?

Again <sup>c</sup> the soul becomes filled with God, <sup>d</sup> worshipping, admiring and honouring the Cause <sup>e</sup> above His powers, and also standing still in His likeness, for constancy in the truth is immovable and enduring. And so it was now necessary to introduce him in the fashion of a suppliant servant, <sup>f</sup> standing before Him who Was about to inflict punishment upon the impious in order that the human race might not be altogether destroyed but might have some worthy and God-loving <sup>g</sup> example, whose prayers, since He who was entreated was benevolent, He did not disregard. Wherefore He gave him understanding, <sup>h</sup> for not without the assent of divine providence was he about to make entreaty, but He used the wise man <sup>i</sup> as a foundation and base <sup>j</sup> for showing beneficence to those who were worthy of receiving kindness, and for demonstrating two virtues, the power of unconquerable sovereignty and that of righteous judgment, <sup>k</sup> suitably tempered with a familiar gentleness. <sup>l</sup>

26. (Gen. xviii. 23) What is the meaning of the words, " And approaching, Abraham said, Thou wilt not destroy

<sup>a</sup> Some LXX mss. and ancient versions, like Philo, follow the Heb. in reading " still " ; most LXX mss. omit it.

<sup>b</sup> Philo does not comment on the first half of the verse, which reads " And departing from there, the men went to Sodom." The second half of the verse is briefly alluded to in De Cherubim 18, De Poster. Caini 27 and De Somniis ii. 226.

<sup>c</sup> Or " turning."

<sup>d</sup> ἐνθεος γίνεται or θεοφορεῖται.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ Αἴτιον, i.e. God, as elsewhere in Philo.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, " hunc servum supplicantem in exemplum adducere."

<sup>g</sup> Or " God-beloved "—φιλόθεος or θεόφιλος.

<sup>h</sup> διάνοιαν or " mind "—νοῦν.

<sup>i</sup> τῷ σοφῷ.

<sup>j</sup> ὡς θεμελίῳ καὶ βάσει.

<sup>k</sup> δικαιοκρισίας.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. " with a familiarity (οἰκειότητι) of gentleness."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the righteous with the impious, and shall the righteous be as the unrighteous?"<sup>a</sup>?

The literal meaning<sup>b</sup> is clear. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> man is said to be close to<sup>d</sup> God rather figuratively but not in the proper sense.<sup>e</sup> For He is far from, and away from, the body, and never even comes into our mind, for a mortal and dissoluble substance<sup>f</sup> is separated and far removed from an uncreated and undisturbed nature. Nevertheless, the sovereign part of the soul,<sup>g</sup> which is called the mind,<sup>h</sup> and has the dignity and capacity to be close (to God), becomes worthy of travelling<sup>i</sup> with Him who is entreated, and offers Him, together with his entreaties, great praise for His benevolence and kindness and love of man.<sup>j</sup> For he entreats Him not to destroy the righteous together with the impious, nor thought with thought.<sup>k</sup> But it seems to me that the uncorrupted and righteous character, in which there is no admixture of unrighteousness, is removed from the argument that is now put before us. For it is to be firmly believed<sup>l</sup> that such a person is worthy of salvation<sup>m</sup> and will by all means be saved.<sup>n</sup> But he trembles and shudders for the man who is mixed and jumbled up<sup>o</sup> and, as it were, (both) righteous and unrighteous. For he hopes that such a

<sup>a</sup> Philo follows the LXX against the Heb. in including the clause, καὶ ἔσται ὁ δίκαιος ὡς ἀσεβής (except that for ἀσεβής Arm. has ἄδικος). The verse is cited in part in Leg. All. iii. 9, De Cherubim 18, De Poster. Caini 27 and De Migratione 132.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "to be beside" (παρεῖναι) or "to touch" (ἄπτεσθαι).

<sup>e</sup> τροπικώτερον <ἀλλ'> οὐ κυρίως. <sup>f</sup> οὐσία.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ τῆς ψυχῆς ἡγεμονικόν, a common Stoic term in Philo.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ νοῦς. <sup>i</sup> τῆς ὁδοιπορίας.

<sup>j</sup> τῆς φιλανθρωπίας.

<sup>k</sup> λογισμὸν σὺν λογισμῶ, i.e. the thoughts of the righteous together with those of the impious.

<sup>l</sup> Or "he firmly believes." Aucher's rendering is ambiguous and (or because) ungrammatical, "verum mihi videtur quod purum et justum moribus . . . interim a praesenti sermone seponere, persuasus etc."

<sup>m</sup> ἄξιός τῆς σωτηρίας. <sup>n</sup> σωθήσεται. <sup>o</sup> πεφυρμένος.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

person, having a revived spark <sup>a</sup> of brightness and a gleam of the fire of righteousness, can be converted to spiritual health.<sup>b</sup> For he believes it to be better and more fitting that through the beneficent powers of God (which are used) for the righteous the punishments awaiting the unrighteous should be lightened and decreased than that on account of the impious the righteous should be involved.

27. (Gen. xviii. 24-32) Why does he <sup>c</sup> begin with fifty and end with ten? And why does he at the beginning subtract five at a time <sup>d</sup> down to forty, and from then on ten at a time down to the end, (namely) the decad? For he says, <sup>e</sup> "If there are fifty righteous men in the city, wilt Thou destroy them? Wilt Thou not spare the place? And what if there are forty-five? And, further, if there are forty? And what if there are 30,<sup>f</sup> or if there are 20? And what if there are ten? <sup>g</sup>"

Two things he seeks: that the righteous be saved, and also others for their sake. And all the numbers are sacred. Fifty (consists) of a rectangular triangle.<sup>h</sup> And in accordance with its power <sup>i</sup> the prophet <sup>j</sup> proclaims the release <sup>k</sup> in the fiftieth (year). But forty-five is a productive number,

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "revivification of a spark." The same figure of speech is used in connexion with the present verse in De Migratione 122.

<sup>b</sup> ὑγίειαν ψυχικὴν (or πνευματικὴν). The phrase ὑγίεια ψυχῆς occurs elsewhere in Philo.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. Abraham in pleading with God to spare Sodom.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "five five."

<sup>e</sup> Here Philo condenses nine verses.

<sup>f</sup> This and the following number in contrast to the rest are indicated by numeral letters in the Arm.

<sup>g</sup> This passage is alluded to in De Congressu 109 and De Mut. Nom. 228-229, where Philo applies Pythagorean number-mysticism more briefly than here.

<sup>h</sup> See De Spec. Leg. ii. 177 and QG ii. 5 where Philo explains that the squares of the sides 3, 4, 5 (namely 9, 16, 25) add up to 50.

<sup>i</sup> δύναμιν.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. Moses.

<sup>k</sup> ἄφεσιν, i.e. from debt-slavery, cf. Lev. xxv. 10.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

consisting of intervals of three, in accordance with which they first appear as progressions, the arithmetic, the geometric and the harmonic,<sup>a</sup> for the scheme of intervals<sup>b</sup> is 6, 9, 12, 18, the sum of which is 45. And in the same number of odd-numbered days the embryo is formed, rarely in forty, and less (often) in more, for it is productive.<sup>c</sup> And again, in the same number of days is the embryo formed in the womb, in the case of almost (all) nine-month (infants),<sup>d</sup> for in the case of seven-month (infants) it takes thirty-five days, as they say similarly.<sup>e</sup> Thirty (days), moreover, is the lunar interval of separation, the cycle of the moon.<sup>f</sup> And twenty (years is that) of age<sup>g</sup> and of one who has advanced in age and belongs to the elders<sup>h</sup>; and it is the number<sup>i</sup> of military service. And ten is altogether perfect.<sup>j</sup> And through these numbers, which are harmonies in music, all those (numbers)<sup>k</sup> are seen which in all cases<sup>l</sup> are a double ratio, as forty to twenty, or twenty to ten. But through five<sup>m</sup> (they are) the ratio of one and a half to one,<sup>n</sup> (as is) thirty to twenty, while through four<sup>o</sup> (they are) the ratio of four to three,<sup>p</sup> (as

<sup>a</sup> See QG iii. 38.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πλινθίον.

<sup>c</sup> In QG i. 25, ii. 14, iv. 154 and De Vita Mosis ii. 18 Philo says that the male embryo is formed in 40 days. Which number is here meant as "productive" is not quite certain.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "fere in paucis novem mensium."

<sup>e</sup> Where the "similarly" belongs is not clear.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders less literally but more smoothly, "triginta vero mensuale est spatium circuli lunae."

<sup>g</sup> Philo means that 20 years is the beginning of maturity.

<sup>h</sup> So lit.; Aucher renders more freely, "et viginti aetatis norma, qua transacta, inter majores computatur."

<sup>i</sup> i.e. the age.

<sup>j</sup> παντέλειος. Cf. De Decalogo 20 δεκάδι τῇ παντελείᾳ.

<sup>k</sup> What noun is to be supplied is not clear.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "through all."

<sup>m</sup> Where 5 comes from is not clear. Possibly Philo means the fifth (and below, the fourth) proposal made to God by Abraham.

<sup>n</sup> ἡμιόλιος λόγος.

<sup>o</sup> See note m.

<sup>p</sup> ἐπίτριτος λόγος.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

is) forty to thirty. But there is an angular interval <sup>a</sup> of separation, <sup>b</sup> (as is) forty to forty. Therefore fittingly and properly, <sup>c</sup> since he makes entreaty on behalf of the salvation <sup>d</sup> of the city, does he use salutary numbers, <sup>e</sup> since they consist of harmony, and harmony is salutary, just as, on the other hand, disharmony is the cause of dissolution and destruction.<sup>f</sup>

28. (Gen. xviii. 27) Why does he say, "Now I have begun <sup>g</sup> to speak with the Lord, and I am earth and ashes" ?

Those who approach God with a pure mind <sup>h</sup> are especially aware of their own weakness in comparison with the greatness of Him whom they approach. For the God-loving mind <sup>i</sup> will tell forth and confess its humility by its deeds. But we should consider his entreaty concerning earth and ashes as noble,<sup>j</sup> and declare the earth and ashes holy as in the holy offerings and holocausts. And either of these is a symbol of the soul.<sup>k</sup> For earth is goodly and fertile, since the mind of the wise man is fruitful.<sup>l</sup> And the ashes <sup>m</sup> are the other (symbol), for whatever mortal remains were mixed in were, under the laws of piety,<sup>n</sup>

<sup>a</sup> γωνιακὸν διάστημα. Did Philo write ἐνωτικόν ?

<sup>b</sup> Emending Arm. makout'iun (of unknown meaning) to meknout'ean as above.

<sup>c</sup> οἰκείως καὶ κυρίως.

<sup>d</sup> τῆς σωτηρίας.

<sup>e</sup> σωτηρίοις ἀριθμοῖς.

<sup>f</sup> Or "corruption."

<sup>g</sup> So LXX, ἡρξάμην, rendering Heb. hó'altí "I have presumed."

<sup>h</sup> γνώμη or "character"—ἦθει or τρόπω.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ φιλόθεος (or θεοφιλῆς) νοῦς.

<sup>j</sup> The two Arm. adjectives used here render σεμνός.

<sup>k</sup> σύμβολον τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. variant is rendered by Aucher, "sapientis mentem fructificat," but this rendering is questionable. Rather does the variant agree in meaning with the accepted reading except that an impersonal construction is used.

<sup>m</sup> The Arm. translator uses three different words for "ashes" in this section.

<sup>n</sup> i.e. by the sacrificial laws of the Pentateuch.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

tested and examined as is gold by fire. And in his prayers his worthiness remained.<sup>a</sup>

29. (Gen. xviii. 33) What is the meaning of the words, "The Lord went away as He ceased to speak with Abraham. And Abraham returned to his place"<sup>b</sup>?

The one who is begotten and brought into being<sup>c</sup> is not wont to be God-possessed<sup>d</sup> always, but when he has been divinely inspired<sup>e</sup> for some time he then goes and returns to himself. For it is impossible for the soul to remain permanently in the body when nothing slippery or no obstacle strikes its feet. But it is necessary that the most pure and luminous mind<sup>f</sup> should be mixed with the mortal (element)<sup>g</sup> for necessary uses. This is what is indicated by the heavenly ladder,<sup>h</sup> (where) not only an ascent but also a descent of the angels is mentioned. And this is what is said of the prophet,<sup>i</sup> (namely) his descent and ascent reveal the swift turning and change of his thoughts.<sup>j</sup> And thought and change altogether bear a resemblance to those who practise continence<sup>k</sup> for athletic well-being,<sup>l</sup> whom their trainers teach methodically, not in order to do violence to<sup>m</sup> the body but that it may be able to endure necessary labours easily and not

<sup>a</sup> Apparently this means that Abraham's nature was tested and approved by the wording of his prayer.

<sup>b</sup> This verse is more briefly commented on in De Somniis i. 70-71.

<sup>c</sup> ἔνθεος or θεόφορος. <sup>e</sup> ἔνθουσιδάσας.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ καθαρῶτατος καὶ εἰλικρινέστατος νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> τῷ θνητῷ. <sup>h</sup> In Gen. xxviii. 12 ff.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. Moses, in Ex. xix. 17 ff. The passage from Exodus is also referred to in the parallel, De Somniis i. 71.

<sup>j</sup> τῶν λογισμῶν.

<sup>k</sup> ἐγκρατεία: Aucher "studiosam vitam."

<sup>l</sup> πρὸς ἀθλητικὴν εὐεξίαν, cf. De Plantatione 157. Aucher renders, "pro athletica quiete," but though Arm. hangist means "rest" as well as "well-being" the context and the parallel seem to support the latter rendering.

<sup>m</sup> ἐξυβρίσωσι.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

be worn down and afflicted by continuous and frequent labours. This too is what musicians carefully observe in respect of their instruments, when they loosen the strings lest they snap through unrelieved tension. For these reasons nature too has adjusted the voices of living creatures to sing not with only one intensity but with all kinds of variation, becoming lax and tense (in turn). And so, just as music is by its laws adapted not only to distinct and increased intensities but also to medium ones and to relaxations, so too is it with the mind.<sup>a</sup> For when it is wholly intent upon pleasing<sup>b</sup> the Father and becomes God-possessed,<sup>c</sup> it is rightly said to be fortunate.<sup>d</sup> And when it ceases to be inspired,<sup>e</sup> after its enthusiasm<sup>f</sup> it returns to itself and reflects upon its own affairs and what is proper to it. For piety and love of man are related virtues.<sup>g</sup> And these the wise man<sup>h</sup> uses and observes, taking care to be reverent as a suppliant. While God stays, he remains there, and when He departs, he too departs. And the Father takes His departure because of His providential care and consideration<sup>i</sup> for our race, knowing that it is by nature shackled and involved in its needs.<sup>j</sup> Wherefore he<sup>k</sup> saw fit to retire and be alone, for not everything is to be done by the sons in the sight of the Father:

*30. (Gen. xix. 1) Why, when three had appeared, does (Scripture) say, "The two angels came to Sodom at evening"?

To Abraham three appeared and at midday, while to Lot two (appeared) and at evening. (Scripture) indicates <sup>a</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>b</sup> Or "being grateful to" or "worshipping."

<sup>c</sup> ἔνθεος.

<sup>d</sup> εὐδαίμων ἢ εὐτυχής.

<sup>e</sup> κορυβαντιᾶν.

<sup>f</sup> τὸν ἐνθουσιασμόν.

<sup>g</sup> συγγενεῖς γὰρ εἰσι ἀρεταὶ εὐσέβεια καὶ φιλανθρωπία.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ σοφός.

<sup>i</sup> διὰ τὴν πρόνοιάν τε καὶ φειδώ.

<sup>j</sup> ταῖς ἐνδείαις vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> Apparently Abraham, not God, is meant.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

a most natural distinction between the perfect man and the progressive one.<sup>a</sup> For the perfect man has an impression<sup>b</sup> of a triad, a nature that is full, dense,<sup>c</sup> not-empty and overflowing, while the other has the dyad, which is divided and empty. The one perceives the Father between His ministers, the two chief powers,<sup>d</sup> while the other (perceives) the servant-powers<sup>e</sup> without the Father,<sup>f</sup> for he is unequal to seeing and understanding Him who is between and king of the powers. And the one is illumined by a most radiant light at midday without shadow, while the other (is illumined) by a changing (light) between night and day. For evening occupies an intermediate place; it is not<sup>g</sup> the cessation of day, and not<sup>g</sup> the beginning of night.

31. (Gen. xix. 1) Why was Lot sitting at<sup>h</sup> the gate of the Sodomites?<sup>i</sup>

Sodom is to be interpreted as "blindness" or "sterility,"<sup>j</sup> and being seated at the gate is very proper to the progressive man<sup>k</sup> in respect of a symbolical interpretation.<sup>l</sup> The gate is neither within the city nor outside the city; similarly he who wishes to progress is neither within virtue<sup>m</sup> nor outside virtue, but sometimes he is <sup>a</sup> φυσικωτάτην διαφορὰν τοῦ τελείου καὶ τοῦ προκόπτοντος (the Greek frag. has φυσικώτατα διαφόρον, which may have been the original reading). For the distinction between the τέλειος and the προκόπτων see Leg. All. iii. 140.

<sup>b</sup> φαντασιούται, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. has διηνεκῆ.

<sup>d</sup> πρώτων δυνάμεων, see QG ii. 51.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "powers of service."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher inaccurately renders, "virtutes ipsas sine cultu Patri exhibitō" instead of "virtutes cultus sine patre."

<sup>g</sup> The negatives are surprising.

<sup>h</sup> LXX παρά: Heb. "in."

<sup>i</sup> So Arm. O.T.: LXX and Heb. "of Sodom."

<sup>j</sup> The same etymology is given above in QG iv. 23 and elsewhere (see note there).<sup>k</sup> τῷ προκόπτοντι.

<sup>l</sup> πρὸς συμβολικὴν (ἢ τροπικὴν) ἀπόδοσιν.<sup>m</sup> ἀρετῆ.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

among those who, as if within a city, are involved in the usual passions <sup>a</sup> that belong to the soul and are the work of sterility and unfruitfulness and blindness. And sometimes, as if in a desert, <sup>b</sup> he pursues a pure zeal <sup>c</sup> which is without practical concern, <sup>d</sup> and a truly contemplative way of life. <sup>e</sup>

32. (Gen. xix. 1) What is the meaning of the words, "Seeing (them), he arose (and) hastened toward them and bowed with his face to the ground" <sup>f</sup>?

The face in man is uncovered. Now our — <sup>g</sup> especially prostrates itself before an appearance <sup>h</sup> and receives it before the truth. <sup>i</sup> Such is everyone who is not perfect. <sup>j</sup> He admires the visible things that are seen rather than the invisible and unseen things, while the mind <sup>k</sup> grasps these before the senses. <sup>l</sup>

*33. (Gen. xix. 2) Why, when they are invited, do they refuse hospitality, saying, "No, but in the street will we spend the night" <sup>m</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> πάθεισι.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν ἐρήμῳ.

<sup>c</sup> καθαρὸν ζῆλον.

<sup>d</sup> ἄνευ πραγμάτων.

<sup>e</sup> τὴν πρὸς ἀλήθειαν θεωρητικὴν διαγωγὴν (or ζωὴν). Aucher inaccurately renders, "contemplationem veritatis vitae."

<sup>f</sup> Philo slightly varies the wording of the LXX, ἰδὼν δὲ Λὼτ ανέστη εἰς συνάντησιν αὐτοῖς καὶ προσεκύνησεν τῷ προσώπῳ ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν.

<sup>g</sup> Either a word has fallen out after the poss. pronoun, or the text is corrupt.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders unintelligibly, "nostro magis itaque modo nunc factam adorat apparitionem."

<sup>i</sup> Or "in preference to the truth"—πρὸ τῆς ἀληθείας: Aucher renders, "ante certificationem."

<sup>j</sup> οὐ τέλειος, i.e. Lot in contrast to Abraham.

<sup>k</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>l</sup> αἱ αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>m</sup> So the LXX, οὐχί, ἀλλ' ἢ ἐν τῇ πλατείᾳ καταλύσομεν (the last word is rendered literally in the Arm., "we will break up").

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Him <sup>a</sup> they refuse, being unwilling, but in the case of Abraham, the friend of God,<sup>b</sup> who invited them, they accepted. And the reason is that the divine powers <sup>c</sup> accept the perfect man, while to the imperfect man they hardly ever come.<sup>d</sup> And so the "no" (is the reply) of those who refused to come to him. But (in saying) "in the street will we spend the night" they announced that every foolish man is a narrow one, being constrained by love of money, love of pleasure, love of glory and similar things, which do not permit the mind to move in free space.<sup>e</sup> And so (Scripture) excellently presents a law <sup>f</sup> showing that for the wise man every place in the world is spacious <sup>g</sup> for living with and seeing individual things.<sup>h</sup> But he who is unlike this does not have even his own house or a mind of his own but is confused and is treated contemptuously like those <sup>i</sup> who, as it were, enter an inn only to fill themselves <sup>j</sup> and vomit <sup>k</sup> in their passions.

<sup>a</sup> Lot.

<sup>b</sup> τοῦ φιλοθέου or θεοφιλοῦς (Philo sometimes combines the adjectives in a single phrase).

<sup>c</sup> αἱ θεῖαι δυνάμεις, see the preceding sections and QG ii. 51.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "aegre veniunt."

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. agrees very closely (except for one slight difference in word-order) with the Greek frag. printed by Harris, which ends here. The rest of the section agrees almost as closely with another Greek frag. from the same Catena (Cod. Rupefucaldi) printed by Lewy; see Appendix A.

<sup>f</sup> Or "doctrine"; the Greek frag. has δόγμα.

<sup>g</sup> Here the Arm. differs somewhat from, or freely renders, the Greek τῷ μὲν σοφῷ ἀναπέπταται τὰ ἐν κόσμῳ.

<sup>h</sup> Here the Greek frag., reading τῶν κατὰ μέρος, shows that we must prefer the Arm. reading ἰμασθῆν to the variant ἰμασθῆν.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. has ὑπὸ τῶν.

<sup>j</sup> Possibly the Arm. ἰουσθῆν "fill themselves" is an emendation or corruption of λουσθῆν "spend the night" (καταλύωσι), which the scribe did not understand in its idiomatic Greek sense.

<sup>k</sup> Lewy conjecturally restores κορεσθῶσι.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

34. (Gen. xix. 3) What is the meaning of the words, "He forced them, and they turned aside to him" <sup>a</sup>?

Carefully is it said that they did not come in but turned aside. For seldom is there a turning aside <sup>b</sup> of the sacred (and) holy words to those who have progress (but) not wholly perfect acceptance. <sup>c</sup> And the reason for their turning aside was the use of force. For to him who is progressing it is peculiar to attain to a better nature not easily and willingly and with a free and easy letting go, <sup>d</sup> but he is laboriously and arduously forced, <sup>e</sup> whereas the wise man is accustomed to desire wisdom willingly. <sup>f</sup> But the other is disciplined by necessity and unwillingly.

35. (Gen. xix. 3) Why did he <sup>g</sup> alone make for them drink and unleavened bread, <sup>h</sup> whereas Abraham (made) ash-cakes <sup>i</sup> and no drink?

It is said by medical students <sup>j</sup> that the use of drink is not (as) a food but the conveyance <sup>k</sup> of food. And the

<sup>a</sup> LXX παρεβιάζετο (v.l. κατεβιάζετο: Heb. "he pressed") αὐτοὺς καὶ ἐξέκλιναν πρὸς αὐτόν. <sup>b</sup> More literally "rolling."

<sup>c</sup> The syntax and meaning are not clear. Aucher, construing differently and, I think, wrongly, renders, "quoniam pauciter tantum declinatio efficitur sacrorum verborum apud proficientes, non vera perfectissima acceptatio." The general meaning is that Lot, the type of the progressive man, could not receive the divine word as easily as Abraham, the type of the perfect man.

<sup>d</sup> ἀφέσει vel sim. <sup>e</sup> Or "forces himself."

<sup>f</sup> Construction slightly uncertain.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. Lot in distinction from Abraham.

<sup>h</sup> LXX ἀζύμους.

<sup>i</sup> ἐγκρυφίας, see QG iv. 8 on Gen. xviii. 6-7.

<sup>j</sup> παρὰ τοῖς ἰατρῶν παισὶ. Cf. De Josepho 160 ἰατρῶν παῖδες.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. kark' = ἄρμα. Apparently the original had ἄρμα (with smooth breathing), meaning "conveyance" or "stimulus" or the like (?). According to Liddell-Scott-Jones ἄρμα was used by Hippocrates (ap. Photius, p. 533 b) in the sense of taking food.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

passage shows that it is a superfluous enjoyment <sup>a</sup> and not a necessity. <sup>b</sup> And it was proper and fitting for the wise man <sup>c</sup> to prepare the necessary (foods), in which the greatness of nature is determined and circumscribed, <sup>d</sup> while for him who is still under discipline (it is fitting to prepare) the superfluities of sensual pleasure, <sup>e</sup> which do harm rather than good. But he who is not yet perfectly purified does not have anything hidden <sup>f</sup> but (only) what is in the sight of the multitude, because he has taken hold of what is common. <sup>g</sup> But the wise man has many things that are hidden. For it is not seldom that equality is hardly given to plants and herbs, <sup>h</sup> which exhibit the mysteries <sup>i</sup> of the Deity as if they were intelligible, and a hidden and invisible sense. <sup>j</sup>

36. (Gen. xix. 4) Why did the Sodomites surround his house, from youth up to old man, all the people at once? <sup>k</sup>
All these are causes of their guilt, (namely) their age

<sup>a</sup> περιττή απόλαυσις.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "necessary need."

<sup>c</sup> τὸν σοφόν, Abraham.

<sup>d</sup> Syntax and meaning are obscure. Aucher renders, "quibus naturae latitudo conclusa est."

<sup>e</sup> τὰ τῶν ἡδονῶν περιττά.

<sup>f</sup> κρυπτόν vel sim. Philo here makes a punning allusion to the ἐγκρυφίας "ash-cakes" of Abraham.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ κοινοῦ.

<sup>h</sup> The above is a literal translation of the obscure Arm., which Aucher renders (with grave doubt expressed in his footnote), "quoniam non desunt neque in plantis res inaequales."

<sup>i</sup> Or "thoughts."

<sup>j</sup> Prob. δianoίαν.

<sup>k</sup> LXX καὶ οἱ ἄνδρες τῆς πόλεως οἱ Σοδομεῖται περιεκύκλωσαν τὴν οἰκίαν ἀπὸ νεανίσκου ἕως πρεσβυτέρου, ἅπας ὁ λαὸς ἅμα. For "at once" Heb. has "from end (to end)." In De Confus. Ling. 28 Philo cites the verse a little differently, πᾶς δ' ὁ λαὸς περιεκύκλωσαν ἅμα τὴν οἰκίαν, νέοι τε καὶ πρεσβύται, but in the lines preceding he uses the LXX wording ἀπὸ νεανίσκου ἕως πρεσβυτέρου.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

and their multitude and that they had neither harmony nor unanimity in their affairs. The literal meaning <sup>a</sup> is very clear. But the literal meaning has a base and foundation in the deeper meaning. <sup>b</sup> For the traits of soul that are blind and unproductive of wisdom, which (Scripture) calls "Sodomites," <sup>c</sup> surround its connatural home, <sup>d</sup> the body. And old men and youths, making up a single chorus with one accord, take care of it and tend it, <sup>e</sup> as if they were offering abundant food and other sensual pleasures to an insatiable, untamed, mad and unclean beast.

37. (Gen. xix. 5) What is the meaning of the words, <sup>f</sup> "Bring them out to us that we may know them" <sup>g</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>h</sup> indicates servile, lawless and unseemly pederasty. <sup>i</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>j</sup> lascivious and unrestrainedly impure men, raising a mound of desires, <sup>k</sup> threaten with death those who are self-controlled and desirous of continence. <sup>l</sup> To these they say, "Let them come forth from their own wills and from their choice of a constant, seemly and noble way of life in order that we may know them. For they will be persuaded to change (their ways) and gladly accept ours, learning in the

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> See above, QG iv. 31, for the etymologies of "Sodom" as "blindness" and "sterility."

<sup>d</sup> Cf. De Somniis i. 122 τὸν συμφυᾶ τῆς ψυχῆς οἶκον, τὸ σῶμα, similarly De Praemiis 120.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the body.

<sup>f</sup> Spoken to Lot by the Sodomites.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. preposition or preverb and used here prob. reflects Greek συν- compounded with the verb, as in the LXX συγγενώμεθα αὐτοῖς. Philo, like the Arm. O.T., holds more literally to the Heb. "that we may know them."

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "unseemly and male pederasty."

<sup>j</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>k</sup> The "mound," χωμα, is suggested by the picture of the Sodomites surrounding Lot's home as if besieging it.

<sup>l</sup> ἐγκρατείας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

act that souls are not naked and incorporeal<sup>a</sup> so as not to be in want,<sup>b</sup> but have something in common<sup>c</sup> with the body, which lacks many necessities. They should not treat it<sup>d</sup> badly or dismiss it but tame it and domesticate it by offering it the materials that belong to it."

38. (Gen. xix. 7-8) Why does Lot say to them, "Not so, brothers, do not do evil. For I have two daughters, who have not known a man. I will bring them to you, and you shall use them as it pleases you. Only do not do any wrong to these men inasmuch as they have come under the shelter of my roof"<sup>e</sup>?

The literal text<sup>f</sup> very clearly shows that the Sodomites were pederasts. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> in the soul of the progressive man<sup>h</sup> there are some thoughts<sup>i</sup> that are masculine, and some offspring that are feminine. Now he wishes, if it is somehow possible, to save all parts.<sup>j</sup> Otherwise, if his hostile opponents who make war on him overcome him, (he will try) to keep the masculine kind unharmed but will abandon the feminine for the sake of the former. For no one condemns those who for the sake of saving and preserving the better accept the lesser,<sup>k</sup> since, as I have said, they are unable to withstand all

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, "quod non nudaе animae incorporeae sunt."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher rightly renders, "immunes a timore," but the context suggests that the Greek had ἀδεις which was here rendered by the Arm. translator as "without fear" instead of "without want."

<sup>c</sup> κοινωνίαν.

<sup>d</sup> It is not clear whether "it" means the body or the soul.

<sup>e</sup> Philo closely follows the LXX Μηδαμῶς, ἀδελφοί, μὴ πονηρεύσηθε. εἰσὶν δὲ μοι δύο θυγατέρες αἱ οὐκ ἔγνωσαν ἄνδρα· ἐξάγω αὐτὰς πρὸς ὑμᾶς, καὶ χρήσασθε αὐταῖς καθὰ ἀρέσκη ὑμῖν. μόνον εἰς τοὺς ἄνδρας τούτους μὴ ποιήσητε μηδὲν ἄδικον οὐ εἶνεκεν εἰσηλθόν ὑπὸ τὴν στέγην (v.l. σκέπη) τῶν δοκῶν μου.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> ἐν τῇ τοῦ προκόπτοντος ψυχῇ.

<sup>i</sup> λογισμοί.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. of the soul.

<sup>k</sup> Apparently meaning the lesser evil or the like.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

things.<sup>a</sup> Which then are the masculine thoughts? Those which are emulous of wisdom and of all virtue in general<sup>b</sup> and of that which is truly good and alone is good. But the feminine kind, having the position of daughters, are under service to bodily needs and under the dominion of the passions.<sup>c</sup>

39. (Gen. xix. 9) What is the meaning of the words, "They said, Go to, stay away.<sup>d</sup> You have come to dwell as a sojourner<sup>e</sup> and not indeed to sit in judgment"?

Those who gather to make war on the soul, workers of evil and impurity, shamelessly choose a leader and teacher, saying, "O thou, dost thou not wish to come to us<sup>f</sup> who are—are we not?—inhabitants and countrymen? Thou art in need of our ways and shouldst emulate the ways of our country. For our territory is licentiousness, and our law and lawful will is sensual pleasure.<sup>g</sup> And now that we have permitted thee to live in freedom as a sojourner, dost thou dare to resist and rebel? And whereas thou shouldst be quiet, dost thou judge and decide matters, saying that these things are bad, and others better, that these are good, virtuous and honourable, and those are evil, disreputable and dishonourable, changing some into virtue,<sup>h</sup> and applying the measure of evil to the nature of<sup>i</sup> others? In every one of the beings who exist there is desire,<sup>j</sup> and to

<sup>a</sup> Aucher curiously renders, "cunctis satisfacere."

<sup>b</sup> ζηλωταὶ τῆς σοφίας καὶ κοινῇ πάσης ἀρετῆς.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν παθῶν.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. seems to be a double rendering of LXX ἀπόστα ἐκεῖ.

<sup>e</sup> LXX εἰσηλθες παροικεῖν: Heb. "shall one come to sojourn?"

<sup>f</sup> The text is uncertain, perhaps a conflation of two clauses. Aucher renders, "O tu, qui ingressus es ad nos, an non amas (vel, nescis) conversari nobiscum?"

<sup>g</sup> ἡδονή.

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>i</sup> Or perhaps "the measure of an evil nature to." Aucher omits "nature" in his rendering.

<sup>j</sup> ἐπιθυμία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

this must we refer all things on earth. This is the ancient law of the Sodomites, which some boys call their helper,<sup>a</sup> like boys in grammar-school<sup>b</sup> who are unable to receive instruction because of weariness."<sup>c</sup>

*40. (Gen. xix. 10-11) What is the meaning of the words, "Stretching out their hands, the men drew Lot to themselves into the house, and closed the door of the house, and the men who were at the door they struck with blindness"<sup>d</sup>?

Three things they did: they saved their host, they closed the door, and they blinded those who were rising up and were using force.<sup>e</sup> In the first place, they passed judgment upon undisciplined and licentious men so that they might not be victorious through the use of force, and having been defeated, might let go the one whom they were mistreating. Second they kept them—in word, from the house, but in deed,<sup>f</sup> from attaining their desire<sup>g</sup> and its end, which remained.<sup>h</sup> For this is the most terrible of evils, (namely) that passion spreads and grows in the suffering soul. For despair of (attaining) the end is like the remainder of a touch of disease.<sup>i</sup> And there is (only) one cure for those who are thirsty and hungry when their need<sup>j</sup> is prolonged, (namely) to drink and eat. And for those who desire something (the only cure) is to attain it. And third, the judgment of blindness overtakes those who <sup>a</sup> βοηθόν.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν τῇ γραμματικῇ.

<sup>c</sup> Or "labour." Aucher renders, "prae labore." Apparently the meaning is that all work and no play makes for dullness, in the opinion of the "Sodomites."

<sup>d</sup> Philo omits, after "blindness," the words "from small to great."

<sup>e</sup> As stated in the latter part of Gen. xix. 9 which Philo does not comment on in § 39.

<sup>f</sup> λόγῳ μὲν . . . ἔργῳ δέ.

<sup>g</sup> τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. from completely attaining their desire.

<sup>i</sup> Text and meaning somewhat uncertain; Aucher renders, "velut residuum morbi inurentis."

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "hunger."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

have been condemned.<sup>a</sup> This (affliction) would seem to be in the eyes, but in truth (it affects) the soul of those who see, for they are made blind to the appearance of most holy visions. Let the law, therefore, be (invoked)<sup>b</sup> against those who have not seen fit to see nobly and gloriously and in a manner worthy of God<sup>c</sup> that which is noble and pure<sup>d</sup> and divine,<sup>e</sup> and the punishment of being struck with blindness be inflicted (upon them).<sup>f</sup>

41. (Gen. xix. 11) What is the meaning of the words, "And they gave up<sup>g</sup> seeking the door"??

The literal text<sup>h</sup> denotes an excess of licentiousness, for not even when blinded did they lessen in their desire<sup>i</sup> but thought nothing of so great an evil as blindness, and acted madly and wildly in the insanity of desire. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>j</sup> those who pursue desire<sup>k</sup> as their end while pretending that through this they are seeking virtue,<sup>l</sup> will never find an entrance to it<sup>m</sup> but will soon give up in despair, for nothing fights so hard against another thing as does wisdom<sup>n</sup> against sensual pleasure,<sup>o</sup> and the shameful<sup>p</sup> against the best.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τοὺς κατεγνωσμένους: Aucher "devictos."

<sup>b</sup> Probably νόμος ἔστω, as in the Greek frag., which begins at this point.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. has, more briefly, σεμνῶς καὶ θεοπρεπῶς.

<sup>d</sup> Or "seemly."

<sup>e</sup> Here again the Greek frag. has only two adjectives, σεμνὰ καὶ θεία. Aucher's "vultum divinum" is an expansion of the Arm. text.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. has, more briefly, κόλασιν ἐπιφέρειν ἀορασίας.

<sup>g</sup> LXX παρελίθησαν, which, like the Heb., might also be rendered, "they were tired out." The phrase is quoted in De Fuga 144.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> τὴν ἀρετήν.

<sup>n</sup> σοφία.

<sup>p</sup> τὸ αἰσχρόν vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> τῇ ἐπιθυμίᾳ.

<sup>k</sup> τῆς ἐπιθυμίας.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. virtue.

<sup>o</sup> τὴν ἡδονήν.

<sup>q</sup> τὸ ἄριστον vel sim.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

42. (Gen. xix. 12-13) What is the meaning of the words, "The men told Lot to lead out <sup>a</sup> his whole household, for we are about to destroy this place, <sup>b</sup> for," it says, <sup>c</sup> "their outcry has gone up before the Lord, and He has sent us to blot it out" <sup>d</sup> ?

(The phrase) "their outcry has gone up before the Lord" denotes something which is usually found among licentious and intemperate men, and is even greater than impiety. <sup>e</sup> For they do not believe that there is an overseer and inspector <sup>f</sup> of human affairs, nor do they believe that there is a providence <sup>g</sup> over such things as seem good (to Him). <sup>h</sup> And they do nothing else but what is contrary to what He says, and they send forth voices that are hostile to the Father and His truth. But (the phrase) "He has sent us to blot it out" indicates a philosophical law. <sup>i</sup> For He provides the virtues through Himself, but the contraries <sup>j</sup> through His servants. <sup>k</sup> And these are the laws of nature, <sup>l</sup> which He determined from the beginning <sup>m</sup> together with

<sup>a</sup> Aucher supplies "ex urbe."

<sup>b</sup> Variant "this city."

<sup>c</sup> Apparently Philo here parenthetically refers to scripture; Aucher omits the phrase.

<sup>d</sup> Philo here partly paraphrases, partly quotes LXX, which reads εἶπαν δὲ οἱ ἄνδρες πρὸς Λώτ, "Ἔστιν τίς σοι ὧδε, γαμβροὶ ἢ υἱοὶ ἢ θυγατέρες ἢ εἴ τίς σοι ἄλλος ἐστὶν ἐν τῇ πόλει, ἐξάγαγε ἐκ τοῦ τόπου τούτου. ὅτι ἀπόλλυμεν ἡμεῖς τὸν τόπον τούτου ὅτι ὑψώθη ἡ κραυγὴ αὐτῶν ἐναντίον κυρίου, καὶ ἀπέστειλεν ἡμᾶς κύριος ἐκτρίψαι αὐτήν. <sup>e</sup> ἀσέβεια.

<sup>f</sup> ἐπίτροπον καὶ ἔφορον vel sim.

<sup>g</sup> πρόνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, "neque existimant ad suum placitum providentiam esse." In a footnote he adds "Vel, neque putant quod providentia sit illis, qui existimant ita esse." This second rendering can hardly be right. <sup>i</sup> νόμον φιλόσοφον.

<sup>j</sup> τὰς ἐναντιότητας—a punning allusion to the biblical phrase ἐναντίον κυρίου. Philo here means the contraries of nature, mentioned in the next sentence; cf. also Quis Rer. Div. Heres 311 τῶν ἐναντιότητων ἐξ ὧν ἅπας ὁ κόσμος συνέστηκε.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. the angels, as symbols of natural forces here.

<sup>l</sup> οἱ τῆς φύσεως νόμοι.

<sup>m</sup> ἐξ ἀρχῆς.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

the things of creation. But (Scripture) clearly represents the beauty of a just judgment <sup>a</sup> in removing from such a destruction one household which had the sparks and seeds of virtue and had become sojourners <sup>b</sup> among sensual pleasures and passions. Not idly, <sup>c</sup> however, but naturally <sup>d</sup> is it written that "we are destroying <sup>e</sup> this place." For it is proper not only to kill venomous creatures but also to destroy and lay waste their holes and caves, in which it may happen that there remains one that has not been destroyed. And now a similar thing is to be applied <sup>f</sup> to the soul, (namely) that not only is that which pertains to sensual pleasure or anger to be removed and destroyed, but also the entire place of desire and anger, where they lurk, in order that the mind <sup>g</sup> may have paths that are broad and free of fear, with nothing to impede its feet and keep it from right conduct. <sup>h</sup> *43. (Gen. xix. 14) Why does (Scripture) say that when Lot was exhorted by the angels, <sup>i</sup> "he seemed to his sons-in-law to be jesting" <sup>j</sup>?

Those who are in a lavish and unlimited state of wealth and glory and the like, and live in health and strength and vigour of body, <sup>k</sup> and have a store of <sup>l</sup> pleasures (acquired)

<sup>a</sup> τὸ δικαιοκρισίας κάλλος.

<sup>b</sup> πάροικοι.

<sup>c</sup> οὐκ εἰκῆ.

<sup>d</sup> φυσικῶς.

<sup>e</sup> So LXX, but above in the title-question the Arm. has "we are about to destroy."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "fitted" or "harmonized."

<sup>g</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>h</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς κατορθώσεως.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, "nunciante Lot ut monitum habuerat ab Angelis."

<sup>j</sup> LXX ἔδοξεν δὲ γελοιάζειν ἐναντίον τῶν γαμβρῶν αὐτοῦ. Philo omits the first part of Gen. xix. 14 containing the angels' warning that Lot and his family must flee to escape destruction.

<sup>k</sup> The Greek frag. differs slightly, reading καὶ ἐν ὑγιείᾳ καὶ εὐαισθησίᾳ σώματος καὶ εὐεξίᾳ ζωῆς.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "store away": the Greek frag. has κρατούμενοι, which Harris (p. 110 note) would emend to καρπούμενοι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

through all of the senses,<sup>a</sup> believing themselves to have achieved genuine happiness,<sup>b</sup> do not look for change or variation,<sup>c</sup> but laugh at, and mock, those who say that everything which is in the body and outside contains great harmfulness and is short-lived.<sup>d</sup> For, when the Persians ruled land and sea, who expected that they would fall? And again, when the Macedonians (ruled)? But if anyone had dared to say so, he would most certainly have been laughed at as a fool and simpleton. And no less necessary a change awaits those nations that opposed them, though they have become illustrious and conspicuous in the meantime; so that those at whom (others) laughed are beginning to laugh (at them), while those who laughed are becoming (an object of) laughter for thinking that things which are by nature mobile and changeable are immobile and unalterable.<sup>e</sup>

*44. (Gen. xix. 16) Why did the angels, when they<sup>f</sup> were dazed and confused, take by the hand Lot and his wife and his daughters?<sup>g</sup>

Certainty and clarity not only provided<sup>h</sup> those whom

<sup>a</sup> τὰς διὰ πασῶν τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἡδονάς, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. differs slightly, reading τῆς ἄκρας εὐδαιμονίας.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. has only μεταβολήν.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. seems to be a double rendering of ἐπικαίρως ἔχει, the reading of the Greek fragment, which ends here.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. writes "immobile and unalterable" (or "unchangeable") twice, the first time before the ptc. "thinking," where it is out of place. Like Aucher, I have omitted the redundant pair of predicate adjectives.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. Lot and his family.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher, following the biblical text, gives "his two daughters." After "daughters" LXX adds ἐν τῷ φείσασθαι κύριον αὐτοῦ, while Heb. continues still farther with the clause, "and they led him out and left him outside the city."

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "(was?) adapted and fitted."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

they touched with confidence but also prevented the incidence of evil.<sup>a</sup> For just as living beings <sup>b</sup> (are controlled) <sup>c</sup> by natural reason,<sup>d</sup> so too do inanimate beings <sup>e</sup> reverence and fear the words of the Deity <sup>f</sup>; so that they do not harm those who are touched (by them).<sup>g</sup> This is the literal meaning.<sup>h</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> the souls which are governed and led by the holy scriptures <sup>j</sup> can be saved <sup>k</sup> if only (once) having taken hold, they hold on to them. For if they are separated and cut off from them, they will be condemned to misery along with other things.

45. (Gen. xix. 17) Why did the angels who led (them out) say, "Save thyself. Do not look backward and do not stay in all this region" <sup>l</sup>?

It is the custom of teachers, when they explain some

<sup>a</sup> The syntax is very obscure. Aucher renders somewhat differently and more freely, "certa securitas data eis, quos apprehenderunt, non solum confortare eos debuit, sed etiam impediabat eventum malorum."

<sup>b</sup> Or "animals"—τὰ ζῶα.

<sup>c</sup> What verb is to be supplied is far from clear. Aucher's guess "detinentur" is probably as good as any.

<sup>d</sup> ὑπὸ φυσικοῦ λόγου. Aucher's rendering "verbo naturali" is also acceptable.

<sup>e</sup> Prob. τὰ ἄψυχα rather than οἱ ἄψυχοι, since the following verb is sing., and the Arm. translator usually follows the Greek construction of sing. verb with neuter plural subject. ἄψυχα are contrasted with ζῶα in De Ebrietate 183.

<sup>f</sup> Apparently Philo here refers to the (inanimate) evils mentioned in the preceding sentence.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. by the angels symbolizing the words of God.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> Or "words"—τῶν ἱερῶν λόγων.

<sup>k</sup> σώζεσθαι.

<sup>l</sup> Philo closely follows the LXX, καὶ ἐγένετο ἡνίκα ἐξήγαγον αὐτοὺς ἔξω καὶ εἶπαν (Heb. "and he said"), Σώζων σῶζε τὴν σεαυτοῦ ψυχὴν· μὴ περιβλέψῃς εἰς τὰ ὀπίσω μηδὲ στῆς ἐν πάσῃ τῇ περιχώρῳ (Heb. "in the kikkar," i.e. the land around Sodom).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

theory <sup>a</sup> to their pupils, to instruct them to remember it and say it by themselves. And similar to this is what the divine words <sup>b</sup> command, saying, "O thou, behold, on many occasions we have explained worthy things <sup>c</sup> to thee; holding thee by the hand, we have led it <sup>d</sup> on to worthy and useful things. Henceforth, then, do thou move by thyself, having been taught in what manner thou must be saved. Strive to preserve whole <sup>e</sup> all that which is in accord with (our) teaching, willingly and of thine own desire.<sup>f</sup>" This too is what the physician says to the ailing man who has been saved by him, "O thou, I have delivered thee from affliction and I have done everything useful in my art.<sup>g</sup> Now that thou art saved, do not relapse into illness so as again to be in need of another recovery,<sup>h</sup> but keep thyself whole, and enjoy health." Thus, the first command given was, "save thyself," (that is) do not seek <sup>i</sup> salvation elsewhere. And the second was, "do not look backward"—(this being said) philosophically,<sup>j</sup> for the things behind <sup>k</sup> the body are blind and insensitive.<sup>l</sup> And (Scripture) prays that the mind <sup>m</sup> will see and be keensighted and avoid those who are licentious and foolish and atheistic, and, after leaving them behind, will hasten with all its might toward continence <sup>n</sup> and holiness.<sup>o</sup> For many men who are, as it were, carried into port, again go back from there and are drawn into the same harm and helplessness <sup>p</sup> because their withdrawal and abandonment (of these) was not carried out with firm resolution (and)

<sup>a</sup> θεώρημά τι.

<sup>c</sup> αξία vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> ὁλόκληρον.

<sup>g</sup> τῆς τέχνης μου.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "hunt" or "catch."

<sup>k</sup> Or "at the back of."

<sup>l</sup> Cf. De Somniis i. 248 on Lot's wife and her backward glance, περιβλέπεται δὲ τὰ ὀπίσω καὶ τὰ νῶτια, κωφὴν δόξαν καὶ τυφλὸν πλοῦτον καὶ ἀναίσθητον εὐσαρκίαν κτλ.

<sup>m</sup> τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>n</sup> ἐγκράτειαν, here rendered by two Arm. words.

<sup>o</sup> ὁσιότητα vel sim.

<sup>b</sup> οἱ θεῖοι λόγοι.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. thy hand.

<sup>f</sup> ἐκουσία γνώμη.

<sup>h</sup> ἄλλης σωτηρίας.

<sup>j</sup> φιλοσοφικῶς.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

thoughtfulness.<sup>a</sup> And the third divine command was, “do not stay in all this region,” (that is) the mind (not staying) in the body, or the mind (not staying) in the soul.<sup>b</sup> Thus it says, “O thou, if thou dost wish to be of pure character, do not stay, not even in any one place of this region, but pass them all by, in order to pass at once from all harm here, by which the mind is harmed (being) in the body and the several senses. But whatever characters remain in these and stand firm, fall of themselves, for they lean on, and trust in, dead things.”<sup>c</sup>

46. (Gen. xix. 17) What is the meaning of the words, “Escape to the mountain lest thou be seized among them”<sup>d</sup>?

The literal text<sup>e</sup> reveals the destruction<sup>f</sup> of a plain of low-lying (places).<sup>g</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> it seems to be somewhat as follows. When the mind<sup>i</sup> begins to take the higher road,<sup>j</sup> it becomes better and progresses,<sup>k</sup> leaving behind earth-bound and low things,<sup>l</sup> which those men pursue and admire who are undisciplined.<sup>m</sup> But (the mind), becoming light,<sup>n</sup> is elevated to higher things, and looking around observes what is in the air and in the ether

<sup>a</sup> ἰσχυρᾶ γνώμη καὶ λογισμῶ.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. lit. = τοῦ νοῦ ἐν τῷ σώματι ἢ τοῦ νοῦ ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ. Aucher renders, wrongly, I think, “puta intellectum in carne vel affectibus animi.” However, the text is troublesome, and should perhaps be emended from the following sentence.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher “in mortuos,” but the neuter ptc. is indicated by the context.

<sup>d</sup> LXX εἰς τὸ ὄρος σώζου μή ποτε συνπαραλημφθῆς.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>f</sup> φθοράν vel sim.

<sup>g</sup> Perhaps “people” is to be supplied. Aucher less literally renders, “humilioris campi.”

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>j</sup> τὴν ἀνωτέραν ὁδόν.

<sup>k</sup> προκόπτει.

<sup>l</sup> τὰ χαμαιζέλα καὶ τὰ ταπεινά. The two adjectives are used together of external and bodily things in Quod Deus Immut. Sit 167.

<sup>m</sup> ἀπαίδευτοι.

<sup>n</sup> κοῦφος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and the whole heaven together, its substance <sup>a</sup> and movements and harmonies and affinities <sup>b</sup> and sympathies, <sup>c</sup> by which things are related to one another, and this whole world. <sup>d</sup> This ascent is more figuratively <sup>e</sup> called "mountain," but its true name is "wisdom," <sup>f</sup> for the soul <sup>g</sup> which is truly a lover of wisdom <sup>h</sup> desired a vision of higher and more exalted things, by being in ethereal regions. Accordingly, a divine response and warning was uttered, that those who strive after low and base and earthly things shall die in respect of true life—the soul, <sup>i</sup> wandering about in the manner of the dead. But those who desire heavenly things and are borne on high shall be saved <sup>j</sup> alone, exchanging mortal for immortal life.

*47. (Gen. xix. 18-20) What is the meaning of the words, "Lot said, <sup>k</sup> I shall not be able to escape to the mountain lest perchance evils overtake me, and I die. Behold this city is near to escape to, which is small, and it is not small. Thereto I will escape, <sup>l</sup> and my soul will live" <sup>m</sup> ?

The divine word, <sup>n</sup> extending abundant grace, <sup>o</sup> calls up the soul of the progressive man <sup>p</sup> to perfection. <sup>q</sup> But he is still small and, like those whose health revives after a

<sup>a</sup> οὐσίαν.

<sup>b</sup> συγγενείας.

<sup>c</sup> συμπαθείας, in the Stoic sense of cosmic sympathies. Aucher inadvertently omits to render the word.

<sup>d</sup> κόσμον.

<sup>e</sup> τροπικώτερον.

<sup>f</sup> σοφία.

<sup>g</sup> ἡ ψυχή.

<sup>h</sup> φιλόσοφος.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "moriuntur animā e vera vita."

<sup>j</sup> σωθήσονται.

<sup>k</sup> After "Lot said" Philo omits the last few words of vs. 18 and the first half of vs. 19. In the LXX the phrase which Philo renders "and it is not small" is a question. For a different allegory of the phrase see De Abrahamo 166.

<sup>l</sup> In LXX and Heb. the words "thereto I will escape" precede the phrase "and it is not small."

<sup>m</sup> After "will live" many LXX MSS. add "because of thee."

<sup>n</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος.

<sup>o</sup> ἀφθονον χάριν.

<sup>p</sup> τοῦ προκόπτοντος.

<sup>q</sup> πρὸς τελειότητα, cf. De Mut. Nom. 24.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

long illness and who, though they are delivered from the danger of death, are not yet well but still maintain a balance between health and illness, confesses his own poverty <sup>a</sup> by saying that he is not able to depart altogether from his city and from civilization <sup>b</sup> and change to the security of quiet that is becoming to wise men.<sup>c</sup> But it is for him to progress and no longer accept the city and civilization as great and honoured, and to restrain his admiration for them, considering them small indeed but somehow necessary and not a little useful.<sup>d</sup> Thus there are three persons who stand in the middle <sup>e</sup>: the wise man, the progressive man and the wicked man; and the extremes are at war. For the wise man (pursues) <sup>f</sup> peace and — <sup>g</sup> and leisure <sup>h</sup> in order that he may devote himself to following after divine contemplation.<sup>i</sup> But the wicked man (pursues) the city and the excitement of the multitude and the crowding of the city and the stream of men and things as well.<sup>j</sup> For the love of business and greed and zeal to obtain authority <sup>k</sup> are honourable to

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "imbecillitatem."

<sup>b</sup> τῆς πολιτείας.

<sup>c</sup> τὴν τοῖς σοφοῖς ἐπιτηδείαν ἀσφάλειαν ἡσυχίας.

<sup>d</sup> The text is suspect. Aucher renders more freely, "flocci faciendo similia, ita tamen ut non parvipendat ceu necessaria utiliaque."

<sup>e</sup> One expects something like "thus he stands in the middle of three persons."

<sup>f</sup> The verb is supplied from the Greek frag., which begins here.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. here is meaningless; it is either a corruption or misunderstanding of ἀπραγμοσύνην, which is found in the Greek frag. Aucher's rendering, "nescius dimicationis," appears to be a guess.

<sup>h</sup> σχολήν, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. reads ἵνα τοῖς θείοις θεωρήμασιν ἐν ἡσυχίᾳ ἐντύχη.

<sup>j</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly ὁ φαῦλος πόλιν τε καὶ τὸν κατὰ πόλιν ὄχλον τε καὶ φυρμὸν ἀνθρώπων ὁμοῦ καὶ πραγμάτων μεταδιώκει.

<sup>k</sup> For the last phrase the Greek frag. has δημοκοπίαί τε καὶ δημαρχίαί.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

such a man, but quiet is not honourable.<sup>a</sup> But he who is progressive between both <sup>b</sup> moves toward the peacefulness of security ; he is not, however, able to get entirely beyond civilization though he no longer, as formerly, admires the city as a great good but restricts his perception <sup>c</sup> and receives the impression that that which formerly seemed great is a slight and small thing. But the statement of contradiction <sup>d</sup> that the same city is small and not small has a most natural reason,<sup>e</sup> which is in order and follows upon the things that were declared earlier. For the life of the city seems great to him who wishes to please the multitude, but small to the progressive man. And this question has a solution something like this. There are three ways of life which are well known : the contemplative, the active <sup>f</sup> and the pleasurable.<sup>g</sup> Great and excellent is the contemplative ; slight and unbeautiful is the pleasurable ; small and not small is the middle one,<sup>h</sup> which touches on, and adheres to, both of them. It is small by reason of the fact that it is a close neighbour to pleasure ; but it is great because of its nearness and also its kinship to contemplation.

48. (Gen. xix. 21) What is the meaning of the words, "Behold, I have admired thy face also concerning this word" <sup>i</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> τὸ δὲ ἡσυχάζειν ἄτιμον (ἀτιμώτατον in the Greek frag., which ends here).

<sup>b</sup> i.e. between the perfect man and the wicked man.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "aviditatem."

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "of quarrelling."

<sup>e</sup> λόγον φυσικώτατον.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ θεωρητικὸς καὶ ὁ πρακτικός.

<sup>g</sup> In rendering "condecens" Aucher has chosen the wrong meaning of Arm. vayelčakan.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the active or practical life.

<sup>i</sup> Philo follows the LXX rendering, ἐθαύμασά σου τὸ πρόσωπον, of the Heb. idiom which means "I have looked upon thee with favour." Also, LXX ῥῆμα = Heb. dābār, meaning both "word" and "matter." Philo omits the rest of the verse, "not to destroy the city of which thou hast spoken."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

It is proper to accept <sup>a</sup> those who do not boast and do not promise more than their ability (to perform). Wherefore the divine and sacred word praises the things said.<sup>b</sup> For many men in their desire for the very great things lose even middling things which it is proper to seek.

49. (Gen. xix. 22) What is the meaning of the words, "Hasten to escape <sup>c</sup> there" <sup>d</sup> ?

The sweet, good and humane <sup>e</sup> word of God gives a share of salvation <sup>f</sup> to him who is able to save himself, and it accepts his decision <sup>g</sup> as true and inexorable when he promises to progress so far as possible. And so it says, "O thou, although thou art not able to walk upon the mountainous and heavenly road, and the middling things that are worthy <sup>h</sup> still attract thee, nevertheless hasten and bestir thyself, henceforth no longer thinking these the greatest. And now that thou hast most firmly established these opinions, so that no longer may anything soft or dissolute change in thee <sup>i</sup> or emanate (from thee),<sup>j</sup> for thou art most firmly established, the avenger and destroyer of the impious will not bring judgment near to thy borders."

50. (Gen. xix. 22) What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders freely, "humaniter recipere."

<sup>b</sup> i.e. by Lot.

<sup>c</sup> Or "be saved."

<sup>d</sup> LXX σπεύσον οὖν τοῦ σωθῆναι ἐκεῖ.

<sup>e</sup> φιλόανθρωπος.

<sup>f</sup> κοινωνίαν σωτηρίας.

<sup>g</sup> γνώμην or "character" (?)—ἦθος, τρόπον.

<sup>h</sup> τὰ μέσα καθήκοντα vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. = μεταλλάττη, perhaps a corruption of μεταλέυη "undermine (thee)." Aucher has "in te haereat," apparently a guess.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "fluat." The verb is suspect.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

“ Because of this he <sup>a</sup> called the name of the city ‘ Zoor ’ ” <sup>b</sup> ?

“ Zoor ” is translated as “ mountain,” <sup>c</sup> which is for the salvation of those who progress, and for the destruction of those who are incurable. <sup>d</sup>

*51. <sup>e</sup> (Gen. xix. 23-24) Why (does Scripture say that) “ the sun went out over <sup>f</sup> the earth, and Lot entered Zoor, <sup>g</sup> and the Lord rained upon Sodom and Gomorrah sulphur and fire from heaven ” <sup>h</sup> ?

The same time is given, to those who progress, for salvation, and to those who are incurable, for punishment. <sup>i</sup> And at the very beginning of day, when the sun rose, He immediately brought down punishment, <sup>j</sup> wishing to show that the sun and the day and light and whatever other things in the world are excellent and precious <sup>k</sup> are appor-

<sup>a</sup> The Heb. idiom often has the 3rd sing. pers. pron. (incorporated into the verb) as an impersonal subject = “ one ” or “ people.”

<sup>b</sup> LXX (followed by Arm. O.T.) has Σηγώρ for Heb. Ṣō‘ar (A.V. “ Zoar ”). In De Somniis i. 85 most mss. of Philo have Σηγώρ or Σιγώρ but two read Σοέρ. Josephus, Ant. i. 204, uses the form Ἰωώρ.

<sup>c</sup> Philo inaccurately connects Heb. Ṣō‘ar with šūr “ rock ” or “ mountain.”

<sup>d</sup> For the Greek original of this clause see the following section, where it is repeated.

<sup>e</sup> Two separate Greek fragments, making up the first half of this section, have been preserved in the *Catena*e, and printed by Harris and Lewy respectively ; see Appendix A.

<sup>f</sup> LXX ἐπί.

<sup>g</sup> See the note on the name in the preceding section ; the Greek frag. here has Σηγώρ as in the LXX.

<sup>h</sup> LXX and Heb. “ from the Lord, from heaven.”

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. has ὁ αὐτὸς χρόνος γίνεται καὶ τοῖς προκόπτουσιν εἰς σωτηρίαν, καὶ τοῖς ἀνιάτως ἔχουσι πρὸς κόλασιν.

<sup>j</sup> Or possibly “ he (i.e. Moses = Scripture) introduced (the theme of) punishment.”

<sup>k</sup> ὅσα ἄλλα ἐν κόσμῳ καλὰ καὶ τίμα.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

tioned only to the wise <sup>a</sup> and not to any of the wicked whose wickedness is incurable. But from heaven, from which come the annual storms and rains for the growth of plants <sup>b</sup> that are sown and (of) <sup>c</sup> trees for the production of fruits for the food of men and other living creatures, (Scripture) says that sulphur and fire came down <sup>d</sup> for the destruction of all things on earth, in order to show that the cause of the seasons and annual times <sup>e</sup> is not heaven or the sun or the processions and revolutions <sup>f</sup> of the other stars but the power of the Father, <sup>g</sup> who presides over the whole world as over a winged chariot, and guides it as He thinks best and most useful.<sup>h</sup> And this marvellous activity <sup>i</sup> shows, not the established <sup>j</sup> habit of the elements,<sup>k</sup> but a certain autocratic and arbitrary power which trans-

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. has τοῖς ἀστέροις.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "of growing things"—τῶν φυομένων, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> One expects the gen. case of "trees" but both Arm. and the Greek frag. have the nom.

<sup>d</sup> Or "streamed down." The Greek frag. has καταρραγῆναι.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. uses the same word twice for "seasons." The Greek frag. has τῶν καιρῶν καὶ τῶν ἐτησίων ὥρῶν.

<sup>f</sup> χορεύει καὶ περιπολήσεις, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>g</sup> ἡ τοῦ πατέρος δύναμις, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>h</sup> Lewy reconstructs the Greek of this clause (not preserved in the Catena) as ἐφεδρεύοντος μὲν ὡς ἄρματι πτηνῶ σύμπαντι τῷ κόσμῳ, ἡμοχοῦντος δ' αὐτὸν ὡς βέλτιστ' ἂν νομίσειεν. On the concept of the world or heaven as a winged chariot, which Philo in QG iii. 3 ascribes to Plato (cf. Phaedrus 246 E), see Quis Rer. Div. Heres 301 καὶ τὸν πτηνὸν ἄρμα, τὸν σύμπαντα οὐρανόν, ἡμοχεῖ χρώμενον ἀτεξουσίῳ καὶ αὐτοκράτορι βασιλείᾳ.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. differs slightly in syntax from the Greek frag., which has ἡ τεθαυματουργημένη πράξις.

<sup>j</sup> As Lewy notes, the Arm. = καθεστὸς ἔθος, while the Greek frag. has καθ' ἕκαστον ἔθος.

<sup>k</sup> With Lewy I emend Arm. tareworsd "annual (seasons)" to tareroḡd "elements," on the basis of the Greek frag.'s ἐπὶ τῶν στοιχείων.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

forms the elements of all things as it chooses.<sup>a</sup> For sulphur and fire are light<sup>b</sup> by nature, and for this reason they are borne aloft,<sup>c</sup> but the innovation of the curse<sup>d</sup> changed their movement into the opposite one, from up (to down),<sup>e</sup> and forced the lightest things to be borne like the heaviest.

And it is fitting to enter into the difficult problem why He not only destroyed the inhabitants, for they were unrighteous and impious, but also overturned and burned down cities and homes and all the buildings. In regard to this it should be said that there is a certain principle<sup>f</sup> in the nature of places and sites, and that there are some, on the one hand, that are privileged<sup>g</sup> and honoured, and, on the other, some that are the opposite. For where wise men<sup>h</sup> dwell there are places called venerable and honourable, (such as) council-halls, shrines and temples.<sup>i</sup> But where licentious, intemperate, impious and unrighteous men (dwell), there are defiled, polluted and impure (places), stained by the pollution of those who live there without <sup>a</sup> Here the Arm. closely follows the wording of the Greek frag., which has τινα δύναμιν αὐτοκρατῆ καὶ ἀντεξούσιον (cf. the quotation from Quis Rer. Div. Heres in note h, p. 327) μεταστοιχειούσαν, ὡς ἂν προέλῃται, τὰ σύμπαντα.

<sup>b</sup> κούφα, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> ἄνω φορεῖται. The Greek frag. has ἄνω φοιτᾷ.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ δὲ τῆς ἀρᾶς κεκαιουργημένον, as in the Greek frag., except that the Arm. has the ptc. in the accus. instead of the nom. case.

<sup>e</sup> The words "to down" are supplied from the Greek frag., which has κάτω.

<sup>f</sup> λόγος τις. Philo seems to mean "principle of congruence" or the like.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders, "ita ut hic praerogativa praevalent cum utilitate," and adds in a footnote that Arm. awar "booty" here seems to mean "utility" or the like. It is more likely, however, that awar, which elsewhere = προνομή, is here used merely as a synonym of haxabašxout' iun, which = προνομία.

<sup>h</sup> οἱ σοφοί.

<sup>i</sup> Construction uncertain because of the curious word-order.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

virtue and in vice.<sup>a</sup> For these reasons that (place) which is honourable flourishes and, in addition, continues to be adorned, while the place of unrestraint is overturned, overthrown and destroyed with its resident<sup>b</sup> men and populace. Moreover, it is also defiled. But the divine word<sup>c</sup> is an example to future generations<sup>d</sup> not to seek to do anything unworthy, (like) those cursed by calamities and burned by fire, in order that they may be admonished by seeing the sufferings of their fellows, and keep them in mind and be fearful lest they suffer their sentence, and that they may be kept from the same impious behaviour. For if men saw this, not with bodily eyes but rather with the mind,<sup>e</sup> they would certainly be converted to virtue.<sup>f</sup> If they cannot be persuaded by reason,<sup>g</sup> at least they may assume moderation<sup>h</sup> through violent and necessary fear. And some will say that there are two examples on earth, (namely) Paradise and the region of the Sodomites, of which one is the immortality of the virtues, and the other, complete destruction through evil.<sup>i</sup> The former (existed) at the beginning and was contemporary with the creation of the world; the other was at the end.<sup>j</sup> For virtue is prior and elder and (is) the activity of nature at the be-

<sup>a</sup> Text slightly emended. The Arm. has the ablative instead of the locative case of the word meaning "vice," probably by attraction to the preceding noun.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders, "legitimis" but Arm. δρινawor here translates ἐννομος in the sense of "residing in" rather than "lawful."

<sup>c</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος, i.e. Scripture.

<sup>d</sup> The punctuation is uncertain. Aucher, while noting this fact, renders, "imo et ab ipso dominico verbo abominationem subit, ut pote futurae deinde generationes moneantur, etc."

<sup>e</sup> τῷ νῶ.

<sup>f</sup> εἰς ἀρετήν.

<sup>g</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ λόγου.

<sup>h</sup> σωφροσύνην.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits the rendering of this clause (from "of which one" to "evil").

<sup>j</sup> At the end of what period is not clear.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ginning,<sup>a</sup> while vice is a child and a minor, being born later to a foolish and unjust soul.

*52. (Gen. xix. 26) Why did his <sup>b</sup> wife look backward and become a pillar of salt and not some other material? <sup>c</sup>

The literal meaning <sup>d</sup> is very clear. For the angels had commanded (them) not to turn backward, and she transgressed the command, wherefore she paid the penalty, though it was not the same as that of the Sodomites. For it <sup>e</sup> was destroyed by sulphur and fire, whereas the woman was changed into the nature <sup>f</sup> of salt. All these <sup>g</sup> indicate unproductiveness and unfruitfulness, for when the region was burnt up, the salt-plain was no less unfruitful.<sup>h</sup> Thus, (Scripture) wishes (to admonish) <sup>i</sup> you by producing even more wonderful miracles.<sup>j</sup> Just as in the case of Sodom, that which was light by nature <sup>k</sup> was made to bear downward like those things which are heavy <sup>l</sup> by nature, so did salt, one of those things which were made for well-being and endurance,<sup>m</sup> become a cause of ruin and destruction.

And now <sup>n</sup> the reason must be told why the angels commanded (them) not to turn backward. They knew

<sup>a</sup> The context makes it likely that "activity" is one of the predicates of "virtue" rather than the subject of an independent clause.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. Lot's.

<sup>c</sup> This verse is briefly commented on in Leg. All. iii. 213 and more fully in De Fuga 121-125, but neither passage is a direct parallel to the present one.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥήτόν.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. Sodom.

<sup>f</sup> φύσιν.

<sup>g</sup> Exactly what "these" are is not clear.

<sup>h</sup> The meaning of the sentence is somewhat doubtful.

<sup>i</sup> The missing verb is supplied in Aucher's rendering.

<sup>j</sup> θαυματουργῶν.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. the sulphur and fire, see QG iv. 51.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher inadvertently renders, "levia" instead of "gravia."

<sup>m</sup> εἰς σωτηρίαν καὶ διαμονήν.

<sup>n</sup> To several sentences in the following paragraph there are Greek parallels in Procopius and the Catenae.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

that some might perhaps rejoice at seeing these troubles.<sup>a</sup> But to rejoice and exult over the misfortunes of others, while it may be just, is not humane.<sup>b</sup> For the future is unforeseeable,<sup>c</sup> and punishment is ———,<sup>d</sup> and suddenly it overtakes (men) everywhere, as do impotence and heaviness. But others might perhaps be soft and weak and might suffer from the misfortune more than they can (bear), being moved to pity and compassion and being overcome (by their feeling) for their friends and acquaintances and those with whom only a short while before they had been living,<sup>e</sup> because it is ———,<sup>f</sup> and they are united by the greatest mutual tenderness and compassion. And so, there were two reasons for their being forbidden (to look backward, namely) that they might not rejoice greatly nor grieve greatly at the punishment inflicted upon those who were suffering deservedly. And there was a third (reason), which I shall at once explain.<sup>g</sup> (Scripture) says, “Do not, O men, look at <sup>h</sup> God when He punishes, for it is enough for you simply to know that they suffered the punishment which they deserved. But to investigate and examine <sup>i</sup> how they suffered is an act of impudence and

<sup>a</sup> i.e. of the Sodomites.

<sup>b</sup> Similarly Procopius and the Catenae, χαίρειν ἐπὶ ταῖς τῶν ἐχθρῶν ἀτυχίαις εἰ καὶ δίκαιον (+ ποτε Catenae), ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀνθρώπινον.

<sup>c</sup> ἀδηλον, as in the Procopius frag., which lacks the words that follow in Arm., down to “But others.”

<sup>d</sup> Arm. anpatkareli can mean only “irreverent” or “shameless.” Aucher renders, “inexorable,” which fits the context, though it appears to be a guess. Probably the Greek had ἀπαραίτητος.

<sup>e</sup> The last part of the sentence reads more briefly in Procopius ἡττώμενοι φίλων καὶ συνηθείας.

<sup>f</sup> Arm. anari means “unmanly” and also “enormous.” Neither meaning fits here. Aucher omits the phrase.

<sup>g</sup> The last clause is missing in the Procopius frag., which resumes here (the Catenae resume with the next sentence).

<sup>h</sup> Procopius and the Catenae have μὴ κατανοεῖτε.

<sup>i</sup> Procopius and the Catenae have only one verb, περιεργάζεσθαι.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

shamelessness <sup>a</sup> and not of reverence, <sup>b</sup> with which it is the part of the rational nature <sup>c</sup> to live most carefully, constantly and familiarly. <sup>d</sup> The above is the literal meaning. <sup>e</sup>

But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>f</sup> the wife of the mind is symbolically sense-perception, <sup>g</sup> which becomes insolent not only in evil men but also in those who progress, <sup>h</sup> and it inclines toward sense-perceptible things which are external rather than the things seen internally by reason. <sup>i</sup> And for this reason it turns back, in appearance to Sodom, but in truth to all the visible possessions, and it returns to those things which are with measure and without measure and to the varieties of their exhalations <sup>j</sup> and to the properties <sup>k</sup> of pleasant odours and tastes and substances, <sup>l</sup> and it changes into an inanimate thing <sup>m</sup> by separating itself from the mind, for the sake of which it was animated. <sup>n</sup>

53. (Gen. xix. 27-28) Why did Abraham "go early in the morning to the place where he had been standing before the Lord and look toward Sodom and Gomorrah <sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Procopius and the Catenae have προπετείας καὶ θράσους.

<sup>b</sup> εὐλαβείας, as in the Greek fragments, which end here.

<sup>c</sup> τῆς λογικῆς φύσεως.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "non vero timoris (Dei), quocum conversari diligentius et constantius familiare est naturae rationali."

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> ἡ τοῦ νοῦ γυνή συμβολικῶς ἐστὶν αἰσθησις.

<sup>h</sup> τοῖς προκόπτουσι.

<sup>i</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ λόγου.

<sup>j</sup> εἰς τὰς τῶν ἀναθυμιάσεων διαφοράς. Is Philo perhaps thinking of the Heracleitian saying (Diels 4 ed., Frag. 12) Ζήνων τὴν ψυχὴν λέγει αἰσθητικὴν ἀναθυμίασιν?

<sup>k</sup> εἰς τὰς ιδιότητας.

<sup>l</sup> Or "humours."

<sup>m</sup> ἄψυχον.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher mistakes the meaning of the last clauses in rendering, "convertens se ac mutans in res spiritu carentes, reposito intellectu, eo quod jam animalis fere merus erat."

<sup>o</sup> Lit. "Sodomites and Gomorrhaites."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

and the surrounding region, and behold, a flame went up from the earth like the flame of a furnace " <sup>a</sup> ?

Wonderfully has (Scripture) described piety, <sup>b</sup> for it is the part of the wise man <sup>c</sup> to stand and not to weary but continuously and unceasingly to pray when punishment is inflicted upon undeserving <sup>d</sup> men. O God-worthy example of holiness and humaneness ! <sup>e</sup> For he says, " If thou seest some men going astray, <sup>f</sup> do not be afraid and do not give up." And fearing the authority of the power that punishes and destroys, <sup>g</sup> he made supplication to the Father. And in supplicating Him, without turning backward <sup>h</sup> but with great prayers placating, venerating and worshipping <sup>i</sup> Him, he ran to meet Him with prayer because of the uncertainty of the future. For just as He is kind and gentle, so too He is terrible ; He is kind in so far as He is God, and terrible in so far as He is Lord. <sup>j</sup> That is the literal meaning. <sup>k</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>l</sup> the mind <sup>m</sup> is firm, <sup>n</sup> as the one God is firm. And behold, when it has become unalterable and unchangeable, all the things which it sees on looking around, which are all sense-perceptible, corporeal and subject to passion—all <sup>a</sup> So the LXX except that for " flame of a furnace " it has ἀτμός καμίνου. Heb. has " smoke " instead of " flame " in both parts of the comparison.

<sup>b</sup> εὐσέβειαν.

<sup>c</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ.

<sup>d</sup> Or " unworthy " ?—ἀναξίους.

<sup>e</sup> ὡ θεοπρεποῦς τύπου (vel sim.) τῆς οὐσιότητος καὶ τῆς φιλανθρωπίας.

<sup>f</sup> I follow Aucher's rendering, " deviantes," though the Arm. verb regularly means " to scatter."

<sup>g</sup> i.e. God's attribute of justice, the δύναμις κολαστήριος or βασιλική, see QG ii. 51 notes.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher freely renders, " indesinenter."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher renders the last verb, " de salute anhelando." The original was probably θεραπεύων, in the religious sense.

<sup>j</sup> The two chief divine attributes of mercy and justice correspond to the appellatives θεός and κύριος respectively, see QG ii. 51 notes.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>n</sup> βέβαιος vel sim.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

these substances it imagines as exhalation, furnace and smoke. For the feverish body is a furnace, and the exhalation (rising) from the senses is like vapour and smoke (rising) from the earth. And the passions <sup>a</sup> which surround us like a flame <sup>b</sup> and burn us up are fire <sup>c</sup> and wind. And these it is not possible to examine closely and to know and see (that they arise) from vice and evil, for they are certain and clear only to the wise man,<sup>d</sup> especially the appearances of the several parts mentioned.

*54. (Gen. xix. 29) Why is it that " God, after wiping out those inhabiting the environs of Sodom,<sup>e</sup> remembered Abraham, and sent Lot out of the midst of the destruction " <sup>f</sup> ?

You see how the literal meaning <sup>g</sup> is. For Lot was saved not for his own sake so much as for the sake of the wise man,<sup>h</sup> Abraham, for the latter had offered prayers for him. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> when the Father remembers a perfect family,<sup>j</sup> He also saves its kinsmen <sup>k</sup> and the progressive man.<sup>l</sup> Excellent and wise, moreover, was it that " He sent Lot out from the midst of the destruction " but not out of all (destruction). For the way of life of the progressive man does not proceed rightly <sup>m</sup> in every respect, but he limps somewhat and falls.<sup>n</sup> And the middle parts are those that guide and are the right ones of those that

<sup>a</sup> τὰ πάθη.

<sup>b</sup> Exact meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, " quae vero flammis circumdant nos."

<sup>c</sup> Variant " odour."

<sup>d</sup> τῷ σοφῷ.

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἐν τῷ ἐκτρίψαι κύριον (Heb. " God ") πάσας τὰς πόλεις τῆς περιούκου.

<sup>f</sup> LXX and Heb. add " when the Lord (Heb. " He ") devastated the cities in which Lot dwelt."

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> τελείου γένους.

<sup>k</sup> τοὺς συγγενεῖς.

<sup>l</sup> τὸν προκόπτοντα.

<sup>m</sup> ὀρθῶς.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher, taking the ptc. as transitive, renders, " impingit."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

lead.<sup>a</sup> Wherefore he has good hope of moving in the right direction and of being (rightly) ordered toward other things. For when his most proper parts <sup>b</sup> are sound, he is able to give a share of salvation <sup>c</sup> to those that are still ailing.

55. (Gen. xix. 30) Why does Lot, fearing to dwell in Segor,<sup>d</sup> go up to the mountain and dwell in a cave with his two daughters?<sup>e</sup>

As for the literal meaning,<sup>f</sup> it is fitting to say this, that he did not think it sound or safe to be near cities that had been burned up. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> when the progressive mind <sup>h</sup> becomes still purer, it removes still farther and separates from the guilty and unlivable way of life <sup>i</sup> and, to speak truly and properly, from destruction. And the mind has two connatural daughters,<sup>j</sup> (namely) counsel and consent.<sup>k</sup>

*56. (Gen. xix. 31-32)<sup>l</sup> Why is it that "the elder

<sup>a</sup> The above is a literal translation of the Arm., which makes little sense to me. Aucher, bravely ignoring syntax, renders more smoothly, "partes autem ejus sunt mediocres in principatu conductrices in rectitudine."

<sup>b</sup> τὰ κυριώτατα μέρη.

<sup>c</sup> κοινωνίαν σωτηρίας.

<sup>d</sup> So LXX: Heb. Ṣō'ar (A.V. "Zoar"). See the note on "Zoor" in QG iv. 50.

<sup>e</sup> Philo condenses the verse, which reads "and Lot went out of Segor and dwelt in the mountain, and his two daughters with him, for he was afraid to dwell in Segor, and he dwelt in the cave, he and his two daughters with him."

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ προκόπτων νοῦς. One might expect ἡ προκόπτουσα ψυχή, "the progressive soul."<sup>i</sup>

<sup>i</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐνόχου καὶ ἀβιώτου βίου.

<sup>j</sup> συμφύτους θυγατέρας.

<sup>k</sup> In De Poster. Caini 175 Lot's daughters appear as symbols of βουλή and συγκατάθεσις.

<sup>l</sup> These verses are differently explained in De Poster. Caini 175-177. A small portion of this section is paraphrased by Procopius.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(daughter of Lot) said to the younger, Our father is an old man, and there is no one <sup>a</sup> who will come in to us as is proper <sup>b</sup> for the whole earth. Come now <sup>c</sup> and let us give our father wine to drink and let us lie with him and raise up seed from our father" ?

This undertaking <sup>d</sup> against the present custom of marriage is somewhat unlawful and an innovation but it has an excuse. <sup>e</sup> For these virgins, because of their ignorance <sup>f</sup> of external matters and because they saw those cities burned up together with all their inhabitants, supposed that the whole human race (had been destroyed at the same time) <sup>g</sup> and that no one remained anywhere except the three of them. Wherefore, in the belief that (they were showing) foresight (and) that (the earth) <sup>h</sup> might not be devastated and remain desolate and that the human race might not be destroyed, they rushed into an audacious act <sup>i</sup> to overcome their helplessness in this matter and their difficulties. That is the literal meaning. <sup>j</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>k</sup> this (passage) must be said (to pertain) to counsel and consent, <sup>l</sup> for these are the daughters of the mind, <sup>m</sup> counsel being the elder, and consent being the younger. For it is impossible for anyone to consent before taking counsel. And these are necessarily and naturally born to their father, (namely) the mind. For through counsel the mind sows worthy, fitting

<sup>a</sup> LXX and Heb. "there is no one on earth."

<sup>b</sup> LXX ὡς καθήκει : Heb. "as is the way."

<sup>c</sup> LXX δεῦρο οὖν.

<sup>d</sup> Or "argument"—ἐπιχείρημα.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "aggressum interim propositum ad morem spectans matrimonii, iniquum est, et novarum rerum molitio enormis; veniam tamen habere videtur."

<sup>f</sup> Or "inexperience."

<sup>g</sup> This last phrase is included in parentheses in the Arm. text, presumably because it has been supplied by Aucher.

<sup>h</sup> I follow Aucher in supplying the missing noun.

<sup>i</sup> παρρησίαν vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> βουλῆς καὶ συγκαταθέσεως. See QG iv. 55 last note.

<sup>m</sup> τοῦ νοῦ.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

and persuasive things in those who are not discordant in aiming at the truth.<sup>a</sup> But consent is that which in respect of appearances<sup>b</sup> makes way for the several senses.<sup>c</sup> For what can counsel do by itself without the mind, and what (can) consent (do)? For by themselves they are ineffective and unproductive, unless they are moved by the mind to their proper business and activities.<sup>d</sup>

57. (Gen. xix. 37) Why did the elder (daughter) on bearing a son call him Moab, proclaiming aloud<sup>e</sup> what ought to have been concealed, (namely) "he is from my father"<sup>f</sup>?

The literal meaning<sup>g</sup> is (an occasion of) exultation and glorification for those who think rightly. For she did not cease (talking) and remain quiet as if (it were) a reproach but prided herself in thought as if on a great achievement,<sup>h</sup> and with delight said, "I have a deserved honour, which the father, who is the mind in me,<sup>i</sup> sowed. And having been sown,<sup>j</sup> he did not disintegrate<sup>k</sup> and pass away but having been born perfect,<sup>l</sup> he was found worthy of birth

<sup>a</sup> ἐν τοῖς μὴ ἀσυμφώνοις οὖσιν ἐν τῷ στοχάζεσθαι τῆς ἀληθείας.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders, "juxta propositum."

<sup>c</sup> ἐκάσταις ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι.

<sup>d</sup> εἰς τὰ ἐπιτήδεια πράγματα καὶ ἐνεργείας vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders, "vocitando super eum."

<sup>f</sup> LXX ἐκ τοῦ πατρός μου. Here, as elsewhere (e.g. Leg. All. iii. 81), Philo follows the popular, biblical etymology of Moab, as if = mē-'āb "from the father."

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> κατορθώσεως vel sim. Aucher renders, "de magna probitate."

<sup>i</sup> Perhaps in the original the prepositional phrase "in me" was connected with "sowed" rather than "the mind."

<sup>j</sup> Apparently the unspecified subject is the son born to Lot's daughter (βουλή).

<sup>k</sup> Arm. vižem has a variety of meanings, including "to miscarry," "to flow," "to be borne," "to be thrown." Aucher renders, "non abortus fuit inaniter."

<sup>l</sup> Or "complete"—τέλειος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and nurture.”<sup>a</sup> And what should be the irreprehensible and irreproachable<sup>b</sup> progeny of the mind and counsel if not good and excellent counsel.<sup>c</sup> Wherefore (the child) who was born was a male.

58. (Gen. xix. 37-38) Why does the elder (daughter) call the son born (to her) “from my father,” while the younger says, “Ammon,<sup>d</sup> the son of my people”<sup>e</sup>? And of the former (why is it that Scripture) says, “This is the father of the Moabites,<sup>f</sup>” and of the other, “This is the father of the Ammonites unto this day”<sup>g</sup>?

Because that which reflects is called “mind,”<sup>g</sup> and its counsel is directed<sup>h</sup> toward the good, wherefore also counsel<sup>i</sup> naturally exclaims, “from my father.” For it is only from the mind that counsel (and) imagination<sup>j</sup> are acquired by me. And consent<sup>k</sup> is nothing (in itself) but gives way to imagination. But to give way and not to retire<sup>l</sup> is a maternal and very feminine thing. For this reason she speaks of the child that is born as “Ammon,” as no longer being “from the father” but “from the

<sup>a</sup> τροφής.

<sup>b</sup> The two Arm. adjectives probably render the single Greek adj. ἀκατάγνωστος vel sim.

<sup>c</sup> The same Arm. word, xorhourd (=βουλή, λογισμός etc.), is here used of the offspring of νοῦς and βουλή as of βουλή itself.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. and LXX “Amman.”

<sup>e</sup> So LXX, Ἀμμάν, ὁ υἱὸς τοῦ γένους μου. Heb. reads more briefly “The son of my people” (ben-ammî), omitting the ethnic name.

<sup>f</sup> LXX and Heb. add “unto this day.”

<sup>g</sup> νοῦς.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. “is thought.”

<sup>i</sup> βουλή, symbolized by the elder daughter of Lot, see the preceding sections.

<sup>j</sup> βουλή (καὶ) φαντασία: variant “counselling imagination,” Aucher renders, “cogitare junctim cum imaginatione,” with a query in the footnote.

<sup>k</sup> συγκατάθεσις, see the preceding sections.

<sup>l</sup> Or “to feel shame.” Perhaps we should emend xorsheln to xorheln “to reflect” or “to take counsel.”

GENESIS, BOOK IV

people." For to give way to imagination, which is consent, is to be close to, and near to, the senses,<sup>a</sup> and sense-perception is in generation and change.<sup>b</sup>

59. (Gen. xx. 1) What is the meaning of the words, "And Abraham moved<sup>c</sup> from there to the land in the south,<sup>d</sup> and he dwelt between Kadesh<sup>e</sup> and between<sup>f</sup> Shur,<sup>g</sup> and he dwelt as a sojourner<sup>h</sup> in Gerar"?

The statement<sup>i</sup> includes the dwelling and the sojourning of the virtuous man,<sup>j</sup> the dwelling being that between Kadesh and Shur, and the sojourning that in Gerar. Naturally does (Scripture) wish to reveal the powers<sup>k</sup> which are in these names, for "Kadesh" is to be interpreted as "sacred,"<sup>l</sup> and "Shur" as "wall."<sup>m</sup> Within the borders of these two is the region of God-loving thoughts.<sup>n</sup> And in this dwell those who are provided with, and surrounded by, virtues<sup>o</sup> as if by an inexpugnable and indestructible wall; and they are nourished by the sacred laws, and rejoice throughout the days of their life with the house-master of wisdom,<sup>p</sup> drinking from ever-flowing

<sup>a</sup> ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι.

<sup>b</sup> Text uncertain; the above is the reading of one ms.

<sup>c</sup> LXX ἐκίνησεν: Heb. "journeyed."

<sup>d</sup> LXX εἰς γῆν πρὸς λίβα: Heb. "to the land of the Negeb" (= "dry land" in the south of Palestine).

<sup>e</sup> Arm. and LXX "Kades."

<sup>f</sup> Philo follows the LXX in retaining the Heb. idiom "between . . . and between . . ."

<sup>g</sup> Arm. and LXX "Sur."

<sup>h</sup> Arm. uses two words to render LXX παρώκησεν. In biblical Greek πάροιχος = Heb. gēr "resident alien," later "convert."

<sup>i</sup> τοῦ σπουδαίου.

<sup>k</sup> τὰς δυνάμεις.

<sup>l</sup> Heb. qādēš (qādōš) "sacred," "holy"; cf. De Fuga 213 Κάδης δὲ ἅγια. <sup>m</sup> See QG iii. 27 for the same etymology.

<sup>n</sup> Or "thoughts dear to God"—λογισμῶν θεοφιλῶν.

<sup>o</sup> ἀρεταῖς.

<sup>p</sup> σὺν τῷ οἰκοδεσπότη τῆς σοφίας. Cf. De Somniis i. 149 where Philo calls God the "house-master of the world."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

fountains. And these the divine word <sup>a</sup> has led to one place. And like sojourners they dwell in Gerar,<sup>b</sup> which is the region of God-loving thoughts.

60. (Gen. xx. 2) Why does Abraham again <sup>c</sup> say, concerning his wife, "She is my sister" ?

Always and everywhere it was a kind of counsel of homage,<sup>d</sup> that among strangers he called his wife "sister." Wherefore anyone who says that this (was done) through levity of character <sup>e</sup> with unwashed feet <sup>f</sup> and with a changed countenance and with complete practice <sup>g</sup> is deserving of condemnation.<sup>h</sup> For they cannot reflect and bear in mind that <sup>i</sup> no one is so stupid and silly (even) among those who go far in wrongdoing <sup>j</sup> (as to think) that he in whom there is perfection <sup>k</sup> would, as it were, wish

<sup>a</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος.

<sup>b</sup> Philo connects the name "Gerar" with Heb. gēr "sojourner," "resident alien."

<sup>c</sup> As in Gen. xii. 13 ff., not commented on by Philo in QG, but cf. De Abrahamo 89 ff. LXX here (Gen. xx. 2) departs from the Heb. in adding that Abraham was afraid to say that Sarah was his wife lest the men of the city kill him on her account.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. seems to render βουλή τις θεραπείας, but one would expect σωτηρίας "safety."

<sup>e</sup> Syntax and meaning uncertain. The verb "says" is in the 2nd pers. sing., and the phrase "through levity of character" may depend upon it rather than upon the verb here supplied. Aucher renders, "qui levitate morum similia dixerint."

<sup>f</sup> ἀνίπτους ποσί, i.e. "impromptu" or the like.

<sup>g</sup> Arm. lit. = πράγμασι τελείοις but the meaning escapes me (see next note). Aucher renders, "re peracta."

<sup>h</sup> Perhaps we should ignore the conjunction "and" before the phrase "with complete practice" and render, "is completely deserving of condemnation."

<sup>i</sup> Taking Arm. k'anzi, which usu. = "for," as here = zi "that."

<sup>j</sup> οἱ ἀδικία προκόπτουσι.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. Abraham.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

to remain in sinful transgression and to celebrate <sup>a</sup> many times those things which when spoken only once bring shame and disgrace. But let not such a streak of impiety come upon us as that we should think unworthy things of the patriarch, father and founder.<sup>b</sup> For a most noble (occasion of) glorification are those things which are seen by nature.<sup>c</sup> For the virtue-loving mind <sup>d</sup> calls virtue "sister" but not "wife," because it seems to be not only a protector <sup>e</sup> of wisdom <sup>f</sup> as if of a wife but by calling it "sister" it shows that eagerness and zeal for this are common to all who are genuine and sincere in their desire for excellence.<sup>g</sup>

61. (Gen. xx. 2) What is the meaning of the words, "Abimelech, the king of Gerar, sent and took Sarah"?

Passing over the opinion of some who believe that the wise man <sup>h</sup> was a betrayer of the laws of marriage, for the king, being impure and licentious and unrestrainedly lascivious, wished to bring shame upon the laws relating to strangers, and took the wife of another, we say that the question is one of virtue,<sup>i</sup> of which all wicked and evil men claim to be champions <sup>j</sup> so far as appearance is concerned,<sup>k</sup> for few are they who desire it and by labour and great effort succeed in acquiring it.

62. (Gen. xx. 3) What is the meaning of the words, "God went in to Abimelech <sup>l</sup> in his sleep at night, and

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "to sing in speech."

<sup>b</sup> ἀρχηγέτου, rendered by two Arm. words.

<sup>c</sup> This sentence is unintelligible to me.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ φιλάρετος νοῦς (or διάνοια).

<sup>e</sup> προστάτης vel sim. <sup>f</sup> σοφίας.

<sup>g</sup> καλοκάγαθίας. <sup>h</sup> τὸν σοφόν, i.e. Abraham.

<sup>i</sup> ἀρετῆς, symbolized by Sarah.

<sup>j</sup> προστάτους vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> Aucher renders, "quatenus ad vulgi opinionem."

<sup>l</sup> LXX εἰσῆλθεν ὁ θεὸς πρὸς Ἀβιμέλεχ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

said, Behold, thou shalt die <sup>a</sup> because of the woman whom thou didst take, and she is living with a man ” <sup>b</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>c</sup> is clearly signified. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>d</sup> it presents something like the following. The foolish man who violently insists <sup>e</sup> that he possesses virtue <sup>f</sup> is convicted <sup>g</sup> by the divine Logos, <sup>h</sup> which enters his soul and examines and searches him and forces him to confess that this <sup>i</sup> is the possession of another man and not his. And most excellently is it written, “ in his sleep at night.” For the foolish soul spends its life carefully shut up <sup>j</sup> in darkness and night and deep sleep, and it has no part at all in wakefulness. <sup>k</sup>

63. (Gen. xx. 4) What is the meaning of the words, “ Abimelech did not touch her ” <sup>l</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>m</sup> indicates holiness and purity. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>n</sup> this must be said. The foolish soul does not wish to touch or come near virtue, and is unable to do so because of its peculiar nature. <sup>o</sup>

*64. (Gen. xx. 4-5) What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> Lit. “ thou diest,” as in LXX and Heb.

<sup>b</sup> LXX αὐτῆ δέ ἐστὶν συνωκηκυῖα ἀνδρί: Heb. “ she is a married woman.”

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ διάνοια.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders, “ falso se persuadet.”

<sup>f</sup> ἀρετήν, symbolized by Sarah.

<sup>g</sup> ἐλέγχεται.

<sup>h</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ θείου λόγου.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. virtue.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher, taking, the ptc. as active, renders, “ omnino includens.”

<sup>k</sup> ἀγρυπνίας.

<sup>l</sup> LXX οὐχ ἤψατο αὐτῆς: Heb. “ did not approach her.”

<sup>m</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>o</sup> διὰ τὴν ἰδίαν φύσιν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

“ And Abimelech said, Lord, wilt Thou destroy a nation (that is) in ignorance <sup>a</sup> and righteous ? ” <sup>b</sup> ?

I do not know whether ignorance is compatible with righteousness. However, there are those who say that (this) is not one of the very clear-cut cases <sup>c</sup> so that it is possible to confirm and clearly define the notion and distinguish that which is not germane. For I would say, “ My good man, not like a voluntary sin’s being unrighteous is an involuntary (sin committed) through ignorance by that very fact righteous, <sup>d</sup> but, it seems to me, <sup>e</sup> it is half-way between both, the righteous and the unrighteous, which by some is called ‘ indifferent,’ for no sin is the effect of righteousness.” <sup>f</sup> But this is what he says concerning this, “ With a pure heart and with righteous hands <sup>g</sup> have I done this.” Of these statements one is true and the other false, for it is true that (it was) with a pure heart, but false that (it was) with righteous hands. For I would say to him, “ Is not that which is actually done <sup>h</sup> enough for thee of unrighteousness ? ” <sup>i</sup>

65. (Gen. xx. 6) What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> The LXX has the ptc. ἀγνοοῦν while the Arm. has the noun “ ignorance ” in the instr. case.

<sup>b</sup> The Heb. reads more briefly “ Wilt Thou kill even a righteous nation ? ”

<sup>c</sup> Lit. “ one of the very pure ones ”—τῶν λίαν καθαρῶν.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag., οὐχ ὡς τὸ ἐκουσίως ἀμαρτάνειν ἐστὶν ἀδικον, οὐτῶ τὸ ἀκουσίως καὶ κατ’ ἀγνοίαν εὐθὺς δίκαιον.

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. has τάχα που.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag. (which ends here), μεθόριον ἀμφοῖν, δίκαιον καὶ ἀδικον, τὸ ὑπὸ τινων καλούμενον ἀδιάφορον. ἀμαρτημα γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔργον δικαιοσύνης.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. “ with hands of righteousness.” LXX (Gen. xx. 5) has ἐν δικαιοσύνη χειρῶν.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. “ that which is through deeds.”

<sup>i</sup> In view of Philo’s earlier statements about Abimelech’s licentiousness, one would expect him here to admit that he had righteous hands, since he had not touched Sarah, but not a pure heart. But see the next section.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

“ And God said to him in his sleep,<sup>a</sup> Indeed I knew that with a pure heart thou didst this, and I spared thee from sinning against Me. Because of this I did not let thee come near her ”<sup>b</sup> ?

All the things that stand in these words are truly divine words and commandments.<sup>c</sup> Now to be pure in mind<sup>d</sup> belongs to him who sins unknowingly and in an unwilling manner, not in a willing one. And those are to be spared whom (Scripture) has shown to be grieved,<sup>e</sup> and those are to be held indifferent<sup>f</sup> who have unwillingly done wrong. And, in the third place, those who have acted unlawfully in divine matters, sin not only against these but also against the Deity, to Whom care and overseeing are proper, and to Whom is all grace,<sup>g</sup> and Who reverses the first impulses of the soul and guides it by His providence<sup>h</sup> lest it drop headlong into wrath and anger, and fall into lawlessness.

66. (Gen. xx. 7) What is the meaning of the words, “ Now give back his wife to the man, for he is a prophet<sup>i</sup> and will pray for thee.” But if thou dost not give (her) back, know that thou wilt die, and all that is thine ” ?

The literal meaning<sup>k</sup> contains a defence<sup>l</sup> against the event that the betrayer of marriage might suffer retribu-

<sup>a</sup> So LXX: Heb. “ in his dream.”

<sup>b</sup> Philo here closely follows the LXX.

<sup>c</sup> ὄντως εἰσὶ θεῖοι λόγοι καὶ ἐντολαί.

<sup>d</sup> καθαρὸν τῷ νῷ (or τῇ διανοίᾳ). Aucher omits “ mind ” in his rendering.

<sup>e</sup> Meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, “ parcendum autem esse illis quos monstravit aegre ferendos.”

<sup>f</sup> ἀδιαφόρους.

<sup>g</sup> πᾶσα χάρις.

<sup>h</sup> προνοία. Aucher renders somewhat differently, “ quae primos animi impetus rebellantes retrovertit per providentiam.”

<sup>i</sup> προφήτης, as in LXX.

<sup>j</sup> LXX and Heb. add “ and thou shalt live,” as does Philo in the parallel comment Quis Rer. Div. Heres 258-259.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀπολογία (rendered here by two Arm. words).

GENESIS, BOOK IV

tion,<sup>a</sup> and especially and peculiarly (a man) of prophecy.<sup>b</sup> Knowing that he<sup>c</sup> would remain without defiling and coming near her, and that his wife would be kept pure, he did not hesitate to call her "sister," (a name that was) sweet, tender, fitting and appropriate among the natives, and not "wife." Altogether excellent also is the manner<sup>d</sup> of speech of the divine command, "Give back his wife," not "sister" or "Sarah," which was as much as to say, "Give back the wife with her body preserved whole, sanctified and holy, not ravished or stripped, and just as she came to her husband from her virgin state, and return her pure and undefiled. If thou dost not return her as a wife, a penal judgment will be set up and increased upon thee and upon all thy house by death." But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> those who profess wisdom, righteousness and virtue in general,<sup>f</sup> just as they can live only with a virtuous mate as wife, so they can live an immortal life of soul. But any who drag her<sup>g</sup> off and lacerate her, wishing to shame her, are not able to shame or lacerate her, but out of self-love and in the senselessness of mad impulses are altogether deprived of virtue, and destroy themselves. And, says (Scripture), if thou wert not placated<sup>h</sup> before, and it seemed pleasant to thee to appear to be seized by

<sup>a</sup> Meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, "littera praesefert apologiam juridicam contra eventus, ita ut satisfactio reddatur legi matrimonii," and in a footnote on "legi," adds, "Verba sunt proditori matrimonii: quod si ad Abraham referatur, indicat eum per vim sibi factam vel invitus [sic] prodidisse alienigenis uxorem suam: si vero ad Abimelech, demonstrat vim ab illo factam, qui tulit Sarram, nolente Abrahamo: sequentia quoque praeferunt ambiguitatem sensus."

<sup>b</sup> Or perhaps "and (this is) special and peculiar to prophecy."

<sup>c</sup> i.e. Abimelech. Aucher, rendering somewhat carelessly, has, "quod intacta remansura erat."

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "face"—πρόσωπον.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> σοφίαν καὶ δικαιοσύνην ὁμοῦ καὶ ἀρετήν.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. virtue. <sup>h</sup> Variant "pleased."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

a mad impulse and passion, at least change, and do not take <sup>a</sup> for thyself what belongs to others. For virtue is a stranger to foolish men if she is thought worthy to be possessed as a wife and not as a sister. For she can indeed be a kinswoman <sup>b</sup> to the progressive man <sup>c</sup> as to a brother, but only to the perfect man <sup>d</sup> as a real wife.<sup>e</sup>

*67. (Gen. xx. 10-11) Why, when Abimelech asked (Abraham), "What was in thy mind <sup>f</sup> that thou didst this?" did he reply, "Because I thought <sup>g</sup> that God <sup>h</sup> was not in this place, and that I should be waylaid and slain" <sup>i</sup>?

Not all the truth is to be told to all men, wherefore also now the wise man manages the whole (affair) with an alteration and change of names.<sup>j</sup> For he knew that as for his wife, she would not be corrupted. This, however, he does not admit but only what it was proper for his interrogators to hear, in order that they might be delighted by the fact that he seemed to be showing that that region had a desire for piety <sup>k</sup> and for respect toward strangers, and that they might be even more mindful of piety and hospitality.<sup>l</sup>

68. (Gen. xx. 12). What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "cut off."

<sup>b</sup> συγγενής.

<sup>c</sup> τῷ προκόπτοντι.

<sup>d</sup> τῷ τελείῳ.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "a wife as a wife."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "seeing what": so LXX, τί ἐνιδών, retaining the Heb. idiom.

<sup>g</sup> LXX εἶπα, retaining the Heb. idiom "I said" = "I thought."

<sup>h</sup> LXX θεοσέβεια, Heb. "fear of God."

<sup>i</sup> LXX and Heb. "that they would kill me because of my wife."

<sup>j</sup> So the Greek frag. (which consists only of this sentence), οὐ πάντα ἀληθῆ λεκτέον ἅπασιν ὅθεν καὶ νῦν ὁ ἀστέιος (the Arm. word used usu. = ὁ σοφός) ὄλον οἰκονομεῖ τὸ πρᾶγμα μεταθέσει καὶ ἀπαλλαγῆ τῶν ὀνομάτων.

<sup>k</sup> τῆς θεοσεβείας.

<sup>l</sup> τῆς φιλοξενίας.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

“ And in truth she is my sister by the father but not by the mother. And she became my wife ” <sup>a</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>b</sup> is excellently clear. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>c</sup> (Scripture) says something most natural, <sup>d</sup> for it introduces virtue <sup>e</sup> as in truth being motherless <sup>f</sup> and having no part in the female sex <sup>g</sup> but being sown only by the Father of all, <sup>h</sup> who needs no material substance for His <sup>i</sup> generation. But the virtue of the virtuous man has the rights <sup>j</sup> of both sister and wife, of a sister because there is one Father for both, Who begot all things, and of a wife because everything that comes about through conjugation <sup>k</sup> is called “ wife.” <sup>l</sup> And so, the righteous man <sup>m</sup> is a consort <sup>n</sup> of righteousness, the ignorant man <sup>o</sup> of ignorance, the sincere man <sup>p</sup> of sincerity, the pious man <sup>q</sup> of piety, and, in a word, the wise man <sup>r</sup> of wisdom.

*69. (Gen. xx. 16) Why does Abimelech say to Sarah, “ Behold, I have given a thousand (pieces of) silver <sup>s</sup> to

<sup>a</sup> This verse is allegorized in similar fashion to the first part of this section (down to “ generation ”) in De Ebrietate 61 and Quis Rer. Div. Heres 62. <sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> φυσικώτατον.

<sup>e</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>f</sup> ἀληθῶς ἀμήτορα.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. De Ebrietate 61 θήλεος γενεᾶς ἀμέτοχος.

<sup>h</sup> Cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 62 ἐκ πατρὸς τοῦ πάντων θεοῦ μόνου γεννηθεῖσα.

<sup>i</sup> Or “ its ” (i.e. virtue’s). Cf. De Ebrietate 61 οὐ γὰρ ἐξ ὕλης τῆς αἰσθητῆς συνισταμένης.

<sup>j</sup> δικαίωματα vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> κατὰ συζυγίαν.

<sup>l</sup> So lit. the Arm.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ δίκαιος.

<sup>n</sup> σύμβιος.

<sup>o</sup> Or “ foolish man.”

<sup>p</sup> Or “ sound man.”

<sup>q</sup> ὁ εὐσεβής.

<sup>r</sup> ὁ σοφός.

<sup>s</sup> So Heb. : LXX χίλια δίδραχμα (δίδραχμον regularly renders Heb. “ shekel,” which is here understood).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

thy brother. Let this be for the honour <sup>a</sup> of thy face <sup>b</sup> and of all women who are with thee, <sup>c</sup> and speak the truth about everything " <sup>d</sup> ?

He is deserving of approval who has imposed also upon himself a penalty for an involuntary sin <sup>e</sup> for the consolation and assuagement and the honour of the face (of Sarah). But the expression " speak the truth about everything " is the injunction of an unphilosophical and unlearned man. <sup>f</sup> For if human life were properly directed <sup>g</sup> and admitted nothing false, it would be proper to speak the truth to everyone about everything. But since hypocrisy of an evil kind <sup>h</sup> acts with authority as if in a theatre, <sup>i</sup> and arrogance is concealed with the truth, <sup>j</sup> the wise man requires a versatile art from which he may profit in imitating those mockers <sup>k</sup> who say one thing and do another in order to save whom they can. <sup>l</sup> Now it is not right for this to happen in all cases. For it is profitable for a

<sup>a</sup> Or " price "—τιμήν.

<sup>b</sup> So LXX : Heb. " covering of the eyes," i.e. an " amende honorable."

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ πάσαις ταῖς μετὰ σοῦ : Heb. " and for all which is with thee."

<sup>d</sup> So LXX : Heb. is somewhat obscure but probably means " and in everything thou hast been justified."

<sup>e</sup> ὑπὲρ ἀκουσίας ἁμαρτίας.

<sup>f</sup> ἀφιλοσόφου καὶ ἰδιώτου παράγγελμα, as in the Greek frag., which begins with this sentence.

<sup>g</sup> εὐώδει, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. " hypocrisy of evil " : the Greek frag. has merely ὑπόκρισις.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. has ὡς ἐν ἑκατέρῳ δυναστεύει : ἑκατέρῳ is evidently a scribal error for θεάτρῳ. Whether δυναστεύει was the reading of the Arm. translator is less clear.

<sup>j</sup> Variant " with art " or " with artifice " : The Arm. is obscure and is probably an inaccurate rendering of the original. The Greek frag. reads more intelligibly καὶ τὸ ψεῦδος παραπέτασμα τῆς ἀληθείας ἐστί.

<sup>k</sup> Prob. an inaccurate rendering of τοὺς ὑποκριτάς which the Greek frag. has.

<sup>l</sup> So the Greek frag. (which ends with this sentence).

GENESIS, BOOK IV

counsellor of evil to speak falsely about everything to his hearers,<sup>a</sup> while a salutary nature is peculiar to virtue.<sup>b</sup>

70. (Gen. xx. 17-18) Why is it that, after Abraham had prayed, " God healed Abimelech and his wife and his maid-servants, and they bore, for God had closed up <sup>c</sup> every womb in the household of Abimelech because of the wife-<sup>d</sup> of Abraham " ?

When the Father wishes to do some kindness to someone, He considers this a special grace to the wise man,<sup>e</sup> as is the case now. For it seems that because the wise man offered up prayers He granted forgiveness<sup>f</sup> of the involuntary sins of the household, even though no one (of them) prayed. Moreover, (Scripture) teaches a doctrine that is beautiful for those who give judgment and for those who are judged, (namely) that the former should not first strike down, or be beforehand in punishing sinners, but should at the very start softly persuade and reconcile the one who seems to have been wronged ; and as for the others, they should supplicate the court not to inflict punishment upon all (of them) for always.

71. (Gen. xxiii. 1)<sup>g</sup> Why was the life of Sarah a hundred and twenty-seven years ?

Each of the numbers which are here contained has a

<sup>a</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, " quoniam consultoris malitiae est omnia falso dicere ad aucupandos auditores." <sup>b</sup> σωτηρία φύσις ἰδία ἐστὶ τῇ ἀρετῇ.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. " closing up, closed up," retaining the Heb. idiom. LXX here has only συνέκλεισεν.

<sup>d</sup> LXX and Heb. " because of Sarah, the wife."

<sup>e</sup> ἰδίαν χάριν τῷ σοφῷ (i.e. Abraham).

<sup>f</sup> Lit. " forgetfulness " — ἀμνηστίαν.

<sup>g</sup> In the extant text of the Quaestiones there are no sections on chaps. xxi and xxii of Genesis. Chap. xxi relates (a second time) the birth of Isaac and the flight of Hagar (see above, §§ 18 ff.); chap. xxii tells of the sacrifice of Isaac (see De Abrahamo 167-177).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

sacred and separate <sup>a</sup> status,<sup>b</sup> (namely) seven, twenty and a hundred. Moreover, it has a wonderful unity and harmony of parts. For the seven after the one <sup>c</sup> by a double proportion produces a hundred and twenty-seven, as follows: 1, 2, 4, 8, 16, 32, 64,<sup>d</sup> which make a hundred and twenty-seven.<sup>e</sup>

72. (Gen. xxiii. 2) Why does (Scripture) specify the place where (Sarah) died, (saying), "She died in the city of Arbok <sup>f</sup> which is in the valley <sup>g</sup>; this is Hebron <sup>h</sup> in the land of Canaan" ?

The translation of "Arbok" is "of four,"<sup>i</sup> and "Hebron" means "being joined with" or "associating with women"<sup>j</sup> and "Canaan" is, as it were, "their appearance."<sup>k</sup>

*73. (Gen. xxiii. 2-3) Why does (Scripture) say, "Abraham came to bewail Sarah and to mourn, and Abraham arose from his dead" ?

Carefully and deliberately <sup>l</sup> does (Scripture) say that he arose, not from Sarah, but "from his dead." And he came there to bewail and mourn, not his dead, but "Sarah." And this is somehow most natural,<sup>m</sup> for it is proper for the virtuous man to separate and dwell far from a body that

<sup>a</sup> Or "consecrated."

<sup>b</sup> λόγον.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the digit 7, see De Opif. Mundi 91.

<sup>d</sup> The numbers are written as numeral letters in the Arm.

<sup>e</sup> The sum of the seven terms in the geometric progression by 2.

<sup>f</sup> So LXX: Heb. "in Kiriath Arba."

<sup>g</sup> So LXX, ἢ ἐστὶν ἐν τῷ κοιλάματι: Heb. omits the clause.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. K'ebron: LXX Χεβρών: Heb. Hebrón.

<sup>i</sup> Heb. 'arba' = "four."

<sup>j</sup> Cf. Quod Deterius 15 συζυγή δὲ καὶ συνεταιρίς Χεβρών καλεῖται συμβολικῶς ἡμῶν τὸ σῶμα.

<sup>k</sup> In De Sobrietate 44-48 "Canaan" = σάλος. The present etymology is obscure.

<sup>l</sup> Or "cautiously."

<sup>m</sup> φυσικώτατόν τι.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

had died naturally by itself,<sup>a</sup> and to mourn for wisdom <sup>b</sup> as though it seemed in actual fact <sup>c</sup> to be separated from virtue.<sup>d</sup> For there is no mourning among incorruptible things,<sup>e</sup> and wisdom is incorruptible, as is all virtue. But in respect of those things which men are able to possess, and which (sometime) fail and are lacking,<sup>f</sup> they must of necessity be grieved. But excellently and carefully does (Scripture) show that the virtuous man did not resort to wailing or mourning but only came there for some such thing. For things that unexpectedly and against his will strike the pusillanimous man <sup>g</sup> weaken, crush and overthrow him, whereas everywhere they merely bow down <sup>h</sup> the man of constancy <sup>i</sup> when they direct their blows against him, and not in such a way as to bring (their work) to completion, since they are strongly repelled by the guiding reason,<sup>j</sup> and retreat. And so it is not fitting for a man devoted to moral excellence <sup>k</sup> to stand (fixed) in prayer when something happens against his will, or to be entirely rapt and moved and drawn toward this, but he should somewhat gradually go toward it, and retire before the end is reached. This holy and consecrated law was written as a warning against those sins that are about to be committed, so that when men are moved by those things which are external, such as the possessions of others, or by the divisions <sup>l</sup> of women or by theft or by plunder or by adultery or by similar evils, they may not perpetrate them but shall think it sufficient <sup>m</sup> to have been struck by these impulses, <sup>a</sup> Aucher omits the rendering of the reflexive pronoun.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν σοφίαν (symbolized by Sarah). <sup>c</sup> ἔργω.

<sup>d</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain. Aucher renders similarly.

<sup>e</sup> ἐν ἀφθάρτοις. <sup>f</sup> i.e. material things.

<sup>g</sup> τὸν μικρόψυχον. <sup>h</sup> Or "deflect."

<sup>i</sup> τὸν βέβαιον vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "by the charioteer, reason." Cf. Leg. All. i. 73 τὸν ἡνίοχον, λέγω δὲ τὸν λογισμὸν.

<sup>k</sup> καλοκάγαθίας.

<sup>l</sup> Or "dissensions." The exact meaning is not clear.

<sup>m</sup> Variant "proper."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and shall move away and take their stand upon the immovable and firm mind.<sup>a</sup>

*74. (Gen. xxiii. 4) <sup>b</sup> Why does (Abraham) say, "I am an immigrant and sojourner among you" <sup>c</sup> ?

But does not every wise soul <sup>d</sup> live like an immigrant and sojourner in this mortal body, having (as its real) dwelling-place and country <sup>e</sup> the most pure substance <sup>f</sup> of heaven, from which (our) nature migrated to this (place) by a law of necessity ? <sup>g</sup> Perhaps this was in order that it might carefully inspect terrestrial things, that even these might not be without a share in wisdom to participate in a better life, or in order that it might be akin <sup>h</sup> to created beings and not be continuously and completely happy. Wherefore in concluding the expression of his thought, <sup>i</sup> he says not ineptly <sup>j</sup> "immigrant and sojourner," but adds, "among you." For truly the lover of wisdom does not dwell, or go about, with any vain or empty things, even though he has grown together with them, (but) is far removed from them in thought. Wherefore the wise man is truly and properly said not to sail, or journey, or be a fellow-citizen, or live, with the foolish man, since the sovereign and ruling mind <sup>k</sup> does not unite, or mix, with anything else. <sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὑπὲρ τὸν ἀκίνητον καὶ βέβαιον νοῦν.

<sup>b</sup> This half-verse is briefly commented on in De Confus. Ling. 79.

<sup>c</sup> ΛXX πάροικος καὶ παρεπίδημος ἐγὼ εἰμι μεθ' ὑμῶν.

<sup>d</sup> πᾶσα σοφὴ ψυχὴ.

<sup>e</sup> πατρίδα.

<sup>f</sup> καθαρωτάτην οὐσίαν.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "by a necessary law."

<sup>h</sup> Aucher more freely renders, "sive ut noscat se cognatum."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "In sealing the thoughts of his opinion" (or "will").

<sup>j</sup> οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ vel sim. Aucher curiously renders, "non simpliciter."

<sup>k</sup> ὁ ἡγεμῶν νοῦς.

<sup>l</sup> The last two sentences are paralleled in somewhat abbreviated form in a Greek frag. from Dam. Par. 754 (Harris, p. 69), identified by Früchtel; see Appendix A.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

75. (Gen. xxiii. 4) What is the meaning of the words, "Give me the possession of a grave,<sup>a</sup> and I will bury my dead before me"?

The literal meaning <sup>b</sup> is clear and well known, but as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> we may explain it allegorically <sup>d</sup>; it is as follows. As it seems, the wise man <sup>e</sup> does not seek a grave, for the body is the grave of the soul,<sup>f</sup> in which it is buried as if in a grave, but "the possession of a grave," that is to say, authority and lordship over it,<sup>g</sup> for,<sup>h</sup> he says, "I shall become master and receive authority, and not be subjected to authority and no longer be, as it were, buried among them as formerly,<sup>i</sup> but rather will I bury (them) far from me."

*76. (Gen. xxiii. 5-6) <sup>j</sup> Why do they say to him, "A king from God <sup>k</sup> art thou among us"?

In the first place, (Scripture) wishes to show that all men, and not merely rational wise men,<sup>l</sup> admire and honour him who is a follower of pure and non-fraudulent wisdom.<sup>m</sup> And not only (is he regarded) as a ruler but as a ruler of rulers and a divine one, and as a king of kings,

<sup>a</sup> Though the Arm. lit. = κληρον τάφου, Philo probably read κτήσιν τάφου, as our text of the LXX reads; similarly Heb. and Arm. O.T. have "possession of a grave." Philo omits "among you" which Heb. and LXX add after "grave."

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> ἀλληγοροῦντες.

<sup>e</sup> ὁ σοφὸς ἢ ἀστεῖος.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ σῶμα τάφος τῆς ψυχῆς ἐστι.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. the body.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher notes that from here to the middle of § 122 there is a lacuna in Cod. A of the Arm. version.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "non amplius, sicut illis ante contigebat, dixerim, quasi vero sepeliar."

<sup>j</sup> This passage is briefly commented on by Philo in De Mut. Nom. 152, De Somniis ii. 244, De Abrahamo 261, and is alluded to in De Virtutibus 216.

<sup>k</sup> So LXX, βασιλεὺς παρὰ θεοῦ: Heb. "a prince of God."

<sup>l</sup> σοφοὶ λογικοί.

<sup>m</sup> ὅς καθαρᾶς καὶ ἀδόλου ζηλωτῆς ἐστι σοφίας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

being excellent and virtuous,<sup>a</sup> and as being elected, not by men, but by God.<sup>b</sup> And, in the second place, (Scripture) lays down a most natural law,<sup>c</sup> which some of those who philosophize<sup>d</sup> have rejected. This law is that no one of the foolish<sup>e</sup> (is) a king, even though he should be master of all the land and sea, but only the wise and God-loving man,<sup>f</sup> even if he is without the equipment and resources through which many obtain power with violence and force.<sup>g</sup> For whereas the man ignorant of the art of the pilot or of the physician or of the musician has trouble<sup>h</sup> with the rudders or with the compounding of drugs and ointments<sup>i</sup> or with flutes and lyres, since he is unable to use any of them for its natural purpose, to the pilot, on the other hand, and the physician and the musician they may be said to be fitting and suitable. And this is proper, since there is a certain kingly art,<sup>j</sup> and it is the most noble of the arts.<sup>k</sup> For he who is ignorant and unversed in the needs<sup>l</sup> of men must be considered a layman,<sup>m</sup> while only he (can be considered) a king who is knowing and experienced.<sup>n</sup> In the third place, moreover, (Scripture)

<sup>a</sup> Or "noble": Aucher "generosus."

<sup>b</sup> χειροτονηθείς . . . ὑπὸ θεοῦ. The same phrase is applied to Moses in De Praemiis 54, where Philo makes a similar contrast between the ideal and the actual king.

<sup>c</sup> νόμον φυσικώτατον.

<sup>d</sup> τῶν φιλοσοφούντων: Aucher "nonnulli sophistarum."

<sup>e</sup> τῶν ἀφρόνων οὐδείς, as in the Greek frag. (which begins here).

<sup>f</sup> Or "God-beloved"—θεοφιλής, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>g</sup> The Greek frag. differs very slightly, δι' ὧν πολλοὶ κρατῦνται τὰς δυναστείας.

<sup>h</sup> Following the Greek frag., which has παρέλκον πρᾶγμα, misunderstood by the Arm. translator as παραδειγματικά πράγματα or the like.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. has only φαρμάκων σύνθεσις.

<sup>j</sup> τέχνη τις βασιλική, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>k</sup> τεχνῶν ἀρίστη.

<sup>l</sup> Or "affairs"—τῶν χρειῶν or, as in the Greek frag., χρήσεως.

<sup>m</sup> The Arm. uses two words to render ιδιώτην.

<sup>n</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) has only τὸν ἐπιστήμονα.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

also tells us this in addition, that the judgments of God are greater than those of men. For men consider him to be their ruler and master who has an abundance of power in respect of corruptible materials,<sup>a</sup> whereas God inspires with all wisdom<sup>b</sup> him for whom no inanimate and irrational materials<sup>c</sup> have any value, when He sees his soul greatly purified and his mind<sup>d</sup> free and unenslaved, and him who has wisdom He inscribes among the greatest rulers and kings. And in the fourth place, there falls under the necessary order of connexion<sup>e</sup> that which pertains to constancy,<sup>f</sup> for the elections<sup>g</sup> of men are inconstant and transitory, changing their direction, now up, now down, in accordance with (changing) customs, events and fortunes, while those of God are constant, and because of their incorruptibility, they make themselves available to law-observant men.<sup>h</sup>

77. (Gen. xxiii. 6) Why do they say, "In our choice monuments 'bury thy dead'?"

The literal meaning<sup>j</sup> is easy to explain. Because of the honour in which he was held they agreed to give him a choice burial-place. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>k</sup> in a wicked man the body lives when it is animated by desire

<sup>a</sup> ἐν φθαρταῖς ὕλαις (for this standing expression see Leisegang's Index Philonis, p. 794, col. a).

<sup>b</sup> αὐτῷ πᾶσαν σοφίαν ἐμπνέι. Arm. hnčem means "resound" and also "inspire" (like šnčem). Aucher renders, "omnino eum sapientia adornat," which is more nearly correct than his alternate rendering (in his footnote), "sicut sapientiam celebrat."

<sup>c</sup> οὐτίνα τῶν ἀψύχων καὶ ἀλόγων ὑλικά.

<sup>d</sup> τὴν ψυχὴν . . . καὶ τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>e</sup> εἰς τὴν κατὰ εἰρμὸν τάξιν ἀναγκαίως.

<sup>f</sup> πρὸς βεβαίωσιν vel sim.

<sup>g</sup> αἱ χειροτονίαι.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders inaccurately, "exhibentes illis legitimam constantiam."

<sup>i</sup> So LXX, ἐν τοῖς ἐκλεκτοῖς μνημείοις ἡμῶν.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and sensual pleasure <sup>a</sup> and whatever else it delights in, whereas in a virtuous man <sup>b</sup> it is dead, for he is a man of frugality and is self-controlled and endures the hunger of continence, <sup>c</sup> so that it is not wide of the mark to say that the soul of the wise man, <sup>d</sup> having a body that is inanimate and heavy, like a bronze statue, is always carrying a corpse. <sup>e</sup> And so those who are opposite characters say, <sup>f</sup> "Give over to us the care and concern for this, <sup>g</sup> that it may have the choice of everything and be worthy of remembrance <sup>h</sup> through food and drink and clothing and whatever else belongs to a sumptuous, luxurious and enjoyable life. But he is displeased by these words, and biding his time, takes greater care, <sup>i</sup> mollifying them all <sup>j</sup> through prostration, <sup>k</sup> and conciliating and embracing <sup>l</sup> them so far as he thinks it suitable and proper by way of invocation, <sup>m</sup> and that he may not send them away before he has removed <sup>n</sup> his dead, not giving the body into their hands, and taking possession <sup>o</sup> of the burial-place but not the burial-place (itself). <sup>p</sup> Moreover, it is proper to observe also that the characters

<sup>a</sup> ἐπιθυμία καὶ ἡδονῇ ψυχωθέν.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν τῷ σπουδαίῳ.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders somewhat less literally, "praeferens in se famem mediocritatis et temperatae continentiae."

<sup>d</sup> ἡ τοῦ σοφοῦ (οἱ ἀστέίου) ψυχῆ.

<sup>e</sup> νεκροφορεῖ. Cf. De Agricultura 25 <ἡ ψυχῆ> οὐκ ἀποτίθεται νεκροφοροῦσα.

<sup>f</sup> Prob. οἱ ἐναντίοι τρόποι, meaning the Hittites as types of materialists. Aucher renders less literally, "porro exempla contraria ponuntur, dicentes."

<sup>g</sup> i.e. the body.

<sup>h</sup> Philo plays on the similarity of μνήμη and μνημεῖον.

<sup>i</sup> The sense is not altogether clear.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher more freely renders, "adversarios."

<sup>k</sup> διὰ προσκνήσεως. Cf. LXX of Gen. xxiii. 7 Ἀβραὰμ προσεκύνησεν τῷ λαῷ τῆς γῆς, τοῖς υἱοῖς Χέτ, on which Philo comments in De Somniis ii. 89-92.

<sup>l</sup> καταφιλῶν.

<sup>m</sup> κατὰ πρόσκλησιν vel sim. : Aucher "ad alliciendum."

<sup>n</sup> Aucher "deponat."

<sup>o</sup> κτήσιν.

<sup>p</sup> See above, § 75.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

who speak <sup>a</sup> call the burial-place a "monument," <sup>b</sup> but the wise man calls it "the possession of a monument" or "the property of a burial-place." Why? Because the former consider only the body and the various (aspects) of the body worthy of remembrance, <sup>c</sup> while he (so considers) not this but lordship over it and possession of it, as was said before. <sup>d</sup>

78. (Gen. xxiii. 8-9) <sup>e</sup> Why does (Abraham) say, "If you have in your mind <sup>f</sup> to bury my dead before me, <sup>g</sup> listen to me and speak of me <sup>h</sup> to Ephron, the son of Sahar, <sup>i</sup> and let him give me the double cave <sup>j</sup> belonging to him, which is in the portion of his field. <sup>k</sup> For as much silver as it is worth <sup>l</sup> let him give it to me and to you <sup>m</sup> as a possession of a monument" <sup>n</sup> ?

Having shown his wisdom and presented his case by first prostrating himself, <sup>o</sup> he says, "You who do not use speech" <sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "quod qui loquuntur sicut exempla."

<sup>b</sup> μνημείον.

<sup>c</sup> See note h, p. 356.

<sup>d</sup> In § 75.

<sup>e</sup> The "double cave" mentioned in these verses is briefly allegorized in De Poster. Caini 62 and De Somniis ii. 26.

<sup>f</sup> ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ ὑμῶν, as in LXX.

<sup>g</sup> ἀπὸ προσώπου μου, as in LXX.

<sup>h</sup> So LXX, λαλήσατε περὶ ἐμοῦ: Heb. "intercede for me."

<sup>i</sup> LXX Σάαρ: Heb. Šōhar (A.V. "Zohar").

<sup>j</sup> τὸ σπήλαιον τὸ διπλοῦν, as in LXX: Heb. "the cave of Machpelah" (the last word from the root meaning "to double").

<sup>k</sup> ἐν μερίδι τοῦ ἀγροῦ αὐτοῦ, as in LXX: Heb. "which is in the limit (or "end") of his field."

<sup>l</sup> LXX ἀργυρίου τοῦ ἀξίου: Heb. "for full silver."

<sup>m</sup> The Arm. "and to you" is prob. an error. LXX has ἐν ὑμῖν: Heb. and Arm. O.T. have "in your midst."

<sup>n</sup> So LXX, εἰς κτήσιν μνημείου, see above, § 75.

<sup>o</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, "sensu rerum usurpato, quem praecedenti adoratione jam intimavit auditoribus."
<sup>p</sup> λόγω.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

for deception but for the (benefit of the) soul and mind,<sup>a</sup> confess this, (namely) that we are clothed with a dead body and that we should bury this and not permit our passions<sup>b</sup> to arise and be revived and flourish, but keep them out of sight, because<sup>c</sup> they are an obstacle to the impulses<sup>d</sup> which arise from reflexion.<sup>e</sup> Speak, therefore, in the council of the soul<sup>f</sup> on my behalf and for my appearance,<sup>g</sup> and make haste that whatever is the value of the price in silver, that is to say, what has the worth of reason,<sup>h</sup> may be given to me,<sup>i</sup> as I said, not for a burial monument but for the possession of a memorial.”<sup>j</sup>

79. (Gen. xxiii. 10) What is “Ephron,” and why is it that “he dwelt among the sons of Heth”?

“Ephron” is to be interpreted as “dust,”<sup>k</sup> while “Hittite”<sup>l</sup> means “being out of one’s mind.”<sup>m</sup> And (Scripture) by “dust” indicates corporeal natures,<sup>n</sup> while by “being out of one’s mind” (it indicates) madness and folly.<sup>o</sup> For among foolish and mad men the body has the true and chief rank,<sup>p</sup> receiving the service and attendance

<sup>a</sup> εἰς ψυχὴν καὶ νοῦν.

<sup>b</sup> τὰ πάθη.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher curiously has “ut,” introducing a purpose clause.

<sup>d</sup> ταῖς ὀρμαῖς.

<sup>e</sup> κατὰ τὸν λογισμόν vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> Prob. ἐν τῷ τῆς ψυχῆς βουλευτηρίῳ, cf. De Vita Cont. 27 ἐν τῷ ἑαυτῆς (sc. τῆς ψυχῆς) συνεδρίῳ καὶ βουλευτηρίῳ.

<sup>g</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, “et apparente mihi (sic).”

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ λόγου.

<sup>i</sup> Philo does not make it as clear as does Scripture that the money is given by Abraham, and the burial-place is given to him.

<sup>j</sup> See § 77.

<sup>k</sup> χουῖς (as if from Heb. ‘aphār). The same etymology is given in De Confus. Ling. 79.

<sup>l</sup> Χετταῖος.

<sup>m</sup> ἔκστασις (as if from Heb. hath “panic fear”). Cf. De Somniis ii. 89 where Philo etymologizes τοὺς υἱοὺς τοῦ Χέτ as ἐξιστάντες.

<sup>n</sup> αἰνίττεται σωματικὰς φύσεις.

<sup>o</sup> μανίαν καὶ ἀφροσύνην.

<sup>p</sup> τάξιν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

of those who know nothing of any proper and genuine good, and do not make an effort to know it.

*80. (Gen. xxiii. 9, 11) <sup>a</sup> What is the "double cave" <sup>b</sup> ?

The literal text <sup>c</sup> does not require any exposition, for there are altogether two burial caves under the mountain, <sup>d</sup> one outside and the other inside, or two walls, <sup>e</sup> one, which encloses, and the other, which is enclosed. <sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>g</sup> it must be judged as follows. The human body bears a likeness to a double cave. For it insatiably desires that which is external, making insatiable lust <sup>h</sup> its guide and ruler. On the other hand, in respect of internal things it conducts itself with reason, <sup>i</sup> using patient self-control. <sup>j</sup> For he is foolish who gives up internal things for the sake of external things, and psychic things for sense-perceptible ones, <sup>k</sup> and exchanges that which is in accordance with patient self-control for unbridled lust. But the virtuous man <sup>l</sup> makes use of a hedge and a wall, and a screen between <sup>m</sup> psychic things and the forms among phenomena <sup>n</sup> and things that are seen. While the double cave exists in an evil man, the body too is unclean and lewd. But when it dwells within, it changes itself into a god-loving soul, <sup>o</sup> receiving holiness and purity and the

<sup>a</sup> For other Philonic passages on the double cave see § 78.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ σπήλαιον τὸ διπλοῦν: Heb. "the cave of Machpelah" (see § 78 note). <sup>c</sup> ὁ ῥητὸς λόγος.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. has δύο εἰσὶν ἀνθρώδεις ὑπώρειαι.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. bak means "colonnade" and "court" or "precinct." The Greek frag. has περίβολοι.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) has ὁ μὲν περιέχων, ὁ δὲ περιεχόμενος.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> ἀσελεία or "profanation"—βεβηλώσει vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> κατὰ νοῦν οἰκονομεῖται vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> ἐγκρατεία ὑπομονῆς.

<sup>k</sup> ψυχικὰ ἀντὶ αἰσθητῶν.

<sup>l</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος.

<sup>m</sup> The preposition is supplied.

<sup>n</sup> Meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, "et habentibus visum apparentium." <sup>o</sup> εἰς ψυχὴν θεοφιλή.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

possession <sup>a</sup> of a blameless life. Wherefore, I believe, the Creator and Constructor made the tabernacle <sup>b</sup> double, marking off the inner from the outer part by a veil, <sup>c</sup> and calling the inner part the "holy of holies" and the outer part merely "the holy (place)." But all these are entirely psychic and intelligible forms, <sup>d</sup> while the double cave has a share in the body, although they <sup>e</sup> are indeed the possessions of the god-loving mind. <sup>f</sup>

*81. (Gen. xxiii. 11) Why is it that though Abraham sought only the cave, Ephron gave him the field as well? <sup>g</sup>

As for the literal meaning, <sup>h</sup> one would say that out of admiration for the man and for the wisdom which he saw him display, <sup>i</sup> he thought it right to lavish upon him very abundant favours. <sup>j</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>k</sup> he thought it right to attach <sup>l</sup> the field symbolically <sup>m</sup> to the virtuous man <sup>n</sup> in order that the body might have the things necessary to pleasure <sup>o</sup> and their equipment. And he does not refuse, being of liberal character, as he is rich, <sup>p</sup> but clearly says, "I will give you all the treasures in my possession and everything which has honour and power

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "portion," but here prob. = κτήσιω as in the LXX, see the preceding sections.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν σκηνήν.

<sup>c</sup> καλύμματι, see De Vita Mosis ii. 87.

<sup>d</sup> ψυχικά καὶ νοητὰ εἶδη.

<sup>e</sup> What "they" refers to is not clear.

<sup>f</sup> Or "thoughts"—λογισμῶν.

<sup>g</sup> LXX τὸν ἀγρὸν καὶ τὸ σπήλαιον τὸ ἐν αὐτῷ σοὶ δίδωμι.

<sup>h</sup> πρὸς τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek paraphrase in Procopius reads more briefly, ὁρῶν αὐτοῦ τὴν σοφίαν.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. here is closer to the Greek frag. (which ends here), ολόμενος δεῖν ἀφθόνοους ἐπιδαμιλεύεσθαι χάριτας.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> Meaning somewhat uncertain.

<sup>m</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>n</sup> τῷ σπουδαίῳ.

<sup>o</sup> ταῖς ἡδοναῖς.

<sup>p</sup> Lit. "full."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

among men, nor will I be caught by any of those who falsely bear the name of good,<sup>a</sup> but handling them <sup>b</sup> as is proper, I will show everyone what necessary power <sup>c</sup> is in all of them."

82. (Gen. xxiii. 9, 11, 17, 19) Why is it that before his acquiring the burial-place, the cave was said to be "in the field," while after his acquiring it, the field (was said to be) "in the cave" <sup>d</sup>?

(Scripture) says something most natural.<sup>e</sup> For so long as the mind <sup>f</sup> does not rule over the body, the body falls under the power of, and is supported <sup>g</sup> by, external things, by wine and meals and food and other things that grow from the all-bearing earth as if from a field. But when it <sup>h</sup> assumes power, it compels the body, which has long been in servitude, to show its power and not to fall under the power of external things but, on the contrary, to contain <sup>i</sup> them and rule over them, not being a part of them (any longer).

83. (Gen. xxiii. 19) Why does (Scripture) say that the

<sup>a</sup> τῶν ψευδωνύμων ἀγαθῶν. But the meaning of the clause is uncertain. Aucher renders, "neque ab ullo falsi nominis bonorum deprehendar."

<sup>b</sup> Apparently the possessions are meant.

<sup>c</sup> ἀναγκαία δύναμις.

<sup>d</sup> Although Aucher is correct in distinguishing between the Arm. prepositions i nerk'oy = ὑπό, and i nerk's = ἐν, he has completely mistranslated the sentence and missed its point in rendering, "spelunca dicebatur sub agro esse, et post acquisitionem agri, intus in ipso agro." What Philo refers to is the fact that in Gen. xxiii. 9, 11, the cave is said to be in the field, while in vs. 17 (obviously corrupt) the field is said, at the beginning of the verse, to be in the cave, ὁ ἀγρὸς Ἐφρών, ὃς ἦν ἐν τῷ διπλῷ σπηλαίῳ.

<sup>e</sup> φυσικώτατα.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> Or "overshadowed." Aucher "detentum."

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the mind.

<sup>i</sup> περιέχειν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

burial-place was "opposite Mambre,"<sup>a</sup> or why does it say that "this is Hebron"<sup>b</sup>?

"Hebron" is to be interpreted as "union"<sup>c</sup> or "the companionship of women,"<sup>d</sup> as has been correctly said. For behold, in some sense,<sup>e</sup> in the case of those who have a double cave, it is possible to join and fit together companionship and sincere liking, and to make the body genuinely (devoted) to the soul,<sup>f</sup> the one as the ruler, and the other as the minister, being persuaded (to do)<sup>g</sup> whatever the queen may announce, in order that she<sup>h</sup> may give a likeness of her power, through which it<sup>i</sup> may have power over external things and rule over sense-perceptible objects.<sup>j</sup>

84. (Gen. xxiv. 1) Why does (Scripture) say, "And Abraham was an old man advanced (in days),<sup>k</sup> and the Lord blessed Abraham in all things"?

<sup>a</sup> LXX ἀπέναντι Μαμβρή (Heb. "Mamre").

<sup>b</sup> LXX αὕτη ἐστὶν Χεβρών ἐν τῇ γῆ Χανάαν.

<sup>c</sup> συζυγή. The same etymology is given in Quod Deterius 15 and De Poster. Caini 60, see also QG iv. 72.

<sup>d</sup> The alternate etymology συνεταιρίς is given in Quod Deterius 15. <sup>e</sup> τρόπον τινά. Aucher "exempli gratia."

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. lit. = γνήσιον τῇ ψυχῇ. Aucher renders, "fidele . . . cum anima."

<sup>g</sup> This obscure clause apparently refers to the soul as the ruler, and the body as the minister or servant. Aucher renders inaccurately, "uno principem, altera satellitem persuadente."

<sup>h</sup> The fem. pronoun seems to be required by the context, as referring to the soul.

<sup>i</sup> Apparently the body is meant. The Arm. verb is an infinitive but Aucher renders it as a 3rd pers. plural.

<sup>j</sup> τῶν αἰσθητῶν. The passage is obscure, and seems to overlook the reference to Mambre, which in De Migratione 165 is allegorized as the contemplative life.

<sup>k</sup> LXX πρεσβύτερος προβεβηκώς ἡμερῶν. The same phrase is quoted in De Sobrietate 17, also with the omission of ἡμερῶν. There too Philo explains that the wise man is figuratively a πρεσβύτερος.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

It does not seem that this admits of explanation as chronological age, since one would be at a loss <sup>a</sup> to call him an old man who was more short-lived than all who were before him. <sup>b</sup> He has precedence in virtue who is worthy of old age and honour. <sup>c</sup> Wherefore it says above, "an old man advanced," (meaning) increase in worthiness, <sup>d</sup> of which the consummation is piety, <sup>e</sup> (and) excellent judgment <sup>f</sup> in all aspects of life, in thoughts, deeds and words. <sup>g</sup>

85. (Gen. xxiv, 2) What is the meaning of the words, "The eldest servant of his house and ruler of all his things" <sup>h</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>i</sup> is clear, for (Scripture) indicates that the man <sup>j</sup> was a sort of steward or manager of his master's possessions. <sup>k</sup> But as for the allegorical and natural meaning, <sup>l</sup> it must, it seems, be considered to be as follows. The status of a servant among us and of a minister and attendant is held by discourse <sup>m</sup> which is an utterance of

<sup>a</sup> ἀπορήσειέ τις ἄν.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher can hardly be blamed for his inaccurate rendering, "qui paucis temporibus superat annos ejus (anteriores)", since the Arm. translator probably misunderstood the Greek original; cf. De Sobrietate 17 ὅτι σχεδὸν τῶν προγόνων ἑαυτοῦ πάντων ὁ σοφὸς Ἀβραὰμ ὀλιγοχρονώτατος εἰσάγεται.

<sup>c</sup> Here again the Arm. translator seems to have misunderstood the Greek; cf. De Sobrietate 16 ὡς δὲ καὶ πρεσβύτερον οὐ τὸν γήρα κατεσχημένον ἀλλὰ τὸν γέρως καὶ τιμῆς ἄξιον ὀνομάζει.

<sup>d</sup> καλοκάγαθίας.

<sup>e</sup> θεοσέβεια, which in De Congressu 130 is called ἀγαθὸν τέλειον. <sup>f</sup> εὐβουλία.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ λογισμοὺς καὶ ἔργα καὶ λόγους.

<sup>h</sup> LXX τῷ παιδί αὐτοῦ, τῷ πρεσβυτέρῳ τῆς οἰκίας αὐτοῦ, τῷ ἄρχοντι πάντων τῶν αὐτοῦ. <sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> Abraham's steward (Eliezer).

<sup>k</sup> οἰκονόμον ἢ ἐπίτροπον τῶν τοῦ κυρίου.

<sup>l</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain.

<sup>m</sup> Philo here refers to the Stoic term λόγος προφορικός.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the mind, which <sup>a</sup> is more perfect <sup>b</sup> than speech, and is the ruler and master. This uttered discourse is the eldest (servant), for (it receives) the authority of natural behaviour over corporeal and invisible objects from the reason as if from a king.<sup>c</sup> For discourse <sup>d</sup> uses and manages all these things with virtue.<sup>e</sup>

*86. (Gen. xxiv. 2) Why does he say, "Place thy hand under my thigh" <sup>f</sup>?

Being about to bind him by an oath <sup>g</sup> concerning the betrothal,<sup>h</sup> he bids him place his hand close to the place of generation,<sup>i</sup> indicating a pure association and an unpolluted marriage, not having sensual pleasure as its end but the procreation of legitimate children.<sup>j</sup> And allegorizing,<sup>k</sup> we might say that (Scripture) accurately <sup>l</sup> calls "thigh" that place in the soul which does not flow <sup>m</sup> but is firm in solidity and stability. Upon this he bids him with <sup>a</sup> i.e. the mind—ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>b</sup> τελειότερος.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "principatum habens ex natura tamquam a suo rege, sive ratione super corporalia instrumenta et objecta."

<sup>d</sup> It is not clear whether speech (ὁ προφορικὸς λόγος) or reason (ὁ ἐνδιάθετος λόγος) is meant; probably the former is meant.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, "haec enim universa per virtute ornatum ministrum disponit ratio."

<sup>f</sup> LXX θὲς τὴν χεῖρά σου ὑπὸ τὸν μηρόν μου.

<sup>g</sup> ἐξορκίσειν.

<sup>h</sup> Of Isaac. Cf. the Greek frag. from Procopius ἐπὶ μνηστείαν καὶ γάμον πέμπων.

<sup>i</sup> Procopius κατὰ τῶν γαμικῶν ὀργάνων.

<sup>j</sup> So, almost literally, the Greek frag. (which ends here), καθαρὰν ὀμιλίαν καὶ γάμον ἀνεπίληπτον αἰνιττόμενος οὐχ ἡδονὴν τὸ τέλος ἀλλὰ γνησίους ἔχοντα παῖδας. The last phrase was originally, as Wendland notes, γνησίων παιδῶν γένεσιν.

<sup>k</sup> ἀλληγοροῦντες.

<sup>l</sup> ἀκριβῶς ὡς ἐτύμως.

<sup>m</sup> μὴ ῥέοντα. Philo here gives a fanciful etymology of μηρός as if from μή and ῥεῖν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

reason <sup>a</sup> place his hand for the sake of reverencing and honouring that place to which nature has given as a special honour undeviating and unchanging forms <sup>b</sup> in order that it may not, so to say, receive lightly what in the same manner has a flow, <sup>c</sup> but may remain unchanged and truthful in its agreements.

87. (Gen. xxiv. 3) Why does he adjure him by heaven, uttering a double invocation, and by earth with a single one, <sup>d</sup> for he says, "I adjure thee by the Lord God of heaven and the God of earth" <sup>e</sup> ?

Heaven is the best of the parts of the world, <sup>f</sup> wherefore it has been allotted the highest place, being of the purest substance, <sup>g</sup> and full of stars, each of which is a godlike image. <sup>h</sup> And the last <sup>i</sup> (part) is the earth, to which was allotted the lowest place for the reason that animals and the plants surrounding them are mortal and corruptible. Rightly, therefore, does he give first honour and privilege <sup>j</sup> to the best (part), uttering a double invocation to the powers of the Father, (namely) the creative and kingly. <sup>k</sup> But from the lesser he removed one (appellation) <sup>l</sup> for the

<sup>a</sup> The text seems to be corrupt; the original prob. made the thigh a symbol of reason (ὁ λόγος).

<sup>b</sup> ἄτρεπτα καὶ ἀμετάθετα εἶδη vel sim.

<sup>c</sup> The above is an uncertain rendering of what Aucher rightly calls a "locus obscurissimus." He himself renders, "qui itidem ac similiter habet fluxum, non ut dixerit quisquam, pauca receperit." Apparently the λόγος προφορικός is the subject of the last clause.

<sup>d</sup> Philo refers to the expression "Lord God of heaven," contrasted with "God of earth."

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἐξορκίσω σε κύριον τὸν θεὸν τοῦ οὐρανοῦ καὶ τὸν θεὸν (some MSS. omit τὸν θεόν) τῆς γῆς.

<sup>f</sup> τοῦ κόσμου.

<sup>g</sup> τῆς καθαρωτάτης οὐσίας.

<sup>h</sup> ἄγαλμα θεοειδές οἱ εἰκὼν θεοειδής.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ἔσχατον <μέρος>.

<sup>j</sup> προτιμίαν καὶ προνομίαν.

<sup>k</sup> ταῖς δυνάμεσι τοῦ πατρὸς, τῇ ποιητικῇ καὶ τῇ βασιλικῇ. See QG ii. 51 notes.

<sup>l</sup> That of "Lord," signifying God's kingly power.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

reason that heaven and the natures <sup>a</sup> similar to it, being always undeviating and unchanging, are never sated with, nor fail in, the service of the Father, but serve God as the Creator and obey Him as king,<sup>b</sup> while we earth-born and corruptible creatures cannot deny God, for He who comes to create <sup>c</sup> is necessarily imagined as the efficient cause,<sup>d</sup> but still we do not acknowledge His kingship and government (as) the true Lord,<sup>e</sup> some because of impiety,<sup>f</sup> and others because of perverse and sophistical ingenuity.<sup>g</sup> And so, the whole school of philosophers <sup>h</sup> is not ashamed and does not blush to rule out <sup>i</sup> the providence and care <sup>j</sup> which are given by the Father to His offspring. This was also the opinion and belief <sup>k</sup> of the Egyptian king, who took it upon himself to say, "I do not know the Lord,"<sup>l</sup> by which he shows that "I know God, indeed, because of natural necessity,"<sup>m</sup> in so far as he perceives and admits that he was made by the Creator, but he denies that he knows the Lord, believing that the world and what is in the world are without providence and care.

*88. (Gen. xxiv. 3) Why does he instruct, not his son,

<sup>a</sup> αἱ φύσεις.

<sup>b</sup> Because the double appellation "Lord God" is associated with heaven in the present verse, Philo argues that heavenly beings worship God as king ("Lord") and Creator ("God").

<sup>c</sup> i.e. under the name of "God."

<sup>d</sup> ἐξ ἀνάγκης φαντάζεται <ὡς> τὸ ποιητικὸν αἴτιον.

<sup>e</sup> Because Scripture uses only "God of earth" not "Lord God of earth."

<sup>f</sup> δι' ἀσέβειαν.

<sup>g</sup> διὰ κακότεχνον σοφιστείαν καὶ εὐρεσιλογίαν vel sim.

<sup>h</sup> Prob. αἵρεις is rendered by two Arm. words here. Aucher supplies "prava" in rendering, "prava illa sententia sectarum philosophorum."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "to cut off."

<sup>j</sup> τὴν πρόνοιαν καὶ ἐπιμέλειαν.

<sup>k</sup> Here again Aucher supplies the word "pravus."

<sup>l</sup> Ex. v. 2, on which Philo comments similarly in De Ebrietate 19, 77-79.

<sup>m</sup> διὰ φυσικὴν ἀνάγκην.

not to take a Canaanite wife, as later his parents (instructed) Jacob,<sup>a</sup> but the servant? <sup>b</sup>

Truly the literal meaning <sup>c</sup> contains an anxiety of doubt and the thought of deliberation.<sup>d</sup> For since Isaac was of mature and marriageable age,<sup>e</sup> and was not under the dominion of the servant, one of two things (was bound to happen): either he would obey or he would oppose (him). Now, in case of his obedience, it would be natural for his father to be his sponsor.<sup>f</sup> And if he did not obey, the ministration of the servant would be superfluous.<sup>g</sup> And to say that because Abraham had migrated from the land of the Chaldaeans on account of a divine oracle, he did not consider it right to send his son (there), is very silly and foolish. In the first place, for this (same) reason it would not have been right (for him) to undertake the matter and be a sponsor at all in a family connexion from which he had been told to depart, nor for Jacob to go there to betroth himself, since he was an imitator of his father, and very well understood the instructions that had been given him.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> In Gen. xxviii. 1, on which see QG iv. 242.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek frag. from Procopius, Διατί δὲ μὴ τῷ υἱῷ παραγγέλλει μὴ λαβεῖν Χανανίτιν (LXX ἀπὸ τῶν θυγατέρων τῶν Χαναναίων) ὡσπερ ὕστερον τῷ Ἰακώβ οἱ γονεῖς, ἀλλὰ τῷ παιδί;

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> λογισμὸν ἐπισκέψεως vel sim. Aucher "consilium consideratione dignum."

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., καίτοι τελείου τυγχάνοντος Ἰσαάκ καὶ ἡλικίαν ἔχοντος γάμου.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. reads less specifically καὶ εἰ μὲν ἔμελλε πείθεσθαι, εἰκὸς ἦν αὐτῷ μᾶλλον παρεγγυᾶν. On the meaning of "sponsor" see note below.

<sup>g</sup> So the Greek frag., εἰ δὲ ἀπειθεῖν, περιττὴ τοῦ παιδὸς ἡ διακονία.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) reads more briefly τὸ γὰρ εἰπεῖν ὅτι, χρησμῶ τῆς γῆς ἐξελθὼν, πέμπειν εἰς αὐτὴν οὐκ ἡξίου τὸν υἱόν [εἰ καὶ εὐλογον, ὅμως ἀπαρέσκει τισί], διὰ τὸ μηδ' ἂν τὸν Ἰακώβ, εἰ τοῦτο ἦν ἀληθές, ὑπὸ τῶν γονέων ἐνταῦθα πεμφθῆναι. Of the clause in Procopius bracketed by Harris, Wendland rightly remarks (p. 79), "es erinnert wenigstens dem Sinne und dem ganzen Tone nach an Philo."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

However, there remain for him <sup>a</sup> not a few questions. For it is not as if (speaking) to a servant-boy <sup>b</sup> that he says, "Be an attendant <sup>c</sup> in going forth, in order that my son may not take a wife from that land," but as if (speaking) to the chief sponsor, <sup>d</sup> for he says, "I adjure thee not to take for my son a Canaanite wife."

And so, necessarily allegorizing, we might most naturally say <sup>e</sup> that Isaac has no need of exhortation, <sup>f</sup> for he had never taken a wife from among the Canaanites. And I say this, not concerning man and woman, but concerning the traits of the soul, <sup>g</sup> to which the symbols of the names here used refer. For Isaac is the mind, <sup>h</sup> the self-teacher and the self-taught, <sup>i</sup> the distinct among the indifferent, <sup>j</sup> rejoicing always and daily in his Father and God and in all His works. And he does not become dissatisfied with anything that happens in the world, but knows that all things happen in accordance with nature through divine providence <sup>k</sup> and are for the wellbeing and eternity of all things. <sup>l</sup> He does not, therefore, take a Canaanite wife, by which I mean that he does not have the traits of the

<sup>a</sup> Or "concerning it," i.e. the matter.

<sup>b</sup> The two Arm. words used here prob. render παιδί.

<sup>c</sup> ὑπουργός or διάκονος.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. lit. = τῷ κυρίῳ τῆς ἐγγύης, i.e. the guarantor of the marriage-settlement, in this case Abraham's servant acting for the father of the bridegroom.

<sup>e</sup> ἀναγκαίως οὖν ἀλληγοροῦντες φυσικώτατ' ἂν εἴποιμεν.

<sup>f</sup> The two Arm. words used here render παράκλησις or παραμυθία. Aucher renders, "solaminis," but the context calls for "exhortation" rather than "consolation."

<sup>g</sup> περὶ τῶν κατὰ τὴν ψυχὴν τρόπων.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ νοῦς. Although Philo usually treats Isaac as a symbol of laughter or joy, he sometimes refers to him as ὁ ἀστεῖος or ὁ σοφός, as in De Somniis i. 171, De Fuga 200.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ αὐτομαθὴς καὶ ὁ αὐτοδιδάκτος, cf. De Somniis ii. 10.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ διαφέρων ἐν τοῖς ἀδιαφόροις, cf. De Fuga 152.

<sup>k</sup> κατὰ φύσιν θεία προνοία.

<sup>l</sup> εἰς τὴν σωτηρίαν καὶ αἰδιότητα πάντων.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

above-mentioned school,<sup>a</sup> because "Canaanites," when rendered into the Armenian <sup>b</sup> language, means "those out of their mind."<sup>c</sup>

Now it is still to be feared that perhaps the uttered word,<sup>d</sup> which he has called "servant," may use sophistic inventions <sup>e</sup> and so deceive and trick and get the better of <sup>f</sup> him who was by nature well-pleasing (to God).<sup>g</sup> Wherefore he holds him by a horrid and dreadful oath as if placing reins upon him in order to soften and make milder those things which, when spoken, cause consternation <sup>h</sup> and overcome <sup>i</sup> him who is unable to stand upright, as is fitting, and to be firm in speech.<sup>j</sup> He says, "Go there, whence I emigrated"<sup>k</sup>—for it is one family and nation; that is, the migration came about through the command of God.<sup>l</sup> "From there shalt thou take a wife for my son."

<sup>a</sup> τῆς προειρημένης αἰρέσεως, i.e. the school of philosophers who deny divine providence, see above, § 87.

<sup>b</sup> Here, as elsewhere, the Arm. translator substitutes "Armenian" for "Greek."

<sup>c</sup> οἱ ἐξιστάντες, see § 79 and De Somniis ii. 89 where Philo gives this etymology for "Hittites." Evidently he here equates Hittites and Canaanites, cf. QG iv. 242. Elsewhere he etymologizes Χανάαν as σάλος or as "merchants," cf. QG ii. 65.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ κατὰ προφορὰν λόγος.

<sup>e</sup> σοφιστικοῖς εὐρήμασι.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher "in delirium vertat."

<sup>g</sup> i.e. Isaac, as symbol of the mind.

<sup>h</sup> Or "stupefaction."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "pervertere." The change of number in the two Arm. verbs in the relative clause is to be disregarded in view of the context which requires a neuter plural (τὰ εἰρημένα or the like) as subject of both verbs.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher, referring to the sentence in a footnote as "locum intricatissimum," renders, "qui nequeat condignam firmitatem tenere in verbo."

<sup>k</sup> The LXX of Gen. xxiv. 4 reads ἀλλὰ εἰς τὴν γῆν μου οὗ ἐγενόμην πορεύση καὶ εἰς τὴν φυλὴν μου καὶ λήμψῃ γυναῖκα τῷ υἱῷ μου Ἰσαὰκ ἐκεῖθεν.

<sup>l</sup> This statement seems to be parenthetical.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

But he takes from him an admonition (concerning) the character of his spouse,<sup>a</sup> (namely, from) him who was shown to have emigrated, or in accordance with custom and usage, especially as the Chaldaeans practise astronomy, first of all, of invisible and incorporeal nature.<sup>b</sup>

89. (Gen. xxiv. 5-6) Why, when the servant inquired, "Shall I, if the woman is unwilling to migrate here, take thy son there?", does he say, "Look to it (and) take care that thou do not return my son there" <sup>c</sup>?

While the literal meaning <sup>d</sup> is clear, the deeper meaning <sup>e</sup> is in accord with philosophical opinion.<sup>f</sup> For he admonishes the word <sup>g</sup> to look to it and take care not to move the constant character <sup>h</sup> from that worthiness <sup>i</sup> which is in accordance with the laws of good conduct.<sup>j</sup> For what is more worthy than to be pleased with that (which comes) from the Creator of the universe and Father of all, and not to find fault with anything at all, as is the habit of inconstant men and those who do not have a stable character of habit <sup>k</sup> but because of petty things that happen and partake of a

<sup>a</sup> This obscure sentence is somewhat differently rendered by Aucher "alterum monitum ut vitae consortem in moribus acceptit."

<sup>b</sup> ἀοράτου καὶ ἀσωμάτου φύσεως. The last sentence is also obscure.

<sup>c</sup> LXX εἶπεν δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν ὁ παῖς, Μὴ ποτε οὐ βούλεται ἡ γυνὴ πορευθῆναι μετ' ἐμοῦ ὀπίσω εἰς τὴν γῆν ταύτην· ἀποστρέψω τὸν υἱόν σου εἰς τὴν γῆν ὅθεν ἐξῆλθες ἐκεῖθεν; εἶπεν δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν Ἀβραάμ, Πρόσεχε σεαυτῷ μὴ ἀποστρέψῃς τὸν υἱόν μου ἐκεῖ.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> τοῖς φιλοσοφουμένοις.

<sup>g</sup> τὸν λόγον (i.e. τὸν κατὰ προφορὰν λόγον), symbolized by the servant of Abraham.

<sup>h</sup> τὸν βέβαιον τρόπον vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> ἀξιώματος vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. haçoyout'ian usu. = εὐδοκία or θεραπεία. Here it seems to mean "conduct pleasing (to God)." Aucher renders, "legis gratissimae."

<sup>k</sup> The Arm. translator perhaps confuses ἔθος and ἦθος.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

blameworthy nature,<sup>a</sup> accuse and incriminate that which <sup>b</sup> is not to be accused or incriminated ?

90. (Gen. xxiv. 7) <sup>c</sup> Why does he say, " The Lord God of heaven and God of earth <sup>d</sup> will send His angel before thy face,<sup>e</sup> and thou shalt take a wife for my son Isaac " <sup>f</sup> ?

Thus do I see that he is a prophet and legislates oracularly concerning things that are to come.<sup>g</sup> For law is an invention of nature, not of men.<sup>h</sup> As the god-loving mind <sup>i</sup> changes its residence to another land (away from) every sense-perceptible land,<sup>j</sup> it is immediately seized <sup>k</sup> and prophesies. For whence does he know that the servant will be able to complete his journey through the guidance of the angel if not from <sup>l</sup> some divination and prophecy ? But perhaps someone will say, " What need did the servant have of an angel to go along, since he bore with him the command to complete the marriage with a virgin of their

<sup>a</sup> Or, construing differently, " but play the part of fault-finders concerning the petty things that happen."

<sup>b</sup> Or " Him Who."

<sup>c</sup> Philo briefly comments upon another part of this verse (see next note) in Leg. All. iii. 42.

<sup>d</sup> " And God of earth " is found in LXX but not in Heb. In both texts there follows a long clause, here omitted by Philo, reading, " Who took me from the house of my father and from the land where I was born, Who spoke to me and swore to me, saying, ' to thee and [Heb. omits " to thee and " ] to thy seed will I give this land.' "

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἐμπροσθέν σου, rendering Heb. l'phānēkā, lit. " to thy face."

<sup>f</sup> LXX and Heb. add " from there."

<sup>g</sup> προφήτης ἐστὶ καὶ νομοθετεῖ ἐπιθειάζων τὰ μέλλοντά τε καὶ τὰ γενησόμενα.

<sup>h</sup> νόμος γὰρ ἐστὶ φύσεως εὐρημα ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀνθρώπων.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ φιλόθεος νοῦς.

<sup>j</sup> <ἀπὸ> πάσης αἰσθητῆς γῆς.

<sup>k</sup> κατέχεται. H. A. Wolfson, Philo ii. 70, compares Plato, Ion 534 B.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. " in accordance with "—κατά.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

family? <sup>a</sup>” To this it must be said, “Not ineffectual,<sup>b</sup> Sir,<sup>c</sup> did He wish the human mind to be in nature, but to be active,<sup>d</sup> and the several things that occur to it to be acts,<sup>e</sup> even though it<sup>f</sup> performs everything externally.” For this reason the steersman will not abandon the rudder even though the ship may be enjoying a favourable wind, nor will (a soldier)<sup>g</sup> desert the post where he has been stationed by the wisdom of the laws of science and knowledge,<sup>h</sup> nor will the farmer give up<sup>i</sup> the cultivation of the land even though the rains are on time, and the temperature of the air is in accord with the season of the year. And let not any other thing be regarded with astonishment as (happening) automatically,<sup>j</sup> nor anyone choose and hold on to treacherous and evil inactivity. For it is unpleasant that someone who does not wish<sup>k</sup> to do anything or make any effort should get (precious) stones and all kinds of inanimate things for himself.<sup>l</sup> But many wish only to enjoy an increase of sensual pleasure<sup>m</sup> without engaging at all in human affairs. That is the literal meaning.<sup>n</sup> But <sup>a</sup> Text slightly uncertain.

<sup>b</sup> ἀνήνυτον.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. “O Thou.” Aucher amplifies this into “benigne lector.”

<sup>d</sup> ἐνεργεῖν.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. to be realized in act.

<sup>f</sup> It is not clear whether the mind or nature is the subject.

<sup>g</sup> Apparently this noun is to be supplied, as is done by Aucher.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders, less literally, “a lege sapientiae atque ingenii secundum peritiam.”

<sup>i</sup> Arm. yaytnesçi “will make clear” is apparently a corruption of yaresçi or the like. Aucher renders, “praetermittit.”

<sup>j</sup> ἀὐτομάτως. The sentence is obscure and probably corrupt. Aucher renders differently, “neque alius ququam oculos figat, ut per se prosperitas adveniat.”

<sup>k</sup> Reading kameal (ptc.) for kamel (inf.).

<sup>l</sup> The sense is not wholly clear to me nor, apparently, to Aucher, who renders, “difficile namque est ut quis nihil facere ac laborare volens, saxum vel quidquid inanimatum sibi acquirere possit (vel, imitari velit).”

<sup>m</sup> ἡδονῆς.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

the passage also contains an allegory <sup>a</sup> in harmony with what has been said before. For inasmuch as the uttered word, <sup>b</sup> which in comparison with <sup>c</sup> the mind has been called "servant," <sup>d</sup> at once was in doubt and gave an appearance <sup>e</sup> of weakness and deceit, the Saviour <sup>f</sup> joined and fitted to it another word, <sup>g</sup> not deceived or defrauded, <sup>h</sup> which He calls "angel," (as) the interpreter of the divine oracles and commands. And when he comes along and teaches man, he compels him not to vacillate in his reasoning <sup>i</sup> or move about and be confused.

91. (Gen. xxiv. 8) What is the meaning of the words, "If the woman does not wish to go with thee, <sup>j</sup> thou shalt be clear of this oath. <sup>k</sup> Only, thou shalt not return my son there" ?

Someone may be at a loss and in doubt how it is that after it has been made altogether certain that the woman will come with the angel of God accompanying him on the way, <sup>l</sup> he now says doubtingly, "If the woman does not wish to go with thee, thou shalt be clear of the oath." But may it not be that this (difficulty) is to be solved in the form of an allegory ? <sup>m</sup> You need but say <sup>n</sup> that if the angel of God is not there, it would seem that the woman might not wish to go along. Wherefore he says, by way of sealing and confirming the matter, "If she does not go with thee as if perhaps wishing to go with a companion, she may wish to go along with the divine word." <sup>o</sup> And even

<sup>a</sup> ἀλληγορίαν.

<sup>b</sup> ὁ κατὰ προφορὰν λόγος.

<sup>c</sup> τοῦ νοῦ.

<sup>d</sup> παῖς, see above, § 88.

<sup>e</sup> Or "showed suspicion."

<sup>f</sup> ὁ σωτήρ.

<sup>g</sup> ἄλλον λόγον.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders, "infallibile ac infallax."

<sup>i</sup> λόγῳ. Aucher "verbis."

<sup>j</sup> Philo agrees with Heb. against LXX in omitting, after "thee," the words "to this land."

<sup>k</sup> LXX καθαρὸς ἔσῃ ἀπὸ τοῦ ὄρκου τούτου (v.l. ὄρκου μου, as in Heb.).

<sup>l</sup> συνοδοιπόρου αὐτῶ.

<sup>m</sup> τρόπῳ ἀλληγορίας.

<sup>n</sup> i.e. the reader need only suppose. <sup>o</sup> σὺν τῷ θείῳ λόγῳ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

though she may not have faith in this youth,<sup>a</sup> she (will have faith) in him who instructs<sup>b</sup> and leads to the elected way and the completion<sup>c</sup> of a great work. And the work is the divine, holy and consecrated marriage of the soul, the harmony of the self-taught reason.<sup>d</sup> Wherefore he will be unchangeable who is wise by nature without teaching.<sup>e</sup>

92. (Gen. xxiv. 10) <sup>f</sup> Why does the servant take with him ten camels of the camels of his master and of all his goods? <sup>g</sup>

The decad is a most perfect number,<sup>h</sup> and the camel is a symbol of memory,<sup>i</sup> since it ruminates, grinding and chewing its food over and over. And such is the affection<sup>j</sup> of remembering former (experiences), for whatever the mind<sup>k</sup> receives through the activity of thinking,<sup>l</sup> it is moved by these and turns from side to side until it is reduced to order and takes its proper place and is stabilized by the two things<sup>m</sup> being joined and settling together. For this reason he is said to take, not "of the good parts" but "of

<sup>a</sup> i.e. Abraham's servant, symbolizing "the uttered word" (see above). The variant "in this honour" makes no sense.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. the angel, symbolizing "the divine word" or Logos.

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. has "incompleteness," apparently in error.

<sup>d</sup> ἄρμονία τοῦ αὐτομαθοῦς (or αὐτοδιδάκτου) λογισμοῦ. Cf. De Somniis ii. 10.

<sup>e</sup> ὃς φύσει ἄνευ διδασκαλίας ἐστὶ σοφός.

<sup>f</sup> In De Congressu 111-112 Philo allegorizes this verse similarly; cf. also De Poster. Caini 148-149.

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ ἔλαβεν ὁ παῖς δέκα καμήλους ἀπὸ τῶν καμήλων τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ καὶ ἀπὸ πάντων τῶν ἀγαθῶν τοῦ κυρίου αὐτοῦ μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ (Heb. "in his hand").

<sup>h</sup> τελειότατος ἀριθμός. For parallels in Philo see Stachle, p. 54.

<sup>i</sup> σύμβολον μνήμης, as in De Poster. Caini 148, or ἀναμνήσεως, as in De Congressu 111.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ πάθος.

<sup>k</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>l</sup> κατὰ τὸν τῆς διανοίας λογισμὸν vel sim.

<sup>m</sup> Apparently the two things are the mind and sense-impression.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

all (his goods),” since the whole life of the virtuous man <sup>a</sup> is completely full of happiness, <sup>b</sup> with no part left vacant and empty for the bringing in and admitting of sins. But it is well that (Scripture) adds, “he took of all his goods with him,” for many others make use of good things as of alien possessions without profiting therefrom, such as sophists and word-chasers. <sup>c</sup> For though they have been taught the laws of philosophy, which are beautiful and worthy of zeal and virtue, <sup>d</sup> they do not become any better, but while correcting the lives of others, they leave their own souls uncared for and untended, inasmuch as they do not have in themselves and with themselves a genuine philosophy <sup>e</sup> but one that is on their lips and is superficial. And this is like an ill-favoured woman being dressed in precious purple. The garment is not an ornament to the wearer <sup>f</sup> but a reproach, which very clearly shows her lewdness. <sup>g</sup>

93. (Gen. xxiv. 10) What is “Mesopotamia, <sup>h</sup>” where he goes, and what is “the city of Nahor” <sup>i</sup>?

In the literal sense <sup>j</sup> “Mesopotamia” is the land of Babylonia, lying between the two rivers Euphrates and Tigris, <sup>k</sup> from which fact it was appropriately <sup>l</sup> named. And as for “Nahor,” it is clear that this was first the name of a city in Babylonia, which, as happens in many cases, was changed into another name. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>m</sup> it is proper to say that “Nahor” is to be trans-

<sup>a</sup> τῶ σπουδαίῳ. Aucher renders, less exactly, “sapientis.”

<sup>b</sup> εὐδαιμονίας. <sup>e</sup> ὡς σοφισταὶ καὶ λογοθηῆραι.

<sup>d</sup> τοὺς νόμους τῆς φιλοσοφίας τοὺς καλοὺς καὶ σπουδῆς τε καὶ ἀρετῆς ἀξίους.

<sup>e</sup> γνησίαν (rendered by two Arm. words) φιλοσοφίαν.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. “to the one having (it).”

<sup>g</sup> μαχλοσύνην.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. renders LXX Μεσοποταμία as “between the rivers”: Heb. “Aram Naharaim.”

<sup>i</sup> Arm. Nak'ôr: LXX Ναχώρ: Heb. Nāhôr.

<sup>j</sup> τῷ ῥήτῳ. <sup>k</sup> Arm. Aracan and Dklat'.

<sup>l</sup> ἐτύμως. <sup>m</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

lated as "rest of light."<sup>a</sup> And the light of corporeal eyes is the sun or the moon or the lamp used for fire, while wisdom is the light of the soul.<sup>b</sup> And for this to rest and be quiet and still is not profitable,<sup>c</sup> but movement<sup>d</sup> is profitable for him who possesses (it) and for those who are near him. And he becomes wholly good when moved by wisdom toward those things which are suitable and related to him,<sup>e</sup> while (he becomes) lame and imperfect when he is motionless. For these reasons, though the city of Mesopotamia is confined by its own streams as if by torrents,<sup>f</sup> he proceeds with unimpeded and free steps, while those who oppose the movements that take place in accordance with nature<sup>g</sup> in the soul that becomes knowing and wise when illuminated—in them are many things, some of which are due to us ourselves, others to external causes, which like river-streams flow round the mind<sup>h</sup> and confine it.<sup>i</sup>

94. (Gen. xxiv. 11) Why does (Scripture) say, "He caused the camels to rest outside the city beside a well of water at evening, when the (women-)drawers of water<sup>j</sup> came out"?

The literal significance<sup>k</sup> is clear, for it is the custom of wayfarers to spend the night by springs in order to rest

<sup>a</sup> φωτὸς ἀνάπαυσις. The same fanciful etymology is given in De Congressu 45, as if Heb. Nāhōr were a compound of nāh "to rest" and 'ōr "light."

<sup>b</sup> τὸ δὲ τῆς ψυχῆς φῶς σοφία ἐστίν. Cf. De Congressu 47 φῶς δὲ ψυχῆς ἡλιοειδέστατον ἐπιστήμη.

<sup>c</sup> Text slightly uncertain.

<sup>d</sup> κίνησις.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. text is obscure but not more so than Aucher's rendering, "namque fit nota familia sua bona per sapientiam mota ad sibi decentia."

<sup>f</sup> This clause too is syntactically unclear in the Arm.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ φύσιν.

<sup>h</sup> τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>i</sup> Philo seems to mean that the wise man seeks "the quiet of light" by responding to the right kinds of movement in the soul.

<sup>j</sup> LXX αἱ ὑδρευόμεναι.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ ῥητὸν σύμβολον.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

themselves and their asses for the needs of the journey. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>a</sup> it is as follows. When the memory<sup>b</sup> rests and is inactive, it turns, as it were, to sleep, and rests outside the city in sleep<sup>c</sup> by nature. For every one of us appears (to be) a city, the body being like a building,<sup>d</sup> and the soul like an inhabitant.<sup>e</sup> When the memory happens to be awake, it wakens the mind by entering the city, that is, by dwelling within us. But when sleep overtakes it—and sleep is forgetfulness<sup>f</sup> of memory—, it necessarily removes its dwelling from that place, namely from us, until it is once again aroused. For what is forgetfulness but the going out (of memory)? And most excellently does (Scripture) say that memory turned to sleep not only “outside the city” but also “beside a well of water,” indicating that forgetfulness is not perpetual or daily, since the spring is near by, from which the memory-form<sup>g</sup> is drawn<sup>h</sup> and enters the soul, and sleep, which by another name is called “forgetfulness,” is shaken off. And when wakefulness comes in, of which the true name is “memory,” it remains by the spring to which the drawers of water come out at evening. Now, who they are (Scripture) does not tell, for the subject of investigation (here) is not women or water but the mind of the God-loving man,<sup>i</sup> which desires a water-course.<sup>j</sup> And the time of its resting is the setting of the sun, when the senses are far gone<sup>k</sup> and there is no longer shadow and shade from its

<sup>a</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ μνήμη. On the camels as a symbol of memory see above, QG iv. 92.

<sup>c</sup> Variant “at home.”

<sup>d</sup> οἰκοδομή.

<sup>e</sup> οἰκήτορι. Cf. De Poster. Caini 61 <ψυχῇ> σωματικαῖς συζυγίαις ὑποβάλλουσα αὐτὴν οἰκήτορας ἔχει τοὺς λεχθέντας.

<sup>f</sup> λήθη.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ μνημονικὸν εἶδος.

<sup>h</sup> Reading Arm. oroganeal (ptc.) for oroganel (inf.).

<sup>i</sup> περὶ τοῦ νοῦ τοῦ φιλοθέου.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. vtak = χειμάρρους, λίμνη, ὑδραγωγός, etc.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. zarancem = προβεβηκέναι, ληρεῖν, ἐξιστάναι, etc.

Aucher renders, “defatigatis jam sensibus,” and adds in a footnote, “vel, antiquatis jam sensibilibus.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

rays.<sup>a</sup> For then it<sup>b</sup> receives impressions<sup>c</sup> of a more lucid reason<sup>d</sup> from the things seen, and, behold, it arrives at the divine spring, and this is wisdom,<sup>e</sup> which takes the appearance of water by its power.<sup>f</sup> And some persist in drinking with the edges of the lips, some only so much as is sufficient to satisfy their thirst, while still others hasten the more eagerly to rejoice in it, being insatiably impelled to those things which belong to virtue.<sup>g</sup>

95. (Gen. xxiv. 12-14) Why does the servant, beginning with the prospering of the journey, prophesy what is to come?<sup>h</sup>

The literal meaning<sup>i</sup> is that since the angel of God was his companion on the journey and was near by, he was perhaps enthused<sup>j</sup> by him and began to be possessed.<sup>k</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>l</sup> they<sup>m</sup> are types of God-loving characters, each of which the reason<sup>n</sup> carefully

<sup>a</sup> This last clause is not quite clear.

<sup>b</sup> Apparently the mind is the subject.

<sup>c</sup> φαντασίας.      <sup>d</sup> Or "Logos"—λόγου.      <sup>e</sup> σοφία.

<sup>f</sup> πρὸς (or κατὰ) δύναμιν. The meaning is not clear, possibly "in accordance with the power (or "capacity") of those who use it."
<sup>g</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>h</sup> This is Philo's somewhat awkward summary of the LXX καὶ εἶπεν, Κύριε ὁ θεὸς τοῦ κυρίου Ἀβραάμ, εὐδωσον (Heb. "cause it to befall") ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ σήμερον καὶ ποιήσον ἔλεος μετὰ τοῦ κυρίου μου Ἀβραάμ. ἴδου ἐγὼ ἕστηκα ἐπὶ τῆς πηγῆς τοῦ ὕδατος, αἱ δὲ θυγατέρες τῶν οἰκούντων τὴν πόλιν ἐκπορεύονται ἀντλήσαι ὕδωρ καὶ ἔσται ἡ παρθένος ἣ ἂν ἐγὼ εἶπω, Ἐπίκλινον τὴν ὑδρίαν σου ἵνα πῖω, καὶ εἶπη μοι, Πίε σύ, καὶ τὰς καμήλας σου ποτιῶ ἕως ἂν παύσωνται πίνουσαι, ταύτην ἠτοίμασας τῷ παιδί σου Ἰσαάκ· καὶ ἐν τούτῳ γνώσομαι ὅτι ἐποίησας ἔλεος τῷ κυρίῳ μου Ἀβραάμ.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> Reading astouacareal (ptc.) for astouacarel (inf.) = ἐνθουσιάζων or ἐπιθειάζων.

<sup>k</sup> κατέχεσθαι.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. the persons and objects mentioned by the servant.

<sup>n</sup> Or "the passage (of Scripture)"—ὁ λόγος.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

examines and fully investigates.<sup>a</sup> And when it finds that they are united, it rejoices at their being complete, as it hoped. Now, there are three types. One is being a virgin; the second, that she inclines the water-jar; and the third, that she gives (them) to drink. For the sign of a virgin is a pure and sincere intention,<sup>b</sup> which honours the sincere and incorruptible nature without passion. Moreover, the inclining downward of the water-jar (signifies) length of teaching and participation,<sup>c</sup> not for all whomsoever, for death rather than profit.<sup>d</sup> And it is not for those whose custom it is to act like the envious sophists,<sup>e</sup> who with what they have drawn in from things formerly heard take water with the greatest difficulty, being able to draw only a little.<sup>f</sup> For he who in tasting desires to draw <sup>g</sup> the measure of the water-jar is anxious not to spill it altogether on the ground,<sup>h</sup> and lifts up <sup>i</sup> the drink for the sharing (of it) and for love

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders differently, "ad scrutanda singulorum verba et veraciter adimplenda."

<sup>b</sup> The two Arm. words probably render προαίρεσις.

<sup>c</sup> μῆκος (or μακρότητα) διδασκαλίας καὶ κοινωνίας. Probably τῆς σοφίας or τῆς ἀρετῆς is to be understood. See the parallel in De Poster. Caini 146.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. text is obscure and evidently incomplete or corrupt. Aucher renders, "non cunctis simul, ne mortis, quam utilitatis sit causa." The sense seems to be that wisdom is not for those who prefer death to the help to be obtained from wisdom.

<sup>e</sup> τοῖς φθονεροῖς σοφισταῖς. See the next note.

<sup>f</sup> The text is obscure, partly because of the multiple meanings of the Arm. verb tanem, here rendered "to draw." Aucher renders, "qui per auditum anteriorum, quae intus acceperunt, hauriunt aquam tantam ut paucissimam in se ferre queant." In De Poster. Caini 150 Philo speaks of the grudging and mercenary spirit of the sophists, who withhold from their pupils much that they ought to tell them.

<sup>g</sup> Here again the Arm. verb tanem is ambiguous. Aucher renders, "qui vero post gustum desiderat in mensura hydriae secum dortare" [l. "portare"].

<sup>h</sup> Text slightly uncertain.

<sup>i</sup> Variant "opens."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of man,<sup>a</sup> as one might be able to harmonize on a musical instrument, and there would be a most excellent and wonderful harmony.

96. (Gen. xxiv. 15) Why does (Scripture) say, "It came about before he finished speaking in his mind"<sup>b</sup>?

First, it makes clear that there are two (kinds of) discourse,<sup>c</sup> one which resides within, in the understanding,<sup>d</sup> and (another) which we utter.<sup>e</sup> And each of these has a special sound<sup>f</sup>; that which we utter has that of nouns and verbs,<sup>g</sup> while that which is in the understanding has that of thoughts, reflection and comprehension,<sup>h</sup> for (Scripture) very emphatically proves this by showing that he spoke what had been decided in his mind. And in the second place, it vividly represents the fact that before every utterance and thought<sup>i</sup> there come the surpassing kindnesses of God,<sup>j</sup> which seem to be swifter than anything in creation.

97. (Gen. xxiv. 15) What is the meaning of the words, "And Rebekah<sup>k</sup> came out, who had been born to Bethuel"<sup>l</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> εἰς κοινωνίαν καὶ φιλανθρωπίαν.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ἐγένετο πρὸ τοῦ συντελέσαι αὐτὸν λαλοῦντα ἐν τῇ διανοίᾳ (Heb. lacks the words after "speaking").

<sup>c</sup> λόγοι.

<sup>d</sup> ἐν τῷ λογισμῷ.

<sup>e</sup> προφέρομεν. On the distinction between the λόγος ἐνδιάθετος and the λόγος προφορικός see above, QG iv. 85 notes.

<sup>f</sup> ἴδιον φθόγγον or "tone"—τόνον: Aucher "vocem." Although the inner λόγος, strictly speaking, has no "sound," it is articulately expressed, as Philo states in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 4.

<sup>g</sup> δι' ὀνομάτων καὶ ῥημάτων, i.e. words in general.

<sup>h</sup> διὰ λογισμῶν καὶ ἐννοιῶν καὶ συνέσεως vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "mind."

<sup>j</sup> αἱ θεῖαι χάριτες αἱ ὑπερβάλλουσαι, cf. De Abrahamo 39 αἱ τῶν χαρίτων ὑπερβολαί. Aucher renders, "praecedunt gratiae Dei praevenientes et praetereuntes."

<sup>k</sup> LXX Ῥεβέκκα, Heb. Ribqāh.

<sup>l</sup> LXX Βαθουήλ, Heb. B'ethū'el.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

Just as in the world the heaven has special honour greater than that of all other things, always being the same in itself,<sup>a</sup> so too the soul of him who philosophizes genuinely<sup>b</sup> is inflexible and unchangeable. And truly equal to the heavenly nature is she whom in their ancestral language the Hebrews and Chaldaeans call "Rebekah," which name is to be translated as "constancy"<sup>c</sup> since she suffers neither diminution nor increase. And (Scripture) tells her lineage, saying that she was born to "Bethuel," which should be interpreted as "daughter of her God."<sup>d</sup> And who is to be considered the daughter of God but Wisdom, who is the first-born mother of all things<sup>e</sup> and most of all of those who are greatly purified in soul?

98. (Gen. xxiv. 15) Why is (Rebekah) said to carry the water-jar "on her shoulders" <sup>f</sup>?

(Scripture) is wont to make a bodily symbol of the shoulders,<sup>g</sup> for they are the beginnings and origins of the

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "semper se suaque aeque habens."

<sup>b</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ ἡ τοῦ ἀνόθως φιλοσοφούντος.

<sup>c</sup> As Aucher notes, Arm. garoui'ian usually = "resurrection" (ἀνάστασις or ἐγερσις), but here it is evidently a nominal formation from the verb yarem "to adhere," as the context and other passages in Philo show. In De Somniis i. 46 "Rebekah" is etymologized as ἡ ὑπομονή, in De Fuga 45 and De Cherubim 41 as ἐπιμονή (τῶν καλῶν).

<sup>d</sup> Cf. De Fuga 50-51, where the name "Bethuel" is interpreted as θυγάτηρ θεοῦ, i.e. σοφία, as if from Heb. bath "daughter" and 'el "God." Here "daughter of her God" indicates an etymon bitto "his daughter."

<sup>e</sup> Cf. De Fuga 109 μητρὸς δὲ σοφίας δι' ἧς τὰ ὅλα ἦλθεν εἰς γένεσιν, and De Virtutibus 62 σοφίαν δὲ πρεσβυτέραν οὐ μόνον τῆς ἐμῆς γενέσεως ἀλλὰ καὶ τῆς τοῦ κόσμου παντὸς οὐσαν.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ἰδοὺ Ῥεβέκκα . . . ἔχουσα τὴν ὕδριαν ἐπὶ τῶν ὤμων (Heb. "her shoulder").

<sup>g</sup> Cf. Quod Deterius 9 ἐν Συχέμῃ ὤμος . . . τλητικῶς σημεῖον πόνου, De Mut. Nom. 193 Συχέμ . . . ἐρμηνευθεὶς ἐστὶν ὤμος, πόνου σύμβολον, De Vita Mosis ii. 130 τὸν γὰρ ὤμον ἐνεργείας καὶ πράξεως ποιεῖται σύμβολον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

arms and forearms and also of the hands, through which the works and activities of life are accomplished. And the water-jar is a vessel of water, and this is a symbol of education <sup>a</sup>; and water (is a symbol) of those things which are seen through wisdom.<sup>b</sup> For the water-jar contains water, and knowledge (contains) law, counsel and contemplation.<sup>c</sup> And animals and plants are nourished <sup>d</sup> with water, while the sovereign mind <sup>e</sup> (is nourished) with those things which are seen through wisdom. And so the God-loving soul <sup>f</sup> bears heavy things most lightly, (namely) all things pertaining to knowledge.<sup>g</sup>

*99. (Gen. xxiv. 16) Why does (Scripture) use a double expression in calling her a virgin, saying, "She was a virgin very fair of face. She was a virgin whom no man had known" <sup>h</sup>?

It wishes to show clearly that she had two virginities, one in respect of the body, the other in respect of the incorruptible soul.<sup>i</sup> And she was fair to see and to know.<sup>j</sup> Do not, however, think that it now presents to us fairness of body in respect of that which is called beauty of form,<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> σύμβολον τῆς παιδείας.

<sup>b</sup> κατὰ σοφίαν. Cf. De Poster. Caini 146 ἐπαινετέον οὖν καὶ Ῥεβέκκαν, . . . ἀφ' ὑψηλοτέρου χωρίου καθελοῦσα τὸ σοφίας ἀγγεῖον ἐπὶ τὸν βραχίονα, τὴν ὑδρίαν ὀρέγει τῷ μαθητῇ ὡς ἰκανὸς ἐκεῖνός ἐστι δέξασθαι διδασκαλίας.

<sup>c</sup> ἡ ἐπιστήμη <περιέχει> τὸν νόμον καὶ τὰς βουλὰς καὶ τὰς θεωρίας vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> ποτίζονται.

<sup>e</sup> ὁ ἡγεμονικὸς νοῦς.

<sup>f</sup> ἡ φιλόθεος ψυχὴ.

<sup>g</sup> πάντα τὰ ἐπιστημονικά.

<sup>h</sup> LXX ἡ δὲ παρθένος (Heb. "young woman") ἦν καλὴ τῇ ὄψει σφόδρα. παρθένος ἦν, ἀνὴρ οὐκ ἔγνω αὐτήν.

<sup>i</sup> ἡ μὲν κατὰ τὸ σῶμα, ἡ δὲ κατὰ τὴν ἀφθαρτον ψυχὴν.

<sup>j</sup> Or perhaps, as Aucher renders, "erat enim tam visu, quam intellectu pulchra."

<sup>k</sup> κατὰ τὴν λεγομένην εὐμορφίαν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

which consists of the symmetry of parts and beauty of form <sup>a</sup> such as even harlots have. These I would never call fair, but on the contrary, foul,<sup>b</sup> for this is their proper name. And, it seems to me, just as bodily properties are seen in mirrors, so those of the soul (are seen) in the face and countenance. But a shameless look and an elevated neck and a continuous movement of the eyebrows and a womanish walk <sup>c</sup> and not blushing at, or being ashamed of,<sup>d</sup> any evil at all is the sign of a lewd soul,<sup>e</sup> which clearly pictures and describes the forms of its invisible disgraces on its visible body.<sup>f</sup> But he in whom the divine words <sup>g</sup> of wisdom and virtue <sup>h</sup> dwell, even though he may be more deformed of body than Silenus, is necessarily fair.<sup>i</sup> Since it is good for him to be revered through his own modesty, it follows that he will conform to that which is acceptable to those who look at him.<sup>j</sup> Wherefore (Scripture) adds to her virginity <sup>k</sup> what some may think superfluous but is (in fact) necessary, namely "a man had not known her," for, it says, what is she whom a man has known? But may it not be that by "man" it does not present one who is such in body and soul but a model character,<sup>l</sup> who does not <sup>a</sup> Sic.

<sup>b</sup> Or "lewd."

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. has βάδισμα σεσοβημένον.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. has only ἐρυθριᾶν.

<sup>e</sup> Greek frag. ψυχῆς αἰσχίστης.

<sup>f</sup> This is close to the wording of the Greek frag. (which ends here), τοὺς ἀφανεῖς τῶν οἰκείων ὄνειδῶν τύπους ἐγγραφοῦσης τῷ φανερῷ σώματι.

<sup>g</sup> Or "oracles."

<sup>h</sup> σοφίας καὶ ἀρετῆς. The syntax is not clear. Aucher renders, "sapientiae studio atque virtutis."

<sup>i</sup> καλός ἐστι ἐξ ἀνάγκης.

<sup>j</sup> The text is obscure. Aucher renders, "bonum est enim ei proprio pudore venerabiliter conformari acceptationi videntium."

<sup>k</sup> τῇ παρθενίᾳ αὐτῆς, i.e. to the (second) reference to Rebekah's virginity.

<sup>l</sup> τρόπον ὑποδείγματος vel sim.; Aucher "morem exemplarem."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

permit himself to corrupt the uncorrupted, or to defile the undefiled, soul but has the courage to think it impious to sow the corrupt seeds of sensual pleasure in the mind,<sup>a</sup> and, instead, receives the unadulterated seeds of divinity which the Father of all is wont to sow in us from above, (namely) those that are incorporeal and intelligible.<sup>b</sup>

*100. (Gen. xxiv. 16) What is the meaning of the words, "Going down to the spring, she filled her water-jar and went up"<sup>c</sup>?

(Scripture) gives the intention of the Law<sup>d</sup> symbolically.<sup>e</sup> For whatever soul is shown to descend from its own beliefs (is shown) to ascend from there quite soon, just as, on the contrary, whoever is haughty, boastful, puffed up and swollen descends and is destroyed<sup>f</sup>; so that it is most natural to enter into the practices of education.<sup>g</sup> For the descent of the soul is its ascent through belief,<sup>h</sup> and its ascent and elevation are the ebbing of arrogance.<sup>i</sup> But it is impossible for one to fly upward to the heavenly place of virtue<sup>j</sup> who has not filled his whole soul like a water-jar<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τὰ τῆς ἡδονῆς φθαρτὰ σπέρματα εἰς τὸν νοῦν σπείρειν.

<sup>b</sup> τὰ ἀσώματα καὶ νοερά.

<sup>c</sup> This sentence is more fully commented on in De Poster. Caini 136-138 and more briefly in De Fuga 195.

<sup>d</sup> τὴν τοῦ νόμου γνώμην. Aucher renders, "legem voluntatis," adding in a footnote, "ad verb. voluntatem legis (fortasse ut legitimam)."

<sup>e</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>f</sup> Or "is dissolved" (or, perhaps, "is deflated").

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. lit. = ὥστε εἶναι φυσικώτατόν τι καὶ εἰς τὰ τῆς παιδείας ἐπιτηδεύματα εἰσερχόμενον. The Greek frag. (Harris, p. 100, identified by Früchtel) has merely φυσικώτατα ταῦτα δέδεικται.

<sup>h</sup> Similarly the Greek frag., κατάβασιν μὲν ψυχῆς τὴν δι' οἰήσεως ἀνάβασιν.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) has similarly ἀνοδὸν δὲ καὶ ὕψος τὴν ἀλαζονείας ὑπονόστησιν.

<sup>j</sup> πρὸς τὸν οὐράνιον ἀρετῆς τόπον.

<sup>k</sup> ὕδριαν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

from the divine spring, which we declare to be the eternal wisdom of knowledge.<sup>a</sup>

101. (Gen. xxiv. 17) Why did the servant run to meet her<sup>b</sup>?

There are two praises<sup>c</sup> of the servant: one is his running toward her, and the other is his meeting (her). For (thus) is clearly shown, in the first place, the eagerness of the progressive man<sup>d</sup> and the learned man's attainment of the good,<sup>e</sup> and, in the second place, that it is considered a pleasure and delight and joyfulness of mind by those whose (desire) God has entirely approved<sup>f</sup> and whom He has made perfect in the knowledge of wisdom<sup>g</sup> by His wisdom, which like a spring He has opened up and poured out with lavish generosity. For there are those who are slothful in respect of good deeds and voluntarily hold back from them. And there are those who are seized with envy so as not to rejoice (in the good) and even turn their faces away from those who are (held) in honour and are in a state of prosperity. Such men does sacred Scripture<sup>h</sup> rebuke by praising the opposite way of life.

*102. (Gen. xxiv. 17) Why does he ask for a little water, saying, "Give me a little water to drink from thy water-jar"<sup>i</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> The text is perhaps in disorder. Cf. De Poster. Caini 138 <Ῥεβέκκαν> ὑδρευσαμένην οὖν ἀπὸ σοφίας, τῆς θείας πηγῆς, τὰς ἐπιστήμας.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "run toward her," as in the Arm. O.T., rendering LXX εἰς συνάντησιν αὐτῆς. The sentence is commented on in passing in De Poster. Caini 138.

<sup>c</sup> One expects "descriptions" or the like.

<sup>d</sup> τοῦ προκόπτοντος.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "et peritia [abl. case] perveniendi ad bonum."

<sup>f</sup> The text is defective, since the noun-object is lacking. Aucher renders, "quorum Deus votum integerrime acceptans adimplevit." <sup>g</sup> κατ' ἐπιστήμην σοφίας. <sup>h</sup> ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος.

<sup>i</sup> Philo indirectly comments on this phrase in De Poster. Caini 139-147.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

It is proper to interpret (this as meaning) that one should not desire anything that is beyond one's capacity,<sup>a</sup> for everything that has measure is praiseworthy.<sup>b</sup> Wherefore in another passage sacred Scripture<sup>c</sup> (orders)<sup>d</sup> the measuring of the spiritual food that came forth from the ether and heaven like a spring and was called "manna"<sup>e</sup> by the Hebrews, that it might not be too much for anyone or too little. For it is necessary that teaching should be more abundant for the intelligent man, and less for the foolish man because of the fine equality of proportion.<sup>f</sup> In another place<sup>g</sup> (Scripture) also says that one should offer sacrifices in accordance with the power of the hands,<sup>h</sup> alluding to what has been said, lest there be too little or too much, the little being suited to little men and the great to great men; this is that equality which is most useful to life.<sup>i</sup> And so, he appropriately asks for "a little water," thereby measuring<sup>j</sup> his own nature, for this is little, being that of a servant. And to kindle the spirit of uttered discourse<sup>k</sup> with a more perfect nature, the Father did not leave any part empty but completely filled the vessel of

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., ἀξίον ἀποδέχεσθαι τὸ μηδενὸς ὀρέγεσθαι τῶν ὑπὲρ δύναμιν. Aucher renders inexactly, "oportet non desiderare ut recipiantur ampliora suis viribus."

<sup>b</sup> πᾶν γὰρ τὸ συμμετρίαν ἔχον, ἐπαινετόν is the reading of the Greek frag., which breaks off here and is resumed below, "For it is necessary, etc."

<sup>c</sup> ὁ ἱερός λόγος.

<sup>d</sup> There is no main verb in the Arm.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. mananay. Cf. De Sacr. Abelis 86, Quis Rer. Div. Heres 79 et al. on manna as spiritual food.

<sup>f</sup> For ἐν ταῖς ἀναλογίαις the Greek frag. (which again breaks off, to be resumed briefly below) has ἐν ταῖς ἀνάγκαις.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. Lev. xii. 8.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. in accordance with one's means.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) has καὶ τοῦτό γέ ἐστι τὸ βιωφέλεστατον ἴσον.

<sup>j</sup> Reading Arm. ἔαρ' eal (ptc.) for ἔαρ' el (inf.); so also Aucher, who renders, "mensurans."

<sup>k</sup> τῷ προφορικῷ λόγῳ, symbolized by Abraham's servant; see above, QG iv. 85.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

spirit, knowing that it naturally does not seek drink from her who has it,<sup>a</sup> but from the water-jar,<sup>b</sup> to teach us that it is not mortal man who pours out blessings<sup>c</sup> but the grace of God,<sup>d</sup> which is too high for man<sup>e</sup> and of which he prays to be thought worthy to partake, and that He give him to drink that which He had earlier put into (the vessel).<sup>f</sup>

103. (Gen. xxiv. 18) Why does she say in addition, "Master," (although she was) almost the mistress of the servant?<sup>g</sup>

This is an indication and proof of theoretical matters,<sup>h</sup> from which one ought to see that the passage<sup>i</sup> is not about mortal man but about the characters<sup>j</sup> of good men, who are zealous for immortality. And so, wisdom<sup>k</sup> rightly

<sup>a</sup> i.e. from wisdom or virtue, symbolized by Rebekah.

<sup>b</sup> The passage is obscure, and the correctness of the above rendering is uncertain. Aucher renders, "adhaec vero quia secundum verbum pronuntiativum, quod animam refovet, perfectionis erat naturae, nullam reliquit partem vacuum, sed totum ex toto vas animae implendum pater novit. Naturaliter, non ex habente, sed de hydria potum petit." In a footnote he adds "Vel, implevit pater. Quod noscens naturaliter, etc."

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "waters with good things."

<sup>d</sup> χάρις θεοῦ.

<sup>e</sup> So Aucher, "quae super hominem apparet." Perhaps the Greek original meant "which appears to man from above."

<sup>f</sup> Meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, "de qua rogat sibi largiri dignare, et illam, quam prius introducit (in os animae) potare facere."

<sup>g</sup> LXX ἡ δὲ εἶπεν, Πίε, κύριε. The sentence is briefly allegorized in De Poster. Caini 138 to mean that "only the wise man is free and a ruler, though he may have ten thousand masters of his body."

<sup>h</sup> θεωρητικῶν (οἱ ὁρατικῶν). Aucher renders, "speculativae sententiae."

<sup>i</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>j</sup> Or "types."

<sup>k</sup> ἡ σοφία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

desires to give to another some of the drink <sup>a</sup> which she has taken. For grudging envy does not touch the god-loving soul. And she calls him "Master," not with regard to the empty dignity of slavery or freedom, but with regard to the eagerness of will of the recipient. For he is not constant in ignorance and indiscipline <sup>b</sup> but truly concerns himself with discipline and knowledge, <sup>c</sup> for he labours on behalf of genuinely noble things.

*104. (Gen. xxiv. 18) Why does she hasten to lower the water-jar upon her arm? <sup>d</sup>

This is in harmony with the preceding. For (Scripture) wishes to reprove the character of the sophist <sup>e</sup> and to praise the true and genuine seeker of wisdom. For he who is trained in words <sup>f</sup> and uses one after the other, helps (only) one soul in training himself, but does not bring any profit to those who come to him. Because of their speed and their being produced one after the other his words when spoken do not enter their ears but are, as it were, poured away outside. This is what those men do who transfer water or wine all at once into a jar with a narrow mouth, for more is spilled than is put into (the jar). But he who genuinely philosophizes and shares (his wisdom) humanely, <sup>g</sup> gives profit through his words by inclining himself and making allowance for the character of the learner. For the pupil's capacity to learn is not like the teacher's capacity to teach, <sup>h</sup> since the one is perfect, and the other imperfect. <sup>i</sup> Wherefore it is fitting to bear in

<sup>a</sup> i.e. drinking-water.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "non enim doctrinae disciplinaeque odium fert."

<sup>c</sup> παιδείας καὶ ἐπιστήμης.

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ ἔσπευσεν καὶ καθείλεν τὴν ὕδριαν ἐπὶ τὸν βραχίονα αὐτῆς. The sentence is allegorized in similar fashion but at greater length in De Poster. Caini 140-147.

<sup>e</sup> τὸν σοφιστικὸν τρόπον.

<sup>f</sup> λόγοις.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ ἀνόθως φιλοσοφούμενος καὶ κοινωνῶν φιλανθρώπως.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag. (which begins here).

<sup>i</sup> ἐπειδὴ ὁ μὲν τέλειος, ὁ δὲ ἀτελής ἐστι, as in the Greek frag.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

mind and to weigh <sup>a</sup> the capacity of the one who is being educated.<sup>b</sup>

105. (Gen. xxiv. 18-19) What is the meaning of the words, "She gave him to drink until he ceased drinking" <sup>c</sup> ?

(Scripture) shows the teacher's amiability and friendliness toward the learner from the fact that she not only gave him to drink but until he ceased drinking. And it is an indication of the fact that one should not superficially <sup>d</sup> take account (of the learner's needs) <sup>e</sup> but should take cognizance of the impulse <sup>f</sup> of the disciple and pupil, and completely satisfy all his zeal.<sup>g</sup> For, as I was saying a little before,<sup>h</sup> one should not take either more or less water than one's capacity (to use). For where there is too much, it is spilled outside, and where there is too little, it does not fill but leaves an empty place in the soul of the learner.

106. (Gen. xxiv. 19) Why does she say, "And for thy camels I will draw water until they have all drunk" ?

(Scripture) dwells at length on the benevolence of the teacher who wishes not only to hand over and entrust scientific knowledge <sup>i</sup> (to the pupil) but to put it in order <sup>j</sup> and make it stick to him, since she gives drink to his

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. has only one verb, στοχάζεσθαι.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν τοῦ παιδευομένου δύναμιν, as in the Greek frag. (with change of case).

<sup>c</sup> So the LXX, καὶ ἐπότισεν αὐτὸν ἕως ἐπαύσατο πίνων. The Heb. is slightly different, "and she gave him to drink and (i.e. until) she ceased giving him to drink." The verse is somewhat differently allegorized in De Poster. Caini 147.

<sup>d</sup> οὐκ ἐπιπολαίως.

<sup>e</sup> The meaning of the Arm. text is not altogether clear. Aucher renders, "cujus indicium est haud obiter facere enarrationem."

<sup>f</sup> τὴν ὁρμήν.

<sup>g</sup> τὴν σπουδὴν.

<sup>h</sup> In QG iv. 102, 104.

<sup>i</sup> τὰ ἐπιστημονικά.

<sup>j</sup> κοσμεῖν vel sim.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

memory,<sup>a</sup> of which the camels are symbols. For genuine teachers and instructors<sup>b</sup> direct their teaching not to display but to the profit of their pupils, and compel them to repeat from memory what has been said by them,<sup>c</sup> thus firmly impressing upon them what they have heard.

107. (Gen. xxiv. 20) Why does (Scripture) say, "She hastened and poured out the water-jar into the drinking-trough"<sup>d</sup>?

In man the drinking-trough is a symbol of hearing,<sup>e</sup> for it is through hearing that the flow of words comes into the mind and soul.<sup>f</sup> Excellently, moreover, is it said that she poured out the whole water-jar, for thereby (Scripture) clearly shows that the good is far removed from envy and grudgingness, for without storing up and keeping them for itself, it gives up the various kinds of knowledge<sup>g</sup> and hides nothing, as some sophists<sup>h</sup> do. And the reason for this is that some men because of small-mindedness<sup>i</sup> suppose that there are only those things in nature which they alone know. But the good man, on the contrary, knows that he knows little or nothing rather than the illimitable greatness of nature,<sup>j</sup> wherefore he has learned to take water from the divine spring, as though having

<sup>a</sup> τὰς μνήμας, plural as in the parallel, De Poster. Caini 148-150.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, "fideles magistri, genuinique doctores."

<sup>c</sup> i. e. the teachers.

<sup>d</sup> So LXX, καὶ ἔσπευσεν καὶ ἐξεκένωσεν τὴν ὑδρίαν ἐπὶ τὸ ποτιστήριον. The last word is taken by Philo, in the parallel, De Poster. Caini 150-152, as a synonym of δεξαμενὴ and as a symbol of the learner's soul or understanding.

<sup>e</sup> τοῦ ἀκούειν.

<sup>f</sup> εἰς τὸν νοῦν (οἷον τὴν διάνοιαν) καὶ τὴν ψυχὴν.

<sup>g</sup> τὰ τῆς ἐπιστήμης εἶδη.

<sup>h</sup> σοφισταί.

<sup>i</sup> δι' ὀλιγοψυχίαν.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ ἄπειρον τῆς φύσεως μέγεθος. Cf. De Poster. Caini 152 πάνυ εὐήθεις ὅσοι πρὸς τὸ πέρασ ἡστυοσοῦν ἐπιστήμης ἀφικέσθαι διανοήθησαν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

nothing of his own and receiving (everything) from the pure and unfailing wisdom of God.<sup>a</sup>

108. (Gen. xxiv. 21) Why is he no longer called "boy" <sup>b</sup> but "man," for (Scripture) says, "The man examined and studied her and stood silent so as to know whether the Lord God would bring success to him" <sup>c</sup> ?

Because while he was preparing to learn and was at the beginning <sup>d</sup> of instruction,<sup>e</sup> he was considered to be of the boys and minors,<sup>f</sup> but when he began to progress,<sup>g</sup> he was considered a rational man,<sup>h</sup> who was indeed able to use uttered discourse.<sup>i</sup> And this progressive man is a type of character <sup>j</sup> and sees, as it were, a most beautiful image <sup>k</sup> and the nature of a wise teacher of the wisdom of knowledge.<sup>l</sup> And also because he stood silent a long while,<sup>m</sup> giving place to that which spoke in him without mouth or tongue or instruments or voice, (namely) the divine Logos,<sup>n</sup> understanding and seeing that path which leads to virtue and happiness,<sup>o</sup> and whether he will reach it. For in truth there is no prospering <sup>p</sup> for anyone else (or) for those (engaged) in material things,<sup>q</sup> whether as private citizens or as kings.<sup>r</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἐκ τῆς ἀκράτου καὶ ἀδιαλείπτου σοφίας θεοῦ. <sup>b</sup> παῖς.

<sup>c</sup> The LXX reads slightly differently ὁ δὲ ἄνθρωπος κατεμάνθανεν αὐτήν (Heb. "contemplated her") καὶ παρεσιώπα τοῦ γινῶναι ἢ εὐόδωκεν κύριος τὴν ὁδὸν ἢ οὐ.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "had a beginning." <sup>e</sup> διδασκαλίας.

<sup>f</sup> ἐν τοῖς ἀτελέσι. <sup>g</sup> ὡς ἐγένετο προκόπτων.

<sup>h</sup> ἄνθρωπος λογικός.

<sup>i</sup> τῷ προφορικῷ λόγῳ, see above, Q<sup>U</sup> iv. 85 notes.

<sup>j</sup> τύπος ἡθῶν vel sim. <sup>k</sup> Or "picture."

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. lit. = σοφοῦ διδασκάλου φύσιν σοφίας ἐπιστήμης. This can hardly have been the original.

<sup>m</sup> Or "sufficiently."

<sup>n</sup> τῷ θείῳ λόγῳ. <sup>o</sup> εἰς ἀρετὴν καὶ εὐδαιμονίαν.

<sup>p</sup> εὐδοεῖν vel sim. <sup>q</sup> ἐν τοῖς ὑλικοῖς.

<sup>r</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, I think, "alias vero prosperitas in nullo constitit eorum, quae in materiis sunt, sive privata sive publica aut regia."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

109. (Gen. xxiv. 22) Why, after all the camels ceased drinking, did the man give ear-rings of gold and bracelets <sup>a</sup> to the virgin ?

This is something most natural,<sup>b</sup> for he who learns has also learned by remembering the words, " And do thou drink," <sup>c</sup> which was (the same as) learning.<sup>d</sup> And his seeing the camels watered was the equivalent of revivifying his memory.<sup>e</sup> And he returned thanks and gratitude to his teacher very genuinely and appropriately,<sup>f</sup> for in return for what he had heard he gave the ear-rings as an adornment to her ears, for the word was hers who was teaching, and the ears were his who received the teaching. And in return for what she had done, (he gave) a memorial (consisting of) bracelets, an adornment of memory and deeds.

*110. (Gen. xxiv. 22) Why does (Scripture) speak of ear-rings of a drachma in weight <sup>g</sup> and of bracelets of gold of ten drachmas <sup>h</sup> but not of five and five of gold ? <sup>i</sup>

Altogether excellently has it apportioned the two into <sup>a</sup> Scripture specifies two bracelets. In De Congressu 113, where the verse is briefly allegorized (see also the next section), Philo transfers the number two to the ear-rings.

<sup>b</sup> φυσικώτατόν τι.

<sup>c</sup> Cf. Gen. xxiv. 18. Philo does not comment on this phrase in dealing with the verse in QG iv. 103-105.

<sup>d</sup> As Aucher remarks in a footnote, the syntax of the whole section is " nimis abstrusa obfuscataque."

<sup>e</sup> ἴσον τῷ ζωπυρεῖν τὴν μνήμην. On the camels as a symbol of memory see above, QG iv. 92 notes.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher " cum munere familiarissimo."

<sup>g</sup> LXX ἀνὰ δραχμὴν (v.l. δίδραχμον) ὀλκῆς: Heb. " a beqa' (half-shekel) its weight": Arm. O.T. " a dahekan (usu. = drachma or denarius) in weight." In De Congressu 113 Philo has δύο μὲν ἐνώτια ἀνὰ δραχμὴν ὀλκῆν. Here the Arm. translator probably uses k'ank'ar " talent " in the sense of a drachma.

<sup>h</sup> LXX δύο ψέλια . . . δέκα χρυσῶν ὀλκὴ αὐτόν, so also Heb. In De Congressu 113 Philo has ψέλια δὲ δέκα χρυσῶν.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. ear-rings and bracelets of five drachmas each.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

one <sup>a</sup> in order to change the bad nature of the dyad and adapt it to that of the good monad. And it has taken the dyad and left it undivided,<sup>b</sup> for ten is divisible into two fives. And the decad is better than the pentad, for the former is a most perfect, complete and superior number and is appropriate to the divine mysteries,<sup>c</sup> while the number five is the measure of the senses,<sup>d</sup> and the senses bear the same relation to the mind <sup>e</sup> as does the traveller to the king.<sup>f</sup> And it would be folly to change the better into the worse. Now, what sort of nature the decad has both in respect of intelligible substance <sup>g</sup> and in respect of sense-perceptible (substance) <sup>h</sup> has already been stated in the book On Numbers.<sup>i</sup> Now, however, this much must be said, that both in the world and in man the decad is all.<sup>j</sup> In the world, together with the number seven (of planets) and the eighth sphere of fixed stars and those sublunary things of one species which are changeable among themselves,<sup>k</sup> the divine Logos <sup>l</sup> is the governor and administrator <sup>m</sup> of all things, since it has melodically harmonized <sup>a</sup> Apparently Philo means that it replaced the equation 5 : 5 by the proportion 1 : 10, where 10 is considered a kind of unity, as in De Congressu 105.

<sup>b</sup> ἀδιαίρετον.

<sup>c</sup> Or "thoughts."

<sup>d</sup> τῶν αἰσθήσεων.

<sup>e</sup> πρὸς τὸν νοῦν (or τὴν διάνοιαν).

<sup>f</sup> ὁ ὁδοιπὸρος πρὸς τὸν βασιλέα. On the Philonic concept of the king's highway of spiritual progress see Joseph Pascher, Η ΒΑΣΙΛΙΚΗ ΟΔΟΣ . . . bei Philon von Alexandria (Paderborn, 1931), chap. iii, "Der mystische Wanderer auf dem 'Königsweg.'"

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ νοερὰν οὐσίαν.

<sup>h</sup> κατὰ τὴν αἰσθητικὴν.

<sup>i</sup> ἐν τῷ Περὶ Ἀριθμῶν. This lost book of Philo has been reconstructed in outline by Staehle, pp. 1-18.

<sup>j</sup> Apparently in the sense of all-important or the sum total.

<sup>k</sup> Such as earth, water, air.

<sup>l</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος. In De Congressu 103-105 the tenth part of the universe is said to be the alone truly existent God. The other nine parts are, as here, the seven planets, the sphere of fixed stars and the sublunary world; these constitute the "seeming sense-perceptible God."

<sup>m</sup> κυβερνήτης καὶ οἰκονόμος vel sim.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the chorus of the nine musical (intervals).<sup>a</sup> And in our body and soul there are also seven irrational parts <sup>b</sup> and the mind, which is a single part.<sup>c</sup> Now, the divine Logos is concerned with these nine (parts),<sup>d</sup> being the leader and ruler of harmony, and by it the nine parts are harmonized, and melodies and songs sound as one. Therefore Moses admits that the decad is holy, naturally leaving the ennead to creation,<sup>e</sup> and the decad to the divine Logos. And rightly is it holy, for it echoes divine things, trumpeting <sup>f</sup> the theme of forgiveness <sup>g</sup> in concordant and antiphonal chants leading to one and the same mixture of harmony. And necessarily does (Scripture) apportion one to the ears and ten to the hands,<sup>h</sup> for one is the beginning of the numbers,<sup>i</sup> and ten is the end; and these are symbols of things. For it is proper to hear first and then to act, since we learn not for the sake of learning but for the sake of doing.<sup>j</sup> And one is proportioned and united to hearing, for both of them are a beginning, one of numbers, and the

<sup>a</sup> Philo seems here to liken the ninefold visible world to an harmonic progression or scale of nine notes.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπτά ἄλογα μέρη.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. body and soul = 2, + seven irrational parts = 9, + the mind = 10.

<sup>d</sup> The meaning of Arm. darḡnam (usu. = στρέφεισθαι or ἀναστρέφεισθαι) is not clear here. Aucher renders, "itidem de istis novem distinctionibus disponit."

<sup>e</sup> i.e. to created things.

<sup>f</sup> Or "playing" (a stringed instrument), but the rendering given above is favoured by the context, see the next note.

<sup>g</sup> ἄφεσιν. The Arm. glossator's guess that Philo here refers to the Day of Atonement, ushered in by the blowing of trumpets and falling on the 10th day of Tishri (Lev. xxiii. 24, 27), is confirmed by the parallel in De Congressu 107.

<sup>h</sup> Philo refers to the one-drachma weight of the ear-rings and ten-drachma weight of the bracelets.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. of the digits.

<sup>j</sup> So the brief Greek frag. printed by Mai, ἀκούσαι δεῖ πρῶτον, εἶτα ἐργάσασθαι· μαθάνομεν γὰρ οὐ τοῦ μαθεῖν χάριν ἀλλὰ τοῦ πράξαι. In De Congressu 113 Philo allegorizes the two numbers a little differently.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

other of learning,<sup>a</sup> while the decad (is the beginning) of doing, for it is the end of the numbers and is the act of teaching, through which we learn. And the monad differs from one as the archetype surpasses and differs from the copy, for the monad is the archetype while one is a likeness of the monad.<sup>b</sup> Why? Because one can admit the completion<sup>c</sup> of many (as in the case of) a herd or chorus or family or nation or army or city, for each of these is one. But the monad does not come from many, for it is unsharing and has no association<sup>d</sup> and is without complexity<sup>e</sup> because of its aloneness, as its very name shows. Now this monad is what Moses writes of in the beginning when he commands that half a didrachmon be brought as first fruits.<sup>f</sup> And this<sup>g</sup> was a very appropriate ornament to be fitted to the ears of Rebekah (who was a symbol of) alertness<sup>h</sup> and perseverance,<sup>i</sup> that she might listen and bear in mind the unity<sup>j</sup> of the divine Logos.

111. (Gen. xxiv. 23) Why does he say, "Whose daughter

<sup>a</sup> i.e. one is the beginning of the series of digits, and hearing is the beginning of learning.

<sup>b</sup> This agrees closely with the passage from Joh. Lydus given in the Appendix.

<sup>c</sup> τὴν τελειότητα : Aucher "perfectionem."

<sup>d</sup> κοινωνιάν.

<sup>e</sup> ἀνευ συμπλοκῆς vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 186-189 on Ex. xxx. 13-15 where a tax of half a didrachmon (Heb. shekel) is prescribed as a "ransom" for souls during the taking of the census. On that biblical passage Philo comments that the half didrachmon "is both a drachma and a monad." First fruits (as tithes) are included in his allegories of the number ten in De Congressu 95. Here Philo seems to combine the two allegories. <sup>g</sup> i.e. the ear-ring of one-drachma weight.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "raising up" : Aucher "perseverantiae."

<sup>i</sup> The two Arm. nouns probably represent a single Greek noun, ἐπιμονῆς or ὑπομονῆς, which are the allegorical explanations of the name Rebekah given elsewhere by Philo.

<sup>j</sup> Or "monad," here fancifully connected with ἐπιμονή or ὑπομονή.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

art thou? Tell me whether there is to thy father a place for us to stay" <sup>a</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>b</sup> is very easy to understand. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>c</sup> he is struck speechless and astonished by the beauty of the veritably true virgin <sup>d</sup> and her unstained, intact and holy soul, which <sup>e</sup> remains constant in doing good and worthy deeds. And he is at a loss to tell whether perhaps it was one not a mortal who begot her, and so he asks, "Whose daughter art thou?" "For," he says, "I see that no one who is created and born is worthy to be thought the father of such fair virtue," <sup>f</sup> as though saying, "Instruct and correct my ignorance by revealing thy lineage and the source <sup>g</sup> of thy beautiful youth. <sup>h</sup>" Since he <sup>i</sup> was embarrassed by modest shame lest he seem to boast too greatly and freely in believing that her lineage was heavenly and marvellous, he asks again immediately, "Is there indeed a place and space for us with thy Father in the ether and heaven or, still higher, with their governor, the divine Logos? <sup>j</sup> For, being there, we should leave all mortal and corruptible things <sup>k</sup> behind. Or shall we be altogether kept back and shut in, planted and rooted in the earth and with heads bent down as if we were trees on a cliff?"

112. (Gen. xxiv. 25) What is the meaning of the words, "There is straw and much fodder with us and a place to lodge" <sup>l</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> So LXX, εἰ ἔστιν παρὰ τῷ πατρὶ σου τόπος ἡμῖν καταλύσαι.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> τῆς ὄντως ἀληθοῦς παρθένου.

<sup>e</sup> Or "who" (i.e. the virgin).

<sup>f</sup> ἀρετῆς. <sup>g</sup> Lit. "planting."

<sup>h</sup> Variant "beautiful humanity."

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. glossator, who takes Eleazar to be the implied subject, seems to me to be right as against Aucher who takes Rebekah to be the subject.

<sup>j</sup> τῷ κυβερνήτῃ αὐτῶν, τῷ θείῳ λόγῳ.

<sup>k</sup> πάντα τὰ θνητὰ καὶ φθαρτά. <sup>l</sup> LXX τοῦ καταλύσαι.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

Since some of the soul is rational and some irrational,<sup>a</sup> she mentions also those things which are fitting for the irrational part and are suitable and necessary,<sup>b</sup> (namely) straw and fodder and whatever is the food of animals.<sup>c</sup> And she gives a special place to the rational part for dissolving and breaking up and destroying<sup>d</sup> the passions,<sup>e</sup> inasmuch as each of them is poisonous.

113. (Gen. xxiv. 26) What is the meaning of the words, "The man, being well pleased, prostrated himself before the Lord<sup>f</sup> " ?

When the man who has been disciplined<sup>g</sup> hears that which he has especially desired, (namely) that he is not homeless and not kept outside but has found a place and space and has received the word of virtue,<sup>h</sup> he is very well pleased and receives (it) willingly, and in gratitude for this prostrates himself.

114. (Gen. xxiv. 27) Why does he name, not his Lord or God, but that of Abraham, saying, "Blessed is the Lord God of my lord Abraham"<sup>i</sup> ?

First of all, he lays upon servants (the obligation) to love their lords and to honour their lords and hold them in greater esteem than themselves. In the second place, he wishes to show clearly the advantage (that comes) from teaching<sup>j</sup> to him who has been properly and genuinely<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τῆς ψυχῆς τὸ μὲν λογικόν, τὸ δὲ ἄλογον.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders somewhat more freely, "dicit adesse illa quoque, quae conveniunt bruto ad fruendum cum decore."

<sup>c</sup> τῶν ἀλόγων.

<sup>d</sup> Here, as Aucher notes, Philo plays on the double meaning of καταλύσαι. <sup>e</sup> τὰ πάθη : Aucher "cupiditates."

<sup>f</sup> So the LXX, καὶ εὐδοκῆσας (Heb. "and bowed") ὁ ἄνθρωπος προσεκύνησεν κυρίῳ.

<sup>g</sup> Prob. ἐπαιδεύθη.

<sup>h</sup> τὸν τῆς ἀρετῆς λόγον.

<sup>i</sup> So LXX, Εὐλογητὸς κύριος ὁ θεὸς τοῦ κυρίου μου Ἀβραάμ.

<sup>j</sup> ἐκ διδασκαλίας.

<sup>k</sup> οἰκείως καὶ γνησίως vel sim. : Aucher "familiariter ac fideliter."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

taught. And profiting from that great saying, "Know thyself," he chose and thought it best to be called, not a servant of God,<sup>a</sup> but an attendant of the intercessor.<sup>b</sup> And the intercessor is a servant of the Creator of all and Father. But he who transgresses this order,<sup>c</sup> which nature has arranged, perpetrates a great injustice<sup>d</sup> by setting before himself a disorder of confusion.<sup>e</sup>

115. (Gen. xxiv. 27) What is the meaning of the words, "He has not abandoned His righteousness and truth to<sup>f</sup> my lord"<sup>g</sup>?

Very naturally<sup>h</sup> does (Scripture) show that these very same virtues,<sup>i</sup> righteousness and truth,<sup>j</sup> are especially and pre-eminently<sup>k</sup> divine. For among the human race there is nothing pure<sup>l</sup> but (only) what is mixed. For there is mixed with it in slight measure both falseness and unrighteousness. And the righteousness and truth among men are, to speak properly, likenesses and images,<sup>m</sup> while those with God are paradigmatic principles and types<sup>n</sup> and ideas.<sup>o</sup> Deservedly, therefore, does he give thanks that he<sup>p</sup> had both (virtues) and that God gives him both virtues uninterruptedly and daily, and that there grows<sup>q</sup>

<sup>a</sup> In the Arm. the negative directly precedes "of God."

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. uses two words to render παρακλήτου.

<sup>c</sup> τάξιν. <sup>d</sup> ἀδικίαν.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "proposita sibi morum dissolutione perturbata."
<sup>f</sup> Lit. "from."

<sup>g</sup> LXX οὐκ ἐγκατέλειπεν τὴν δικαιοσύνην (variant ἔλεος, cf. Heb. hasdô "His kindness") καὶ τὴν ἀλήθειαν ἀπὸ τοῦ κυρίου μου.

<sup>h</sup> φυσικώτερον. <sup>i</sup> αὐτὰς τὰς ἀρετάς.

<sup>j</sup> Both nouns, here and below, are in the plural.

<sup>k</sup> διαφόρως: variant "symbolically."

<sup>l</sup> ἄκρατον.

<sup>m</sup> ὁμοιότητες (or μιμήματα) καὶ εἰκόνες.

<sup>n</sup> The Arm. lit. = παραδειγματικαὶ ἀρχαὶ καὶ τύποι. Possibly, however, Philo wrote ἀρχέτυποι.

<sup>o</sup> ἰδέαι. <sup>p</sup> i.e. Abraham.

<sup>q</sup> Or "wells up" or "bubbles up."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

in his soul an estrangement from falsehood and unrighteousness and a familiarity <sup>a</sup> with truth and righteousness.

116. (Gen. xxiv. 28) What is the meaning of the words, "The young woman, running into the house, told her mother" <sup>b</sup> ?

A virtuous soul is a lover of the good <sup>c</sup> and has a status that is greatly inflexible and unchanging. For when it perceives that someone is not quickly satiated with desire but is constant and genuine,<sup>d</sup> it rejoices and makes haste and does not restrain <sup>e</sup> the swiftness of its joy but tells the whole maternal household of wisdom <sup>f</sup> with a sober and prudent festivity of joy and dance and still other lavish displays of welcome, such as he shows who is not strange and spurious in his desire,<sup>g</sup> in order that those who hear it may rejoice and become joyful.

117. (Gen. xxiv. 29) Who is the brother of Rebekah, whose name is Laban ?

Our soul has a natural brother who is rational and one who is irrational.<sup>h</sup> Now to the rational part is assigned Rebekah the virgin, (who is) constancy <sup>i</sup> and perseverance ; and Laban (is assigned) to the irrational part, for this (name) is to be translated as "whiteness," which is a figure of the honours (shown) to the splendour of sense-

<sup>a</sup> ἀλλοτριώσεις μὲν . . . οικειότης δέ.

<sup>b</sup> LXX (like Heb.) reads a little differently καὶ δραμοῦσα ἡ παῖς ἀπήγγειλεν εἰς τὸν οἶκον τῆς μητρὸς αὐτῆς κατὰ τὰ ῥήματα ταῦτα.

<sup>c</sup> φιλάγαθός (or φιλόκαλός) ἐστι ἡ σπουδαία ψυχή.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "fidelis."

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "bear" or "contain." <sup>f</sup> σοφίας.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher, construing less accurately, I think, renders, "quae omnia illis, qui genuinum habent desiderium, demonstrat."

<sup>h</sup> ὁ μὲν λογικός, ὁ δὲ ἄλογος.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. lit. = ἀνάστασις or ἔγερσις, but see QG iv. 97 note c.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

perceptible things.<sup>a</sup> For one should know very well that just as there are three different kinds of literal elements of speech,<sup>b</sup> namely vowels, semi-vowels and consonants,<sup>c</sup> so also is it with our nature. For the mind <sup>d</sup> is like the vowel, and the senses <sup>e</sup> like the semi-vowel, and the body like the consonant. However, I shall begin my exposition from the end.<sup>f</sup> For just as the consonant by itself alone has no sound at all but (only) when combined with a vowel achieves a literal sound,<sup>g</sup> so also is the body by itself alone unmoving ; and it is moved by the rational soul <sup>h</sup> through the several organic parts toward that which is suitable and necessary to it. Again, just as the semi-vowels make lame and imperfect sounds, but, if they are combined with vowels, make fully articulated speech,<sup>i</sup> so also is sense-perception (only) half effective <sup>j</sup> and imperfect, and it occupies a position midway between the mind and the body, for it has a part in each of them ; it is not inanimate <sup>k</sup> like the body, and it is not intelligent <sup>l</sup> like reason.<sup>m</sup> But when the mind <sup>n</sup> by extending itself <sup>o</sup> is fused with, and engraved on it,<sup>p</sup> it prepares it to see and hear rationally

<sup>a</sup> Construction and meaning are not clear. Aucher renders, "indicium claritatis rerum secundum sensus." The interpretation of "Laban" as "whiteness" and as a symbol of sense-perception is found in several other passages in Philo, e.g. De Fuga 44.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. De Agricultura 136 τὰ στοιχεῖα τῆς ἐγγραμμάτου φωνῆς.

<sup>c</sup> φωνήεντα καὶ ἡμίφωνα καὶ ἄφωνα, cf. De Congressu 150.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς. <sup>e</sup> ἡ αἰσθησις.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. from the last of the three terms.

<sup>g</sup> See above, note b.

<sup>h</sup> ὑπὸ τῆς λογικῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>i</sup> ἔναρθρον φωνήν.

<sup>j</sup> ἡμίεργος. Aucher "semivivus."

<sup>k</sup> ἀψυχος.

<sup>l</sup> νοερά ἢ νοητή.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ λογισμὸς. <sup>n</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>o</sup> ἐκτείνων ἑαυτόν.

<sup>p</sup> i.e. sense-perception. Perhaps the original was "when the impression (τύπος) is fused with the senses by the mind."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

and at the same time to speak with reason and to perceive rationally. However, in the same way as the vowels by themselves alone and also when combined with other (sounds) produce sound, so also is the mind moved by itself alone without anything else, since intelligible things are received and grasped by themselves alone,<sup>a</sup> and it is also the cause of the movement of other things, giving release<sup>b</sup> like the leader of a chorus.<sup>c</sup> But, as I have said, the senses (are moved) to bodily perception by the rational part and are, as it were, effectively brought to their natural<sup>d</sup> functions by the voices of the organic parts.<sup>e</sup>

118. (Gen. xxiv. 30-31) Why does Laban, after seeing the ear-rings and the bracelets on his sister, say to the youth,<sup>f</sup> "Come, enter,<sup>g</sup> blessed of the Lord.<sup>h</sup> Why dost thou stand without?"?

In the first place, this is meant to show clearly that whoever belongs to the characters which measure all

<sup>a</sup> The last clause was probably a gen. absolute construction in the Greek original. Aucher, construing differently, renders, "et mens, tam per se solum sine ullo alio movetur, ab intellectualibus per se adjuta."

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. word and its cognates usu. = ἄφεσις. Aucher renders, "vigorem" and in a footnote suggests "permissionem sive motionem."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "tamquam dux cohorti."

<sup>d</sup> Variant "logical."

<sup>e</sup> Philo apparently means that the meeting of the senses and external objects, which results in perception, is like the meeting of vowels and consonants, which results in speech.

<sup>f</sup> LXX πρὸς τὸν ἄνθρωπον: Heb. "to the man." Philo omits most of vs. 30 on Rebekah's report to Laban and the latter's coming out to Eleazar.

<sup>g</sup> LXX Δεῦρο, εἴσελθε: Heb. "come in."

<sup>h</sup> So Heb. and Arm. O.T.: LXX εὐλογητὸς κύριος. Since Philo has the LXX reading below, it is probable that here the Arm. translator or a copyist has accommodated his text to that of the Arm. O.T.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

things by the senses <sup>a</sup> is always of necessity bribed <sup>b</sup> by something sense-perceptible, <sup>c</sup> and is unable to judge <sup>d</sup> in purity and holiness without gifts. <sup>e</sup> But when he sees gold, he calls it to him, and when (it) is called, he becomes more subservient. And this is something most natural. <sup>f</sup> And when he sees the ornament of the ears, (namely) the monad, and the ornament of the hands and deeds, (namely) the decad, <sup>g</sup> he is struck by the holy appearance of lordship, <sup>h</sup> and gives thanks and says in a loud voice, "Blessed (be) the Lord." <sup>i</sup> With Him is good teaching, and (for Him) <sup>j</sup> good works are performed, as is indeed fitting, by offering the first fruits <sup>k</sup>; and the first fruits of words <sup>l</sup> (is) the word in accordance with the monad, for just as the monad is holy among numbers, so also is the word (holy) in teaching. And (the first fruits) of deeds (is the word) <sup>m</sup> in accordance with the decad, for just as the decad is the end <sup>n</sup> of numbers, so also is the deed <sup>o</sup> in learning.

119. (Gen. xxiv. 31) Why does Laban say, "I have prepared the house and a place for the camels," although Rebekah had (earlier) added the "lodging," saying, <sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Laban is a symbol of the sensual character (τύπος or τρόπος). Aucher renders, "quicumque secundum sensum praefert argumentum aliquod exemplare."

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. = δωροκοπέται, a word not elsewhere used by Philo. Possibly the original here had δωροδοκεῖ.

<sup>c</sup> ὑπ' αἰσθητικοῦ τινοῦ.

<sup>d</sup> For datel = κρίνειν, two Arm. mss. have dasel = τάττειν.

<sup>e</sup> ἄνευ δώρων.

<sup>f</sup> φυσικώτατόν τι.

<sup>g</sup> See above, QG iv. 110.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. lit. = τῇ ἀγία (or ἱερᾷ) κυριότητος φαντασία. Perhaps the original was τῇ ἀγία καὶ θείᾳ φαντασία.

<sup>i</sup> See p. 401, note h.

<sup>j</sup> The context makes it necessary to supply these words.

<sup>k</sup> τὰ πρωτογεννήματα or τὰς ἀπαρχὰς (τῶν πρώτων καρπῶν).

<sup>l</sup> λόγων.

<sup>m</sup> Here too the context requires a supplement.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ τέλος.

<sup>o</sup> Lit. "the doing."

<sup>p</sup> In Gen. xxiv. 25, see above, QG iv. 112.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

“ And there is much fodder with us and a place to lodge ” ?

(Scripture) reports a very great difference of superiority <sup>a</sup> between the mind of the virgin, which makes use of nothing sense-perceptible, <sup>b</sup> and the class of the type which receives the sense-perceptible. <sup>c</sup> For the loosing <sup>d</sup> and inactivity of those things which are subject to generation and destruction are to instruct us to prepare a place in the soul in this fashion. But the other says that he is prepared, not for loosing, but for the reception of irrational natures, <sup>e</sup> for he is unable to deny what he experiences. <sup>f</sup>

120. (Gen. xxiv. 34) Why does the elderly man begin in this way, “ I am the boy <sup>g</sup> of Abraham ” ?

The deeper meaning <sup>h</sup> of that which is said is very easy to discover and see. <sup>i</sup> For a young boy has the same position in relation to a mature man as does uttered discourse <sup>j</sup> to the inner (discourse) in the reason. <sup>k</sup> But the literal meaning <sup>l</sup> gives the praise of him who is past old age. <sup>m</sup> For whereas others make the error of declaring themselves to be of (such and such) a family or country, he (declares himself to be) of his lord, whom he considers <sup>a</sup> διαφορὰν ὑπερβολῆς μεγίστην.

<sup>b</sup> αἰσθητικῶ.

<sup>c</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, “ et inter exemplum ejus qui sensibilia recepit in cognitionem.” Possibly the original was “ the type of those who receive the class (γένος) of sense-perceptible things.”

<sup>d</sup> Philo here, as earlier, plays on the double meaning of καταλύειν, i.e. “ to loose ” and “ to lodge.”

<sup>e</sup> ἀλόγων φύσεων.

<sup>f</sup> Or “ bears.”

<sup>g</sup> LXX παῖς, i.e. “ servant ” (as in Heb.). See above, QG iv. 108.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> Or “ conjecture.”

<sup>j</sup> On Abraham’s servant as a symbol of the λόγος προφορικός see above, QG iv. 85, 88.

<sup>k</sup> ἐν τῷ λογισμῶ.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>m</sup> L. A. Post reconstructs the original as τὸ δὲ ῥητόν εὐλόγως ἀποδίδωσι Μένανδρος (misread as μὲν ἀνδρός) ἐν Ὑπεργήρῳ, “ Menander rendered the literal meaning eloquently in his Superannuated.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

his country and family.<sup>a</sup> Going on with the trimeters from that point, he says fittingly,<sup>b</sup> "To me the lord is a city, a refuge and a law and a judge of every righteous and unrighteous man. It befits me to live with the servant mind."<sup>c</sup>

121. (Gen. xxiv. 35) Why does he say, "The Lord has blessed my lord exceedingly, and he has been exalted. And He has given him sheep<sup>d</sup> and cattle and gold and silver<sup>e</sup> and men-servants and maid-servants and camels and asses" ?

It is fitting and proper to admire the literal meaning<sup>f</sup> inasmuch as among the benefits<sup>g</sup> mentioned the divine wonders fall to the lot of the sovereign ruler,<sup>h</sup> while the human (benefits fall to the lot) of the minister and servant. For wonderful and divine is that benefit which is the bles-

<sup>a</sup> Post suggests that Menander's verses were something like the following :

ἄλλοι μὲν ἀποκρίνοιντ' ἂν εἰπόντες γένους τίνος εἰσὶ καὶ πατρίδος, ἐγὼ δὲ δεσπότου, ὡς ὄντος ἀντὶ πατρίδος ἡμῖν καὶ γένους.

The Arm. translator prob. read ἀποκλίνοντο instead of ἀποκρίνοιντο.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek original, Post suggests, was ἐντεῦθεν προβαίνων εἰς τὸ πρόσω τῶν τριμέτρων ἐξῆς ποιεῖ.

<sup>c</sup> The original passage (Frag. 581 Koch) reads

ἐμοὶ πόλις ἐστὶ καὶ καταφυγὴ καὶ νόμος καὶ τοῦ δικαίου τοῦ τ' ἀδίκου παντὸς κριτῆς ὁ δεσπότης. πρὸς τοῦτον ἕνα δεῖ ζῆν ἐμέ.

F. G. Allinson in the Loeb Menander renders the passage, "For me my master is at once a city and a place of refuge and law and judge in everything of what is right and wrong. With eyes on him alone I needs must live."

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. dowar usu. = ταῦρος but here apparently = πρόβατον.

<sup>e</sup> LXX and Heb. have "silver and gold," in reverse order.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> τῶν ἀγαθῶν.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the mind (τὸ ἡγεμονικόν), symbolized by Abraham.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

sing <sup>a</sup> of God, and this is good counsel, <sup>b</sup> while the mortal and material ones are human. And these it was proper for those to hear who receive bodily and external things. For there are two forms <sup>c</sup>: one is he who is said to be wholly worthy of God <sup>d</sup>; and the other is those hearers who are not yet purified. (God) distributed and gave to each his own good, at the same time teaching (us) which of them should precede the other. But as for the allegorical meaning, <sup>e</sup> to whomever God graciously gives <sup>f</sup> good counsel and prudence, <sup>g</sup> to these He (also) gives authority and rule of power <sup>h</sup> over the senses and all the irrational parts <sup>i</sup> and whatever things are blindly invented in accordance with vain opinions by one who is involved <sup>j</sup> in a blind way of life. Wherefore he adds, "exceedingly" and "was exalted," for the good counsel was not superficial <sup>k</sup> nor yet of little worth. <sup>l</sup> And those who are strong in prudence easily prevail <sup>m</sup> and exalt themselves over secondary and tertiary benefits. But all those who receive mighty power <sup>n</sup> through wisdom and prudence are elevated to heavenly greatness and height. Wherefore they rule in truth over earthly and subterranean things (as if) seizing (their own) possessions.

122. (Gen. xxiv. 36) Why does he say, "Sarah, the wife

<sup>a</sup> εὐλογία.                      <sup>b</sup> εὐβουλία (or εὐφροσύνη).                      <sup>c</sup> εἶδη.

<sup>d</sup> Construction and meaning uncertain, but apparently reflecting ὅς ἐλέγετο εἶναι οἴκοθεν τοῦ κυρίου ἄξιος. Aucher renders, "quod dicebatur a domo domini subjecto condigno."

Two Arm. mss. lack ἰ ταυῆ = οἴκοθεν: one lacks ταυῆ = τοῦ κυρίου.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ δ' ἐν ἀλληγορίᾳ.

<sup>f</sup> χαρίζεται.

<sup>g</sup> φρόνησιν.

<sup>h</sup> Variant "rule of providing" (προνοίας).

<sup>i</sup> τῶν αἰσθήσεων καὶ πάντων τῶν ἀλόγων μερῶν.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "mixed."

<sup>k</sup> ἐπιπόλαιος.

<sup>l</sup> εὐτελής vel sim.: Aucher "humile."

<sup>m</sup> Construction not clear. Aucher, construing differently, renders, "ita ut facile exaltari queat per prudentiam."

<sup>n</sup> δύνᾱμιν ἰσχυράν vel sim.: Aucher "virtutem fortissimam."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of my lord, bore a son <sup>a</sup> to my lord after (his) becoming old <sup>b</sup>” but not, “Abraham begot”?

The literal meaning <sup>c</sup> is that the father had another son before the legitimate one, (namely) the illegitimate one from his concubine. But this wife was the mother of his beloved and only son, and afterwards she was called “the ruler.” <sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>e</sup> (she is) the virtue which is perfected through teaching, <sup>f</sup> and was therefore afterwards called “the ruler,” which the Hebrews call “Sarah.” <sup>g</sup> She gives birth to the model of character, <sup>h</sup> who is by nature self-taught. <sup>i</sup> For the end and beginning and genesis of teaching is sometimes what is heard from another <sup>j</sup> and is sometimes he who becomes wise by nature. <sup>k</sup> And he is born to no one but to his lord, that is, to him who has in his mind <sup>l</sup> a firm grasp of all those things which pertain to us, and also knows them at the same time. And (Scripture) confirms <sup>m</sup> the perfection in all things of him who is born by saying, not that he was born in the old age, but after the old age, of his father; that is, not in length of time but as if to say that nothing in mortal life is untemporal <sup>n</sup> but only that which comes after mortality and is not corruptible. For it belongs peculiarly to the incorruptible soul <sup>o</sup> which has been removed from its corporeal nature and has been fitted to the incorporeal ruler (and)

<sup>a</sup> Most LXX MSS. have υἷὸν ἔνα.

<sup>b</sup> LXX μετὰ τὸ γηρᾶσαι αὐτόν (v.l. αὐτήν): Heb. “after her old age.” <sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ ἄρχουσα, see above, QG iii. 53.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> ἡ ἐκ διδασκαλίας τελειομένη ἀρετή.

<sup>g</sup> Arm. Sarra = LXX Σάρρα (Heb. Sārāh).

<sup>h</sup> τύπον ἡθῶν vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> αὐτοδίδακτον, i.e. Isaac; cf. De Somniis ii. 10 et al.

<sup>j</sup> Variants “by oneself from another” and “by oneself” (omitting “from another”). Aucher renders, “per se ab alio.”

<sup>k</sup> ὁ ἐκ φύσεως γενόμενος σοφός.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. “seals” or “stamps.”

<sup>n</sup> ἄχρονον. Cf. De Fuga 169.

<sup>o</sup> ἰδίον ἐστὶ τῆ ἀφθάρτῳ ψυχῆ.

<sup>l</sup> ἐν τῷ λογισμῷ.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

sovereign of joys to sow gladness,<sup>a</sup> for the race without sorrow <sup>b</sup> approaches and is near to God.

123. (Gen. xxiv. 36) Why does he say, "And he gave him whatever was his"?

Most excellently does the literal meaning <sup>c</sup> contain a symbol <sup>d</sup> for hearers. For it would be fitting for those who receive external material things <sup>e</sup> to hear that the youth receives from his father whatever was his. But the self-taught <sup>f</sup> has a symbol of the things indicated.<sup>g</sup> For whatever over a long period of time teaching <sup>h</sup> enables one to acquire, this does nature <sup>i</sup> grant as a prepared gift. Now the prophet <sup>j</sup> does something similar to this in respect of the patriarchs,<sup>k</sup> for when he prays for the first (tribe) he says, "May Reuben live and not die, and may he be great in number," and immediately thereafter he mentions <sup>l</sup> the fourth (tribe), passing over the second and third,<sup>m</sup> and speaks as follows, "And this (is the blessing) of Judah." <sup>n</sup> What is here said as a blessing of Reuben stands first, and (then) that of Judah. But it is for him alone, while the other is as a part, for he is placed above with the sole and

<sup>a</sup> On Isaac as a symbol of joy and laughter see above, QG iii. 53.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ἄλυπον γένος.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>e</sup> τὰς ἐκτὸς ὕλας, cf. De Poster. Caini 116.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ αὐτοδίδακτος, i.e. Isaac, see above, QG iv. 122.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. text seems corrupt. Possibly the original read "Symbolically this statement refers to the self-taught" or the like.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ διδασκαλία.

<sup>i</sup> ἡ φύσις.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. Moses.

<sup>k</sup> Or "tribe-leaders," i.e. the sons of Jacob, in Deut. xxxiii. 6-7.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "he responds" or "requisites": Aucher "inducit."

<sup>m</sup> Philo here, as in De Mut. Nom. 200, refers to Simeon and Levi.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher seems to have taken this sentence as a comment of Philo instead of a quotation from Scripture.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

elder.<sup>a</sup> But what the principle of these things is will be explained when we inquire into the blessings.<sup>b</sup>

124. (Gen. xxiv. 16, 18, 20, 28, 46) Why does Rebekah hasten in everything, for (Scripture) says, "And hastening to the spring, she drew water," and "hastening, she lowered the water-jar upon her arm," and "running, she announced" <sup>c</sup>?

Excellent and good people perform their good works without delay: Such too was the whole household together of the all-wise Abraham.<sup>d</sup> For when he became the host of the divine natures <sup>e</sup> and was about to entertain them with <sup>f</sup> food of gladness, and in turn on the reverse was to receive the same from them, he did not delay at all, but himself hastened and ordered his wife to make ash-cakes <sup>g</sup> in haste, and his wife also hastened. The servant too resorted to running in carrying out the service that was proper to him. Whereas frivolous people are in doubt about those things which it is proper to delay,<sup>h</sup> those who know how to do things accurately and clearly, when an opportunity is found, do not take a long time.<sup>i</sup> Excel-

<sup>a</sup> This obscure statement may refer to Judah's being associated with Reuben, or to Judah's "entering into his people" (Deut. xxxiii. 7) or to Simeon's being included with Levi (Deut. xxxiii. 8).

<sup>b</sup> These Pentateuchal passages, Gen. ch. xlix and Deut. ch. xxxiii, are not discussed in the extant text of the Quaestiones.

<sup>c</sup> Philo here includes five different verses, on some of which he has commented above, in QG iv. 100, 104, 107, 116.

<sup>d</sup> τοῦ πανσόφου Ἀβραάμου. The same adjective is applied to Abraham in De Migratione 45, and to Isaac, Jacob and Moses elsewhere.

<sup>e</sup> τῶν θείων φύσεων, i.e. the three angels, see above, QG iv. 1 ff.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "to receive them into."

<sup>g</sup> See above, QG iv. 8.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders, "quoniam sicut histriones haesitant, ubi par erit, cunctari."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher renders, more freely, "e contra qui conscius est constanter agendorum, hoc dato, non terit tempus."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

lently, however, has (Scripture) said this too, and is to speak in future of a double inactivity.<sup>a</sup>

125. (Gen. xxiv. 48) What is "the way of truth," for he says, "in the way of truth" <sup>b</sup> ?

(This means) that truth is a wonderful and divine virtue <sup>c</sup> and a force <sup>d</sup> destructive of falsehood, which <sup>e</sup> is (so) called in reprobation,<sup>f</sup> while truth (is so called) because of unforgetfulness,<sup>g</sup> since virtue is worthy of remembrance. Now the way which leads to it, so far as it rests with us, is knowledge and wisdom,<sup>h</sup> for through these is it found. But by an involuntary principle <sup>i</sup> (it is found) through prophecy.<sup>j</sup> And since that which is proportioned and equal <sup>k</sup> is a safe road,<sup>l</sup> it leads to truth more evenly, briefly and smoothly than <sup>m</sup> the former.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Possibly Philo refers to such passages as those commented on below, QG iv. 131.

<sup>b</sup> So the LXX (agreeing with Heb.), according to which Abraham's servant blesses God, ὁς εὐόδωσέν μοι ἐν ὁδῷ ἀληθείας.

<sup>c</sup> θανμασία καὶ θεία ἀρετή.

<sup>d</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. falsehood.

<sup>f</sup> Philo evidently plays on the similarity between ψεῦδος and ψόγος, not, as Aucher suggests in his footnote, on a double meaning of παράκρουσις.

<sup>g</sup> As if ἀλήθεια were derived from ἀ- and λήθη.

<sup>h</sup> ἐπιστήμη καὶ σοφία.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. lit. = κατ' ἀκούσιον λόγον.

<sup>j</sup> διὰ προφητείας. On Philo's theory of divinely vouchsafed prophecy as opposed to human knowledge see H. A. Wolfson, Philo, ii. 22-62.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. hamemat = ἀνάλογος and ἴσος. The second adjective kš'ir also = ἴσος.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, "porro haec proportionata aequaque via secura est."

<sup>m</sup> Aucher's "quae" is apparently a misprint for "quam" (comparative particle).

<sup>n</sup> Philo evidently means that the way of prophecy leads to truth more directly than does the way of knowledge.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

126. (Gen. xxiv. 49) What is the meaning of the words, "If you act with mercy and justice toward my lord, tell me; but if not, indicate (this), that I may turn to the right or to the left" <sup>a</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>b</sup> is clear. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>c</sup> it seems to indicate that the right side (consists of) worthy and completed deeds, while the left side (consists of) things outside worthiness and of errors of transgression.

127. (Gen. xxiv. 50) Why did Rebekah's brothers <sup>d</sup> say to the servant, "From the Lord has this command come. <sup>e</sup> We shall not be able to speak against (it) good for evil" <sup>f</sup>?

Imagining (this) in their minds, <sup>g</sup> and with obedience without any hindrance, <sup>h</sup> they knew that the command of God was true, infallible <sup>i</sup> and unimpeded <sup>j</sup> in undertaking benefactions. <sup>k</sup> And there is a complete harmony between constancy <sup>l</sup> and the self-taught wise man. <sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> LXX εἰ οὖν ποιείτε ὑμεῖς ἔλεος καὶ δικαιοσύνην πρὸς τὸν κύριόν μου, ἀπαγγεῖλατέ μοι. εἰ δὲ μή, ἀπαγγεῖλατέ μοι ἵνα ἐπιστρέψω εἰς δεξιὰν ἢ εἰς ἀριστεράν. The Arm. renders the two occurrences of ἀπαγγεῖλατε by different words.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> Scripture mentions by name Laban and Bethuel (Rebekah's father, as Philo notes in De Fuga 48).

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἐξῆλθεν τὸ πρόσταγμα (v.l. πρᾶγμα) τοῦτο: Heb. "has this word (or "thing") come forth."

<sup>f</sup> LXX οὐ δυνησόμεθα οὖν σοι ἀντειπεῖν κακὸν καλῶ (v.l. κακὸν ἢ καλόν): Heb. "we shall not be able to speak to thee evil or good."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "revolventes in mente."

<sup>h</sup> Construction uncertain. Aucher renders, "idque rite, sine ullo obstaculo," and in a footnote adds, "Vel ita: et videntes nullum esse obstaculi locum."

<sup>i</sup> ἀδιάπτωτον vel sim.: Aucher "illaesus."

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "not stumbling."

<sup>k</sup> εὐεργεσιῶν.

<sup>l</sup> ὑπομονῆς, symbolized by Rebekah, see above, QG iv. 97.

<sup>m</sup> πρὸς τὸν αὐτοδίδακτον σοφόν, symbolized by Isaac, see above, QG iv. 122.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

128. (Gen. xxiv. 50) What is the meaning of the words, which they say, "Against (it) we shall not be able to speak" ?

Since whatever we may say against good proposals will be found evil,<sup>a</sup> it is seemly and fine, as I have already said,<sup>b</sup> that he who has become virtuous without teaching<sup>c</sup> should be the consort of constancy<sup>d</sup> and perseverance,<sup>e</sup> for the opposite, the divorce of knowledge<sup>f</sup> from them, is evil.

129. (Gen. xxiv. 51) What is the meaning of the words, "Behold, Rebekah is before thee<sup>g</sup>; take her and go. And she shall be a wife to the son of thy master, as the Lord promised"<sup>h</sup> ?

What is expressly said<sup>i</sup> is clear. The deeper meaning<sup>j</sup> is to be given as follows. Behold, it says, the eye of thy soul<sup>k</sup> has been instructed<sup>l</sup> (and) sees the form of perseverance<sup>m</sup> face to face<sup>n</sup> without shamelessness.<sup>o</sup> For, behold, it is before thee. Thou seest and understandest. Take it and receive it in thy soul, and having taken it hence with <sup>a</sup> This rendering follows Aucher's in transposing the words "good proposals," which stand after "evil" in the Arm.

<sup>b</sup> In the preceding section.
<sup>c</sup> ἄνευ διδασκαλίας. This refers to Isaac, "the self-taught."

<sup>d</sup> ὑπομονῆς, see above, QG iv. 97 notes.

<sup>e</sup> Prob. διαμονῆς.

<sup>f</sup> ἐπιστήμης.

<sup>g</sup> LXX ἐνώπιόν σου.

<sup>h</sup> LXX ἐλάλησεν: Heb. "spoke."

<sup>i</sup> τὸ εἰρημένον.

<sup>j</sup> ἡ διάνοια.

<sup>k</sup> ὁ τῆς ψυχῆς σου ὀφθαλμός, cf. De Confus. Ling. 92 et al.

<sup>l</sup> πεπαιδευται, cf. De Mut. Nom. 203 (τὸ ψυχῆς ὄμμα) μόνον τὸν θεὸν ὄραν πεπαιδευται.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ τῆς διαμονῆς εἶδος, symbolized by Rebekah, see above, QG iv. 117, 128.

<sup>n</sup> ἐνώπιον ἢ κατὰ πρόσωπον vel sim.: Aucher "intuitive."

<sup>o</sup> Arm. lpršout'iuu = ἀναισχυντία. Aucher curiously renders, "sine lippitudine," possibly because he fancies that there is an etymological connexion between the Arm. and Latin words.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

an unimpaired and uncorrupted character, pass and go, lest perhaps thou mayest again be seized by the lures of the locality and the body.<sup>a</sup> But while thine impulses<sup>b</sup> are moved as if starting a race,<sup>c</sup> go quickly on a straight course.<sup>d</sup> And be a surety<sup>e</sup> of perseverance (and) endurance to the self-taught man,<sup>f</sup> of whom it is said in Proverbs,<sup>g</sup> "From God is woman suited to man"<sup>h</sup>—not to man so much as is virtue to reason.<sup>h</sup>

*130. (Gen. xxiv. 52-53) Why does the servant, after prostrating himself before the Lord, give vessels of silver and gold, and garments to Rebekah and her mother?<sup>i</sup>

This is praise for the house of the virtuous man who is taught,<sup>j</sup> for it is proper to make thanksgiving and honour to God the beginning of every pure deed.<sup>k</sup> For this reason the servant first prostrates himself before the Lord, and then offers the gifts. But prostration<sup>l</sup> is nothing else than a sign of genuine admiration and true love,<sup>m</sup> which those <sup>a</sup> ταῖς ἐγχωρίαις (ὀρ πατρίαις) καὶ σωματικαῖς ἀπάταις.

<sup>b</sup> ὄρμαί.

<sup>c</sup> ὡς ἐν ἀφετηρίῳ : Aucher "velut in linea hippodromi."

<sup>d</sup> ἔγγυος : Aucher "vadimonio."

<sup>e</sup> τῷ αὐτοδιδάκτῳ, symbolized by Isaac, see above, QG iv. 122.

<sup>f</sup> Prov. xix. 14.

<sup>g</sup> LXX παρὰ δὲ θεοῦ ἀρμόζεται γυνὴ ἀνδρί : Heb. "from the Lord (comes) an understanding woman." The Arim. variant, rendered by Aucher, "mulier optima a Deo coaptatur" is clearly an error.

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετὴ λογισμῶ.

<sup>i</sup> Scripture says that he gave the vessels and garments to Rebekah, and gifts to her brother and mother.

<sup>j</sup> τοῦ σπουδαίου τοῦ διδασκομένου, i.e. Abraham. Aucher renders, "domui sapientis doctae."

<sup>k</sup> πάσης πράξεως καθαρᾶς, as in the Greek frag. (which ends with this sentence). Aucher renders, less literally, "omnis operae praeclarae."

<sup>l</sup> προσκύνησις.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher renders, more freely, "demonstratio admirationis (sive, venerationis) verae, amorisque puri."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

men know who sip from that source <sup>a</sup> which cannot be approached or touched <sup>b</sup> but is incorporeal. For being given wings and out of heavenly desire being borne aloft, they move in flight about the Father and Creator of all things, and Him, who truly with His being <sup>c</sup> fills all things with His powers <sup>d</sup> for the salvation of all, <sup>e</sup> they call "holy, blessed Creator, <sup>f</sup> all-mighty, <sup>g</sup> God of truth."

*131. (Gen. xxiv. 55-56) Why did they say, "Let the virgin <sup>h</sup> remain with us (some) days," <sup>i</sup> and why does he press on, saying, "Do not slow me up, <sup>j</sup> and the Lord has prospered <sup>k</sup> my way" ?

These men felt regret, who had said a little before, <sup>l</sup> "Behold, Rebekah is before thee ; take her and go." And this is said in reproof <sup>m</sup> of those who are slippery, and against the ways of unstable <sup>n</sup> men, who imagine things now in one way, now in another, as well as many contradictory and conflicting things. But he who shows zeal with constancy and vigour cries out, <sup>o</sup> "Do not hold me back, for God the saviour <sup>p</sup> has sent (me) on the broad <sup>q</sup> way of virtue, <sup>r</sup> on which I came hither and will go hence."

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "taste."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "has no approach or touch."

<sup>c</sup> ὄντως τῆ οὐσίας.

<sup>d</sup> τὰς δυνάμεις.

<sup>e</sup> εἰς σωτηρίαν πάντων.

<sup>f</sup> κτίστην.

<sup>g</sup> παντοκράτορα.

<sup>h</sup> So the LXX, ἡ παρθένος : Heb. "the young woman."

<sup>i</sup> LXX and Heb. "some ten days." Both texts add "and afterwards she shall go."

<sup>j</sup> So Heb. : LXX μὴ κατέχετέ με.

<sup>k</sup> Both LXX and Heb. use the past tense here, though we expect a future.

<sup>l</sup> In Gen. xxiv. 51, see above, QG iv. 129.

<sup>m</sup> εἰς ἔλεγχος.

<sup>n</sup> Variant "unfaithful."

<sup>o</sup> The Arm. has the participle though the pres. indicative is needed.

<sup>p</sup> θεοῦ τοῦ σωτήρος.

<sup>q</sup> Aucher omits this word in his rendering.

<sup>r</sup> ἀρετῆς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

132. (Gen. xxiv. 57) Why does (Scripture) say, "Let us call the maid and question her mouth" <sup>a</sup> ?

In the first place, it is to be said that this law is written by the holy father <sup>b</sup> concerning a virgin who is to be betrothed <sup>c</sup> when she has no guardian, <sup>d</sup> that they <sup>e</sup> may not be led by force like maid-servants or captives but may go willingly and accept marriage of their own accord and enter into an harmonious union. In the second place, since the mind <sup>f</sup> is always variable and subject to all kinds of change because of the thoughts <sup>g</sup> which frequently and continuously come at it from without and come into it like a torrent with ceaseless blows, they said deliberately, "Let us question"—not "her" but—"her mouth," saying this for the reason that they were voluntarily suffering <sup>h</sup> the changes that come like a flood from those things that supervene from without, and they bring speech <sup>i</sup> into account. <sup>j</sup> Wherefore in another passage of the legislation <sup>k</sup> (Moses) says, "And whatsoever comes forth from thy lips thou shalt do," but does not (say), "Whatsoever thou takest into thy mind," for men hear the voice, while God (hears) thoughts. And so, it is fitting that they do not question the thoughts themselves but their servant, (namely) the speech that is uttered.

<sup>a</sup> So the LXX (retaining the Heb. idiom, which A.V. renders, "inquire at her mouth"), καλέσωμεν τὴν παῖδα καὶ ἐπερωτήσωμεν τὸ στόμα αὐτῆς.

<sup>b</sup> Apparently Moses is meant, or possibly God as the author of Scripture.

<sup>c</sup> See above, QG iv. 91 on Gen. xxiv. 8. See also De Spec. Leg. iii. 71.

<sup>d</sup> Prob. ἐπιμελητήν, as in De Spec. Leg. iii. 81.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. betrothed women.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> τοὺς λογισμούς.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "receiving."

<sup>i</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher renders a little more freely, "et verbum pro ratione in medium duci voluerunt."

<sup>k</sup> νομοθετῶν. See Num. xxx. 2, where LXX reads πάντα ὅσα εἰάν ἐξέλθῃ ἐκ τοῦ στόματος αὐτοῦ, ποιήσει.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

133. (Gen. xxiv. 58) Why, when they ask her, "Wilt thou go with this man?" does she at once make reply, saying, "I will go"?

It is indeed proper to praise her interrogators for esteeming and honouring the voluntary more than the necessary.<sup>a</sup> For violence is the cause of immediately confessing one's reasons.<sup>b</sup> And the soul that is a lover of good<sup>c</sup> avoids arrogance and impiety, and considers of no worth the intentions of the men of the crowd and of those who stick together,<sup>d</sup> since some of them are in no way distinguishable from beasts in human form.<sup>e</sup> And he who a little while before had been a boy is now a man,<sup>f</sup> no longer in natural power<sup>g</sup> but in perfection,<sup>h</sup> having given many proofs of wisdom and prudence and a disposition worthy of regard and master-loving and, what is much more, virtue-loving and God-loving.<sup>i</sup> And knowing this, Constancy<sup>j</sup> consents and says, "I will go with him," in order that she may remain the more firm. For it does not profit one's thinking<sup>k</sup> at all to receive virtue if it is subsequently to flow away and dissolve instead of being strengthened more firmly and powerfully by a lasting bond.

134. (Gen. xxiv. 59) What is the meaning of the words, "They sent Rebekah and whatever belonged to her" <sup>l</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ἐκούσιον μᾶλλον ἢ τὸ ἀναγκαῖον.

<sup>b</sup> The somewhat obscure Arm. sentence is rendered more freely by Aucher, "nam violentia in causis est incunctanter fatendi aliquid per praetextum."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders, "laude digna."

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. lit. = τῆς συμφυΐας.

<sup>e</sup> τῶν ἀνθρωπομόρφων θηρίων, cf. De Abrahamo 33.

<sup>f</sup> See above, QG iv. 108 on Gen. xxiv. 21.

<sup>g</sup> δυνάμει φυσικῇ.

<sup>h</sup> τελειότητι.

<sup>i</sup> σοφίας καὶ φρονήσεως καὶ γνώμης ἀξιοθεάτου τε καὶ φιλοδеспότου καὶ πολὺ μᾶλλον φιλαρέτου τε καὶ φιλοθέου.

<sup>j</sup> ὑπομονή or διαμονή, symbolized by Rebekah, see above, QG iv. 97, 128.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "thoughts"—λογισμούς.

<sup>l</sup> Philo abbreviates Scripture. LXX reads καὶ εὐλόγησαν Ῥεβέκκαν τὴν ἀδελφὴν αὐτῶν καὶ τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτῆς καὶ τὸν παῖδα τὸν Ἀβραάμ καὶ τοὺς μετ' αὐτοῦ. Heb. reads similarly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The literal meaning <sup>a</sup> is clearly expressed,<sup>b</sup> but the symbol indicates that the substance of the virtuous soul <sup>c</sup> is the firm grasp of the good in accordance with the contemplation of virtue and wisdom,<sup>d</sup> which are the only substances in truth. For this reason those things which are bodily and external are ephemeral and transitory and uncertain possessions. Happy are they, therefore, to whom the constant family <sup>e</sup> passes over, while those whom it begins to leave are unhappy.

135. (Gen. xxiv. 60) Why do they bless her in this way : “ Our sister, mayest thou become <sup>f</sup> thousands of myriads, and may thy seed inherit the cities <sup>g</sup> of their enemies ” ?

While Constancy <sup>h</sup> is still near the soul, it is its brother,<sup>i</sup> but so soon as it meditates separation and dissociation, it removes itself and diminishes the blessing, saying, “ Become myriads.” But what possessed <sup>j</sup> those who prayed that they directed their prayers to those not yet born rather than to her ? It was because enemy cities are symbolically the evils in us and various invading passions which have lawlessness as their law, and a harmful form of government.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. adj. gaytanšan lit. = “ clear as to sign ” (or “ symbol ”). Aucher renders, “ evidenti symboli est,” and, in a footnote, “ vel, evidens est valde.”

<sup>c</sup> τὰ ὑπάρχοντα (as in LXX, see p. 415, note 1) τῆς σπουδαίας ψυχῆς.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ βεβαία κατάληψις τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ κατὰ τὰ τῆς ἀρετῆς τε καὶ σοφίας θεωρήματα.

<sup>e</sup> γένος, i. e. Rebekah and her train, symbolizing constancy, ὑπομονή or διαμονή, on which see above, QG iv. 97, 128, 133.

<sup>f</sup> LXX and Heb. “ Our sister art thou ; mayest thou become.” <sup>g</sup> So LXX, τὰς πόλεις : Heb. “ the gate.”

<sup>h</sup> διαμονή, symbolized by Rebekah, see above, QG iv. 97, 128, 133.

<sup>i</sup> Which is the brother and which the sister is not clear ; apparently the fem. noun ψυχή is here treated symbolically as masc. <sup>j</sup> Aucher “ impedit.”

<sup>k</sup> βλάπτουσιν (or ἐπιβουλεύουσιν) πολιτείαν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

136. (Gen. xxiv. 61) What is the meaning of "mounting the camels" <sup>a</sup>? Who are the maids <sup>b</sup> with whom Rebekah "rose and mounted the camels"?

The mounting of the camels shows that character and religion <sup>c</sup> are superior to the mnemonic form, <sup>d</sup> for Constancy <sup>e</sup> is related to memory, and the camel, as has been said many times, <sup>f</sup> is a symbol of memory. But "to mount" is nothing else than to stand upon memory and not to imagine the sleep of forgetfulness. <sup>g</sup> But the maids are the servants of Constancy, being tender and delicate and docile <sup>h</sup> natures, prepared and adorned to serve their mistress. And the names of the servants of Constancy are Inflexible, Unbending, Unvacillating, Unrepentant, Unchanging, Indifferent, Firm, Stable, Unconquerable and Upright, <sup>i</sup> and all their brothers who desire lasting perseverance.

137. (Gen. xxiv. 61) What is the meaning of the words, "Taking Rebekah, the boy <sup>j</sup> departed"?

Just as we say that disciples <sup>k</sup> and pupils receive from their instructors theories of knowledge <sup>l</sup> which are genuine,

<sup>a</sup> LXX ἐπέβησαν ἐπὶ τὰς καμήλους. Aucher notes that this first question, missing in Cod. A of the Arm. text, is found in Codd. C and D at the beginning of the Answer, though it seems to belong at the beginning of the Question.

<sup>b</sup> LXX αἱ ἄβραι.

<sup>c</sup> ἡθὸς καὶ θρησκεία (or "contenance"—ἐγκράτεια).

<sup>d</sup> τοῦ μνημονικοῦ εἶδους.

<sup>e</sup> Or "perseverance"—διαμονή, symbolized by Rebekah, see the preceding sections. <sup>f</sup> e.g. in QG iv. 92, 106.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. lit. = ὕπνον λήθης φαντάζεσθαι, perhaps "to dream the sleep of forgetfulness."

<sup>h</sup> Here Philo plays on LXX ἄβραι "maids" and ἄβρός "delicate."

<sup>i</sup> ἀρρεπὴς κ. ἀκλινὴς κ. — (?) κ. ἀμετανόητος κ. ἄτρεπτος κ. ἀδιάφορος (?) κ. βέβαιος κ. ἰδρυμένος κ. ἀήττητος κ. ὀρθός.

<sup>j</sup> LXX ὁ παῖς: Heb. "the servant."

<sup>k</sup> γνωρίμους. Aucher less accurately renders, "proximos."

<sup>l</sup> ἐπιστήμησ θεωρήματα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

excellent, well chosen and refined by wise men, so also must it be supposed that the progressive mind <sup>a</sup> takes Constancy <sup>b</sup> as (an object of) contemplation.<sup>c</sup> For the inquiry of the theologian <sup>d</sup> is about characters and types and virtues,<sup>e</sup> and not about persons who were created and born.<sup>f</sup>

138. (Gen. xxiv. 62) Why does (Scripture) say, "Isaac went through the wilderness by the well of Seeing" <sup>g</sup> ?

Oh contemplation <sup>h</sup> fitting to God and worthy intellection <sup>i</sup> and vision,<sup>j</sup> which was deserving of being commemorated in song, and most excellent (vision), which the eyes of the body cannot see! Therefore, O mind,<sup>k</sup> with thy psychic eyes <sup>l</sup> opened behold him who is within thee (as) an example <sup>m</sup> (of) unsorrowing laughter,<sup>n</sup> Isaac, who without interruption <sup>o</sup> rejoices continually over all those

<sup>a</sup> ὁ προκόπτων νοῦς.

<sup>b</sup> Or "perseverance"—διαμονή, symbolized by Rebekah, see the preceding sections.

<sup>c</sup> ὡς θεώρημα.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ τοῦ θεολόγου (Moses) ζήτησις.

<sup>e</sup> περὶ ἡθῶν καὶ τρόπων (vel sim.) καὶ ἀρετῶν.

<sup>f</sup> In general Philo attributes both allegorical (usu. ethical or psychological) and historical meaning to the narratives of Scripture, see H. A. Wolfson, Philo, i. 125-127. In a private communication Professor Wolfson suggests that Philo's expression "the inquiry of the theologian" corresponds to the rabbinic expression, "the verse comes to teach you," bā' hak-kātūb l' lammēdkā.

<sup>g</sup> So the LXX, Ἰσαὰκ δὲ ἐπορεύετο διὰ τῆς ἐρήμου κατὰ τὸ φρέαρ τῆς ὄρασεως. Heb. reads "And Isaac came from the direction (lit. "coming") of the well Lahai Roi." This proper name was anciently explained as meaning "Verily, my seer lives."<sup>h</sup> θεάν or θεώρημα.

<sup>i</sup> Arm. imaçowac = both νόημα (or ἔννοια) and νοῦς, prob. the former here. <sup>j</sup> ὄρασιν or θεωρίαν. <sup>k</sup> ὦ νοῦ.

<sup>l</sup> τῶν ψυχικῶν ὀφθαλμῶν. <sup>m</sup> τρόπον or τύπον.

<sup>n</sup> ἄλυπον γέλωτα. For other references to Isaac as a symbol of joy or laughter see Leisegang s.v. Ἰσαάκ.

<sup>o</sup> ἀδιαστάτως.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

things which have been created by God. For thou wilt see him not guarded by confused and precipitate <sup>a</sup> beliefs of thought <sup>b</sup> but with firm steps and with feet making use of wisdom, <sup>c</sup> which is devoid <sup>d</sup> of great evils, of ignorance and lack of discipline. <sup>e</sup> And see him spending his time <sup>f</sup> in the genuine and most proper part of wisdom, at the well, (by which) I understand the wonderful and divine source, which (Scripture) calls "Seeing," giving an appropriate and natural name to the contemplative life <sup>g</sup> in reference to Him Who exists <sup>h</sup> and to the incorporeal ideas <sup>i</sup> in Him, which were made as measures of all things of both worlds. <sup>j</sup> For this <sup>k</sup> is the model and archetype <sup>l</sup> of the intelligible and of the sense-perceptible (world) <sup>m</sup> in which we are mixed with the incorporeal, <sup>n</sup> since our better part soars <sup>o</sup> upward to that (region) which is beyond the ether <sup>p</sup> and above the heaven and above all sense-perceptible things. Similarly every true prophet <sup>q</sup> was called "seer" or "beholder," <sup>r</sup> the name being given in reference to the eye of the soul.

<sup>a</sup> Or "stormy" or "vague": Aucher "procellosis."

<sup>b</sup> So the Arm. lit. Aucher simplifies to "cogitationibus."

<sup>c</sup> σοφία.

<sup>d</sup> Philo plays on the double meaning of ἔρημος, "wilderness" and "devoid."

<sup>e</sup> ἀπαιδευσίας.

<sup>f</sup> ποιούμενον διατριβάς.

<sup>g</sup> τῷ θεωρητικῷ βίῳ.

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ Ὄντος.

<sup>i</sup> ταῖς ἀσωμάτοις ἰδέαις or τοῖς . . . εἶδεσι.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. the intelligible and the sense-perceptible world, as explained in what follows.

<sup>k</sup> The demonstrative pron. seems to refer to the word "source," symbolizing the cosmic Logos.

<sup>l</sup> παράδειγμα καὶ ἀρχέτυπος.

<sup>m</sup> τοῦ νοητοῦ καὶ τοῦ αἰσθητοῦ (κόσμου).

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "are by an incorporeal mixture."

<sup>o</sup> Lit. "leaps," cf. De Spec. Leg. iv. 115 ἄνω πηδᾶν . . . εἰς αἰθέρα.

<sup>p</sup> ἐπέκεινα τοῦ αἰθέρος.

<sup>q</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "omnis propheta mendacii nesciens."

<sup>r</sup> ὁρῶν ἢ βλέπων, cf. Quod Deus Immut. Sit 139 and De Migratione 38, both based on the LXX of 1 Sam. ix. 9.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

139. (Gen. xxiv. 62) Why is he said to dwell in the south? <sup>a</sup>

This too is in harmony with the preceding.<sup>o</sup> For every one who is desirous of wisdom <sup>b</sup> and is really a lover of God <sup>c</sup> avoids what is visible,<sup>d</sup> (that is) vain opinions, and accounts separation and deficiency <sup>e</sup> as good things.<sup>f</sup>

140. (Gen. xxiv. 63) <sup>g</sup> What is the "meditation" <sup>h</sup> of Isaac, and why did he go out "to meditate in the field toward the turn of day," <sup>i</sup> and why is the one with whom (he conversed) not revealed?

(This statement) has a connexion and order in harmony <sup>j</sup> with the preceding. For he to whom separation from, and deficiency <sup>k</sup> of, opinions of visible things are precious, begins to seclude himself alone with only the invisible God.<sup>l</sup> Moreover, we are accustomed to call long speeches and conversations "meditations." But (Scripture) shows that

<sup>a</sup> LXX ἐν τῇ γῆ πρὸς λίβα: Heb. "in the land of the Negeb" (the dry region south of Judaea).

<sup>b</sup> σοφίας. <sup>c</sup> φιλόθεος.

<sup>d</sup> Reading yerewelic for yarewelic "the east," because of the context.

<sup>e</sup> διάστημα (vel sim.) καὶ ἔκλειψιν. The latter noun seems to have been suggested to Philo by LXX πρὸς λίβα, as though λίβα were cognate with λείπειν and ἔκλειψιν. Note, moreover, that in Quod Deterius 26-29, where Philo allegorizes the following verse, Gen. xxiv. 63, he explains the place name Δωθαίμ as meaning ἔκλειψις ἰκανή (so also in De Fuga 128).

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "places separation and deficiency in a good part"; Aucher renders, "in melioris partis ratione collocans."

<sup>g</sup> This verse is briefly treated in Leg. All. iii. 43 and Quod Deterius 29.

<sup>h</sup> ἀδολεσχία.

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ ἐξῆλθεν Ἰσαὰκ ἀδολεσχῆσαι εἰς τὸ πεδῖον τὸ πρὸς δείλης. Here ἀδολεσχῆσαι renders Heb. sú<sup>ah</sup> "to converse" (A.V. "to meditate"). <sup>j</sup> εἶρμόν καὶ τάξιν ἐναρμόνιον.

<sup>k</sup> See notes to preceding section.

<sup>l</sup> Cf. Leg. All. iii. 43 ὅταν ἀδολεσχῆ καὶ ἰδιάξῃ θεῶ, Quod Deterius 29 μόνον δὲ ἰδιάσαι βουλόμενος καὶ ἰδιολογήσασθαι τῷ . . . θεῶ.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

the character of the wise man <sup>a</sup> is not quickly satisfied but is constant and hard to efface and hard to remove from the idea <sup>b</sup> of that which is above the good and above the wise man and above the very best. <sup>c</sup> And various conversations come together, one after the other, so that he never departs from the conversation of speech <sup>d</sup> because of his insatiable and incessant desire and longing, by which <sup>e</sup> the sovereign (mind) <sup>f</sup> is drawn and seized ; and it is led by the attractive force of sovereign existences. <sup>g</sup> Hence they come forth, in word, from the city or the home, but in fact <sup>h</sup> particularly when the mind <sup>i</sup> begins to be filled with God and divinely inspired and possessed by God. <sup>j</sup> And the going out on the way takes place in the field in order that it may exercise and enter contests <sup>k</sup> and practise the divine law for the fitting and proper production of sound fruits, which are the immortal foods of the soul. <sup>l</sup> And the time was the turn of day, when the natural force and strength <sup>m</sup> of the sun's rays, by which I understand visible opinions, are lessened and have their many flames extinguished. And meditation takes place when there is no man present <sup>n</sup> but (one is) in undisturbed peacefulness. What does (Scripture) say ? That you should know that the sacred scriptures are not monuments of knowledge and vision <sup>o</sup> but are the

<sup>a</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> Variant "contemplation."

<sup>c</sup> αὐτὸ τὸ ἄριστον vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς ὁμιλίας τῶν λόγων vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> Text slightly uncertain.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.

<sup>g</sup> Construction and meaning not clear. Aucher renders, "quod intense tractum captumque est principali duce (mente) per trahentem vim entium principalium."

<sup>h</sup> λόγῳ μὲν . . . ἔργῳ δέ. <sup>i</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>j</sup> θεοφορεῖσθαι καὶ θειάζειν (ὡς ἐνθουσιάζειν) καὶ θεοληπτεῖσθαι.

<sup>k</sup> γυμνάζεσθαι καὶ ἀγωνίζεσθαι.

<sup>l</sup> αἱ ἀθάνατοι τῶν ψυχῶν τροφαί, cf. Leg. All. iii. 162 οὐράνιοι αἱ ψυχῆς τροφαί.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "force of strength."

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "is in the midst."

<sup>o</sup> μνημεῖα ἐπιστήμης καὶ θεωρίας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

divine commands and the divine words,<sup>a</sup> which make known Him who is quiet, who is near as not there.<sup>b</sup> And He speaks without uttering words<sup>c</sup> and talks with someone without audible voice, and He does not turn away from (other) speakers or from His disciples or pupils,<sup>d</sup> but gives them freedom of speech<sup>e</sup> in incorporeal matters and in conversation of speech about the intelligible things which are with Him, in order that by questioning they may understand what they do not (already) know, and may comprehend what they think they surely know. At the same time testimony is given by the Father of wisdom himself. "See, then, and judge for yourselves this spiritual conversation<sup>f</sup> and (also) those friendships with kings and potentates which are fought over,<sup>g</sup> and their outcome, together with the uprightness of those who achieve them.<sup>h</sup> For many (of the latter kind) fail and meet difficulties, while the other (kind)<sup>i</sup> provides joyous well-being and eternal happiness."

141. (Gen. xxiv. 63) Why does (Scripture) say, "Looking up with his eyes, he saw the camels that were coming"<sup>j</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> This important statement is mistranslated by E. R. Goodenough in his By Light, Light, p. 160 (see my review in American Journal of Philology, vol. 57 [1936], 203-205), but is correctly translated by H. A. Wolfson, Philo, ii. 10, 189, who remarks, "By 'knowledge and vision' Philo means rational knowledge which ultimately rests upon sensation."

<sup>b</sup> i.e. "although not there." The Arm. glossator explains, "God is near to one who prays, and is quiet (or "ceases") even though He is not seen." The Arm. verb rendered above as "is quiet" usu. = παύεσθαι or ἀναπαύεσθαι.

<sup>c</sup> μηδὲν φθεγγόμενος.

<sup>d</sup> μαθητῶν καὶ γνωρίμων.

<sup>e</sup> παρρησίαν.

<sup>f</sup> ταύτην τὴν ψυχικὴν ὁμιλίαν.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "suspectae dilectiones."

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "una cum functorum rectitudine." Apparently Philo is being ironical.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. friendship or converse with God.

<sup>j</sup> So LXX, καὶ ἀναβλέψας τοῖς ὀφθαλμοῖς (Heb. "and he lifted his eyes") ἶδεν καμήλους ἐρχομένας.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

It is proper to have doubts <sup>a</sup> (about this statement), for with what else do we look at things than our eyes? Nor do we hear with anything else than our ears. But may it not be that (Scripture) is not discussing the eyes of the body but those of the mind,<sup>b</sup> which have been educated to look up at higher and ethereal (regions) and others above heaven, and at the nature which is outside the world? <sup>c</sup> Wherefore, from other memories,<sup>d</sup> he perceives <sup>e</sup> the presence of the woman, whom (the camels) easily bear as a burden, (namely) the perseverance of the finest virtues,<sup>f</sup> and also her maidservants, concerning whom I wrote what was fitting a little above.<sup>g</sup>

142. (Gen. xxiv. 64) Why did (Rebekah), when she saw Isaac, leap from the camel? <sup>h</sup>

In the literal sense,<sup>i</sup> it was because of modesty and veneration.<sup>j</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>k</sup> it was because of the humility and submissiveness and perception of virtue <sup>l</sup> (found) in <sup>m</sup> a genuine and sincere lover.<sup>n</sup> For this <sup>o</sup> is not easily able to ascend to such a height but must <sup>a</sup> ἀπορεῖν.

<sup>b</sup> τοῦ νοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> τὴν φύσιν τὴν ἔξω τοῦ κόσμου.

<sup>d</sup> Symbolized by the camels, see QG iv. 92, 106 et al.

<sup>e</sup> φαντάζεται.

<sup>f</sup> τὴν τῶν ἀρίστων ἀρετῶν διαμονήν. On Rebekah as the symbol of Perseverance or Constancy see QG iv. 97, 128 et al.

<sup>g</sup> In QG iv. 136.

<sup>h</sup> So LXX, κατεπήδησεν ἀπὸ τῆς καμήλου: Heb. "and she fell from the camel."

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "modesty of veneration."

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>m</sup> The Arm. prep. est usu. = κατά.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher renders the clause, "propter humiliationem, indulgentiam, gustandamque virtutem secundum genuinum fidelemque amore captum," and remarks in a footnote, "Vel sic: indulgentiam ad sensibilem etiam virtutem. Ambiguitas oritur ex variante lectione ew zgaloy [=gen. case of substantival infinitive] aut ew zgalwoy [=gen. case of adjective]."

<sup>o</sup> The demonstr. pron. apparently refers to "virtue."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

by all means descend to become intimate.<sup>a</sup> For it is destined <sup>b</sup> to come into participation <sup>c</sup> of converse and speech, and to receive <sup>d</sup> profit (from this). But what was it not destined to receive,<sup>e</sup> since it did not keep within itself any seed or remnant of jealousy and envy and terrible <sup>f</sup> passion <sup>g</sup> but had expelled from its borders conniving and malicious envy ?

143. (Gen. xxiv. 65) Why did (Rebekah) take her scarf <sup>h</sup> and throw it about her ?

Not in the same manner as virgins now (are adorned) was that wonderful nature and admirable virgin adorned and beautified, for she had within herself an ornament <sup>i</sup> most adequate, and she was not in need of anything else whatever from outside. And the scarf is a visible symbol of clear-shining virtue,<sup>j</sup> of which the inner part and that which is in its depths and in its inner recesses is uncovered and becomes apparent only to the lover of wisdom,<sup>k</sup> and is clearly seen (by him), but is covered from, and becomes invisible to, the uninitiated and unskilled <sup>l</sup> and those who are not possessed by God.<sup>m</sup>

*144. (Gen. xxiv. 66) Why, when (the servant) had been sent on a mission <sup>n</sup> by one person,<sup>o</sup> did he give a response <sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> διὰ τὸ οἰκειοῦσθαι, apparently meaning intimacy with God. <sup>b</sup> μέλλει.

<sup>c</sup> Text slightly emended.

<sup>d</sup> Text slightly emended. Aucher renders, "utilitatem datura." <sup>e</sup> See preceding note.

<sup>f</sup> Or "bitter."

<sup>g</sup> Variant "prayer."

<sup>h</sup> LXX τὸ θέριστρον "a light summer-garment": Heb. šā'if "veil." <sup>i</sup> κόσμον.

<sup>j</sup> σύμβολον φανερόν αὐγοειδιστάτης (vel sim.) ἀρετῆς.

<sup>k</sup> μόνω τῷ τῆς σοφίας ἐραστῇ.

<sup>l</sup> τοῖς ἀμυήτοις καὶ τοῖς ἀπείροις.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher "non initiatis."

<sup>n</sup> ἐπὶ πρεσβείαν, as in the Greek frag. from Procopius.

<sup>o</sup> i.e. by Abraham.

<sup>p</sup> The Greek frag. has ἀποπρεσβεύει.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

to another, for, says (Scripture), "He related to Isaac all the things <sup>a</sup> which he had done" <sup>b</sup> ?

One may say that inasmuch as it was on behalf of the son that he had been sent on the mission by the father, when the mission had been completed, he brought the good news <sup>c</sup> to him on whose behalf he had been sent, especially because he met him first on the road, as he was coming. It is clear that <sup>d</sup> he afterwards related (these things) also to the father, who had sent him, for even though this has not been expressly <sup>e</sup> written, it is to be inferred <sup>f</sup> from the text. However, it is proper to speak of this allegorically,<sup>g</sup> for when Abraham and Isaac are analysed,<sup>h</sup> (they are) one and the same thing, that is, (one is a symbol) of taught virtue, (the other) of natural (virtue).<sup>i</sup> For the end of teaching is the beginning of nature.<sup>j</sup> And so he does not relate the events <sup>k</sup> of the journey to anyone else sooner than to him alone. Consider them, therefore, not as mortal men who question each other now,<sup>l</sup> but as formless types of soul being examined,<sup>m</sup> which wisdom <sup>n</sup> harmonizes and

<sup>a</sup> Lit. " words," see the next note.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ διηγήσατο πάντα τὰ ῥήματα (Heb. dēbārīm = " words " and " things ") ἃ ἐποίησεν.

<sup>c</sup> εὐαγγελίζεται, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. has πάντως " certainly."

<sup>e</sup> Prob. ῥητῶς: Aucher " in historia." The Greek frag., which ends here, has merely γέγραπται.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. " it is persuaded " or " is plausible."

<sup>g</sup> ἀλληγοροῦντα.

<sup>h</sup> Prob. ἀναλυομένου. Aucher, who renders, " resoluti," notes that the meaning of the verb is not clear.

<sup>i</sup> See, e.g., De Vita Mosis i. 76 θεὸς Ἀβραὰμ καὶ θεὸς Ἰσαάκ . . . ὦν ὁ μὲν τῆς διδακτῆς, ὁ δὲ τῆς φυσικῆς . . . σοφίας κανὼν ἐστίν.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ γὰρ τῆς διδασκαλίας τέλος ἀρχὴ ἐστὶ τῆς φύσεως.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. " deeds."

<sup>l</sup> Aucher, preferring the variant reading in the Arm., renders, " non ergo homines putabunt, mortales quasdam esse quaestiones."

<sup>m</sup> Meaning not clear. The Arm. lit. = ἀνειδέους τρόπους ψυχῆς ἐξεταζομένους.

<sup>n</sup> ἡ σοφία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

fits together to bring about partnership <sup>a</sup> and unity. For many have been likened to <sup>b</sup> one, and different ones to unity.<sup>c</sup>

*145. (Gen. xxiv. 67) Why is Isaac said to have entered the house, not of his father but of his mother, for the purpose of marriage,<sup>a</sup> and yet these were dwelling in the same house? <sup>e</sup>

Because those who wish to know and examine the literal meaning <sup>f</sup> will perhaps say that since his father had taken to himself many wives, he virtually <sup>g</sup> had many <sup>h</sup> houses also. For "house" is a name given not only to <sup>i</sup> a building but also to the gathering of husband, wife and children.<sup>j</sup> But he <sup>k</sup> until (her) death remained together with the wife (first taken) as a virgin,<sup>l</sup> wherefore he seems to have had (only) one house.<sup>m</sup> One does not, does one,

<sup>a</sup> κοινωνιάν : Aucher "aequalitatem."

<sup>b</sup> Or "imitate," as Aucher renders.

<sup>c</sup> τῇ μονάδι vel sim. The meaning of the last sentence is not clear to me.

<sup>d</sup> LXX εἰσῆλθεν δὲ Ἰσαὰκ εἰς τὸν οἶκον τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ, καὶ ἔλαβεν τὴν Ῥεβέκκαν, καὶ ἐγένετο αὐτοῦ γυνή, καὶ ἠγάπησεν αὐτήν. For a slightly different allegorizing of the verse see De Poster. Caini 77-78.

<sup>e</sup> The Greek fragments ap. Harris and Wendland do not have the last clause. <sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> δυνάμει, as in the Greek fragments.

<sup>h</sup> One Greek text has πλείστους.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "is said . . . of."

<sup>j</sup> One Greek text has τὸ ἐξ ἀνδρὸς καὶ γυναικὸς καὶ τέκνων σύστημα : the other has τὸ ἐκ γαμικῆς συζυγίας καὶ τέκνων σύστημα.

<sup>k</sup> The Arm. demonstr. pron. may be either masc. or fem. (as Aucher takes it), but the context indicates that the antecedent is Isaac, not Sarah (or Rebekah or Abraham). One Greek text has ὁ δέ, the other ἡ δέ.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "with his wife from virginity." The Greek fragments have τῷ κουριδίῳ.

<sup>m</sup> The Greek fragments end here.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

see (him) separated and betrothed to another.<sup>a</sup> But someone else more naturally <sup>b</sup> giving the sense of the text, (might) say, in allegorizing,<sup>c</sup> that since the mother of the self-taught person <sup>d</sup> was motherless wisdom,<sup>e</sup> whose right reason <sup>f</sup> is symbolically <sup>g</sup> called "house," it was changed into a bridal-chamber for him so as to be a unity of betrothal and a partnership of the self-taught kind with ever-virginal Constancy,<sup>h</sup> from the love <sup>i</sup> of whom may it never come about that I cease.

146. (Gen. xxiv. 67) Why, when he had taken a wife and loved Rebekah, is (Isaac) said to have been consoled for Sarah, his mother? <sup>j</sup>

Rightly and fittingly (is this said), for he did not drive out wisdom <sup>k</sup> but found (it), not after a time in old age but when flourishing in nonage <sup>l</sup> and youth,<sup>m</sup> and ever blossoming without sense-perceived colour in incorporeal beauty.<sup>n</sup> For consolation <sup>o</sup> belongs to the contemplation-loving soul <sup>p</sup> in its concern for <sup>q</sup> the earliest

<sup>a</sup> Text slightly uncertain. Aucher renders, "Numquid visa est separata, et alium despondens?"

<sup>b</sup> φυσικώτερον, probably in the Stoic sense of "symbolically."

<sup>c</sup> ἀλληγορῶν.

<sup>d</sup> On Isaac as a symbol of the αὐτοδίδακτος see QG iv. 122.

<sup>e</sup> ἀμήτωρ σοφία. Sarah appears as a symbol of ἀρετή . . . ἀμήτωρ ἀρχή in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 62.

<sup>f</sup> ὀρθὸς λόγος.

<sup>g</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>h</sup> εἰς ἔνωσιν καὶ κοινωνίαν τοῦ αὐτοδιδάκτου γένους σὺν τῇ ἀειπαρθένῳ διαμονῇ. On Rebekah as a symbol of constancy see QG iv. 128, 129 et al.

<sup>i</sup> ἔρωτος.

<sup>j</sup> LXX . . . καὶ ἔλαβεν τὴν Ῥεβέκκαν καὶ ἐγένετο αὐτοῦ γυνή, καὶ ἠγάπησεν αὐτήν· καὶ παρεκλήθη Ἰσαὰκ περὶ (Heb. "after") τῆς μητρὸς αὐτοῦ.

<sup>k</sup> τὴν σοφίαν.

<sup>l</sup> ἐν ἀγηρασίᾳ.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher, disregarding the Arm. word-order, renders, "non per tempus in senectute vigens, sed in senectute ac juventute."

<sup>n</sup> ἄνευ αἰσθητῆς χροῆς ἄσωμάτῳ κάλλει.

<sup>o</sup> παράκλησις.

<sup>p</sup> τῆς φιλοθεάμονος ψυχῆς.

<sup>q</sup> Lit. "concerning" or "about."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and first discipline,<sup>a</sup> which it is accustomed to practise from youth, when it is mated with, and betrothed to, a wife who is constant<sup>b</sup> in virtue and perseverance.<sup>c</sup> For when he bears in mind and remembers his former way of life,<sup>d</sup> which he lived without any discipline, he is consoled. And he was consoled (also) by the fact that he has not spent his time in vain and in an unworthy manner.

147. (Gen. xxv. 1) What is the meaning of the words, "And Abraham added to take a wife,<sup>e</sup> whose name was Keturah"<sup>f</sup>?

That which is added is not the same as that to which it is added but is something else altogether. Now what is it, then, which is added to the good? Is it, indeed, the bad or the contrary and unlike?<sup>g</sup> But it is clear that this is a mixture, which is neither bad nor good. For riches and honours and bodily affections<sup>h</sup> and whatever things are connected with<sup>i</sup> the body and are outside the body are measured for the virtuous man,<sup>j</sup> not, however, as good but as additions to his own goods,<sup>k</sup> and being indifferent,<sup>l</sup> they are mixed and foreign. The addition is therefore called "Keturah," which name is to be translated as

<sup>a</sup> παιδείας.

<sup>b</sup> The instrumental case of the Arm. noun "constancy" is here prob. used predicatively.

<sup>c</sup> κατὰ διαμονήν. See the notes to the preceding section.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "ways and life," prob. = διαγωγὴν τοῦ βίου.

<sup>e</sup> So LXX, προσθέμενος δὲ Ἀβραὰμ ἔλαβεν γυναῖκα, following the Heb. idiom which means "Abraham took another wife."

<sup>f</sup> Arm. Kentoura: LXX Χετούρα: Heb. Qeṭṭûrah.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ἐναντίον καὶ ἀνόμιον.

<sup>h</sup> σωματικὰ πάθη.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "are around."

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. lit. = τῷ σπουδαίῳ μετρεῖται, and probably is an inexact rendering. Aucher renders, "penes honestum dimensa sunt."

<sup>k</sup> i.e. to those of the soul.

<sup>l</sup> ἀδιάφορα, in the technical ethical sense. See H. A. Wolfson, Philo, ii. 297-303.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

“incense-burning.”<sup>a</sup> And the odour is an addition to food but is not food, wherefore some have said, not ineptly, that smell is a foretaster.<sup>b</sup> And to those who are subject to danger of pain physicians present odours when they are unable to give them food. This must be said first. And still another thing must be set beside this, that among the senses<sup>c</sup> there are two which are virtuous and philosophical,<sup>d</sup> (namely) those of sight and hearing; and a third, that of smell, is a mean between the good and the bad; and there are two bad ones belonging to the bad, (namely) taste and touch. And when the four (senses) are arranged in groups of two, smell is the middle one,<sup>e</sup> for it is clearer and purer than taste and touch, and is duller and more short-sighted<sup>f</sup> than sight and hearing. For this reason (Scripture) has attributed the three best forms of sense to Him who is the sovereign of all things. For (it refers) to sight when it says,<sup>g</sup> “And God saw all the things which He had made, and, behold, they were very good”; and to hearing when it says,<sup>h</sup> “The Lord heareth the poor”; and to smell when it says,<sup>i</sup> “And the Lord God smelled a sweet savour.” Now since the consummation of a happy life is likeness to God,<sup>j</sup> he who was a true man<sup>k</sup> judged it best to marry three wives, (who were) symbolically some three powers,<sup>l</sup> the most admirable of all (the senses, namely) hearing, sight and smell. For the maidservant in Chaldaean was

<sup>a</sup> θυμῶσα, as in De Sacr. Abelis 43-44, which partially parallels this section.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. De Sacr. Abelis 44 ὄσφρησιν . . . καθάπερ βασιλίδος προγευστρίδα.

<sup>c</sup> τῶν αἰσθήσεων.

<sup>d</sup> σπουδαῖαι καὶ φιλόσοφοι, cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 337-338.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. smell, the fifth, is between the two groups of two senses each.

<sup>f</sup> Lucher “tardior.”

<sup>g</sup> Gen. i. 31.

<sup>h</sup> Ps. lxix. 33.

<sup>i</sup> Gen. viii. 21.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ τέλος ἐστὶν εὐδαίμονος ζωῆς ἢ πρὸς θεὸν ὁμοιότης.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. Abraham.

<sup>l</sup> συμβολικῶς τρεῖς τινας δυνάμεις.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

called "Hagar" <sup>a</sup> and in Armenian <sup>b</sup> "sojourning." <sup>c</sup> And her offspring was "hearing God," who among the Hebrews was called "Ishmael." <sup>d</sup> And (the offspring) of his lady <sup>e</sup> (was called) "laughter," <sup>f</sup> (being) a psychic eye and light, <sup>g</sup> for light and sight are joyful, just as darkness and blindness are sad. And the third (wife) mentioned was allusively <sup>h</sup> named "incense-burning," which the Chaldaeans call "Keturah."

*148. (Gen. xxv. 5-6) What is the meaning of the words, "And Abraham gave all that was his to Isaac his son, and to the sons of his concubines he gave gifts" <sup>i</sup> " ?

(Scripture) refers to a difference between possessions and gifts, <sup>j</sup> both in the literal sense and in the deeper meaning. <sup>k</sup> As for the literal meaning, those things that assure a quiet life, and whatever things remain stable and in our possession are called "possessions," while gifts are those things given by hand, <sup>l</sup> the use of which is for a short time. <sup>m</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, it is the virtues founded with firmness and the deeds (performed) with virtue <sup>n</sup> that are

<sup>a</sup> Arm. Agar, as in LXX.

<sup>b</sup> As usual, the Arm. translator substitutes "Armenian" for "Greek." <sup>c</sup> παροίκησις, as in De Congressu 20.

<sup>d</sup> Ishmael's name is etymologized as ἀκοή θεοῦ in De Mut. Nom. 202 et al.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. Sarah, in contrast to the concubines, Hagar and Keturah.

<sup>f</sup> "Isaac" is etymologized as γέλωσ and χαρά in many passages of Philo.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. e.g. De Confus. Ling. 92 ὁ ψυχῆς ὀφθαλμὸς ὁ διαυγέστατος καὶ καθαρώτατος καὶ πάντων ὀξυωπέστατος.

<sup>h</sup> αἰνίγματι vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> LXX ἔδωκεν δὲ Ἀβραὰμ πάντα τὰ ὑπάρχοντα αὐτοῦ Ἰσαὰκ τῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ καὶ τοῖς υἱοῖς τῶν παλλακῶν αὐτοῦ ἔδωκεν Ἀβραὰμ δόματα.

<sup>j</sup> διαφορὰν ὑπαρχόντων καὶ δομάτων, as in the Greek frag. from Procopius. <sup>k</sup> καὶ πρὸς τὸ ῥήτὸν καὶ πρὸς τὴν διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> χειρόδοτα, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>m</sup> The Greek frag., which ends here, has ὦν ἡ χρῆσις ἐφήμερος. <sup>n</sup> κατ' ἀρετήν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

called "substances" and "possessions." <sup>a</sup> Those things, however, which are indifferent <sup>b</sup> and unstable, being about the body and outside the body, it calls "gifts." And so, it presents (as) the heir of the virtues the legitimate son, laughter, <sup>c</sup> who rejoices at all things in nature, <sup>d</sup> whereas the indifferent and undetermined <sup>e</sup> (sons born) to Abraham by his concubines (rejoice in) indifferent things. <sup>f</sup> So much superior was Isaac to (the sons) of the concubines as are possessions <sup>g</sup> to gifts. Wherefore (Scripture) recently <sup>h</sup> described Isaac as motherless, and it calls those born to the concubines fatherless. <sup>i</sup> Accordingly, those who were harmonious in the father's family are of the male progeny, while the (sons) of the women and those of inferior descent are certainly to be called female and unvirile, <sup>j</sup> for which reason they are little admired as great ones. <sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> οὐσίαι καὶ κτήματα, "substances" being rendered by two words in the Arm. <sup>b</sup> ἀδιάφορα.

<sup>c</sup> τὸν γνήσιον υἱόν, γέλωτα, symbolized by Isaac.

<sup>d</sup> On Isaac as a symbol of the naturally virtuous or self-taught man see, e.g., QG iv. 122, 145.

<sup>e</sup> ἀόριστους, cf. De Praemiis 36 πᾶσα ἡ αἰσθητὴ φύσις ἀόριστος.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "indifferentes autem Abrahae natos ex concubinis indifferentibus ac indistinctis gaudere bonis."

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. has "possessions" in the gen. case, but the context seems to require us to take it as nom. Aucher too renders it as the subject of the final clause.

<sup>h</sup> See QG iv. 145 on Gen. xxiv. 67.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. as not being legitimate sons of Abraham.

<sup>j</sup> ἀνανδροί, an adjective elsewhere applied by Philo to the senses and sense-perceptible things.

<sup>k</sup> The above is a literal translation of the obscure Arm. text, which Aucher, confessing doubt of its meaning (his footnote reads: "Quamquam uncis aliqua adjeci, nec ita tamen me sensum verum expressisse confido"), renders, "illi ergo, qui concordēs erant in patria gente, etiam masculi nati (nomen sortiuntur); verum illi (ipsi) quia (alienam participant) femineam lineam pravis prolibus gaudentem, certo certius vocandi sunt feminae vecordes, eoquod ob minora illa tamquam majores (sibi ipsi) admiratione sunt."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

149. (Gen. xxv. 6) Why, after giving gifts to his alien <sup>a</sup> offspring, did he send them away from his son Isaac, while he was still living, to the land of the east ? <sup>b</sup>

In its literal sense <sup>c</sup> the significance is clear. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>d</sup> it is the intention of the sacred word <sup>e</sup> to preserve (him) for ever virtuous, perfect, passionless and unstained. <sup>f</sup> And he is (so) preserved if those of opposed and earthly thoughts are removed and settled (elsewhere). <sup>g</sup> For, as they are born alien to virtue, <sup>h</sup> so they wish to pollute the legitimate <sup>i</sup> (son). But it is impossible for such a removal to take place unless (the father) is living and sound in true life and healthy thought. <sup>j</sup> For not ineptly is it said that while he was still living he sent away wrongdoing and passion. <sup>k</sup> And he sent them away, not to the region of the east, but most naturally "to the land of the east," (that is) not to the heavenly and divine light but to earthly and corruptible splendours and appearances <sup>l</sup> of arrogance and vain honours, of which they are emulous. For empty are the strivings of the mind, through which many consider riches and honours and the like to be good.

150. (Gen. xxv. 7) Why, in speaking about the life of

<sup>a</sup> ἀλλοτρίοις, cf. De Virtutibus 207, where Philo speaks of the sons of Abraham's concubines as ἀλλοτριωθέντες τῆς αἰοιδίμου εὐγενείας.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ τοῖς υἱοῖς τῶν παλλακῶν αὐτοῦ ἔδωκεν Ἀβραὰμ δόματα, καὶ ἐξάπεστειλεν αὐτοὺς ἀπὸ Ἰσαὰκ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ ἔτι ζῶντος αὐτοῦ πρὸς ἀνατολὰ εἰς γῆν ἀνατολῶν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>e</sup> γνώμη τοῦ ἱεροῦ λόγου.

<sup>f</sup> σπουδαῖον καὶ τέλειον καὶ ἀπαθῆ καὶ ἀκηλίδωτον. Aucher renders slightly differently, "probum (filium), perfectum, vitioque et ulceribus carentem perpetuo servare." Here, as in QG ii. 15, the Arm. translator seems to have confused κήλη "ulcer" with κηλῖς "stain."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "transmittantur in coloniam."

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>i</sup> τὸν γνήσιον.

<sup>j</sup> ὑγιεῖ λογισμῶ.

<sup>k</sup> ἀδικίαν (vel sim.) καὶ πάθος.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "lumina et phantasmata."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

Abraham, does (Scripture) say, "These are the years of the days of the life of Abraham" <sup>a</sup> ?

Most excellently does it say "days," for it does not wish to bring out the number of years, as do those who write (historical) narratives, but to show that the several ages of the wise man are praiseworthy when he lives his whole life excellently. <sup>b</sup> For a year is a sum of days, but days are not (a sum) of years. For it is proper that for those who live in accordance with virtue <sup>c</sup> there should be an addition of the length of time rather than that the time of an old man (should be) a divine splendour. <sup>d</sup>

151. (Gen. xxv. 7) Why are the years of (his) life "one hundred and seventy-five" ?

Because (this number) is seven times twenty-five, and twenty-five is a lunar period, <sup>e</sup> in accordance with which (Scripture) wishes the temple-servants to perform the service of the temple, <sup>f</sup> beginning at twenty-five years, and to be in attendance and serve for the same number (of years), for it makes them retire from active service <sup>g</sup> after reaching fifty, taking care that the priest shall be an imitator and emulator of the heavenly (body). Accord-

<sup>a</sup> So LXX, ταῦτα δὲ τὰ ἔτη ἡμερῶν ζωῆς Ἀβραάμ. Heb. has "These are the days of the years of the life of Abraham."

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. seems to render ἐκάστας τὰς τοῦ σοφοῦ ἡλικίας ἐπαινετὰς εἶναι, αὐτὸν δὲ διαφερόντως διαιωνίζειν. Aucher renders, "singulas sapientis aetates distinctas tam laudabiles fuisse, quam perenniter durasse."

<sup>c</sup> κατ' ἀρετήν.

<sup>d</sup> L. A. Post suggests that the meaning of the original was something like the following, "Old age is marked rather by the measure of time of which light is lord (ὃ φῶς κύριον μέτρῳ), in place of the addition of a long period" (i.e. the year).

<sup>e</sup> In round numbers, of course.

<sup>f</sup> See Num. viii. 24-25, prescribing that Levites shall serve from the age of 25 to 50, and Philo's comments in Quod Deterius 64.

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "being quiet cease."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

ingly, just as that most useful star <sup>a</sup> which is near the earth, (namely) the moon, serves the whole earth in twenty-five (days), so also (Scripture) has thought it right to ordain an equal length of time of attendance for temple-servants.<sup>b</sup> Now the hebdomad is the most sacred of numbers, as has been especially shown.<sup>c</sup> And these are all the perfect numbers which are contained at once in the life of the wise man,<sup>d</sup> (namely) one hundred, and seventy,<sup>e</sup> and five, so that both their addition and their division are most beautiful. And these things have been noted concerning numbers.

*152. (Gen. xxv. 8) What is the meaning of the words, "failing, he died," and why (did he die) "in a good old age, old and full of days" <sup>f</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>g</sup> does not raise <sup>h</sup> any question, but this (statement) is to be taken more naturally,<sup>i</sup> and the interpretation to be given is that the death of the body is the life of the soul, since the soul lives an incorporeal life of its own.<sup>j</sup> In regard to this, Heraclitus, like a thief taking law and opinions from Moses,<sup>k</sup> says, "we live their death, and we die their life,"<sup>l</sup> intimating <sup>m</sup> that the life

<sup>a</sup> ἀσθήρ, here as occasionally elsewhere in Philo, means "planet."

<sup>b</sup> i.e. 25 days correspond to 25 years.

<sup>c</sup> For the many passages in Philo see Staehle, pp. 34-50.

<sup>d</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ, i.e. Abraham.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher inadvertently renders, "septenarius."

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ἐκλείπων ἀπέθανεν Ἀβραὰμ ἐν γῆρει καλῶ πρεσβύτης καὶ πλήρης ἡμερῶν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "have."

<sup>i</sup> φυσικώτερον, i.e. "more allegorically."

<sup>j</sup> ἴδιον ἐαυτῆ τῆς ψυχῆς ἀσώματον βίον διαγωγούσης vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> On Philo's charges of plagiarism against Heraclitus and other Greek philosophers see Wolfson, Philo, i. 141-142.

<sup>l</sup> ζῶμεν τὸν ἐκείνων θάνατον, τεθνήκαμεν δὲ τὸν ἐκείνων βίον, quoted by Philo in Leg. All. i. 108 et al. The wording of the quotation is slightly different in other ancient sources, cf. Bywater, frag. 67, Diels, frag. 62.

<sup>m</sup> αἰνιττόμενος.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

of the body is the death of the soul. And what is called "death" is the most glorious <sup>a</sup> life of the first soul.<sup>b</sup> Moreover, "in a good old age" is a most useful description of law and opinions <sup>c</sup> in so far as a virtuous man <sup>d</sup> is said to be "a fine old man."<sup>e</sup> For all these are good and desirable measures of age,<sup>f</sup> and are more flourishing than contemptible youth in which the sensual pleasures <sup>g</sup> of the body are still growing. For as a youth this young man did not highly esteem any passion in word or deed and did not choose such a life.<sup>h</sup> And as a man he did not always stir up childish outbreaks and quarrels and fights, since he practises manliness.<sup>i</sup> And in middle age, with his virtues seated around him,<sup>j</sup> he is highly esteemed. He does not, therefore, first begin to act prudently <sup>k</sup> and soundly when in the course of time the passions of old age pass away and cease, but because in the way one fits a head to a statue he has fitted a most beautiful and lovable aspect <sup>l</sup> to his former way of life. This the eyes of the body do not see, but the pellucid and pure mind is taught to see.<sup>m</sup>

Moreover, I am greatly puzzled <sup>n</sup> by the addition (in Scripture), for it says that he was "full of days," making him appear densely full,<sup>o</sup> for the Father does not allow the life of the virtuous man <sup>p</sup> to be empty or vacant in any

<sup>a</sup> Or "most blessed."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, "vita felicissima ac prima animae." Probably we should emend Arm. arajin "first" to "arak'ini "virtuous."

<sup>c</sup> i.e. of moral conduct.

<sup>d</sup> σπουδαῖος.

<sup>e</sup> εὐγῆρως.

<sup>f</sup> ἡλικία.

<sup>g</sup> αἱ ἡδοναί.

<sup>h</sup> Text and meaning are uncertain. Aucher renders, "quoniam in aetate tyronica nullum hic juvenis nec vitium nec verbum neque opus voluit sibi permittere, et praeeligere vitam."

<sup>i</sup> ἀνδρείαν.

<sup>j</sup> τῶν ἀρετῶν συνεδρευουσῶν.

<sup>k</sup> σωφρονίζεσθαι.

<sup>l</sup> πάγκαλον καὶ ἀξιέραστον πρόσωπον.

<sup>m</sup> ὁ διαυγῆς καὶ καθαρὸς νοῦς ἰδεῖν παιδεύεται. Aucher renders more freely, "nitidae tamen ac limpidae animae edoctae sunt ad videndum."

<sup>n</sup> διαπορῶ.

<sup>o</sup> πυκνόν.

<sup>p</sup> τοῦ σπουδαίου.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

place for evil (to enter) his mind <sup>a</sup> or any part of him. <sup>b</sup> For (Scripture) says that the virtuous man is full not of years but of days, always ordering and placing the distinctions of length of time of the virtuous man <sup>c</sup> under the divine light. And again in another way it has determined the several days (to be) worthy of study and care, as those guilty of transgressions (are in need of) orators (and) speakers of truth, <sup>d</sup> when the law of nature testifies against them <sup>e</sup> concerning what each of them has said or done day by day from morning to evening and from evening to morning.

*153. (Gen. xxv. 8) Why is it said that "he was added to his people" <sup>f</sup>?

You see that when (Scripture) spoke a little earlier of his "failing," <sup>g</sup> it did not allude to his corruption <sup>h</sup> but to his more stable endurance. <sup>i</sup> And so it naturally <sup>j</sup> is. For the casting off of that which is mortal and bad is the

<sup>a</sup> τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "tamquam confertam monstrans veri boni vitam, nullum relinquente Patre situm vacuum in mente ejus, vel in aliqua parte, ad ingressum mali."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders, "bene transacti temporis spatii distinctiones."

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders, "tamquam obligatio causarum apud rhetores et juridicos."

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. text seems to render τοῦ τῆς φύσεως νόμου κατ' αὐτῶν διδόντος λόγον. Aucher renders, "ratione ei (vel, eis) concessa legis naturae." L. A. Post queries, "Is there a concealed reference to the sun as all-knowing?"

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ προσετέθη πρὸς τὸν λαὸν αὐτοῦ: Heb. "and he was gathered to his kin." In De Sacr. Abelis 5 Philo quotes the verse as προστίθεται τῷ θεοῦ λαῷ, explaining that Abraham "enjoyed incorruptibility and became equal to the angels"; see further on in this section.

<sup>g</sup> See the preceding section in which Philo quotes LXX καὶ ἐκλείπων ἀπέθανεν κτλ. <sup>h</sup> φθοράν.

<sup>i</sup> βεβαιοτέραν διαμονήν.

<sup>j</sup> φυσικῶς vel sim.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

addition of that which is excellent and more immortal.<sup>a</sup> And the addition to his people is spoken of although there was not yet a people in existence, since he himself was the origin and forefather of the race.<sup>b</sup> But that (people) which was to come into being through him<sup>c</sup> (is represented) as already in existence, and (Scripture) establishes this as being granted to him because of the godlike virtues<sup>d</sup> to which he is said to be added.<sup>e</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>f</sup> But let us speak allegorically.<sup>g</sup> The people is truly of God,<sup>h</sup> that is to say and declare that it is a transition which is rational and heavenly.<sup>i</sup> For every soul is rational which<sup>j</sup> flees and is loosed and released from that to which it is bound,<sup>k</sup> and is delivered and freed from confinement. For the ancients used to call a tomb a "naked grave."<sup>l</sup> And (Scripture) in another passage calls him "forefather"<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The comparative degree of the adj. ἀθάνατος seems not to occur in Philo's extant Greek writings.

<sup>b</sup> ἀρχὴ καὶ προπάτωρ τοῦ γένους, as in the Greek frag. from Procopius.

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. uses the instrumental case of the pers. pron., while the Greek frag. has δι' αὐτόν "because of him."

<sup>d</sup> διὰ τὰς θεοπρεπεῖς ἀρετάς.

<sup>e</sup> The syntax is not certain. The Greek frag., which ends here, has τὸν οὖν μέλλοντα δι' αὐτόν γενέσθαι ὡς ἡδὴ γεγονότα χαριζόμενος αὐτοῦ τῷ θεοπρεπεῖ τῶν ἀρετῶν ιδρύεται, ᾧ καὶ λέγεσθαι (l. λέγεται) προστίθεσθαι. <sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> ἀλληγοροῦντες. <sup>h</sup> See the first note on this section.

<sup>i</sup> διάβασις λογικὴ καὶ οὐρανία. The syntax and meaning of the sentence are uncertain however. Aucher renders, "etenim populus certe Dei est, ut ita dixerim, et transactus rationalis caelestisque," but in a footnote he proposes an alternative rendering, ". . . Dei est ut dictione locutioneque praeditus, et proventus, is qui est rationalis . . ."

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. has the ablative case of the rel. pron., perhaps because of a misreading of ἀφείσα as ἀφ' ἧς.

<sup>k</sup> ἀπὸ τοῦ συνδέτου (sc. σώματος), cf. Leg. All. iii. 72.

<sup>l</sup> Apparently Philo here alludes not to the conventional equation of σῆμα (= σημείον) and σῶμα but to the idea of a dead body being naked of soul.

<sup>m</sup> προπάτορα. There does not seem to be any instance of this epithet applied to Abraham in the LXX.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

but not "first-born" <sup>a</sup> inheriting all from his divine Father and being without share in a mother or female line. <sup>b</sup>

154. (Gen. xxv. 20) <sup>c</sup> Why was Isaac forty years old when he took Rebekah to wife? <sup>d</sup>

The fortieth year is the right time for the marriage <sup>e</sup> of the wise man, <sup>f</sup> for it is good (for him) to be trained and directed and abound in the right forms <sup>g</sup> of discipline <sup>h</sup> in youth and to have regard for nothing else whatever and not to wander in any other direction toward things which are not to be liked but thoroughly to enjoy the thoughts and company of those (studies) and be more happy in them. It is necessary to receive enjoyment of love and affection from a wife and to fulfil the law concerning the rearing of children. <sup>i</sup> For the generation of living beings <sup>j</sup> (is accomplished) in forty (days), during which, physicians say, the seed injected into the womb is formed <sup>k</sup> and, especially when it is a male, becomes a formed creature. <sup>l</sup> For at

<sup>a</sup> πρωτόγονον, here apparently reserved for Isaac.

<sup>b</sup> On the allegorical motherlessness of Isaac see above, QG iv. 145.

<sup>c</sup> At this point, probably the beginning of Book VI in the original form of Philo's Quaestiones, begins the Old Latin version of the Quaestiones in Genesin, extending to the end of Book IV. The date of this Old Latin version (hereafter abbreviated as OL) will be discussed in Appendix B. In the notes I cite the OL text as reprinted by Aucher from the 1538 edition. Here it may be noted that OL is often paraphrastic rather than literal, if we assume that the Armenian version is literal.

<sup>d</sup> Philo here abbreviates the biblical verse which gives Rebekah's genealogy.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. uses two words to render γάμος.

<sup>f</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ.

<sup>g</sup> ὀρθοῖς εἶδεσι or ὀρθαῖς ἰδέαις. OL "spiculis" must be a corruption of "speciebus."

<sup>h</sup> τῆς παιδείας.

<sup>i</sup> τῆς παιδοτροφίας.

<sup>j</sup> ἡ ζωογονία.

<sup>k</sup> κτίζεσθαι or πλάττεσθαι.

<sup>l</sup> κτίσμα or πλάσμα. On the forty-day duration of the male embryo see QG i. 25, ii. 14 and iv. 27.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

this time it was not for the sake of irrational sensual pleasure <sup>a</sup> or with eagerness <sup>b</sup> that he had intercourse with his wife but for the sake of begetting legitimate children, (and so) it was wholly appropriate that he should undertake marriage when the number of his years was the same as the number of days of the embryo in the womb.

155. (Gen. xxv. 22) <sup>c</sup> Why does (Rebekah) say, "If so it is to be for me, why is this for me?" <sup>d</sup>?

Virtuous and a lover of virtue <sup>e</sup> is the mind <sup>f</sup> which announces this not so much by voice as by being sympathetic, and bears itself in mind.<sup>g</sup> For it says, "What (use) was there for me to weigh contrary and opposed (forces) <sup>h</sup> as if in balanced scales, at one time being drawn by opinion <sup>i</sup> and at another time being pulled in the opposite direction by truth. For the uncertainty of the mind <sup>j</sup> is always imperfect and lame and, if one must use the real and proper name, it is also blind. But it is sometimes better to have eyes and to be sharp-sighted for the certain attainment of the knowledge of good and evil.<sup>k</sup> For when someone has come across the nature of either of them and welcomes it <sup>l</sup> or sees it by chance, he necessarily accepts one of them and dismisses the other.

<sup>a</sup> δι' ἄλογον ἡδονήν.

<sup>b</sup> Variant "foolishness."

<sup>c</sup> The two verses, Gen. xxv. 21-22a, not commented on by Philo (but see De Sacr. Abelis 4), tell of Rebekah's pregnancy with Jacob and Esau.

<sup>d</sup> LXX εἰ οὕτως μοι μέλλει γίνεσθαι, ἵνα τί μοι τοῦτο: Heb. "If so, why then I?"

<sup>e</sup> φιλάρετος.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ νοῦς or ἡ διάνοια.

<sup>g</sup> The sense is obscure. For "by voice" OL has "fastidio."

<sup>h</sup> Symbolized by the twins struggling in Rebekah's womb.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. translator takes δόξα in the sense of "glory," so too Aucher renders the Arm.

<sup>j</sup> Apparently Philo means the uncertain mind.

<sup>k</sup> γνώσεως τοῦ ἀγαθοῦ καὶ τοῦ κακοῦ (or τοῦ καλοῦ καὶ τοῦ πονηροῦ).

<sup>l</sup> τῇ ἐκατέρου φύσει ἐπιτυχὸν καὶ ἀσπασάμενος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

156. (Gen. xxv. 22) What is the meaning of the words, "She went to inquire of the Lord" <sup>a</sup> ?

This statement <sup>b</sup> is an argument against <sup>c</sup> arrogant and conceited persons who, though they know nothing, admit <sup>d</sup> that they know everything. And they consider nothing (more) shameful and disgraceful (than) searching and being in doubt and inquiring. Wherefore, being afflicted to the end of life with that great disease ignorance and lack of education, <sup>e</sup> they cannot endure to take a physician, by whom they might perhaps easily be cured. But those who have a desire for education <sup>f</sup> are fond of inquiry and fond of learning everything from every source even though they may be elderly.

157. (Gen. xxv. 23) What is the meaning of the words which (the Lord) spoke when she inquired, (namely) "Two nations are in thy womb, and two peoples will be separated from thy womb, and people will surpass people in excellence, and the elder will serve the younger" <sup>g</sup> ?

This statement <sup>h</sup> shows four things. One is most astonishing, <sup>i</sup> for He does not speak of two children in the womb but instead of children speaks of nations. And it is clear that He alludes <sup>j</sup> not to their names but to the nations which were to come into being from both of them, for they were patriarchs <sup>k</sup> of great nations that were later

<sup>a</sup> LXX ἐπορεύθη δὲ πυθέσθαι παρὰ κυρίου : OL "perrexit interrogare a domino eloquium Dei."

<sup>b</sup> λόγος.

<sup>c</sup> ἔλεγχος.

<sup>d</sup> ὁμολογοῦσι, here evidently used in irony.

<sup>e</sup> μεγάλῳ πάθει (ὡς νόσῳ) τῆς ἀμαθίας καὶ ἀπαιδευσίας.

<sup>f</sup> παιδείας.

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ εἶπεν κύριος αὐτῇ, Δύο ἔθνη ἐν τῇ γαστρὶ σου εἰσιν, καὶ δύο λαοὶ ἐκ τῆς κοιλίας σου διασταλήσονται· καὶ λαὸς λαοῦ ὑπερέξει, καὶ ὁ μείζων δουλεύσει τῷ ἐλάσσονι. The verse is briefly allegorized by Philo in Leg. All. iii. 89 and De Congressu 129-130.

<sup>h</sup> λόγος.

<sup>i</sup> παραδοξότατον : OL "glorioso dictum."

<sup>j</sup> ἀνίττεται.

<sup>k</sup> πατριάρχαι.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

to appear.<sup>a</sup> And second, what was most useful<sup>b</sup> and helpful, they were not to admit confusion but separation and distinction and division, one people from the other, so far as opinion goes, but in reality, prudence and imprudence.<sup>c</sup> For this reason (Scripture) first mentions "nations" and thereafter speaks of "peoples," (so) naming them with reason and prudence.<sup>d</sup> And this is a most helpful distinction of opposed concepts,<sup>e</sup> since one of them desires wickedness, and the other virtue.<sup>f</sup> And third, what is most just, that equals should not be mixed and put together with unequals,<sup>g</sup> whence it is excellently said, "people will surpass people in excellence," for it is necessary for one of the two to surpass the other and to increase, and for the other to decrease and to diminish. And "to surpass in excellence" again means the following, that the good man shall surpass the bad, and the righteous the unrighteous, and the temperate man the intemperate.<sup>h</sup> For one of them is heavenly and worthy of the divine light, and the other is earthy and corruptible and like darkness.<sup>i</sup> And fourth, what is most truthful, that "the elder will serve the younger," for evil is older in time, since from our earliest age it grows with us, while virtue is younger and is acquired by us with difficulty and at the last belatedly,

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, "quia patriarchae magnarum gentium deinde apparituri erant": OL more briefly "qui postmodum principes magnarum gentium fierent."

<sup>b</sup> OL "propheticum," which indicates a confusion between χρήσιμος and χρησμός.

<sup>c</sup> σωφροσύνην και ἀφροσύνην: OL "sapientiam et modestiam." In De Congressu the two children in Rebekah's womb symbolize ἀρετή and κακία, as in the next sentence of this section.

<sup>d</sup> κατὰ λόγον και φρόνησιν vel sim.: OL "quia multum interest verbo et rationabilitati." <sup>e</sup> λογισμῶν ἐναντίων.

<sup>f</sup> κακίας . . . ἀρετῆς: OL "uno inertiam, altero justitiam appetente." <sup>g</sup> OL "ne justa injusto aptentur."

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. uses two words for "temperate" and for "intemperate."

<sup>i</sup> ὁ μὲν οὐράνιος και θείου φωτὸς ἄξιος, ὁ δὲ γεώδης και φθαρτὸς και σκότῳ ὄμοιος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

when the immense excesses of passion <sup>a</sup> have extended their strength (to the utmost) and have (then) become lax. For it is then that the mind <sup>b</sup> begins to judge and discriminate and obtain sovereign rule.<sup>c</sup> And these things are said to us,<sup>d</sup> for who does not know that heaven has no share or mixture or part of evil, nor do whatever sense-perceptible gods <sup>e</sup> are borne in a circle around it, for they are all good and altogether most perfect in virtue.<sup>f</sup> But in the world <sup>g</sup> temperance (and) prudence <sup>h</sup> are older than folly and imprudence, and justice <sup>i</sup> is older than injustice, and so are the several other (virtues) older than their opposite dispositions.<sup>j</sup> In the human race, however, the opposite and contrary of this (is true), for the good, as I have said, is more recent and younger, while its opposite, folly,<sup>k</sup> has been established in us almost from youth and continues. Nevertheless, the younger <sup>l</sup> is the ruler and sovereign of the elder by the law of nature.<sup>m</sup>

158. (Gen. xxv. 24) What is the meaning of the words, "Fulfilled were the days for her to give birth" <sup>n</sup> ?

The birth of the wise man <sup>o</sup> is not defective as to the month or the day but is full and perfect and consists of <sup>a</sup> ἄπειροι ἀμετρίαί παθῶν.

<sup>b</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>c</sup> ἡγεμονικὴν ἀρχήν.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. for our benefit. OL has "haec tamen pro nobis dicta sunt."

<sup>e</sup> ὅσοι αἰσθητοὶ θεοί, i.e. the stars, similarly designated in De Opif. Mundi 27 and elsewhere.

<sup>f</sup> πάντως (read πάσαις?) ἀρεταῖς τελειότατοι: OL "in omnibus necessariis perfectissimi."

<sup>g</sup> ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ.

<sup>h</sup> σωφροσύνη (καὶ) φρόνησις.

<sup>i</sup> δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>j</sup> τῶν ἐναντίων διαθέσεων.

<sup>k</sup> Or "wickedness."

<sup>l</sup> i.e. virtue.

<sup>m</sup> τῷ φύσεως νόμῳ. This phrase probably modifies "the elder" rather than "is ruler and sovereign." OL has "pravitas . . . regitur a juveniore non temporis lege sed naturae."

<sup>n</sup> LXX καὶ ἐπληρώθησαν αἱ ἡμέραι τοῦ τεκεῖν αὐτήν.

<sup>o</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

perfect numbers.<sup>a</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>b</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> (this) must be said. When the soul of the virtuous man becomes filled with the contemplation of wisdom,<sup>d</sup> which, like the day and the sun,<sup>e</sup> illumines the whole reason and the mind,<sup>f</sup> then it begins to give birth to opposites<sup>g</sup> in the separation of distinction and discrimination between holy and profane.

159. (Gen. xxv. 24) What is the meaning of the words, "There were twins in her womb"<sup>h</sup>?

The literal meaning<sup>i</sup> is easily discerned and clear. But one should not fail to recognize the symbolical meaning,<sup>j</sup> that just as two shoots grow from a single root, (so) in the very same mind<sup>k</sup> (there exists) the form<sup>l</sup> of that which is good and of that which is evil, and by nature they are twin.<sup>m</sup> For the soul<sup>n</sup> flees and withdraws and is unable to act but retreats from the proximity of one and goes over to the other.<sup>o</sup> Moreover, the powers<sup>p</sup> which are in the

<sup>a</sup> ἐκ τελείων ἀριθμῶν. See QG iv. 154.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> ὅταν ἡ τοῦ σπουδαίου ψυχὴ πεπλήρωται τῶν τῆς σοφίας θεωριῶν (or ιδεῶν): Aucher "quum animus virtute pollens sit plenus sapientiae speciebus": OL "cum studiosa anima saginata fuerit sapientiae institutis."

<sup>e</sup> OL "vice meridiani luminis."

<sup>f</sup> τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>g</sup> ἐναντιότητας, symbolized by the twins in Rebekah's womb, see the preceding section.

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ τῆδε ἦν δίδυμα ἐν τῇ γαστρὶ (v.l. κοιλίᾳ: Heb. "belly") αὐτῆς.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ συμβολικόν.

<sup>k</sup> ἐν τῷ αὐτῷ νῷ.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ εἶδος.

<sup>m</sup> φύσει δίδυμα. A similar notion is expressed in De Sacr. Abelis 4 and De Ebrietate 8. On the phraseology see notes below.

<sup>n</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ.

<sup>o</sup> i.e. vacillates between the opposite courses. OL paraphrases, "cunctante anima pro utrorumque obsequio, per absentiam enim unius obsecundat altero."

<sup>p</sup> αἱ δυνάμεις: Aucher "virtutes": OL "valetudinis" (l. "valetudines").

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

body experience the same thing as this, for desires and sensual pleasures and pains <sup>a</sup> are from the same root, as the poet says,<sup>b</sup> (and) whatever things are divided and separated from the top <sup>c</sup> are both divided at the extremities.<sup>d</sup> But these give place to their opposites in respect to the place of chief authority,<sup>e</sup> for when sensual pleasure is powerful and superior, pain retreats and gives place,<sup>f</sup> but when the latter seizes it, sensual pleasure becomes power-

<sup>a</sup> ὀρέξεις καὶ ἡδοναὶ καὶ ἀλγηδόνες. OL has more briefly "libido enim et dolor."

<sup>b</sup> In De Ebrietate 8 the same notion is attributed to a παλαιὸς λόγος, which Colson in his note ad loc. supposes to be Phaedo 60 B, where Socrates in discussing the opposed feelings τὸ ἡδύ and τὸ λυπηρόν says, in part, ἐκ μιᾶς κορυφῆς ἡμμένω δὺ ὄντε. A more probable source, called to my attention by my colleague, Prof. B. Einarson, is Sophocles (Incert. Frag. 824 in Nauck<sup>2</sup>, 910 in Pearson), χώρος γὰρ αὐτός ἐστιν ἀνθρώπου φρενῶν ὅπου τὸ τέρπον καὶ τὸ πημαῖνον φύει.

Prof. Einarson also informs me that the same idea is expressed by Plutarch, Consolatio ad Uxorem 609 B.

<sup>c</sup> ἐκ τῆς κορυφῆς, see the preceding note.

<sup>d</sup> περὶ τὰ ἄκρα vel sim.: Aucher renders, "quae ex uno vertice distincta divisaque sunt, utriusque eorum summitates separatae comperiuntur": OL omits. The repetition of the idea of division in respect of the top and the extremities (here apparently meaning the root) seems a confusion or textual corruption. The passage in De Ebrietate 8 reads more intelligibly ὡσπερ γὰρ ἡδονὴν καὶ ἀλγηδόνα φύσει μαχομένας . . . εἰς μίαν κορυφὴν συνάβας ὁ θεὸς ἑκατέρας αἰσθησιν οὐκ ἐν ταύτῳ . . . οὕτως ἀπὸ μιᾶς ρίζης τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ τά τε ἀρετῆς καὶ κακίας διττὰ ἀνέδραμεν ἔρνη μήτε βλαστάνοντα μήτε καρποφοροῦντα ἐν ταύτῳ.

<sup>e</sup> Construction and meaning doubtful. Aucher renders, "atque ita contrariis cedunt a principio partibus principatus." OL omits.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher ignores the syntax in rendering, "namque quum fortior ac superior sit voluptate dolor, illa vitans abscedit." OL has more briefly "agitante enim libidine dolor, caelatur."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

ful.<sup>a</sup> In similar fashion every virtue <sup>b</sup> (is related) to every vice, and conversely. For wisdom <sup>c</sup> gives place to folly, and temperance <sup>d</sup> to unbridled lasciviousness, and injustice <sup>e</sup> to justice, and cowardice <sup>f</sup> to courage, and the other contraries similarly.

160. (Gen. xxv. 25) Why was the first-born ruddy and like a hairy hide? <sup>g</sup>

What is said (here) is clear.<sup>h</sup> The ruddy body and the hairy hide are a sign of a savage man <sup>i</sup> who rages furiously in the manner of a wild beast. For a reddish and sanguine aspect is the same as the colour of those who are angry, and character,<sup>j</sup> truly like a hide <sup>k</sup> and whatever else is very hairy, is found (to be) a covering and outer garment and a protection and guard over cunning and aggression.<sup>l</sup> And through this he is everywhere easily captured, for the wicked man, as much as he schemes and contrives to find (a way of making) himself hard to capture, is so much (the more) easily captured by those who follow wisdom <sup>m</sup> and use it. But a distinction should be made between "first-

<sup>a</sup> The context requires us to suppose that the original read "sensual pleasure loses power" or the like. OL reads more intelligibly "porro si is [i.e. dolor] tenuerit, illa [i.e. libido] subducitur." <sup>b</sup> ἀρετή. <sup>c</sup> σοφία.

<sup>d</sup> σωφροσύνη. In disregard of the syntax of the first two clauses Aucher makes "insipientia" and "intemperantia" the subjects of the verb "give place," whereas in the Arm. text, it is the opposite qualities that form the subjects of the verb. <sup>e</sup> ἀδικία. <sup>f</sup> δειλία.

<sup>g</sup> LXX ἐξῆλθεν δὲ ὁ υἱὸς ὁ πρωτότοκος πυρράκης, ὅλος ὡσεὶ δора δασύς (Heb. "like a mantle of hair").

<sup>h</sup> Following Aucher's emendation of Arm. erek "three" to erewelik "clear."

<sup>i</sup> ἀγρίου.

<sup>j</sup> ἦθος or τρόπος.

<sup>k</sup> OL "et moribus insuavis ut pellis." The Arm. word rendered "truly" appears to be a misreading.

<sup>l</sup> OL reads differently.

<sup>m</sup> σοφίαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

born" and "first-begotten." <sup>a</sup> For the one is (the offspring) of female and material matter, <sup>b</sup> for the female gives birth; but the first-begotten is a male and (the offspring) of a more responsible power, <sup>c</sup> for it is the property of the male to beget. <sup>d</sup> For the wise and cultivated man <sup>e</sup> comes into being as the portion of the Cause, <sup>f</sup> whereas the wicked man, as the first-born in general, <sup>g</sup> is related to passive matter, <sup>h</sup> which gives birth like a mother. <sup>i</sup> Wherefore among beings <sup>j</sup> some incorporeal powers are rightly said to be first-begotten, <sup>k</sup> and some call them "forms" <sup>l</sup> and "measures" and "types." <sup>m</sup> But sense-perceptible things are not so completed, <sup>n</sup> for the forms without a mother are from the Cause alone, while sense-perceptible things are

<sup>a</sup> Philo seems to be making an artificial distinction between πρωτότοκος, used of Esau in the LXX, and πρωτόγονος, used by him elsewhere in a laudatory sense.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. lit. = ὕλικῶν ὑλῶν. Aucher renders more smoothly but less literally, "humidae materiae." OL omits these last two words.

<sup>c</sup> αἰτιωτέρας δυνάμεως: Aucher "potioris causae virtutis": OL "principalis virtutis."

<sup>d</sup> Arm. enanel = both τίκτειν, as in the first part of this sentence, and γεννᾶν, as here. <sup>e</sup> ὁ σοφὸς καὶ ἀστείος.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. the active and divine principle in contrast to the female and passive principle or matter. Aucher renders somewhat inaccurately, "siquidem sapiens et generosus sortitus est causam propriam." OL condenses and paraphrases, "adeo primogenitus melior."

<sup>g</sup> Arm. enধানour usu. = καθόλου or καθολικός. Aucher, perhaps rightly, here renders, "in genere."

<sup>h</sup> Prob. παθητῆ ὑλη: Aucher "vitiosis materiae complicibus": OL "fluxu materiali passibilis."

<sup>i</sup> On Philo's concept of matter as mother see Wolfson, Philo, i. 267. <sup>j</sup> οὐσίαις.

<sup>k</sup> ἀσώματοί τινες δυνάμεις δικαίως λεγόμεναι πρωτόγονοι.

<sup>l</sup> εἶδη, or "ideas"—ιδέας.

<sup>m</sup> καὶ μέτρα καὶ τύπους. See De Opif. Mundi 34, 130.

<sup>n</sup> τὰ αἰσθητὰ οὐχ οὕτως τελειωθέντα. Aucher follows the Arm. order in placing the negative after the word meaning "completed" and renders, "sensibilia vero perfectione praedita, non ita."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

completed by matter, which not ineptly might be said to be the mother of created things.<sup>a</sup>

161. (Gen. xxv. 25) Why is the man called Esau? <sup>b</sup>

“Esau” is interpreted as “a thing made”<sup>c</sup> or as “oak,”<sup>d</sup> both being clearly expressive and indicative of character.<sup>e</sup> For the man of evil character is full of fictions and sugared wisdom,<sup>f</sup> as if trained in these and used to them, but he does not think of anything sound. And foolish ignorance,<sup>g</sup> for so I call characters<sup>h</sup> which are unbending and stiff-necked and unyielding, is similar to an oak, which will be broken sooner than bend or yield.

162. (Gen. xxv. 26) What is the meaning of the words, “After this went out his brother”<sup>i</sup>?

Virtue and vice<sup>j</sup> are brothers inasmuch as they are the offspring of the same soul.<sup>k</sup> And they are enemies inasmuch as they are opposed to each other and fight. Wherefore, though they come together and are united as by necessity<sup>l</sup> and are connected by some bond, they desire

<sup>a</sup> τῶν γενομένων.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. Isaw; LXX Ἰσαύ: Heb. Ēśaw.

<sup>c</sup> πλάσμα ἢ ποίημα.

<sup>d</sup> δρῦς. The same etymologies are given in De Congressu 61, cf. De Sacr. Abelis 17. The first etymology is based on Heb. ‘āsā(h) “to make,” the second on Heb. ‘ēs “tree.” OL, making the interpretations part of the question instead of the beginning of the answer, renders, “factura vel rubor” (l. “robur”).

<sup>e</sup> τρόπου.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher “blandis sapientiis”: OL, paraphrasing, “infidus.”

<sup>g</sup> Or “wickedness.”

<sup>h</sup> Following Aucher in reading Arm. bars for bans (λόγους).

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ μετὰ τοῦτο (v.l. τοῦτον: Heb. “afterwards”) ἐξῆλθεν ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ.

<sup>j</sup> ἀρετὴ καὶ κακία.

<sup>k</sup> τῆς αὐτῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>l</sup> ἀνάγκη.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

separation. And when they are loosed and drawn apart and freed, they become distinct.<sup>a</sup>

163. (Gen. xxv. 26) Why did the hand of the second (child) seize and hold the sole <sup>b</sup> of the foot of the elder ?

Because <sup>c</sup> the noble understanding <sup>d</sup> is a fighter and contestant <sup>e</sup> and is by nature good in battle,<sup>f</sup> always opposing passion <sup>g</sup> and not allowing it to raise itself and rise up. But to seize and hold the heel shows strength of character in the victor and in him who does not allow passion to be refractory and unbridled,<sup>h</sup> and (it shows) the weakness <sup>i</sup> of him who is seized. And if one receives these things not with his eyes but with his understanding and mind,<sup>j</sup> he will grasp the greatest causes among the virtues.<sup>k</sup> For when the mind gets the upper hand and maintains it, becoming more glorious and proud, it seizes its adversary in its hand and holds him. And passion is lamed when it falls down and is held on the ground. What else, then,

<sup>a</sup> Lit. " they appear clearly."

<sup>b</sup> LXX agrees with Heb. in reading, καὶ ἡ χεὶρ αὐτοῦ ἐπειλημμένη τῆς πτέρνης 'Hsau: so too Arm. O.T. Farther on in this section as elsewhere, e.g. in De Mut. Nom. 81, Philo makes Jacob the symbol of the περνησιότης on the basis of the resemblance (implied in the Heb. of Gen. xxv. 26) between the name Ya'aqob and the word 'āqz̄b "heel." OL here has "calcaneum," as does Philo below. We must therefore assume that the Arm. translator is inaccurate here.

<sup>c</sup> Reading, with Aucher, Arm. k'anzi for kam zi.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος λογισμός (or νοῦς): OL "studiosus animus."

<sup>e</sup> ἀγωνιστής or, as Philo elsewhere calls Jacob, ἀσκητής.

<sup>f</sup> OL "strenuus." Aucher renders freely, "paratus ad mortem."

<sup>g</sup> πάθει: OL "vitium": Aucher "cupiditatibus."

<sup>h</sup> Similarly OL, "luctatoris non admittendis (l. "admittentis") malum exaceruari." Aucher renders less accurately, "victoris, qui vix sinit jugum detrectare."

<sup>i</sup> ἀσθένειαν.

<sup>j</sup> λογισμῶ καὶ νῶ.

<sup>k</sup> OL "inveniet facultates virtutis idoneas."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

must we consider this than the possession <sup>a</sup> of moral excellence? <sup>b</sup> Whence he received the accurate name of Supplanter, <sup>c</sup> whom the Hebrews call "Jacob."

164. (Gen. xxv. 26) Why is Isaac said to have begotten sons (at the age) of sixty years <sup>d</sup>?

The number sixty <sup>e</sup> is the measure which includes in itself those (bodies) which are the zodiac in the world when the twelve pentagons are numbered together. <sup>f</sup> The same relation <sup>g</sup> which the number six bears to the units the number sixty (bears) to the tens. For through the hexad the entire heaven and world were made, <sup>h</sup> and in his sixtieth (year) the perfect man <sup>i</sup> begat (sons), in accordance with his kinship with the world, <sup>j</sup> for as the number sixty is kin to the number six, so the virtuous man <sup>k</sup> (is kin) to the entire world. Wherefore just as there is in the world something which is a pure substance, <sup>l</sup> which the heaven obtains

<sup>a</sup> Possibly the Arm. translator read σχέσις for ἄσκησις.

<sup>b</sup> καλοκάγαθίας or εὐθηλείας.

<sup>c</sup> περριστης is here rendered by two Arm. words. Aucher has "Deceptorem et Supplantatorem."

<sup>d</sup> Philo here differs slightly from Scripture, which says that Isaac was sixty years old when Rebekah bore him sons.

<sup>e</sup> This seems to be the only passage in which Philo speculates on the symbolism of 60.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders, "quinque angulorum duodecim divisionibus simul sumptis." OL has something quite different. What the pentagons are is far from clear to me. But see Plato, Timaeus 55 c, on the dodecahedron (of which the twelve sides are pentagons) which God is said to use for the decoration (διαζωγραφῶν) of the cosmos. R. G. Bury in the Loeb Plato remarks ad loc. "The reference may be to the signs of the zodiac." <sup>g</sup> λόγον: OL "elegantiam" (!).

<sup>h</sup> Cf. De Opif. Mundi 89 ὁ σύμπας κόσμος ἐτελειώθη κατὰ τὴν ἑξάδος ἀριθμοῦ τελείου φύσιν. For similar passages see Staehel, pp. 32-34. <sup>i</sup> ὁ τέλειος.

<sup>j</sup> κατὰ τὴν πρὸς τὸν κόσμον συγγένειαν: OL "secundum seculi proximitatem."

<sup>k</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος: OL "strenuus."

<sup>l</sup> καθαρὰ οὐσία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

as its lot, and there is something mixed and corruptible,<sup>a</sup> (namely) whatever is sublunary,<sup>b</sup> so also, says (Scripture), is it fitting that the offspring of the virtuous man be distinguished and separated into a mortal and immortal (son).<sup>c</sup> For of these sons one is heavenly and the other earthly.<sup>d</sup>

*165. (Gen. xxv. 27) <sup>e</sup> Why was Esau a hunter and man of the fields, and Jacob a simple man, living at home <sup>f</sup> ?

This passage admits of allegorizing,<sup>g</sup> for the wicked man is (so) in a twofold way, being a hunter and a man of the fields. Wherefore? Because just as a hunter spends his time with dogs and beasts, so does the cruel man <sup>h</sup> with passions and evils, of which some, which are like beasts, make the mind <sup>i</sup> wild and untamed and intractable and ferocious and bestial; and some (are like) dogs because they indulge immoderate impulses <sup>j</sup> and in all things act madly and furiously. In addition to this, being a man of the fields, he is without a city and a fugitive from the laws,<sup>k</sup> unknowing <sup>l</sup> of right behaviour <sup>m</sup> and unbridled and refractory and not having anything in common with righteous and good men, and an enemy of intercourse, humaneness and community,<sup>n</sup> and leading an unsocial life.<sup>o</sup> But the

<sup>a</sup> μικτόν καὶ φθαρτόν. <sup>b</sup> ὅσα κάτω σελήνης.

<sup>c</sup> Symbolized by Esau and Jacob.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ μὲν οὐράνιος, ὁ δὲ γήινος.

<sup>e</sup> Philo comments on this verse in Leg. All. iii. 2-3 and, more briefly, in De Plantatione 44 and De Congressu 62.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ἦν Ἡσαὺ ἄνθρωπος εἰδὼς κυνηγεῖν, ἄγροικος Ἰακώβ δὲ ἦν ἄνθρωπος ἀπλαστος, οἰκῶν οἰκίαν. <sup>g</sup> ἀλληγορίαν.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. džneay usu. = δεινός. Aucher here renders, "ne-farius": OL "pravus."

<sup>i</sup> τὸν νοῦν ἢ τὴν διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> ἀμέτροις ὄρμαϊς. OL curiously renders, "justo plus satiati."

<sup>k</sup> Leg. All. iii. 3 reads a little differently ἀπολις . . . καὶ ἄοικος, φυχὰς ἀρετῆς ὄν. <sup>l</sup> Lit. "untasting."

<sup>m</sup> Aucher renders, "rectae vitae gustus nescius."

<sup>n</sup> οἰκειότητος καὶ φιλανθρωπίας καὶ κοινωνίας.

<sup>o</sup> ἄμικτον βίον.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

wise and cultivated man,<sup>a</sup> on the other hand, possesses both of the following (qualities): he is simple and he lives at home. A simple nature shows the truth of simplicity<sup>b</sup> and a lack of flattery and hypocrisy, while hypocrites, flatterers and charlatans<sup>c</sup> contrive to show the opposite. Moreover, the domestic care of the house is an antithesis to living in the fields,<sup>d</sup> for one of these (states) is household-management<sup>e</sup> and is a special instance of statecraft on a small scale,<sup>f</sup> since statecraft and household-management are related virtues,<sup>g</sup> which, it would not be amiss to show, are, as it were, interchangeable, both because statecraft is household-management in the state, and because household-management is statecraft in the home.

*166. (Gen. xxv. 28) Why does (Scripture) say, "Isaac loved Esau, and Rebekah was loving Jacob"<sup>h</sup>?

Who would not admire the position of the names which stand contrasted and dexterously placed, being aptly and

<sup>a</sup> ὁ σοφὸς καὶ ἀστείος. OL has simply "urbanus."

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ἀπλαστον ἦθος δηλοῖ τὴν τῆς ἀπλότητος ἀλήθειαν. The Greek frag. from Procopius paraphrases, μηδὲν ἔχων ἐπίπλαστον ἢ ἐπίσακτον κακόν. OL renders, "infictum insinuat pro simplicitate."

<sup>c</sup> γόητες ἢ φαρμακεῖς, cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 302 οἱ γόητες, οἱ κόλακες, οἱ πιθανῶν σοφισμάτων εὐρεταί.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) reads ἴσως δὲ καὶ ἀντιδιαστέλλει τῷ κυνηγέτῃ Ἡσαὺ καὶ ἐν ὑπαίθρῳ διάγοντι. OL has "ita ruralitas dissipat statum domesticum."

<sup>e</sup> οἰκονομία.

<sup>f</sup> τῆς ἐλάττονος πολιτείας περιγραφῆ vel sim.: Aucher "et urbanitatis exiguae comprehensio": OL "ut civili albo conscriptus." With the notion expressed here compare De Josepho 38 οἰκία τε γὰρ πόλις ἐστὶν ἐσταλμένη καὶ βραχεία, καὶ οἰκονομία συνηγμένη τις πολιτεία. <sup>g</sup> συγγενεῖς ἀρεταί.

<sup>h</sup> LXX ἠγάπησεν δὲ Ἰσαὰκ τὸν Ἡσαὺ, ὅτι ἡ θῆρα αὐτοῦ βρώσις αὐτῶν (this clause is discussed in the following section) Ῥεβέκκα δὲ ἠγάπα τὸν Ἰακώβ. LXX follows Heb. in distinguishing the aorist and imperfect aspects in the two occurrences of ἀγαπᾶν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

fittingly adjusted to the correct writing? <sup>a</sup> For "loved" as a narrative (tense) <sup>b</sup> indicates past time, <sup>c</sup> while "was loving" (indicates) what is always present and is eternally the same without ever admitting an end or termination. <sup>d</sup> And may it not be that this is rightly (said)? <sup>e</sup> For the admission of evil and weakness, <sup>f</sup> if it does sometimes occur, is shortlived and ephemeral, <sup>g</sup> but that of virtue <sup>h</sup> is, in a certain sense, immortal, <sup>i</sup> since it does not admit of regret or change of mind. <sup>j</sup>

*167. (Gen. xxv. 28) Why does he (Isaac) love (Esau) for some (stated) reason, for (Scripture) says, "because his venison was food for him," <sup>k</sup> while his mother loved (Jacob) without a reason? <sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Similarly OL, "quis non miretur nominum positionem, tam recte et aptissime rebus consonantem?" The Greek frag. has more briefly and clearly τίς δ' ἂν οὐκ ἀγάσαιτο τὸ ἡγάπησε τὸν Ἡσαὺ ἢ δὲ Ῥεβέκκα ἡγάπα τὸν Ἰακώβ ;

<sup>b</sup> One Arm. ms. omits "as a narrative (tense)."

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. has παρελήλυθε.

<sup>d</sup> Similarly OL, "quod vero diligitur adest utrique et sempiternatur sine fine defectionis." The Greek frag. has much more briefly πάρεστιν αἰεί.

<sup>e</sup> There is no parallel to this sentence in the Greek frag. or OL.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. has more briefly ἀποδοχὴ τοῦ φαύλου. OL has "prava conversatio."

<sup>g</sup> ὀλιγοχρόνιος ἐστὶ καὶ ἐφήμερος, as in the Greek frag.: OL "temporalis, utpote diurna, non diuturna est."

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ σπουδαίου, as in the Greek frag. OL "respui" (marg. "reprobi") must be an error for "recti" or the like.

<sup>i</sup> τρόπον τινὰ ἀθανατίζεται. The Greek frag. has simply ἀθανατίζεται. OL, misunderstanding τρόπον τινά, has "mores immortales." The sentences following ἀθανατίζεται in the Greek frag. (Harris, p. 39) belong to the following section, QG iv. 167. <sup>j</sup> μετάνοιαν ἢ μετάμελος: OL "impoenitibiles."

<sup>k</sup> LXX ὅτι ἡ θήρα αὐτοῦ βρώσις αὐτῶ: Heb. "because venison was in his mouth."

<sup>l</sup> i.e. without a reason for Rebekah's love being stated in Scripture.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

Most wisely is (this said), for virtue <sup>a</sup> is not loved for any other reason.<sup>b</sup> And concerning this some of the younger (philosophers) and those who are recent,<sup>c</sup> having received their virtue-loving opinions directly from Moses as from a source,<sup>d</sup> (have stated) that the good alone is desired and pleasing for its own sake. But that which is not of this nature (is loved) for its usefulness.<sup>e</sup> And so, (Scripture) adds, "he loved (him) because his venison was food for him." And this is most natural,<sup>f</sup> for it is not the venison that it speaks of as food but his hunting of character itself as of a wild animal. And this indeed is the way it is. The soul of the philosopher <sup>g</sup> is not nourished or fed by anything so much as by being able to hunt down the passions <sup>h</sup> and to keep all vice at bay.

*168. (Gen. xxv. 29) What is the meaning of the words, "And Jacob prepared a preparation" <sup>i</sup>?

I know that things of this kind provide (occasion for) ridicule and mocking derision to uncultivated men and

<sup>a</sup> The brief Greek frag. has τὸ σπουδαῖον: Aucher, following the OL "studiosus," has "virtute praeditus." In Arm. the adjective can be either neuter or masculine.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. other than itself. The Greek frag. reads οὐ δι' ἑτερόν τι ἀγαπᾶται: OL "ex utraque parte diligitur."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders, "nonnulli juniorum novissimorumque": OL has simply "nonnulli." There seem to be no other references in Philo to οἱ νεώτεροι which clearly indicate to what school of thought he refers.

<sup>d</sup> εὐθὺς δεχόμενοι ὡς ἀπὸ πηγῆς τινος παρὰ Μωυσέως τὰς φιλαρέτους γνώμας (vel sim.): OL has merely "imitantes Mosen."

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. (which resumes here) has τὸ δὲ μὴ τοιοῦτον, ἐκ τῶν χρειῶν.

<sup>f</sup> φυσικώτατον. OL, misconstruing, reads "esca fuit ei naturalis suumque edictum est."

<sup>g</sup> ἡ τοῦ φιλοσόφου ψυχῆ.

<sup>h</sup> τὰ πάθη.

<sup>i</sup> LXX ἤψησεν δὲ Ἰακώβ ἔψημα (similarly Arm. Philo below): Heb. "And Jacob cooked a cooking" (A.V. "And Jacob sod pottage").

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

those who lack consistency of character <sup>a</sup> and do not recognize any form or appearance of virtue <sup>b</sup> and attribute their own uneducatedness and stupidity and perversity <sup>c</sup> and thoughtlessness to the holy Scriptures, which are more truthful than any other thing. And the reason for this is that just as the blind merely touch and approach and come near to bodies by touch but are not able to perceive their colour, shape, form or any other particular property whatever, so also uneducated, untrained and untaught men, blinded in soul <sup>d</sup> and thick-skinned, <sup>e</sup> dwell on the literal meaning only rather than on the (content of the) narrative <sup>f</sup> and touch and deal with only the words and the literal text. <sup>g</sup> But they are unable to look into the inner (meaning) at the intelligible forms. <sup>h</sup> And the literal meaning <sup>i</sup> contains a not insignificant <sup>j</sup> reproof of the intemperate man <sup>k</sup> for the admonition of those who can be cured. <sup>l</sup> For it was not for the sake of a trifling cooked pottage that (Esau) gave up his rights as first-born <sup>m</sup> and yielded to the younger (brother) but because he made himself a slave to the pleasures of the belly. <sup>n</sup> Let him be reprov'd and con-

<sup>a</sup> τοῖς ἀμούσοις καὶ τοῖς ἀναρμόστοις τὸ ἦθος.

<sup>b</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>c</sup> Text slightly emended by Aucher.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "in eyes of the soul."

<sup>e</sup> Meaning uncertain: Aucher "caecutientes."

<sup>f</sup> Meaning uncertain: Aucher renders, "supra litteras tantum insidunt." OL has "in sermone narrationis occupati."

<sup>g</sup> τοῖς ὀνόμασι καὶ τοῖς ῥητοῖς λόγοις.

<sup>h</sup> πρὸς τὰ νοητὰ εἶδη.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. (which begins here) has τὸ ῥητὸν τῆς διηγήσεως.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "small." The Greek frag. omits the adjective.

<sup>k</sup> ἔλεγχον τοῦ ἀκολάστου, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>l</sup> πρὸς νουθεσίαν τῶν θεραπεύεσθαι δυναμένων, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>m</sup> τῶν πρεσβείων, as in the Greek frag., which, however, does not begin the sentence with οὐ γάρ, as does the text followed by the Arm., but with ὁ γάρ, and therefore has no contrast between the two clauses.

<sup>n</sup> So the Greek frag., δοῦλος γαστρὸς ἡδοναῖς: OL "famulus ventris."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

demned as one who never was zealous for restraint and continence.<sup>a</sup> (The passage) also contains what is in accordance with the appearance of opinion, (namely) a most natural explanation of the narrative.<sup>b</sup> For everything that is cooked is dissolved, and there is a decrease and loss of the virtue<sup>c</sup> which it formerly had. And to this is passion<sup>d</sup> likened in form (by Scripture). For this is unsalted and unbelieving.<sup>e</sup> And the self-restraint of continence loosens and dissolves it through reason<sup>f</sup> by tearing apart and cutting up its sinews and strength.

*169. (Gen. xxv. 29) Why does (Scripture) say, "Esau came from the field, giving up"<sup>g</sup>?

In the case of the patriarchs,<sup>h</sup> giving up is said to be adding,<sup>i</sup> for when they give up mortal life, they are added to the other life.<sup>j</sup> But the wicked man has only a deficiency, since he suffers only from an incessant hunger for virtue<sup>k</sup> more than from that for food and drink.

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. reads a little differently εἰς ὄνειδος προκεισθῶ τῶν μήποτε ζῆλον ἐγκρατείας λαβόντων. Originally, perhaps, the Greek was τοῦ μήποτε . . . λαβεῖν, as in the Arm. and OL "vituperator (l. "vituperatur") nullum continentiae zelum sectando."

<sup>b</sup> The above is a literal translation of the obscure Arm., which Aucher more freely renders, "habet et opinionis locus naturalem quandam rationem historiae elucidandae." OL paraphrases, "ita altiora intellectu hujus dicti veritatis titulos commendat."

<sup>c</sup> τῆς δυνάμεως : OL "virtute."

<sup>d</sup> πάθος.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. lit. = ἀναλον καὶ ἀπειθές, and seems to be corrupt. OL reads "quod poterat non coctum (marg. "contactum") nullo subjacere imperio."

<sup>f</sup> λόγῳ. For a parallel to the idea see De Sacr. Abelis 81.

<sup>g</sup> LXX ἐκλείπων : Heb. "weary."

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. has τῶν σπουδαίων.

<sup>i</sup> So the Greek frag., ἡ ἐκλειψις εἶναι λέγεται πρόσθεσις.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "to that life." The Greek frag. has ἀθανάτω ζωῆ : OL "immortalitas."

<sup>k</sup> So the Greek frag., μόνον λιμὸν ἀρετῆς ὑπομένων ἀδιάστατον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

170. (Gen. xxv. 30) Why does (Esau) say, " Give me a taste of that red pottage, for I have given up " <sup>a</sup> ?

The passion-loving and unmanly character <sup>b</sup> confesses his hunger for wisdom and prudence <sup>c</sup> and, at the same time, his deficiency in all virtue.<sup>d</sup> For this reason he straightway hastens to taste of passion, not considering this as anything less than his virtue but (as something) cooked <sup>e</sup> and mixed so as to be pleasing for its pleasurable colour.<sup>f</sup> And (Scripture) calls this (pottage) " red," adding (this word) as genuinely related to his passion,<sup>g</sup> for an impulse <sup>h</sup> is more red when passion is reddened <sup>i</sup> or else because it is proper and fitting that those who are in passion should blush and be ashamed of lauding and honouring shameful things as though (they were) good and seemly.

171. (Gen. xxv. 30) Why is his name called " Edom " ?
 " Edom " translated into the Armenian <sup>j</sup> tongue is called " flame-coloured " <sup>k</sup> or " earthy," <sup>l</sup> and this name is appropriately given to him who is intemperate and unrestrained in character, and seeks not heavenly and divine things but all that is earthy and corruptible.<sup>m</sup> And not even in sleep

<sup>a</sup> LXX γευσόν με ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐψέματος τοῦ πυρροῦ τούτου ὅτι ἐκλείπω ἐγώ. In the Heb. the red pottage 'ādōm is connected with the name Edom, descendants of Esau.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ φιλοπαθὲς καὶ ἄναδρου ἦθος.

<sup>c</sup> λιμὸν σοφίας καὶ φρονήσεως.

<sup>d</sup> ὁμοῦ πάσης ἐκλειψιν ἀρετῆς.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. apok'eal means both " cooked " and " tempered."

Aucher here renders, " contemperatum." The OL, though confused, seems to favour the former rendering.

<sup>f</sup> Variant " to be pleasing as more pleasurable."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher misconstrues, I think, in rendering, " simile vitio suo adjecto." <sup>h</sup> ὀρμή.

<sup>i</sup> Text slightly emended. Aucher renders literally, " quia majorem habet impetum rufa, atque rubicunda cupiditas."

<sup>j</sup> Sic ! The original, of course, had " Greek."

<sup>k</sup> φλόγιμος vel sim.

<sup>l</sup> γήινος, as in Quod Deus Immut. Sit 148.

<sup>m</sup> οὐ τὰ οὐράνια καὶ θεῖα ἀλλὰ πᾶν γήινον καὶ φθαρτόν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

does he know the Form that is without quality and shape and form and body,<sup>a</sup> but he is the slave of colours and qualities, by which all the senses<sup>b</sup> are deceived.<sup>c</sup> *172. (Gen. xxv. 31) Why does his brother say, "Sell me this day thy birthright"<sup>d</sup>?

The literal meaning, it would seem,<sup>e</sup> shows the greed<sup>f</sup> of the younger in wishing to deprive his elder brother of his rights.<sup>g</sup> But the virtuous man is not greedy,<sup>h</sup> inasmuch as he is a companion of frugality and restraint,<sup>i</sup> and is especially helpful in these.<sup>j</sup> He therefore clearly understands that a continuous and unlimited abundance of possessions is the occasion and cause of sin to the wicked man<sup>k</sup> and is necessary to the righteous man alone.<sup>l</sup> And he considers <sup>a</sup> τὸ ἄπειον καὶ ἀσχημάτιστον καὶ ἄμορφον καὶ ἀσώματον εἶδος.

OL has merely "in reprehensibilem vitam."

<sup>b</sup> αἱ αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>c</sup> OL "quibus per omnem sensum opprimitur," perhaps reading a form of πατεῖσθαι instead of ἀπατᾶσθαι.

<sup>d</sup> LXX Ἀπόδου μοι σήμερον τὰ πρωτοτοκεῖά σου ἐμοί.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ μὲν ῥητόν, οἷα τῷ δοκεῖν, as in the Greek frag. from Cat. Lipsiensis.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. uses two words to render πλεονεξίαν, which is found in both Greek fragments, Cat. Lips. and Procopius.

<sup>g</sup> So, almost exactly, Cat. Lips., σφετερίζεσθαι ἀδελφοῦ δίκαια ποθοῦντος. The phrase is missing from Procopius.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος οὐ πλεονέκτης, as in Cat. Lips. Procopius has ὅπερ ἀλλότριον σπουδαίου.

<sup>i</sup> So both Greek fragments, ὀλιγοδείας καὶ ἐγκρατείας ἐταῖρος.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. seems to be a partial misunderstanding of an original text like that in Procopius, καὶ ὠφελητικὸς ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα. Cat. Lips. omits the phrase.

<sup>k</sup> The Greek fragments read slightly differently: Cat. Lips. αἱ ἄφθονοι περιουσίαι τῶν φαύλων χορηγοὶ τῶν ἀμαρτημάτων καὶ ἀδικημάτων αὐτοῖς εἰσιν, Procopius αἱ ἄφθονοι περιουσίαι παντὶ φαύλῳ χορηγοὶ τῶν ἀμαρτημάτων καὶ ἀδικημάτων εἰσίν.

<sup>l</sup> Variant "to righteousness." The Greek fragments omit this last clause.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

it most necessary to remove from evil,<sup>a</sup> as from a fire, that matter which is set on fire by heat,<sup>b</sup> for the improvement of character.<sup>c</sup> And this does not harm, but is a great benefit to him who is believed to be harmed.<sup>d</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>e</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>f</sup> it should be understood that the discourse of the wise legislator<sup>g</sup> is not so much about brute animals or possessions or harvested fruits<sup>h</sup> as about the dispositions of souls.<sup>i</sup> For by nature the first-born and elder (brother) is activity in accordance with the several virtues,<sup>j</sup> which<sup>k</sup> the wicked man changes because of the opinions of the multitude. For no one among the imprudent has ever been so mad as to confess that he is evil. Therefore does he say to him,<sup>l</sup> "Do not mistreat<sup>m</sup> all truth as if lying or as if laughing at a stage-performance, but confess at once that virtue<sup>n</sup> is a possession unfamiliar and not genuine or natural<sup>o</sup> to thee, and far removed from it wilt thou pass thy days. But it is familiar and suitable and proper and kin to the cultivated and wise character."<sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "improbo," but the Arm. = κακία, as the Greek fragments read.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "materiam illam, quae ignis magis succendendi causa est."

<sup>c</sup> The Greek fragments read more smoothly τὴν προσαναφλέγουσαν ὕλην, ὡς πυρός, τῆς κακίας ἀφαιρεῖν εἰς βελτίωσιν ἡθῶν.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek fragments (which end with this sentence), ὅπερ οὐ βλάβην ἀλλὰ μεγίστην ὠφέλειαν περιποιεῖ τῷ ζημιουῦσθαι δοκοῦντι. <sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ τοῦ σοφοῦ νομοθέτου λόγος, i.e. of Moses.

<sup>h</sup> OL "pecuniis."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "de animae statu": OL "pro constantia animae." <sup>j</sup> ἡ κατὰ τὰς ἐκάστας ἀρετὰς ἐνέργεια.

<sup>k</sup> Aucher has "quos," which should be "quas," since "virtutes" is the antecedent of the rel. pron. OL has "aquarum," obviously a corruption of "quarum."

<sup>l</sup> i.e. Jacob to Esau.

<sup>m</sup> μη̄ κακοποιήσης vel sim. Aucher "noli . . . deturbare."
<sup>n</sup> ἀρετή.

<sup>o</sup> παρὰ φύσιν vel sim. Aucher "aliena."

<sup>p</sup> τῷ ἀστείῳ καὶ σοφῷ ἦθει.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

*173. (Gen. xxv. 32) Why does he reply as follows, "Behold, I am going to die, and for what is this birthright (to me)?"<sup>a</sup>?

The literal meaning<sup>b</sup> of what is said is a parable,<sup>c</sup> for truly the life of the wicked man hastens to death every day, reflecting on and training for dying.<sup>d</sup> For would he not (otherwise) say, "What is this to me which leads to virtue and happiness?"<sup>e</sup> "For," he says, "I have something else to choose and to recommend to myself,<sup>f</sup> (namely) to desire sensual pleasure and to seek lasciviousness and to be dissolute and to be greedy and avaricious and whatever else is akin<sup>h</sup> to these things."<sup>i</sup>

*174. (Gen. xxv. 34)<sup>j</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "Esau despised the birthright"<sup>k</sup>?

This legislation<sup>l</sup> is also given by God, agreeing with the earlier one.<sup>m</sup> For just as the virtuous and wise man

<sup>a</sup> LXX ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ πορεύομαι τελευτᾶν, καὶ ἵνα τί μοι ταῦτα τὰ πρωτοτοκεία ;
<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. arak = παραβολή, αἶνγμα, τύπος, etc. Aucher here renders, "aenigma." Procopius has λόγιον, OL "eloquium."

<sup>d</sup> Procopius omits the words "every day . . . dying." OL has "per singulos dies nec enim meditando."

<sup>e</sup> Variant "for he says."

<sup>f</sup> OL reads "adeo non dixit : ad quae mihi primitia, quae dirigunt virtutem et beatitudinem." Procopius reads more smoothly οὐ φησὶ δὲ "ἵνα τί μοι πρωτοτοκεία," μετὰ προσθήκης δὲ τοῦ "ταῦτα," ὃ ἐστὶ τὰ πρὸς ἀρετὴν ἄγοντα καὶ εὐδαιμονίαν. According to this reading, Philo stresses the use of the demonstrative pron. before "birthright."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "eligere et mihi parare." Procopius has ἐξάίρετα ἕτερα, OL "praerogativam."<sup>h</sup> Lit. "brother."

<sup>i</sup> So, almost literally, Procopius. OL reads more briefly "libidinis et luxuriae et quaecumque horum similia videntur."

<sup>j</sup> Philo omits comment on Gen. xxv. 33, which tells of Esau's oath and the sale of the birthright to Jacob.

<sup>k</sup> LXX καὶ ἐφάυλισεν Ἡσαὺ τὰ πρωτοτοκεία. <sup>l</sup> νομοθεσία.

<sup>m</sup> OL reads more briefly "divinum responsum consonat priori."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

despises and rejects the things of the wicked man,<sup>a</sup> so the wicked man (despises) the thoughts and deeds and words of the virtuous man.<sup>b</sup> For it is impossible and unviable that concord should ever come into being from harmony and disharmony.<sup>c</sup>

175. (Gen. xxvi. 1) Why does a famine come upon the land beside the earlier famine which came in the time of Abraham? <sup>d</sup>

It is fitting to inquire why (Scripture) adds, "upon the land," for where else does a famine ever come if not upon the land? For it is not proper to say "in heaven." But may it not be that the passage contains an allegory? <sup>e</sup> For the body is an earthy substance <sup>f</sup> about us, and when the virtuous and purified mind <sup>g</sup> dwells in it, it causes a famine not of food and drink but of wrongdoing.<sup>h</sup> And these famines are distinct. The former was a lack of ignorance and uneducatedness <sup>i</sup> in the man who has progressed and become perfect through education and teaching.<sup>j</sup> But superior to this is the destruction of things not in accord

<sup>a</sup> Procopius reads more briefly κακίζει γὰρ ὡσπερ ὁ ἀστείος τὰ τοῦ φαύλου. OL has "solertiam (l. "solet enim") strenuus pravorum spernere facta."

<sup>b</sup> So Procopius, τὰ τοῦ ἀστείου καὶ βουλευματα καὶ πράξεις καὶ λόγους. OL has "derogat enim et pravus studiosum."

<sup>c</sup> Procopius reads more briefly ἀσύμφωνον γὰρ ἀρμονία πρὸς ἀναρμυσίαν.

<sup>d</sup> LXX Ἐγένετο δὲ λιμὸς ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς χωρὶς τοῦ λιμοῦ τοῦ πρότερον (Heb. "the first") ὃς ἐγενήθη ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ τοῦ Ἀβραάμ.

<sup>e</sup> ἀλληγορίαν.

<sup>f</sup> γήινη οὐσία vel sim.: OL "terrenus sensus": Aucher "terrenum."

<sup>g</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος καὶ καθαρθεὶς νοῦς: OL "pura et sobria mens." <sup>h</sup> ἀδικιῶν. <sup>i</sup> ἔνδεια ἀμαθίας καὶ ἀπαιδευσίας.

<sup>j</sup> ἐν τῷ προκόψαντι καὶ τελειωθέντι ἐκ παιδείας καὶ διδασκαλίας. Here, as often elsewhere in Philo, Abraham is a symbol of virtue acquired through learning in contrast to Isaac as a symbol of natural or self-taught virtue and to Jacob as a symbol of virtue acquired by practice.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

with nature <sup>a</sup> in him who possesses virtue by nature, without taking thought or practising but by the power of self-teaching and self-hearing.<sup>b</sup> Both are excellent and agreeable to all happiness and prosperity and sagacity, and are susceptible of joy.<sup>c</sup>

176. (Gen. xxvi. 1) What is the meaning of the words, "Isaac went to Abimelech, king of the Philistines, to Gerara" ?

The literal meaning <sup>d</sup> clearly shows his journeying. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> it requires a more exact inquiry and examination, which we shall reveal and make clear through the interpretation of the names. For "Abimelech" is to be interpreted as "father king,"<sup>f</sup> and "Philistines" as "foreigners,"<sup>g</sup> and "Gerara" as "hedge."<sup>h</sup>

177. (Gen. xxvi. 2) Why does the (divine) word <sup>i</sup> say to him, "Do not go down to Egypt" ?

<sup>a</sup> Text and meaning uncertain. Aucher renders, "verum his superior est corruptio (vitiatorum) praeter naturam." OL paraphrases, "novissima <sc. "fames"> dissipavit ea quae minus apte videbantur."

<sup>b</sup> ἀντοδιδάκτω καὶ αὐτηκόω δυνάμει, symbolized by Isaac, cf. De Plantatione 168. OL renders inaccurately, "naturaliter enim et sine doctrina virtutes acquiruntur obediente fortitudine."

<sup>c</sup> OL paraphrases, "ita utraque famis abundantiae et frugalitatis meliores ac laetiores" (v.l. "lectiores").

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> OL "paternus rex." The name seems to be etymologized merely as "king" in De Plantatione 169.

<sup>g</sup> Philo's etymology is based on the fact that this name is usually rendered in the LXX as ἀλλόφυλοι, though not in this particular verse.

<sup>h</sup> Apparently this fanciful etymology is based on Heb. gādēr, geder = "wall," "hedge."

<sup>i</sup> Or "oracle," as Aucher renders. OL has "eloquium divinum."

<sup>j</sup> LXX ὥφθη δὲ αὐτῷ κύριος καὶ εἶπεν, Μὴ καταβῆς εἰς Αἴγυπτον. The verse is allegorized as here in Quod Deterius 46, De Confus. Ling. 81, De Migratione 29.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The passage <sup>a</sup> is clear, containing in itself nothing dark or unclear. It is to be allegorized <sup>b</sup> as follows. "Egypt" is to be translated as "oppressing," <sup>c</sup> for nothing else so constrains and oppresses the mind <sup>d</sup> as do desire for sensual pleasures <sup>e</sup> and grief and fear. But to the perfected man, <sup>f</sup> who by nature enjoys the happiness of virtue, <sup>g</sup> the sacred and divine word <sup>h</sup> recommends all perfection <sup>i</sup> and not to go down into the passions <sup>j</sup> but to accept impassivity <sup>k</sup> with joy, bidding (the passions) a fond farewell. <sup>l</sup> And to those who are moderate <sup>m</sup> (Scripture) reveals and recommends the middle way <sup>n</sup> because of their weakness, and (this) they accept, <sup>o</sup> not being venturesome or confident and not being able to ascend with him. <sup>p</sup> But those who attain and reach the summit <sup>q</sup> and attain to the very limit of the end do not give any thought <sup>r</sup> at all to that which clings to the ground. <sup>s</sup>

178. (Gen. xxvi. 2-3) Why does He say, "Dwell in the land of which I shall tell thee." <sup>t</sup> And thou shalt dwell sojourning in the land " <sup>u</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>b</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

<sup>c</sup> θλίβων. Philo here plays on the resemblance between Heb. Misrayim "Egypt" and mēsārim "straits." Elsewhere (passim) he makes Egypt a symbol of τὰ κατὰ σῶμα πάθη. Interesting in this connexion is his discussion in De Migratione 157-160, where Egypt symbolizes bodily passion, and he remarks, διὰ τὸν ὄγκον μηκέτι χωρεῖν τὸ σῶμα θλιβόμενον κτλ.

<sup>d</sup> τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>e</sup> ἐπιθυμῖαι ἡδονῶν.

<sup>f</sup> τῷ τελειωθέντι, symbolized by Isaac. <sup>g</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ ἱερός καὶ θεῖος λόγος. <sup>i</sup> παντέλειαν. <sup>j</sup> κάτω εἰς τὰ πάθη.

<sup>k</sup> ἀπάθειαν, cf. De Plantatione 98 ἀπάθειαν ἀντὶ παθῶν.

<sup>l</sup> πολλὰ χαίρειν φράζοντα. <sup>m</sup> τοῖς μετρίοις. <sup>n</sup> μεσότητα.

<sup>o</sup> Aucher punctuates differently and renders, "quia ob infirmitatem id ultro acceptant." OL paraphrases freely.

<sup>r</sup> i.e. Isaac.

<sup>q</sup> πρὸς ἀκρότητα.

<sup>t</sup> Lit. "do not make way."

<sup>u</sup> τῷ χαμαιζήλω.

<sup>t</sup> LXX κατοίκησον δὲ ἐν τῇ γῇ ἣ ἄν σοι εἴπω.

<sup>u</sup> The Arm. lit. = παροικία κατοικία ἐν τῇ γῇ. LXX has καὶ παροικεῖ ἐν τῇ γῇ ταύτῃ, as does Philo in De Confus. Ling. 81. It is probable that this was the original reading here also.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

He indicates a distinction between sojourners and dwellers, for in word <sup>a</sup> men dwell in these cities, but in fact the soul <sup>b</sup> does not show the same dispositions.<sup>c</sup> And He commands the wise man <sup>d</sup> to sojourn <sup>e</sup> in that land which admits of pointing to and touching,<sup>f</sup> but to dwell in that (land) which the divine oracle will command. For the sense-perceptible and earthy <sup>g</sup> is our body. And the soul, which is the principal thing within it, if it is to desire a blessing,<sup>h</sup> should and must (merely) sojourn <sup>i</sup> in it, being mindful of the mother-city,<sup>j</sup> to which it seeks to remove and to dwell there. Wherefore He legislates <sup>k</sup> for the divinely born soul, admonishing and encouraging it to dwell there with constancy. And what other city is a fitting symbol <sup>l</sup> of this character<sup>m</sup> according to the law of allegory <sup>n</sup> if not virtue? <sup>n</sup>

*179. (Gen. xxvi. 3) What is the meaning of the words, "I will be with thee and I will bless thee" <sup>o</sup>?

(This) shows the connexion and harmonious order of the things fitted together methodically in the divine oracles.

<sup>a</sup> λόγῳ μὲν, contrasted with ἔργῳ δέ in the following clause.

<sup>b</sup> τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>c</sup> διαθέσει. Aucher renders, "re autem animae in suis dispositionibus vix sese uniformiter habentis."

<sup>d</sup> τῷ σοφῷ.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "to dwell in sojourning," see note u on p. 462.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "in ea, quam tantummodo videat et tangat, terra." OL has "permittitur ergo sapienti incolatus pro spectaculo tantum et actu" (l. "tactu"), and adds an explanatory clause. <sup>g</sup> τὸ αἰσθητὸν καὶ γήινον.

<sup>h</sup> Arm. geleşkabanout' iun = "beauty of speech" or the like, but here prob. is a too literal rendering of εὐλογία, mentioned in the next clause in Scripture and in Philo's next section. Aucher here renders, "pulchrum negotium," OL "benivolentiam" (sic).

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "dwell in sojourning," see note u on p. 462.

<sup>j</sup> τῆς μητροπόλεως.

<sup>k</sup> νομοθετεῖ.

<sup>l</sup> αἰνίγμα.

<sup>m</sup> κατὰ τὸν τῆς ἀλληγορίας νόμον.

<sup>n</sup> ἀρετῆ.

<sup>o</sup> LXX ἔσομαι μετὰ σοῦ καὶ εὐλογήσω σε.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

For God necessarily <sup>a</sup> brings near to man concord and blessing <sup>b</sup> and pleasantness of speech, <sup>c</sup> just as, on the contrary, distance (from God brings) irrationality. <sup>d</sup> For there is no greater evil for the soul than folly and stupidity, when it is deprived of the rational genus, the mind, which is characteristic of it. <sup>e</sup>

*180. (Gen. xxvi: 3) What is the meaning of the words, "I will establish my oath which I swore to thy father" <sup>f</sup> ?

First, this must be said, that the words of God do not differ from oaths. And by whom does God swear if not by Himself? <sup>g</sup> And He is said to swear, because of our weakness, for we think that just as in the case of man an oath differs from words, so also is it in the case of God. <sup>h</sup> And since He is blessed and gracious and propitious, He does not judge created beings <sup>i</sup> in accordance with His greatness but in accordance with theirs. <sup>j</sup> And in the

<sup>a</sup> ἐξ ἀνάγκης.

<sup>b</sup> ὁμόνοιαν καὶ εὐλογίαν.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "bonamque eloquentiam": OL "complacationem." The Arm. variant seems to be merely an orthographic one.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. word usu. = ἀλογία. Aucher renders, "privationem verbi (vel, rationis)": OL "maledictionem." The Arm. variant means "lack of (permanent) dwelling."

<sup>e</sup> Slightly different is the text of the Greek frag., μείζον ἀνθρώπῳ κακὸν ἀφροσύνης οὐδέν ἐστι, τὸ ἴδιον τοῦ λογιστικοῦ γένους, τὸν νοῦν, ζημιωθέντι.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ στήσω τὸν ὄρκον μου ὃν ὤμοσα Ἀβραὰμ τῷ πατρί σου.

<sup>g</sup> So the Greek frag., ἀδιαφοροῦσιν ὄρκων λόγοι θεοῦ. καὶ κατὰ τίνος ἂν ὤμοσεν ὁ θεός, ὅτι μὴ ἑαυτοῦ;

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag., λέγεται δὲ ὀμνῆναι διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν ἀσθένειαν τῶν ὑπολαμβανόντων ὡς ἐπ' ἀνθρώπου διαφέρειν λόγων ὄρκους, οὕτως ἐπὶ θεοῦ. OL, taking διαφέρειν in the sense of "excel," renders the next to last clause, "juraacula hominum fortiora esse verborum."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "those in generation."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, "juxta eorum (pusillanimitatem)," OL "adversus generis possibilitatem." There is no Greek preserved of this sentence.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

second place, He wishes to praise the son as one worthy of his father's nobility,<sup>a</sup> for He would not firmly establish the prayers<sup>b</sup> made to the father with an oath, for the sake of the son, if He did not witness the same virtue<sup>c</sup> in him.<sup>d</sup> Cease, therefore, now from praising nobility<sup>e</sup> separately by itself and learn from the divine Scriptures what true (nobility) is, and repent. For this (passage) clearly teaches us to define and judge and discern the well-born (as being) not those who have sprung from good fathers or grandparents and are content with that alone, but those who are themselves emulators of their (fathers') piety.<sup>f</sup> And it is wrong<sup>g</sup> to praise those who are involuntarily good<sup>h</sup> or an involuntary origin,<sup>i</sup> for not by taking thought does each of us come into being,<sup>j</sup> and that which is voluntary is not to be placed in any order,<sup>k</sup> and the voluntary is best and is the acceptance and imitation of the good.<sup>l</sup>

181. (Gen. xxvi. 4a) What is the meaning of the words, "I will multiply thy seed as the stars of heaven"<sup>m</sup>?

Two things are indicated, in which the nature of all things in general<sup>n</sup> consists, (namely) quantity and quality—quantity in "I will multiply," and quality in "as the stars." So may (thy descendants) be pure and far-shining<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> εὐγενείας. The Greek frag. has εὐεργίας.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. has εὐλογίας, which makes better sense. OL has "foederis."

<sup>c</sup> ἀρετήν, as in the Greek frag. <sup>d</sup> i. e. the son.

<sup>e</sup> More lit. "freedom" (of birth)—ἐλευθερίαν: OL "generis nobilitatem."

<sup>f</sup> εὐσεβείας.

<sup>g</sup> ἄτοπον, apparently rendered here by two Arm. words.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher, taking the adj. as neuter, renders, "involuntaria bona," OL "minus ultroneum bonum." <sup>i</sup> γένεσιν.

<sup>j</sup> OL "nec enim per cuiusdam consilium nascimur."

<sup>k</sup> Meaning not wholly clear. OL has "ita enim spontanea bonitas pro nihilo imputatur."

<sup>l</sup> OL reads "quoniam spontaneum melius actus testimonium est, et paterna imitatio."

<sup>m</sup> ΛXX καὶ πληθυνῶ τὸ σπέρμα σου ὡς τοὺς ἀστέρας τοῦ οὐρανοῦ.

<sup>n</sup> κοινῶς (vel sim.) ἢ τῶν πάντων φύσις. <sup>o</sup> τηλαυγείς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and always be ranged in order and obey their leader,<sup>a</sup> and may they behave like the luciform (stars) which everywhere with the splendour of ethereal brightness also illumine all other things.

182. (Gen. xxvi. 4b) What is the meaning of the words, "To thy seed I will give all this land"<sup>b</sup>?

The literal text<sup>c</sup> makes clear the special meaning of the Law,<sup>d</sup> in which it is said that only the wise man is rich<sup>e</sup> and that all things belong to the wise man. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>f</sup> He says, "I will grant to thee all earthly and corporeal substances as if servants subject to a ruler."<sup>g</sup> For I wish thee not to collect revenue<sup>h</sup> and not to exact tribute,<sup>i</sup> which immoderate and insatiable passions determine, but in the manner of a king to be a ruler and leader, and to lead the way rather than be led."

183. (Gen. xxvi. 4c) What is the meaning of the words, "In thy seed<sup>j</sup> will be blessed all the nations of the earth"<sup>k</sup>?

The literal meaning<sup>l</sup> is significant<sup>m</sup> and clear. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>n</sup> it is to be allegorized,<sup>o</sup> as follows.

<sup>a</sup> τῶ ταξιάρχῳ. Probably God is meant as in De Spec. Leg. ii. 230 <ψυχαὶ> πειθόμεναι τῶ ταξιάρχῳ.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ δώσω τῶ σπέρματί σου πᾶσαν τὴν γῆν ταύτην (Heb. "all these lands"). In Quis Rer. Div. Heres 8 Philo comments on Gen. xxvi. 3-5 as a unit.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.
<sup>d</sup> τὴν ἰδίαν τοῦ νόμου γνώμην vel sim.: OL "utpote Dei decreto pronuntiatum."

<sup>e</sup> μόνον ὁ σοφὸς πλούσιος.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> OL "ut principatum (l. "principatui"?) quendam subjectum."

<sup>h</sup> εἰσόδους.
<sup>i</sup> φόρον: OL "foenora." <sup>j</sup> OL "in nomine tuo."

<sup>k</sup> LXX καὶ ἐνευλογηθήσονται ἐν τῶ σπέρματί σου πάντα τὰ ἔθνη τῆς γῆς.
<sup>l</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher "symbolica." OL omits the first sentence.

<sup>n</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>o</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

All the nations of this earth's soil <sup>a</sup> are in us.<sup>b</sup> And the various senses,<sup>c</sup> such as they may be, consist of the various passions.<sup>d</sup> And these become better when they adhere to a governor and overseer and superintendent, who has power as, according to the poet,<sup>e</sup> "both a goodly king and a warlike spearman." But they undergo a change for the bad when the sovereign mind <sup>f</sup> changes to obedience and submission, and, like a bad and weak charioteer, is unable to restrain the headlong course and wildness of yoked <sup>g</sup> horses, and is carried away by their great speed.

*184. (Gen. xxvi. 5) Why does He say, "Forasmuch as thy father was obedient and kept My precepts and My commandments and My rights and My laws" <sup>h</sup> ?

Everything which is Mine, He says, is this.<sup>i</sup> For good and virtuous men are familiar with the powers of God,<sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "of this earthy earth."

<sup>b</sup> OL renders freely, "omnes gentes figuras esse terreni corporis nostri." <sup>c</sup> αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. text seems to be inexact; one would expect "give rise to the various passions." Aucher renders, "in singulas cupiditates coalescunt": OL "per singulos sensus singula vitia nascuntur."

<sup>e</sup> Homer, Iliad iii. 179 (on Agamemnon) ἀμφότερον βασιλεύς τ' ἀγαθὸς κρατερός τ' αἰχμητής.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ ἡγεμὼν νοῦς.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher and OL omit the participle.

<sup>h</sup> Philo here slightly abbreviates the LXX text (which he follows verbatim in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 8), ἀνθ' ὧν ὑπήκουσεν Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατήρ σου τῆς ἐμῆς φωνῆς, καὶ ἐφύλαξεν τὰ προστάγματα μου (Heb. "My observance") καὶ τὰς ἐντολάς μου καὶ τὰ δικαιώματά μου (Heb. "My statutes") καὶ τὰ νόμιμά μου. OL renders δικαιώματα as "justificationes," and omits νόμιμα. Philo comments on the verse also in De Migratione 130 and De Abrahamo 275.

<sup>i</sup> So the Arm. literally. Aucher renders, "omnia Mea, haec sunt, ait." OL paraphrases.

<sup>j</sup> οἱ ἀγαθοὶ καὶ σπουδαῖοι ταῖς θεοῦ δυνάμεσιν οἰκείοι εἰσιν. OL renders loosely, "haec Mea praeclara bona divinae virtutis domestica."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

from which, as from a spring, a few men draw,<sup>a</sup> (namely) those who are well provided with a proper education,<sup>b</sup> and genuinely desire wisdom.<sup>c</sup> Now, of the four (things mentioned), the first two are considered to be consecrated to God,<sup>d</sup> (namely) "the precepts and commandments," for He gives precepts as a ruler to those who do not readily obey without fear, and He gives commandments as to His friends<sup>e</sup> to those who pray and have faith.<sup>f</sup> But the other two, (namely) "the rights and laws" are virtues<sup>g</sup> toward men, concerning whom it is fitting and proper to have great care of laws and rights,<sup>h</sup> for rights can somehow exist and consist by nature, while laws (do so) by convention. But those things (existing) by nature are older than those (existing) by convention, and so, rights (are older) than laws.<sup>i</sup>

185. (Gen. xxvi. 6) Why does (Scripture) say that "Isaac dwelt as a sojourner<sup>j</sup> in Gerar"<sup>k</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "take."

<sup>b</sup> ὀρθῆ παιδεία κεχορηγημένοι. Aucher renders, "qui recta disciplina pulchre incedunt." OL renders defectively (omitting participle or verb), "plura (l. "pura"?) disciplina."

<sup>c</sup> σοφίας γνησίως ἐφιένται.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. they are the laws concerning man's duties toward God as opposed to those concerning his relations toward his fellow-men. See H. A. Wolfson, Philo, ii. 200.

<sup>e</sup> OL "ut amicus" (l. "amicis"?).

<sup>f</sup> Aucher "credulis."

<sup>g</sup> ἀρεταί.

<sup>h</sup> Construction not quite clear. Aucher renders, "quibus etiam convenire dixeris leges et iura (sancire) aut potius magnam habere curam."

<sup>i</sup> Similarly the brief Greek frag. (from Dam. Sacra Par., identified by Lewy, p. 59), διαφέρει δικαιώματα νομίμων τὰ μὲν γὰρ πως δύνανται συνίστασθαι (sic) φύσει, τὰ δὲ νόμμα θέσει. πρεσβύτερα δὲ τῶν θέσει τὰ φύσει, ὥστε καὶ τὸ δίκαιον νόμον.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "in sojourn." LXX has simply κατώκησεν, Heb. and Arm. O.T. "dwelt." The Arm. Philo seems to reflect a reading παρώκησεν as in one LXX ms. (E).

<sup>k</sup> Arm. and LXX "Gerara."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

“Gerar” is to be interpreted as “hedge,”<sup>a</sup> which we allegorically<sup>b</sup> declare to be that which concerns the body and whatever external things vain, empty and useless opinions blindly invent. For he who dwells within this hedge is wretched, serving many implacable, cruel and inexorable masters. And he endures their threats, being deceived,<sup>c</sup> in the manner of beasts, by what is not good as though it were the best of all. But the sojourner<sup>d</sup> imagines the hope of his entire freedom,<sup>e</sup> being contented with necessities. Wherefore he easily slips away from the hedge<sup>f</sup> and from the snares which are in it.

186. (Gen. xxvi. 7) Who are the men who inquired concerning his wife?<sup>g</sup>

To the various parts of the soul there are thoughts related as inhabitants<sup>h</sup> as follows. To the rational (part)<sup>i</sup> (are related thoughts) pertaining to wisdom and folly<sup>j</sup>; to the irascible<sup>k</sup> (are related thoughts) pertaining to courage and cowardice<sup>l</sup>; to the appetitive<sup>m</sup> (are related

<sup>a</sup> φραγμός, a word which the LXX usually employs to render Heb. gāḏēr. In QG iv. 59 (on Gen. xx. 1) Philo explains Gerar as “the region of God-loving thoughts,” evidently connecting it with Heb. gēr “sojourner” or “resident alien.”

<sup>b</sup> ἀλληγοροῦντες.

<sup>c</sup> OL “infructuosa spe occupatus.”

<sup>d</sup> ὁ πάροιχος.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders, “at peregrinus spe quadam depicta totalis suae libertatis”: OL “incola vero spem sibi recondit futurae libertatis.”

<sup>f</sup> OL “cujus spem facillime effugiet.”

<sup>g</sup> OL reads differently “qui sunt illi viri quos Scriptura meminit?” Philo here comments only on the first part of the verse, which goes on to say that Isaac reported Rebekah to be his sister, fearing that the men of Gerar might kill him because of her beauty.

<sup>h</sup> ἐκάστοις τοῖς τῆς ψυχῆς μέρεσιν οἰκέοι εἰσι λογισμοὶ ὡσπερ οἰκήτορες.

<sup>i</sup> τῷ λογικῷ. OL renders, “partem eloquentiae.”

<sup>j</sup> σοφίαν καὶ ἀφροσύνην.

<sup>k</sup> τῷ θυμικῷ.

<sup>l</sup> ἀνδρείαν καὶ δειλίαν.

<sup>m</sup> τῷ ἐπιθυμητικῷ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

thoughts) pertaining to moderation <sup>a</sup> and licentiousness ; to the nutritive <sup>b</sup> (are related thoughts) pertaining to food and drink ; to the sense-perceptible <sup>c</sup> (are related the thoughts) which in accordance with the several senses seek to find enjoyment and new sensual pleasures. <sup>d</sup> But the place of the hedge <sup>e</sup> itself has its own men, (namely) the thoughts which depend upon and are attached to <sup>f</sup> the body and external things. Wherefore they attempt to corrupt and stain its unstained, holy and pure nature.

187. (Gen. xxvi. 8a) What is the meaning of the words, " He was there a long time " <sup>g</sup> ?

The retreat <sup>h</sup> of the contemplative and God-loving soul <sup>i</sup> is (considered to be) a dwelling in a place of sojourn <sup>j</sup> for a long time even if (only) for a day. But that which <sup>k</sup> is without place and without time is best. <sup>l</sup> For places <sup>m</sup> and times are brothers, which come into existence together and are moved <sup>n</sup> together.

*188. (Gen. xxvi. 8b) <sup>o</sup> What is the game <sup>p</sup> which Abimelech, looking through the window, saw Isaac playing with his wife ? <sup>q</sup>

<sup>a</sup> σωφροσύνην.

<sup>b</sup> τῷ θρεπτικῷ.
<sup>d</sup> ἡδονάς.

<sup>c</sup> τῷ αἰσθητικῷ.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. Gerar, see the preceding section.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders the two ptes. by one, " adhaerentes."

<sup>g</sup> LXX ἐγένετο δὲ πολυχρόνιος ἐκεῖ.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ ἀναχώρησις: Arm. variant " distance " or " absence."

<sup>i</sup> τῆς φιλοθεάμονος καὶ φιλοθέου ψυχῆς.

<sup>j</sup> ἐν τόπῳ παροικίας.

<sup>k</sup> The rel. pron. here is evidently neuter, as OL correctly renders. Aucher renders it as masc., " qui."

<sup>l</sup> Arm. uses two adjectives.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. space.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher " incedentia " : OL " agitata."

<sup>o</sup> Philo comments similarly on this passage in De Plantatione 169-177.

<sup>p</sup> ἡ παιδιά.

<sup>q</sup> LXX παρακύβας δὲ Ἀβιμέλεχ . . . διὰ τῆς θυρίδος ἶδεν τὸν Ἰσαὰκ παίζοντα μετὰ Ῥεβέκκας τῆς γυναικὸς αὐτοῦ.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

The literal meaning <sup>a</sup> represents lawful commerce <sup>b</sup> with one's wife.<sup>c</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>d</sup> this must be attributed (to it, namely that) not every game is blame-worthy but sometimes it is virtuous and praiseworthy, for it is a sign of the innocence and sincerity of the pure festiveness of the heart.<sup>e</sup> For the age of playfulness is guileless and without cunning, whence "boy" <sup>f</sup> was first named. And from this, in accordance with (our) interpretation, the festive enjoyments of perfect men <sup>g</sup> which are worthy and virtuous are called a "game."<sup>h</sup> And wicked and luxury-loving men have no share or part or taste of this at all but lead sorrowful and painful lives. The virtuous,<sup>i</sup> however, happily enjoy (this) <sup>j</sup> always, (as) men, when their souls are impressed upon <sup>k</sup> the mortal body, or when they are released and separated and removed at death, or else when they have never in any way been bound (to bodies). So also (do) the divine beings <sup>l</sup> which

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. hawasarout'iyun usu. = κοινωνία, but here the original prob. had συνουσίαν. The brief paraphrase in Procopius (of this sentence only) reads Ἐβραῖοι δέ φασιν εὐσχημόνως εἰρησθαι τὸ "παίζειν" ἀντὶ τοῦ συνουσιάζειν. OL has "coitus."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, "litera conversationem mutuum indicat legitimi viri cum uxore."

<sup>d</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>e</sup> σημεῖον τῆς ἀκακίας καὶ ἀπλότητος τῆς καθαρῶς εὐωχουμένης καρδίας.

<sup>f</sup> παῖς, as if from παίζων "playing." <sup>g</sup> τελείων.

<sup>h</sup> παιδιά. Aucher renders somewhat differently, "ex quo secundum usum receptum et perfectorum jucunditas grata et honesta vocatur paedia (relaxatio animi, ludus, jocus)." OL has "superveniente autem perfectorum delectatione facile transiguntur. Est enim in ipsis jocositas."

<sup>i</sup> οἱ σπουδαῖοι. <sup>j</sup> OL adds "in bonis operibus."

<sup>k</sup> Such seems to be the literal meaning of Arm. ənd arak harealk' here. Aucher has "conjuncti": OL reads quite differently "semoti malorum." Possibly the original Greek had έντυμβευόμεναι, which was miscopied as έντυπούμεναι.

<sup>l</sup> οἱ δαίμονες.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the sacred word of Moses <sup>a</sup> is wont to call "angels," <sup>b</sup> and the stars.<sup>c</sup> For these <sup>d</sup> are, as it were, intelligible, marvellous and divine natures,<sup>e</sup> having acquired eternal joy unmixed with sorrow. Similar is the universal and whole heaven and world since it is both a rational animal and a virtuous animal and philosophical by nature.<sup>f</sup> And for this reason it is without sorrow or fear, and full of joy. Moreover, it is said that even the Father and Creator of the universe <sup>g</sup> continually rejoices in His life and plays and is joyful, finding pleasure in play which is in keeping with the divine and in joyfulness.<sup>h</sup> And He has no need of anything nor does He lack anything, but with joy He delights in Himself and in His powers <sup>i</sup> and in the worlds <sup>j</sup> made by Him. But in the system of invisible evidence these are measures of all incorporeal forms <sup>k</sup> in the likeness and in the image of the invisible.<sup>l</sup> Rightly, therefore, and properly

<sup>a</sup> ὁ ἱερὸς λόγος Μωυσέως. Aucher renders freely, "sacro Moyses verbo": OL "religiosus Moses."

<sup>b</sup> ἀγγέλους, cf. De Somniis i. 141. <sup>c</sup> οἱ ἀστέρες.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the stars or heavenly bodies generally.

<sup>e</sup> ὥσπερ νοεραὶ καὶ θαυμάσιαι καὶ θεῖαι φύσεις τινές εἰσιν.

<sup>f</sup> οὐρανὸς καὶ κόσμος· ζῶον γάρ ἐστι λογικὸν καὶ ζῶον σπουδαῖον καὶ φύσει φιλόσοφον.

<sup>g</sup> καὶ ὁ πατήρ καὶ ποιητὴς τῶν ὅλων, a common locution in Philo.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "gaudens decenti divinum jocum jucunditate." OL abbreviates the whole passage after "Creator of the universe," reading "semper digno suo lusu delectari." <sup>i</sup> ταῖς δυνάμεσι.

<sup>j</sup> Note the plural. OL renders the sentence more briefly, "delectatur enim in splendore virtutum et creaturarum suarum universitate." <sup>k</sup> ἀσωμάτων ἰδεῶν (or εἰδῶν).

<sup>l</sup> Aucher, remarking in a footnote that the sentence is "obscurissima," renders more freely, "invisibilis vero illius ideae, quae indicativa est hujus compaginis, incorporearum specierum mensurae haec sunt, omnes illas esse in similitudine formaque invisibilis (creatoris)." OL reads more intelligibly "invisibili ergo exemplari ex incorporalibus figuris constituto, merito mensurae universorum in ipsius (l. "ipsis"?) visibiles sunt pro imitaculo verae atque syncerae supernae imaginis."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

does the wise man,<sup>a</sup> believing (his) end <sup>b</sup> (to consist in) likeness to God, strive, so far as possible, to unite the created with the uncreated and the mortal with the immortal, and not to be deficient or wanting in gladness and joyfulness in His likeness.<sup>c</sup> For this reason he plays this game of unchangeable and constant virtue <sup>d</sup> with Rebekah, whose name is to be interpreted in the Armenian <sup>e</sup> language as "Constancy."<sup>f</sup> This game and delight of the soul the wicked man does not know, since he has no marriage <sup>g</sup> with wonderful pleasure.<sup>h</sup> But the progressive man,<sup>i</sup> as if looking from a window, sees it but not the whole of it and not the mingling <sup>j</sup> of both alone.<sup>k</sup> For this there is need of the especially sharp-sighted eyes of one accustomed (to seeing) from a distance and of those who are accustomed to see.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὁ σοφός, here represented by Isaac.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ τέλος.

<sup>c</sup> A different text underlies OL, "quapropter sapiens finem perfectum aestimando assimilare deo tunc capit nascibilem innato coniectum, festinat non deesse hujus similitudinis et jucunditatis."

<sup>d</sup> βεβαίαις ἀρετῆς.

<sup>e</sup> As usual, the Arm. translator substitutes "Armenian" for "Greek."

<sup>f</sup> διαμονή or ὑπομονή, see QG iv. 97, 135 et al.

<sup>g</sup> γάμον.

<sup>h</sup> Here Philo uses ἡδονή in an (exceptional) good sense.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ προκόπτων, symbolized by Abimelech. OL has "munus," which possibly is based on a misreading of προκόπτων as πρακτικόν.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "those mingled."

<sup>k</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "sive utriusque (ludum) singulariter purum." In a footnote he gives a literal rendering similar to mine. OL has "non tamen purum sentit utrorumque jocum" (v.l. "jugum").

<sup>l</sup> Aucher renders, "ad quod acutissimi oculi opus est diu assuefacti, etiam quae in consuetudine cernere." OL paraphrases, "cujus mens dubitat acutius (v.l. "citius") cernere melioras olet (l. "meliora, solet") enim suam consuetudinem pro plenitudine laudis accipere."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

*189. (Gen. xxvi. 12) <sup>a</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "He sowed in that year and found hundredfold barley" <sup>b</sup> ?

The year is a completed time <sup>c</sup> and consists of all the times <sup>d</sup> of the year, when it is called "within itself and outside of itself." <sup>e</sup> Now, one hundred is the most sacred of numbers, (being) a power <sup>f</sup> of the all-perfect decad. <sup>g</sup> But the literal text is a sort of testimony <sup>h</sup> that for the virtuous man <sup>i</sup> there is prosperity both in agriculture and in other things pertaining to the life of the world, and that that which comes afterwards is many times greater than that which was in the beginning, and is fullness. <sup>j</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>k</sup> barley is the food of both men and irrational creatures, <sup>l</sup> but in each of us the mind is a man, and sense-perception is a beast. <sup>m</sup> Accordingly, when barrenness and unproductivity of good things do not follow but the soul <sup>n</sup> presents itself as fertile land like a field which is able to receive the seed of virtue, <sup>o</sup> it becomes

<sup>a</sup> Philo here passes over Gen. xxvi. 9-11, telling of Abimelech's discovery that Rebekah was Isaac's wife and his decree that none of his subjects should molest them on pain of death.

<sup>b</sup> Philo abbreviates the LXX text, which reads ἔσπειρεν δὲ Ἰσαὰκ ἐν τῇ γῆ ἐκείνῃ καὶ εὗρεν ἐν τῷ ἐνιαυτῷ ἐκείνῳ ἑκατοστεύουσαν κριθήν· εὐλόγησεν δὲ αὐτὸν κύριος. The word κριθήν "barley" is based on Heb. šē'ōrīm; our extant Heb. text has šē'ārīm "gates." Philo comments on the hundredfold yield in De Mut. Nom. 268-269.

<sup>c</sup> OL "anni (sic) tempus perfectum." <sup>d</sup> i.e. seasons.

<sup>e</sup> V.l. "and outside within itself": OL "apud se et infra se omnia habere." The meaning of the apparently corrupt Arm. text is clear from De Spec. Leg. iv. 235 τὸν ἐνιαυτὸν, ὅς, καθάπερ αὐτὸ μνηύει τοῦνομα, αὐτὸς ἐν ἑαυτῷ πάντα περιέχει συμπεραιούμενος. <sup>f</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. QG iii. 56 and Staehle, pp. 70-71.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητὸν μαρτύριόν τι ἐστί. <sup>i</sup> τῷ σπουδαίῳ.

<sup>j</sup> OL paraphrases, "semperque ejus germina ampliantur plus quam pridem." <sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> καὶ ἀλόγων ζώων, i.e. beasts.

<sup>m</sup> ἄνθρωπος ὁ νοῦς καὶ ἄλογον ἢ αἰσθησις.

<sup>n</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ. <sup>o</sup> τὸ τῆς ἀρετῆς σπέρμα.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

fruitful; and when it is seen to bear in accordance with its several virtues, it finds more than it bore, for God furthers the growth.<sup>a</sup> And from the invisible to the visible and another form He benefits<sup>b</sup> the rational and the irrational<sup>c</sup> with one and the same grace,<sup>d</sup> in accordance with the perfect number, the hundred, which is the most perfect and sacred principle<sup>e</sup> from the sacred principle of the decad.<sup>f</sup>

190. (Gen. xxvi. 13) What is the meaning of the words, "Progressing, he became greater until he was very great,"<sup>g</sup>?

Since the literal meaning<sup>h</sup> is clear, it is the deeper meaning that must be ascertained.<sup>i</sup> To<sup>j</sup> the perfect number and that which contains the year within itself<sup>k</sup> (Scripture) clearly likens<sup>l</sup> the progress and growth of the mind,<sup>m</sup> and gives an account of the first stage.<sup>n</sup> And when it reaches

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "furthers and causes to grow."

<sup>b</sup> εὐεργετοῦντος.

<sup>c</sup> The above is a literal translation of the obscure Arm. passage, which Aucher renders, "atque ex invisibili in visibilem, et aliam formam benefice transvehente rationalem partem et irrationalem." OL paraphrases, "deo palam proferente certa ex invisibili suo thesauro, ut utraque res beneficia sentiat, persona videlicet atque rationalis."

<sup>d</sup> τῇ αὐτῇ χάριτι.

<sup>e</sup> ἀρχή.

<sup>f</sup> OL abbreviates the text after "grace," reading, "quae est primitiva numeri sanctioris."

<sup>g</sup> ΙΧΧ καὶ ὑψώθη (Heb. "became great") ὁ ἄνθρωπος καὶ προβαίνων μείζων ἐγένετο ἕως οὗ μέγας ἐγένετο σφόδρα.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν ἀκριβωτέον.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. prep. i with the ablative case usu. = "from" but the context here requires the meaning "to"; cf. OL "secundum similitudinem perfecti numeri."

<sup>k</sup> See the preceding section.

<sup>l</sup> Emending the ending of the Arm. verb, -el (inf.) to -eal (ptc.).

<sup>m</sup> τὴν τοῦ νοῦ προκοπὴν καὶ αὐξήσιν.

<sup>n</sup> OL "prudentiam crescere, primo interim gradu pro vectam."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the first magnitude, why should it examine and inquire into those things which are created sinless? <sup>a</sup>

*191. (Gen. xxvi. 15) Why did the Philistines stop up and fill (the wells) which the servants of his father had dug? <sup>b</sup>

The literal text <sup>c</sup> indicates a twofold reason. One of them, the first, is that it is the custom of inconsiderate men <sup>d</sup> not to allow any pillars or monuments of the good, whatever they may be, to remain <sup>e</sup> which redound to their happiness. <sup>f</sup> And the second (reason) is that, bursting with envy and jealousy of the others' continuous <sup>g</sup> prosperity, they are contemptuous of their own profit, <sup>h</sup> thinking it better to suffer harm than to find good in that which they

<sup>a</sup> Variant "which are uncreated." The text is obviously corrupt. OL has "jam non pro nascibilibus sed pro incomparabilibus mente occupantur." Perhaps the Arm. translator read ἀναμαρτήτων for ἀμέτρων, the original meaning being that Scripture does not specify the exact measure of greatness which Isaac reached.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ πάντα τὰ φρέατα ἃ ὤρυξαν οἱ παῖδες τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ ἐν τῷ χρόνῳ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ (some LXX MSS. and Heb. add "Abraham") ἐνέφραξαν αὐτὰ οἱ Φυλιστιεῖμ καὶ ἐπλησαν αὐτὰ γῆς.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> τοῖς γὰρ ἀβούλοις ἔθος ἐστί, as in the Greek frag. from Cat. Lips. The second Greek frag., from Procopius, has οἱ ἐμπαθεῖς.

<sup>e</sup> Cat. Lips. μήτε μνημεῖόν τι ἀπολιπεῖν τῶν καλῶν: Procopius καὶ τὰ μνημεῖα τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἐξαλείφουσι: OL "nullos titulos insignis memoriae relinquere."

<sup>f</sup> Cat. Lips. omits the rel. clause: Procopius κἂν τύχωσιν ἐξ αὐτῶν ὠφελοῦμενοι: OL "quod benevoli pro capessenda gloria student."

<sup>g</sup> Or "exceeding."

<sup>h</sup> So, almost verbatim, Cat. Lips., ἢ ὅτι ῥηγνύμενοι φθόνῳ καὶ βασκανίᾳ τῆς περὶ ἐκείνους (v.l. ἐκείνων) εὐπραγίας ὀλιγωροῦσι καὶ τῆς αὐτῶν (l. αὐτῶν) ὠφελείας: Procopius omits: OL reads inaccurately "secunda, pro invidia et livore prosperitatis communem despicientibus utilitatem."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

do not desire.<sup>a</sup> "For what," one might say, "prevented (you), O most stupid and foolish of all men,<sup>b</sup> from leaving alone the springs which another had found, for the use of those among you who were in need (of them)?"<sup>c</sup> But one might say in reply, "Do not look for an apology of liberality<sup>d</sup> from jealous and envious men, who think it a punishment (to accept) kindnesses extended by the noblest men."<sup>e</sup> That is the literal meaning. But the deeper meaning<sup>f</sup> must be sought. The wells that were dug are symbols of education and knowledge,<sup>g</sup> and each of them is deep, and their final end<sup>h</sup> is (to furnish) drink to the thirsty. But do you seek from among the polymaths the stoppers of ignorance<sup>i</sup> in order that they may get rid of it<sup>j</sup> as a burden and purify the observances of those things formerly

<sup>a</sup> The two Greek fragments differ slightly from the Arm. and from each other; Cat. Lips. ἄμεινον ἢ γούμενοι βλάπτεσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ ὑφ' ὧν οὐκ εἶ τι θέλουσιν (v.l. οὐκέτι θέλουσιν: Wendland conj. οὐκ ἐθέλουσιν) εὐεργετῆσαι: Procopius προτιμῶντες βλάβην μᾶλλον ἢ τὴν ἐξ ὧν μὴ θέλουσιν εὐεργεσίαν: OL "mallentes laedi potius quam sentire beneficia." Procopius adds, apparently on his own account, ὠφέλου γὰρ αἱ πηγαὶ καὶ τῶν Φυλιστιεῖμ τοὺς βουλομένους κεκρηῆσθαι. The quotations from this section in Cat. Lips. and Procopius end here, but the next two sentences are preserved in a frag. from Cod. Len. 124 (Lewy, p. 59).

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. has ὁ πάντων ἡλιθιώτατοι: OL "O stolidissimi hominum."

<sup>c</sup> Slightly emending the Arm. from the Greek frag., which reads τὰς πηγὰς εἶσαι, ἃς ἕτερος εὗρεν πρὸς τὴν τῶν παρ' ὑμῶν αὐτοῖς δεομένων χρήσιν.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. "a frank apology"; the Greek frag. has ἀπολογίαν εὐγνώμονα: OL "defensionem rationabilitatis."

<sup>e</sup> τῶν βελτίστων χάριτας vel sim. <sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> σύμβολα παιδείας καὶ ἐπιστήμης: OL "fossuras puteorum auspicia esse disciplinarum." Cf. De Somniis i. 11 ἐπιστήμης φρέαρ. <sup>h</sup> τὸ τέλος.

<sup>i</sup> ἐκ τῶν πολυμαθῶν τοὺς ἐμφράττοντας τὴν ἀμαθίαν.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "qui abijciunt," but the context requires a subjunctive, although the Arm. has the indicative (singular!). OL reads "harum (v.l. "escarum") ergo amatores injectam obstrusionem, quae pro ignorantia accipitur, expurgant."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

determined.<sup>a</sup> For it is not the perfect man <sup>b</sup> who is introduced as digging now, for he has the wells in his soul, which clearly means the springs of education (and) knowledge,<sup>c</sup> but the servants whom he considered worthy of the service of his education.<sup>d</sup> These are they who have recently taken hold of education and, by gradually going farther and deeper, have finally attained their end. And so, by exerting themselves in good labours,<sup>e</sup> they become perfect,<sup>f</sup> not failing of that desire.<sup>g</sup> But foreign characters,<sup>h</sup> whom the Hebrews call "Philistines,"<sup>i</sup> being envious of our progress,<sup>j</sup> not only obstruct the free spaces <sup>k</sup> through which doctrines proceed on a firm footing,<sup>l</sup> but also fill them with earth, that is, with earthy desires,<sup>m</sup> which are the pleasures connected with the belly,<sup>n</sup> and they hasten to fill it. By these the mind <sup>o</sup> is weighed down (as by) a burden,<sup>p</sup> and becomes irrational and unphilosophical.<sup>q</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. lit. = τὰς τῶν πρότερον ὀρισμένων παρατηρήσεις : OL "per observantiam institutorum." Aucher renders freely, "obstacula ab aliis injecta." <sup>b</sup> ὁ τέλειος.

<sup>c</sup> OL "adeo perfectus hujusmodi fossuras non facit, est enim plenus scientiae."

<sup>d</sup> OL "sed pueri quos dignos sui ministerii arbitratur."

<sup>e</sup> ἐν καλοῖς πόνοις ἀγωνιζόμενοι.

<sup>f</sup> Variant "they become able."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "ne aberrant ab ipso desiderio perfectionis." OL renders the whole sentence differently, "hi quidem bonum desiderium prosequentes, dignum inveniunt fructum."

<sup>h</sup> ἀλλόφυλοι (or ἀλλογενεῖς) τρόποι : OL "alienigenarum mens." I do not understand why Aucher renders, "alienigenae vocitati."

<sup>i</sup> Heb. Pe'listim "Philistines" is usu. rendered ἀλλόφυλοι in the LXX.

<sup>j</sup> προκοπῆς : OL "prosperitatis."

<sup>k</sup> τὰς εὐρυχωρίας : OL "opportunitatis" : Aucher "amplitudines (vel, liberos transitus)".

<sup>l</sup> OL "pro promptis gressibus."

<sup>m</sup> γηίνων ἐπιθυμιῶν.

<sup>n</sup> αἱ περὶ τὴν κοιλίαν ἡδοναί.

<sup>o</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>p</sup> Arm. lit. = "being weighed down by these, the mind becomes a burden." <sup>q</sup> ἄλογος καὶ ἀφιλόσοφος.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

192. (Gen. xxvi. 16) Why does Abimelech say to Isaac, "Go, depart from us because thou hast become much<sup>a</sup> more powerful than we"<sup>b</sup> ?

Cruel and envious and at the same time reprehensible and, moreover, blind is the wicked man.<sup>c</sup> He did not think it enough to banish the trained<sup>d</sup> and wise reason,<sup>e</sup> in word from the city but in reality<sup>f</sup> from his soul,<sup>g</sup> but also with cause shows his jealousy and envy.<sup>h</sup> For he says, "Thou hast become more powerful than we," whereas he ought to have ended<sup>i</sup> his weakness and to have congratulated (the other) on the opportune good fortune which he enjoyed and on the power of his abundance of possessions.<sup>j</sup> For some things were within the body, and some were outside the body, but to him who philosophizes<sup>k</sup> further there should be one food<sup>l</sup> for all.<sup>m</sup>

*193. (Gen. xxvi. 18)<sup>n</sup> Why does he again dig the obstructed wells?<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> OL omits "much."

<sup>b</sup> LXX "Ἀπελθε ἀφ' ἡμῶν ὅτι δυνατώτερος ἡμῶν ἐγένου σφόδρα.

<sup>c</sup> OL "pessimum invidiae virus et vituperabile, ita pravus utpote caecus."

<sup>d</sup> Arm. varž = ἔμπειρος and ἀσκητής. The latter word is usu. applied to Jacob.

<sup>e</sup> καὶ τὸν σοφὸν λόγον. OL translates the whole phrase (after "banish"), "virum prudentem."

<sup>f</sup> λόγῳ μὲν . . . ὄντως δέ. <sup>g</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>h</sup> OL "cum clausula (l. "causa") livoris ingestae."

<sup>i</sup> Variant "shown": OL "optando" (l. "ostendendo" ?).

<sup>j</sup> OL renders unintelligibly, "utpote infirmitatem optando his qui diriguntur, cum possit congratulari melioribus."

<sup>k</sup> τῷ φιλοσοφούντι. <sup>l</sup> Lit. "grain"—σίτος.

<sup>m</sup> OL "et in utrisque proficere, maxime philosophiae titulis, quorum omnes unanimes esse oportuerat."

<sup>n</sup> A different interpretation of this verse (among others) is given in De Fuga 200. The preceding verse, Gen. xxvi. 17, omitted by Philo, tells us that Isaac settled in the valley of Gerar.

<sup>o</sup> Philo abbreviates the text of the LXX καὶ πάλιν Ἰσαὰκ ὤρυξεν τὰ φρέατα τοῦ ὕδατος ἃ ὤρυξαν οἱ παῖδες Ἀβραὰμ τοῦ

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

In the literal sense <sup>a</sup> because the wise man is by nature humane and benevolent and forgiving <sup>b</sup> and does not bear a grudge to anyone at all but in overcoming his enemies thinks <sup>c</sup> it right to do them good rather than harm. <sup>d</sup> That is the literal meaning. <sup>e</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>f</sup> it is the task of the contemplative man, <sup>g</sup> even though for a short while the mind <sup>h</sup> may be obstructed <sup>i</sup> when it is bogged down by useless and irrelevant distractions <sup>j</sup> as if by the mud and slime of earth, to get rid of these and become light <sup>k</sup> in order to be able to look upward again <sup>l</sup> and be unhindered and unimpeded in seeing the first rays of the light of wisdom. <sup>m</sup> πατὴρὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐνέφραξαν αὐτὰ οἱ Φυλιστιεῖμ μετὰ τὸ ἀποθανεῖν Ἀβραὰμ τὸν πατέρα αὐτοῦ. The rest of the verse is cited in the following section.

<sup>a</sup> τῷ μὲν ῥητῷ.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek fragments from Cat. Burney and Cat. Lips., ὅτι φύσει φιλόανθρωπος ὁ ἀστείος καὶ εὐμενῆς καὶ συγγνώμων: the parallel fragment from Procopius reads τινὲς δὲ φασιν ὡς . . . πάλιν ὤρυξεν Ἰσαὰκ ὡς πᾶσιν ὧν εὐμενῆς.

<sup>c</sup> Reading hamarē (3 sing.) for hamarel (inf.).

<sup>d</sup> So Cat. Burney and Cat. Lips., ἀλλὰ νικᾶν τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ἀξίων ἐν τῷ ποιεῖν εὖ μᾶλλον ἢ βλάπτειν: Procopius καὶ πρὸς τῷ μὴ μνησικακεῖν ἐν τῷ ἐνεργετῆσαι σπουδάζων νικᾶν τὴν ἐκείνων κακίαν. The Greek fragments end here.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. Aucher omits this sentence, perhaps because it is missing in OL.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ φιλοθεάμονος: OL “(mens) deo dedita,” reading φιλοθέου.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>i</sup> Adopting Aucher’s emendation of xousescin “may withdraw.” to xcescin “may be obstructed.” OL has “decipiatur,” possibly reading ἀπατᾶται for ἐπιφράττεται vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher renders more freely, “occupationibus ingentibus immensisque”: OL “supradictis quibusdam molestiarum ponderibus . . . inquietantibus et occupantibus.”

<sup>k</sup> OL “revelare” (l. “relevari”).

<sup>l</sup> OL (omitting the words “to look upward”) “interim” (l. “iterum”).

<sup>m</sup> σοφίας.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

*194. (Gen. xxvi. 18) Why does he give the wells the same names as those which his father <sup>a</sup> gave? <sup>b</sup>

The literal meaning <sup>c</sup> shows (Isaac's) piety toward his father and honourably commends his industry in working.<sup>d</sup> For this reason he himself was zealous in again purifying and cleaning out and digging the wells in order that he might not always incur the envy of the inhabitants of the region.<sup>e</sup> Accordingly, it was consistent <sup>f</sup> that he who submitted <sup>g</sup> to the work should similarly abstain also from names.<sup>h</sup> That is one (interpretation). But a second must be given, (namely) that the wise man is an enemy of self-love,<sup>i</sup> since he loves justice and truth,<sup>j</sup> which are worthy of love. These two he clearly showed in youth <sup>k</sup>; (he showed) justice since he removed nothing else. Although it had been deliberately perverted,<sup>l</sup> he himself with repeated labour found (it).<sup>m</sup> (He showed) truthfulness by

<sup>a</sup> OL "praeter" (l. "pater").

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ἐπωνόμασεν αὐτοῖς ὀνόματα κατὰ τὰ ὀνόματα ἃ ὠνόμασεν Ἀβραὰμ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> Text somewhat uncertain. Aucher renders, "et honorem adhibet opere suo labori ejus": OL "honorem sibi referens per (marg. "simul pro") operis industria."

<sup>e</sup> The brief frag. from Procopius (which contains only this clause) reads defectively μὴ συγχωρῶν (l. ἐγχωρίων?) εἰσάπαν τῷ φθόνῳ νικᾶν: OL "ne omnino praevaleat invidia in terram eorum."

<sup>f</sup> ἀκόλουθον vel sim.

<sup>g</sup> OL reads more appropriately "procedentem."

<sup>h</sup> OL "etiam nomina confirmare." Aucher, rendering literally as I have done, suggests an alternative rendering in a footnote, "similiter abstineret se a novis nominibus."

<sup>i</sup> ὁ σοφὸς (or ἀστεῖος) τῇ φιλαυτίᾳ ἐχθρὸς ἐστὶ.

<sup>j</sup> δικαιοσύνην καὶ ἀλήθειαν.

<sup>k</sup> OL "quas utrasque sectatur amator integritatis."

<sup>l</sup> Apparently justice is referred to: OL "licet diu obolita": Aucher amplifies, "etsi consulto erat depravatum (opus patris ab aliis)."

<sup>m</sup> Cf. OL "potuit invenire." Aucher, taking "his father's work" as the implied object, renders, "refecit."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

making acknowledgment <sup>a</sup> to him who first began the work, and (by indicating) the constructor by the giving of names.<sup>b</sup> This reveals a very precise mind.<sup>c</sup> For those who give names are undeniably wise men <sup>d</sup> since they give (names) significative of things,<sup>e</sup> in which as in a mirror their properties <sup>f</sup> and also their figures appear very clearly.<sup>g</sup> And so, repeating former (statements) I say that since his learned <sup>h</sup> father had named (the wells), he himself was content with the names given originally, for he knew that if he should change the names, he would change the things at the same time. Similar is the case of geometrical figures,<sup>i</sup> for each of them has its own appellation,<sup>j</sup> and if anyone changes this, he changes the nature of the object.<sup>k</sup>

195. (Gen. xxvi. 19) Why was the well in the valley of Gerar ?<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὁμολογῶν.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. by giving the wells the same names as those first given by his father. Aucher renders slightly differently, "prout per nominum impositionem denotans fabricationem ipsam." OL renders freely, "veritatem vero in omnibus imitando et paternam operum constitutionem nominumque firmitatem."

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. seems to reflect δηλοῖ νοῦν ἀκριβέστατον (or διάνοιαν ἀκριβεστάτην). Aucher, construing differently, renders, "id probat et mens egregia": OL "quibus etiam mens cautior nuntiatur."

<sup>d</sup> Cf. Leg. All. ii. 15 οἱ παρ' Ἑλλησι φιλοσοφοῦντες εἶπον εἶναι σοφοὺς τοὺς πρώτους τοῖς πράγμασι τὰ ὀνόματα θέντας.

<sup>e</sup> δηλωτικὰ πραγμάτων.

<sup>f</sup> ἰδιότητες.

<sup>g</sup> OL "tamquam de speculo declarantes suarum formarum conditiones."

<sup>h</sup> Or "eloquent": Aucher "eruditissimus."

<sup>i</sup> τὰ κατὰ γεωμετρίαν σχήματα.

<sup>j</sup> τὴν ἰδίαν κλήσιν.

<sup>k</sup> τὴν τοῦ ὑποκειμένου φύσιν: OL "mutatur sensus natura."

<sup>i</sup> Cf. LXX ὠρυξαν δὲ οἱ παῖδες Ἰσαὰκ ἐν τῇ φάραγγι Γεράρων. Heb. omits "of Gerar."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

“Gerar” is to be interpreted as “sojourn.”<sup>a</sup> But this is symbolical<sup>b</sup> and has a twofold content.<sup>c</sup> For he who dwells in sojourn either yields<sup>d</sup> to those among whom he dwells in sojourn or else is alienated.<sup>e</sup> Now yielding<sup>f</sup> is (signified by) the obstructing of the wells, which foreigners accomplish (by changing) the names of virtuous souls.<sup>g</sup> But the digging and cleansing and purifying are an alienation, for the soul is thereby drawn away from that to which it is accustomed toward the depth of the discipline of knowledge<sup>h</sup> and toward difficult labours, by which they<sup>i</sup> are again found. Therefore the valley is like a sojourn,<sup>j</sup> for he who yields in accordance with the lures of custom is out of place<sup>k</sup> and continually goes about in a low-lying (place) and in a valley-site. But he who is raised above them ascends and is removed to the greatness of virtue.<sup>l</sup> And then, when he represents to himself<sup>m</sup> the number four,<sup>n</sup> of which he is in search and is desirous, he leaves

<sup>a</sup> παροιμία : OL “incolatus.” In QG iv. 59 Philo explains Gerar as “the region of God-loving thoughts”; in QG iv. 185 he etymologizes it as φραγμός, see below.

<sup>b</sup> συμβολικόν.

<sup>c</sup> λόγον.

<sup>d</sup> Prob. συγχωρεῖ : Aucher “acceptat res” : OL “consentit.”

<sup>e</sup> ἀπαλλοτριούται : OL “alienatur.”

<sup>f</sup> Prob. συγχώρησις.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. clause is syntactically incomplete. Aucher amplifies similarly in rendering, “quam fecerunt alienigenae, deturbantes proborum animorum nomina.” Quite unintelligible is OL “pares boni pectoris.”

<sup>h</sup> εἰς τὸ βάθος τὸ τῆς ἐπιστήμης παιδείας : OL “in altitudinem disciplinarum ministrare.”

<sup>i</sup> i.e. discipline and knowledge.

<sup>j</sup> OL “maceries incolato comparatur,” apparently reading φραγμός in place of φάραγξ, but see QG iv. 185.

<sup>k</sup> Or “is a fugitive” : Aucher “aufugit.”

<sup>l</sup> ἀρετῆς. OL renders the clause, “demigrare autem cupiens, erigitur ad titulos virtutis.”

<sup>m</sup> φαντασιούται.

<sup>n</sup> This reference to the number four seems to anticipate the commentary on Gen. xxvi. 19b-35, which has been preserved only in the OL version ; see the first note on QG iv. 196.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

behind the valley with the three wells,<sup>a</sup> and departs to proceed farther. One (he leaves) because it is an ambush and a snare and ambiguity.<sup>b</sup> And the others (he leaves) because they contain advances<sup>c</sup> and vilenesses<sup>d</sup> and troubles, and not a nature that is untroubled and free of danger and free of misery.<sup>e</sup>

196. (Gen. xxvii. 1) <sup>j</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "After Isaac became old, his eyes became weak<sup>g</sup> in seeing"<sup>h</sup>?

Those who give a literal explanation<sup>i</sup> say that because of a dispensation<sup>j</sup> the prophet failed in sight, and afterwards was again established and became keen of sight.

<sup>a</sup> These the LXX, translating the Heb. names 'Eseq, Siṭnāh and R<sup>e</sup>hōbōth, calls Ἐδικία, Ἐχθρία and Εὐρυχωρία.

<sup>b</sup> OL renders more briefly, "separatus ab insidia et ambiguitate."

<sup>c</sup> Arm. γαργατῶν<sup>i</sup> usu. = προκοπή. Possibly the original here was κόπους. Aucher renders, "augmentum (rixae)."

<sup>d</sup> εὐτελείας.

<sup>e</sup> OL renders the last clause somewhat differently, "revera enim offendebat erumnis detentus miserrimis, titulo infatigatae et minus laboriosae libertatis."

<sup>j</sup> Our Arm. text of QG, Book IV, does not contain Philo's comments on the rest of chap. xxvi of Gen. (vss. 19b-35), but OL has eleven quaestiones et solutiones following § 195. These contain genuine Philonic interpretations mixed with later ones. Moreover, Procopius and the Greek Catenae have preserved a few bits of the missing sections. For the OL version of these eleven sections (hereafter designated as QG iv. 195a, 195b, etc.) see Appendix B.

<sup>g</sup> Arm. vatanam usu. = ὀκνεῖν or ἀργεῖν.

<sup>h</sup> LXX ἐγένετο δὲ μετὰ τὸ γηρᾶσαι Ἰσαὰκ καὶ ἡμβλύνθησαν οἱ ὀφθαλμοὶ αὐτοῦ τοῦ ὄραν.

<sup>i</sup> Or "account"; Arm. patmout<sup>i</sup> has both meanings. Aucher renders, "qui literalem historiam prosequuntur": OL "ad videndum oratoriam partem examinantes."

<sup>j</sup> διὰ χορηγίαν or οἰκονομίαν: Aucher "propter dispensationem aliquam": OL "pro quadam utilitate."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

But the dispensation was a blessing,<sup>a</sup> that not a wicked man but one deserving of blessings might obtain it.<sup>b</sup> To me they seem to give a plausible explanation.<sup>c</sup> Not in this, however, does the beauty of Scripture lie but in the natural meaning,<sup>d</sup> which those who allegorize<sup>e</sup> are accustomed to determine.<sup>f</sup> Now it is written appropriately,<sup>g</sup> not (merely) that his eyes became dim but that (they became dim) "after he became old." And (this is) very natural. For in old age the eyes fail since the whole body (fails) altogether. After he becomes old, that is, when he changes and is transformed,<sup>h</sup> then at last the soul,<sup>i</sup> being invested with the senses,<sup>j</sup> begins to see God obscurely<sup>k</sup> and to become keener of sight toward intelligible things,<sup>l</sup> if, indeed, one may properly<sup>m</sup> say this.<sup>n</sup> For he who is seized (by this vision) and is prepared for prophesying, <sup>a</sup> εὐλογία.

<sup>b</sup> OL "et contigit utiliter ne benedictionis indignus accipiat."

<sup>c</sup> OL "siquidem verisimili ratione disserunt."

<sup>d</sup> ἐν τῇ φυσικῇ ὑπονοίᾳ, i.e. in the Stoic sense of philosophical allegory.

<sup>e</sup> οἱ ἀλληγοροῦντες.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, "non tamen in hoc stat pulchritudo textus sed sententiam naturale inquirere mos est apud eos qui allegoria utuntur": OL "non tamen hac usque scripturae decus definitur sed altioribus titulis allegoriam cautius extendi."

<sup>g</sup> πρεπόντως: OL "congrue."

<sup>h</sup> The exact difference in meaning between the two Arm. verbs used here is not clear. Aucher renders, "mutabit et commutabitur": OL "cum decidendo mutaverit."

<sup>i</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. lit. = ἐνδνομένη τὰς αἰσθήσεις, but see the next note.

<sup>k</sup> ἀμυδρῶς. Aucher, construing differently, renders the clause, "tunc demum incipiet anima Deum induens per sensus subobscure videre": OL "tunc enim Dei feratur anima sensibili obscure cernendo."

<sup>l</sup> πρὸς τὰ νοητά.

<sup>m</sup> κυρίως.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher renders freely, "hoc sane dixeris verum visum."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

no longer uses his own judgment<sup>a</sup> but that of God, echoing<sup>b</sup> the things spoken by Him.<sup>c</sup> And the prophet becomes an instrument,<sup>d</sup> while God (is) the artist.<sup>e</sup> The sound, moreover, comes when the plectrum, His Logos,<sup>f</sup> melodiously and skilfully strikes a harmony, through which legislation is made known.<sup>g</sup>

197. (Gen. xxvii. 1-3) Why does (Isaac) say to his elder son, "Take thy gear, thy quiver and thy bow"<sup>h</sup>?

Since the literal meaning<sup>i</sup> is known, (the passage) is to be allegorized<sup>j</sup> as follows. It indicates<sup>k</sup> that the wicked man does not think of anything peaceful but delights in battle and is prepared and equipped with war-gear.<sup>l</sup> And he is by nature rash and bold, and at the same time is by nature timid and cowardly.<sup>m</sup> For fear and rashness<sup>n</sup> are bound together in the same place as brothers and kin.<sup>o</sup> For this reason he does not use the arms of <sup>a</sup> τῷ ἑαυτοῦ λογισμῶ.

<sup>b</sup> ἠχῶν.

<sup>c</sup> OL "divino spiritu subsona praesagit."

<sup>d</sup> Though Arm. anōt' usu. = σκεῦος, the original here was undoubtedly ὄργανον, cf. OL "pro organo" and Quis Rer. Div. Heres 259 <ὁ σοφός> μόνος ὄργανον θεοῦ ἐστὶν ἠχείον, κρούμενον καὶ πληττόμενον ἀοράτως ὑπ' αὐτοῦ.

<sup>e</sup> ὁ τεχνίτης: OL "Deus autem propheta."

<sup>f</sup> τὸ πλήκτρον, ὁ λόγος αὐτοῦ.

<sup>g</sup> τὰ νομοθετηθέντα δηλοῦται.

<sup>h</sup> Philo shortens the LXX text of Gen. xxvii. 1b-3a καὶ ἐκάλεσεν Ἡσαὺ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ τὸν πρεσβύτερον καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἰέ μου. καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἴδου ἐγώ. καὶ εἶπεν, Ἴδου γεγήρακα, καὶ οὐ γινώσκω τὴν ἡμέραν τῆς τελευτῆς μου. νῦν οὖν λάβε τὸ σκεῦος, τὴν τε φαρέτραν καὶ τὸ τόξον.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> ἀλληγορητέον.

<sup>k</sup> ἀνίττεται.

<sup>l</sup> OL "gaudere praelio et paratura belli."

<sup>m</sup> OL reads more briefly "natura quidem audacem et plus timidum."

<sup>n</sup> φόβος καὶ προπέτεια (vel sim.).

<sup>o</sup> OL "uno enim loco versatur contumacia et timiditas ut sorores."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

those <sup>a</sup> who in the thick (of battle) contend with their arms locked together and become one mass, in which their renown and prowess become evident, but (he fights) always by shooting from far away and from a great distance. For archery is a contest proper to the cowardly and unmanly, who cannot endure to remain and stand their ground but flee and fight <sup>b</sup> from a distance. <sup>c</sup>

*198. (Gen. xxvii. 3-4) What is the meaning of the words, " Hunt for me game and prepare for me food <sup>a</sup> as I like it, and bring it to me that I may eat, in order that my soul may bless thee before I die " <sup>e</sup> ?

The literal text, <sup>f</sup> it seems to me, indicates the following thought. <sup>g</sup> Though there are two sons, one good and the other blameworthy, <sup>h</sup> he says that he will bless the one who is blameworthy, <sup>i</sup> not because he honours <sup>j</sup> him more than the virtuous one <sup>k</sup> but because he knows that the latter is able by himself to set right and complete his affairs, while the former is held fast and restrained by his

<sup>a</sup> Emending Arm. aynosik (loc. pl. of dem. pron.) to aynosik (gen. pl.). Aucher, retaining the latter, renders, " in eos." <sup>b</sup> ἀμύνονται.

<sup>c</sup> OL renders the last two sentences more briefly and freely, " cujus causa non utitur armis aptis constantiae virtuti sed sagittis pro inertia timiditatis: uno enim certamine devitantes longiter ulciscere machinantur."

<sup>d</sup> OL " epulas," see following note.

<sup>e</sup> LXX (καὶ ἐξέλθε εἰς τὸ πεδῖον) καὶ θήρευσόν μοι θήραν. καὶ ποιήσόν μοι ἐδέσματα (Heb. " delicacies " : A.V. " savoury meat ") ὡς φιλῶ ἐγώ, καὶ ἔνεγκόν μοι ἵνα φάγω· ὅπως εὐλογήσῃ σε ἡ ψυχὴ μου πρὸ τοῦ ἀποθανεῖν μου.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> αἰνίττεται τοιαύτην διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> OL " noxio," see following note.

<sup>i</sup> So the Greek fragments from the Catena, δυοῖν ὄντων υἱῶν, τοῦ μὲν ἀγαθοῦ, τοῦ δὲ ὑπαιτίου, τὸν μὲν ὑπαιτίον εὐλογήσῃ φησίν.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. uses two verbs with the same meaning.

<sup>k</sup> So the Greek fragments, οὐκ ἐπειδὴ τοῦ σπουδαίου προκρίνει τοῦτον : OL more briefly " non anteponendo alterius."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

own character,<sup>a</sup> and has hope of salvation only in the prayers<sup>b</sup> of his father.<sup>c</sup> And if he did not obtain this, he would be the most wretched of men.<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> this may properly be said. He admonishes him<sup>f</sup> in the first place not to hunt a brute animal<sup>g</sup> but those which are wild beasts by habit,<sup>h</sup> in accordance with which he desires irrational and savage passions,<sup>i</sup> so that he may avenge himself upon an untamed beast that is not domesticated, and kill it.<sup>j</sup> In the second place, when he becomes capable of this or shall repel (these vices?), it is not that he himself likes it but his father.<sup>k</sup> And all foods are altogether good for the virtuous man through intelligible things and virtuous words and deeds.<sup>l</sup> And so, he says, if it will be that thou wilt hunt the disposition<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The Catenaes read only slightly differently ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐκεῖνον οἶδε δι' αὐτοῦ κατορθοῦν δυνάμενον, τοῦτον δὲ τοῖς ἰδίοις τρόποις ἀλισκόμενον: Procopius, omitting the last clause, has ἀλλ' εἰδὼς ὡς ἐκεῖνος μὲν ἐκ τῶν οἰκειῶν τρόπων ἔχει τὴν εὐμένειαν, cf. OL "sed qui novit illum etiam per semet benedictionis dignum: pravum vero suis moribus prohibendum."

<sup>b</sup> OL "oracula."

<sup>c</sup> So the Catenaes, μηδεμίαν δὲ ἔχοντα σωτηρίας ἐλπίδα, εἰ μὴ τὰς εὐχὰς τοῦ πατρός: the Procopius frag. (which ends here) has οὗτος δὲ μίαν ἔχει σωτηρίας ἐλπίδα τὰς εὐχὰς τοῦ πατρός.

<sup>d</sup> So the Catenaes fragments (which end here), ὧν εἰ μὴ τύχοι, πάντων ἂν εἶη κακοδαιμονέστατος.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. Isaac admonishes Esau.

<sup>g</sup> ζῶον ἄλογον: OL "animalia."

<sup>h</sup> ἃ ἔξει εἰσὶ θηρία.

<sup>i</sup> καθ' ἃ ἀλόγων καὶ ἀγρίων παθῶν ὀρέγεται: OL has more briefly "pessima et ferocissima vitia."

<sup>j</sup> OL "uti more immanissimi animalis ulciscatur illas (l. "illa"?) et perimat."

<sup>k</sup> The Arm. is obscure, though obviously meant to explain Isaac's words "prepare for me food as I like it." Aucher renders, "secundo, quod quando ejus compos fit aut erit, non ut sibi placitum faciat sed sicut patri": OL "secundo, ut praevalere possit, non ut ei mos est sed ut patrem libet."

<sup>l</sup> διὰ νοητῶν καὶ λόγων καὶ ἔργων σπουδαίων: OL "per intellectus et sermones et strenuas operas."

<sup>m</sup> διάθεσιν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

of eager,<sup>a</sup> unrestrained and savage passions,<sup>b</sup> and wilt sweeten this for me as food that is sweet, pleasant and likable, and wilt bring it and offer it with thy progress,<sup>c</sup> there will pray for thee not the wise man with me<sup>d</sup> but the sovereign soul in me.<sup>e</sup>

199. (Gen. xxvii. 6) <sup>f</sup> Why does Rebekah, on hearing this, say to Jacob, her son, "Behold, I heard thy father saying to Esau thy brother" <sup>g</sup> ?

Well and carefully does (Scripture) call Jacob "her son" and Esau "the brother of Jacob" but does not call him "the son" of anyone.<sup>h</sup> For (Jacob) was adorned with orderliness and a system of decency<sup>i</sup> in the manner of Constancy,<sup>j</sup> whose offspring he is described (as being).<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "open-mouthed."

<sup>b</sup> OL reads differently "si ergo coeperit pessimorum vitiorum voraginem."

<sup>c</sup> προκοπαῖς: OL "demonstrando istam tuam operam."

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. lit. = ὁ σοφὸς ἄνθρωπος κατ' ἐμέ: Aucher "sapiens homo mihi similis": OL "compositus ego homo."

<sup>e</sup> ἢ ἐν ἐμοὶ ἡγεμονικὴ ψυχὴ: OL "quod est in me augustissima sobrietas animae." Philo frequently speaks of the sovereign part of the soul, i.e. the mind (νοῦς), rarely of "the sovereign soul," as, e.g., in De Spec. Leg. i. 258.

<sup>f</sup> Philo does not comment on Gén. xxvii. 5 which tells us that Rebekah heard Isaac speaking to Esau, and that Esau went out to hunt game for his father.

<sup>g</sup> LXX 'Ρεβέκκα δὲ εἶπεν πρὸς Ἰακώβ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς τὸν ἐλάσσω (v.l. τὸν νεώτερον: Heb., like Philo, has only "her son"), Ἴδε (v.l. Ἰδοῦ) ἐγὼ ἤκουσα τοῦ πατρὸς σου λαλοῦντος πρὸς Ἡσαὺ τὸν ἀδελφόν σου λέγοντος—(vs. 7 repeats vs. 4).

<sup>h</sup> OL reads defectively "bene et observantissime hunc quidem Jacob, filium autem suum minime."

<sup>i</sup> τάξει καὶ συστήματι (vel sim.) εὐκοσμίας. Aucher renders more freely, "moderatione probitateque morum."

<sup>j</sup> διαμονή or ὑπομονή, symbolized by Rebekah, see QG iv. 97, 188 et al.

<sup>k</sup> OL is corrupt, "constantissimi enim et ornatissimi mores perseverantiae ne post merito vacatur" (l. "nepos merito vocatur").

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

But the other (being an example) of profligacy and indecency,<sup>a</sup> is no longer (called "her son"), for orderliness belongs to peace.<sup>b</sup> And they are brothers (only) as the odd and the even (are brothers), and similarly the ordered and the disordered.<sup>c</sup> And even though<sup>d</sup> they are brothers, it is possible for them to be opposites and contraries.<sup>e</sup>

*200. (Gen. xxvii. 8-10) What is the meaning of the words, "And now, my son, listen to me and go to the flock, (and) fetch me from there two kids of the flock, tender and good,<sup>f</sup> and I will make<sup>g</sup> this food for thy father, as he likes, and after eating, he will bless thee before he dies"<sup>h</sup>?

The greatness of his body and the healthiness of the stomach in it are clear from the preparation of the food.<sup>i</sup> For the offering of the fat kids shows a huge and immense body with mighty power, which surpasses all medical power.<sup>j</sup> For if as an old man he succeeded in eating two

<sup>a</sup> ἀσωτίας καὶ ἀκοσμίας: Aucher "immodestiae et improbitatis": OL "procax vero et iners."

<sup>b</sup> OL adds "hujus vero non ita."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "modestus et immodestus."

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "quia."

<sup>e</sup> OL shortens the last two sentences, "quamvis enim constantissimi et temerarii fratres sint, attamen possunt sibi esse contrarii."

<sup>f</sup> OL "molles Aegyptios" (marg. "et optimos"), see note h.

<sup>g</sup> OL "fac cito," see note h.

<sup>h</sup> LXX Νῦν οὖν, υἱέ, ἀκουσον μου καθὰ ἐγὼ ἐντέλλομαι σοι· καὶ πορευθεὶς εἰς τὰ πρόβατα λάβε μοι ἐκεῖθεν δύο ἐρίφους ἀπαλοὺς καὶ καλοὺς (Heb. "two good kids of the goats"), καὶ ποιήσω αὐτοὺς ἐδέσματα (Heb. "delicacies": A.V. "savoury meat") τῷ πατρὶ σου ὡς φιλεῖ· καὶ εἰσοίσεις τῷ πατρὶ σου καὶ φάγεται ὅπως εὐλόγησῃ σε ὁ πατήρ σου πρὸ τοῦ ἀποθανεῖν αὐτόν.

<sup>i</sup> Slightly different is the wording of a Greek frag. (in Cat. Lips., from Procopius) ἐντεῦθεν ἐστὶ μαθεῖν τὸ τοῦ σώματος μέγεθος καὶ τὴν ἐκ κατασκευῆς φυσικὴν εὐεξίαν: OL "vastitas corporis et insita robustis certa est ex praeparatione epularum."

<sup>j</sup> OL "quae omnem palestricosibilitatem (!) superat." This sentence is missing from the Greek frag.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

kids, how much more when he was young! <sup>a</sup> (This he did) not through insatiableness, for he was continent as no one else has ever been found (to be), but because of his wonderful structure. <sup>b</sup> For it was fitting that he who was so great in virtue <sup>c</sup> and the founder <sup>d</sup> of so great a nation should have <sup>e</sup> a formidable and wonderful greatness of body. But this they say in passing, <sup>f</sup> and it is said by the way. <sup>g</sup> More clearly, <sup>h</sup> however, must the following be said. The wishes and characters of the parents <sup>i</sup> do not fight and contend with one another, as some are accustomed, <sup>j</sup> but without division and separation the couple (are) in harmony, <sup>k</sup> for they are eager to reach one end <sup>l</sup> although they are motivated by different thoughts. <sup>m</sup> For the one (parent) <sup>n</sup> wishes him who is good <sup>o</sup> to attain that of which he is deserving, <sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> So OL: the Greek frag. reads slightly differently ὁ γὰρ ἐν γῆρα δύο πίοσιν ἐρίφοις κεχρημένος προεφήμασι, τίς ἂν ὑπῆρχεν ἐν τῇ νεότητι;

<sup>b</sup> So OL: the Greek frag. (which ends here) reads more briefly καὶ ταῦτα ὦν ἐγκρατῆς καὶ οὐκ ἄπλητος.

<sup>c</sup> ἀρεταῖς.

<sup>d</sup> γενάρχη.

<sup>e</sup> OL "habitare" (l. "habere"?).

<sup>f</sup> ἐν παρεκβάσει.

<sup>g</sup> παρέργως.

<sup>h</sup> OL "praecipue."

<sup>i</sup> i.e. Rebekah and Isaac.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. translator seems to have taken νομίσαντας (here="believing") to mean "accustomed." The second Greek frag. from Procopius (which begins here) reads οὐ διαμάχονται δὲ κατὰ τοὺς οὕτω νομίσαντας τῶν γονέων αἰ γινώμει. OL reads somewhat differently "sententiae solertissimorum non dimicantur inter se, ut quidam putaverunt."

<sup>k</sup> This clause is missing in the Greek frag.

<sup>l</sup> The Greek frag. reads similarly πρὸς ἓν δὲ τέλος ἐπείγονται: OL "ad unum enim terminum festinat" (l. "festinant").

<sup>m</sup> διαφόροις λογισμοῖς: OL "uno consilio freti." The clause is missing in the Greek frag.

<sup>n</sup> i.e. Rebekah.

<sup>o</sup> i.e. Jacob.

<sup>p</sup> So the Greek frag., τῆς μὲν βουλομένης τὸν ἀγαθὸν τυχεῖν ὦν ἄξιος ἦν: OL "ideo desiderat mater sibi similem digna nanciscere."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

but the other (says),<sup>a</sup> "I do not hold thee in dishonour who art born of her,<sup>b</sup> but on (thy) justified helplessness I have mercy,<sup>c</sup> that I may set thee right and correct thee<sup>d</sup> so far as is possible."<sup>e</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> the soul that practises virtue<sup>h</sup> has a certain disposition of constancy,<sup>i</sup> which is called Rebekah<sup>j</sup>; and it has a certain asceticism,<sup>k</sup> which has the name of Jacob.<sup>l</sup> Accordingly, Constancy says to the ascetic, as if in an assembly of psychic traits,<sup>m</sup> "Go to the flock," that is, to the familiar, pure and well-formed (virtues)<sup>n</sup> which adorn progress,<sup>o</sup> "and fetch me from

<sup>a</sup> i.e. Isaac to Esau.

<sup>b</sup> Or "of me," the pronoun being ambiguous in Arm. : Aucher "ex illa (vel, ex me)": OL "ex eomet." The clause is missing in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> ἀπορίας δικαίας ἐλεῶ vel sim. but the construction is uncertain. Aucher renders, "haesitationis justae misereor"; so the Greek frag. and OL, see note e.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. synonyms prob. both render ἐπανορθώσασθαι, as in the Greek frag., see next note.

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) reads τοῦ δὲ τοῦ σκαιοῦ, τὴν ἀπορίαν ἐπανορθώσασθαι τῷ ἐλέῳ τῷ εἰς αὐτόν: OL "pater vero non vult dehonoreari ex eomet natum, egestatem pessimi moris per misericordiam emendando."

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν

<sup>h</sup> ἡ ἀρετῶσα ψυχὴ: OL "anima cultrix pietatis."

<sup>i</sup> διάθεσιν τινὰ ὑπομονῆς: OL "quendam perseverantiae affectum."

<sup>j</sup> On Rebekah as a symbol of constancy see QG iv. 97, 199 et al.

<sup>k</sup> ἀσκητικόν τι, in the sense of athletic training: OL "habet palestricum suum quomodo natura."

<sup>l</sup> There are many references in Philo to Jacob as the ἀσκητής.

<sup>m</sup> ὡσεὶ ἐν ἐκκλησίᾳ ψυχικῶν τρόπων vel sim.: OL "ut pote ergo in concilio animae morum suadet perseverantiam (l. "perseverantia") palestrico."

<sup>n</sup> OL "ad lenes et puras auras" (possibly reading τὰ εὐμορφα as πνεύματα?).

<sup>o</sup> τὰς προκοπὰς: OL reads curiously "quibus censura laudabilis sua capit augmenta."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

there two utterances,"<sup>a</sup> which are called kids,<sup>b</sup> one of them being the desire for piety,<sup>c</sup> the other for humanity<sup>d</sup> in form,<sup>e</sup> "in order that I may show them as pleasant and desirable to thy lovable and thoughtful father,<sup>f</sup> and that, being nourished by them, he may make thee similar to (his) good counsel."<sup>g</sup>

201. (Gen. xxvii. 11-12)<sup>h</sup> Why does Jacob reply, "Behold, Esau my brother is a hairy man, and I am smooth. Perhaps my father will feel me, and I shall be before him as a deceiver"<sup>i j</sup>?

The conjectured meaning<sup>k</sup> is right and plausible.<sup>l</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>m</sup> it has a very natural explanation.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "oracula": OL "electos." What the original Greek word was is not easy to conjecture.

<sup>b</sup> OL "hordos" (l. "haedos").

<sup>c</sup> εὐσεβείας.

<sup>d</sup> φιλανθρωπίας.

<sup>e</sup> The syntax and meaning of the Arm. word (usu. = μορφή) are not clear. OL connects it with the following sentence, rendering it, "secundum figuram."

<sup>f</sup> OL "hos ego etiam patri tuo, qui est clementissimi pectoris, titulos libentissimos pronuntiabo."

<sup>g</sup> OL "quibus reffectus, te sibi similem faciat destinatione benedictionis" (apparently reading εὐβουλία as εὐλογία).

<sup>h</sup> Vs. 11 is briefly commented on in Leg. All. ii. 59.

<sup>i</sup> OL "contemptor" (see LXX, next note).

<sup>j</sup> LXX εἶπεν δὲ Ἰακώβ πρὸς Ῥεβέκκαν τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ, "Ἔστιν Ἡσαὺ ὁ ἀδελφός μου ἀνὴρ δασύς, ἐγὼ δὲ ἀνὴρ λεῖος. μήποτε ψηλαφήσῃ με ὁ πατήρ μου, καὶ ἔσομαι ἐναντίον αὐτοῦ ὡς καταφρονῶν (Heb. "as a mocker": L.V. "as a deceiver")."

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "the conjecture (στοχασμός) of meaning" (or "suspicion"): Aucher "conjectura suspicionis (litteralis)": OL "conjectura lectionis." In any case, the literal meaning, τὸ ῥητόν, seems to be meant.

<sup>l</sup> OL "rationabilis simul ac verisimilis."

<sup>m</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>n</sup> ἀπόδοσις φυσικωτάτη τίς ἐστι, in the Stoic sense of "natural" = philosophical-allegorical.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

For if continence and restraint,<sup>a</sup> as in a theatre,<sup>b</sup> wear a covering and garment<sup>c</sup> (of) unrestraint and lecherousness, and wish to trick and deceive and to disregard and despise the truth,<sup>d</sup> the protector and helper<sup>e</sup> is accustomed, like a good physician, to feel and examine their most proper and genuine parts,<sup>f</sup> through which one becomes well or ill, and thus (the situation) is grasped and comes to be known.<sup>g</sup> But everything is directly, accurately and truly made known by its correct name.<sup>h</sup> For the hairy one is the unrestrained, lecherous, impure and unholy man, (who feeds) on uncultivated herbs and things of the field, which is the orbit and resort of untamed and undomesticated beasts.<sup>i</sup> But the smooth one is the restrained and continent friend of frugality.<sup>j</sup> Now the father who feels (with his hands) is he who does not leave any part of the soul<sup>k</sup> unexamined and unfelt but to those who are worthy makes it all altogether known in an accurate and careful way.<sup>l</sup> And, he

<sup>a</sup> Aucher's rendering, "religiosa abstinentia," may be defended on the ground that the first of the two Arm. nouns used here = both θηρησκεία and ἐγκράτεια: OL has only "continentia." <sup>b</sup> ὡς ἐν θεάτρῳ. <sup>c</sup> σκέπασμα καὶ περίβλημα.

<sup>d</sup> OL renders the clause, "nam etsi quasdam vestitus species continentia tanquam in spectalon (sic) temperantiae fallere videtur, contemnendo veritatis."

<sup>e</sup> ὁ ὑπερασπιστῆς καὶ βοηθός: OL "factorem" (marg. "factorem").

<sup>f</sup> τὰ κυριώτατα καὶ γνησιώτατα μέρη vel sim.: OL has only "membra."

<sup>g</sup> OL renders more briefly, "quibus sanitas et imbecillitas declaratur omnis."

<sup>h</sup> OL has only "igitur directis vocabulis summae nuntiantur."

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. text is syntactically incomplete: Aucher renders, at once more briefly and more freely, "et incultis nutritus herbis agri in campo agrestium ferarum": OL "sensus [!] enim luxuriosus incultis sordibus agresti luco (l. "loco" ?) similis ut habitaculum ferarum."

<sup>j</sup> ὀλιγοδείας ἑταῖρος. The same phrase is used in De Ebrietate 58. <sup>k</sup> Lit. "part in respect of souls."

<sup>l</sup> OL "totam planam inveniendō servantissime dignatur."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

says, it does not seem right that he <sup>a</sup> should be despised <sup>b</sup>; for no one having intelligence <sup>c</sup> despises or disregards him who uses wisdom,<sup>d</sup> for the wise man does not put him to shame.<sup>e</sup>

*202. (Gen. xxvii. 12-13) Why, when he says, "I will bring <sup>f</sup> upon myself a curse and not a blessing," does the mother say, "Upon me (will be) the curse,<sup>g</sup> my son" <sup>h</sup>?

It is fitting indeed to admire the mother for the thoughtfulness of her goodwill,<sup>i</sup> for she agrees to take upon herself the curse upon him,<sup>j</sup> and (to admire) in the son his honouring of both his parents.<sup>k</sup> For he was drawn in opposite directions by his piety toward both <sup>l</sup> lest he seem to deceive his father and to desire (what belonged) to <sup>a</sup> Who is referred to is not clear, but prob. it is Jacob, as the symbol of the man who strives for virtue.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders, "non videtur, inquit, contemnendus ut contemnes me," adding in a footnote that a more literal rendering would be "non contemptum (vel, contemnere) videatur, inquit, illum." OL has "eum non uti contemptorem respuere." <sup>c</sup> νοῦν or διάνοιαν. <sup>d</sup> σοφία.

<sup>e</sup> OL renders differently, "nec enim possunt sobrii tali vitio maculari."

<sup>f</sup> OL "adducat," see note h.

<sup>g</sup> OL "maledictio tua."

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ ἐπάξω ἐπ' ἐμαυτὸν κατάραν καὶ οὐκ εὐλογίαν. εἶπεν δὲ αὐτῷ ἡ μήτηρ (v.l. + αὐτοῦ: Heb. "his mother"), Ἐπ' ἐμέ ἡ κατάρα σου, τέκνον (Heb. "my son").

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. from Cat. Ined. Reg. 1825 reads more briefly τῆς εὐνοίας, as does the frag. from Procopius (which, however, places this sentence at the end of the section): OL "favorem."

<sup>j</sup> Similarly the Catena (the clause is missing in Procopius), τὰς κατάρας ὁμολογοῦσαν εἰσδέξασθαι τὰς ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου: OL "confitentem excipere maledictum pro eo filio."

<sup>k</sup> So the Catena, καὶ τὸν υἱὸν τῆς εἰς ἀμφοτέρους τοὺς γονεῖς τιμῆς: OL "qui utrisque tuetur parentibus pro honore."

<sup>l</sup> So the Catena, ἀνθέλκεται γὰρ ὑπὸ τῆς πρὸς ἑκάτερον εὐσεβείας: Procopius θαυμαστὸς τῆς πρὸς ἀμφω τοὺς γονεῖς εὐσεβείας: OL "agitur enim gemina pietate."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

another,<sup>a</sup> and as for his mother, lest he seem to disobey and disregard her<sup>b</sup> when she addressed herself to him with supplication and importunity.<sup>c</sup> Wherefore he says very reverently and worthily,<sup>d</sup> not, "My father will rebuke<sup>e</sup> me" but, "I will bring a curse upon myself<sup>f</sup>"; for even if he is silent and quiet out of beautiful love toward me,<sup>g</sup> my conscience will none the less seize<sup>h</sup> and reproach (me) as having done something deserving of a curse."<sup>i</sup>

203. (Gen. xxvii. 15) Why did Rebekah, taking the beautiful robe of Esau, which was with her in the house, clothe Jacob (in it)?<sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The Catena reads more fully τὸν μὲν γὰρ πατέρα ἐδεδίει, μὴ δόξη φενακίζειν καὶ ὑφαρπάζειν ἐτέρου γέρας: Procopius paraphrases briefly, τὸν μὲν ἵνα μὴ κινήσῃ: OL "ne videatur fallere patrem, usurpando privilegium alterius."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "neque matrem negligere ac verba ejus nihili facere": the Catena has only τὴν δὲ μητέρα, μὴ καὶ ταύτης νομισθῆ παρακούειν: Procopius τῆς δὲ μὴ παρακούσῃ: OL "neve matri minus inveniat obtemperasse."

<sup>c</sup> The Catena reads more briefly λιπαρῶς ἐγκειμένης: Procopius and OL omit the clause.

<sup>d</sup> The Catena has ἄγαν εὐλαβῶς καὶ ὀσίως: Procopius only καλῶς: OL "verecunda pietate."

<sup>e</sup> Or "curse," as in the Catena, καταράσεται: OL, omitting "my father," has "non quod maledictum aliquod prolaturus est."

<sup>f</sup> So the Catena frag. (which ends here): Procopius reads more briefly τὸ "ἐπ' ἐμᾶυτὸν ἄξω": OL "ait nequando superducat maledictum."

<sup>g</sup> κἂν γὰρ ἡσυχάζῃ φιλοστοργία τῇ πρὸς ἐμέ: OL "quamvis ille pro visceribus piis quiverit" (i.e. "quieverit").

<sup>h</sup> Possibly the Arm. translator misread ἐπιμέμφεται (found in Procopius, see next note) as ἐπιλήμφεται.

<sup>i</sup> Procopius τὸ συνειδὸς (i.e. συνείδησις) ἐπιμέμφεται ὡς ἄξια κατάρας ἐργασάμενον: OL "ne forte conscientia mea pulsata, tale aliquid accipiat incusando memet, tanquam merita maledictio paretur."

<sup>j</sup> LXX καὶ λαβούσα Ῥεβέκκα τὴν στολὴν (Heb. "garments") Ἡσαὺ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτῆς τοῦ πρεσβυτέρου τὴν καλὴν, ἣ ἦν παρ' αὐτῆ τῷ οἴκῳ, καὶ ἐνέδυσεν Ἰακώβ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς τὸν νεώτερον.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

The literal meaning <sup>a</sup> is clear and conspicuous <sup>b</sup>: it seemed that through the robe he who was not there was present. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>c</sup> the wicked man has another robe <sup>d</sup> and many garments, by which he conceals and covers (himself), <sup>e</sup> inasmuch as he cunningly contrives <sup>f</sup> many matters of wrongdoing. <sup>g</sup> And he has one beautiful robe, that of the senses, <sup>h</sup> and outward adornment and the education <sup>i</sup> which extends to words and which some acquire from school-studies. <sup>j</sup> For there is no one who is perfectly evil, <sup>k</sup> but (man) is a mixture of opposites, of righteousness and unrighteousness, of the ignoble and the noble, and, in general, of the good and the bad. <sup>l</sup> Moreover, very excellently does Epicharmus say, <sup>m</sup> "Whoever transgresses the least is the best man, for no one is sinless and no one is without blame." <sup>n</sup> And Euripides (says), <sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπίσημον vel sim.: OL renders the clause more briefly, "scriptura clara est."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> OL "alias stolas."

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. verbs are active forms, but the context requires the passive or the addition of the reflexive pronoun.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. verb usu. = πανουργεῖν.

<sup>g</sup> OL renders the last two clauses somewhat differently, "quibus ut callidus signa injuriarum occulta habet."

<sup>h</sup> τὴν αἰσθητήν: OL "sensibilem."

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. lit. = παιδείαν ἐπιστήμης: OL "pro industria."

<sup>j</sup> ἐκ τῆς ἐγκυκλίας παιδείας: OL "quam ex musica disciplina imbutus placare festinat."

<sup>k</sup> OL "non unam (margin. "nomanam") naturam perfecte malus est."

<sup>l</sup> OL "sed etiam contrarietatibus temperatus justitiae et iniquitatis documentis infamiae et benevolentiae optimorum et malorum esse virorum" (margin. "virum").

<sup>m</sup> The Greek text of this frag. of Epicharmus seems not to have been preserved. In the collection of Diels-Kranz, FV, frag. 46 (vol. i. p. 205), it is cited in Aucher's Latin version.

<sup>n</sup> OL renders defectively, "qui mediocrius delinquit, dum nullus sine peccato," omitting the reference to Epicharmus' name.

<sup>o</sup> Here, too, the Greek original seems not to have been

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

“ Those who are incontinent and (those in whom) evil (and) enmities and injustices <sup>a</sup> abound are evil. But those who have the opposite (qualities) are virtuous. However, some are such that they have an equal mixture, so that there are none who have all evil without a single good (quality).” <sup>b</sup>

*204. (Gen. xxvii. 16) Why does she put a skin of goats upon his arms and upon his neck? <sup>c</sup>

The literal meaning <sup>d</sup> is clear and apparent, (namely) that it was for the sake of being unknown and that (his father) might not understand and that when he <sup>e</sup> was in his presence he might not seem to be who he (really) was but might seem to be the brother who was absent. <sup>f</sup> And she threw the skins of goats over his arms and naked neck <sup>g</sup> because the latter (Esau) was hairy. But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>h</sup> the arms and the back of the neck <sup>i</sup> are stronger than all of man's (other) limbs, and they are smooth. <sup>j</sup> And preserved. Nauck, TGF (2nd ed.), p. 660, cites Aucher's Latin version.

<sup>a</sup> Aucher “malum inimicitiae et injustitiae.”

<sup>b</sup> OL renders the quotation somewhat confusedly, “Eripides (marg. “Euripides”) quoque neminem irreprehensibilem dixit, tamen quibusdam abundantur (marg. “abundant”) malitiarum fomenta turpia, iniqua, adeo pravis adversantur strenui, quibusdam tamen ita altrinsecus inest temperantia ut nonnulli omnia pessima obtineant absque uno bono, nonnulli omnia necessaria sine ullo malo.” This is followed by several sentences not found in the Arm. text. See Appendix B.

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ τὰ δέρματα τῶν ἐρίφων (v.l. αἰγῶν : Heb. “kids of the goats”) περιέθηκεν ἐπὶ τοὺς βραχίονας αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐπὶ τὰ γυμνά (Heb. “smoothness”) τοῦ τραχήλου αὐτοῦ : OL “quare pelles super brachia et nuditatem colli posuit?”

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. Jacob.

<sup>f</sup> OL renders more briefly, “dictum insinuat qua possit latere, assistens patri ne videretur quis sit sed absens frater.”

<sup>g</sup> OL “alia proxima membra.”

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> Prob. ὁ σφόνδυλος τοῦ ἀγένοσ : OL “terganea colla” : Aucher “humérique circa collum.”

<sup>j</sup> OL “lenia” (l. “levia”).

GENESIS, BOOK IV

the wise man <sup>a</sup> is gleaming and naked to the truth <sup>b</sup>; and just as in the case of the other virtues, so also does he in pure fashion exhibit and practise and pursue courage.<sup>c</sup> And if it sometimes happens that he conceals this and makes it hairy because of the necessity of the occasion, and uses economy,<sup>d</sup> he still remains in the same state and does not retreat from his original purpose,<sup>e</sup> but because of involuntary occurrences he changes to another kind of form, as in a theatre, for the benefit of the spectators.<sup>f</sup> For this is just what physicians are accustomed to do, for they change the foods of ill persons, and their places (of residence) and the ways (of living) which they had before their illness.<sup>g</sup> And the physician who is skilled in worldly matters does foolish things for a time (but) wisely, and

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag., which begins here, has ὁ ἀστεῖος: OL "strenuus vir" (usu.= ὁ σπουδαῖος; Aucher "virtute valens."

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. omits the predicate: OL has "aperta ad veritatem habet."

<sup>c</sup> Similarly the Greek frag., ὡσπερ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετὰς ὁ ἀστεῖος, οὕτως καὶ τὴν ἀνδρείαν καθαρῶς ἐπιτετηδευκῶς: OL renders more briefly, "sicut alias virtutes, ita fortitudinem sectatur."

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. is clearer than the Greek frag., which reads ἐάν που ταύτην ἐπισκιάζη χάριν, καιρῶν οἰκονομία χρῆται (possibly χάριν is a corruption of καὶ τραχύνη): OL renders, "cum autem hanc obumbraverit densando pro necessitate temporis et utilitate utitur."

<sup>e</sup> Similarly the Greek frag., μένων μὲν ἐν ὁμοίῳ καὶ τῆς ἐξ ἀρχῆς προθέσεως οὐκ ἀναχωρῶν: OL "permanens in eodem statu et praecedentia vota non excedens."

<sup>f</sup> Similarly the Greek frag., διὰ δὲ τῶν ἀβουλήτων συντυχίας ἐναλλάττων ὡσπερ ἐν θεάτρῳ μυρφήν ἑτέραν ὑπὲρ ὠφελείας τῶν ὀρώντων: OL renders defectively, "pro secundis autem casibus formam in alteram pro usitate videntur" (l. "utilitate videntium").

<sup>g</sup> This sentence is missing in the Greek frag.: OL renders more briefly, "hoc enim etiam medici solent observare, immutantes remedia laborantium quam habuerunt ante languorem."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

unlasciviously and moderately does lecherous things, and bravely does cowardly things, and righteously does unrighteous things.<sup>a</sup> And sometimes he will speak falsehoods, not being a liar, and he will deceive, not being a deceiver,<sup>b</sup> and he will insult, not being an insulter.<sup>c</sup>

205. (Gen. xxvii. 17) What is the meaning of the words, "She gave the foods and the bread which she had made into the hand of Jacob" <sup>d</sup> ?

(This is said) because for a perfect life it is fitting not only to wish for things worthy of pursuit and virtue <sup>e</sup> but also to do them.<sup>f</sup> And appropriately <sup>g</sup> does the character of constancy and continence,<sup>h</sup> because she is the mother of the law of nature, extend to his hands bread, the symbol of frugality,<sup>i</sup> and the foods of a relaxed, released and pure life.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Similarly the Greek frag., ιατρὸς γὰρ τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον πραγμάτων ὁ ἀστεῖος, ὃς ἔνεκα τῶν καιρῶν φρονίμως ἐνεργεῖ τὰ ἀφροσύνης, καὶ σωφρόνως τὰς ἀκολασίας καὶ τὰς δειλίας ἀνδρείως καὶ δικαίως τὰς ἀδικίας: OL renders defectively, "medicus autem circa vitam rerum pro statu temporum fit, sapienter gubernando insipientiae momenta, et viriliter timiditatem, et jusse (l. "juste") iniquitatem."

<sup>b</sup> So OL, "et fallat alienus fallaciae." The clause is missing in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag., καὶ ὑβρίσει μὴ ὦν ὑβριστής: OL "et detrahebat (l. "detrahebit") non derogando."

<sup>d</sup> OL reads defectively "quid est: dedit Isaac (marg. "Esau") panes quos fecit in manibus Jacob?": LXX καὶ ἔδωκεν τὰ ἐδέσματα καὶ τοὺς ἄρτους οὓς ἐποίησεν εἰς τὰς χεῖρας Ἰακώβ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτῆς. <sup>e</sup> ἄξια σπουδῆς καὶ ἀρετῆς.

<sup>f</sup> OL paraphrases, "complenti vitam (l. "vitae"?) mavult perseverantiam non modo per ambitionem studii sed etiam pro merito certatoris agere." <sup>g</sup> πρεπόντως vel sim.

<sup>h</sup> τρόπος (or ἦθος) τῆς διαμονῆς (or ὑπομονῆς) καὶ τῆς ἐγκρατείας. On Rebekah as a symbol of constancy see passim, QG iv. 97-199. <sup>i</sup> σύμβολον τῆς ὀλιγοδείας.

<sup>j</sup> OL renders the last sentence more briefly, "est enim naturalium conditionum mater quae porrigit in manibus auspicia, parsimonia quidem panis, pro pura autem et abundantiori refectione caeteras epulas."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

*206. (Gen. xxvii. 18-19) Why, when his father asks, "Who art thou, son?" does he reply, "I am Esau, thy first-born. I have done as thou hast told me" <sup>a</sup>?

Again he will seem to be a deceiver, although he is not to be thought (to be connected) with any evil.<sup>b</sup> For calumniators <sup>c</sup> call the dispensation of virtue <sup>d</sup> deceit and fraud.<sup>e</sup> And what dispensation is better than when one does not ascribe good things and virtues to those who wish to live shamefully and disgracefully? <sup>f</sup> But let the spy say, when he is caught, "I am not an enemy but a friend"; and if this is not praised,<sup>g</sup> and his words have no place,<sup>h</sup> let him say these words, "I hastened to you of my own accord,<sup>i</sup> condemning my own (side)."<sup>j</sup> Let the general speak

<sup>a</sup> LXX τίς εἶ σύ, τέκνον (Heb. "my son"); καὶ εἶπεν Ἰακώβ ὁ υἱὸς αὐτοῦ τῷ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ, Ἐγὼ Ἡσαὺ ὁ πρωτότοκός σου, ἐποίησα (v.l. πεποίηκα) καθὰ ἐλάλησάς μοι.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. text is not altogether clear. Aucher renders, "rursum fallax esse putetur nullo cum malo reputandus": OL "item fallax esse videtur a bonis emotis pravitate negotiationum." Procopius' paraphrase reads πάλιν ἀπατεῶν εἶναι δόξει τοῖς μὴ τὴν κατ' ἀρετὴν σκοποῦσιν οἰκονομίαν.

<sup>c</sup> οἱ συκοφάνται: OL "calumniatores."

<sup>d</sup> τὴν τῆς ἀρετῆς οἰκονομίαν (cf. the end of the preceding sentence in the Greek frag. from Procopius): OL "pro virtute acquisita."

<sup>e</sup> The Procopius fragment lacks this sentence.

<sup>f</sup> OL reads unintelligibly "quid autem dispensabilius utilitati quam optime studiosa turpissimi quoque et scrupulosae vitae homines et optimi viri exquirunt?" Procopius is briefer and clearer, ἡ δὲ οἰκονομία πρὸς τὸ μὴ τοῖς ἀναξίους δίδοσθαι τὰ καλά. The original probably meant that Esau did not merit the status of first-born.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "haud probetur."

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. idiom zeli ounel (lit. "to have place") often means "to stop" but occasionally, as here, it seems, "to make an impression." Aucher renders, "neque locum habet dictum."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "of myself": Aucher "ego ex me ipso."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "improbatis meis (sociis)." OL lacks this sentence. Procopius reads more briefly λεγέτω καὶ κατάσκοπος συλληφθείς· οὐκ εἰμι πολέμιος ἢ ὡς ἠντομόληκα. For the

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of making war when he is doing the work of peace, or in time of peace when he is thinking of drawing up his line of battle.<sup>a</sup> Let the king also put on the guise of a commoner if he is not able in another way to obtain benefit for his realm and his subjects.<sup>b</sup> And (let) the master (put on the guise) of a slave in order not to be ignorant of anything that is done in the house.<sup>c</sup> These are familiar things<sup>d</sup> and principally of the literal meaning.<sup>e</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>f</sup> let us say allegorically<sup>g</sup> that the soul<sup>h</sup> of each of us has, as it were, several kinds of man in itself<sup>i</sup> in accordance with the various incidences of similar things.<sup>j</sup> following three sentences we have two Greek texts, one from Procopius, the other from Cod. Vat. 1553.

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. is apparently defective. One expects the latter part of the sentence to read "or in time of peace let him think of drawing up his line of battle." OL is also awkward, "dicit enim et magister militiae pacem velle, praelia parando, et pacis tempore arma renovando." The Greek fragments have λεγέτω καὶ (v.l. καὶ ὁ) στρατηγὸς τὰ πολεμοποιούντα εἰρήνην πραγματευόμενος ἢ τὰ εἰρηναῖα (Cod. Vat. εἰρήνης) πολεμεῖν ἐγνωκῶς (Cod. Vat. διανοούμενος).

<sup>b</sup> Similarly Cod. Vat., ὑποδυέσθω καὶ βασιλεὺς ἰδιώτου σχήμα εἰ μὴ δύναιτο ἐτέρως τὸ συμφέρον τῇ τε ἀρχῇ καὶ τοῖς ὑπηκόοις λαβεῖν. Procopius reads slightly differently οὐδὲν κωλύσει καὶ βασιλέα ἰδιώτου σχῆμα λαβεῖν τοῖς ὑπηκόοις τὸ συμφέρον θηρώμενον. OL has "ita demum etiam rex amictu subornatur privati pro utilitate si aliter non poterit evadere, expedit enim ut subjectis, ita et domesticorum conditionibus" (the last four words seem to belong to the sentence which follows in the Arm. version and is not independently rendered in the OL).

<sup>c</sup> So Cod. Vat., καὶ ὁ δεσπότης δούλου, εἵνεκα τοῦ μηδὲν ἀγνοῆσαι τῶν κατὰ τὴν οἰκίαν δρωμένων: Procopius καὶ τὸν δεσπότην οἰκέτου μηδὲν ἀγνοεῖν ἐθέλοντα τῶν κτλ. The Greek fragments end with this sentence. <sup>d</sup> οἰκεῖα.

<sup>e</sup> τοῦ ῥήτου. OL renders the sentence more briefly, "haec pro partibus orationis." <sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> ἀλληγοροῦντες φήσομεν.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ.

<sup>i</sup> OL "plurimos habere infra se tamquam homines."

<sup>j</sup> OL "pro varietate accedentium rerum."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

It is as if Esau were in me, an oak <sup>a</sup> inflexible, unbending and hairy, and a type alien to the thoughts of virtue,<sup>b</sup> and confused <sup>c</sup> in his impulses,<sup>d</sup> and yielding to irrational and inscrutable impulses.<sup>e</sup> In me is also Jacob, smooth and not rough.<sup>f</sup> In me are both an old man and a youth, both a ruler and a non-ruler,<sup>g</sup> both a holy person and a profane one.<sup>h</sup> But when one is virtuous <sup>i</sup> and in a (state) opposite to virtue,<sup>j</sup> it is altogether superficially and merely on a tangent that one deceives, and not <sup>k</sup> by an affinity to every being and in mortal fashion.<sup>l</sup> When, however, one is wicked, one openly says that which is foolish and unjust, but feebly gives the appearance of wisdom and justice.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> For other references in Philo to Esau as a symbol of an oak, based on the fanciful etymology of "Esau" as Heb. 'עֵשׂ "tree," see QG iv. 161.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. seems lit. to render ἀλλότριος ταῖς τῆς ἀρετῆς γνώμας: Aucher, construing differently, renders, "alienae virtutis probabile exemplum": OL "obscurus ad captandas virtutum fruges."

<sup>c</sup> Or "impure": Aucher "intemperatus."

<sup>d</sup> OL has merely "procax," omitting reference to "his impulses."

<sup>e</sup> The rendering in OL, "in montibus passim procedens," is perhaps based in part on a reading ἀν' ἰχνη ἐν τοῖς ὄρεσι vel sim. in place of ἀνιχνεύτοις ὄρμαῖς.

<sup>f</sup> OL "nec temere audax."

<sup>g</sup> OL "et privatus et magistratus."

<sup>h</sup> OL "ne (l. "in") me et religiosus, inquit, et profanus."

<sup>i</sup> σπουδαῖος: OL "studiosus." <sup>j</sup> ἀρετῆ.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. οὐ "not" is printed in parentheses as if supplied by Aucher.

<sup>l</sup> The obscure Arm. seems literally to render οὐ κατὰ συγγένειαν πάση οὐσία καὶ θνητὸν τρόπον vel sim. Aucher renders more freely, "minime vero secundum indolem cognatam, qua reperitur exemplum omnis creaturae ac mortalis." OL has nothing to correspond (see the next note).

<sup>m</sup> σοφίας καὶ δικαιοσύνης. OL seems to incorporate part of this sentence with the preceding in rendering the passage, "si enim studiosus fuero, differentia virtutis ostentatorie et procaciter ego tantummodo quantum oculis placeres (sic), sufficit sapientiae et iustitiae merita dissimulando."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

But when Jacob says to his father, " I am Esau," he speaks the truth according to the principle of nature,<sup>a</sup> for his soul is moved in accordance with that form.<sup>b</sup>

*207. (Gen. xxvii. 20) Why does his father say, " What is this that thou didst quickly find, son ? " <sup>c</sup> ?

The literal text <sup>d</sup> has both a fitting answer to the question <sup>e</sup> and also one for the allegory <sup>f</sup> of the literal text.<sup>g</sup> For reckoning the time sufficient for a hunter to hunt, he found it brief and thought it little.<sup>h</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> the wise man <sup>j</sup> wondered that one of the wicked should so unexpectedly become well taught <sup>k</sup> so as to be able to find (what he sought) not only with speed but also with keenness and commendably,<sup>l</sup> since he was thought to be very irrational and foolish <sup>m</sup> and really an oak.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>a</sup> κατὰ τὸν τῆς φύσεως λόγον : OL " imploratione naturae."

<sup>b</sup> τῆς αὐτοῦ ψυχῆς κατὰ τὸ ἐκείνου εἶδος κινουμένης : OL " dum anima secundum illius speciem mota est."

<sup>c</sup> LXX εἶπεν δὲ Ἰσαὰκ τῷ υἱῷ αὐτοῦ, τί τοῦτο ὃ ταχὺ εὗρες, ὦ τέκνον.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> Variant " answer of reply."

<sup>f</sup> πρὸς τὴν ἀλληγορίαν.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. text is awkward. Aucher renders more freely, " habet litera tam congruam responsionem quae reddi potest quam allegoriam." OL reads " habet oratoria pars rationabilem redditionem, allegoria quoque tanto melius."

<sup>h</sup> OL " dementi (sic) enim sufficientes moras venationi compendiosiore invenit et minus quam aestimavit." The brief paraphrase in Procopius reads οὐ γὰρ ἔφθασε χρόνον προσήκοντα κυνηγέτη.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ σοφός.

<sup>k</sup> οὕτως εὐμαθῆ γενέσθαι παραδόξως vel sim. : Aucher " sic repente progressum fecerit in laudabili studio " : OL " tam cito . . . eruditus sit repentino studio melioratus."

<sup>l</sup> εὐλόγως vel sim. : Aucher " acumine optima rationis " : OL omits.

<sup>m</sup> OL " ex inertia ingeniosus " (?).

<sup>n</sup> See QG iv. 206.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

*208. (Gen. xxvii. 20) Why does he reply, "What the Lord gave into my hands" <sup>a</sup>?

This answer is virtuous and suitable to a God-loving mind. <sup>b</sup> "For," he says, "I use no mortal teacher, <sup>c</sup> but the Father gave into my hands the contemplation of wisdom and knowledge, <sup>d</sup> because of which I not only learned but was also able to find." For he who uses God as teacher both profits and is competent to bring profit (to others). <sup>e</sup> He profits by learning, and he brings profit by finding disciples and familiars <sup>f</sup> at first. <sup>g</sup> And afterwards he receives the rank of teacher and leader in order. <sup>h</sup>

209. (Gen. xxvii. 21) Why does he say, "Come near to me, and I will feel thee, son, whether thou art my son Esau or not" <sup>i</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> OL "quod tradidit dominus in pectus (l. "spectu"?) meo." Philo differs from LXX ὁ παρέδωκεν κύριος ὁ θεὸς (v.l. + σου) ἐναντίον μου: Heb. "for the Lord Thy God caused (it) to fall before me." In De Sacr. Abelis 64 and Quod Deus Immut. Sit. 92 Philo follows the LXX text verbatim; in De Ebrietate 120 and De Fuga 169 he cites the LXX text incompletely, ὁ παρέδωκεν κύριος ὁ θεός. The interpretation of the half-verse given here (in QG) resembles most closely that given in De Sacr. Abelis 64-65.

<sup>b</sup> θεοφιλεῖ λογισμῶ vel sim.: OL "religioso animi" (l. "animo"?). Procopius paraphrases the sentence (the only one in this section preserved in his commentary), ὁ δὲ θεοφιλῆς ἐπὶ θεὸν τὴν αἰτίαν ἀνάγει διὰ τῆς ἀποκρίσεως.

<sup>c</sup> OL "magistro, asserenti, nulli mortalium auxiliosum esse."

<sup>d</sup> τὰς θεωρίας (vel sim.) τὰς τῆς σοφίας καὶ τῆς ἐπιστήμης: OL "disciplinarum pignora spectatissima sapientiae."

<sup>e</sup> OL "et prodesse alteris."

<sup>f</sup> γνωρίμους (in the sense of "disciples"): OL "notos."

<sup>g</sup> OL curiously renders, "ac minime dissonantes," possibly taking ἐν ἀρχῇ to mean "under authority" or the like.

<sup>h</sup> OL renders more briefly, "postmodum autem doctoris dignitatem assumit."

<sup>i</sup> OL omits the last two words. Philo here follows the LXX Ἐγγισόν μοι καὶ ψηλαφήσω σε, τέκνον, εἰ σὺ εἶ ὁ υἱός μου Ἡσαὺ ἢ οὐ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The virtuous man <sup>a</sup> is justly <sup>b</sup> incredulous <sup>c</sup> and wonders that the wicked man in such wholly unexpected fashion <sup>d</sup> received an increase in virtue. <sup>e</sup> In the first place, because he who had been sickly and lazy and slow <sup>f</sup> became quick, and quick to learn. <sup>g</sup> In the second place, because not only did he receive in memory the things in which he had been instructed and had learned, <sup>h</sup> but he also himself became a rule to many, <sup>i</sup> and like quick-witted men who are easily taught, changed into a receptive, fertile and productive (person) instead of being, as a little before, sterile. <sup>j</sup> And in the third place, because he considers the teachings and traditions <sup>k</sup> and doctrines of divine guidance to be worthy of pursuit, and rightly and fittingly does he consecrate and offer <sup>l</sup> them to God, his leader. <sup>m</sup> For this reason, being astonished, he says, "Come near to me, for I wish to know certainly whether you are he or someone else." Wherefore he is said to feel him, not so much with his hands as with the thoughts of his mind, <sup>n</sup> and by himself he grasps and compares the things now said with those earlier ones, in word and deed. For he finds a great opposition <sup>o</sup> between them.

<sup>a</sup> ὁ σπουδαῖος : OL "studiosus."      <sup>b</sup> Aucher "statim."

<sup>c</sup> OL carelessly renders, "non incredulus."

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "tam subito" : OL omits.      <sup>e</sup> ἀρετῇ.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher, ignoring the first adjective, renders, "ignavus et deses" : similarly OL, "surdus et tardus."

<sup>g</sup> OL has only "strenuus."

<sup>h</sup> OL "quae dicit (l. "didicit") meminit."

<sup>i</sup> OL loosely renders, "plurima acquisivit."

<sup>j</sup> OL renders the whole clause very briefly, "utpote de sterilitate foetusus."      <sup>k</sup> παραδόσεις.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher renders both verbs by "adscribit."

<sup>m</sup> OL renders the sentence very briefly, "tertio, quod titulos divinitus largitos refert, et deum confitetur autorem."

<sup>n</sup> Aucher renders more literally, "mente consilii," but it appears that the Arm. translator had the case-endings of the two nouns reversed. OL reads more smoothly "mentis intuitu."

<sup>o</sup> Lit. "warfare" : Aucher "oppugnationem" : OL "dissonantiam."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

*210. (Gen. xxvii. 22) Why after feeling (Jacob) does he say, "The voice is the voice of Jacob, and the hands are the hands of Esau" <sup>a</sup>?

The voice now brought into speech is not that which is the sound of air through mouth and tongue <sup>b</sup> but that which had already been said, <sup>c</sup> which was indefinite <sup>d</sup> and indifferent in its own significance. <sup>e</sup> And that which is signified is an indication of piety of will, <sup>f</sup> which is suitable to and in harmony with continent characters of productivity and worthiness. <sup>g</sup> For this reason, repeating himself, he twice uses the (same) expression, "The voice is the voice of Jacob, and the hands are the hands of Esau," indicating that it is not any voice whatsoever that he praises but (only) that in which it has been acknowledged that the inventions <sup>h</sup> of good things are in accordance with God. <sup>i</sup> This (attitude) was foreign and strange to the undisciplined and uncultivated character <sup>j</sup> but familiar and genuine to the continent one which considers strenuous labours

<sup>a</sup> So the LXX, Ἡ φωνὴ φωνὴ Ἰακώβ, αἱ δὲ χεῖρες χεῖρες Ἡσαύ.

<sup>b</sup> OL "non oris et linguae pulsantis aerem."

<sup>c</sup> OL "pro casum (v.l. "casu") dictum" (v.l. "vindictam").

<sup>d</sup> ἀόριστος: OL omits.

<sup>e</sup> ἀδιάφορος ἐν τῷ δι' ἑαυτῆς σημαιομένῳ vel sim.: OL "et habentem differentiam (sic) pro suo indicio" (v.l. "iudicio").

<sup>f</sup> Cf. Procopius' paraphrase τὴν εὐσεβῆ φωνὴν οὐκ ἂν λεχθεῖσαν ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἡσαύ . . . οὐ γὰρ ἐν ἰδιότητι προφορᾶς ἀλλ' ἐν τοῖς λεχθεῖσιν ἦν ἡ φωνή.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders somewhat more freely, "quae convenit indolis religiosae fertilitatis dignitatisque": OL "congrua exercitorii (v.l. "exercitoris") moribus continentia quibus benevolentia et sanctitas oriuntur." Perhaps for Arm. k'ajaberout' iun "productivity" we should read k'ajabarout' iun "rectitude," "simplicity."

<sup>h</sup> τὰς εὐρέσεις.

<sup>i</sup> OL "non vocem quamlibet sed eam laudat quae professa est autoris esse emolumenta bonorum."

<sup>j</sup> τῷ ἀπαιδέυτῳ καὶ ἀμούσῳ τρόπῳ: OL has only "quod erat alienum pravi."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

more valuable and not merely more useful than sensual pleasure.<sup>a</sup> *211. (Gen. xxvii. 23) What is the meaning of the words, "He did not recognize him, for his hands were hairy <sup>b</sup> like Esau's" <sup>c</sup> ?

(Scripture) seals and confirms still more what was said a little earlier, pointing out and declaring that many times the good man and the wicked man perform good and worthy deeds of this sort and bring profit,<sup>d</sup> but not with the same intention,<sup>e</sup> for the one uses his judgment about what is good while the wicked man acts nobly <sup>f</sup> and makes that appear good which is a matter of avaricious greed.<sup>g</sup> For no one is ever able to find folly doing anything worthy unless it is contriving some scheme or scheming some dodge,<sup>h</sup> as the tragic poet says.<sup>i</sup> On that account it gives a hint,<sup>j</sup> adding that their acts are somewhat similar but

<sup>a</sup> τῆς ἡδονῆς. OL renders the clause unintelligibly, "pravum (sic) vero continentiam studentis et exercitati pro libidine doloris eligentis hanc vitam utiliolem et preciosam credenti." After this sentence OL has an additional section, for which see Appendix B.

<sup>b</sup> OL omits this word.

<sup>c</sup> LXX and Heb. "Esau's his brother."

<sup>d</sup> The two Arm. verbs prob. render the single Greek verb ἐνεργετοῦσι, a variant or corruption of ἐνεργοῦσι, see next note.

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. (Harris, p. 70, identified by Bréhier) from Cod. Vat. 1553 reads more smoothly τὰ αὐτὰ καθήκοντα πολλάκις ἐνεργοῦσιν ὃ τε ἀστεῖος καὶ ὃ φαῦλος, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ τῆς αὐτῆς διανοίας.

<sup>f</sup> Possibly the Arm. translator read σεμννόμενος for μνώμενος (see next note).

<sup>g</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends with this sentence) reads ὁ μὲν γὰρ κρίνων ὅτι καλόν, ὁ δὲ μοχθηρὸς μνώμενός τι τῶν εἰς πλεονεξίαν.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "aliqua nova": OL "machinam fraudulentam quae nascitur a Mercurio."

<sup>i</sup> This may be an allusion to Euripides, Hippolytus 331 ἐκ τῶν γὰρ αἰσχρῶν ἐσθλὰ μηχανώμεθα.

<sup>j</sup> αἰνίγματι.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

not that the two are the same,<sup>a</sup> because each has received a (different) type of will.<sup>b</sup>

212. (Gen. xxvii. 23-24) Why is it that he blessed him and (then) says, "Art thou my son Esau?"<sup>c</sup>?

The divine oracle ordains<sup>d</sup> that this word<sup>e</sup> be uttered at once, to make evident the (act of) blessing before (mentioning) the individual blessings.<sup>f</sup> And this demonstrates very clearly and certainly that it was God who did the blessing through the prophet, who speaks.<sup>g</sup> For the one did not say anything at all by opening his mouth, while the other by his power of foreknowing<sup>h</sup> first rendered the blessings to the end with an articulate sound.<sup>i</sup> Wherefore indeed (Scripture) seals the conclusion and confirms it by an utterance of the divine oracle, in accordance with which it has made clear that he blessed him.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> OL "non tamen eadem qualitate amborum."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "ob insitos in utroque indoles voluntatis":
OL "litigant enim utrorumque consilia."

<sup>c</sup> I.xx and Heb. add "and he (Jacob) said, I am."

<sup>d</sup> ὁ θεῖος χρησμὸς νομοθετεῖ.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the words ἠϋλόγησεν αὐτόν, the last words of vs. 23.

<sup>f</sup> OL renders freely, "tam resonat vox legis Dei per eloquium sanctum, et ante particulares benedictiones quid sit benedictio."

<sup>g</sup> OL "deum fuisse secrete benedicientem ante verba dicentis."

<sup>h</sup> προγνωστικῇ δυνάμει, cf. Vita Mosis ii. 190, where this power is ascribed to Moses.

<sup>i</sup> ἐνάρθρω φωνῇ. The meaning of the sentence is obscure. Aucher renders, "quoniam unus neque quidquam dixit ore tenus: alter vero virtute prophetica ab initio usque ad finem reddidit benedictiones articulata voce": OL "illo enim necdum ori (sic) liniamenta distinguente praescia virtute culminis destinantur benedictiones usque in finem paratissime pronuntiatæ."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "quare et finem concludit divinae vocis oraculo secundum illud quo patefecit nimirum benedixisse ei": OL "unde etiam terminum designat responso divino lex, prius declarando quoniam benedixit eum." Apparently Philo is

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

213. (Gen. xxvii. 25-27) Why, when he had eaten and drunk <sup>a</sup> and smelled his <sup>b</sup> garments, is he said to have blessed (him) ? <sup>c</sup>

The literal text <sup>d</sup> does not require any explanation.<sup>e</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>f</sup> it has a certain necessary speculation.<sup>g</sup> For symbolically <sup>h</sup> the garments are visible decency <sup>i</sup> and opinion, which to many is seemly, splendid and approved.<sup>j</sup> And this, too, is a praiseworthy part, which those use who are not perfected in virtue.<sup>k</sup> Deservedly is the good man <sup>l</sup> introduced <sup>m</sup> both because he desires this and because he partakes of that food which is intellectual.<sup>n</sup> drawing attention to the significance of the fact that the expression "he blessed him" stands at the end of a verse.

<sup>a</sup> OL omits the reference to Isaac's drinking.

<sup>b</sup> Jacob's.

<sup>c</sup> Philo summarizes vss. 25-27a, which read, καὶ εἶπεν, Προσάγαγέ μοι καὶ φάγομαι ἀπὸ τῆς θήρας σου, τέκνον, ὅπως εὐλογῆσθαι σε ἢ ψυχῆ μου· καὶ προσήνεγκεν αὐτῷ καὶ ἔφαγεν· καὶ εἰσήνεγκεν αὐτῷ οἶνον, καὶ ἔπιεν. (26) καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ἰσαὰκ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ, Ἐγγισόν μοι καὶ φίλησόν με, τέκνον. (27) καὶ ἐγγίσας ἐφίλησεν αὐτόν· καὶ ὠσφράνθη τὴν ὄσμην τῶν ἱματίων αὐτοῦ. καὶ ἠὐλόγησεν αὐτόν κτλ.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>e</sup> λόγου : OL "dubitationem."

<sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> θεωρίαν τινὰ ἀναγκαίαν : OL "relationem necessariam."

<sup>h</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>i</sup> εὐκοσμία, cf. De Mut. Nom. 246 : Aucher "probitas" : OL "censuram spectabilem."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher, in disregard of the syntax, renders, "qua apud multos habetur quisquam in bona probataque aestimatione" : OL "quae est apud probabilis," and makes "existimatio" (= Arm. karcik' = Gr. δόξα) the subject of the following sentence.

<sup>k</sup> οἱ μὴ τελειωθέντες ἀρετῇ : OL "minus perfecti."

<sup>l</sup> ὁ ἀστεῖος ἢ ὁ σπουδαῖος.

<sup>m</sup> OL "utator" (sic : v.l. "ut autor").

<sup>n</sup> τῆς κατὰ λογισμὸν τροφῆς vel sim. : Aucher "tum id desiderante (patre) tum participanti cibum mysterii" : OL "hujus stolae prosequitur ad fructum meliorem."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

214. (Gen. xxvii. 27b) Why does he begin the blessings in this way, "Behold, the smell of my son is like the smell of a full field, which the Lord <sup>a</sup> has blessed" <sup>b</sup> ?

Full is that place in which are all seeds, trees, flowers and fruits.<sup>c</sup> And deserving of blessings is not that which at one time (only) is fragrant <sup>d</sup> and well provided with grain and fruit <sup>e</sup> but that which continually enjoys fertility. And in the soul is a place full of wisdom <sup>f</sup> and herbage of virtue.<sup>g</sup> And the fruits are its several deeds and the words that accompany them,<sup>h</sup> each of which in some way <sup>i</sup> has its own smell,<sup>j</sup> some accompanied by the prudence of wisdom, some by temperance, and others by justice.<sup>k</sup> For our lives are, as it were, made fragrant by our several virtues, for through their speech they send out breaths and exhalations to those near by, who are greatly gladdened when struck by incorporeal smells which are better than incense or myrrh or any other material (smells).<sup>l</sup> Now

<sup>a</sup> OL "deus."

<sup>b</sup> LXX Ἰδοὺ ὄσμη τοῦ υἱοῦ μου ὡς ὄσμη ἀγροῦ πλήρους (Heb. lacks the adjective "full") ὃν ηὐλόγησεν κύριος.

<sup>c</sup> OL "plenus itaque ager serendorum arborumque florentium frugiferis auspiciis." <sup>d</sup> εὐώδης.

<sup>e</sup> εὐσταχυς καὶ εὐκαρπος: OL "quod non tempore segetis (v.l. "egestuosus") a fecunditate sit."

<sup>f</sup> σοφίας. Aucher, construing slightly differently, renders, "animae vero campus est plenus sapientia": OL "est enim anima plena sapientiae et ager, etc." <sup>g</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>h</sup> ἕκαστα τὰ ἔργα καὶ οἱ κατ' αὐτὰ λόγοι: OL "fruges autem facit laudabiles ipsis operibus veritatis."

<sup>i</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>j</sup> OL "quarum singulae proprio (v.l. "pro pio") pollentes odore benedicuntur."

<sup>k</sup> ὧν τὰ μὲν κατὰ φρόνησιν σοφίας (prob. originally κατὰ φρόνησιν), τὰ δὲ κατὰ σωφροσύνην, τὰ δὲ κατὰ δικαιοσύνην: OL has merely "pro vigilantia pudicitia."

<sup>l</sup> OL freely "de singulis enim vitales oriuntur vapores suavitatis in dicendis gerendisque: suos etiam approximantes delectant, quod melius est totius libaminis et hostiarum et odoramentorum jucundius: pulsantes enim mentes incorporaliter exhortantur ampliare charitatem."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

that which is said above all things <sup>a</sup> is the seal of confirmation of Him Who is above.<sup>b</sup> For to bless and to be blessed by Him Who holds the foundation of all things and is Lord in truth renders the spiritual field <sup>c</sup> full of virtues.<sup>d</sup> For it is fitting to recognize clearly that wherever God is not present, that (place) is altogether imperfect and is easily taken.<sup>e</sup>

215. (Gen. xxvii. 28) Why does he say, "May the Lord God <sup>f</sup> give to thee of the dew of heaven and of the fatness of earth" <sup>g</sup> ?

He receives the most excellent order <sup>h</sup> of blessings, which, according to the same prophet,<sup>i</sup> the creation of the world had. For he gave first place to heaven, and second to earth, wishing to teach us that it befits the virtuous man <sup>j</sup> to turn toward <sup>k</sup> and acquire heavenly and divine things first, and in the second place, earthly and corruptible things. For the former are the heads and higher parts, and the latter are the bases and lower parts. In man the mind <sup>l</sup> is like

<sup>a</sup> This is a literal rendering of the obscure Arm. clause.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "qui supremus est."

<sup>c</sup> τὸν πνευματικὸν (or ψυχικὸν) ἄγρον.

<sup>d</sup> OL paraphrases, "est enim pro integro titulo plenissime dictum, quod siquid benedicatur acceptabile est autori domino universorum, ipsa veritate plenum agrum bonarum virtutum in corde operantis" (sic).

<sup>e</sup> OL again renders freely, "res autem minus perfectae sunt et fluxidolae quae elongantur a scientia dei."

<sup>f</sup> OL, like LXX and Heb., has only "God."

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ δάψη σοι ὁ θεὸς ἀπὸ τῆς δρόσου τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἄνωθεν (Heb. omits "from above") καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς πύθης τῆς γῆς. Philo omits the concluding phrase, καὶ πλήθος σίτου καὶ οἴνου, as also in De Migratione 101, where he briefly allegorizes this verse in similar fashion.

<sup>h</sup> τάξι.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. Moses. OL's "profectu" is an obvious corruption of "profeta."

<sup>j</sup> τῷ σπουδαίῳ: OL "vigilantissimo."

<sup>k</sup> Aucher "morem gerere."

<sup>l</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

heaven, for they are both rational parts, the one of the world, the other of the soul.<sup>a</sup> But sense-perception<sup>b</sup> (is like) the earth, for both are irrational.<sup>c</sup> Fittingly, therefore, does he pray and ask that the progressive man<sup>d</sup> become better in respect of both the rational and irrational (part) by acquiring a "fat" sense-perception and a "dewy" mind. And symbolically<sup>e</sup> "dew" is the divine Logos,<sup>f</sup> which greatly, fittingly, gently and continually brings profit to the sovereign mind.<sup>g</sup> But lavish "fatness" is the abundance of provisioning<sup>h</sup> in accordance with the several senses when they are restrained by continence and temperance.<sup>i</sup> Excellently, moreover,<sup>j</sup> did the ancients say that riches and noble birth<sup>k</sup> and friendships and honours and whatever similar things are external are serviceable to the body,<sup>l</sup> while health and power<sup>m</sup> and keenness of <sup>a</sup> λογικὸν μέρος ἑκάτερός ἐστιν, ὁ μὲν τοῦ κόσμου, ὁ δὲ τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ αἴσθησις.

<sup>c</sup> ἄλογοι.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. has the infinitive but the context requires the participle=ὁ προκόπτων. Similarly Aucher renders, "proficiens."

<sup>e</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος.

<sup>g</sup> τῷ ἡγεμόνι νῶ. OL alters the order of the preceding sentences and condenses. It also contains a Christian interpolation, "et asserunt ipsum coelum animal esse: unde credo Apollinaristas incarnationis animam negasse, indignam salvatoris existimasse."

<sup>h</sup> χορηγίας: Aucher "officii choragi (vel regiminis)."

<sup>i</sup> ἐγκρατεία καὶ σωφροσύνη: Aucher "sub habena religionis et sobrietatis": OL renders inaccurately, "pinguedo vero copiosae sumministrationis sensualitatis secundum continentiam gubernantem."

<sup>j</sup> Text and meaning uncertain: Aucher "quoque": OL "etiam."

<sup>k</sup> εὐγένεια: OL "parenteles."

<sup>l</sup> OL, omitting the last verb and noun, renders, "et alia hujus modi extra corpus esse."

<sup>m</sup> So OL, "fortitudinem": Aucher "virtus."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

sense <sup>a</sup> (are serviceable) to the soul, as is the soul to the mind. <sup>b</sup> For the senses are its servants, and the mind is God's. <sup>c</sup> From this it is clear that all things serve God, beginning with that which has the highest position in us, (namely) that allotted to the mind.

216. (Gen. xxvii. 29) Why does he say, "The nations shall serve thee" <sup>d</sup>?

The Law is not an exponent of inequality <sup>e</sup> so as to proclaim servitude to all nations, for it is accustomed to reject also those who have obtained liberty. <sup>f</sup> But it recognizes that it is not profitable for all men to be released and free, <sup>g</sup> for many use this (liberty) unrestrainedly and skittishly, kicking and trampling upon that which is right and useful. <sup>h</sup> For this reason, wishing to bring profit to the multitude, <sup>i</sup> it placed a lord <sup>j</sup> over them as a driver, (namely) the mind, <sup>k</sup> in order that it might rein in that to which it is bound. <sup>l</sup> That is the literal meaning. <sup>m</sup> But as for the allegorical

<sup>a</sup> εὐαίσθησία : Aucher "bonus sensus" : OL "sensibilitatem."

<sup>b</sup> ἡ ψυχὴ τῶ νῶ.

<sup>c</sup> OL "animam ergo mens protegit et sensus mente stipatur."

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ δουλευσάτωσάν σοι ἔθνη.

<sup>e</sup> OL "non sunt iniqua legis instituta."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher "quum libertate quoque praeditos consueverit distinguere," adding in a footnote "vel, ejicere (a libertate)" : OL "cum etiam (v.l. "eo") minimos in libertatem vocare consuevit."

<sup>g</sup> OL "non omnibus utilem esse securitatem."

<sup>h</sup> OL renders unintelligibly, "nec acurentur (v.l. "alterentur") jura per requiem divaricantibus gentibus adversus ea quae expedit."

<sup>i</sup> OL "vitiis," evidently reading πάθει instead of πλήθει.

<sup>j</sup> κύριον.

<sup>k</sup> ὡς ἡνίοχον, τὸν νοῦν : OL "utpote agnatorem (l. "aurigam" ?), ut mentis, etc." (see next note).

<sup>l</sup> τὸ σύνδετον, i.e. the body, cf. Leg. All. iii. 72 et al. OL renders inaccurately, "ut mentis ingenio procax infrenaretur caterva."

<sup>m</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

meaning,<sup>a</sup> this is to be said. There are many nations in the soul, in its various <sup>b</sup> irrational parts,<sup>c</sup> I mean such as anger and desire,<sup>d</sup> for which nothing is so useful as to be ruled by reason, their natural ruler and lord.<sup>e</sup>

217. (Gen. xxvii. 29b) What is the meaning of the words, "Princes shall bow down to thee" <sup>f</sup> ?

He corroborates and extends the argument,<sup>g</sup> for first <sup>h</sup> it subjected commoners <sup>i</sup> to him, and now nobles.<sup>j</sup> And the "princes" are those who preside over and are in charge of heterodox principles,<sup>k</sup> whose concern it is to pride themselves on and glorify whatever is connected with the body and external goods.<sup>l</sup> And they deride and jeeringly mock at discipline, wisdom, continence and endurance <sup>m</sup> and all the other things which preserve the soul <sup>n</sup> without passion and without disease.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἀλληγορικῶς.

<sup>b</sup> Emending Arm. erkak'ançiu "both" to iurak'ançiu "each": OL "singulis." Aucher follows the Arm. text in rendering "utramque."

<sup>c</sup> τὰ ἄλογα μέρη.

<sup>d</sup> ὀργή καὶ ἐπιθυμία.

<sup>e</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ λόγου τοῦ γνησίου ἄρχοντος αὐτῶν καὶ κυρίου.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ προσκυνήσουσίν σοι ἄρχοντες (Heb. "peoples").

<sup>g</sup> τὸν λόγον.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. in the preceding sentence of vs. 29.

<sup>i</sup> ιδιώτας (so Philo interprets the Scriptural word "nations"): Aucher "rusticos": OL "privatos."

<sup>j</sup> εὐγενεῖς vel sim.: Aucher "liberos": OL "principes."

<sup>k</sup> λόγων ἑτεροδόξων: Aucher "sermonum alienae sententiae": OL "sectarum quarundum (sic)."

<sup>l</sup> OL renders defectively, "quibus sollicitudo est haec curare quae corpori expediunt."

<sup>m</sup> παιδείαν καὶ σοφίαν καὶ ἐγκράτειαν καὶ καρτερίαν: Aucher "disciplinam sapientiam et sobrietatem religiosam": OL "industriam, sapientiam, pudicitiam, continentiam, patientiam."

<sup>n</sup> τὴν ψυχὴν.

<sup>o</sup> OL has (after "patientiam") merely "et horum similia."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

218. (Gen. xxvii. 29c) What is the meaning of the words, "Be lord of thy brother" <sup>a</sup> ?

He extends (the argument) still farther, gradually coming nearer and going higher. First he mentioned commoners, <sup>b</sup> then princes, and then the nearest kin. <sup>c</sup> But can he who is the teacher of humaneness and domesticity <sup>d</sup> possibly publish this greatest of wrongs in the sacred scriptures, for what could be a greater wrong than for brother to be lorded over by brother? Such a thing it is not right either to think or to say. But, as I said a little earlier, he believes that it is more profitable for the foolish man <sup>e</sup> not to be free but rather to have wisdom as a mistress, <sup>f</sup> in order that in the fashion of a good physician she may expel his fever and cure the passions and diseases in his miserable and unhappy life. <sup>g</sup> But those who are wont to allegorize <sup>h</sup> may say that the brothers are parts of the soul, the rational and irrational <sup>i</sup> and that the rational ranks above and is appointed over and is lord of the irrational by the law of a more righteous nature. <sup>j</sup> And so long as the former rules, the latter is in a good way of life. <sup>k</sup> But if it becomes indignant and withdraws as if from

<sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ γίνου κύριος τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου. Philo omits the rest of the sentence καὶ προσκυνήσουσίν σε οἱ υἱοὶ τοῦ πατρὸς σου (Heb. "of thy mother").

<sup>b</sup> ἰδιώτας, see above, QG iv. 216, 217.

<sup>c</sup> OL "proximum generis fratrem."

<sup>d</sup> διδάσκαλος φιλανθρωπίας καὶ οἰκειότητος, i.e. Moses.

<sup>e</sup> τὸν ἄφρονα, here symbolized by Esau.

<sup>f</sup> ὡς κυρίαν ἔχειν τὴν σοφίαν. OL renders freely, "dominum studiosum et prudentem virum."

<sup>g</sup> ἐν τῷ ταλαιπῶρῳ καὶ κακοδαίμονι βίῳ αὐτοῦ. OL seems to run this clause into the following sentence, rendering, "qui eum tamquam medicus bonus ut his arceat infirmitates curando reficiat. Caeteras etiam animae anxietates sanare quamvis solent asseverare nonnulli, etc."

<sup>h</sup> ἀλληγορεῖν.

<sup>i</sup> μέρη τῆς ψυχῆς, τὸ μὲν λογικόν, τὸ δὲ ἄλογον.

<sup>j</sup> OL, construing the Greek differently from the Arm. translator, renders, "per justissimam legis naturam."

<sup>k</sup> OL "melior enim (l. "meliores") statum obtinebit."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

(another's) drunkenness, (the latter) will suffer the evils of anarchy.<sup>a</sup> For what (else) can be expected if the pilot does not steer the ship, or the charioteer does not drive the yoked horses, or the army commander does not lead his army, or the steward does not rule the household, or the statesman <sup>b</sup> the state? Are not these things, therefore, to be deprecated, and should one not prayerfully ask that they may not happen? <sup>c</sup> Of all these the worst and most terrible is anarchy in the soul.<sup>d</sup>

219. (Gen. xxvii. 29d) What is the meaning of the words, "He who curses thee is cursed,<sup>e</sup> and he who blesses is blessed <sup>f</sup> " <sup>g</sup> ?

This expresses a very natural law and opinion,<sup>h</sup> for he who curses the virtuous and wise man <sup>i</sup> first curses himself, while he who praises him similarly praises himself together with him. For, indeed, he who hates good men is himself hated,<sup>j</sup> while he who loves them is at once <sup>k</sup> loved. For (Scripture) does not say that he who curses will incur <sup>l</sup> a curse, and he who blesses (will obtain) blessings but that the former is cursed by himself, and the latter, on the other hand, is praised.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἀναρχίας. OL renders the sentence freely, "porro si indignatur ut populi rebellantis callositas absente magisterio sentiat poenas seiores." <sup>b</sup> ὁ οἰκονομικός . . . ὁ πολιτικός.

<sup>c</sup> OL omits this clause.

<sup>d</sup> OL "quorum omnium peior est anima sine rectore."

<sup>e</sup> OL "maledictus erit."

<sup>f</sup> OL "benedictionibus repleatur."

<sup>g</sup> LXX ὁ καταρώμενός σε ἐπικατάρατος, ὁ δὲ εὐλογῶν σε εὐλογημένος (Heb. has the subjects in the plural, the predicates in the singular number).

<sup>h</sup> OL "naturale arbitrium promit."

<sup>i</sup> τὸν ἀστέϊον (or σπουδαῖον) καὶ σοφόν: OL "prudentem."

<sup>j</sup> OL reads differently "revera enim laus est benivolis quod ab odiosis odiuntur."

<sup>k</sup> OL "semper."

<sup>l</sup> OL "meretur."

<sup>m</sup> OL "sed quod is semel maledictus est, ut est alter similiter laudabilis."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

220. (Gen. xxvii. 30) What is the meaning of the words, "When Jacob went out from the presence <sup>a</sup> of his father, Esau his brother came " <sup>b</sup> ?

The literal text <sup>c</sup> admits no doubt or ambiguity, for it is very significant <sup>d</sup> and very apt. <sup>e</sup> For when one (of two) contraries goes out, the other follows it in. What I mean is something like this. <sup>f</sup> When poverty and ignominy go out, riches and honour follow them in. And when suffering and infirmity go away, health and strength come in after them. And in the same way, when continence and reason <sup>g</sup> go away, which have subjugated and driven out the passions by their attack, <sup>h</sup> there follows them unrestraint, (which is) both the seducer and protagonist of the passions. <sup>i</sup> And not distant or long is the interval which separates them but, as (Scripture) itself says, "while <sup>j</sup> he went out," (that is) after a certain (small) portion of time. <sup>k</sup> For the good and the bad are related to each other as contraries

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "face."

<sup>b</sup> Philo abbreviates LXX, which reads καὶ ἐγένετο μετὰ τὸ παύσασθαι Ἰσαὰκ εὐλογοῦντα τὸν Ἰακώβ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτοῦ (Heb. omits "his son"), καὶ ἐγένετο ὡς (v.l. ὅσον, see below) ἐξῆλθεν Ἰακώβ ἀπὸ προσώπου Ἰσαὰκ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ Ἡσαὺ ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ ἦλθεν ἀπὸ τῆς θήρας αὐτοῦ. In his brief comment on this verse in De Ebrietate 9 Philo uses slightly different wording, ἐγένετο ὅσον ἐξῆλθεν Ἰακώβ, ἦκεν Ἡσαὺ ὁ ἀδελφὸς αὐτοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher, choosing the alternative meaning of Arm. nšanakān, which renders both σημαντικός and συμβολικός, translates, "valde manifesta per symbolum."

<sup>e</sup> OL "auspicia naturalissima et aptissimi tituli dicentur."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher "exempli gratia": OL "ut puta."

<sup>g</sup> ἐγκρατείας καὶ λόγου: OL "continentiae verbo."

<sup>h</sup> OL condenses, "excervicante contumaces."

<sup>i</sup> OL "vitiurum intemperantia decurrit cum suo defensore et propugnatore."

<sup>j</sup> Here Philo read ὅσον in the LXX (see above, note b), as in De Ebrietate 9.

<sup>k</sup> OL "sed ad quantum duxerit momentum quantum exierit."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

by mutual observance,<sup>a</sup> just as one (runner) strives to meet the next one at the starting-point.<sup>b</sup> For not even for a little while is the soul deserted <sup>c</sup> nor does it remain altogether empty even for a short time.<sup>d</sup> For the soul is a place of necessity <sup>e</sup> and is always filled with contraries and is densely <sup>f</sup> occupied by inhabitants.<sup>g</sup>

221. (Gen. xxvii. 31a) What is the meaning of the words, "He too prepared food and brought it to his father" <sup>h</sup> ?

Do you see that the divine oracle <sup>i</sup> testifies for Jacob, saying <sup>j</sup> that he prepared food such as his father loved ? Not so in the case of this one,<sup>k</sup> but it remains silent about a name being pleasing.<sup>l</sup> And may this not be right ? <sup>m</sup> For even though wicked men contrive to do things similar and equal to those done by virtuous men,<sup>n</sup> they are none the less deserving of hatred because they do them with

<sup>a</sup> OL "tantum ad invicem sibi praestolatur arte quadam observatissima."

<sup>b</sup> τῶ ἀφετηρίῳ, i.e. in a relay race : Aucher "quasi vero ex loco cursus in hippodromo se invicem obviassent." OL omits the clause.

<sup>c</sup> ἔρημος (rendered by two Arm. adjectives) ἢ ψυχῆ.

<sup>d</sup> OL renders the sentence more briefly, "ne punctum temporis cessant animae vacuitatem relinquere."

<sup>e</sup> τόπος ἀνάγκης (rendered by two Arm. nouns).

<sup>f</sup> πυκνῶς (rendered by two Arm. adverbs).

<sup>g</sup> OL renders the sentence obscurely, "necesse enim capacem contrarietatem plenam esse supervenientium habitaturum" (l. "haborum").

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ ἐποίησεν καὶ αὐτὸς ἐδέσματα καὶ προσήνεγκεν τῷ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ.

<sup>i</sup> ὁ θεῖος χρησμός.

<sup>j</sup> See Rebekah's speech in Gen. xxvii. 9 (cf. QG iv. 200).

<sup>k</sup> i.e. Esau.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "sed tacetur nomen complacentiae" : OL "licet siletur de nomine placentis." Whatever the original, it must have meant that nothing was said (in Scripture) about Esau's food being pleasing to Isaac.

<sup>m</sup> OL omits this question.

<sup>n</sup> τῶν σπονδαίων.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

impure minds.<sup>a</sup> For who does not know that sophists do the same things as wise men,<sup>b</sup> and perhaps still more effectively, since they are trained and exercised in words.<sup>c</sup> But their (speech) seems contrary and opposed (to that of the wise) and unmelodious and loathsome. And no grace blossoms over them because of the interpreters' indiscipline in character and way of life.<sup>d</sup> But acceptable and pleasant and sweet, as though flowing from a sweet spring, (are the words proceeding) from integrity.<sup>e</sup>

222. (Gen. xxvii. 31b) Why does he say, "Let my father arise and eat of the venison of his son" <sup>f</sup>?

Dissimilar are the forms of address <sup>g</sup> of this (son) and of the former one.<sup>h</sup> For the latter, on entering, properly called (Isaac) by his right name, saying, "Father,"<sup>i</sup> but this one says unfamiliarly <sup>i</sup> and savagely, as though from one (stranger) to another, "Let my father arise and eat." Wherefore unwillingly, being compelled by natural necessity,<sup>j</sup> he utters the truth that the virtuous and wise son had placed the food before the venison of the foolish and stupid son.<sup>k</sup> For that which had been caught as game would perhaps become tame, but that which had been set

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "non ex mundis moribus": OL "non puro consilio."

<sup>b</sup> σοφισταί . . . σοφοῖς: OL "commentatores velle sapientium similes titulos prosequi."

<sup>c</sup> λόγοις: OL "verborum arte."

<sup>d</sup> τῶν ἐρμηνέων τὴν ἀπαιδευσίαν ἤθεσι καὶ βίῳ.

<sup>e</sup> ἐκ καλοκάγαθίας.

<sup>f</sup> LXX Ἀναστήτω ὁ πατήρ μου καὶ φαγέτω τῆς θήρας τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτοῦ. Philo does not comment on the rest of the verse, ὅπως εὐλογήσῃ με ἢ ψυχὴ σου.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "vociferationes": OL "sententia."

<sup>h</sup> i.e. of Jacob who had appeared earlier.

<sup>i</sup> ἀνοικείως.

<sup>j</sup> φυσικῇ ἀνάγκῃ.

<sup>k</sup> The meaning is not altogether clear. Aucher renders, "quod insipientis filii venatum sapiens ille proponit in cibum": OL has only "quoniam copiosam filii venationem."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

free and made subject to savage and bestial passion would be incurable.<sup>a</sup>

223. (Gen. xxvii. 32a) Why, when Isaac asks, "Who art thou?"<sup>b</sup> does he not add,<sup>c</sup> "Son," as he had said to the former one?<sup>d</sup>

These are the pleasant and desirable spices with which the wonderful Logos<sup>e</sup> spices holy and divine Scripture.<sup>f</sup> And it confutes and confounds the foolish man, since he is alien in character and is unable to show any kinship<sup>g</sup> to or any part of that which is worthy of zeal and virtue.<sup>h</sup>

224. (Gen. xxvii. 32b-33a) Why, when Esau said, "I am thy first-born son," did his father start up with a very great withdrawal<sup>i</sup>?

By adding the "very" (Scripture) shows the pitiable wretchedness of him from whom (Isaac) removed himself

<sup>a</sup> OL renders defectively, "scilicet mansuetorum, alioquin gurgite ferocitatis detento, insanabilis languor proveniet."

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ Ἰσαὰκ ὁ πατὴρ αὐτοῦ, Τίς εἶ σύ;

<sup>c</sup> OL "unum (l. "non"?) adjecit."

<sup>d</sup> i.e. to Jacob, in Gen. xxvii. 20-21 (cf. QG iv. 207, 209).

<sup>e</sup> ὁ θαυμάσιος λόγος.

<sup>f</sup> OL renders the sentence more freely, "hae sunt suavitates quas divina scriptura condere dignatur, divino sermone temperatus."

<sup>g</sup> συγγένειαν.

<sup>h</sup> σπουδῆς καὶ ἀρετῆς. OL renders the sentence freely, "corripit enim et tacere monet insipientem alienantem se a recta sententia, nullo liberalitatis indicio institutorum nec aliquo digno sobrietatis titulo."

<sup>i</sup> OL "excessu (l. "excessu") mentis detentus est pater valde vehementer" (see next note).

<sup>j</sup> LXX ὁ δὲ εἶπεν, Ἐγὼ εἶμι ὁ υἱός σου ὁ πρωτότοκος Ἡσαῦ. ἐξέστη δὲ Ἰσαὰκ ἑκστασιν μεγάλην σφόδρα (Heb. "was fearful with a great fear": Arm. O.T. "was astonished with very great astonishment").

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and made an additional withdrawal,<sup>a</sup> for he was insolent and disobedient. In the first place, he dared to present himself as a son although, as a wicked man, he was not to be reckoned in the rank of an attendant servant.<sup>b</sup> And in the second place, (he called himself) "first-born son," although a little while before the wretch had sold his birth-right for a little sensual pleasure.<sup>c</sup> "For," he says, "these two things will properly be decreed and assigned only to the former one,<sup>d</sup> (namely) that he should be called by both names, that of 'son' and that of 'first-born,' as one who has been marked by distinction.<sup>e</sup> But to thee shall leave and authority not be given to say similar and identical things in arrogance, pride and insolence, for thou art <sup>f</sup> false to the truth."<sup>g</sup>

225. (Gen. xxvii. 33b) What is the meaning of the words, "I ate of all before thou camest" <sup>h</sup>?

The literal meaning <sup>i</sup> is apparent. But as for the deeper

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders differently, "nimiam cum commiseratione miseriam indicat ejus, a quo recessionem perfectae renuntiationis facit": OL "incremento sermonis extenso, lectio notum fecit quod ultra modum compunctus erat. Indignatur namque, etc."

<sup>b</sup> OL "ne quidem famuli ordinem promerendo."

<sup>c</sup> ἡδονῆς.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. Jacob.

<sup>e</sup> Or "choice"—Arm. antrout'iun = διαίρεσις and ἐκλογή: Aucher "probitate (vel electione)": OL renders the sentence defectively, "haec utraque sancire libet (v.l. "licebit") prophetam secundum merita pignorum, quaeritentem quantum et filius et primogenitus probaretur."

<sup>f</sup> Variant "they are."

<sup>g</sup> OL condenses the sentence, "alter vero ne permittitur similia postulare, pro petulantia et superbia sauciente veritatem."

<sup>h</sup> Philo abbreviates vs. 33b, which reads καὶ εἶπεν, Τίς οὖν ὁ θηρεύσας μοι θήραν καὶ εἰσενέγκας μοι, καὶ ἔφαγον ἀπὸ πάντων πρὸ τοῦ σε εἰσελθεῖν. The rest of the verse is quoted in the following section. Philo quotes the entire verse in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 251 without allegorical comment.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

meaning,<sup>a</sup> the soul of the virtuous man<sup>b</sup> enjoys all good things before there enters it the thought which is alienated from virtue.<sup>c</sup> For this, when it follows and comes in, is like a drunken ribald fellow<sup>d</sup> who upsets and disturbs a well-behaved and orderly gathering of drinkers of wine.<sup>e</sup>

226. (Gen. xxvii. 33c) What is the meaning of the words, "I blessed him, and he shall be blessed" <sup>f</sup>?

That "he who performs what lies before him<sup>g</sup> carries off that which lies in the future" is properly and appropriately<sup>h</sup> said concerning that which is now taking place.<sup>i</sup> For one<sup>j</sup> is undisciplined and untamed and is slow and hesitant toward all that is right and good.<sup>k</sup> But the other, having all discipline<sup>l</sup> in himself, is zealous and keen, and considers it a disgrace when someone makes more progress<sup>m</sup> than he himself. Wherefore he further seals this (attitude) and confirms the blessing for him, being vexed and displeased by the appearance of the unlearned man.<sup>n</sup> Such

<sup>a</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ τοῦ σπουδαίου ψυχῆ.

<sup>c</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>d</sup> εὐτράπελος vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> OL "vice vinolenti praeconis placidum scholae convivium conturbat."

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ἠὐλόγησα αὐτόν, καὶ εὐλογημένος ἔστω (v.l. ἔσται).

<sup>g</sup> τὸ προκείμενον vid.

<sup>h</sup> κυρίως.

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. sentence is obscure, as Aucher remarks in a footnote to his rendering, "qui jam opus peragit futuri praesefert perfectionem, vere proprie dictum est de nunc factis": OL "sic proverbium cujusdam legimus dicentis, Qui antecessu egerit venturi praemia portando habet (v.l. "abit"). Hic proprie dicitur de his qui modo consistunt."

<sup>j</sup> Of the two brothers, i.e. Esau.

<sup>k</sup> OL "inertissimus enim ille per omnia justa et optima procrastinando, et tardus et hebes revelatur."

<sup>l</sup> παιδείαν.

<sup>m</sup> προκόπτειν.

<sup>n</sup> τοῦ ἀμαθοῦς. OL renders differently, "cujus gratia confirmat benedictiones ejus adversus praesumptionem inertis, spernendo difficultatem."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

is the way things are wont to be. For so long as nothing terrible or evil has crept in, whether as deed or word, the mind <sup>a</sup> enjoys a blessing first of all and sets forth on the open royal highway. <sup>b</sup> But when some (evil) <sup>c</sup> comes along into it, the entire soul <sup>d</sup> is moved and upset and agitated, and its evil-hating passion <sup>e</sup> swells up, <sup>f</sup> so that, as though in envy, it further opposes benevolence in a firmer state of mind which thereafter remains the same. <sup>g</sup>

*227. (Gen. xxvii. 34) Why, when Esau heard (this), did he cry out in a loud voice and very bitterly, and say, " Bless me also, father " <sup>h</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>i</sup> is somewhat as follows. He is vexed and grieved <sup>j</sup> not so much because he failed to obtain the blessings as because his brother was thought worthy

<sup>a</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν λεωφόρον ὁδόν. OL renders the latter part of the sentence somewhat differently, " procedentibus benedictionibus paratur spaciosissima via ad proficiscendum."

<sup>c</sup> The context requires " evil " or the like to be supplied, as Aucher does : OL " eo tamen molestante."

<sup>d</sup> ψυχῆ : Aucher " animus " : OL " anima."

<sup>e</sup> τὸ μισοπύνηρον αὐτῆς πάθος.

<sup>f</sup> Syntax and meaning not clear. Aucher renders less literally, " et affectus ejus infensus contra malum intumens indignatur." OL has merely " pro odio malignitatis."

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. is very obscure. Aucher renders, " quasi vero prae invidia contrarium se objiciat benevolentiae suae ex illa comprobatione fortiori quae et deinceps in illo statu permanet " : OL " lacessitur etiam zelo plus exhortante justitia ad benedicendum pro infirmiori (v.l. " firmiori ") arbitrio ut etiam in futuro ibidem ordo perseveret."

<sup>h</sup> LXX ἐγένετο δὲ ἤνικα ἤκουσεν Ἡσαὺ τὰ ῥήματα Ἰσαὰκ (v.l. and Heb. omit " Isaac ") τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ, ἀνεβόησεν Ἡσαὺ φωνὴν μεγάλην καὶ πικρὰν σφόδρα καὶ εἶπεν, Εὐλόγησον δὴ καμέ, πάτερ.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> The Greek fragments (see next note) have only one verb.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

(of them).<sup>a</sup> For he was envious and jealous,<sup>b</sup> and thought that the other's loss was of more concern and interest than his own profit.<sup>c</sup> For this is shown by his crying "aloud and bitterly" and his saying further, "Bless me also."<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> he is ignorant and wanders to and fro and is treacherous and self-contradictory and quarrelsome in deeds,<sup>f</sup> thoughts and words.<sup>g</sup> And so you see that at one and the same time he desires a blessing and is envious. And at the same time he confirms for him whom he envies the prophecy of the blessing.<sup>h</sup> For he who says "Bless also me" grants that the prayed-for blessing had rightly been given to the other. For that which confesses something in word but does not admit it in deed is a character-trait<sup>i</sup> rather than a man.<sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The Greek fragments (from Procopius, Catena Regia Inedita 1825 et al.) read almost identically οὐκ ἐπὶ τῷ μῆ τυχεῖν (v.l. adds φασί) τῶν εὐλογιῶν οὕτω δυσχεραίνει ὡς ἐπὶ τῷ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτῶν (v.l. αὐτοῦ) ἀξιοθῆναι. OL reads defectively "pro nec dum impetrata benedictione aspernatur pro dignis fratri meritis."

<sup>b</sup> The Greek fragments have only one adjective (see next note).

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek fragments, βασκανὸς γὰρ ὢν ἐπιμελέστερον προκρίνει (v.l. ἐπιμελεστέραν κρίνει) τῆς ἰδίας ὠφελείας τὴν ἐκείνου ζημίαν. OL renders inaccurately, "ut pote enim fascinator curatissimam iudicat plus suam utilitatem pro alterius detrimento."

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek fragments (which end with this sentence), ταῦτα γὰρ ἐμφαίνεται διὰ τοῦ μέγα καὶ πικρὸν ἐκβοῆσαι (v.l. ἀνοιμῶξαι) καὶ ἐπιλέγειν, "Εὐλόγησον δὲ (v.l. δὴ) καμέ, πάτερ": OL "adeo magna et amara exclamatio innotuit, eo dicente: Benedic utique etiam me pater."<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> Reading, with Aucher, Arm. gorcovk' instead of grovk' (= "writings"): so too OL (see next note).

<sup>g</sup> OL "dicetur et altero sensu versutia inducti ex utroque dolosa et sibimet adversa in negociis, sentiis, verbis."

<sup>h</sup> Exact meaning of the last two nouns is uncertain. Aucher renders, "confirmat orationem voto factam": OL "in viso confirmat vota."<sup>i</sup> τρόπος vel sim.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. Esau is here the symbol of an attitude rather than an

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

*228. (Gen. xxvii. 35) Why does he reply in this way, "Thy brother coming with deceit received thy blessing" <sup>a</sup>?

Now if he received it through deceit, perhaps someone may say that he is not praiseworthy; how, then, can he <sup>b</sup> also say, "He shall be blessed" <sup>c</sup>? But he seems to indicate by these statements that not every deceit is blameworthy. <sup>d</sup> Thus it is that night-watchers are unable to seize and overcome robbers without deceit, and army commanders (to defeat) the enemy in war; but by ambushing them they seem to achieve their end. <sup>e</sup> And those (acts) which are called stratagems have a similar principle, and so do the contests of athletes, for in these deceit and trickery are considered honourable, and those who by trickery overcome their adversaries are thought worthy of prizes and wreaths. <sup>f</sup> So that no falsehood and blame <sup>g</sup> attach to "with deceit" but rather praise, as it is equihistorical person. OL renders unintelligibly, "quae tamen ore tantummodo confitetur, rem autem ipsam sine compromisso subscripsit suis moribus satisfaciens."

<sup>a</sup> LXX εἶπεν δὲ αὐτῷ, Ἐλθὼν ὁ ἀδελφός σου μετὰ δόλου ἔλαβεν τὴν εὐλογίαν σου. Heb. reads less ambiguously "Thy brother came with deceit and received thy blessing."

<sup>b</sup> i.e. Isaac. Procopius has πῶς οὖν ἐπιφέρεις.

<sup>c</sup> See QG iv. 226 on Gen. xxvii 33c.

<sup>d</sup> So Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825, ἀλλ' ἔοικεν αἰνίττεσθαι διὰ τοῦ λεχθέντος ὅτι οὐ πᾶς δόλος ὑπαίτιός ἐστιν. Procopius reads more briefly αἰνίττεται τοίνυν ὡς οὐ πᾶς δόλος ὑπαίτιος.

<sup>e</sup> Similarly Cat. Reg. Ined., ἐπεὶ καὶ ληστὰς νυκτοφύλακες καὶ πολεμίους στρατηγοί, οὓς ἀδόλως συλλαβεῖν οὐκ ἔστιν, ἐνδρεύοντες κατορθοῦν δοκοῦσι. Aucher divides the Arm. sentences wrongly.

<sup>f</sup> So Cat. Reg. Ined., καὶ τὰ λεγόμενα στρατηγήματα τοιοῦτον λόγον ἔχει καὶ τὰ τῶν ἀθλητῶν ἀγωνίσματα· καὶ γὰρ ἐπὶ τούτων ἢ ἀπάτη γενόμενοι τίμιον καὶ οἱ δι' ἀπάτης περιγεγόμενοι τῶν ἀντιπάλων, βραβεῖων ἀξιοῦνται καὶ στεφάνων. Procopius reads more briefly τοιαῦτα γὰρ καὶ τὰ λεγόμενα στρατηγήματα, καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἀθλητῶν ὁμοίως οἱ μετὰ δόλου νικῶντες θαυμάζονται στεφανούμενοι.

<sup>g</sup> The two Arm. nouns probably reflect the single Greek noun διαβολή, as in Cat. Reg. Ined. (see next note).

GENESIS, BOOK IV

valent to "with art," for the virtuous man does nothing without art.<sup>a</sup>

229. (Gen. xxvii. 36) What is the meaning of what Esau says, "Rightly is his name called Jacob, for he has tripped me now for the second time. My birthright he took, and now he has taken my blessings"<sup>b</sup>?

Although he believes himself to be speaking the truth about both instances, he falsifies. For he<sup>c</sup> did not "take" either the one thing or the other<sup>d</sup> but kept hold<sup>e</sup> of both, (namely) the birthright and the blessing. For these are the private inheritance<sup>f</sup> of the continent<sup>g</sup> and disciplined man and of him who makes progress.<sup>h</sup> And if some foolish or stupid man seizes these for himself for the sake of appearing to be good and being thought (so) by the multitude, none the less, as though they belonged to another, does he either willingly reject them or else unwillingly disdain them.<sup>i</sup> Thus this is not false.<sup>j</sup> But what is added is

<sup>a</sup> Cat. Reg. Ined. ὥστε οὐ διαβολὴ τὸ "μετὰ δόλου" ἀλλ' ἐγκώμιον ἰσοδυναμοῦν τῷ "μετὰ τέχνης." οὐδὲν γὰρ ἀτέχνως πράττει ὁ σπουδαῖος. Procopius reads more briefly οἷς ἰσοδυναμεῖ τὸ "μετὰ δόλου" τῷ "μετὰ τέχνης." οὐδὲν δὲ ἀτέχνως ὁ σπουδαῖος ποιεῖ.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ εἶπεν, Δικαίως ἐκλήθη τὸ ὄνομα αὐτοῦ Ἰακώβ· ἐπτέρνικεν (Heb. way-ga'q'ebēnī, with a play on the name Ya'aqōb) γὰρ με ἤδη δεύτερον τοῦτο· τὰ τε πρωτοκεῖά μου εἴληφεν, καὶ νῦν εἴληφεν τὴν εὐλογίαν μου. In Leg. Al. iii. 191 Philo quotes the verse with a slight variation, reading τότε τὰ for τοῦτο· τὰ τε. His interpretation there is, in general, similar to that given here. <sup>c</sup> i.e. Jacob.

<sup>d</sup> OL "nihil enim tulit."

<sup>e</sup> The exact meaning of the Arm. compound verbal form i bac ehan is not clear: Aucher "retinuit": OL "recepit."

<sup>f</sup> ἢ ἰδία κληρονομία: OL "propriae sortes."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "religiosi."

<sup>h</sup> OL "certatoris jam et successibus meliorato (sic)."

<sup>i</sup> The text is obscure. OL renders, "nihilominus ut alienam aut ultro spernit aut invitus soluit."

<sup>j</sup> The text may be corrupt. OL renders, "et haec quidem nam (l. "non"?) mendose" (l. "mendosa").

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

wholly false and a lie, (namely) when he says, "And now he has taken my blessing." To this one might rightly reply,<sup>a</sup> "Not thy blessing, fellow,<sup>b</sup> has he taken, but one which is suitable to him. For the blessing (given) to thee takes its origin from the earth, but that (given) to him, from heaven. And thou wast inscribed among the slaves, he among the masters.<sup>c</sup> And thy hope is the sword and war, while to him peace is beloved, and (also) the hope of making peace.<sup>d</sup> Since, then, there are such great differences and distinctions between (you), how didst thou dare to say that he took thy blessing?—he who did not take any part of that which is his own."<sup>e</sup>

230. (Gen. xxvii. 36b-37) Why, when asked, "Why did not so great a blessing remain for me?," did the father reply,<sup>f</sup> "If<sup>g</sup> I made him thy lord and I made all his brothers servants, I supported him with threshed grain and trees.<sup>h</sup> But for thee, who hast angered me,<sup>i</sup> what shall I do, O son?"<sup>j</sup>

Virtually<sup>k</sup> he says, "Not one of the hoped for things

<sup>a</sup> OL "ego respondebo."

<sup>b</sup> ὁ οὗτος, as in the rough parallel, Leg. All. iii. 192.

<sup>c</sup> δούλοις . . . δεσπόταις.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "peace-making hope." OL renders, "spes vero pacis merito funditur."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "qui nullam illiusmodi tui partem accepit": OL "cujus nulla portio tibi competit."

<sup>f</sup> OL "non dereliquisti mihi benedictionem pater? Respondit," etc. See LXX below.

<sup>g</sup> See below on LXX.

<sup>h</sup> OL "frumento et vino," so LXX, see below.

<sup>i</sup> This relative clause is lacking in OL and Scripture.

<sup>j</sup> LXX καὶ εἶπεν Ἡσαὺ τῷ πατρὶ αὐτοῦ, Οὐχ ὑπελείπου μοι εὐλογίαν πάτερ; ἀποκριθεὶς δὲ Ἰσαὰκ εἶπεν τῷ Ἡσαὺ, Εἰ (Heb. hen here = "behold" rather than "if") κύριον αὐτὸν ἐποίησα σου, καὶ πάντα τοὺς ἀδελφούς αὐτοῦ ἐποίησα αὐτοῦ (v.l. αὐτῶ) οἰκέτας, σίτω καὶ οἴνω ἐστήρισα αὐτόν· σοὶ δὲ τί ποιήσω, τέκνον;

<sup>k</sup> δυνάμει: OL "in ipsa substantia": Aucher "virtute (sive, in intellectu)."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

which it is now right for the good man to put away and acquire as his own property <sup>a</sup> have I left for thee." <sup>b</sup> For by nature <sup>c</sup> the good man is a ruler and lord and rich, while the foolish man is poor and a servant and beggar. But it is proper to examine and inquire what men he speaks of as being brothers of Jacob, for there was (only) one, and he a twin. But he seems to invite us to an allegory, <sup>d</sup> and almost openly invites us. For the present passage is not about men but about types of soul, <sup>e</sup> which consist of several irrational parts <sup>f</sup> (such as) sight, hearing, taste, smell and touch, and desires and sensual pleasures and fear and grief. <sup>g</sup> For the passions <sup>h</sup> are kin and brothers of the soul. But when he calls him "son," he does not testify to his genetic descent as a son <sup>i</sup> but to the silliness of a child.

231. (Gen. xxvii. 38) Why does he say, "Is there one blessing (left) to thee, father? Bless me too, father" <sup>j</sup>?

Even the perfectly untamed and undisciplined man <sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἴδιον.

<sup>b</sup> Syntax and meaning not wholly clear. Aucher renders somewhat differently, "nec unum ex votis orationis, quae conveniebat (tibi) nunc colligere et acquirere ut bonum proprium (in footnote he adds, "sed forte etiam bono"), reservavi tibi." OL reads unintelligibly "nullum votorum titulum quem dignum est carpere vere bonum pater nisi (v.l. "nisi") enim tibi." <sup>c</sup> φύσει.

<sup>d</sup> ἐπ' ἀλληγορίαν παρακαλεῖν, cf. De Opif. Mundi 157.

<sup>e</sup> περὶ τρόπων (vel sim.) ψυχῶν: Aucher "de symbolis animarum": OL "de moribus animae."

<sup>f</sup> ἀλόγων μερῶν: OL "per partes animae."

<sup>g</sup> ἐπιθυμιῶν καὶ ἡδονῶν καὶ φόβον καὶ λύπης. <sup>h</sup> τὰ πάθη.

<sup>i</sup> OL "non ut filio testimonium parentelae perhibeat."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher brackets the word for "father" in the second sentence, which is missing in OL as well. In De Mut. Nom. 230 Philo differs slightly from LXX in quoting the verse as Μη εὐλογία σοι μία (LXX μία σοι) ἐστὶ, πάτερ; εὐλόγησον (LXX + δὴ) καμέ, πάτερ.

<sup>k</sup> OL "maximus inertiarum cultor": Aucher "perquam ineruditus."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

knows that the sources of divine grace are abundant <sup>a</sup> and that the mind and thoughts <sup>b</sup> of the virtuous man <sup>c</sup> overflow with good like a source. For this reason he is condemned <sup>d</sup> even more (severely) because in spite of seeing that which is praiseworthy, he welcomes, chooses and accepts for himself that which is blameworthy and reprehensible. <sup>e</sup> For pardon is (to be granted) to a blind person who stumbles <sup>f</sup> and falls over something, but one would rightly condemn a keen-sighted man who does not avoid or keep away from or watch out for paths that are slippery or, to speak more properly, <sup>g</sup> untrodden paths. <sup>h</sup> But another thing must be said, <sup>i</sup> (namely) that there is one blessing and there are also many—one in genus and many in species, <sup>j</sup> in accordance with differences of circumstances. <sup>k</sup>

232. (Gen. xxvii. 38) What is the meaning of the words, "And Isaac was dismayed, and Esau cried out in a loud <sup>l</sup> voice and wept" <sup>m</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> τῶν θείων χαρίτων ἄφθονοί εἰσιν αἱ πηγαί.

<sup>b</sup> The Arn. lit. = νοῦς (or διάνοια) λογισμῶν.

<sup>c</sup> τοῦ σπουδαίου or ἀστείου: Aucher "sapientis": OL "prudens."

<sup>d</sup> κατακρίνεται: OL "efficitur conditionalis."

<sup>e</sup> OL renders defectively, "quoniam videndo laudabilia, amabilia, vituperabilia."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher, less accurately, "periclitanti": OL "offendenti."

<sup>g</sup> κυριώτερον εἰπεῖν.

<sup>h</sup> OL condenses greatly, "tanti autem acuminis virum reprehendat quivis merito pro lapsis."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "porro alias dicendum erit": OL "proprie tamen interpretatur" (v.l. "interfatur").

<sup>j</sup> γένει μὲν . . . εἶδει δέ: OL "secundum genus . . . secundum species."

<sup>k</sup> κατὰ τὰς τῶν συμβεβηκότων διαφορὰς vel sim.: Aucher "juxta illorum diversitatem qui (sic) eam consequuntur": OL "pro differentia interponendorum." <sup>l</sup> OL omits "loud."

<sup>m</sup> Most LXX MSS. lack this sentence but a few read κατανυχθέντος δὲ Ἰσαάκ, ἀνεβόησεν φωνήν (v.l. φωνῇ μεγάλῃ) Ἠσαὺ καὶ ἔκλαυσεν. Heb. has only "And Esau lifted up his voice and wept."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

He was dismayed <sup>a</sup> not because of his old age, for he lived thereafter over fifty years more, but because the untamed and undisciplined man possessed an understanding <sup>b</sup> of good and worthy thoughts <sup>c</sup> but made the opposite use of them. <sup>d</sup> And that he assumed some appearance of virtue <sup>e</sup> is clearly attested by the fact that he desired a blessing <sup>f</sup> —not from someone or other but from a man beloved of God. <sup>g</sup> And that he knew the wealth of blessings to be abundant (is clear) from his saying, <sup>h</sup> “Is there one blessing (left) to thee, father?” And so, when the wise man <sup>i</sup> sees that the untaught man receives nothing more <sup>j</sup> of all these after so many things have happened, <sup>k</sup> he is, as it were, wounded and grieved at (the other’s) indiscipline of character. <sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher, choosing another meaning of Arm. zljānam, renders, “poenituit se”: OL “compunctum.”

<sup>b</sup> Prob. διάνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> λογισμῶν.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, “ut ineruditus repispiscens bonum aggrediretur consilium et in usum utilem verteret contraria,” adding in a footnote “vel, fortasse melius ita: propterea quod ineruditus habens intellectionem bonorum usurpabat contraria”: OL “quod tam inertissimus novit optimarum rerum merita, utitur autem illis in adversis.”

<sup>e</sup> Arm. lit. = ἀρετῶν: Aucher less literally renders, “sapientis”: OL “meliorum.”

<sup>f</sup> Arm. alot = both εὐχῆ (vel sim.) and εὐλογία: Aucher “benedictionem”: OL “optibilia.”

<sup>g</sup> Or “loving God”—Arm. astouacasēr = both θεοφιλῆς and φιλόθεος: Aucher “viro Deum amantissimo (sic)”: OL “vero (l. “viro”) amabili deo.”

<sup>h</sup> OL “scit bene nunc adventibilem esse thesaurum, dicendo.”

<sup>i</sup> The Arm. = ὁ ἀστεῖος (καὶ) σοφός: OL “strenuus,” see QG iv. 233 for a different OL rendering of presumably the same Greek original. <sup>j</sup> One ms. omits “more.”

<sup>k</sup> OL “inductum (v.l. “indutum”: l. “indoctum”) haec omnia prosequentem et in nullo prudentiarum conspirantem.”

<sup>l</sup> δι’ ἀπαιδευσίαν τρόπων (or ἡθῶν): Aucher renders more freely, “cruciaturo animo ob ejus voluntariam ineruditionem”: OL “sauciaturo non leviter pro spontanea ejus imprudentia” (OL here adds several lines of comment on various Scriptural meanings of “compunctum”).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

233. (Gen. xxvii. 39) Why, after Esau cried aloud and wept, did his father begin to bless him ?

Perhaps someone may say that seeing his tears, (his father) was moved to pity.<sup>a</sup> But whoever says this is in error. For the wise man<sup>b</sup> feels pity for all<sup>c</sup> but prays (only) for the deserving. For the deserving are the unfortunate, and not those who do themselves a wrong.<sup>d</sup> And so, it was not pity that aroused<sup>e</sup> the invoker of blessings<sup>f</sup> but the belief in (the other's) repentance (and turning) toward the better.<sup>g</sup> For he saw him weeping and shedding tears, and he believed, as was natural, that he was groaning and lamenting and bewailing his own unhappy life<sup>h</sup> and his indecent ways. Similar to this was the way in which (God) had pity on those whose souls were afflicted in Egypt —(namely, those of) Israel, a name (meaning) "one who sees."<sup>i</sup> And by groaning and lamenting and crying aloud with his voice no more than in his thoughts,<sup>j</sup> he attained

<sup>a</sup> OL amplifies in rendering, "lachrymas intuentem animam passum pio dolore patrem pro filio."

<sup>b</sup> Here, as in the preceding section, the Arm. = ὁ ἀσπείτος (καὶ) σοφός: OL "prudens." <sup>c</sup> OL omits "for all."

<sup>d</sup> OL renders more freely, "digni sunt miseri vel infelices, non superbi vel facinorosi."

<sup>e</sup> OL "novit," an obvious scribal error for "movit."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "the one praying" or "the suppliant": Aucher "orantem": OL "obtuentem" (l. "optantem"?).

<sup>g</sup> μετάνοιαν πρὸς τὰ κρείττονα.

<sup>h</sup> OL "pro suavitate infelicissima, felicitate." Here "suavitate" is an obvious scribal error for "sua vita" but the origin of "felicitate" is not clear. OL lacks the final phrase.

<sup>i</sup> The etymology of the name "Israel" as "one who sees (God)" is frequently given by Philo, but the syntax and meaning of this sentence are far from clear. Aucher, who comments in a footnote on its obscurity, renders, "huic similiter et in Aegypto cruciante animum suum ille qui naturae videns nomine Israel supplex erat": OL "simile hujus patitur deprimentia Aegypti anima, et Israel mentis intuitu stibrium (sic)."

<sup>j</sup> OL "non regibili voce sed intelligibili."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

to the salvation <sup>a</sup> of God, Who calls distress in difficult matters <sup>b</sup> “appeal” and “invocation” and “petition.” <sup>c</sup> For He makes allowances, as is necessary for benevolence, and is indulgent to those who complain.<sup>d</sup>

234. (Gen. xxvii. 39) Why does he begin the blessing as follows, “Behold, from the fatness of the earth shall be thy dwelling, and from the dews of heaven from above” <sup>e</sup> ?

Do you see that it is by one who considers earthly things superior to heavenly things that such a mode (of speech) is introduced ? <sup>f</sup> But let all thanks be given to a gracious and beneficent one <sup>g</sup> who does not permit the mind <sup>h</sup> to be emptied and bereft of an excellent and most divine form <sup>i</sup> when it descends into an earthly body and is burned by the necessities and flames of desire,<sup>j</sup> for these are a true Tartarus,<sup>k</sup> but he permits it to spread its wings <sup>l</sup> sometimes and to behold heaven above and to taste (sic) of that sight.<sup>m</sup> For there are some who through gluttony, lechery

<sup>a</sup> σωτηρίαν.

<sup>b</sup> The whole phrase prob. = στενοχωρίαν.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders this obscure clause similarly, “qui angustias rerum appellationem et preces vocat.” OL renders differently, “qui oportunas obsecrationes tacitis exclamationibus praevenit.”

<sup>d</sup> Aucher “pro necessario beneficio remissionem ac libertatem concedens invocantibus.” OL renders defectively, “pro beneficiis peccantium largiendo.”

<sup>e</sup> LXX Ἰδοὺ ἀπὸ τῆς πλοῦτητος τῆς γῆς ἔσται ἡ κατοίκησίς σου, καὶ ἀπὸ τῆς δρόσου τοῦ οὐρανοῦ ἄνωθεν.

<sup>f</sup> τοιοῦτος τρόπος εἰσάγεται vel sim. : Aucher “talīs modus intervenit” : OL “modus iste probatur.”

<sup>g</sup> It is not clear whether God or Isaac is meant.

<sup>h</sup> τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>i</sup> OL “a meliori et beatiori specie.”

<sup>j</sup> Aucher “vitiis flammisque comburi cupiditatum” : OL “in Acheronte et Pyriphlegethonte concupiscentiarum.”

<sup>k</sup> OL “hii (sic) sunt enim tartarei domini.”

<sup>l</sup> πτερύττεσθαι.

<sup>m</sup> OL “jam deitudinis degustare scintillas.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and over-indulgence<sup>a</sup> are always submerged and sunken,<sup>b</sup> being drowned in passion.<sup>c</sup> And these wicked and wretched men do not wish to raise themselves up.<sup>d</sup>

235. (Gen. xxvii. 40a) What is the meaning of the words, "By thy sword shalt thou live"<sup>e</sup>?

Most naturally<sup>f</sup> has he shown and declared that the life of the foolish man is warfare without peace or friendship<sup>g</sup> but that of the righteous man<sup>h</sup> is deep peace.<sup>i</sup> For the latter rejoices in justice and security and rectitude,<sup>j</sup> while the former (rejoices) in strife and avarice,<sup>k</sup> thinking it the part of zeal to do wrong and thereby to overreach (another).<sup>l</sup> But peace and wrath<sup>m</sup> are enemies to one another.<sup>n</sup> And such things are fitting and proper to the dead, whereas the others are for the living. Among those (dead) I should call him thrice (wretched),<sup>o</sup> not once

<sup>a</sup> OL renders more briefly, "ex impuni luxuria."

<sup>b</sup> καταποντοῦνται καὶ καταδύονται, as in De Agricultura 89 : OL "diluvium passi."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "cupiditatibus dediti."

<sup>d</sup> OL renders more briefly, "nequaquam se exinde erigentes."

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ ἐπὶ τῇ μαχαίρῃ σου ζήσῃ. Philo allegorizes the phrase similarly in De Congressu 176.

<sup>f</sup> φυσικώτατα : OL "quam natus aliter" (l. "naturaliter").

<sup>g</sup> OL "insipientis fortunam praelium esse impraedicabile."

<sup>h</sup> τοῦ δικαίου.

<sup>i</sup> OL "justi vero per (l. "pax") altissima."

<sup>j</sup> δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἀσφαλεία καὶ κατορθώσει vel sim. : OL "segregatione (l. "securitate"?) et constantia."

<sup>k</sup> πλεονεξία.

<sup>l</sup> OL "quemlibet pati injuriam et facere."

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "heat"; evidently the Arm. translator read θερμός instead of θυμός.

<sup>n</sup> The syntax of this sentence is peculiar. Aucher renders, "pacem et iram (confundens) sibi invicem infensas." OL omits the sentence.

<sup>o</sup> The word "wretched" is supplied from OL, so, too, in Aucher's rendering.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

(wretched), who has to suffer death through sense-perception.<sup>a</sup>

236. (Gen. xxvii. 40b) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt serve thy brother" <sup>b</sup>?

This is a great good for the foolish man,<sup>c</sup> (namely) that he should not be left free,<sup>d</sup> for to be headstrong <sup>e</sup> is very harmful for such a man, whereas servitude is most profitable,<sup>f</sup> especially when he happens to get a master who is virtuous.<sup>g</sup> Similarly, a ship is saved when the sailors carry out the orders of the pilot and listen to him, and a household (is saved) when the slaves in service obey the master,<sup>h</sup> and a state <sup>i</sup> (is saved) when the inhabitants yield and submit to the magistrates,<sup>j</sup> and the young to their elders,<sup>k</sup> and the unskilled to the skilled and informed.<sup>l</sup>

237. (Gen. xxvii. 40c) What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> In this sentence, too, the syntax and meaning are not clear. Aucher renders the last clause, "qui cum sensu sustinet mortem": OL "qui eum (l. "cum") nimia (v.l. "minima") sensibilitate mortem sustineat."

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ τῷ ἀδελφῷ σου δουλεύσεις. Philo gives slightly different allegories of this passage in Leg. All. iii. 193-194 and De Congressu 176, and a generally similar allegory in Quod Omnis Probus 57.

<sup>c</sup> OL renders awkwardly, "hoc (v.l. "ob") jam proximo bono prosecutis contumaci dignum."

<sup>d</sup> ἐλεύθερον: OL "ne laxamentum capiat."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "elatio cervicis": OL "sine jugo degere."

<sup>f</sup> OL "dum servituti (l. "servitium") conditio utilissima."

<sup>g</sup> δεσπότου σπουδαίου: OL "studiosum dominum."

<sup>h</sup> OL renders somewhat differently, "et domus erigitur melius famulis vigilantibus pro imperio domini."

<sup>i</sup> πόλις: OL "urbs."

<sup>j</sup> OL renders more freely, "erit beatior si plebs subjecta sit administranti."

<sup>k</sup> OL "et juvenes veteranis debitum deferentes honorem."

<sup>l</sup> τοῖς ἐμπείροις καὶ ἐπιστήμοισιν: OL "felices (marg. "vides malim") (=?) et indocti sapientibus obsecundantes."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

“ And it shall be when thou wilt free thyself,<sup>a</sup> and <sup>b</sup> thou shalt cast off his yoke <sup>c</sup> from thy neck ” <sup>d</sup> ?

“ As for this good, which thou believest to be evil,” he says, “ (namely) servitude, it comes to thee not ineptly <sup>e</sup> nor by chance <sup>f</sup> but when thou wilt cast off pride and empty vaingloriousness by giving up arrogance, and when thou wilt loosen the yoke of the passions <sup>g</sup> from thee. For so long as thou art under their yoke and because of them arrogantly holdest thy head high, the wise man <sup>h</sup> will hold thee unworthy of servitude to him and to be free. For how will it be (possible) to move about and obtain freedom without him ? <sup>i</sup> But in place of one thou wilt acquire many masters and mistresses <sup>j</sup> hidden within thee, who will incessantly and uninterruptedly wear out thy soul.” <sup>k</sup>

238. (Gen. xxvii. 41b) <sup>l</sup> What is the meaning of the words, “ He said in his mind,<sup>m</sup> ‘ There will draw near the

<sup>a</sup> See the Scriptural text below.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. “ then ” (a Hebraism, retained in the LXX).

<sup>c</sup> OL “ jugum tuum.”

<sup>d</sup> LXX ἔσται δὲ ἡνίκα ἐὰν κατέλῃς (Heb. tārīd, prob. = “ move freely ” or the like: A.V. “ have the dominion ”) καὶ ἐκλύσεις (v.l. ἐκλύσης, see below) τὸν ζυγὸν αὐτοῦ ἀπὸ τοῦ τραχήλου σου. In Leg. All. iii. 193 (see above, QG iv. 236), Philo cites this passage in part, ἐκλύσης τὸν ζυγὸν ἀπὸ τοῦ τραχήλου σου, and allegorizes in much the same way as here.

<sup>e</sup> οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>f</sup> OL “ non quolibet casu advocavit tibi.”

<sup>g</sup> τῶν παθῶν: OL “ vitiorum.”

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. lit. = ὁ ἀστείος (καὶ) ὁ σοφός: OL “ prudens.”

<sup>i</sup> OL omits this sentence.

<sup>j</sup> OL omits “ and mistresses.”

<sup>k</sup> Aucher “ qui animam tuam immediate ac sine recessu deperdant ”: OL “ qui tuam animam incessanter exposcant.”

<sup>l</sup> Philo omits the first part of vs. 41 “ And Esau hated Jacob because of the blessing with which his father had blessed him.”

<sup>m</sup> OL “ in corde,” see the Scriptural text below.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

days of the mourning of my father,<sup>a</sup> and <sup>b</sup> I will kill Jacob, my brother' " " c ?

Wrath and ill-will are not superficial<sup>d</sup> but they appear from within from the heart, as the poet says.<sup>e</sup> For not to say (something) with the voice but (to say it) without voice, in the mind, is very clear evidence of a wrathful and deep intention.<sup>f</sup> Such is the wicked, maleficent, harsh, pleasant<sup>g</sup> and deceitful man.<sup>h</sup> And in addition to this he is perfectly untaught<sup>i</sup> and proposes to himself plans<sup>j</sup> and things which are impossible.<sup>k</sup> For how is it ever possible that to the impassive genus,<sup>l</sup> which nature has endowed,<sup>m</sup> licentiousness,<sup>n</sup> the disturber of the passions of the soul,

<sup>a</sup> The biblical text refers to the mourning for the death of Isaac, not to Isaac's mourning, as Philo takes it.

<sup>b</sup> OL " ut," see below.

<sup>c</sup> LXX εἶπεν δὲ Ἡσαὺ ἐν τῇ διανοίᾳ (Heb. " heart," i.e. " mind ") αὐτοῦ, Ἐγγισάτωσαν αἱ ἡμέραι τοῦ πένθους (v.l. πάθους: Heb. and Arm. O.T. " mourning," see below) τοῦ πατρός μου ἵνα ἀποκτείνω (v.l. καὶ ἀποκτενῶ) Ἰακώβ τὸν ἀδελφόν μου. In Quod Deterius 46 Philo quotes the last two clauses, ἐγγισάτωσαν αἱ ἡμέραι τοῦ πένθους (v.l. πάθους, see below) τοῦ πατρός μου ἵνα ἀποκτείνω Ἰακώβ τὸν ἀδελφόν μου.

<sup>d</sup> OL " non in propatulo saevit infestus."

<sup>e</sup> Philo is probably thinking of such Homeric phrases as περὶ κῆρι . . . ἐχολώθη and κοτεσσάμενος τό γε θυμῷ.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher " consilium offensi animi subdoli et profundi " : OL " consilii est externi et profundi."

<sup>g</sup> Sic: Aucher " blandus."

<sup>h</sup> OL " talis est pravitata malignantium iracundia suppressa scrupulosa insidiosa."

<sup>i</sup> OL omits this clause.

<sup>j</sup> ὑποθέσεις.

<sup>k</sup> OL " paraturas sibi impossibiles reservando."

<sup>l</sup> τῷ ἀπαθεί γένει, as in Quod Deterius 46. Apparently while reading πένθους, not πάθους, in his copy of the Greek Bible, Philo interpreted πένθος as a specific form of πάθος, cf. Quod Deterius 46 ἡδονῆς ἢ λύπης ἢ τινος ἄλλου πάθους.

<sup>m</sup> Isaac is often described by Philo as a type of natural virtue.

<sup>n</sup> Symbolized by Esau.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

should draw near and kill his virtuous brother? <sup>a</sup> For <sup>b</sup> he has been disciplined by training, exercise and labour to trip up <sup>c</sup> and to catch off guard and to repel, not to be tripped up and to be caught off guard and to be repelled. <sup>d</sup> For true life lies before him as a prize, <sup>e</sup> just as, on the other hand, before the wicked and evil man (lies) death, which is in sense-perception, <sup>f</sup> because of (his) suffering incurable pain. <sup>g</sup>

239. (Gen. xxvii. 42-43) Why, when his mother heard of his outburst, <sup>h</sup> did she say, <sup>i</sup> "Arise, go off <sup>j</sup> to Laban, my brother, in Haran" <sup>k</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders, less accurately, I think, "nam quomodo unquam fieri poterit ut vitium perturbatae animae adsit nationi vitiis carenti ex dono naturae; et occidere fratrem virtute praeditum?": OL reads defectively "nullo enim genere praevalerit laedere congeries vitiorum impassibilitatis titulum, cui permittitur a natura decipientis animam et dissipare et perimere."

<sup>b</sup> Arm. our lit. = "where": OL "enim."

<sup>c</sup> Elsewhere in Philo Jacob is called ἀσκητής and περηνιστής, as the symbol of virtue acquired by training.

<sup>d</sup> OL "didicit enim ex industria hujusmodi frater plantare et superare, non utique superari."

<sup>e</sup> ἀθλον: Aucher's rendering, "bravium," seems to be a printer's error for "praemium." <sup>f</sup> δι' αἰσθήσεως.

<sup>g</sup> OL "dum est (v.l. "etiam") vita verissima ante oculos ejus preciosa, ut illi a diverso mors quam excipiat consensualitate nimiam (v.l. "minimam") pro pessimo contagio et insanabili cruciatu."

<sup>h</sup> Or "revolt": Aucher "insurgentem eum" (footnote, "Sensus est, comminationem ejus"): OL "minas."

<sup>i</sup> To Jacob, not to Esau, as one might suppose from Philo's wording.

<sup>j</sup> OL "surgens fuge."

<sup>k</sup> Philo condenses vss. 42-43, which read, in the LXX, ἀπηγγέλη δὲ Ῥεβέκκα τὰ ῥήματα Ἡσαὺ τοῦ υἱοῦ αὐτῆς τοῦ πρεσβυτέρου καὶ πέμψασα ἐκάλεσεν Ἰακώβ τὸν υἱὸν αὐτῆς τὸν νεώτερον καὶ εἶπεν αὐτῷ, Ἴδου Ἡσαὺ ὁ ἀδελφός σου ἀπειλεῖ (Heb. "seeks revenge") τοῦ ἀποκτεῖναί σε. νῦν οὖν, τέκνον, ἀκουσόν

GENESIS, BOOK IV

The literal meaning <sup>a</sup> is clear, for it makes apparent the careful solicitude of the mother, who by causing (him) to change residence, contrives his safety.<sup>b</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> "Laban" is to be interpreted as "whiteness,"<sup>d</sup> a symbol of sense-perceptible light,<sup>e</sup> and "Haran" as "openings,"<sup>f</sup> through which (Scripture) indicates some of the senses, (namely) the eyes, the ears and the nose.<sup>g</sup> Thus, the counsel of the soul<sup>h</sup> says to its fellow-counsellors and advisers,<sup>i</sup> "If you laboriously acquire clear, lucid and genuine endurance of patience and firmness in life, and, while dwelling near the envious man, act with complete independence, you will encounter the greatest danger because of him."<sup>j</sup>

μου τῆς φωνῆς, καὶ ἀναστὰς ἀπόδραθι εἰς τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν (v.l. and Heb. omit εἰς τὴν Μεσ.) πρὸς Λαβάν τὸν ἀδελφόν μου εἰς Χαρράν. Philo cites vss. 42-45 in De Fuga 23, vss. 43-44 in De Somniis i. 46, and vss. 43-45 in De Migratione 208-211, in these places allegorizing somewhat as here.

<sup>a</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>b</sup> OL "dictum palam designat praesagium matris transmigrationem nuntiantis pro cautela dilecti."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> The same etymology, based on Heb. lābān "white," occurs elsewhere in Philo, e.g. De Agricultura 42.

<sup>e</sup> φωτὸς αἰσθητοῦ, cf. Quod Deterius 4 τὸ ἐκτὸς αἰσθητόν . . . προσηγόρευται Λαβάν.

<sup>f</sup> τρῶγλαι. The same etymology, based on Heb. hōr "hole," occurs elsewhere in Philo (see next note).

<sup>g</sup> Cf. De Fuga 45 Χαρράν, ἣ μεταληφθείσά εἰσι τρῶγλαι, σύμβολον τῶν αἰσθήσεων.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. lit.= λογισμὸς τῆς ψυχῆς, here symbolized by Rebekah, who is generally for Philo a symbol of constancy.

<sup>i</sup> τοῖς συνέδροις καὶ συμβούλοις. OL renders the clause more freely, "suadet ergo secretae anima sobria susceptis suis."

<sup>j</sup> The syntax of this sentence, especially of the latter part, is far from clear. Aucher renders much more freely, I think, "quod si lucidam fidelemque patientiae et constantiae vitam acquirere studetis, in quantum assidetis apud invidiosum, omni libertate invadente eo, vix superiores eritis periculis": OL "si obstinatissime verissimam vitam sectando, atrocissi-

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

But if you take leave <sup>a</sup> of concord <sup>b</sup> and separate yourselves, do not immediately thereafter, as if you had become incorporeal, despise necessary foods or consider them bestial, <sup>c</sup> but at once return on the middle way, neither afflicting your bodies with hunger and want nor offering them a variety of the most splendid delicacies; and live carefully with simple elegance. <sup>d</sup> For what is simpler than the colour white, which is called 'Laban' in Chaldaean? <sup>e</sup> For those who are not firmly in control of themselves go very far wrong and cause (others) to transgress in the opposite direction. <sup>f</sup> But the middle course <sup>g</sup> mum et infestissimum vicinum patimini, enormissimam excipietis cladem." My rendering is, I think, supported by the parallel passage in De Migratione 208-211, where Philo advises the seeker of virtue to give up philosophy just long enough to come to terms with sense and passion in order to overcome them by diplomacy. It must be admitted, however, that his various treatments of Gen. xxvii. 42-45 (see the references in note k on the preceding pages) are obscure, perhaps because he is embarrassed by having to explain why Rebekah (the symbol of constancy) advised Jacob to flee to Haran (the symbol of sense); see also Colson's notes in the Loeb Philo, vol. iv. p. 566, and vol. v. p. 582.

---

<sup>a</sup> πολλὰ χαίρειν φράζοντες.

<sup>b</sup> Or perhaps "association"—ὁμιλία: OL "ejus colloquiis." Whether Philo means separation from philosophy or from sense and passion is not clear.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "nolite nec illico tamquam incorporii effecti contemnere corporea neque brutorum more cogitare cibos necessarios": OL "penitus separati tanquam incorporales ne victum quidem quotidianum habebitis."

<sup>d</sup> ἀπλῆ εὐπρεπεία vel sim.: Aucher "simplici victu": OL "simpliciter fruentes tutiores eritis."

<sup>e</sup> Here, as frequently elsewhere, Philo refers to the Hebrew language as "Chaldaean."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, "quoniam summa errant errareque faciunt in contraria eos (sic), qui non sunt constantius firmati": OL renders defectively, "ultra modum ergo meliora concidere possunt ad pejora."

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. word lit. = αἱ μεσότητες: Aucher "mediocritates": OL "mediae."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

has a way out (in the form) of precaution that nothing unforeseen and irremediable be experienced.<sup>a</sup>”

240. (Gen. xxvii. 45b) What is the meaning of the words “ Sending, I will call thee from there to here lest perchance I be bereaved of you both in one day ”<sup>b</sup> ?

Since the literal meaning<sup>c</sup> is clear, we shall say allegorically<sup>d</sup> that she does not think that dwelling there for all time is good for the practiser<sup>e</sup> but that it is useful for this time.<sup>f</sup> For she wishes him to depart from his kin and twin, (namely) wickedness,<sup>g</sup> not to a simpler<sup>h</sup> and unlighted place but to one lighted by the senses,<sup>i</sup> and in some way<sup>j</sup> to give himself to all (kinds of) exercise, in order that after

<sup>a</sup> OL adds a passage on the symbolism of light and darkness which is evidently from a Christian hand, since it ends with the words “ ad maternae ecclesiae viscera revocati.”

<sup>b</sup> OL renders more briefly, “ quid aestimando (l. “ quid est mandando ”) accipiam te inde ne quando orbitabor ”: LXX και ἀποστείλασα μεταπέμφομαί σε ἐκεῖθεν μή ποτε ἀτεκνωθῶ ἀπὸ τῶν δύο ὑμῶν ἐν ἡμέρα μιᾶ. In vss. 44-45a, which Philo here omits, Rebekah tells Jacob to remain with Laban “ some days ” until Esau will have forgotten his anger. Philo quotes the phrase μεταπέμφομαί σε ἐκεῖθεν in De Fuga 47, and alludes briefly to Rebekah’s ἀτεκνία in Quod Deterius 51.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> ἀλληγοροῦντες φήσομεν.

<sup>e</sup> τῷ ἀσκητῇ, of which Jacob is a standing symbol in Philo: Aucher “ religioso ”: OL “ certatorem.”

<sup>f</sup> OL amplifies somewhat in rendering, “ mediam hanc larem assidue habitare certatorem mater inutile arbitrat, sed ad tempus ei prodesse.”

<sup>g</sup> Symbolized by Esau.

<sup>h</sup> ἀπλούστερον (τόπον). Possibly “ simpler ” is here used in the sense of “ more primitive,” as applied to Esau, see below.

<sup>i</sup> φωτιζόμενον ταῖς αἰσθήσεσιν: OL renders freely, “ utpote in lucidiori quadam mentis regione exhibernantem.” Possibly “ lighted by the senses ” has some connexion with the phrase τὰς τῆς κενῆς δόξης λαμπράς . . . εὐπραγίας in De Fuga 47.

<sup>j</sup> τρόπον τινά.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the athlete has become an accomplished fighter he may come back from there where he will no longer be cheated or harmed.<sup>a</sup> For he was indeed a half-youth, and as his companion at birth<sup>b</sup> was dead to the life of virtue,<sup>c</sup> she rightly feared that the other (son) too might unite with the simpler senses and gradually go on to further and superfluous senses.<sup>d</sup> For if he should fall in love with that place, he would not be able to return from there and would cause her<sup>e</sup> more serious harm, (namely) bereavement of the classes of virtuous thoughts.<sup>f</sup>

241. (Gen. xxvii. 46a) Why does Rebekah say to Isaac, "I am weary of my life because of the daughters<sup>g</sup> of the Hittites"<sup>h</sup>?

The literal meaning<sup>i</sup> is apparent, for she seemed to be vexed because of the former<sup>j</sup> women who were from that land.<sup>k</sup> And, as was said before,<sup>l</sup> they were envious of her

<sup>a</sup> OL renders the last two clauses more briefly, "inde palestricon perfectum redeuntem jam minime decipiendum."

<sup>b</sup> i.e. Esau.

<sup>c</sup> τῷ τῆς ἀρετῆς βίῳ vel sim. : OL renders the clause more freely, "altero tamen per inopiam sobrietatis pro mortuo imputato."

<sup>d</sup> OL "veretur merito paternae quibusdam casibus (apparently reading πατρός τισι ἦθει vel sim. instead of ἀπλουστέρας αἰσθήσει) paulatim cedat simplicitas morum, superfluis et curiosis occupatur."

<sup>e</sup> Arm. anzn here seems to be an indirect reflexive : OL "animae."

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. seems lit. = ἀτεκνίαν ἀστείων ἐννοιῶν τάξεων : Aucher "orbatio a filiis solidae sapientiae ordinis" : OL "sterilitatem (v.l. "stabilitatem") insignium titularum sapientiae." <sup>g</sup> OL "filias filiorum" (see next note).

<sup>h</sup> LXX εἶπεν Ῥεβέκκα πρὸς Ἰσαάκ, Προσώχθικα (v.l. προσώχθισα) τῇ ζωῇ μου διὰ τὰς θυγατέρας τῶν υἱῶν Χέτ (Heb. "daughters of Heth").

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> Variant "first."

<sup>k</sup> OL "aspernatur enim pro uxoribus prioris (sic) inter-rancis." <sup>l</sup> Apparently this is a reference to QG iv. 88.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

daughter-in-law.<sup>a</sup> But we must examine the more philosophical aspect through allegory.<sup>b</sup> The name "Hittite" (means) "being beside oneself"<sup>c</sup> and senselessness.<sup>d</sup> And the daughters of those thoughts which are beside themselves are the unrestrained impulses.<sup>e</sup> And these the virtue-loving soul<sup>f</sup> hates and very bitterly hates, for they honour that which is contrary to order and decency.<sup>g</sup>

242. (Gen. xxvii. 46b) What is the meaning of the words, "If<sup>h</sup> Jacob takes a wife from the daughters of the Hittites,<sup>i</sup> for what should I live?"<sup>j</sup>

The philosophical character<sup>k</sup> is fearful and in doubt lest perhaps that part<sup>l</sup> which is able to be saved may not be aware that it is incurring corruption<sup>m</sup> by living with earthly and terrestrial things rather than heavenly ones.<sup>n</sup>

<sup>a</sup> OL lacks this sentence and part of the following one.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν φυσικωτέραν θεωρίαν ἐπισκεπτόν ἐν ἀλληγορίᾳ.

<sup>c</sup> OL "excessus." Aucher in a footnote conjectures ἀποστάσια as the original, but it was probably ἔκστασις as in QG iv. 88.

<sup>d</sup> OL "dolorationis" (l. "delirationis").

<sup>e</sup> OL renders more briefly, "filiae autem hujus intentabiles sunt incursiones."

<sup>f</sup> ἡ φιλάρετος ψυχὴ: OL "clementissima anima."

<sup>g</sup> τάξει καὶ κόσμῳ vel sim.: OL renders the clause unintelligibly, "dignus vitii quae deferendo quaeque ordinem cunctaque censuram."

<sup>h</sup> OL "Isaac," apparently a corruption of "si ac."

<sup>i</sup> OL "ex hac terra" (see next note).

<sup>j</sup> LXX εἰ λήμψεται Ἰακώβ γυναῖκα ἀπὸ τῶν θυγατέρων τῆς γῆς ταύτης (Heb. "from the daughters of Heth like these from the daughters of the land"), ἵνα τί μοι ζῆν;

<sup>k</sup> ὁ φιλόσοφος τρόπος vel sim.

<sup>l</sup> i.e. of the soul.

<sup>m</sup> διαφθοράν.

<sup>n</sup> OL renders defectively, "clementissimi pectoris decus ne quando ille delitescat per contagium ejus partis quod salvari praecipue possit, terreno matrimonio ante coelestia copulato."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

“ If,” it says, “ he who seems to be a practised character <sup>a</sup> takes a wife from the polluted daughters of this land, <sup>b</sup> that is, the senses, <sup>c</sup> which readily wish to be polluted, or the pleasures <sup>d</sup> connected with the senses, and he passes over the heavenly and ever-virginal understanding, <sup>e</sup> what reason is there for me to live, when I see such an overturn, seizure and capture, as if of a city, and the whole soul being desolated ? <sup>f</sup> For by nature he <sup>g</sup> is his brother, though hostile in character, and from the beginning being a hater of virtue, <sup>h</sup> he walked in a trackless path, <sup>i</sup> disregarding that which led right and straight. And being alienated from familiarity with that which has discipline, <sup>j</sup> he gladly welcomed the savagery which knows no discipline, and made his mind completely savage through anger, desire, wrongdoing and cunning.” <sup>k</sup>

243. (Gen. xxviii. 2) <sup>l</sup> Why does his father say, “ Arise, go off to Mesopotamia to the home of Bethuel, the father

<sup>a</sup> ἀσκητικὸς τρόπος : OL “ qui jam studiosus est moribus inquinatissimis ” (the last word perhaps being all that remains of the rendering of the following phrase).

<sup>b</sup> Aucher, construing slightly differently, renders, “ ex filiabus hujus terrae (hominum) immundorum.”

<sup>c</sup> τὰς αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>d</sup> τὰς ἡδονάς.

<sup>e</sup> ἐὼν (vel sim.) τὴν οὐρανίαν καὶ ἀειπάρθενον διάνοιαν : OL “ praevericando (l. “ praetereundo ” ?) coelestia copulato, quae semper casta sunt concilia.”

<sup>f</sup> OL omits this last phrase.

<sup>g</sup> Apparently Esau is meant, although he is not mentioned in this verse.

<sup>h</sup> μισάρετος : OL “ detentus odio clementiae.”

<sup>i</sup> OL “ perversas vias.”

<sup>j</sup> OL has merely “ mansuetudinis (sic) alienatus.”

<sup>k</sup> θυμῶ καὶ ἐπιθυμίᾳ καὶ ἀδικίᾳ καὶ πανουργίᾳ : OL “ desideriorum iniquis venatus (v.l. “ venenatus ”) se religavit astutiis.”

<sup>l</sup> Gen. xxviii. 1 reads “ And Isaac, calling Jacob to him, blessed him and commanded him, saying, Thou shalt not take a wife from the daughters of Canaan.”

GENESIS, BOOK IV

of thy mother,<sup>a</sup> and take for thyself a wife from the daughters of Laban, the brother of thy mother ”<sup>b</sup> ?

The literal meaning<sup>c</sup> is easy to understand, (namely that) the father orders his son to make a journey to a foreign (land)<sup>d</sup> (and) to seek in marriage<sup>e</sup> a wife of his (own) race.<sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> it has a symbolical explanation somewhat as follows.<sup>h</sup> In the council-meeting of the soul, in which the thoughts are gathered, it says to the better part,<sup>i</sup> “Thou seest the wicked man uttering cries of accusation against thee.<sup>j</sup> Why dost thou delay and (why) dost thou not move and leap up? And since thou art still resorting to the weaker labours of war and not yet acting with firm enough force to be able to offer opposition and to gain victory through the pursuit of virtue,<sup>k</sup> go away, flee.<sup>l</sup> For if thou removest thy dwelling somewhere far from such a beast, thou wilt fare better and happily, and his desire and anger will cease,

<sup>a</sup> OL “matris meae.”

<sup>b</sup> LXX ἀναστὰς ἀπόδραθι (Heb. “go”) εἰς τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν (v.l. + Συρίας: Heb. “to Paddan Aram”) εἰς τὸν οἶκον Βαθουήλ (Heb. B’thú’el, see below) τοῦ πατρὸς τῆς μητρὸς σου καὶ λάβε σεαυτῷ ἐκεῖθεν γυναῖκα ἐκ τῶν θυγατέρων Λαβάν τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ τῆς μητρὸς σου. Philo quotes the LXX text verbatim in De Poster. Caini 77 (without commentary) and in De Fuga 48 with an allegorical commentary similar to but briefer than the one given here.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> OL renders defectively, “in utroque permittere.”

<sup>e</sup> μνηστεύειν: OL “ad copulandam.”

<sup>f</sup> OL “proprii generis.”

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> συμβολικὴν ἀπόδοσιν τοιαύτην τινὰ ἔχει.

<sup>i</sup> OL “concilium bonarum cogitationum suarum convocando animas vadat (l. “anima suadet”) meliori parti.”

<sup>j</sup> OL condenses, “videns infestum adversarium.”

<sup>k</sup> σπουδῆ ἀρετῆς.

<sup>l</sup> OL renders defectively, “sed exurgens dum adhuc firmis (l. “infirmis”?) doloribus uteris nec dum certamine prolatam fortitudinem demonstrantes nec ad retribuentem praevalentes festinanter recede.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and (though they are) wicked and fatal, they will become empty and vain.<sup>a</sup> Therefore go off, flee to Mesopotamia, in word <sup>b</sup> to a land in which Chaldaeans and Babylonians dwell, but in truth to the boundary between the region of virtue and that of wickedness,<sup>c</sup> which is progress and improvement,<sup>d</sup> (that is) a path leading to felicity."<sup>e</sup> For the land which is now called Mesopotamia is between two rivers, the Tigris and Euphrates.<sup>f</sup> And as for its place in the soul, it is the boundary, (consisting) of progress and improvement, between wickedness and virtue, as has been said.<sup>g</sup> Of these, wickedness, being ferocious, is equated with the Tigris,<sup>h</sup> whereas virtue, through which joy is obtained, has a name, "pleasantness," similar to that of the river called Euphrates.<sup>i</sup> And "Bethuel" is to be interpreted as "daughter of God."<sup>j</sup> It is a power<sup>k</sup> honoured with second (place) of lineal descent after the

<sup>a</sup> The text and meaning are not wholly certain. Aucher renders more freely, "et ejus ardor ac indignatio malae indolis exitialesque irritae cessabunt": OL "hii quoque (v.l. "quotque") furorae (sic) et concupiscentiae instinctu malitiarum evanescent."

<sup>b</sup> λόγῳ μὲν, contrasted with ἀληθείᾳ δέ below.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ μεσώριον τῆς ἀρετῆς καὶ τῆς κακίας vel sim.: OL "os (sic) malitiae atque virtutis." Philo's implied etymology of "Mesopotamia" differs from those implied in De Confus. Ling. 66 ἐν μεσαιτάτῳ ποταμοῦ βυθῶ τῆς διανοίας and in De Fuga 49 μέσον τὸν χειμάρρον ποταμὸν τοῦ βίου.

<sup>d</sup> προκοπή καὶ βελτίωσις, cf. e.g. De Sacr. Abelis 113.

<sup>e</sup> εἰς εὐδαιμονίαν: OL "aut beatitudine" (l. "ad beatitudinem").

<sup>f</sup> In Armenian called Dklat' and Aracçani, as in QG i. 13 (with a slight difference in spelling) and QG iv. 93.

<sup>g</sup> OL renders more briefly, "talis enim in anima grumus est malitiae atque virtutis."

<sup>h</sup> The same word-play occurs in Leg. All. i. 63 f. and QG i. 13.

<sup>i</sup> This word-play on εὐφροσύνη and Εὐφράτης is found in QG i. 13, where the Euphrates is a symbol of δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>j</sup> So Philo etymologizes elsewhere, see QG iv. 97, notes.

<sup>k</sup> δύναμις.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

masculine.<sup>a</sup> And this has a place in the soul which <sup>b</sup> the noble word <sup>c</sup> calls "home" <sup>d</sup> from which (Isaac) commands him to take a wife who loves the wisdom of knowledge.<sup>e</sup> And the wife's name was "contenance,"<sup>f</sup> (and she was) of the daughters of the brilliant family,<sup>g</sup> which in Chaldaean is called "Laban," and in Armenian,<sup>h</sup> "whiteness."<sup>i</sup> There are some who, looking at the faces of things,<sup>j</sup> either blame them or praise them. But for us, for whom it is natural to allegorize<sup>k</sup> and who seek other things beyond

<sup>a</sup> OL "secundo quodam gradu pro maribus substitutus sicut in haereditatibus: prerogativus titulus et subcisivus." This obscure passage is explained by the parallel, De Fuga 51, where Philo says that Bethuel, "daughter of God" = σοφία, "occupies a second place and therefore was termed feminine to express the contrast with the Maker of the universe, who is masculine."

<sup>b</sup> The rel. pron. refers to "place" (as in OL), not to "soul," as in Aucher's rendering.

<sup>c</sup> OL "sermo divinus." Philo nowhere else describes Scripture as "noble" or the like.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the home of Bethuel.

<sup>e</sup> σοφίαν τῆς ἐπιστήμης vel sim.: OL has merely "disciplinae."

<sup>f</sup> Arm. krōnaworout' iun usually renders ἐγκράτεια, more rarely θρησκεία. Aucher here renders, "continentia," adding in a footnote, "Vel Sobrietas, ad verb. religio." OL has "possessio," which may render a corruption of ἐγκράτεια. Elsewhere in Philo Rachel is a symbol of αἴσθησις, and Leah, etymologized as ἡ κοπιῶσα, is a symbol of δικαιοσύνη and similar virtues. Apparently Leah is meant here.

<sup>g</sup> OL "pro filiis generis praeclari."

<sup>h</sup> Here, as elsewhere, the Arm. translator substitutes "Armenian" for "Greek."

<sup>i</sup> OL "quod jam diximus Laban, Graece enim διειδής (sic). On the etymology "white" for Laban see QG iv. 239. <sup>j</sup> OL "personis," reflecting προσώποις.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. lit. = "to whom through allegory is nature," apparently a misunderstanding of οἷς ἀλληγορεῖν πέφυκε. Aucher renders, "nobis tamen quae (l. "qui"?) allegoricam quaerimus naturam"; OL "nobis tamen, qui per allegoricum examen ista requirimus."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

that which is seen,<sup>a</sup> it is fitting and proper to examine and question the names, and not to be deceived or taken in by homonyms.<sup>b</sup> Between these <sup>c</sup> there is a distinction and difference: there is one quality <sup>d</sup> which is perfect and splendid and like light,<sup>e</sup> and there is (another) somewhat sense-perceptible quality <sup>f</sup> which is superficially coloured <sup>g</sup> as in those images painted deceptively by bad men.<sup>h</sup>

244. (Gen. xxviii. 7) <sup>i</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "Jacob heard his father and mother, and went to Mesopotamia" <sup>j</sup>?

As for the literal meaning,<sup>k</sup> praise is given to the journeying of the son who obeyed both parents. For some please only one (parent), showing incomplete virtue.<sup>l</sup> And there

<sup>a</sup> OL "quia (l. "quae"?) semota sunt a visibilibus."

<sup>b</sup> ὁμωνυμίαις.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the different qualities of whiteness.

<sup>d</sup> ποιότης: Aucher "creatura" (but he gives "qualitas" below for the Arm. synonym of the word used here).

<sup>e</sup> OL renders freely, "sic et modo candor, quem ajunt esse Laban, perfecta translatione lucidus vel splendens."

<sup>f</sup> Laban appears as a symbol of sense-perception (αἴσθησις) in several other passages of Philo, e.g. Leg. All. iii. 20.

<sup>g</sup> Apparently "with bright colours" is meant.

<sup>h</sup> OL amplifies in rendering, "sin vero secundum visibilia transtuleris, nomen candoris, hoc est, albescentis coloris indicium, ut solent pictores ex candore colorum faciem exprimere interno minio." OL adds "ita enim Isaac, qui dicitur risus, perfecta translatione serenus atque lucidus intelligitur."

<sup>i</sup> The four verses, Gen. xxviii. 3-6, passed over by Philo, tell of Isaac's blessing Jacob and sending him to Laban and of Esau's overhearing the blessing and Isaac's charge to Jacob not to take a Canaanite wife.

<sup>j</sup> LXX καὶ ἤκουσεν Ἰακώβ τοῦ πατρὸς καὶ τῆς μητρὸς ἑαυτοῦ καὶ ἐπορεύθη εἰς τὴν Μεσοποταμίαν. In the citation of this verse in De Congressu 70, the mss. of Philo vary between εἰσήκουσεν and ὑπήκουσεν for LXX ἤκουσεν. Philo's brief commentary there differs from that given in the present passage.

<sup>k</sup> πρὸς τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>l</sup> ἡμιτελῆ ἀρετήν.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

are still others who do not (please) even one (parent). These the legislator <sup>a</sup> has denounced and threatened with death.<sup>b</sup> Whence it is clear that (Scripture) has publicly proclaimed <sup>c</sup> life and immortality <sup>d</sup> for those who offer parents a piety <sup>e</sup> that is sound, full and perfect.<sup>f</sup> And as for the deeper meaning, symbolically <sup>g</sup> it appears that praise is bestowed when the continent type of soul honours the sovereign reason,<sup>h</sup> which has the force of a father, and the knowledge of discipline,<sup>i</sup> which bears the glorious honour of a mother who nourishes and tends and carefully watches over (her child).<sup>j</sup>

245. (Gen. xxviii. 8-9) What is the meaning of the words, "When Esau saw that the daughters of the Canaanites <sup>k</sup> were evil before his father Isaac, he went and took Mahalath,<sup>l</sup> the daughter of Ishmael the son of Abraham,<sup>m</sup> the sister of Nebajoth,<sup>n</sup> in addition to his other <sup>o</sup> wives as a wife" ?<sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὁ νομοθέτης, i.e. Moses.

<sup>b</sup> OL renders the sentence defectively, "quidam autem (v.l. "enim") semiplenam et mancam exhibent devotionem malis, nec ipsam quibus legislator interminatur mortem."

<sup>c</sup> προκήρυξε: OL "praedicari."

<sup>d</sup> ἀθανασία.

<sup>e</sup> εὐσέβειαν.

<sup>f</sup> OL renders freely, "qui recto corde et integra mente utrorumque parentum pietatem suscipiunt."

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν συμβολικῶς.

<sup>h</sup> ὅταν ὁ ἐγκρατῆς ψυχῆς τρόπος τὸν ἡγεμονικὸν λόγον τιμᾷ: OL "cum studiosi sobrietas moribus synceri pectoris (v.l. "pastori") ornatur et verbo praedicantis defert."

<sup>i</sup> ἐπιστήμην παιδείας.

<sup>j</sup> OL renders the latter part of the sentence freely, "pro paterna virtute et disciplinarum dignitati, favens pro materna quoque clementia, quae nutrit et diligit."

<sup>k</sup> OL "Chanaan," see note p.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. Mayelet, see note p.

<sup>m</sup> OL omits this phrase.

<sup>n</sup> Arm. Nabeot, see note p.

<sup>o</sup> Reading, with Aucher, αἰλος "other" for αἰνες "those."

<sup>p</sup> LXX καὶ ἶδεν Ἡσαὺ ὅτι πονηραὶ εἰσιν αἱ θυγατέρες Χαναάν (v.l. τῶν Χανααίων) ἐναντίον Ἰσαὰκ τοῦ πατρὸς αὐτοῦ καὶ ἐπο-

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Here, in the present passage, is to be discerned the difference between the former (son) <sup>a</sup> and the one now in question. For the former pleased both his parents and men in the manner of teachers. <sup>b</sup> But the latter <sup>c</sup> did not please anyone, and wishing to act stealthily and secretly in order to seem to be showing honour, he was not mindful of his mother but only of his father. <sup>d</sup> And the wretch does not make even this dissimulation complete, <sup>e</sup> but knowing exactly <sup>f</sup> that his father was displeased with the inhabitants of the land, he did not send away those (wives) whom he had but took others in addition to them, (thus) adding sin to sin and not being absolved of the former ones. Therefore the prophet, <sup>g</sup> ascribing shamelessness to him, adds that he did not send (his wives) away but took a wife in addition to his other wives. This fact is not to be taken as casual or incidental or by the way, but as proof <sup>h</sup> of the goodwill <sup>i</sup> which he had for the women who were alienated from wisdom <sup>j</sup> and whom his incorruptible and impartial father judged evil. "But why, O miserable man," we might say to him, "wouldst thou join and connect thyself ρευθή Ἡσαὺ πρὸς Ἰσμαήλ, καὶ ἔλαβεν τὴν Μαέλεθ (Heb. Mah<sup>a</sup>lath) θυγατέρα Ἰσμαήλ τοῦ υἱοῦ Ἀβραάμ, ἀδελφὴν Ναβαιώθ (Heb. N<sup>e</sup>bāyōth) πρὸς ταῖς γυναῖξιν αὐτοῦ γυναῖκα.

---

<sup>a</sup> i.e. Jacob.

<sup>b</sup> The meaning of the last phrase is uncertain. Aucher renders, "tamquam exemplar (vel, "exemplaribus") magistrorum": OL "ut censura discipuli magistris." Perhaps Philo means that Jacob obeyed his parents as men regularly obey their teachers.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. Esau. OL has "hi," an obvious scribal error for "hic."

<sup>d</sup> The text of the last phrase is uncertain. OL renders, "patrem vero hucusque."

<sup>e</sup> ὀλόκληρον ὑπόκρισιν. <sup>f</sup> Or "clearly."

<sup>g</sup> ὁ προφήτης, i.e. Moses. OL's "profecto" is an obvious scribal error for "profeta."

<sup>h</sup> Or "reproof"—ὡς ἔλεγχος: Aucher "sicut reprehensionem": OL "pro testimonio."

<sup>i</sup> τῆς ἐννοίας vel sim.: Aucher "intimae amicitiae": OL "favoris."

<sup>j</sup> Or "understanding": OL "sapientiae et pudicitiae."

GENESIS, BOOK IV

with a third (wife) ? ” <sup>a</sup> But who indeed can bring into a state of reformation that which is with him ? Nothing at all (can be done) but, on the contrary, whether some be taken or, on the other hand, given, an unlivable life (is his). <sup>b</sup> And his wife is called in Hebrew “ Mahalath,” which is to be interpreted “ from the beginning.” <sup>c</sup> And potentially <sup>d</sup> this is sensual pleasure, <sup>e</sup> for it is considered to have been congenital <sup>f</sup> to every living creature from the beginning and from the first creation. And sensual pleasure is said to be the cause of many evils, both to those who have it and to those who come near it. <sup>g</sup> And her father is Ishmael, who is “ hearing ” <sup>h</sup> because of his not participating in vision. For the mind of the pleasure-loving man <sup>i</sup> is blind and unable to see those things which are worth seeing, (namely) the world and that which is in the world—the nature of existing things, the sight of which is wonderful to behold and desirable. <sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> OL renders freely, “ qualem . . . etiam tertiam illam desponsationem.”

<sup>b</sup> ἀβίωτος βίος. The text of these two sentences is difficult. Aucher renders freely (with apologies in his footnotes), “ quae enim corrigere potuerit eas quae apud illum sunt ? Nullatenus, sed potius in contrarium : tum accepta quam data (pro exemplo) vita est praeter vitam ” : OL “ de qua possit etiam priores emendare, absit sed ut rursus acciperet et praemuneretur eam quae vitam sine vita conficiunt.”

<sup>c</sup> As if composed of the Heb. preposition mē “ from ” and the verbal root hll “ to begin.”

<sup>d</sup> δυνάμει.

<sup>e</sup> ἡδονή.

<sup>f</sup> σύντροφος.

<sup>g</sup> OL “ pro subcisiva innumerabilium malorum tam pessimam tam noxiam preparavit etiam approximantibus perniciem.”

<sup>h</sup> Cf. De Fuga 208 ἐρμηνεύεται γὰρ Ἰσμαὴλ ἀκοή θεοῦ : De Mut. Nom. 209 τὸ θεῖον ἀκουσμα. <sup>i</sup> ὁ τοῦ φιληδόνου νοῦς.

<sup>j</sup> At the end of this section, which concludes Book IV of the Quaestiones in Genesin, the Latin translator remarks, “ Secundum consequentiam testimoniorum divinae Scripturae non exposuit Philo titulos allegoriae sed ea captare voluit capitula quae videntur intuitui mentis suae succurrisse.” See also Appendix B in Suppl. II.

PHILO

SUPPLEMENT

II

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON EXODUS

TRANSLATED FROM THE ANCIENT ARMENIAN
VERSION OF THE ORIGINAL GREEK BY

RALPH MARCUS, Ph.D.

PROFESSOR OF HELLENISTIC CULTURE, UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO

CAMBRIDGE, MASSACHUSETTS
HARVARD UNIVERSITY PRESS

LONDON
WILLIAM HEINEMANN LTD

MCMLIII

B3
E45
P5
cop. 1

79040

NOV 4 1953

Printed in Great Britain

CONTENTS OF SUPPLEMENT II

	PAGE
LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS . . . . .	vii
QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS ON EXODUS—
Book I . . . . .	2
Book II . . . . .	35
APPENDIX A : GREEK FRAGMENTS OF THE QUAESTIONES . . . . .	177
APPENDIX B : THE OLD LATIN VERSION OF QG IV. 154-245 . . . . .	265
INDEX . . . . .	277

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

SHOWING THEIR DIVISION INTO VOLUMES IN THIS EDITION

VOLUME

- I. On the Creation (De Opificio Mundi)
Allegorical Interpretation (Legum Allegoriae)
- II. On the Cherubim (De Cherubim)
On the Sacrifices of Abel and Cain (De Sacrificiis Abelis et Caini)
The Worse attacks the Better (Quod Deterius Potiori
insidiari solet)
On the Posterity and Exile of Cain (De Posteritate Caini)
- III. On the Unchangeableness of God (Quod Deus im-mutabilis sit)
On Husbandry (De Agricultura)
On Noah's Work as a Planter (De Plantatione)
On Drunkenness (De Ebrietate)
On Sobriety (De Sobrietate)
- IV. On the Confusion of Tongues (De Confusione Lin-guarum)
On the Migration of Abraham (De Migratione Abrahami)
Who is the Heir (Quis Rerum Divinarum Heres)
On the Preliminary Studies (De Congressu quaerendae Eruditionis gratia)
- V. On Flight and Finding (De Fuga et Inventione)
On the Change of Names (De Mutatione Nominum)
On Dreams (De Somniis)
- VI. On Abraham (De Abrahamo)
On Joseph (De Iosepho)
Moses (De Vita Mosis)

LIST OF PHILO'S WORKS

VOLUME

- VII. On the Decalogue (De Decalogo)
On the Special Laws Books I-III (De Specialibus Legibus)
- VIII. On the Special Laws Book IV (De Specialibus Legibus)
On the Virtues (De Virtutibus)
On Rewards and Punishments (De Praemiis et Poenis)
- IX. Every Good Man is Free (Quod Omnis Probus Liber sit)
On the Contemplative Life (De Vita Contemplativa)
On the Eternity of the World (De Aeternitate Mundi)
Flaccus (In Flaccum)
Hypothetica<sup>1</sup> (Apologia pro Iudaeis)
On Providence<sup>1</sup> (De Providentia)
- X. On the Embassy to Gaius (De Legatione ad Gaium)
GENERAL INDEX TO VOLUMES I-X

SUPPLEMENT

- I. Questions and Answers on Genesis<sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Genesin)
- II. Questions and Answers on Exodus<sup>2</sup> (Quaestiones et Solutiones in Exodum)
- GENERAL INDEX TO SUPPLEMENTS I-II

<sup>1</sup> Only two fragments extant.

<sup>2</sup> Extant only in an Armenian version.

EXODUS

EXODUS

BOOK I

*1. (Ex. xii. 2) <sup>a</sup> " This month (shall be) for you the beginning of months ; it is the first in the months of the year." <sup>b</sup>

(Scripture) thinks it proper to reckon the cycle of months from the vernal equinox.<sup>c</sup> Moreover, (this month) is said to be the " first " and the " beginning " by synonymy,<sup>d</sup> since these (terms) are explained by each other, for it is said to be the first both in order and in power <sup>e</sup> ; similarly that time which proceeds from the vernal equinox also appears (as) the beginning both in order and in power, in the same way as the head (is the beginning) of a living creature. And thus those who are learned in astronomy have given this name <sup>f</sup> to the before-mentioned time. For they call the Ram the head of the zodiac <sup>g</sup> since in it the sun appears to produce the vernal equinox.<sup>h</sup> And in addition to this, it was fitting for it to be (the beginning) <sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Philo comments on this verse, without quoting it literally, in De Vita Mosis ii. 222-223 and De Spec. Leg. ii. 151-152.

<sup>b</sup> LXX ὁ μὴν οὗτος ὑμῖν ἀρχὴ μηνῶν, πρῶτός ἐστιν ὑμῖν ἐν τοῖς μηνσὶν τοῦ ἑνιαυτοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> ἀπὸ τῆς ἑαρινῆς ἰσημερίας.

<sup>d</sup> κατὰ συνωνυμίαν.

<sup>e</sup> καὶ τάξει καὶ δυνάμει.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. of " head."

<sup>g</sup> κεφαλὴν τοῦ ζωοφόρου . . . τὸν κριόν.

<sup>h</sup> Cf. De Opif. Mundi 116 ἥλιος διττὰς καθ' ἕκαστον ἑνιαυτὸν ἀποτελῶν ἰσημερίας . . . τὴν μὲν ἑαρινὴν ἐν κριῶ.

<sup>i</sup> I follow Aucher in supplying the words " the beginning " (Aucher " exordium "), to which nothing corresponds in the Arm. text.

EXODUS, BOOK I

of the times that come into being during the year. Accordingly, when the fruits of things that are sown become full grown on the trees, then they receive the beginning of bearing, in order that the gracious acts of God may be prolonged perpetually as they replace one another and as they join the ends to the beginnings and the beginnings to the ends.<sup>a</sup> But in the first creation<sup>b</sup> of all things, in which He also made the world,<sup>c</sup> He constituted all things at the same time to be filled with their fruits of mated thoughts.<sup>d</sup> For it was proper that this be so, since the Father left no appearance<sup>e</sup> at all of superfluity or deficiency. And this was especially for the sake of man, to whom He was about to entrust the beginning of customs,<sup>f</sup> that he might immediately find all things perfect and perfectly produced.<sup>g</sup>

And that (Scripture) presupposes<sup>h</sup> the vernal equinox to be the beginning of the cycle of months is clear from the notions of time held<sup>i</sup> in the ordinances<sup>j</sup> and traditions of various nations. And one may make certain of this<sup>k</sup> from the sheaves of first-fruits<sup>l</sup> which (Scripture) commands

<sup>a</sup> Only slightly different is the wording of the Greek fragment (which contains only this sentence of the section), "Ὄταν οἱ τῶν σπαρτῶν καρποὶ τελειωθῶσιν, οἱ τῶν δένδρων γενέσεως ἀρχὴν λαμβάνουσιν ἵνα δολιχεύωσιν αἱ τοῦ θεοῦ χάριτες τὸν αἰῶνα, παρ' ἄλλων ἄλλαι διαδεχόμεναι καὶ συνάπτουσαι τέλη μὲν ἀρχαῖς, ἀρχὰς δὲ τέλεσιν, ἀτελεύτητοι ᾧσιν. The last two words appear to be an addition to the original text of Philo.

<sup>b</sup> Prob. δημιουργία : Aucher "productione."

<sup>c</sup> τὸν κόσμον.

<sup>d</sup> The last phrase is obscure to me : Aucher "plena propriis fructibus connaturalis consilii."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "suspicionem."

<sup>f</sup> ἐθῶν.

<sup>g</sup> τελειοποιηθέντα.

<sup>h</sup> ὑποτίθησι.

<sup>i</sup> ἐκ τῶν χρόνων καταλήψεων vel sim. : Aucher renders more literally, "ex retentis temporibus."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "ordinem."

<sup>k</sup> ἀκριβώσαιεν ἂν τις : Aucher "certius id verificet."

<sup>l</sup> δραγμάτων τῶν ἀπαρχῶν (Lev. xxiii. 10-11), cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 162, 175.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(us) to bring on the second day of the festival <sup>a</sup> for the needs of the service,<sup>b</sup> and spring is the season of harvest.<sup>c</sup>

But one may be in doubt why it is that since there are two equinoxes, the vernal and the autumnal, which nature <sup>d</sup> established as the just canons <sup>e</sup> of the equinoxes, it was not from the autumnal one but from that which falls in spring that (Scripture) begins to reckon time.<sup>f</sup> For it is in the spring that every fertile place both in mountain and plain grows and blossoms and bears fruit, but in the autumn, so soon as there is gathered whatever fruit the earth has borne, the plants lose their leaves and dry up. But it is necessary to attribute the beginning to the better and more desirable (season). To me, moreover, it seems that the autumnal equinox is to the vernal as a servant is to a queen. For it ministers to the earth by giving it rest and by making lighter the trees which have been suffering hardship in their nature, and by fighting like a brave athlete, it enables them to gather together their strength and to make a new start from the beginning.<sup>g</sup> Now, if this is so, no one will err in saying that in the same way as heaven (is superior) to (the rest of) the universe,<sup>h</sup> so among the seasons the spring is prior to and more sovereign than the autumn.

But not all (peoples) treat the months and years alike, but some in one way and some in another. Some reckon by the sun, others by the moon. And because of this the initiators of the divine festivals have expressed divergent views about the beginnings of the year, setting divergent

<sup>a</sup> Of Unleavened Bread or Passover.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "in usum ministrorum." According to Lev. xxiii. 20 the sheaves are to be given to the priests.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. of barley.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ φύσις.

<sup>e</sup> κανόνες.

<sup>f</sup> See QG ii. 17 notes.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders somewhat differently, "hoc enim colit terram, quiete ei data, et arbores levitate donat, quum defatigata fuisset earum natura, luctatoris instar generose certans, qui velut pugil cum adversario optime congressus foret, sinit ut lassus renovetur rursus ex principio."

<sup>h</sup> τῶ ὄλῳ : Aucher "mundo."

EXODUS, BOOK I

beginnings to the revolutions of the seasons suitable to the beginnings of the cycles. Wherefore (Scripture) has added, "This month (shall be) to you the beginning," making clear a determined and distinct number of seasons, lest they follow the Egyptians, with whom they are mixed, and be seduced by the customs of the land in which they dwell.<sup>a</sup> For He wishes this season to be (the beginning) of creation for the world, and the beginning of months and years for the race.<sup>b</sup> Now the season in which the world was created, as anyone will ascertain in truth who uses a proper method of inquiry (and) deliberation, was the season of spring, since it is at this time that all things in common blossom and grow, and the earth produces its perfected fruits. And, as I have said, nothing was imperfect in the first creation of the universe.<sup>c</sup> For special care was taken that the race should be civilized<sup>d</sup> and receive a special portion of excellence in honour of (its) piety,<sup>e</sup> (namely) this megalopolis, the world,<sup>f</sup> and civilization,<sup>g</sup> by which it manages its economy.<sup>h</sup> Wherefore He thought it proper that the same season (should be) a memorial both of the creation of the world and of that which is kin to it,<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders slightly more freely, "ne in Aegyptiorum abirent mores, mixtim in regione eorum habitantes consuetudine seducti."

<sup>b</sup> τῷ γένει. Apparently the human race, not merely the Israelite nation, is meant.

<sup>c</sup> οὐδὲν ἀτελὲς ἦν ἐν τῇ πρώτῃ τοῦ ὅλου γενέσει.

<sup>d</sup> The original probably had πολιτεύεσθαι, in the sense given above rather than its more usual senses "to behave politically" or "to be governed": Aucher "optime conversaretur in mundo."

<sup>e</sup> τῆς εὐσεβείας.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 34 τὸν οὖν ἀφικόμενον εἰς τὴν ὡς ἀληθῶς μεγαλόπολιν, τόνδε τὸν κόσμον . . . ἔννοιαν λήψεσθαι δεῖ τοῦ ποιητοῦ καὶ πατρὸς καὶ προσέτι ἡγεμόνος.

<sup>g</sup> πολιτείαν: Aucher "urbanitatem."

<sup>h</sup> οἰκονομία χρῆται: Aucher "qua dispensatione bene conversatur."

<sup>i</sup> Apparently time is meant as that which is kin to the world.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

again in order that the spring might be the beginning of every time, for time came into being together with the creation of the world. And the race,<sup>a</sup> following nature and the whole dispensation of heaven,<sup>b</sup> reckoned <sup>c</sup> the seasons similarly and in harmony with the months and years, giving the same priority to the spring as it has in the creation of the world. For at the command of the Lord,<sup>d</sup> wherever it was arranged <sup>e</sup> that they should change their dwelling from Egypt, being persuaded by clear words, He prescribed <sup>f</sup> the first month as the time of migration.<sup>g</sup> But this is the same as the seventh (month) in the solar period, for the seventh (month) from the autumnal equinox is described as the time of migration, and it is the first (month) according to the solar reckoning.<sup>h</sup>

2. (Ex. xii. 3, 6) Why does (Moses) command that from the tenth (day of the first month) a sheep be kept for the fourteenth (day), which was to be sacrificed ?<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> See note b on p. 5.

<sup>b</sup> ἀκόλουθον τῇ φύσει καὶ ὅλη τῇ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ οἰκονομία.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "aptavit."

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. reads ar arn zain, lit. "at the voice of the man," but I have ventured to emend ar n "man" to tearn "Lord."

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "it was made": Aucher "oportebat."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "wrote."

<sup>g</sup> ἀποικίας.

<sup>h</sup> Nisan (March-April) is the first month of the vernal or festival calendar, and the seventh month of the autumnal or civil calendar, which begins with Tishri (Sept.-Oct.). The above passage has a close parallel in De Spec. Leg. ii. 150 ἑβδομος ὧν ὁ μῆν οὗτος (Nisan) ἀριθμῶ τε καὶ τάξει κατὰ τὸν ἡλιακὸν κύκλον δυνάμει πρῶτός ἐστι, διὸ καὶ πρῶτος ἐν ταῖς ἱεραῖς βίβλοις ἀναγράφεται.

<sup>i</sup> LXX τῇ δεκάτῃ τοῦ μηνὸς τούτου λαβέτωσαν ἕκαστος πρόβατον κατ' οἴκους πατριῶν, ἕκαστος πρόβατον κατ' οἰκίαν . . . (vs. 6) καὶ ἔσται ὑμῖν διατετηρημένον ἕως τῆς τεσσαρεσκαίδεκάτης τοῦ μηνὸς τούτου, καὶ σφάζουσιν αὐτὸ πᾶν τὸ πλῆθος συναγωγῆς υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ πρὸς ἑσπέραν. Philo quotes part of vs. 3 and comments on it differently in De Congressu 106-108; he also alludes to vs. 6 in De Vita Mosis ii. 224-225.

EXODUS, BOOK I

In the first place, (this was commanded) in order that he who offered sacrifice might perform the sacrifice not offhandedly <sup>a</sup> and on the spur of the moment and without preparation but with care and thought as if rendering thanks to God, the saviour and benefactor of all (men).<sup>b</sup> In the second place, by this allusion <sup>c</sup> to the sacrifice which was to be prepared beforehand he wishes to teach this first, (namely) that he who was about to offer the sacrifice should first prepare his soul and body <sup>d</sup>—the latter by abstaining from uncleanness in holiness and purity, and the former by quietly giving himself up to God <sup>e</sup> in order that it might be released, even though not altogether, from the passions that disturbed it, for, according to the saying, one should not enter with unwashed feet on the pavement of the temple of God.<sup>f</sup> In the third place, he wishes to test the nation for several <sup>g</sup> days as to just how it stands in respect of faith,<sup>h</sup> since he clearly knew (them to be) of two minds,<sup>i</sup> not having been prepared beforehand for sacrifice and through negligence not having taken thought as was suitable and fitting. In the fourth place, he clearly introduces the defeat of the Egyptians, for though they were not altogether crushed and dismayed by the things which had happened to them, he was referring to the evils which were about to overtake them in five days and which they would have to endure one after another <sup>j</sup> when the enemy would prepare to offer the sacrifices of victory. That is the literal meaning.<sup>k</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>l</sup> it was fitting that this should be, (namely) that the numbers and the nature of all things should be brought

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. uses two expressions to render παρέργως.

<sup>b</sup> τῷ σωτήρι καὶ εὐεργέτῃ πάντων θεῷ.

<sup>c</sup> αἰνιττόμενος. <sup>d</sup> τὴν ψυχὴν καὶ τὸ σῶμα.

<sup>e</sup> τῷ ἐνθουσιᾶν οὐ ἐπιθειάζειν.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 138 on Ex. xxx. 19.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "multis." <sup>h</sup> πρὸς πίστιν.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "dubio actos."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher renders slightly differently, "illud quoque futurum eis malum quod post certos quoque dies debuissent perpeti." <sup>k</sup> τὸ ῥήτόν. <sup>l</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

together.<sup>a</sup> For when souls<sup>b</sup> appear bright and visible, their visions<sup>c</sup> begin to hold festival,<sup>d</sup> hoping for a life without sorrow or fear as their lot and seeing the cosmos<sup>e</sup> with the weight of the understanding<sup>f</sup> as full and perfect, in harmony with the decad.<sup>g</sup> That is to say, what else would its experience<sup>h</sup> be but festive?<sup>i</sup>

3. (Ex. xii. 3b) Why is it that (Moses) commands a sheep to be taken "in accordance with the houses of the clans"<sup>j</sup>?

In the first place, because clans are a kind of great kin-group and a large number of men,<sup>k</sup> but small are those (clans) which in accordance with the houses and by blood are reduced to a small number of men. And so, bringing those (groups) which are small into kinship with the large

<sup>a</sup> Apparently Philo is thinking of the numbers ten and fourteen in relation to the lunar calendar.

<sup>b</sup> ψυχαί (see note d).

<sup>c</sup> Or "forms": Aucher "visus."

<sup>d</sup> One is tempted to restore the apparently corrupted original as, "For when bright and visible visions appear to souls, they (i.e. "the souls") begin to hold festival." It seems that the original had ψυχαῖς, not ψυχαί.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. zard, which Aucher renders literally by "ornamentum," obviously reflects κόσμον in the sense of "cosmos."

<sup>f</sup> Slightly emending the Arm. which seems to reflect τοῦ λόγου ὀλκῆ, cf. De Plantatione 21 τὴν πρὸς τὸ ὄν διανοίας ὀλκῆν.

<sup>g</sup> This is the best sense which I can get from the obscure clause, which Aucher renders, "vitam tristitia et timore carentem sperantes sortiri certo in decimo plenum, et perfectum cernentes ornamentum rationis perpensionisque."

<sup>h</sup> πάθος.

<sup>i</sup> ἐορτώδες.

<sup>j</sup> LXX λαβέτωσαν ἕκαστος πρόβατον κατ' οἴκους πατριῶν (Heb. "of the fathers"), ἕκαστος πρόβατον κατ' οἰκίαν. In De Congressu 106 Philo quotes part of the verse, δεκάτη τοῦ μηνὸς τούτου λαβέτωσαν ἕκαστος πρόβατον κατ' οἰκίαν, and comments in part as here, see below. See also De Vita Mosis ii. 224.

<sup>k</sup> μεγάλαι τινές συγγένειαι καὶ πολυανθρωπία. Philo here anticipates his comments on vs. 4 in § 5 below.

EXODUS, BOOK I

ones, he makes them worthy to be table-companions <sup>a</sup> and to come together in one place for the sharing of salt and offerings and sacrifices, which makes for harmonious affection <sup>b</sup> and binds it more firmly. For law is always a maker of peace and unity, <sup>c</sup> especially as they were about to go on a journey. But on a journey tent-mates <sup>d</sup> are useful, and he thought it right for them to make this after beginning with sacrifice. In the second place, he commands that everyone's sacrifice shall be made "in accordance with the house," (and also the sacrifices) of defenders and allies, <sup>e</sup> since in every house of their adversaries the death of the first-born was to take place, so that anyone seeing one (death) after another may at the same time praise and fear the beneficence and just acts (of God). For unexpected things <sup>f</sup> happened within a short time: among some there would be the offering of sacrifices, among others the destruction of the first-born; for some there would be festivals and rejoicing, for others mourning and sorrow; for some there would be blessings and hymns, for others wailings and groans and incessant lamentations. That is the literal meaning. <sup>g</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>h</sup> it is this. The sheep is "progressive," as the name itself shows, being so called in accordance with the progress <sup>i</sup> of the soul, and it indicates improvement. <sup>j</sup> And he wishes that not in one part but in all their parts, by which I mean their nature, <sup>k</sup> they may progress and grow in virtue <sup>l</sup> in respect of their senses and words and sovereign mind, <sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὁμοτραπέζους.      <sup>b</sup> Prob. φιλίαν: Aucher "amorem."

<sup>c</sup> εἰρήνης καὶ ἐνώσεως αἰεὶ δημιουργός ἐστιν ὁ νόμος.

<sup>d</sup> σύσκηνοι, rendered by two Arm. nouns.

<sup>e</sup> Apparently this is a reference to the Israelites' "neighbours" mentioned in vs. 4, see § 5.

<sup>f</sup> παράδοξα.      <sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.      <sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> προκοπήν, expressed by two Arm. nouns.

<sup>j</sup> The same connexion between pascha, the Paschal lamb, and spiritual progress is made in De Congressu 106 τὸ ψυχικὸν Πάσχα, ἢ . . . διάβασις πρὸς τὸ δέκατον . . . ἱερουργεῖν ἤδη δύνηται τὰς αἰωνεῖς καὶ ἀμώμους προκοπάς.

<sup>k</sup> φύσιν.      <sup>l</sup> ἀρετῇ.

<sup>m</sup> κατὰ τὰς αἰσθήσεις καὶ τοὺς λόγους καὶ τὸν ἡγεμόνα νοῦν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

in order that their natural kinship,<sup>a</sup> admitting a stronger likeness,<sup>b</sup> may more firmly bring about a harmony consisting of counsel and justice.<sup>c</sup>

4. (Ex. xii. 11) <sup>d</sup> But what is the Pascha,<sup>e</sup> which is interpreted as "Passover" <sup>f</sup>?

They make the Passover sacrifice while changing their dwelling-place in accordance with the commands of the Logos,<sup>g</sup> in return for three beneficent acts (of God), which are the beginning and the middle of the freedom to which they now attain.<sup>h</sup> And the beginning was that they were able to conquer the harsh and insupportable masters of whom they had had experience and who <sup>i</sup> had brought all kinds of evil upon them, and this (came about) in two ways, by having their force <sup>j</sup> and their numbers increase. And the middle was that they saw the divinely sent punishments and disasters which overtook their enemies, (for) it was not the nations which fought against them but the regions of the world and the four elements <sup>k</sup> which came against them with the harmfulness and violence of beasts. That is the literal meaning.<sup>l</sup> But the deeper meaning <sup>m</sup> is this. Not only do men make the Passover sacrifice when they change their places but so also and more properly <sup>n</sup> do

<sup>a</sup> ἡ φυσικὴ συγγένεια.

<sup>b</sup> οἰκειότητα.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "copiam prudentiae et justitiae."

<sup>d</sup> Since the name Pascha does not occur before vs. 11 in Ex. chap. xii, the present section should follow § 18.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. P'esek (Heb. Pesah).

<sup>f</sup> διάβασις or διαβατήρια as elsewhere in Philo, e.g. Leg. All. iii. 154, De Sacr. Abelis 63, De Migratione 25, De Vita Mosis ii. 224. See also De Spec. Leg. ii. 146-148 for an allegorical explanation of the name.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ λόγου: Aucher "verbi (divini)."

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "quae sunt principium et medium et proxima consecutio libertatis."

<sup>i</sup> Reading Arm. ork' for the meaningless oyk'.

<sup>j</sup> δύναμιν: Aucher "virtutem."

<sup>k</sup> τὰ τοῦ κόσμου μέρη καὶ τὰ τέτταρα στοιχεῖα.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>n</sup> οἰκειότερον.

EXODUS, BOOK I

souls when they begin to give up the pursuits of youth and their terrible disorder <sup>a</sup> and they change to a better and older state. And so our mind <sup>b</sup> should change from ignorance and stupidity to education and wisdom,<sup>c</sup> and from intemperance and dissoluteness to patience and moderation,<sup>d</sup> and from fear and cowardice to courage and confidence,<sup>e</sup> and from avarice and injustice to justice and equality.<sup>f</sup> And there is still another Passover of the soul <sup>g</sup> beside this, which is its making the sacrifice of passing over from the body ; and there is one of the mind, (namely, its passing over) from the senses <sup>h</sup> ; and as for thoughts,<sup>i</sup> (their passing over consists) in one's not being taken with oneself <sup>j</sup> but in willingly thinking further of desiring and emulating prophetic souls.<sup>k</sup>

5. (Ex. xii. 4a) Why is it that (Moses) commands that "if there are few in the house," they shall take their neighbours "in accordance with the number of souls" <sup>l</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> στάσις : Aucher "insipientia." <sup>b</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>c</sup> ἐξ ἀπαιδευσίας καὶ ἀνοίας εἰς παιδείαν καὶ σοφίαν.

<sup>d</sup> ἐξ ἀκρασίας καὶ ἀκολασίας εἰς ὑπομονὴν καὶ σωφροσύνην.

<sup>e</sup> ἐκ φόβου καὶ δειλίας εἰς ἀνδρείαν καὶ θάρσος : Aucher renders incompletely, "ex timore in fortitudinem."

<sup>f</sup> ἐκ πλεονεξίας καὶ ἀδικίας εἰς δικαιοσύνην καὶ ἰσότητα.

<sup>g</sup> τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>h</sup> τῶν αἰσθήσεων.

<sup>i</sup> τῶν λογισμῶν.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. with one's own importance : Aucher "ut non a se capiatur."

<sup>k</sup> προφητικῶν ψυχῶν or πνευμάτων : Aucher "spirituum prophetorum."

<sup>l</sup> LXX εἰν δὲ ὀλιγοστοὶ ὦσιν οἱ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ ὥστε μὴ εἶναι ἱκανοὺς εἰς πρόβατον, συλλήμψεται μεθ' ἑαυτοῦ τὸν γείτονα τὸν πλησίον αὐτοῦ· κατὰ ἀριθμὸν ψυχῶν κτλ. : the Heb. reads somewhat differently "And if the house (i.e. household) be too small for a sheep, then it and its near neighbour shall take (it) for its house by the number of souls." In Quis Rer. Div. Heres 193 Philo quotes the verse in the following form, εἰν ὀλίγοι ὦσιν οἱ ἐν τῇ οἰκίᾳ ὥστε μὴ ἱκανοὺς εἶναι εἰς τὸ πρόβατον, τὸν πλησίον γείτονα προσλαβεῖν, κατ' ἀριθμὸν ψυχῶν κτλ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

From the literal text <sup>a</sup> you see how much love of mankind and common feeling <sup>b</sup> he shows, since the divine Word gives the command <sup>c</sup> not only to keep (the festival) <sup>d</sup> but also to take thought about giving a share in it <sup>e</sup> to their neighbours and those near by, both in equality and in likeness. For it is about a most honourable thing—and what is more honourable than sacrifice?—and about that which is held in honour and is a matter of sharing in the smallest things that he seems to be legislating <sup>f</sup> in the present passage.<sup>g</sup> That is the literal meaning. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> there are some souls which have a full and complete kinship,<sup>i</sup> being adapted to the nobility of concord,<sup>j</sup> their thoughts being in accord with their words, and their words with their deeds.<sup>k</sup> And there are others which lack the elements <sup>l</sup> of eternity, being deficient in nobility. Now these elements pour out love,<sup>m</sup> always <sup>n</sup> receiving neighbours and those who come near. For as a kind of neighbour and as near to us in respect of desire for virtue <sup>o</sup> (we may consider) the theories of the so-called school studies.<sup>p</sup> And one who is nourished by these and keeps in practice,<sup>q</sup> makes up for his deficiencies by receiving the common discipline of the mind.<sup>r</sup> And the instruction of the school studies should be not childish and puerile but rational <sup>s</sup> and <sup>a</sup> ἐν τῷ ῥητῷ.

<sup>b</sup> φιλανθρωπίαν καὶ κοινωνίαν.

<sup>c</sup> προστάττοντος τοῦ θείου (οἱ ἱεροῦ) λόγου.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders, "servare," without supplying an object.

<sup>e</sup> κοινωνίαν.

<sup>f</sup> νομοθετεῖν.

<sup>g</sup> The meaning is not wholly clear.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> συγγένειαν.

<sup>j</sup> καλοκάγαθία ὁμονοίας vel sim.

<sup>k</sup> τῶν βουλῶν τοῖς λόγοις καὶ τῶν λόγων τοῖς ἔργοις ὁμοουσύν-των.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "parts."

<sup>m</sup> ἔρωτα ἐκχέει: Aucher "amore effluunt."

<sup>n</sup> Aucher renders the adverb freely, "humaniter."

<sup>o</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>p</sup> τὰ τῶν ἐγκυκλίων λεγομένων θεωρήματα.

<sup>q</sup> Aucher "instructus . . . solido exercitio."

<sup>r</sup> τὴν κοινὴν τοῦ νοῦ παιδείαν.

<sup>s</sup> λογική.

EXODUS, BOOK I

accountable <sup>a</sup> and spiritual,<sup>b</sup> for it adapts the mind to the number of souls.<sup>c</sup>

*6. (Ex. xii. 4b) Why does (Moses) command that everyone shall "number sufficient for himself" for the sacrifice? <sup>d</sup>

In the first place, excess and defect of equality <sup>e</sup> produce inequality.<sup>f</sup> And inequality,<sup>g</sup> if I may use rather mythological terms, is the mother of injustice, just as, on the other hand, equality <sup>h</sup> is (the mother of) justice.<sup>i</sup> But sufficiency is midway between excess and defect.<sup>j</sup> In this passage Holy Scripture lays down (the rule), "Nothing too much."<sup>k</sup> But in the second place, one's own labour in tilling the soil is a measure of moderation <sup>l</sup> in the things necessary and useful for bodily life. And it is natural <sup>m</sup> for it to have as sisters frugality and contentment <sup>n</sup> and

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "taken into account": Aucher "aestimatione dignum."

<sup>b</sup> πνευματική.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "quoniam secundum numerum animalium id conciliat mentem," which does not make much sense.

<sup>d</sup> LXX ἕκαστος τὸ ἀρκοῦν αὐτῷ συναριθμῆσεται εἰς πρόβατον: Hebrew "everyone according to his eating you shall number for the sheep." In Quis Rer. Div. Heres 192-193 Philo quotes this verse as an illustration of "proportioned equality," the wording of the latter part being ἕκαστος τὸ ἀρκοῦν αὐτῷ συναριθμῆται.

<sup>e</sup> ἰσότητος, rendered by two Arm. nouns.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly ὑπερβολαὶ καὶ ἐλλείψεις ἀνισότητα ἐγέννησαν.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher mistakenly takes this noun as the second object of "produce" in the preceding sentence.

<sup>h</sup> Here again ἰσότης is rendered by two Arm. nouns.

<sup>i</sup> Slightly emending the Arm. on the basis of the Greek frag., ἀνισότης δέ, ἵνα αὐτὸς μυθικώτερον χρῆσωμαι τοῖς ὀνόμασιν, μήτηρ ἀδικίας ἐστίν, ὡς ἔμπαιιν ἰσότης δικαιοσύνης.

<sup>j</sup> So the Greek frag., ὑπερβολῆς δὲ καὶ ἐλλείψεως μέσον τὸ αὐταρκές.

<sup>k</sup> Similarly the Greek frag. (which ends here), ἐν ᾧ τὸ ἱερὸν γράμμα περιέχεται τὸ "μηδὲν ἄγαν."

<sup>l</sup> σωφροσύνης μέτρον.

<sup>m</sup> εἰκός.

<sup>n</sup> Prob. εὐφροσύνη: Aucher "facilitas."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

unexcessive virtue <sup>a</sup> and everything which accepts the task of attacking and overthrowing arrogance.

*7. (Ex. xii. 5a) Why does (Moses) command (them) to take a "perfect male sheep of one year" <sup>b</sup> ?

(It is to be) perfect in two physical features, <sup>c</sup> (namely) in the sensitive parts of the body and also in the other organs. <sup>d</sup> For an imperfect (sacrifice) is not worthy to be brought to the altar of God. And (it is to be) male, first, because the male is more perfect than the female. Wherefore it is said by the naturalists that the female is nothing else than an imperfect male. <sup>e</sup> In the second place, since it was commanded by the king of the land that the males should die, he thought it right, in face of this and also for the sake of thanksgiving, to make a sacrifice of male animals. And third, because of the king's cruelty and wickedness <sup>f</sup> in ordering the proclamation against the Hebrew children, (he thought it right) to nourish the female and to kill the male (sheep). For since the (king's) command had been annulled by the friendliness and humaneness and power of God, <sup>g</sup> it was proper to give thanks for the males unexpectedly <sup>h</sup> kept alive by (making) male sacrifices. And (the sheep is to be) a year old, since the males become perfect <sup>i</sup> in a year. For having added the

<sup>a</sup> ἀρετή.

<sup>b</sup> LXX πρόβατον τέλειον ἄρσεν (v.l. + ἄμωμον) ἐνιαύσιον ἔσται ὑμῖν. <sup>c</sup> κατὰ δύο ἡλικίας.

<sup>d</sup> καὶ κατὰ τὰ αἰσθητικὰ τοῦ σώματος μέρη καὶ κατὰ τὰ ἄλλα ὄργανα.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag. (which contains only this sentence and the last sentence of this section), λέγεται ὑπὸ φυσικῶν ἀνδρῶν, οὐδὲν ἕτερον εἶναι θῆλυ ἢ ἀτελὲς ἄρσεν. For the thought see Aristotle, De Gener. An. 775 a; cf. Plato, Timaeus 90 A ff.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits the second noun in his rendering.

<sup>g</sup> τῇ οἰκειότητι καὶ φιλανθρωπία καὶ δυνάμει τοῦ θεοῦ: Aucher "per humanissimum beneficium divinae potentiae."

<sup>h</sup> ἀπροσδοκῆτως or παραδόξως: Aucher "subito."

<sup>i</sup> τέλειοι, i.e. full-grown.

EXODUS, BOOK I

“ perfect ” as a sort of prime consideration,<sup>a</sup> he further adds those details in which it is perfect, (namely) that it is more perfect than the female, while the “ year old ” shows the time sufficient for the perfecting of such animals. That is the literal meaning.<sup>b</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> progress<sup>d</sup> toward piety and worthy holiness<sup>e</sup> ought to be both male and of a year’s (duration). But what this means must be shown. Some (men) who have progressed in virtue turn back and flee before they have reached the end,<sup>f</sup> for the newly grown power of virtue in the soul<sup>g</sup> is destroyed by ancient error,<sup>h</sup> which after being quiet for a short while again returns to the attack with great power.<sup>i</sup>

8. (Ex. xii. 5b) Why is a sheep chosen ?<sup>j</sup>

Symbolically,<sup>k</sup> as I have said,<sup>l</sup> it indicates perfect progress,<sup>m</sup> and at the same time the male. For progress is indeed nothing else than the giving up of the female gender<sup>n</sup> by changing into the male, since the female gender

<sup>a</sup> Aucher “ tamquam principale.”

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. uses two nouns to render τὰς προκοπὰς.

<sup>e</sup> ἐπ’ εὐσέβειαν καὶ ἀξίαν ἀγιότητα.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., ἔνιοι προκόψαντες ἐπ’ ἀρετὴν ὑπενόστησαν πρὶν ἐφικέσθαι τοῦ τέλους.

<sup>g</sup> Slightly different is the reading of the Greek frag., τὴν ἄρτι φνομένην ἀριστοκρατείαν ἐν ψυχῇ.

<sup>h</sup> Here again the Greek frag. differs somewhat, καθελούσης τῆς παλαιᾶς ὀλιγοκρατείας (v.l. ὀχλοκρατίας).

<sup>i</sup> So the Greek frag., ἡ πρὸς ὀλίγον ἠρεμήσασα πάλιν ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς μετὰ πλείονος δυνάμεως ἀντεπέθετο (v.l. ἐναπέθετο).

<sup>j</sup> LXX (πρόβατον) . . . ἀπὸ τῶν ἀρνῶν καὶ τῶν ἐρίφων (Heb. “ from the sheep and from the goats ”) λήμψεσθε.

<sup>k</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>l</sup> In the preceding section.

<sup>m</sup> προκοπὴν τελείαν. Perhaps the original was προκοπὴν τελειότητα, as in De Ebrietate 82. On the word πρόβατον as a symbol of προκοπή see Leg. All. iii. 165 and De Sacr. Abelis 112.

<sup>n</sup> τοῦ θήλεος γένους.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

is material, passive,<sup>a</sup> corporeal and sense-perceptible,<sup>b</sup> while the male is active, rational, incorporeal and more akin to mind and thought.<sup>c</sup> But not ineptly<sup>d</sup> has it added "of a year,"<sup>e</sup> since the year is (so) called from the fact that it holds everything contained within itself.<sup>f</sup> But since in two of the four seasons, (namely) in autumn and winter, plants lose their leaves and dry up, and, on the other hand, in two (seasons, namely) spring and summer, they flower and bear fruit, so do the souls of progressive men experience similar things.<sup>g</sup> For when they cast off the causes of life,<sup>h</sup> they become almost entirely dry, being changed by desires<sup>i</sup> and all the other sorts<sup>j</sup> of passion.<sup>k</sup> And then<sup>l</sup> it<sup>m</sup> brings forth new buddings<sup>n</sup> of prudence and moderation,<sup>o</sup> and sometimes bears and brings forth perfect fruits of wisdom.<sup>p</sup> But as for the command to prepare lambs and kids,<sup>q</sup> perhaps (it was given) because the Egyptian considered these animals especially divine, in order that the protector and champion<sup>r</sup> might show the overthrow of their adversaries and by what power they were destroyed who were unable

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "vitiosum," see next note.

<sup>b</sup> ὑλικὸν καὶ πάσχον καὶ σωματικὸν καὶ αἰσθητικόν.

<sup>c</sup> δραστήριον καὶ λογικὸν καὶ ἀσώματον καὶ νῶ τε καὶ λογισμῶ οἰκειότερον. <sup>d</sup> οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ.

<sup>e</sup> ἐνιαύσιον, see the preceding section on the first half of Ex. xii. 5.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Spec. Leg. iv. 235 τὸν ἐνιαυτὸν, ὅς, καθάπερ αὐτὸ μνηνεί τοῦνομα, αὐτὸς ἐν ἑαυτῷ πάντα περιέχει συμπεραιούμενος.

<sup>g</sup> τούτοις ὁμοία καὶ αἱ τῶν προκοπόντων ψυχῶν πάσχουσι.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. their life-giving qualities or the like: Aucher "vitae rationibus (causis)." <sup>i</sup> ἐπιθυμίαις.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "qualities."

<sup>k</sup> παθῶν.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, "post eam vero mutationem."

<sup>m</sup> Apparently the individual soul is meant.

<sup>n</sup> βλαστήματα.

<sup>o</sup> εὐβουλίας (vel sim.) καὶ σωφροσύνης: Aucher "prudentiae et sanae mentis."

<sup>p</sup> σοφίας.

<sup>q</sup> Aucher "oves et haedos."

<sup>r</sup> i.e. God, who is called ὑπερασπιστής in De Ebrietate 111.

EXODUS, BOOK I

to help even their ancestral gods. And finally the male (lambs) were chosen and appointed for the daily sacrifices, and the goats for the forgiveness of sins. These, however, are symbols of the virtuous soul which desires perfection.<sup>a</sup> First it was necessary to pluck out sins and then to wash them out and, being resplendent, to complete the daily (tasks) in the practice of virtue.<sup>b</sup>

9. (Ex. xii. 6a) Why does He command (them) to keep the sacrifice ° until the fourteenth (day of the month) ?<sup>d</sup>

(Consisting of) two Sabbaths,<sup>e</sup> it has in its nature a (special) honour because in this time the moon is adorned.<sup>f</sup> For when it has become full on the fourteenth (day), it becomes full of light in the perception of the people. And again through (another) fourteen (days) it recedes from its fullness of light to its conjunction,<sup>g</sup> and it wanes as much in comparison with the preceding Sabbath as the second (waxes) in comparison with the first.<sup>h</sup> For this reason the fourteenth (day) is pre-festive,<sup>i</sup> as though (it were) a road leading to festive rejoicings, during which it is incumbent upon us to meditate.

<sup>a</sup> τελειότητος.

<sup>b</sup> ἀρετῆ.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the Paschal lamb.

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ ἔσται ὑμῖν διατετηρημένον ἕως τῆς τεσσαρεσκαίδεκάτης (v.l., following Heb., adds ἡμέρας) τοῦ μηνὸς τούτου.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. weeks. The Greek prob. had ἑβδομάδας, see next note.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 149 ἄγεται γὰρ τεσσαρεσκαίδεκάτη τοῦ μηνός, ἣτις ἐκ δυεῖν ἑβδομάδων συνέστηκεν, ἵνα μηδὲν ἀμοιρῆ τῶν ἀξίων τιμῆς ἑβδομάδος ἀλλ' αὐτὴ κατάρχη πᾶσιν ἐπιφανείας καὶ σεμνότητος.

<sup>g</sup> ἀπὸ πλησιφαοῦς εἰς σύνοδον, cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 178.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher renders obscurely, "diminuitur eo magis quam anterieus sabbatum crescit, et quantum se habebat et secundum ad primum (vel, unitatem)."

<sup>i</sup> προέροτος, as in De Spec. Leg. ii. 176, which supports Aucher's emendation of Arm. γαϱαϱατουνακ ("progressive") to γαϱαϱατῶνακ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

10. (Ex. xii. 6b) "And," He says, "all the multitude shall sacrifice." <sup>a</sup>

Now at other times the daily priests <sup>b</sup> (chosen) from the people, being appointed for the slaughtering and taking care of them, performed the sacrifices. But at the Pass-over, <sup>c</sup> here spoken of, the whole people together is honoured with the priesthood, for all of them act for themselves <sup>d</sup> in the performance of the sacrifice. For what reason? Because, in the first place, <sup>e</sup> it was the beginning of this kind of sacrifice, the Levites not yet having been elected <sup>f</sup> to the priesthood nor a temple set up. And in the second place, because the Saviour and Liberator, <sup>g</sup> Who alone leads out all men to freedom, deemed them (all) equally worthy of sharing in the priesthood and in freedom as well, since all who were of the same nation had given evidence of equal piety. <sup>h</sup> And because, I think, <sup>i</sup> He judged all the Egyptians to be equally impious, unworthy and unclean, He intended to punish them. For they would not have suffered this if they had not been guilty of the same things before the Father (and) Judge and His justice, <sup>j</sup> so that this (period of) time brought out the equality of both nations, the Egyptian and the Hebrew—an equality of impiety in one, and of piety in the other. In the third place, because a temple had not yet been built, He showed that the dwelling together of several good persons in the home was a temple and altar, in order that in the first sacrifices of the nation no one might be found to have more than any other. In the fourth place, He thought it just and fitting that before <sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ σφάζουσι αὐτὸ πᾶν τὸ πλῆθος συναγωγῆς υἰῶν Ἰσραήλ (Heb. "all the community of the congregation of Israel"). Philo comments more briefly and somewhat similarly on this half-verse in De Spec. Leg. ii. 145-146.

<sup>b</sup> οἱ ἐφημερευοί.

<sup>c</sup> Πάσχα.

<sup>d</sup> αὐτουργοῦσι.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "nunc primum."

<sup>f</sup> χειροτονηθέντων.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ σωτὴρ καὶ ἐλευθεροποιός.

<sup>h</sup> εὐσέβειαν.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "vereor"—a puzzling rendering.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "coram Patre et in tribunali justitiae suae."

EXODUS, BOOK I

choosing the particular priests <sup>a</sup> He should grant <sup>b</sup> priest-hood to the whole nation in order that the part might be adorned <sup>c</sup> through the whole, and not the whole through a part—above all the popular element.<sup>d</sup> And He permitted the nation, as the very first thing to be done, to prepare with their own hands <sup>e</sup> and to slaughter the sacrifice of the so-called Passover <sup>f</sup> (as) the beginning of good things.<sup>g</sup> And He decided <sup>h</sup> that there is nothing more beautiful than that the divine cult <sup>i</sup> should be performed by all in harmony.<sup>j</sup> And also that the nation might be an archetypal example <sup>k</sup> to the temple-wardens <sup>l</sup> and priests and those who exercise the high-priesthood <sup>m</sup> in carrying out the sacred rites. In the fifth place, because He wished every household and similarly (every) head of a household <sup>n</sup> to act worthily and not to incur any profanation, (being) like a priest who is purified of all sins in whatever he says or does or thinks. And in now speaking of the multitude as a “congregation”<sup>o</sup> He uses apposite names <sup>p</sup> for a more exact appearance of sobriety <sup>q</sup> in the matters entrusted to them <sup>r</sup> now at the present time. For when the whole multitude came together with harmonious oneness to give thanks for their migration, He no longer called them a multitude or a nation or a people but a “congregation.”

<sup>a</sup> τοὺς κατὰ μέρος ἱερεῖς. <sup>b</sup> χάρισασθαι.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher “honorificaretur.”

<sup>d</sup> τὸ λαϊκόν: Aucher “populares.”

<sup>e</sup> χειροποιεῖσθαι.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. the Paschal lamb.

<sup>g</sup> Apparently the kindnesses of God are meant.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher “certam eam (i.e. “the nation”) reddens.”

<sup>i</sup> τὴν θεϊαν λατρείαν (or διακονίαν vel sim.).

<sup>j</sup> Aucher “unanimitur.”

<sup>k</sup> παράδειγμα ἀρχέτυπον.

<sup>l</sup> τοῖς νεωκόροις, i.e. the Levites.

<sup>m</sup> τῇ ἀρχιερωσύνῃ.

<sup>n</sup> οἰκοδεσπότην.

<sup>o</sup> Philo here refers to the LXX expression πλῆθος συναγωγῆς.

<sup>p</sup> Sic (plural): Aucher “nomenclaturam.”

<sup>q</sup> Or “watchfulness”: Aucher “vigilantiae.”

<sup>r</sup> Aucher “in rebus suppositis.”

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

And so it happened that they congregated and came together not only in body but also in mind <sup>a</sup> as being about to sacrifice with one character and one soul.<sup>b</sup>

11. (Ex. xii. 6c) Why is the Passover <sup>c</sup> sacrificed at evening? <sup>d</sup>

Perhaps because good things <sup>e</sup> were about to befall at night (and because) it was not the custom to offer a sacrifice in darkness, and for those who were about to experience good things at night it was not (proper) to prepare it before the ninth hour.<sup>f</sup> Therefore it was not at random but knowingly that the prophet <sup>g</sup> set a time between the evenings.<sup>h</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>i</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>j</sup> this should be said. The true sacrifice <sup>k</sup> of God-loving souls consists in abandoning an empty and visible splendour <sup>l</sup> and attempting to change to the un-

<sup>a</sup> οὐ μόνον σώματι ἀλλὰ καὶ διανοίᾳ.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν ἡθροί (vel sim.) καὶ μιᾷ ψυχῇ.

<sup>c</sup> ἡ διάβασις ἢ τὰ διαβατήρια = τὸ πάσχα as in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 255 and De Spec. Leg. ii. 145.

<sup>d</sup> LXX πρὸς ἑσπέραν: Heb. "between the evenings (dual)." In Lev. xxiii. 5 LXX renders more literally, ἀπὸ μέσον τῶν ἑσπερινῶν, but in Num. ix. 3 it has πρὸς ἑσπέραν as here. In De Spec. Leg. ii. 145 Philo sets the time for sacrificing the Paschal lamb "from noon until evening."

<sup>e</sup> εὐπραγίαι, i.e. the judgment executed on the Egyptians, see below, QE i. 20 on Ex. xii. 12.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. 3 P.M. In Palestine the Paschal lamb was usually slaughtered at about 3 P.M., although theoretically the slaughtering might be done "between noon and twilight" (see above, note d).

<sup>g</sup> ὁ προφήτης, i.e. Moses, here represented as speaking for God.

<sup>h</sup> See note d. Aucher renders more literally, "tempus mediocre ad vesperam vergens."

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>k</sup> ἡ ἀψευδὴς θυσία: Aucher "infallibile sacrificium."

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. parḳ may here reflect δόξαν in the sense of "opinion."

EXODUS, BOOK I

apparent and invisible.<sup>a</sup> Now the time of evening does not have a refulgent brightness, such as occurs at midday, nor is it darkened, although while day is near and close to night, it is dimmed to a certain extent. Such happens to be<sup>b</sup> the state of progressive men.<sup>c</sup> For they do not completely change to virtue<sup>d</sup> nor do they remain unhindered<sup>e</sup> in the affairs of mortal life.

12. (Ex. xii. 7) Why does He command (them) to place some of the blood upon the doorposts and upon the lintel of every house?<sup>f</sup>

That is (because), as I said a little earlier,<sup>g</sup> at that time every house became an altar and a temple of God for the contemplative,<sup>h</sup> wherefore He rightly deemed them worthy of making divine offerings of blood upon the front parts of each (house)<sup>i</sup> that they might at the same time, showing

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "in invisibilem studere transferri."

<sup>b</sup> πέφυκε: Aucher "habetur ex natura."

<sup>c</sup> τῶν προκοπτόντων.

<sup>d</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "sine obstaculo (vel, discrimine)." One would expect "nor do they remain completely immersed" or the like. The Arm. anargel renders ἀκόλυτος, ἀκόλαστος and ἀκρατής. Perhaps, therefore, we should here render, "incontinent."

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ λήμφονται ἀπὸ τοῦ αἵματος καὶ θήσουσιν ἐπὶ τῶν δύο σταθμῶν καὶ ἐπὶ τὴν φλιὰν ἐν τοῖς οἴκοις ἐν οἷς ἐὰν φάγωσιν αὐτὰ ἐν αὐτοῖς. The meanings of the two architectural terms in the Arm. and LXX texts are not precise, since both terms in both languages may render "doorpost" or "lintel" or "threshold." But the Philonic context and the Heb. original favour the rendering given above. Aucher, however, renders, "super limina et super postes."

<sup>g</sup> In QE i. 10.

<sup>h</sup> τοῖς θεωρητικοῖς (or ὁρατικοῖς)= Israel as elsewhere in Philo, e.g. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 78, De Somniis ii. 173; so, too, Aucher, "contemplativis (Israelitis)."

<sup>i</sup> As Aucher notes, the meaning is somewhat uncertain because of the ambiguity of two of the Arm. words; he renders, "unde jure divini sacrificii ex sanguine offerendo super postes singulorum dignos eos afficit."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

contempt of their enemies, sacrifice without fear and, as it were, bear testimony to and show confidence in the greatness and abundance of God's gracious acts.<sup>a</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>b</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> it is this. Since our soul is threefold,<sup>d</sup> the heart is likened to the lintel, desire to the house, and reason to the two doorposts. And since each of these parts is destined 'to move on' to righteousness and piety and worthy holiness<sup>e</sup> and to change to other virtues,<sup>f</sup> it is necessary for it to participate in virtue, to which it is kin by blood.<sup>g</sup>

13. (Ex. xii. 8a) Why does He command (them) to eat the flesh of the Paschal lamb<sup>h</sup> at night?<sup>k</sup>

As for the literal meaning,<sup>l</sup> since good things<sup>m</sup> were ordered to take place at night, it was right<sup>n</sup> that the

<sup>a</sup> τῶν τοῦ θεοῦ χαρίτων. Aucher renders the last clause somewhat differently, "sed quasi ostentantes confidenter per magnitudinem copiamque Dei gratiae."

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> Cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 225 ψυχὴ γὰρ τρισμερῆς μὲν ἐστὶ. Philo here follows Plato in assuming that the soul has three faculties or parts, emotion (θυμός), appetite or desire (ἐπιθυμία) and reason (λόγος).

<sup>e</sup> μέλλοντος.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "to migrate."

<sup>g</sup> εἰς δικαιοσύνην καὶ εὐσέβειαν καὶ ἀξίαν ὁσιότητα.

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετὰς.

<sup>i</sup> The meaning of the last clause is uncertain. Aucher renders, "necesse habet ut participet sanguinem cognatum virtute," adding in a footnote, "vel, ut consanguineus participet virtutem." Apparently Philo means that blood is in general a symbol of kinship, cf. De Virtutibus 79.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. p'esxeeki = τοῦ πάσχα.

<sup>k</sup> LXX καὶ φάγονται τὰ κρέα τῆ νυκτὶ ταύτη.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>m</sup> εὐπραγιῶν, i.e. the judgment executed upon the Egyptians, cf. QE i. 11 and 20.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher, in disregard of the Arm. word-order, renders, "rectum fuit secundum ordinem."

EXODUS, BOOK I

victims sacrificed in thanksgiving should be consumed by the eaters at the same time. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>a</sup> it was proper for those who wished truly to repent<sup>b</sup> to effect the purification of their souls<sup>c</sup> invisibly and without making signs and not saying anything more but only believing (themselves) to stand in night and darkness, in order that no visible (and) visionary form of imaginary idols might appear to be seen.<sup>d</sup> And none the less does glory follow the humility of the worshippers,<sup>e</sup> for darkness does not make the stars invisible; rather do they appear more clearly at night.

14. (Ex. xii. 8b) (Why) does He command that the flesh of the Passover<sup>f</sup> sacrifice be offered roasted?<sup>g</sup>

First, for the sake of speed, for He was hastening the exodus. Second, for the sake of simplicity,<sup>h</sup> for that which is roasted is prepared more simply<sup>i</sup> and without dressing. In the third place, He does not permit (us) to lead a life

<sup>a</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>b</sup> μετανοεῖν.

<sup>c</sup> Cf. De Spec. Leg. ii. 147 "But to those accustomed to turn literal facts into allegory the Passover (τὰ διαβατήρια) suggests the purification of the soul (ψυχῆς κάθαρσιν)."

<sup>d</sup> The text is somewhat obscure. Aucher renders a little more freely, "coquod nulla videatur imaginaria visio simulacri idolorum instar." In De Spec. Leg. i. 319-323 Philo inveighs against the pagan mysteries celebrated in the darkness of night, while in De Spec. Leg. ii. 155 he points out that the Passover sacrifice takes place in the clear light of the full moon.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher less aptly, I think, renders, "quum non parva sequitur religiosos humilitas ac gloria."

<sup>f</sup> τῶν διαβατηρίων, see QE i. 11, note c.

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ φάγονται τὰ κρέα . . . ὅπτα πυρί.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. lit. = δι' ἀκρασίαν, which usu. means "intemperance" in Philo, but here means more literally "not being mixed (with spices, etc.)." Possibly, however, the original was ἀκηρασίαν "purity."

<sup>i</sup> ἀπλούστερον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

filled with luxury,<sup>a</sup> for boiling<sup>b</sup> is an indication of variety and seasoning.<sup>c</sup>

15. (Ex. xii. 8c) (Why) does He say that they shall offer<sup>d</sup> unleavened bread on bitter herbs together with the above-mentioned sacrifice?<sup>e</sup>

Unleavened bread is (a sign) of great haste and speed, while the bitter herbs (are a sign) of the life of bitterness and struggle which they endure as slaves. That is the literal meaning.<sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> this is worth noting, (namely) that that which is leavened and fermented<sup>h</sup> rises, while that which is unleavened is low.<sup>i</sup> Each of these is a symbol of types of soul,<sup>j</sup> one being haughty and swollen with arrogance, the other being unchangeable and prudent, choosing the middle way rather than extremes because of desire and zeal for equality.<sup>k</sup> But the bitter herbs are a manifestation of a psychic migration,<sup>l</sup> through which one removes from passion to impassivity and from wickedness to virtue.<sup>m</sup> For those who naturally and genuinely repent<sup>n</sup> become bitter toward their former way of life and are vexed with their wretched life, weeping, sighing and groaning because they have given over the most necessary part of time to that seductive

<sup>a</sup> τρυφῆς vel sim. : Aucher "voluptate."

<sup>b</sup> ἐψησας, as opposed to ὄπησας.

<sup>c</sup> ποικιλίας καὶ ἀρτύματος.

<sup>d</sup> Scripture "eat," see next note.

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ ἄζυμα ἐπὶ πικρῶν ἔδονται. In commenting briefly on this phrase in De Congressu 162 Philo cites it as ἐπὶ πικρῶν τὰ ἄζυμα ἐσθίειν.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ἐζυμωμένον <καὶ> ζέον vel sim. : Aucher "fermentatum pustulis."

<sup>i</sup> ταπεινόν : Aucher "desidet."

<sup>j</sup> ὡν ἑκάτερον σύμβολόν ἐστι τῶν ψυχῶν τρόπων.

<sup>k</sup> ἰσότητος.

<sup>l</sup> ψυχικῆς ἀποικίας : Aucher "spiritualis emigrationis."

<sup>m</sup> ἐκ παθῶν εἰς ἀπάθειαν καὶ ἐκ πονηρίας εἰς ἀρετήν.

<sup>n</sup> φύσει καὶ γνησίως μετανοοῦσι.

EXODUS, BOOK I

and deceitful mistress, Desire,<sup>a</sup> and have spent <sup>b</sup> the prime of their youth in being deceived by her when they ought to have renewed themselves and advanced <sup>c</sup> in the contemplation of wisdom <sup>d</sup> toward the goal of a happy, fortunate and immortal life.<sup>e</sup> And so, we who desire repentance eat the unleavened bread with bitter herbs, that is, we first eat bitterness over our old <sup>f</sup> and unendurable life, and then (we eat) the opposite of overboastful arrogance through meditation on humility,<sup>g</sup> which is called reverence.<sup>h</sup> For the memory of former sins causes fear, and by restraining it through recollection brings no little profit to the mind.<sup>i</sup>

16. (Ex. xii. 9a) What is the meaning of the words, "You shall not eat (it) raw" <sup>j</sup> ?

And who of mankind will eat raw meat? Carnivores among beasts and eaters of raw flesh (alone do so). But man is a tame animal by nature,<sup>k</sup> especially those who are adorned with a character <sup>l</sup> in accordance with the divine law.<sup>m</sup> Accordingly, He appears to allegorize <sup>n</sup> all this, for He says that those who change from wickedness to virtue <sup>o</sup> shall not eat of repentance <sup>p</sup> when it is raw and crude but (shall do so) by heating it, that is, with hot and ignited principles. For many men change unexpectedly to the opposite by an irrational impulse,<sup>q</sup> from generosity to

<sup>a</sup> ἐπιθυμία.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, "male traduxerunt."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher combines the two infinitives in rendering, "jucunde proficere." <sup>d</sup> τῆ σοφίας θεωρία.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "ad felicem immortalis vitae statum."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "oldness" (παλαιότητος): Aucher "transactum tempus." <sup>g</sup> ταπεινώσεως.

<sup>h</sup> Prob. αἰδώς: Aucher "pudor."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher renders less literally and less intelligibly, "et in se recolligens mentem, non paucam utilitatem fert."

<sup>j</sup> LXX: οὐκ ἔδεσθε ἀπ' αὐτῶν ὠμόν.

<sup>k</sup> ἡμερον ζῶων φύσει.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "cunctis moribus."

<sup>m</sup> κατὰ τὸν θεῖον νόμον.

<sup>n</sup> ἀλληγορεῖν.

<sup>o</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>p</sup> μετανοίας, see the preceding section.

<sup>q</sup> ἀλόγῳ ὀρμῇ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

parsimony, and from a barbarous,<sup>a</sup> artificial and delicate way of life to a harsh way of life,<sup>b</sup> and from love of glory they fly to ingloriousness. These men no one will praise. For, as one might say allegorically, their change is raw and crude and unstable,<sup>c</sup> wherefore they are not aware of changing, not to virtue but to the opposite vices. But those who change by the principle of knowledge<sup>d</sup> and are hardened<sup>e</sup> as though by the force of fire have acquired a stable and unmoving usefulness.

17. (Ex. xii. 9b) Why was the head to be offered with the feet and the entrails at the Paschal sacrifice? <sup>f</sup>

The literal meaning <sup>g</sup> is, I believe, somewhat as follows. Since He believes that the whole sacrifice should be consumed, He mentions all the parts, indicating <sup>h</sup> that it is not proper to leave anything at all. But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> the head is the first, highest and principal (part). But the internal (parts) He opposes to the external. For He says that it is fitting for him who is purified to purify his entire soul <sup>j</sup> with his inner desires,<sup>k</sup> and the words that go outward and the deeds through serviceable instruments <sup>l</sup> and through the head (as) chief, as it were.

18. (Ex. xii. 10) (Why) does He command that the remainder of the Paschal sacrifice be burnt at dawn? <sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "agresti."

<sup>b</sup> σκληραγωγίαν.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders inaccurately, "quoniam cruda et inconstans est, ut aliquis diceret, summa commutatio eorum."

<sup>d</sup> λόγω ἐπιστήμης vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "are fitted together": Aucher "componuntur."

<sup>f</sup> LXX κεφαλὴν σὺν τοῖς ποσὶν (Heb. "legs") καὶ τοῖς ἐνδοσθίοις.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> αἰνιττόμενος: Aucher "declarans."

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. noun (= ψυχή) is strangely in the plural.

<sup>k</sup> ἐπιθυμίαις.

<sup>l</sup> διὰ τῶν ὑπηρετούντων ὀργάνων.

<sup>m</sup> τὰ δὲ καταλιπόμενα ἀπ' αὐτοῦ ἕως πρωὶ ἐν πυρὶ κατακαύσετε.

EXODUS, BOOK I

He did not think it right that the sun should first shine upon the Passover <sup>a</sup> because of His completing a good thing <sup>b</sup> at night, as I have said.<sup>c</sup> And why this was at night has already been said, where the manifestations of deeds took place and the praises of the deeds. And it was commanded that the sacrifice be prepared at this time in order that all the limbs of the sacrifice might be consumed. For many of the necessary things are wont to be overlooked in an unexpected and hurried exodus, especially by those who are hurrying to make the exodus with great speed. (And) it was not proper for the unworthy and unclean hands of the Egyptians to touch the remains. Wherefore, taking care that they should not be defiled in any way, He handed them over to an undefiled king, the fire.<sup>d</sup>

*19. (Ex. xii. 11) (Why) does He command (everyone) to eat, having a girdle and shoes and a staff? <sup>e</sup>

All the things mentioned are an indication of the manner of journeying of those who are in haste. For it is the custom of those who are about to travel a long way to wear shoes and to be girt with a girdle and to take a staff for their needs, because shoes protect the feet, while girding oneself makes movement easier for the legs, and a staff is useful to lean on and to drive away poisonous reptiles and other beasts. This, then, suffices for the explanation of the literal meaning.<sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> this must be said. The girdles represent drawing together <sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τῶν διαβατηρίων, cf. QE i. 4.

<sup>b</sup> ἐπ' αἰῶνα, i.e. the judgment executed on the Egyptians.

<sup>c</sup> In QE i. 11, 13. See also QE i. 20 on Ex. xii. 12.

<sup>d</sup> Apparently fire is here called "an undefiled king" in implied contrast to the unclean king of Egypt.

<sup>e</sup> LXX οὕτως δὲ φάγεσθε αὐτό· αἱ ὀσφύες ὑμῶν περιεζωσμένοι καὶ τὰ ὑποδήματα ἐν τοῖς ποσὶν ὑμῶν καὶ αἱ βακτηρίαι ἐν ταῖς χερσὶν ὑμῶν· καὶ ἔδεσθε αὐτὸ μετὰ σπουδῆς· πάσχα ἐστὶν κυρίως. Philo briefly allegorizes this verse in Leg. All. iii. 154 and De Sacr. Abelis 63. <sup>f</sup> τοῦ ῥητοῦ. <sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. (which begins here) has στάσιν, while the Arm. more closely renders συστολήν or the like.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and the coming together of the sensual pleasures and other passions,<sup>a</sup> which, being, as it were, released and let go, overtake all souls.<sup>b</sup> Wherefore not ineptly does He add that one must have a girdle about the middle, for this place is considered as the manger of the many-headed beast of desire within us.<sup>c</sup>

And the staves seem to represent a royal, disciplinary<sup>d</sup> and stable form, for the rod is a symbol of kingship and an instrument of discipline for those who are unable to act prudently<sup>e</sup> without being scolded.<sup>f</sup> And it is a figure<sup>g</sup> of unmoving and stable souls which abandon whatever inclines to either side and in two (directions). And the shoes indicate the covering and protection of one who is engaged in hurrying not on a trackless way but on a well-travelled and worn path which leads to virtue.<sup>h</sup> Wherefore that which is (here) said is contrary to what (actually) takes place. For, He says, they must have shoes "in their feet"<sup>i</sup> which is impossible and cannot be done, for the feet of the wearers are different from the shoes. But it seems from this and many other (passages) that He is recalling the mind to the contemplation of natural ideas.<sup>j</sup> For shoes are inanimate while feet are animate, just as is each of the various other parts of the body. And so, He says, let not the inanimate be a covering for that which

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., συναγωγὴν ἡδονῶν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων παθῶν.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly ἂν τέως ἀνεῖτο καὶ κεχάλαστο.

<sup>c</sup> Similarly the Greek frag. (which ends here), οὐκ ἀπὸ δὲ σκοποῦ προσέθηκε τὸ δεῖν ζώννυσθαι κατὰ τὴν ὀσφύν ὁ γὰρ τόπος ἐκεῖνος εἰς φάτην ἀποκέκριται πολυκεφάλῳ θρέμματι τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν ἐπιθυμιῶν.

<sup>d</sup> Or "admonitory": Aucher "monitivam."

<sup>e</sup> σωφρονίζεσθαι.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Mut. Nom. 175 ἡ ῥάβδος . . . ἡ νουθεσία, ὁ σωφρονισμός, ἡ παιδεία.

<sup>g</sup> τρόπος vel sim.: Aucher "exemplar."

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>i</sup> For homiletical purposes Philo dwells on the literal meaning of the LXX phrase τὰ ὑποδήματα ἐν τοῖς ποσίν.

<sup>j</sup> φυσικῶν ιδεῶν, i.e. religious-philosophical concepts.

EXODUS, BOOK I

has a soul but, on the contrary, let the animate (be a cover) for the inanimate in order that the better may not be held and contained by the bad but the bad by the better. For the Creator has made the soul queen and mistress of the body, and the body the obedient servant and slave of the soul.

20. (Ex. xii. 12) (Why) does He say, "And on all the gods of the Egyptians I will take vengeance; I (am) the Lord" <sup>a</sup>?

(This is said) concerning all unstable and unworthy things, for (only) up to a certain point does the pretence of divinized idols <sup>b</sup> succeed by accidentally attaining knowledge in giving oracular responses <sup>c</sup> through persuasive words and parables and still other (devices) which have their source in chance. And these are all of short duration, for they never see the light of sacred truth, <sup>d</sup> by which alone the Creator of all, Who keeps created beings in security and is truly <sup>e</sup> their Lord, can naturally be comprehended. <sup>f</sup> And the comprehension <sup>g</sup> of Him immediately dissolves unstable and unworthy human beliefs and the power <sup>h</sup> by which men are overwhelmed because of the impotence within them. And so, just as are the words of idols, so in all things is the way of life of the foolish man. For he who has a false and erroneous opinion <sup>i</sup> concerning the best, (namely) God, also has an erroneous and false way of life. And as for those who have true knowledge without <sup>a</sup> Philo here comments on only the last part of the verse which reads in full in the LXX text καὶ ἐλεύσομαι ἐν γῆ Αἰγύπτῳ ἐν τῇ νυκτὶ ταύτῃ καὶ πατάξω πᾶν πρωτότοκον ἐν γῆ Αἰγύπτῳ ἀπὸ ἀνθρώπου ἕως κτήνους, καὶ ἐν πᾶσι τοῖς θεοῖς τῶν Αἰγυπτίων ποιήσω τὴν ἐκδίκησιν (Heb. "judgments"): ἐγὼ κύριος.

<sup>b</sup> τύφος (vel sim.) τῶν θεοπλαστηθέντων εἰδώλων.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "in places of questioning."

<sup>d</sup> Aucher, disregarding the Arm. word-order, renders, "sanctum lumen veritatis."

<sup>e</sup> ὄντως: Aucher "solus."

<sup>f</sup> καταλαμβάνεσθαι πέφυκε.

<sup>g</sup> ἡ κατάληψις.

<sup>h</sup> τὴν δύναμιν.

<sup>i</sup> δόξα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

error concerning the Existent One,<sup>a</sup> their truthfulness is honoured in every other matter.

*21. (Ex. xii. 17) What is the meaning of the words, "I will bring out your force from Egypt"<sup>b</sup>? Why does He not say "you"<sup>c</sup>?

"Force" is the godly piety of the seeing nation.<sup>d</sup> Now, so long as those who have this force dwell in cities and villages, the cities and villages act well and properly, for they are adorned at least with the virtue<sup>e</sup> of others if not with their own.<sup>f</sup> But when (these inhabitants) depart, the portion of common good fortune is changed. For good men are the pillars of whole communities, and they support cities and city-governments as if they were great houses.<sup>g</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>h</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> it is this. Just as, when health leaves the body, illness immediately seizes it, so also, if godly piety, the force of the soul, departs, one must necessarily expect its waiting house-mate,<sup>j</sup> impotence and impiety, for not even a seed of decency<sup>k</sup> remains, but even if there is a small remaining spark, this too is driven out, and there supervenes a great and most severe affliction.

22. (Ex. xii. 22c) What is the meaning of the words,

<sup>a</sup> περὶ τοῦ ὄντος: Aucher "de Deo."

<sup>b</sup> Philo here comments on only part of vs. 17, of which the LXX text reads καὶ φυλάξετε τὴν ἐντολὴν (Heb. "unleavened bread") ταύτην ἐν γὰρ τῇ ἡμέρᾳ ταύτῃ ἐξάγω (Heb. "I brought out") τὴν δύναμιν ὑμῶν (Heb. "your hosts") ἐκ γῆς Αἰγύπτου, καὶ ποιήσετε τὴν ἡμέραν ταύτην εἰς γενεὰς ὑμῶν νόμιμον αἰῶνιον.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. instead of "your force."

<sup>d</sup> δύναμις ἐστὶ ἢ τοῦ ὁρατικοῦ γένους (i.e. Israel) θεοσεβεία.

<sup>e</sup> ἀρετῆ.

<sup>f</sup> ταῖς οἰκείαις.

<sup>g</sup> So, with one addition, the Greek fragment (which contains only this sentence), ἄνδρες ἀγαθοί, τροπικώτερον εἰπέιν, κίονές εἰσι δῆμων ὄλων, ὑπερείδοντες, καθάπερ οἰκίας μεγάλας, τὰς πόλεις καὶ τὰς πολιτείας.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "satellitum domesticum."

<sup>k</sup> καλοκάγαθίας.

EXODUS, BOOK I

“ And no one shall go out through the doors of his house until morning ” <sup>a</sup> ?

As for the literal meaning, <sup>b</sup> this must be said, (namely) that God wishes to accomplish His benefactions solely by His own hand without any human operator <sup>c</sup> both in punishing those who deserve every curse and in helping those to whom unjust and violent things happen. <sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>e</sup> “ morning ” is a figure of sense-perceptible light, <sup>f</sup> for the mind <sup>g</sup> until that time dwells in itself <sup>h</sup> alone, leaving the tumult of the senses. And sometimes, permitting itself to use the senses, it is wont to go about everywhere. Now this going about produces for it error and tracklessness, <sup>i</sup> for the doors, by which I understand the senses, <sup>j</sup> are opened to the streams of sense-perceptible things, <sup>k</sup> into which the mind throws itself down, as if from some high precipice, from the perfect, intelligible and incorporeal ideas. <sup>l</sup> But he who does not go out through the doors of the soul and experiences a good fear, sees only those things worthy to be seen, which shine forth <sup>m</sup> from thoughts stripped of the senses. Wherefore (Scripture) adds, “ The Lord will pass over the door, ” <sup>n</sup> by which I understand both the senses and all sense-perceptible things. For so long as the senses are released

<sup>a</sup> LXX ὑμεῖς δὲ οὐκ ἐξελεύσεσθε ἕκαστος τὴν θύραν τοῦ οἴκου αὐτοῦ ἕως πρωῆ.
<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher “ cooperatore.”

<sup>d</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, “ illos vero qui omnem maledictionem merent punire volens aut quibus iniqua quaedam per vim inferenda sint, id mediantibus aliis prosequi.”
<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> σημεῖον τροπικόν (vel sim.) ἐστὶ φωτὸς αἰσθητοῦ.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. demonstr. pron. here seems to be used as a reflexive. Aucher boldly renders, “ in corpore.”

<sup>i</sup> πλάνην καὶ ἀνοδίαν.

<sup>j</sup> τὰς αἰσθήσεις.

<sup>k</sup> Slightly emending the Arm. which lit. = τῶν αἰσθήσεων instead of τῶν αἰσθητῶν.

<sup>l</sup> ἀπὸ τῶν τελειῶν καὶ νοητῶν καὶ ἀσωμάτων ἰδεῶν.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher “ oriuntur.”

<sup>n</sup> See LXX of Ex. xii. 23b καὶ παρελεύσεται κύριος τὴν θύραν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and apart by themselves,<sup>a</sup> they belong to the mind.<sup>b</sup> But when they descend into the body, they give admittance to a baser idea, imitating, in a way, the nature of irrational creatures.<sup>c</sup>

23. (Ex. xii. 23c) (Why) does (Scripture) say that He will not let "the destroyer enter your houses to strike"<sup>d</sup>?

It weaves into the whole legislation<sup>e</sup> the faithful and worthy sentiment<sup>f</sup> that we are not to make the Deity the cause of any evil.<sup>g</sup> For when it says that He will not suffer the destroyer, it makes plain that corruption and destruction are brought about through certain others as ministers but not through the sovereign King.<sup>h</sup> There you have the literal meaning.<sup>i</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>j</sup> this must be said. Into every soul at its very birth<sup>k</sup> there enter two powers,<sup>l</sup> the salutary and the destructive.<sup>m</sup> If the salutary one is victorious and prevails, the opposite

<sup>a</sup> ὅσον ἀφεται εἰσι καὶ ἴδιαι καθ' ἑαυτὰς αἱ ἰδέαι: Aucher "quantum liberi sunt et in se collecti sensus."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "they are of the mind": Aucher "mentis sunt."

<sup>c</sup> ἀλόγων ζώων φύσιν.

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ οὐκ ἀφήσει τὸν ὀλεθρεύοντα εἰσελθεῖν εἰς τὰς οἰκίας ὑμῶν πατάξαι. Philo quotes this passage and comments on it very briefly in Leg. All. ii. 34.

<sup>e</sup> νομοθεσία.

<sup>f</sup> γνώμην: Aucher "voluntatem."

<sup>g</sup> That God is not responsible for any evil is stated by Philo in several places, e.g. De Confus. Ling. 161, 182. Sometimes, however, he admits that God sometimes Himself inflicts evil as a punishment, see Wolfson, Philo, i. 282, 382.

<sup>h</sup> διὰ τοῦ πρώτου βασιλέως.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>k</sup> ἅμα τῇ γενέσει.

<sup>l</sup> δυνάμεις.

<sup>m</sup> ἡ μὲν σωτηρία, ἡ δὲ φθοροποιός. These powers are not to be identified with the two chief powers or attributes of God, the βασιλική or κολαστήριος δύναμις and the εὐεργέτης or ποιητική δύναμις, on which see QG ii. 51, iv. 2, QE ii. 68 et al. They correspond more closely to the good and evil cosmic powers, identified with good and bad angels (or demons) respectively.

EXODUS, BOOK I

one is too weak to see.<sup>a</sup> And if the latter prevails, no profit at all or little is obtained from the salutary one. Through these powers the world<sup>b</sup> too was created. People call them by other names: the salutary (power) they call powerful and beneficent, and the opposite one (they call) unbounded<sup>c</sup> and destructive. Thus, the sun and moon and the appropriate positions of the other stars and their ordered functions and the whole heaven together come into being and exist through the two (powers). And they are created<sup>d</sup> in accordance with the better part of these,<sup>e</sup> namely when the salutary and beneficent (power) brings to an end<sup>f</sup> the unbounded and destructive nature. Wherefore also to those who have attained such a state and a nature similar to this is immortality given. But the nation<sup>g</sup> is a mixture of both (these powers), from which the heavens and the entire world as a whole have received this mixture. Now, sometimes the evil becomes greater in this mixture, and hence (all creatures) live in torment, harm, ignominy, contention, battle and bodily illness together with all the other things in human life, as in the whole world, so in man. And this mixture is in both the wicked man and the wise man<sup>h</sup> but not in the same way. For the souls of foolish men have the unbounded and

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. inf. may be either active or passive, hence we may here render "to be seen." Moreover, the verb tesanem renders φροντίζειν as well as ὄρᾶν, hence Aucher here renders, "ad aliquid sibi providendum." I suspect, however, that the original reading was not ὄρᾶν "to see" but ὄρμᾶν "to attack."

<sup>b</sup> ὁ κόσμος.

<sup>c</sup> Prob. ἄπειρον, perhaps here used in the sense of the indeterminate, inferior principle of the Pythagoreans.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. stanam here renders κτίζειν rather than κτᾶσθαι, as Aucher supposes, see the next note.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, "acquiritur autem melior eorum pars."

<sup>f</sup> Form and meaning of the verb katarem, which usually renders τελειοῦν, are here not certain: Aucher "subigit."

<sup>g</sup> It is not clear whether this refers to the nation (γένος) of Israel, as the Arm. glossator supposes, or to the human race.

<sup>h</sup> ἐν τῷ σοφῷ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

destructive rather than the powerful and salutary (power), and it <sup>a</sup> is full of misery when it dwells with earthly creatures. But the prudent and noble (soul) rather receives the powerful and salutary (power) and, on the contrary, possesses in itself good fortune and happiness, <sup>b</sup> being carried around with the heaven because of kinship <sup>c</sup> with it. Most excellently, therefore, does (Scripture) say that He will not let "the destroyer enter your houses to strike," and this is what (actually) happens, for the force which is the cause of destruction strives, <sup>d</sup> as it were, to enter the soul, but is prevented by the divine beneficences <sup>e</sup> from striking (it), for these are salutary. But those from whom the favours and gifts of God <sup>f</sup> are separated and cut off suffer the experience of desertion and widowhood. <sup>g</sup> The meaning is somewhat as follows. Into this soul there extend and enter visible appearances <sup>h</sup> which are mixed in accordance with various kinds of involuntary traits of character, <sup>i</sup> sometimes naked and unarmed, and sometimes armed and in a certain manner <sup>j</sup> threatening death, and they inflict mighty blows upon the thoughts. <sup>k</sup> Now, these blows are the admission <sup>l</sup> of appearances. But perfect good is not obtained from any of these.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "which," referring to the destructive power rather than to the salutary one.

<sup>b</sup> Or "good fame."

<sup>c</sup> συγγένειαν.

<sup>d</sup> φιλοτιμείται vel sim. : Aucher "inhibetur."

<sup>e</sup> ὑπὸ τῶν θείων ἐνεργειῶν.

<sup>f</sup> αἱ τοῦ θεοῦ χάριτες καὶ δωρεαί.

<sup>g</sup> ἐρημίας καὶ χηρείας.

<sup>h</sup> φαντασίαι : Aucher "imaginationes."

<sup>i</sup> ἀκουσίων τρόπων vel sim. : Aucher "mores involuntarios."

<sup>j</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>k</sup> τοὺς λογισμούς.

<sup>l</sup> συγχώρησις vel sim. : Aucher "admissio."

BOOK II <sup>a</sup>

*1. (Ex. xx. 25b) What is the meaning of the words, "If thou strike thy hand-tool against it, then it is defiled" <sup>b</sup>?

Those who presume to lay hands upon nature and transform the works of nature by their own undertakings defile the undefiled.<sup>c</sup> For the things of nature are perfect and full and are not in need of any excision or addition or anything at all.<sup>d</sup>

*2. (Ex. xxii. 21)<sup>e</sup> Why does (Scripture) in admonishing, "Thou shalt not oppress a sojourner," add, "For ye were sojourners in the land of the Egyptians" <sup>f</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> Book II of the Quaestiones in Exodum, which is about three times as long as Book I, probably contains most, if not all, of what were, in the original Greek, Books III-V. See the Introduction.

<sup>b</sup> The whole verse reads in LXX εὖν δὲ θυσιαστήριον ἐκ λίθων ποιῆς μοι, οὐκ οἰκοδομήσεις αὐτοὺς τμητούς. τὸ γὰρ ἐνχειρίδιόν σου (Heb. "thy knife") ἐπιβέβληκας ἐπ' αὐτούς (Heb. "if thou lift against it"), καὶ μεμίανται (Heb. "then thou wilt defile it"). The Greek frag. reads more briefly τί ἐστι "τὸ γὰρ ἐγχειρίδιόν σου" καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς;

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag., οἱ τὴν φύσιν παρεγχειρεῖν τολμῶντες καὶ τὰ ἔργα τῆς φύσεως ἐγχειρήμασιν ἰδίους μεταμορφοῦντες τὰ ἀμίαντα μαινοῦσι.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly τέλεια γὰρ καὶ πλήρη τὰ τῆς φύσεως, προσθήκης οὐδεμιᾶς δεόμενα.

<sup>e</sup> Heb., Ex. xxii. 20.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ προσήλυτον (Heb. gēr originally meant "sojourner" or "guest," "client," etc., later "proselyte" as in the LXX) οὐ κακώσετε οὐδὲ μὴ θλίψετε αὐτόν· ἦτε γὰρ προσήλυτοι ἐν γῆ Αἰγύπτῳ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(Scripture) first makes it clearly apparent and demonstrable <sup>a</sup> that in reality <sup>b</sup> the sojourner <sup>c</sup> is one who circumcises not his uncircumcision but his desires and sensual pleasures and the other passions of the soul.<sup>d</sup> For in Egypt the Hebrew nation was not circumcised <sup>e</sup> but being mistreated with all (kinds of) mistreatment by the inhabitants in their hatred of strangers, it lived with them in self-restraint and endurance, not by necessity but rather of its own free choice,<sup>f</sup> because it took refuge in God the Saviour, Who sent His beneficent power and delivered from their difficult and hopeless situation those who made supplication (to Him).<sup>g</sup> Therefore (Scripture) adds,<sup>h</sup> "Ye yourselves know the soul of the sojourner." But what is the mind of the sojourner <sup>i</sup> if not <sup>j</sup> alienation from belief in many gods <sup>k</sup> and familiarity with honouring the one

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly ἐμφανέστατα παρίστησιν.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. (see next note but one) has nothing corresponding to the Arm. isk = "in reality" or the like.

<sup>c</sup> Here, as usually, Philo takes προσήλυτος in the sense of "proselyte."

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag. (with one change of word-order), ὅτι προσήλυτός ἐστιν, οὐχ ὁ περιτμηθεὶς τὴν ἀκροβυστίαν ἀλλ' ὁ τὰς ἡδονὰς καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας καὶ τὰ ἄλλα πάθη τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ γὰρ τὸ Ἑβραῖον γένος οὐ περιτέμνητο.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., κακῶθ' ἐν δὲ πάσαις κακώσεσι τῆς παρὰ τῶν ἐγχωρίων περὶ τοὺς ξένους ὠμότητος, ἐγκρατεία καὶ καρτερία συνέβιον οὐκ ἀνάγκη μᾶλλον ἢ ἐθειλοσίου γνώμη.

<sup>g</sup> So the Greek frag., διὰ τὴν ἐπὶ τὸν σωτῆρα θεὸν καταφυγὴν, ὃς ἐξ ἀπόρων καὶ ἀμηχάνων ἐπιπέμψας τὴν εὐεργέτιν δύναμιν ἐρύσατο τοὺς ἰκέτας.

<sup>h</sup> In Ex. xxiii. 9, of which the LXX text reads καὶ προσήλυτον οὐ θλίβετε· ὑμεῖς γὰρ οἴδατε τὴν ψυχὴν τοῦ προσήλυτου· αὐτοὶ γὰρ προσήλυτοι ἦτε ἐν γῆ Αἰγύπτῳ.

<sup>i</sup> So the Greek frag., τίς δὲ προσήλυτου διάνοιά ἐστιν; Note the shift from LXX's ψυχὴ to Philo's διάνοια.

<sup>j</sup> The words "if not" are omitted in the Greek frag., see next note but one.

<sup>k</sup> Aucher amplifies in rendering, "a voluntate serviendi multis Diis."

EXODUS, BOOK II

God and Father of all? <sup>a</sup> In the second place, some call strangers "newcomers." <sup>b</sup> But strangers are also those who by themselves have run to the truth, not <sup>c</sup> in the same way as those who made their sojourn in Egypt. <sup>d</sup> For these are newcomers to the land, <sup>e</sup> while those are (newcomers) to laws and customs. <sup>f</sup> But the common name of "newcomers" is ascribed to both. <sup>g</sup>

*3. (Ex. xxii. 22) <sup>h</sup> Why does (Scripture) prohibit mistreating every widow and orphan? <sup>i</sup>

It <sup>j</sup> does not permit doing wrong to anyone, male or female, even among strangers. <sup>k</sup> It does, however, give a better and special share of thoughtfulness to widows and orphans, <sup>l</sup> since they are deprived of closely related helpers and caretakers—the widows of their husbands, and the orphans of their parents. <sup>m</sup> It therefore wishes them to

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. reads ἀλλοτριώσεις τῆς πολυθέου δόξης, οἰκείωσης δὲ τῆς πρὸς τὸν ἕνα καὶ πατέρα τῶν ὄλων τιμῆς.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek frag., δεύτερον ἐπήλυδας ἔνιοι καλοῦσι τοὺς ξένους.

<sup>c</sup> The negative is omitted in the Greek frag., see next note.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. reads ξένοι δὲ καὶ οἱ πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθειαν αὐτομοληκότες, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον τοῖς ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ ξενιτεύσασιν.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., οὗτοι μὲν γὰρ ἐπήλυδες χώρας.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., ἐκεῖνοι δὲ νομίμων καὶ ἔθῶν εἰσι.

<sup>g</sup> So the Greek frag., τὸ δὲ ὄνομα κοινὸν ἑκατέρων "ἐπηλύδων" ὑπογράφεται.

<sup>h</sup> Heb., Ex. xxii. 21.

<sup>i</sup> The first of the two Greek fragments of the beginning and end of this section reads χήραν καὶ ὄρφανὸν ἀπείρηται κακοῦν: LXX πᾶσαν χήραν καὶ ὄρφανὸν οὐ κακώσετε. Philo cites the verse and briefly allegorizes it in different fashion in De Congressu 178-179, see also De Cherubim 50.

<sup>j</sup> The Greek frag. has "the Law" as subject, see the next note.

<sup>k</sup> So the Greek frag., οὐδένα μὲν, οὐδὲ τῶν ἄλλων, οὔτε ἄρρενα οὔτε θήλειαν, ἀφήσιν ἀδικεῖν ὁ νόμος.

<sup>l</sup> The Greek frag. reads similarly but more smoothly ἐξαιρέτου δὲ προνοίας μεταδίδωσιν χήραις καὶ ὄρφανοῖς.

<sup>m</sup> So the Greek frag., ἐπειδὴ τοὺς ἀναγκαίους βοηθοὺς καὶ κηδεμόνας ἀφήρηται, χήραι μὲν ἄνδρας, ὄρφανοὶ δὲ γονεῖς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

enjoy their natural partnership and have their deficiencies supplied by those who <sup>a</sup> are in (a state of) abundance.<sup>b</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>c</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>d</sup> such souls <sup>e</sup> as love themselves honour the mind <sup>f</sup> as a husband and as a father,—as a husband perhaps because it sows in them the powers of the senses <sup>g</sup> by which the sense-perceptible object <sup>h</sup> is attained and seized ; and (they honour it) as a father because it is thought to be the parent of disciplines and arts.<sup>i</sup> But those who are free of self-love <sup>j</sup> and hasten to God obtain from above His visitations <sup>k</sup> and care as from a father, and as from a husband (they obtain) the sowing of good thoughts and intentions <sup>l</sup> and words and deeds. But it happens customarily among men that the opposite thing comes about, for when a man comes in contact with a woman, he marks the virgin as a woman.<sup>m</sup> But when souls become divinely inspired,<sup>n</sup> from (being) women they become virgins, throwing off the womanly corruptions which are (found) in sense-perception and passion.<sup>o</sup> Moreover, they follow after and pursue the

<sup>a</sup> Arm. ayk' is a misprint for ork', the plural of the rel. pron.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek frag., βούλεται γὰρ τῇ φυσικῇ κοινωνίᾳ χρωμένους, τὰς ἐνδείας ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν περιουσίᾳ ἀναπληροῦσθαι. Here the first Greek frag. ends ; the second begins with the sentence reading " But when souls become divinely inspired, etc."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>e</sup> ψυχαί.

<sup>f</sup> τὸν νοῦν.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. De Migratione 3 πατὴρ μὲν ἡμῶν ὁ νοῦς σπείρων . . . τὰς ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ δυνάμεις.

<sup>i</sup> παιδείων καὶ τέχνων.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ αἰσθητόν.

<sup>j</sup> φιλαυτίας.

<sup>k</sup> ἐπισκοπὰς vel sim. : Aucher " visitationes."

<sup>l</sup> Aucher omits the second noun.

<sup>m</sup> As a woman with sexual experience, cf. De Cherubim 50 ἀνθρώπων . . . σύνοδος τὰς παρθένους γυναῖκας ἀποφαίνει.

<sup>n</sup> The second Greek frag. (which begins with this sentence) has προσκολληθῶσι θεῷ, of which the Arm. astouacazgestk' (usu. = ἔνθεοι or θεοφόροι) seems to be a free rendering.

<sup>o</sup> So the Greek frag., ἐκ γυναικῶν γίνονται παρθένοι, τὰς μὲν γυναικῶδεις ἀποβάλλουσαι φθορὰς τῶν ἐν αἰσθήσει καὶ πάθει.

EXODUS, BOOK II

genuine and unmated virgin, the veritable wisdom of God.<sup>a</sup> And so, rightly do such minds<sup>b</sup> become widows and are orphaned of mortal things<sup>c</sup> and acquire for themselves and have as husband the right law of nature, with which they live.<sup>d</sup> And (they have) the same (as) father to tell them with higher thoughtfulness, as though (they were) his sons, what they ought to do.<sup>e</sup>

*4. (Ex. xxii. 23) <sup>f</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "Ye shall not with badness mistreat the widow and the orphan" <sup>g</sup> ?

The word <sup>h</sup> "mistreat" is used properly <sup>i</sup> (in some cases) and is also used improperly <sup>j</sup> in other cases. (It is used properly in reference to deeds of badness which are peculiar to the soul, and improperly of other cases in which harm is done to possessions and bodies.<sup>k</sup> Accordingly (Scripture) did not mention the latter evils, as not being great mis-

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. reads a little differently τὴν δὲ ἄψανστον (ἄψευστον conj. Pitra from the Arm.) καὶ ἀμυγῆ παρθένον, ἀρέσκειαν θεοῦ, μεταδιώκουσι.

<sup>b</sup> One expects "souls" as in the Greek frag., see the next note but one.

<sup>c</sup> This clause is omitted in the Greek frag.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly κατὰ λόγον οὖν αἱ τοιαῦται ψυχαὶ χηρεύουσιν, ἄνδρα τὸν τῆς φύσεως ὀρθὸν νόμον προσσυμβιοῦσιν.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., καὶ πατέρα τὸν αὐτόν, ἃ χρὴ πράττειν παραγγέλλοντα καθάπερ ἐγγόνους μετὰ τῆς ἀνωτάτω κηδεμονίας.

<sup>f</sup> Heb., Ex. xxii. 22.

<sup>g</sup> Philo here paraphrases the LXX text which reads more fully ἐὰν δὲ κακία κακώσετε αὐτοὺς (Heb. "him") καὶ κεκράξαντες καταβοήσουσι (Heb. "if crying he cries out") πρὸς ἐμέ, ἀκοῇ εἰσακούσομαι τῆς φωνῆς αὐτῶν (Heb. "his cry").

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "name" or "noun."

<sup>i</sup> κυρίως.

<sup>j</sup> καταχρηστικῶς.

<sup>k</sup> The fragmentary paraphrase in Procopius reads καὶ κακοῦν ἀπαγορεύει οὐ τοσοῦτον τὴν σωματικὴν κάκωσιν ὅσον τὴν ψυχικὴν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

fortunes at all.<sup>a</sup> But knowing that the harm of badness overturns entire lives by their roots from their foundation, it first says that one should not be to anyone a teacher of folly or licentiousness or injustice or anything similar and of a cursed intention but should destroy the devices <sup>b</sup> of such things.<sup>c</sup> But one should likemindedly build schools of thoughts of wisdom and justice and the other virtues <sup>d</sup> for the improvement of children in order that their natures, before they have become hard and tough, may be able easily to receive the shapes and forms of good things.<sup>e</sup>

5. (Ex. xxii. 28a) <sup>f</sup> Why does (Scripture) say, "gods thou shalt not revile" <sup>g</sup> ?

Do they <sup>h</sup> then still accuse the divine Law of breaking down the customs of others ? <sup>i</sup> For, behold, not only does it offer support to those of different opinion <sup>j</sup> by accepting and honouring those whom they have from the beginning believed to be gods, but it <sup>k</sup> also muzzles and restrains <sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "posterius istud, quia nihil magnum est malum, vix memoravit."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "sedes."

<sup>c</sup> Procopius' paraphrase reads more briefly ὀρφανοῖς γὰρ γινέσθω μηδεὶς ἀφροσύνης ἢ ἀκολασίας διδάσκαλος.

<sup>d</sup> λογισμῶν σοφίας καὶ δικαιοσύνης καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀρετῶν διδασκαλεῖα συμφώνως οἰκοδομεῖν.

<sup>e</sup> Procopius' paraphrase reads more briefly ἀλλὰ τῶν ἐναντίων (sc. διδασκαλος γινέσθω), ἐν ᾧσιν τὰς ψυχὰς ἔχουσιν ἀπαλὰς πρὸς τὴν τῶν θείων χαρακτήρων ὑποδοχὴν.

<sup>f</sup> Heb., Ex. xxii. 27a.

<sup>g</sup> LXX θεοὺς (Heb. 'elōhîm = "God" or "gods" or "judges") οὐ κακολογήσεις. Philo comments on this half-verse in De Vita Mosis ii. 203-205 and De Spec. Leg. i. 53, see Colson's notes on these passages.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. opponents of the Jews.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. of the Gentiles.

<sup>j</sup> τοῖς ἑτεροδόξοις.

<sup>k</sup> The unexpressed subject may be Moses as well as Scripture, here as elsewhere.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher renders the two verbs by the single verb "coercet."

EXODUS, BOOK II

its own disciples,<sup>a</sup> not permitting them to revile these with a loose tongue, for it believes that well-spoken praise<sup>b</sup> is better. In the second place, those who are in error and are deluded about their own native<sup>c</sup> gods and because of custom believe to be inerrant truth what is a falsely created error, by which even keen and discerning minds are blinded, are not peaceful toward or reconciled with<sup>d</sup> those who do not gladly accept their (opinion). And this is the beginning and origin of wars. But to us the Law has described the source of peace as a beautiful possession. In the third place, he who speaks evil (of others) must of necessity receive the contrary reproach in similar matters. Accordingly, those who have in mind a concern for dignity<sup>e</sup> will refrain from reviling other gods, in order that the power<sup>f</sup> of the truly certain and existent (God)<sup>g</sup> may be well spoken of and praised in the mouths of all. For (thus) we shall seem not to be hearing but to be speaking, as others use our voice.<sup>h</sup> For there is no difference between saying something oneself and inviting others to say it in any way.

*6. (Ex. xxii. 28b)<sup>i</sup> Why, after first saying that one is not to revile gods, does (Scripture) straightway add, "nor rulers"<sup>j</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> τοὺς ἑαυτοῦ μαθητάς, i.e. the Jews.

<sup>b</sup> εὐφήμον ἔπαινον. <sup>c</sup> ἐγχωρίους ἢ πατρίους.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "implacabilem hostilitatem colunt."

<sup>e</sup> Or "holiness": Aucher "dignitatis."

<sup>f</sup> δύναμις.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. lit. = τοῦ ὄντως σαφούς καὶ ὄντος. Perhaps the Arm. translator misread σαφῶς as σαφούς; if so, we should render, "the truly and clearly existent (God)"; elsewhere Philo refers to God as ὁ ὄντως ὢν but never as σαφής. Aucher renders more briefly, "veri Entis."

<sup>h</sup> i.e. if we cause others to praise God, we shall be praising Him vicariously.

<sup>i</sup> Heb., Ex. xxii. 27b.

<sup>j</sup> ΙΧΧ καὶ ἄρχοντας (v.l. ἄρχοντα: Heb. "ruler") τοῦ λαοῦ σου οὐ κακῶς ἐρεῖς.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

As the poets say, rulers are closely akin and near in lineage to and of the same seed as the gods, for leaders and rulers are, as these <sup>a</sup> say, able to do good or evil by virtue of their own power. In the second place, it takes thought for all other men in order that they may not incur irremediable punishments.<sup>b</sup> For when rulers hear evil things said (about themselves), they do not punish the speakers by judicial process but unrestrainedly use their power for utter destruction.<sup>c</sup> In the third place, (Scripture) does not seem to legislate about every ruler but hints in many ways that he who is (ruler) of the whole people and belongs to the Hebrew nation has been appointed as a virtuous ruler and leader.<sup>d</sup> For reviling is foreign to a good man while praise is most congenial.<sup>e</sup> For nothing is so conducive to thoughtful care<sup>f</sup> as well-spoken praise.<sup>g</sup>

7. (Ex. xxii. 29, xxiii. 15c) <sup>h</sup> What is the meaning of the

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "ipsi."

<sup>b</sup> Slightly different is the reading of the first Greek frag. of this section, προνοείται τῶν ιδιωτῶν ὡς μὴ περιπίπτειεν ἀνηκέστοις τιμωρίαις.

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag., οἱ γὰρ κακῶς ἀκούσαντες ἄρχοντες τοὺς εἰπόντας οὐ μετὰ δίκης ἀμυνοῦνται· καταχρῆσονται δυναστείας εἰς πανωλεθρίαν.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. reads somewhat differently ἐπεὶ, φησίν, οὐ περὶ παντὸς ἄρχοντος ἔοικε νομοθετεῖν ἀλλ' ὡσανεὶ τοῦ λαοῦ τοῦδε ἢ ἔθνους ἡγεμόνα σπουδαῖον ὑποτίθεται, διὰ πλειόνων. It adds καταχρηστικῶς δὲ δυνάτους ἢ ἱερεῖς ἢ προφῆτας ἢ ἁγίους ἄνδρας ὡς Μωυσέα. "Ἴδου γάρ, ἔθηκά σε θεὸν Φαραῶ," ἐλέχθη πρὸς Μωυσήν.

<sup>e</sup> So the second Greek frag., τῷ ἀγαθῷ ἀνδρὶ βλασφημία μὲν ἀλλότριον, ἔπαινος δὲ οἰκειότατον.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "thoughtfulness of care." The Arm. translator apparently read πρόνοιαν instead of εὐνοίαν, which is the reading in the Greek fragments.

<sup>g</sup> Slightly different is the reading of the third Greek frag., οὐδὲν οὕτως εὐάγωγον εἰς εὐνοίαν ὡς ἡ τῶν εὐεργετημάτων εὐφημία.

<sup>h</sup> Philo here combines parts of two separate verses.

EXODUS, BOOK II

words, "Thou shalt not appear with empty hands before Me" <sup>a</sup> ?

The literal meaning <sup>b</sup> is this, (namely) that those who approach the shrines <sup>c</sup> of God should come near with full hands, bearing the first-fruits of every living thing in which there is no blemish. <sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, <sup>e</sup> there is no prohibition, <sup>f</sup> for even though He said, "Thou shalt not appear," still He did not say it by way of prohibition, as is altogether reasonable. <sup>g</sup> For it is impossible for anyone who comes into the sight of God to be empty but (rather must he be) full of every good. For just as one who comes near the light is straightway illumined, so also is filled the entire soul of him to whom God has appeared. A spiritual light, however, is called by other names, (namely) knowledge and wisdom. <sup>h</sup>

8. (Ex. xxii. 30) <sup>i</sup> Why does He command that the offspring of cattle be left with their mothers for seven days? <sup>j</sup>

(This is said) in order that there may not be one and the same time for birth and destruction but that the generation of life may keep its due place <sup>k</sup> for some time. In the second place, because the mercy of love abounds in mothers at

<sup>a</sup> LXX (Ex. xxiii. 15c) οὐκ ὀφθήσῃ ἐνώπιον μου κενός (Heb. "And not shall be seen my face empty").

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> Or "altars": Aucher "aram."

<sup>d</sup> Cf. LXX (Ex. xxii. 29 = Heb. xxii. 28) ἀπαρχὰς ἄλωνος καὶ ληνοῦ σου οὐ καθυστερήσεις· τὰ πρωτότοκα τῶν υἱῶν σου δώσεις ἐμοί.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> ἀπαγόρευσις.

<sup>g</sup> ὡς πάντως εἰκός vel sim.: Aucher "quovis modo."

<sup>h</sup> ἐπιστήμη καὶ σοφία: Aucher "intelligentia et sapientia."

<sup>i</sup> Heb., Ex. xxii. 29 (cf. Lev. xxii. 27).

<sup>j</sup> LXX οὕτως ποιήσεις τὸν μόσχον σου καὶ τὸ πρόβατόν σου καὶ τὸ ὑποζύγιόν σου· ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας ἔσται ὑπὸ τὴν μητέρα, τῇ δὲ ὀγδόῃ ἡμέρᾳ ἀποδώσῃ μοι αὐτό. Philo comments similarly but more fully on this verse in De Virtutibus 126-130.

<sup>k</sup> τὴν τάξιν: Aucher "ordinem."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the very beginning of birth, wherefore their breasts, being filled, flow abundantly and pour out in (the form of) milk unlimited nourishment for desire.<sup>a</sup> For in the course of time love, like everything else, diminishes, but at the very beginning of birth it possesses great strength. Accordingly, He considers it very cruel and senseless to separate (the offspring) from its mother immediately upon birth, while it is still naturally attached and united to her.

*9. (Ex. xxiii. 1a) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt not admit a false rumour" <sup>b</sup> ?

Nothing vain is to be admitted whether through hearing or any other sense, for very great harm follows the deception of falsehood.<sup>c</sup> Therefore it has been ordained by some legislators that one should not testify by hearsay, on the ground that what is believed through the eyes is true but through hearing is false.<sup>d</sup>

*10. (Ex. xxiii. 3) Why does (Scripture) say, "To the poor thou shalt not be merciful in judgment" <sup>e</sup> ?

Poverty in itself is in want of mercy for the redress of its need, but when it comes to judgment it uses the law of

<sup>a</sup> i.e. as much as their young desire.

<sup>b</sup> LXX Οὐ παραδέξῃ ἀκοὴν ματαίαν (Heb. "empty" or "baseless report"). Philo quotes this half-verse and comments on it briefly in De Confus. Ling. 141 and more fully in De Spec. Leg. iv. 59-61.

<sup>c</sup> Slightly different is the wording of the Greek frag., μάταιόν φησιν οὔτε ἀκοαῖς οὔτε ἄλλῃ τινὶ τῶν αἰσθήσεων προσιτέον· ἐπακολουθοῦσι γὰρ ταῖς ἀπάταις αἱ μεγίσται ζημίαι.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag., διὸ καὶ παρ' ἐνίοις νομοθέταις ἀπείρηται μαρτυρεῖν ἀκοῇ, ὡς τὸ μὲν ἀληθές ὄψει πιστευόμενον, τὸ δὲ ψεῦδος ἀκοῇ. In the parallel passage, De Spec. Leg. iv. 61, Philo attributes this view to "some of the Greek legislators who copied it from the most sacred stelae of Moses."

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ πένητα οὐκ ἐλεήσεις (Heb. "thou shalt not favour") ἐν κρίσει. Philo quotes this verse and comments on it a little more fully in De Spec. Leg. iv. 72-74.

EXODUS, BOOK II

equality as judge.<sup>a</sup> For justice is divine and incorruptible, wherefore it is well said by some <sup>b</sup> "judgments are of God."<sup>c</sup>

*11. (Ex. xxiii. 4) Why does (Scripture) command one who encounters the straying asses <sup>d</sup> of an enemy to bring them back and give them back? <sup>e</sup>

It is an excess of gentleness if in addition to not harming an enemy one even tries to be of help.<sup>f</sup> In the second place, it is a prohibition and shaming of greed.<sup>g</sup> For he who is not willing to harm even an enemy, whom else will he wish to harm for his own profit? <sup>h</sup> In the third place, it removes quarrels and fights from (our) midst, being a

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., πενία καθ' εαυτήν μὲν ἐλέου χρήζει εἰς ἐπανόρθωσιν ἐνδείας, εἰς δὲ κρίσιν ἰούσα βραβευτῆ χρηταί τῷ τῆς ἰσότητος νόμῳ.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. reads more intelligibly ἐν ἑτέροις, i.e. in Deut. i. 17.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. reads somewhat differently θεῖον γὰρ ἡ δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἀδέκαστον ὄθεν καὶ ἐν ἑτέροις εὖ εἴρηται ὅτι "ἡ κρίσις τοῦ θεοῦ δικαία ἐστίν." The wording of the last clause is obviously incorrect, see the preceding note.

<sup>d</sup> The fragment from John of Damascus ap. H. Lewy has ὑποζυγίῳ, see next note.

<sup>e</sup> LXX Ἐὰν δὲ συναντήσης τῷ βοῖ τοῦ ἐχθροῦ σου ἢ τῷ ὑποζυγίῳ αὐτοῦ (Heb. "his ass") πλανωμένοις, ἀποστρέψας ἀποδώσεις αὐτῷ. The fragment from Procopius quotes only the first part of the verse, ending with ἐχθροῦ σου. Philo comments on this verse in De Virtutibus 117-118.

<sup>f</sup> So the two Greek fragments, ἡμερότητας ὑπερβολὴ πρὸς τὸ μὴ βλάπτειν τὸν ἐχθρὸν ἔτι καὶ συνωφελεῖν (v.l. ὠφελεῖν) πειρᾶσθαι.

<sup>g</sup> This sentence is missing from both Greek fragments. Lewy reconstructs the Greek, somewhat freely, I think, as δεύτερον δὲ παραίτησις πλεονεξίας.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag. from John of Damascus (which ends here), ὁ γὰρ μηδ' ἐχθρὸν ζημιῶν ὑπομένων τίνα τῶν ἄλλων ἐθέλησειεν ἂν βλάπτειν ἐπ' ὠφελεία <ἰδία>; Procopius reads more briefly τίνα δὲ καὶ ἀδικήσειεν <ἂν> ὁ μηδὲ τὸν ἐχθρὸν ζημιῶν;

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

protector of peace,<sup>a</sup> whose possessions it depicts and shows in many ways. Accordingly, it regards the giving back of the asses as the beginning of offerings of peace and reconciliation.<sup>b</sup> For he who gives (something) back, performing a work of love, is in some manner made gentle in soul,<sup>c</sup> while he who receives (it), if he is not completely ungrateful, puts aside the rancour that seeks revenge.

12. (Ex. xxiii. 5) Why, if one sees the ass of an enemy fall under a burden, does (Scripture) command one not to neglect to raise it up with him? <sup>a</sup>

(This is) a confirmatory addition to the preceding, since there is much said on this subject which is to be connected with this, including what was previously said about one who gives back (something lost).<sup>e</sup> But it must be said in addition that it shows an extraordinary abundance of humaneness and gentleness,<sup>f</sup> inasmuch as it exhorts (us) not only to be useful to an enemy but also to lighten the

<sup>a</sup> Procopius reads slightly differently ἔτι δὲ καὶ στάσιον καθαιρεῖ καὶ δυσμένειαν προκατάρχων εἰρήνης. The next two sentences in the Procopius fragment do not correspond closely to the Armenian.

<sup>b</sup> Or "friendship," but cf. De Virtutibus 118.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "ex animo familiaris demonstratur." The Greek verb was prob. ἡμεροῦται.

<sup>d</sup> LXX Ἐὰν δὲ ἴδῃς τὸ ὑποζύγιον (Heb. "ass") τοῦ ἐχθροῦ σου πεπτωκός (Heb. "crouching") ὑπὸ τὸν γόμον αὐτοῦ, οὐ παρελεύσῃ αὐτὸ ἀλλὰ συνεγερεῖς αὐτὸ μεθ' αὐτοῦ (Heb. "thou shalt desist from abandoning it; thou shalt surely help [?] with him"). In De Virtutibus 116 Philo paraphrases the LXX text as follows, κἂν ἐχθρῶν ὑποζύγια ἀχθοφοροῦντα τῷ βάρει πιεσθέντα προπέσῃ, μὴ παρελθεῖν ἀλλὰ συνεπικουφίσει καὶ συνεγείρει. In the latter passage Philo deals only with the literal meaning and not with the symbolism as here.

<sup>e</sup> This is the best sense I can extract from the obscure Arm. sentence. Aucher's rendering is not too clear either, "intensio additamenti anteriorum est, unde et plura quidem dicta est adaptare super hoc, ex iis nimirum quae de reddente sunt dicta."

<sup>f</sup> φιλανθρωπίας καὶ ἡμερότητος.

EXODUS, BOOK II

heaviness of the burden of irrational animals, especially when they have already fallen under the pressure of a very heavy weight. For who would disregard any human being, with whom he has a single natural kinship,<sup>a</sup> when he has been taught by the divine Law and is accustomed not to disregard even a beast? That is the literal meaning.<sup>b</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> the ass is symbolically<sup>d</sup> our body,<sup>e</sup> and (this) is altogether errant and roving. For the sake of bringing profit to its kindred sensual pleasure,<sup>f</sup> it loads itself with much unmixed (wine) and various foods and a variety of dishes and still other drinks and foods in immense profusion. Accordingly, it is necessary for one who is smitten by wisdom<sup>g</sup> to lighten (his) heaviness through the related virtues of frugality and contentedness<sup>h</sup> and to lead the errant (man) into inerrant constancy by accustoming him to give up his anxious pursuit of avarice and, instead, to follow the richness of nature, which is ascendant and self-sufficient.<sup>i</sup>

*13. (Ex. xxiii. 20-21)<sup>j</sup> What is the meaning of the words, "Behold, I am sending My angel<sup>k</sup> before thy face, that he may guard thee on the way, in order that he may lead and bring thee to the land which I have prepared for thee. Give heed and listen and do not disobey. For he

<sup>a</sup> μία συγγένεια φύσεως.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>e</sup> In De Sacr. Abelis 112 the ass is said to be a symbol of πόνος, in De Cherubim 32 of ἡ ἄλογος προαίρεσις τοῦ βίου, in De Migratione 224 of ἡ ἄλογος φύσις, in De Mut. Nom. 193 of ἄνοια.

<sup>f</sup> τῇ συγγενικῇ ἡδονῇ.

<sup>g</sup> τὸν ὑπὸ τῆς σοφίας πληχθέντα: Aucher "qui amore sapientiae captus sit."

<sup>h</sup> ταῖς ἀναγκαίαις ἀρεταῖς, ὀλιγοδεία καὶ εὐκολία. These two virtues are coupled in several other passages in Philo.

<sup>i</sup> ἀνωφερῆς (vel sim.) καὶ αὐτάρκης: Aucher "quae feracissima est (vel, superiora tendit) et sibi sufficiens."

<sup>j</sup> This section should follow § 15, which deals with Ex. xxiii. 18.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "messenger," see next note but one.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

will not show consideration for thee,<sup>a</sup> for My name is upon him ”<sup>b</sup> ?

An angel is an intellectual soul<sup>c</sup> or rather wholly mind,<sup>d</sup> wholly incorporeal, made (to be) a minister of God,<sup>e</sup> and appointed over certain needs and the service of the race of mortals, since it was unable, because of its corruptible nature, to receive the gifts and benefactions extended by God. For it was not capable of bearing the multitude of (His) good (gifts). (Therefore) of necessity was the Logos appointed as judge and mediator,<sup>f</sup> who is called “angel.” Him He sets “before the face,” there where the place of the eyes and the senses is, in order that by seeing and receiving sense(-impressions) it<sup>g</sup> may follow the leadership of virtue,<sup>h</sup> not unwillingly but willingly. But the entry into the previously prepared land is allegorized<sup>i</sup> in the several (details) of the above-mentioned (statements) in respect of the guarding<sup>j</sup> of the way, (namely) “giving heed,” “listening,” “not disobeying,” “not showing consideration,” “setting His name upon him.” This, however, must first be examined. Those who incautiously travel a

<sup>a</sup> Aucher “non verebitur te,” see next note.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ἰδοὺ ἐγὼ ἀποστέλλω τὸν ἄγγελόν μου (Heb. “my messenger”) πρὸ προσώπου σου ἵνα φυλάξῃ σε ἐν τῇ ὁδῷ ὅπως εἰσαγάγῃ σε εἰς τὴν γῆν (Heb. “place”) ἣν ἠτοίμασά σοι (Heb. om. “for thee”). πρόσεχε σεαυτῷ καὶ εἰσάκουε αὐτοῦ καὶ μὴ ἀπειθῇ αὐτῷ· οὐ γὰρ μὴ ὑποστείληταί σε (Heb. “he will not suffer thy disobedience”), τὸ γὰρ ὄνομά μου ἐστὶν ἐπ’ αὐτῷ (Heb. “within him”). Philo cites the first part of this passage in De Agricultura 51, and the entire passage in De Migratione 174 in verbal agreement with the LXX but without extended commentary in either place.

<sup>c</sup> νοερά ψυχή: Aucher “spiritus intellectualis.” Philo several times speaks of angels as ψυχαί but never, I think, as πνεύματα. On his doctrine of angels see Wolfson, Philo, i. 366-385.

<sup>d</sup> νοῦς: Aucher “intellectus.”

<sup>e</sup> γενόμενος ὑπηρέτης θεοῦ.

<sup>f</sup> μεσίτης.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. the human race.

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετῆς.

<sup>i</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται: Aucher “allegorice adaptatur.”

<sup>j</sup> Aucher “observationem.”

EXODUS, BOOK II

road go astray from the right and genuinely broad road, and many times turn aside into trackless, impassable and rough places.<sup>a</sup> And similar to this is it when souls experience something juvenile and pious,<sup>b</sup> for when one is without a share of discipline one is borne along like unimpeded streams where it is unprofitable.<sup>c</sup> And the second thing was the entry into the land, (that is) an entry into philosophy,<sup>d</sup> (which is), as it were, a good land and fertile in the production of fruits, which the divine plants, the virtues,<sup>e</sup> bear. Therefore it is proper that he who wishes to enjoy these fruits should receive training in exercising caution; but caution is the supervision of the counselling mind<sup>f</sup> and readiness to listen. For just as a lover puts aside all other things and hastens to his desire, so also does one who hungers and thirsts for the knowledge of the disciplines and for learning what he does not know put away his concern for other things and hasten to listen, and by night and by day he watches the doors of the houses of the wise.<sup>g</sup> Thus, to give heed is (referred to) in these (words). But (next) in order is to listen, and it is naturally mentioned

<sup>a</sup> The first of the two Greek fragments of this section (which begins here) reads only slightly differently οἱ ἀφυλάκτως ὁδοιποροῦντες διαμαρτάνουσιν τῆς ὁρθῆς καὶ λεωφόρου ὡς πολλάκις εἰς ἀνοδίας καὶ δυσβάτους καὶ τραχείας ἀτραποὺς ἐκτρέπεσθαι.

<sup>b</sup> The text is obviously corrupt, see next note.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. (which ends here) reads more intelligibly τὸ παραπλήσιόν ἐστιν ὅτε καὶ αἱ ψυχαὶ τῶν νέων παιδείας ἀμοιροῦσιν, καθάπερ βέϋμα ἀνεπίσχετον ὅπη μὴ λυσιτελεῖς βεμβεύονται. Possibly the Arm. translator mistook νέων for the gen. plural of νεώς "temple."

<sup>d</sup> φιλοσοφίαν.

<sup>e</sup> αἱ ἀρεταί.

<sup>f</sup> ἢ τῆς βουλευτικῆς διανοίας προστασία vel sim.: Aucher "praesidentia consilii (sic) mentis."

<sup>g</sup> The second Greek fragment (which contains only the second part of this comparison) reads only slightly differently ὁ πεινῶν καὶ διψῶν ἐπιστήμης καὶ τοῦ μαθεῖν ἂ μὴ οἶδεν, τὰς ἄλλας μεθίμενος φροντίδας, ἐπείγεται πρὸς ἀκρόασιν, καὶ νύκτωρ καὶ μεθ' ἡμέραν θυρωρεῖ τὰς τῶν σοφῶν οἰκίας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

in connexion therewith.<sup>a</sup> For he who listens with the tips of his ears is able to get (only) a somewhat vague perception of what is said, while to him who listens carefully the words enter more clearly and the things heard travel on all the paths, so that they form his mind<sup>b</sup> with deep impressions,<sup>c</sup> as if (it were) wax, lest it easily become stupid and (the impressions) leap away.<sup>d</sup> After this comes (the statement) that it is not right to disobey. For some men receive within them the appearances of words and, after receiving them, [do not] become disobedient<sup>e</sup> but display a quarrelsome and rebellious nature. Such men He shames,<sup>f</sup> wishing to admonish them by preparing lawful and constant declarations of good things.<sup>g</sup> But whenever the word of God is announced, it is altogether good, beautiful and precious. For to him who does not obey He says, "he<sup>h</sup> has no respect for thee," and (this is said) most naturally. For when conviction<sup>i</sup> is established in the soul and perceives it inclining to wickedness, it reproaches (the soul) and becomes its accuser, and by scolding and threatening, <sup>a</sup> i.e. in connexion with giving heed.

<sup>b</sup> τὸν νοῦν or τὴν διάνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "forms."

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders, "ne facile insipidum videatur et foras resiliat," apparently taking "mind" to be the subject of both verbs (in spite of the neuter gender of the pred. adj. "insipidum").

<sup>e</sup> Either we must eliminate the negative particle or emend "disobedient" to "obedient." Aucher renders more freely, "nec tamen revera recipientes, dissentiunt."

<sup>f</sup> δισσωπεῖ.

<sup>g</sup> The meaning is obscure, partly because of the diverse meanings of the verb (here a ptc.) ἀρτ'εῖ, which I have rendered "preparing." Aucher renders, "monere volens, ut sibi concilient bonorum enarrationes legitimas ac constantes."

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the angel.

<sup>i</sup> ἔλεγχος, cf. e.g. Quod Deus Immut. Sit 135, De Decalogo 87, where ἔλεγχος has the force of "conscience" or inward "monitor" (as Colson there renders). It is symbolized by an angel in De Fuga 1-6 and elsewhere.

EXODUS, BOOK II

puts it to shame. For he within whom it is, is apprehended by his own judgment as being altogether foolish. And in contrast to all the counsellors<sup>a</sup> who are in the various cities<sup>b</sup> it is obliged not to show respect or to admonish with fear but with both wisdom and freedom of speech.<sup>c</sup> And a very clear proof of this is that the divine name is called upon the angel. And this is the most sovereign and principal (being) which the heaven and earth and the whole world knows.<sup>d</sup> And he who has so great a power<sup>e</sup> must necessarily be filled with all-powerful<sup>f</sup> wisdom.<sup>g</sup>

*14. (Ex. xxiii. 18a) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt not sacrifice with leaven the blood of the victim"<sup>h</sup>?

In another passage also<sup>i</sup> He has ordained something similar to this, commanding that upon an altar upon which victims are offered in sacrifice leaven is not to be brought.<sup>j</sup> He indicates through two necessary symbols<sup>k</sup> that one

<sup>a</sup> τοὺς συνέδρους.

<sup>b</sup> The context obliges us to correct the Arm. text which reads "and by (or "among") all the counsellors who are outside in the various cities."

<sup>c</sup> καὶ σοφία καὶ παρρησία.

<sup>d</sup> Apparently Philo means that the angel here represents the Logos.

<sup>e</sup> δύναμιν.

<sup>f</sup> Variant "all-free."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "ut sit sapientia potentissimus (vel, liberrimus)."

<sup>h</sup> LXX οὐ θύσεις ἐπὶ ζύμῃ αἷμα θυμιάματός μου. Philo allegorizes this half-verse, without quoting it literally, in De Spec. Leg. i. 293-295, cf. ii. 182-185.

<sup>i</sup> Lev. ii. 11, where honey is also proscribed.

<sup>j</sup> Somewhat different is the wording of the Greek frag. preserved in three Catenaes, ἀντὶ τοῦ οὐ δεῖ ζυμωτὸν παρεῖναι ἐπὶ τῶν θυσιαζομένων ἀλλὰ πάντα τὰ προσαγόμενα εἰς θυσίαν ἦτοι προσφορὰν ἄζυμα δεῖ εἶναι.

<sup>k</sup> Prob. the original reading is preserved in the Catenaes, αἰνίττεται δὲ διὰ συμβόλου δύο τὰ ἀναγκαῖότατα. Procopius reads more briefly αἰνίττεται δὲ διὰ συμβόλου.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

should despise sensual pleasures,<sup>a</sup> for leaven is a sweetener of food but not food (itself).<sup>b</sup> And the other thing (indicated) is that one should not be uplifted in conceit by common<sup>c</sup> belief.<sup>d</sup> For both are impure and hateful, (namely) sensual pleasure and arrogance (or) foolish belief, (both being) the offspring of one mother, illusion.<sup>e</sup> But the blood of the sacrificed victims is a sign of the souls which are consecrated to God. Moreover, it is not right to mix the unmixed.<sup>f</sup>

*15. (Ex. xxiii. 18b) What is the meaning of the words, "The fat of My festival shall not lie<sup>g</sup> until morning"<sup>h</sup>?

The literal text<sup>i</sup> gives the command that the fat shall be consumed the same day, having become material for the divine fire.<sup>j</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>k</sup> the nature

<sup>a</sup> So Procopius, καταφρονεῖν ἡδονῆς. The Catenaes read more fully ἐν μὲν τὸ καταφρονεῖν ἡδονῆς.

<sup>b</sup> So Procopius and the Catenaes, ζύμη γὰρ ἡδυσμα τροφῆς, οὐ τροφή.

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. translator mistakenly read κοινῆς instead of κενῆς οἰήσεως "empty belief," see next note.

<sup>d</sup> Procopius καὶ τὸ μὴ δεῖν ὑπὸ κενῆς φυσωμένους οἰήσεως αἶρεσθαι: the Catenaes read ἕτερον δὲ τὸ μὴ δεῖν ἐπαίρεσθαι φυσωμένους διὰ κενῆς (v.l. καινῆς) οἰήσεως.

<sup>e</sup> Procopius lacks this sentence. The Catenaes read more briefly ἀνίερον γὰρ ἐκάτερον, ἡδονή τε καὶ οἴσις, μητρὸς μιᾶς ἀπάτης ἔγγονα. Philo, like some of the early Christian writers, uses ἀπάτη in the sense of "illusory worldly pleasure."

<sup>f</sup> So Procopius and the Catenaes, τὸ δὲ αἷμα τῶν θυσιῶν δεῖγμα ψυχῆς ἐστι σπενδομένης θεῶ· μινύναι δὲ τὰ ἄμικτα οὐχ ὄσιον.

<sup>g</sup> Or "sleep," see next note.

<sup>h</sup> LXX οὐδὲ μὴ κοιμηθῆ στέαρ τῆς ἑορτῆς μου ἕως πρωῆ. There seems to be no other direct comment on this half-verse in Philo's other works but cf. De Spec. Leg. iv. 123-124.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>j</sup> The Catenaes read similarly but omitting the subject, κελεύει τὰ στέατα αὐθήμερον ἀναλίσκεσθαι, γινόμενα ὕλην ἱερᾶς φλογός. Procopius has preserved only the words ὕλη τε τῆς ἱερᾶς γινέσθω φλογός.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

EXODUS, BOOK II

of fat brings oiliness <sup>a</sup> to the entrails and other (parts), and surrounding these with its fatness, prevents them for ever, when dried, from very quickly dissolving and melting away.<sup>b</sup> For one who has the moisture of fatness receives the moisture as most vital nourishment. Accordingly, He wishes to show through a symbol <sup>c</sup> that every soul which piety fattens with its own mystical and divine piety is sleepless and watchful for the vision of things worthy to be seen.<sup>d</sup> Now this experience is the festival of souls and the greatest of festivals, an occasion of true joy,<sup>e</sup> which not unmixed (wine) but sober wisdom <sup>f</sup> produces. For one of these is the cause of drunkenness and delirium,<sup>g</sup> while the other (is the cause) of soberness and of properly accomplishing all things. And so, if it also happens that some mortal seed has passed, (it is) an unfortunate accident, that is, the sleep of the mind, which will not last long.<sup>h</sup>

*16. (Ex. xxiii. 22) What is the meaning of the words, "If hearing thou wilt hear My voice and thou wilt do all

<sup>a</sup> λίπος, cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 146.

<sup>b</sup> The meaning of the second clause is obscure, chiefly because of the presence of the pass. ptc. "dried." Aucher renders more briefly, "ne arescens celeriter dissolvatur."

<sup>c</sup> διὰ συμβόλου.

<sup>d</sup> Slightly different is the wording of the Greek frag. from the Parallels of John Monachus (ap. Harris, p. 101), first identified by Früchtel, ψυχὴ πᾶσα ἦν εὐσέβεια λιπαίνει τοῖς ἰδίους ὀργίοις, ἀκοιμήτως ἔχει πρὸς τὰ θεῖα καὶ διανίσταται πρὸς τὴν θέαν τῶν θέας ἀξίων.

<sup>e</sup> Again the Greek frag. (which ends with "joy") differs slightly, τοῦτο γὰρ τὸ πάθος τῆς ψυχῆς ἐν ἑορτῇ μεγίστῃ καὶ καιρὸς ἀψευδῆς εὐφροσύνης.

<sup>f</sup> νηφάλιος σοφία.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "petulantiae."

<sup>h</sup> The meaning of the sentence is not clear to me but seems to refer to a nocturnal emission. Aucher, confessing in a footnote that he is not sure of the meaning, renders, "quod si etiam superveniet, id quod transactum est, et aliquod semen mortale, improspertitatis erramentum, id est mentis somnus, non longius durabit."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

that I say to thee, I shall be an enemy to thine enemies and I will oppose those who oppose thee " <sup>a</sup> ?

Because some men do not hearken when hearing or, rather, pretend not to have heard, He has specified in this passage, " If hearing ye <sup>b</sup> will hear My voice," (which), it must be supposed, refers to the angel mentioned a little while ago. <sup>c</sup> For the prophet of Him Who speaks is properly an angel. <sup>d</sup> For it is necessary for him who " hearing hears," that is, with firmness <sup>e</sup> receives what is said, to carry out in deed also what is said, for the deed is proof of the word. <sup>f</sup> Now he who is obedient to what is said and carries out in deed what has been ordered by declaration, necessarily acquires his teacher as ally and protector, who, as it seems, is helping his disciple but in truth (is helping) his own ruling doctrines, <sup>g</sup> which his opponents and enemies desire to destroy. <sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> LXX εὖν ἀκοῇ ἀκούσητε (v.l. ἀκούσης) τῆς φωνῆς μου (Heb. " his voice ") καὶ ποιήσητε πάντα ὅσα ἂν εἶπω σοι, ἐχθρεύσω τοῖς ἐχθροῖς σου καὶ ἀντικείμενοι τοῖς ἀντικείμενοις σοι. Philo paraphrases the verse in De Praemiis 79.

<sup>b</sup> Sic (change from sing. to plural).

<sup>c</sup> In § 13. Most of the present section (from " voice " on) is preserved in the Catenae and paraphrastically in Procopius. The former read, in this sentence, φωνὴν θεοῦ τὸν πρὸ μικροῦ λεχθέντα ἄγγελον ὑπονοητέον μνηύεσθαι.

<sup>d</sup> So the Catenae, τοῦ γὰρ λέγοντος ὁ προφήτης ἄγγελος κυρίως (v.l. κυρίου) ἐστίν. Procopius paraphrases, τὸν προφήτην φασὶ τινες καὶ τὴν ἐν αὐτῷ τοῦ λαλοῦντος φωνὴν, οὐ παρακελεύεται εἰσακούειν. <sup>e</sup> Aucher " constanter."

<sup>f</sup> So the Catenae, ἀνάγκη (l. ἀνάγκη) γὰρ τὸν ἀκοῇ ἀκούοντα, τουτέστι τὸν τὰ λεγόμενα βεβαίως παραδεχόμενον, ἔργοις ἐπιτελεῖν τὰ λεχθέντα λόγου γὰρ πίστις ἔργον. Procopius has preserved only the words λόγου δὲ πίστις ἔργον.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher " voluntate legis."

<sup>h</sup> So the Catenae, ὁ δὲ καὶ τοῖς εἰρημένοις καταπειθῆς καὶ ἐνεργῶν τὰ ἀκόλουθα, σύμμαχον καὶ ὑπερασπιστὴν ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἔχει τὸν διδάσκαλον, ὅσα μὲν τῷ δοκεῖν, βοηθοῦντα τῷ γνωρίμῳ, τὸ δ' ἀληθὲς τοῖς αὐτοῦ (l. αὐτοῦ) δόγμασι καὶ παραγγέλμασι, ἅπερ οἱ ἐναντίοι καὶ ἐχθροὶ βούλονται καθαιρεῖν. Procopius reads more briefly ὁ δὲ καὶ πεισθεὶς καὶ πράξας ἕξει πάντως ὑπερασπιστὴν τὸν διδάσκαλον συμμαχοῦντα δι' αὐτοῦ τοῖς ἰδίῳις δόγμασι, ἅπερ οἱ ἐναντίοι βούλονται καθαιρεῖν.

EXODUS, BOOK II

*17. (Ex. xxiii. 24c) What is the meaning of the words, "Destroying thou shalt destroy and shattering thou shalt shatter their pillars" <sup>a</sup>?

The "pillars" are symbolically the accepted opinions <sup>b</sup> which seem to have been established and firmly supported.<sup>c</sup> But of (these) pillar-like <sup>d</sup> accepted opinions some are good, and for these it is right to be erect and to have a firm position, while there are others which are reprehensible, and of these it is profitable to cause the destruction.<sup>e</sup> And <sup>f</sup> such are those which folly decrees in opposition to prudence,<sup>g</sup> and intemperance to temperance,<sup>h</sup> and injustice to justice,<sup>i</sup> and in general whatever it is that evil opposes to virtue.<sup>j</sup> But the words "Destroying thou shalt destroy and shattering thou shalt shatter" suggest something like the following sense.<sup>k</sup> There are some things which

<sup>a</sup> LXX καθαιρέσει καθελεῖς (v.l. and Heb. add "them") καὶ συντρίβων συντρίψεις τὰς στήλας (A.V. "images") αὐτῶν.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "gratae leges," see next note.

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag. (preserved in the Catenae and Procopius), στήλαί εἰσι (Procopius omits the first two words) τὰ δόγματα συμβολικῶς, ἅπερ ἔσταναι καὶ ἐρηρεῖσθαι δοκεῖ.

<sup>d</sup> Or "posted-up": Aucher "statuae instar erectarum." The Arm. translator had difficulty in rendering κατεστηλιτευμένων, see next note.

<sup>e</sup> So the Catenae, τῶν δὲ κατεστηλιτευμένων δογμάτων τὰ μὲν ἀστείᾶ ἔστιν, ἃ καὶ (Procopius omits ἔστιν ἃ καὶ) θέμις ἀνακείσθαι καὶ βεβαίαν ἔχειν τὴν ἰδρυσιν, τὰ δὲ ἐπίληπτα ὦν τὴν καθαίρεσιν ποιέσθαι λυσιτελές (Procopius τὰ δὲ ἐπίληπτα καθαιρέσθαι ὡς μὴ πάλιν ἀναστησόμενα μηδὲ ἀρμοσόμενα—the last words being a paraphrase of the end of the section).

<sup>f</sup> The following sentence is missing in the Catenae and Procopius.

<sup>g</sup> ἀφροσύνη . . . φρονήσει.

<sup>h</sup> ἀκολασία . . . σωφροσύνη.

<sup>i</sup> ἀδικία . . . δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>j</sup> κακία . . . ἀρετῇ.

<sup>k</sup> So the Catenae, τὸ δὲ "καθαιρῶν καθελεῖς" καὶ "συντρίβων συντρίψεις" τοιοῦτον ὑποβάλλει νοῦν. Procopius (ending with this sentence) paraphrases, τοιαύτη γὰρ ἔμφασις ἢ τοῦ "καθαιρῶν καθελεῖς" καὶ "συντρίβων συντρίψεις."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

(people) destroy only to raise them up another time, and shatter as if they would again put them together.<sup>a</sup> But it is His will that those things which are opposed to the good and beautiful, when once they have been destroyed and shattered, shall not again undergo repair but shall always remain destroyed.<sup>b</sup>

*18. (Ex. xxiii. 25b) Why does He say, "I will bless thy bread and water,<sup>c</sup> and I will turn away illnesses from thee"<sup>d</sup>?

He indicates food and health—food through "bread and water," and health through "turn away illnesses."<sup>e</sup> In the second place, He speaks of the self-control of endurance here in mentioning only the receiving of necessary foods,<sup>f</sup> for bread is a plain food without anything extra, and flowing water<sup>g</sup> is (a similarly plain) drink, and upon these (depends) health. In the third place, He makes mention of both life (in general) and a good life, for bread and water are necessary for living, while freedom from

<sup>a</sup> So the Catenae, ἐνὰ τινες καθαιροῦσιν ὡς ἀναστήσοντες, καὶ συντριβούσιν ὡς αὔθις ἀρμολόμενοι.

<sup>b</sup> So the Catenae, βούλεται δὲ τὰ καθαιρεθέντα ἅπαξ καὶ συντριβέντα μηκέτι τυχεῖν ἀνορθώσεως ἀλλ' εἰς ἅπαν ἠφανίσθαι τὰ ἐναντία τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς καὶ καλοῖς.

<sup>c</sup> Philo agrees with Heb. against LXX in omitting "and wine" after "bread."

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ εὐλογῆσω (Heb. "He will bless") τὸν ἄρτον σου καὶ τὸν οἶνόν σου καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ σου καὶ ἀποστρέψω μαλακίαν ἀφ' ὑμῶν.

<sup>e</sup> So Cat. Lips., τροφὴν καὶ ὑγίειαν αἰνίττεται τροφὴν μὲν δι' ἄρτου καὶ ὕδατος· ὑγίειαν διὰ τοῦ μαλακίαν ἀποστρέφειν. Procopius condenses, τροφὴν καὶ ὑγίειαν ἐπαγγέλλεται.

<sup>f</sup> So the Catena, δεύτερον, ἐγκράτειαν εἰσηγείται, τὴν τῶν ἀναγκαίων μετουσίαν μόνον ἐπιπέων. Procopius reads more briefly καὶ τῶν ἀναγκαιοτάτων μόνων μνησθεὶς ἐδίδαξε τὴν ἐγκράτειαν (with this clause the Greek fragments break off, to resume with the sentence beginning "In the fifth place").

<sup>g</sup> ναματιαῖον ὕδωρ: Aucher "aqua scaturiens."

EXODUS, BOOK II

passion <sup>a</sup> and health (are necessary) for living well. In the fourth place, Scripture <sup>b</sup> seems to declare that plain simplicity in food is the cause of health. For wine-drinking and cookery which are done with insatiability and gluttony, because of their being artificial <sup>c</sup> produce illness and the causes of greater illnesses. But simplicity in necessary foods is productive of health. <sup>d</sup> In the fifth place, it teaches us a most worthwhile lesson and one that is in order, showing that neither bread nor water gives nourishment by itself alone, <sup>e</sup> but that there are times when they do more harm than good, <sup>f</sup> (namely) if the divine Logos does not graciously bestow upon them his helpful powers. <sup>g</sup> For this reason, indeed, He says, "I will bless thy bread and thy water," as if they were not sufficient to give nourishment by themselves alone without the loving friendship and care <sup>h</sup> of God. <sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἀπάθεια.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ γραφή. This is one of the very few passages in the Quaestiones in which Philo expressly mentions Scripture rather than God or Moses as authority, although of course the three terms are interchangeable.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "ob abusum expletionis."

<sup>d</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits to render this sentence.

<sup>e</sup> Slightly different is the text of Catena Lips., πρὸς δὲ τούτοις, μάθημα ἡμᾶς αἰσιώτατον ἀναδιδάσκει, δηλῶν ὅτι οὔτε ἄρτος οὔτε ὕδωρ καθ' ἑαυτὰ τρέφουσιν. Procopius reads more briefly καὶ μάθημα δὲ παρέδωκεν αἰσιώτατον, ὡς οὐδὲν τούτων τρέφει καθ' ἑαυτό.

<sup>f</sup> So Cat. Lips., ἀλλ' ἔστιν ὅτε καὶ βλάπτουσι μᾶλλον ἢ ὠφελούσιν. Procopius condenses, βλάπτει δὲ μᾶλλον ἢ ὠφελεί.

<sup>g</sup> So (with the exception of one word) Cat. Lips., εἰάν μὴ θεῖος λόγος καὶ τούτοις χαρίζεται τὰς ἀφελητικὰς (l. ὠφελητικὰς) δυνάμεις. Procopius paraphrases, μὴ τοῦ θεοῦ δύναμιν ὠφελητικὴν διὰ τῆς εὐλογίας παρέχοντος.

<sup>h</sup> Emending Arm. hogoy (= "spirit" or "soul") to hogoy (= "care"): Aucher "sine divina conciliatione cum anima."

<sup>i</sup> Cat. Lips. is defective, ὡς οὐχ ἰκανὰ καθ' ἑαυτὰ τρέφειν ἄνευ θείας [noun missing] καὶ ἐπιφροσύνης. The sentence is missing in Procopius.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

*19. (Ex. xxiii. 26a) Why does He <sup>a</sup> say, "There shall not be in thee anyone infertile or barren" <sup>b</sup> ?

He <sup>c</sup> places infertility and barrenness among the curses,<sup>d</sup> (and) says that they shall not be (found) among those who act with justice and lawfulness.<sup>e</sup> For (as) a prize to those who keep the divine writing of the Law He offers the more ancient law of immortal nature, which was laid down for procreation and the begetting of sons for the perpetuity of the race.<sup>f</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>g</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> no one will find any evil greater than childlessness and infertility of soul.<sup>i</sup> And this is ignorance and lack of education,<sup>j</sup> which make barren the deliberative mind.<sup>k</sup> But fecundity and abundance of children come about through learning and knowledge,<sup>l</sup> so that those who have an abundance of learning have an abundance of children, and those who are learned in the knowledge of good and excellent things <sup>m</sup> have good children. And

<sup>a</sup> See below, note c.

<sup>b</sup> LXX οὐκ ἔσται ἄγονος οὐδὲ στείρα ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς σου. In De Praemiis 108 Philo quotes freely, οὐδεὶς ἄγονος οὐδὲ στείρα γενήσεται.

<sup>c</sup> The context indicates that God is the subject although the Greek frag. supplies Μωυσῆς.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag., ἀγονίαν καὶ στείρωσιν ἐν κατάραις τάττων Μωυσῆς.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., οὗ φησιν ἕσσεσθαι παρὰ τοῖς τὰ δίκαια καὶ νόμιμα δρῶσιν.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag. (which ends with this sentence), ἀθλον γὰρ τοῖς τὸ ἱερόν γράμμα τοῦ νόμου φυλάττουσι παρέχει τὸν ἀρχαιότερον νόμον τῆς ἀθανάτου φύσεως, ὃς ἐπὶ σπορᾷ καὶ γενέσει τέκνων ἐπέθη πρὸς τὴν τοῦ γένους διαμονήν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "of souls"—ψυχῶν.

<sup>j</sup> ἀμαθία καὶ ἀπαιδευσία.

<sup>k</sup> τὸν βουλευτικὸν νοῦν vel sim.: Aucher "consiliarium intellectum."

<sup>l</sup> διὰ μαθήσεως καὶ ἐπιστήμης.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "qui bonae optimaecque intelligentiae periti sunt."

EXODUS, BOOK II

childless are they whose natures are sluggish and dull and at the same time unlearned.

*20. (Ex. xxiii. 26b) What is the meaning of the words, "The number of thy days I will fill" <sup>a</sup> ?

That it is most excellent and fine that the lives of His worshippers should be reckoned not by months nor by numbers <sup>b</sup> but by days.<sup>c</sup> For they are really of equal value with eternity when taken into account and number,<sup>d</sup> for he who is of no account and has no number is to be altogether condemned.<sup>e</sup> But it is well that an addition has been made to the passage, (namely) "I will fill," because of the intervals empty of thoughtfulness and virtue in the soul of him who wishes to progress.<sup>f</sup> For He wishes him who philosophizes in accordance with Him to be a harmony of all sounds like a musical instrument with no discord or dissonance in any part but with one and the

<sup>a</sup> LXX τὸν ἀριθμὸν τῶν ἡμερῶν σου ἀναπληρώσω. In De Praemiis 111 Philo quotes the half-verse as here except for the personal ending of the verb, which there appears as ἀναπληρώσεις (v.l. ἀναπλήσεις).

<sup>b</sup> The original prob. had "years," as in Procopius, see next note.

<sup>c</sup> Somewhat different is Procopius' reading, πάγκαλον δέ φασι τὸ μήτε μῆσι μήτε ἐνιαυτοῖς καταριθμεῖσθαι τὸν βίον τῶν ἰκετῶν.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. is obviously corrupt, see end of note. Procopius reads more intelligibly τῷ γὰρ ὄντι ἐκάστου σοφοῦ ἡμέρα ἰσότιμος ἐστὶν αἰῶνι. Similar is the wording in De Praemiis 112: ὅθεν ἰσότιμον καλῶ (καὶ ὄλω conj. Colson) βίῳ σοφοῦ καὶ μίαν ἡμέραν ὑπέλαβεν εἶναι κατορθουμένην. I suspect that Arm. i hamar ankeal ew i t'iw "taken into account and number" is a corruption of hančarakani mi t'iw (vel sim.) "one day of the intelligent (man)."

<sup>e</sup> Cf. De Praemiis 111 ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἀμαθῆς καὶ ἔκνομος "οὐτ' ἐν λόγῳ," φασίν, "οὐτ' ἐν ἀριθμῷ." The sentence is missing in Procopius.

<sup>f</sup> Slightly briefer is Procopius' text, εὖ δὲ καὶ τὸ "ἀναπληρώσω" διὰ τὰ κενὰ φρονήσεως καὶ ἀρετῆς ἐν ψυχῇ διαστήματα τοῦ προκόπτοντος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

same consonance and harmony, of will with word and of word with deed and of deed with both of these.<sup>a</sup>

*21. (Ex. xxiii. 27a) Why does He say, "Fear will I send to go before thee" <sup>b</sup> ?

The literal meaning is clear,<sup>c</sup> for a strong force to <sup>d</sup> terrify the enemy is <sup>e</sup> fear,<sup>f</sup> by which more (easily) the force of adversaries is taken and conquered.<sup>g</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> there are two reasons why men honour the Deity, (namely) love and fear,<sup>i</sup> and love is later, being in the elder ones,<sup>j</sup> while fear comes earlier,<sup>k</sup> so that not ineptly is it said that fear is the leader, for love, which comes after, is also acquired later.<sup>l</sup> And may it not be

<sup>a</sup> Procopius reads more briefly ὃν βούλεται καθάπερ μουσικὸν ὄργανον διὰ πάντων ἡρμόσθαι πρὸς μίαν συμφωνίαν βουλημάτων καὶ λόγων καὶ πράξεων.

<sup>b</sup> LXX (and the Greek frag. in the Catena) καὶ τὸν φόβον ἀποσπελῶ ἡγούμενόν σου (Heb. "My fear will I send before thee").

<sup>c</sup> τὸ μὲν ῥητὸν ἐμφανές, as in the Catena.

<sup>d</sup> The preposition ἰ "to" or "in" has fallen out of the Arm. text, probably by haplography.

<sup>e</sup> Emending Arm. ew "and" to ē "is."

<sup>f</sup> So the Catena, εἰς κατάπληξιν ἐχθρῶν ἰσχυρὰ δύναμις ὁ φόβος.

<sup>g</sup> The Catena and Procopius (whose excerpt begins here) read somewhat differently; the Catena have ὕψ' οὐ μᾶλλον ἢ (ἢ Wendland) τῆς τῶν ἀντιπάλων ἐφόδου ῥώμη ἀλίσκεται: Procopius ὕψ' οὐ μᾶλλον ἢ τῆς τῶν ἀντιπάλων ῥώμης οἱ πολέμοι ἀλίσκονται.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ δὲ πρὸς διάνοιαν as in the Catena, which add οὕτως.

<sup>i</sup> So the Catena (for Procopius' condensed paraphrase see below), δυοῖν οὐσῶν αἰτιῶν, ὧν ἕνεκα τὸ θεῖον ἄνθρωποι τιμῶσι, ἀγάπης καὶ φόβου.

<sup>j</sup> Presumably meaning "in mature persons," cf. Procopius ἐν τοῖς τελείοις. The Catena read more briefly τὸ μὲν ἀγαπᾶν ἐστὶν ὀψίγονον (v.l. ὀψέως).

<sup>k</sup> So the Catena, τὸ δὲ φοβεῖσθαι συνίσταται πρότερον.

<sup>l</sup> Only slightly different is the reading of the Catena (which end here), ὥστε οὐκ ἀπὸ σκοποῦ λελέχθαι τὸ ἡγεῖσθαι τὸν φόβον, τῆς ἀγάπης ὕστερον καὶ ὀψέ προσηγομένης. Procopius condenses the whole sentence, προηγείται δὲ τῆς ἀγάπης ὁ φόβος, ἢ τοῖς τελείοις ἐγγίνεται. δι' ἀμφοῖν γὰρ τιμᾶται θεός.

EXODUS, BOOK II

that one who fears does so rightly and properly ?<sup>a</sup> For just as imprudence is younger than prudence,<sup>b</sup> so is fear (younger) than love, since fear is born in a worthless man,<sup>c</sup> while love (is born) in a virtuous one.<sup>d</sup>

22. (Ex. xxiii. 27b) What is the meaning of the words, " I will terrify all the nations into which thou wilt come " <sup>e</sup> ?

The (expression) " I will terrify " in the literal sense <sup>f</sup> is equivalent to " I will strike with fear," which He earlier spoke of sending down for the destruction of their adversaries' force,<sup>g</sup> for fear is the cause of weakness.<sup>h</sup> In the second place, He seems to bear testimony to the surpassing virtue <sup>i</sup> of the nation <sup>j</sup> in that it would convert <sup>k</sup> not only its own (members) but also its enemies ; and by " enemies " I mean not only those who commit acts of war but also those who are heterodox.<sup>l</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>m</sup> this must be said. When there comes into the soul,<sup>n</sup> as into a land, the prudence <sup>o</sup> of a keen-eyed and seeing nature,<sup>p</sup> all the Gentile laws which are in it become mad

<sup>a</sup> The text is suspect. Aucher renders, " ne forte timere quoque sit jure digneque."

<sup>b</sup> ἀφροσύνη . . . φρόνησις.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher " in contempto."

<sup>d</sup> ἐν σπουδαίῳ.

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ ἐκστήσω (Heb. " I will confuse ") πάντα τὰ ἔθνη εἰς οὓς σὺ εἰσπορεύῃ εἰς αὐτούς.

<sup>f</sup> πρὸς τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> See the preceding section.

<sup>h</sup> ἀσθενείας.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν ὑπερβάλλουσαν ἀρετήν.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. the Hebrew nation.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. darzouçanel sometimes renders ἐπιστρέφειν, which seems to have been the verb used in the Greek, although it is not listed in Leisegang's Index Philonis. Aucher here renders, " convertat."

<sup>l</sup> τοὺς ἑτεροδόξους.

<sup>m</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>n</sup> Lit. " souls "—τὰς ψυχάς.

<sup>o</sup> εὐβουλία.

<sup>p</sup> Philo here, as often elsewhere, alludes to the etymology of " Israel " as " seeing (God)."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and rage and turn aside <sup>a</sup> from worthy thoughts, for evil things are unable to dwell and live <sup>b</sup> together with good ones.

23. (Ex. xxiii. 27c) What is the meaning of the words, "I will make <sup>c</sup> thine enemies fugitives" <sup>d</sup>?

He declares more certainly (and) clearly what was said earlier.<sup>e</sup> For he who has supervened <sup>f</sup> makes a beginning of flight. That is the literal meaning.<sup>g</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>h</sup> He speaks of acceptable laws,<sup>i</sup> which are unknown to youths and (which) He Himself <sup>j</sup> knows. For every foolish man is without a home or dwelling and is, as it were, a fugitive, driven from the city of virtue,<sup>k</sup> which must be thought of as the native place of wise and virtuous souls.<sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Philo plays on the ἐκστήσω of LXX as being the causative of ἐξίστασθαι in the sense of "be beside oneself" and "stand out of the way," i.e. "turn aside."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "stare," evidently mistaking keal "to live" for kal "to stand."

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "give," as in the LXX, which reflects Heb. idiom.

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ δώσω πάντας (a few mss. om. πάντας) τοὺς ὑπεναντίους σου φυγάδας (Heb. "And I will give all thine enemies to thee a neck"—an idiom meaning "and I will cause all thine enemies to turn their backs to thee"—i.e. "to flee from thee").

<sup>e</sup> In the preceding verses.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. verb i veray gal may render ἐπιγίγνεσθαι (which is, it seems, not used by Philo), but in exactly what sense is not clear. Aucher here renders, "supervenerat."

<sup>g</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>i</sup> νόμους εὐαρέστους vel sim.: Aucher "leges gratas."

<sup>j</sup> Arm. ink' n = autós, but this is evidently a corruption or translator's misreading of ἀστείος (see below). The original must have meant "and (which) the wise man knows."

<sup>k</sup> ἐκ πόλεως ἀρετῆς, cf. Leg. All. iii. 1 πόλις οἰκεία τῶν σοφῶν ἢ ἀρετῆ.

<sup>l</sup> πατρὶς ψυχῶν ἀστείων καὶ σπουδαίων. Here, as elsewhere, Arm. astí renders ἀστείος "wise," not "constant" as Aucher renders.

EXODUS, BOOK II

*24. (Ex. xxiii. 28) Why does He say, "I will send the wasp before thee and I will drive out thine enemies" <sup>a</sup> ?

Wasps fly upon one from nowhere <sup>b</sup> without first being seen, and after wounding with their stings they withdraw ; and they wound the principal parts, <sup>c</sup> the face, the eyes and the head. <sup>d</sup> And the fearful noise made (by them) in the air penetrates <sup>e</sup> the ears. And so, from the very beginning alliance (and) help are not <sup>f</sup> to be cut off, inasmuch as one is to do the enemy much harm through the smallest (animals), <sup>g</sup> especially when God commands, by which <sup>h</sup> even very weak men are innervated <sup>i</sup> and form an army with invincible power. <sup>j</sup> And allegorically it is to be said <sup>k</sup> that the wasp should be considered a symbol of unhoped

<sup>a</sup> Philo here paraphrases the LXX καὶ ἀποστελῶ τὰς σφηκίας (Heb. "the wasp," a collective singular: A.V. "hornets") προτέρας σου καὶ ἐκβαλεῖς (v.l. ἐκβαλῶ: Heb. "it will drive out") τοὺς Ἀμορραῖους (Heb. omits "the Amorites") καὶ Εὐαίους καὶ Χανααῖους καὶ τοὺς Χετταίους (v.l. + καὶ τοὺς Φερεζαίους καὶ τοὺς Γεργεσαίους καὶ τοὺς Ἰεβουσαίους) ἀπὸ σοῦ. Procopius cites only the first half of the verse, καὶ ἀποστελῶ τὰς σφηκίας προτέρας σου. In De Praemiis 96 Philo briefly alludes to this verse without quoting LXX or commenting in detail.

<sup>b</sup> ἐξ ἀφανοῦς, as in Procopius.

<sup>c</sup> τὰ κυριώτατα (rendered by two Arm. words): Procopius τὰ καιριώτατα.

<sup>d</sup> Procopius condenses the sentence, οἱ σφήκες ἐξ ἀφανοῦς οὐ προειδομένους τιτρώσκουσι τὰ καιριώτατα, κεφαλὴν τε καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ.

<sup>e</sup> Or "wounds."

<sup>f</sup> One Arm. ms. omits "not."

<sup>g</sup> The text seems to be corrupt, especially the phrase "from the very beginning." The Arm. glossator paraphrases, "one ought not to reject the help of God even though it be small." Procopius adds, either on his own or some post-Philonic authority, καὶ κατὰ τὸ ῥητὸν οὖν οἶδε θεὸς καὶ διὰ τῶν μικροτάτων καταγωνίζεσθαι ὡς καὶ σκνιπῶν τε καὶ βατράχων τοὺς Αἰγυπτίους . . . φίλον γὰρ αἰεὶ θεῷ διὰ μικρῶν περιγίνεσθαι.

<sup>h</sup> Or perhaps "through Whom."

<sup>i</sup> νευροῦνται.

<sup>j</sup> There is no Greek parallel to the second half of this sentence.

<sup>k</sup> ἀλληγορητέον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

for and unexpected power<sup>a</sup> divinely sent.<sup>b</sup> And when it inflicts blows with great force from the upper regions, it does not miss its mark with the blows, and after striking, it does not suffer any counter-(blow) at all.<sup>c</sup>

*25. (Ex. xxiii. 29) Why does He add the reason why not all enemies are to be driven out all together at one time but little by little, (namely) "that the land may not be made desolate and many animals congregate"<sup>d</sup>?

The literal sense<sup>e</sup> does not require a long discussion, for beasts flee from man as from their natural lord, wherefore they do not enter cities when these are populous; but if they become small, (the beasts) move about with the inhabitants.<sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> if from one who has just<sup>h</sup> for the first time been introduced (to know-

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "inexpectatae subitanaeque virtutis."

<sup>b</sup> Similar is the text of the Catena (which begins here), σύμβολον δὲ ὑποληπτέον εἶναι τοὺς σφῆκας ἀνεπίστου δυνάμεως θεία πομπῇ σταλησομένης. Procopius (resuming here) paraphrases, σημαῖνοι δ' ἂν καὶ θείαν πομπὴν ἀνεπίστου δυνάμεως στελλομένης ἐξ οὐρανοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> Slightly different and in part corrupt is the text of the Catena (the sentence is lacking in Procopius), ἦτις ἀφ' ὑψηλοτέρων κατ' ἄκρον τὸ οὐδὲν ὑποφέρουσα τὰς πληγὰς, εὐστοχῆσει πᾶσι ταῖς βλήμασι, καὶ διαθείσα οὐδὲν ἀντιπесεῖται τὸ παράπαν. Mangey has emended ἀντιπесεῖται το ἀντιπείσεται. We must further (on the basis of the Arm.) emend κατ' ἄκρον τὸ οὐδὲν ὑποφέρουσα το κατὰ κράτος ἐπιφέρουσα.

<sup>d</sup> LXX οὐκ ἐκβαλῶ αὐτοὺς (v.l., with Heb., adds ἀπὸ προσώπου σου) ἐν ἐνιαυτῷ ἐνί, ἵνα μὴ γένηται ἡ γῆ ἔρημος καὶ πολλὰ γένηται ἐπὶ σὲ τὰ θηρία τῆς γῆς (Heb. "and the beasts of the field increase against thee"). Procopius quotes only the words οὐκ ἐκβαλῶ αὐτοὺς ἐν ἐνιαυτῷ ἐνί.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>f</sup> Procopius condenses and paraphrases, τὰ γὰρ θηρία φεύγει τὰς τῶν πλειόνων ἀνθρώπων οἰκήσεις ὡς ἡγεμόνων τῇ φύσει καὶ τὰς ἐρήμους πληροῖ. <sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. reads "not then," but we must correct this from the Greek, see next note but one.

EXODUS, BOOK II

ledge) and is learning you take pains to cut away all his errors and to cause disciplined knowledge to dwell in him all at once, you will achieve the opposite of that which <sup>a</sup> is in your mind.<sup>b</sup> For he will not stand up under the removal (of error), if it is done at one time, nor will he hold the immense stream and flow of teaching,<sup>c</sup> but in both respects, by the cutting away and by the adding, he will be afflicted and suffer pain and will be carried away.<sup>d</sup> But (if) one quietly and measuredly and little by little removes ignorance and adds instruction proportionate thereto, it would admittedly become the cause of profit.<sup>e</sup> For not even a good physician would seek to restore all his health in one day to one who is ill, knowing that (thereby) he would do harm rather than good.<sup>f</sup> But measuring the

<sup>a</sup> Here again we must correct the Arm. which read οὐ instead of οὐδ.

<sup>b</sup> The Catenae (which begin here) read similarly (except for the two places mentioned in the preceding two notes) ἐὰν τοῦ ἄρτι πρῶτον εἰσαγομένου καὶ μανθάνοντος σπουδάσης, πᾶσαν τὴν ἀμαθίαν ἐκτεμών, ἀθρόαν ἐπιστήμην εἰσοικίσει τὸναντίον οὐδὲ διανοῇ πράξεις. Procopius condenses, ἀλλ' οὐδὲ τὰς τῶν εἰσαγομένων ψυχὰς ἔστιν ὑφ' ἐν ἀπαλλάττειν ἀγνοίας καὶ πληροῦν ἐπιστήμης.

<sup>c</sup> So the Catenae, οὔτε γὰρ τὴν ἀφαίρεσιν ἐνὶ καιρῷ γινομένην ὑπομενεῖ, οὔτε τὴν ἄφθονον ρύμην καὶ φορὰν τῆς διδασκαλίας χωρήσει. Again Procopius paraphrases, οὐ φέρουσι γὰρ οὔτε τὴν ἐκείνης ἀφαίρεσιν οὔτε τὴν ἄφθονον τῆς διδασκαλίας φορὰν.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "resiliet." In the Catenae the clause reads similarly except for the last verb ἀλλὰ καθ' ἑκάτερον τό τε ἐκτεμνόμενον καὶ προστιθέμενον ὀδυνηθεὶς καὶ περιαλγήσας ἀφηνίασει (v.l. ἀπεράσει).

<sup>e</sup> So the Catenae, τὸ δὲ ἡσυχῇ καὶ μετρίως ἀφαιρεῖν μὲν κατ' ὀλίγον (v.l. omits κατ' ὀλίγον) τι τῆς ἀπαιδευσίας, προστιθέναι δὲ τῆς παιδείας τὸ ἀνάλογον ὠφελείας γένοιτ' ἂν ὁμολογουμένης αἴτιον.

<sup>f</sup> So the Catenae, ὁ δὲ ἀγαθὸς ἰατρός οὐ μιᾷ ἡμέρᾳ τῷ νοσοῦντι πάντα ἀθρόα τὰ ὑγιεινὰ προσφέρειν (v.l. ἐπιφέρειν) ἂν ἐθελήσειεν, εἰδὼς βλάβην ἐργαζόμενος μᾶλλον ἢ περ ὠφέλειαν (v.l. ὑγίειαν).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

times, he administers the cure at intervals,<sup>a</sup> and by applying different things at different times he gently brings about health.<sup>b</sup> But he who is impatient<sup>c</sup> and presumptuous and insists upon cutting away (ignorance) all at once, and insists upon adding instruction all at once, increases rather than lessens the illness.

*26. (Ex. xxiii. 33b) Why does He call the service of heterodox gods<sup>d</sup> "a stumbling-block"<sup>e</sup>?

Just as those who stumble on whole feet<sup>f</sup> because they are unable to walk a long way<sup>g</sup> fall short of the end of the road, having earlier given up, so also the soul, being led to piety, is prevented from completing (its journey)<sup>h</sup> when it has earlier come upon the trackless places of impiety.<sup>i</sup> For these are obstacles and the cause of stumbling, by <sup>a</sup> Lit. "managing he apportions the cure"; the Arm. ptc. and verb probably render ἐπιδιανέμει, as in the Greek frag., see next note.

<sup>b</sup> So the Catenae (which end with this sentence), ἀλλὰ διαμετρησάμενος τοὺς καιροὺς ἐπιδιανέμει τὰ σωτήρια καὶ ἄλλοτε ἄλλα προστιθεὶς πρῶως ὑγίειαν ἐμποιεῖ.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "trenchant": Aucher "importunus."

<sup>d</sup> i.e. of the gods of the Gentiles.

<sup>e</sup> LXX ἐὰν γὰρ δουλεύσης τοῖς θεοῖς αὐτῶν, οὗτοι ἔσονται σοι πρόσκομμα (Heb. "snare").

<sup>f</sup> i.e. on even feet, see the Greek text (below), in which this phrase occurs more appropriately in the following clause.

<sup>g</sup> Here again the order of words in the Arm. is to be corrected from the Greek which places "a long way" in the clause beginning "fall short."

<sup>h</sup> In the Greek (see next note) it is the road, not the soul, which leads to piety.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. (from John of Damascus) reads more smoothly ὡσπερ οἱ προσπταίσαντες, ἀρτίους βαίνειν ποσὶν ἀδυνατοῦντες, μακρὰν τοῦ κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν τέλους ὑστερίζουσι προσκάννοντες (l. προκάννοντες?), οὕτω καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ τὴν πρὸς εὐσεβίαν ἄγουσαν ὁδὸν ἀνείν κωλύεται, προεντνυχάνουσα ταῖς ἀσεβείαις ἀνοδίαῖς. Procopius (covering only this sentence) condenses and paraphrases, τοῦτο γὰρ παθὼν ὁδοιπόρος προκάννει, πρὶν εἰς τὸ τέλος ἐλθεῖν τῆς ὁδοῦ, καὶ ψυχὴ πρὸς θεὸν ὁδεύειν ἐθέλουσα δυσσεβείαις ἀνοδίαῖς τῆς εὐθείας ἀπείργεται.

EXODUS, BOOK II

which the mind is lamed and falls short of the natural road.<sup>a</sup>
Now this road is that which ends in the Father.<sup>b</sup>

27. (Ex. xxiv. 1a) What is the meaning of the words,
“ And He said to Moses, Go up, thou and Aaron<sup>c</sup> and Nadab<sup>d</sup> and Abihu<sup>e</sup> ” ?

You see indeed that the number of those gathered together for ascending was worthy of God,<sup>g</sup> (namely) the tetrad,<sup>h</sup> which is the essence<sup>i</sup> of the decad,<sup>j</sup> while seventy<sup>k</sup> is produced by multiplying seven by ten or ten by seven.<sup>l</sup> But one should recognize that through the literal meaning<sup>m</sup> this passage is allegorized.<sup>n</sup> For Moses is the most pure and God-loving mind,<sup>o</sup> while Aaron is his word, which is

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., αὐται γάρ εἰσιν ἐμπόδιοι καὶ προσπται-σμάτων αἰτίαι, δι' ὧν κυλλαίνων ὁ νοῦς ὑστερίζει τῆς κατὰ φύσιν ὁδοῦ.

<sup>b</sup> After “ the Father ” we should prob. add “ of all things ” as in the Greek frag., which reads ἡ δὲ ὁδὸς ἐστὶν ἡ ἐπὶ τὸν πατέρα τῶν ὄλων τελευτῶσα.

<sup>c</sup> Arm. Aharon (as in Heb.).

<sup>d</sup> Arm. Nabad.

<sup>e</sup> Arm. Abioud (as in LXX).

<sup>f</sup> LXX Καὶ Μωυσῆ εἶπεν, Ἀνάβηθι πρὸς τὸν κύριόν σου, σὺ καὶ Ἄαρὼν καὶ Ναδάβ καὶ Ἀβιούδ καὶ ἑβδομήκοντα τῶν πρεσβυτέρων Ἰσραήλ. Philo's commentary refers to the seventy elders, of whom there is no mention in the lemma. In De Migratione 168 Philo quotes the LXX text except that for τῶν πρεσβυτέρων he has τῆς γερουσίας.

<sup>g</sup> θεοπρεπή.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. Moses and his three companions.

<sup>i</sup> οὐσία.

<sup>j</sup> Cf. De Opif. Mundi 47 and De Plantatione 123, where four is said to be the source or potentiality of ten, i.e. the sum of 1, 2, 3, 4 = 10.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. the seventy elders.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher's rendering adds, after the “ seventy,” the words “ mysterium cernis ” in parenthesis, though there is nothing corresponding in the Arm.

<sup>m</sup> διὰ τοῦ ῥητοῦ.

<sup>n</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

<sup>o</sup> διάνοια or νοῦς. Both terms are used in the parallel, De Migratione 169-170, see notes below.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the unlying interpreter of the truth.<sup>a</sup> And Nadab is voluntary vision, for (his name) is to be interpreted as “voluntary.”<sup>b</sup> And Abihu is truth from God,<sup>c</sup> for it is this to which the name refers.<sup>d</sup> Thus you see a soul adorned with all the ornaments that lead to virtue<sup>e</sup> so as to please God, (namely) a worthy mind,<sup>f</sup> a true word,<sup>g</sup> one who is voluntarily pious<sup>h</sup> and one who guards them (like) a barrier and wall, (namely) help from God.<sup>i</sup> But the power of the number four will be subordinated to a commander consisting of one,<sup>j</sup> for there are three ornaments of the one prophetic mind which is acquired by you. The powers of the seventy elders are honoured with seniority, not by length of many years but by the ascension of perfect numbers, which are worthy of honour and are privileged.

*28. (Ex. xxiv. 1b) Why does He say, “they shall worship the Lord from afar”<sup>k</sup>?

Just as those who are near a fire are burned, while those

<sup>a</sup> Cf. De Migratione 169 Ἰαρωὺν . . . ὁ γεγωνὸς λόγος προφητεύων διανοία.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. De Migratione 169 Ναδάβ δὲ ἐκούσιος ἐρμηνεύεται ὁ μὴ ἀνάγκη τιμῶν τὸ θεῖον.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher “divinitus veritas.”

<sup>d</sup> This far-fetched etymology is apparently based on the Arm. translator’s reading ἀλήθεια instead of βοήθεια “help,” see below. In De Migratione 169 Abihu is more accurately etymologized as πατήρ μου. Heb. ’abīhū lit.=“he is my father.”<sup>e</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>f</sup> Symbolized by Moses.

<sup>g</sup> Symbolized by Aaron.

<sup>h</sup> Symbolized by Nadab.

<sup>i</sup> Symbolized by Abihu.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. text is not altogether clear. Aucher renders, “caeterum cum duce militiae quaterno numero ordinetur virtus unitatis comprehensae.” More intelligible is the parallel in De Migratione 170, αἶδ’ εἰσὶν αἱ τοῦ βασιλεύοντος ἀξίου νοῦ δορυφόροι δυνάμεις.

<sup>k</sup> LXX καὶ προσκυνήσουσιν μακρόθεν τῷ κυρίῳ (Heb. omits “the Lord”).

EXODUS, BOOK II

who stand apart at a distance measured by a long interval attain to security, so it is with the soul; whatever soul comes too near in desiring the vision of God, does not perceive when it is being consumed.<sup>a</sup> But as for that (soul) which stands far off at a distance, no longer do the tongues of flame <sup>b</sup> burn it but warming it moderately, they kindle <sup>c</sup> it with vitality. This <sup>d</sup> is said in reference to the dissolution and rapture of the most perfect and prophetic mind,<sup>e</sup> for which it is fitting and lawful to enter the dark cloud <sup>f</sup> and to dwell in the forecourt <sup>g</sup> of the palace of the Father. Wherefore also there are some animals which move and dwell in fire, by which others are destroyed, and they are called "fire-born."<sup>h</sup>

29. (Ex. xxiv. 2) Why does He say, "Moses alone shall come near to God, and they shall not come near, and the people shall not go up with them" <sup>i</sup> ?

O most excellent and God-worthy ordinance, that the prophetic mind <sup>j</sup> alone should approach God and that those

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. (which extends only to the end of the sentence) seems to be paraphrastic, οὐχ ὁρᾷς ὅτι τοῦ πυρός ἡ δύναμις τοῖς μὲν ἀφεστηκόσι μεμετρημένον διάστημα παρέχει φῶς (Arm. = ἀσφάλειαν), κατακαίει δὲ τοὺς ἐγγίζοντας; ὄρα μὴ τοιοῦτόν τι πάθης τῇ διανοίᾳ, μὴ σε ὁ πολὺς πόθος ἀδυνάτου πράγματος ἀναλώσῃ.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "sparks (or "effulgences") of rays": Aucher "radiatorum splendor."<sup>c</sup> ζωπυροῦσι.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the statement about souls that draw near to the fire.

<sup>e</sup> κατὰ τὴν κατάλυσιν καὶ ἀφαίρεσιν τοῦ τελειοτάτου καὶ προφητικοῦ νοῦ: Aucher "secundum dissolutionem et avulsionem perfecti propheticique intellectus."

<sup>f</sup> τὸν γνώφον, cf. De Vita Mosis i. 158 on Ex. xx. 21.

<sup>g</sup> αὐλῆ vel sim.: Aucher "atrio."

<sup>h</sup> πυρίγονα, cf. De Gigantibus 7 et al., and also Aelian, De Nat. An. 2. 2. 231 on salamanders.

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ ἐγγιᾶ Μωσῆς ὁ μόνος πρὸς τὸν θεὸν (Heb. "YHWH"), αὐτοὶ δὲ οὐκ ἐγγιούσιν ὁ δὲ λαὸς οὐ συναναβήσεται μετ' αὐτῶν (Heb. "with him").

<sup>j</sup> τὸν προφητικὸν νοῦν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

in second place <sup>a</sup> should go up, making <sup>b</sup> a path to heaven, while those in third place and the turbulent characters of the people <sup>c</sup> should neither go up above nor go up with them but those worthy of beholding should be beholders of the blessed path above. But that “ (Moses) alone shall go up ” is said most naturally.<sup>d</sup> For when the prophetic mind becomes divinely inspired and filled with God,<sup>e</sup> it becomes like the monad, not being at all mixed with any of those things associated with duality. But he who is resolved into the nature of unity,<sup>f</sup> is said to come near God in a kind of family relation,<sup>g</sup> for having given up and left behind all mortal kinds,<sup>h</sup> he is changed into the divine, so that such men become kin to God and truly divine.

30. (Ex. xxiv. 4b) Why does Moses, rising early in the morning, build an altar below the mountain and twelve stones for the twelve tribes of Israel? <sup>i</sup>

Either the altar was built of only twelve stones in order that all the tribes of the nation together might in some way <sup>j</sup> be a sacred altar to God, or the twelve stones were set up separately apart from <sup>k</sup> the altar, in order that some, although they might be missing from the daily service,<sup>l</sup> might seem to be there, for the absence of some would be <sup>a</sup> τοὺς δευτέρους.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. “ cutting.”

<sup>c</sup> Aucher “ tertius vero populares mores conturbatos.”

<sup>d</sup> φυσικώτατα, i.e. “ most philosophically.”

<sup>e</sup> ἐνθουσιᾷ καὶ θεοφορεῖται.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 288 (Moses) μετακληθεῖς ὑπὸ τοῦ πατρὸς, ὃς αὐτὸν δυάδα ὄντα, σῶμα καὶ ψυχὴν, εἰς μονάδος ἀνεστοιχείου φύσιν.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ συγγενῆ τινα οἰκειότητα: Aucher “ cognativa quadam familiaritate.”

<sup>h</sup> πάντα θνητὰ γένη.

<sup>i</sup> LXX ὀρθρίσας δὲ Μωυσῆς τὸ πρῶτῃ ᾤκοδόμησεν θυσιαστήριον ὑπὸ τὸ ὄρος καὶ δώδεκα λίθους (Heb. “ pillars”; v.l. in LXX adds ἔστησεν after λίθους) εἰς τὰς δώδεκα φυλάς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ.

<sup>j</sup> τρόπον τινα.

<sup>k</sup> χωρίς.

<sup>l</sup> τῆς καθ’ ἡμέραν λειτουργίας vel sim.

EXODUS, BOOK II

filled by the permanent setting up <sup>a</sup> of the twelve stones, which would be a suitable memorial of the tribes, which he wishes always to be present as ministers to the Father.

31. (Ex. xxiv. 5a) Why does he send young men, not the elders? <sup>b</sup>

Since the elders, numbering seventy, had brought the nation to the foot of the mountain,<sup>c</sup> performing (this) service at the ascent of the prophet, it would have been unsuitable and strange to summon them again to another work when they had already been summoned earlier to the sight,<sup>d</sup> and if he had commanded their contemporaries to offer sacrifice, he would have been held in low esteem by those who were not offering (sacrifice) with them. In the second place, (it was) because the elder generations were a kind of first-fruits and new (offerings), as if performing a bloodless sacrifice, which is more appropriate to elders of advanced age. But as for those who as young men in the flower of their youth were sent to offer sacrifice, because there was much blood in them by reason of their flourishing youth it was profitable <sup>e</sup> for them to offer every offering of sacrifice with blood, as a thankoffering <sup>f</sup> to God and Father, using their youth to lead their desires to piety <sup>g</sup> and not to the madness of unrestrained desires. That is the literal meaning.<sup>h</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>i</sup> the allwise and God-beloved soul <sup>j</sup> has in itself both

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "constanti erectione."

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ἐξάπέστειλεν τοὺς νεανίσκους τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραήλ.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, I think, "quoniam senes numerum gentis septuaginta praeseferentes obtulerunt ad radices montis."

<sup>d</sup> i.e. of what was to take place on the mountain.

<sup>e</sup> λυσιτελής vel sim. : Aucher "expediebat."

<sup>f</sup> εὐχαριστίαν.

<sup>g</sup> τὰς ἐπιθυμίας πρὸς εὐσέβειαν.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>i</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. ogi (= ψυχή) is here exceptionally provided with a plural ending, although it governs a singular verb. Possibly the plural ending here is analogous to that of mitk' (νοῦς), a pluralia tantum. Aucher too renders, "anima."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

elderly and youthful principles,<sup>a</sup> all (of them) holy. Now the elderly ones are used in the contemplation of nature <sup>b</sup> and of those things which are therein, while those which are vigorous (are used) for the power <sup>c</sup> of worthy deeds, so that the life of those who are excellent in these ways, in both the contemplative and the practical, is publicly posted and widely famed.<sup>d</sup>

32. (Ex. xxiv. 5b) Why do the young men who were sent offer whole-burnt-offerings <sup>e</sup> and sacrifice calves as victims? <sup>f</sup>

Calves of tender years <sup>g</sup> are offered by the hands of youths of tender years in order that the sacrifices which are offered may preserve a correspondence of age <sup>h</sup> with those who make the offering. Not lambs and not kids (are offered), for these animals are weaker than calves, whereas he seems to make the sacrifice from more powerful (animals). Therefore the youths <sup>i</sup> who <sup>j</sup> perform the sacrifice offer sacrifices of whole-burnt-offerings and salutary offerings <sup>k</sup> in their prime vigour. The third (kind of offering, namely) the sin-offering is not (made) inasmuch as that place does not admit of any transgression at all because of the visible appearance of the Father. For in that place there was

<sup>a</sup> λόγους.

<sup>b</sup> τῆς φύσεως.

<sup>c</sup> δύναμιν: Aucher "in virili occupatione."

<sup>d</sup> στηλιτεύεται καὶ διαφημίζεται vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. oljakēzs reflects LXX ὀλοκαντώματα = Heb. ólót (A.V. "burnt offerings").

<sup>f</sup> LXX (abbreviated here) καὶ ἀνήνεγκαν ὀλοκαντώματα καὶ ἔθυσαν θυσίαν σωτηρίου (Heb. "covenant-offerings": A.V. "peace offerings") τῷ θεῷ (Heb. "to YHWH") μοσχάρια (Heb. "oxen").

<sup>g</sup> ἀπαλοί.

<sup>h</sup> Variant "equality" or "community."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "the youth" (collective abstract)—ἡ νεότης.

<sup>j</sup> A different division of words yields the variant "the new youth" for "the youths who."

<sup>k</sup> τὰ σωτήρια, which is the LXX rendering of Heb. š'elāmim "covenant-offerings," see above, note f.

EXODUS, BOOK II

not anything to oppose (Him).<sup>a</sup> For when the sun rises, darkness disappears and everything becomes filled with light. Moreover, when God appears or is about to appear, is not every form and substance <sup>b</sup> of sin first to be destroyed and removed? Accordingly, the two kinds of sacrifice are here the best that can be <sup>c</sup> performed, (namely) the whole-burnt-offering in honour of the unbribable and unbought <sup>d</sup> Father, which is made for no one else but Him Who is honoured, and the salutary offering, which is made for our sake, in return for the fact that good things have happened to us <sup>e</sup> and that we experience and await them. For it is to God Who gives them to the race of mortals that we render the sacrifices of health and salvation and all good things in general.

33. (Ex. xxiv. 6) Why did Moses take half of the blood and pour it into mixing-bowls,<sup>f</sup> and pour half upon <sup>g</sup> the altar? <sup>h</sup>

He divides the blood in a manner appropriate to its worth,<sup>i</sup> desiring that some of it should be a sacred offering to God and that some should be a sacred unction <sup>j</sup> in place of oil for sanctity and perfect purity, and, if one must speak

<sup>a</sup> A variant omits the negative. Aucher renders, "quae illico ipsi opponebat sese," and as (a free) alternative, "cui illic illud peccatum non poterat sese opponere." The Arm. glossator takes the text to mean "there was no sin there, which is opposed to God."

<sup>b</sup> εἶδος καὶ οὐσία.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "that are."

<sup>d</sup> The two Arm. adjectives prob. render the single Greek adjective ἀδεκάστου: Aucher "dona vix accipientis."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "beneficia probavimus."

<sup>f</sup> κρατήρας, as in LXX, see note h.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "circa."

<sup>h</sup> LXX λαβὼν δὲ Μωυσῆς τὸ ἥμισυ τοῦ αἵματος ἐνέχεεν εἰς κρατήρας· τὸ δὲ ἥμισυ τοῦ αἵματος προσέχεεν πρὸς (v.l. ἐπί: Heb. "upon") τὸ θυσιαστήριον. Philo cites the LXX text of this verse (omitting Moses' name) in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 182-185 and allegorizes it in somewhat the same manner as here but without Pythagorean number-mysticism.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "legitimo ordine."

<sup>j</sup> χρίσμα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the truth, in order that (men) may be inspired <sup>a</sup> to receive the holy spirit.<sup>b</sup> But the mixing-bowls are symbols of the mixed and composite nature,<sup>c</sup> which is ours. For the divine (nature) is pure and unmixed, whereas all such things as through generation come into existence from contraries are necessarily receptacles, in part of a good, in part of a bad form.<sup>d</sup> Accordingly, that which belongs to the better is assigned to the part of God, for He acquires this through His simpler and more lucid essence,<sup>e</sup> while that which belongs to the worse (is assigned) to the race of mortals. But one should begin with the incorporeal and intelligible things,<sup>f</sup> which are the measures and models of sense-perceptible things.<sup>g</sup> Now the principle <sup>h</sup> of all things arises from numbers, some of which are odd, having the status of active causes,<sup>i</sup> and some even, (having the status) of matter.<sup>j</sup> It is therefore necessary to attribute the idea <sup>k</sup> of the odd (number) to God because of His connexion <sup>l</sup> with activity,<sup>m</sup> whereas the even (is to be attributed) to the race of mortals because of its familiarity with suffering and passion.<sup>n</sup> The same (distinction holds) for

<sup>a</sup> Prob. ψυχοῦσθαι: Aucher "in spiritum verti."

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ἅγιον πνεῦμα, which is not Philonic usage, though Philo often speaks of a θεῖον πνεῦμα. Possibly the Arm. translator has here substituted "holy" for "divine."

<sup>c</sup> τῆς μικτῆς καὶ συνθέτου φύσεως, cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 183: Aucher "sibi invicem compactae naturae."

<sup>d</sup> Prob. εἶδος rather than ἰδέας: Aucher "ideae."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "qui ergo melioris statûs est, partum Dei sortitus est per simpliciores lucidioremque essentiam." The parallel in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 183 and the present context indicate that it is God's essence which is meant here.

<sup>f</sup> τοῖς ἀσωμάτοις καὶ νοητοῖς. <sup>g</sup> παραδείγματα τῶν αἰσθητῶν.

<sup>h</sup> Or "origin"—ἀρχή. <sup>i</sup> δραστηρίων αἰτίων λόγον ἔχοντες.

<sup>j</sup> Cf. De Opif. Mundi 13 ἄρρεν μὲν γὰρ ἐν τοῖς οὔσι τὸ περιπτόν, τὸ δ' ἄρτιον θῆλυ (where "male" connotes "active," and "female" connotes "passive" and "material").

<sup>k</sup> Or "form." <sup>l</sup> συγγένειαν.

<sup>m</sup> Lit. "doing" or "making."

<sup>n</sup> Aucher renders more briefly, "ob familiaritatem ad patiendum."

EXODUS, BOOK II

equality and inequality, similarity and dissimilarity, identity and difference, unity and separation.<sup>a</sup> As for equality, similarity, identity and unity, they are to be ordered under the better class, as it were, with God, while the unequal, the dissimilar, the different and the separate (are to be ordered) in the worse (class), of which mortal (nature) has obtained the greater part. It is (possible), however, to see the equivalent of this (distinction) not only in incorporeal and intelligible things but also in sense-perceptible natures. For even in the cosmos heaven itself and everything in heaven are found worthy of the divine and best essence<sup>b</sup> and come near to God and are consecrated to Him. But that which is sublunary<sup>c</sup> belongs to the more material and denser part and is assigned to the race of mortals. Moreover, in us ourselves the soul<sup>d</sup> consists of the rational and the irrational.<sup>e</sup> And the rational, being the better, is consecrated to the better nature, while the irrational, being worse, (is consecrated) to the inferior,<sup>f</sup> which we, the untaught and incontinent and undisciplined,<sup>g</sup> have received. Nevertheless, one who considers the mortal body with good judgment will say that the sovereign head is consecrated to the holy Creator and Father, while (the part) from the breast to the feet belongs to material substance. This (part), therefore, he reckons to the mixing-bowls symbolically,<sup>h</sup> because it is mixed and composite, while he consecrates the pure and unmixed (part) by making it an offering to God.

34. (Ex. xxiv. 7a) What is the meaning of the words, "Taking the book of the covenant, he read to the ears<sup>i</sup> of all the people"<sup>j</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> Prob. διαίρεσει.

<sup>b</sup> Or "substance"—ουσίας.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ μετὰ σελήνην.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ ψυχή.

<sup>e</sup> τοῦ λογικοῦ καὶ τοῦ ἀλόγου.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "lesser": Aucher "minori."

<sup>g</sup> i.e. those of us who are untaught, etc.

<sup>h</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>i</sup> So LXX and Heb. literally (A.V. "audience"), see next note.

<sup>j</sup> LXX καὶ λαβὼν τὸ βιβλίον τῆς διαθήκης ἀνέγνω εἰς τὰ ὦτα τοῦ λαοῦ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Concerning the divine covenant we have already spoken in detail,<sup>a</sup> so that it is not proper to discuss the subject again at the present time. However, some notice must be taken of (the words) "reading to the ears." Now this takes place without separation and interruption, for the air is not agitated from without as the sound reaches the hearers but (the voice of) the speaker resounds in them without separation or distance<sup>b</sup> like some pure and lucid voice which is extended.<sup>c</sup> And there is no third thing interposed, by the intervention of which the reception<sup>d</sup> becomes less but the sound echoes more surely in an only purer form when the hearers and the word come together without any separation between them. That is the literal meaning.<sup>e</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>f</sup> since it was impossible for anyone to reach such a multitude of hearers<sup>g</sup> or to come near and speak to their ears,<sup>h</sup> it is necessary to hold the opinion that the teacher and the pupil<sup>i</sup> were there. One of them speaks privately<sup>j</sup> to his disciples<sup>k</sup> without concealing anything, not even things not to be spoken of,<sup>l</sup> and the other is the recipient who offers himself as one worthy of voluntarily being a repository of the divine Law<sup>m</sup> and a guardian of those things which it would not be proper to interpret<sup>n</sup> to the many, whatever may happen.

<sup>a</sup> ἡμῶν ἠκρίβωται. Philo here apparently alludes to his (lost) work Περὶ Διαθηκῶν in two books, see De Mut. Nom. 53.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "sed dicentis vox immediate in eas sonans."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "expansa."      <sup>d</sup> Aucher "perceptio."

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.      <sup>f</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "ut vox unius cujusdam in tantae multitudinis aures perveniret."

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "aut ipse ad singulorum accedens aures loqueretur."

<sup>i</sup> ὁ γνώριμος : Aucher "auditor."

<sup>j</sup> ἰδίως ἢ κατ' ἰδίαν : Aucher "seorsum."

<sup>k</sup> τοῖς μαθηταῖς.      <sup>l</sup> ἀπόρρητα vel sim.

<sup>m</sup> The meaning of the clause is not quite clear : Aucher "praestans se dignum divina traditione legis voluntariae."

<sup>n</sup> ἀποδίδοσθαι : Aucher "referre."

EXODUS, BOOK II

35. (Ex. xxiv. 8a) Why did he take that blood which (was) in the mixing-bowls <sup>a</sup> and sprinkle (it) over the people? <sup>b</sup>

By indicating that the blood of all (was) the same and that their kinship <sup>c</sup> (was) the same, he wishes to show that in a certain way <sup>d</sup> they were animated by one idea and nature, <sup>e</sup> for on many occasions he puts the blood in the same class as the soul. <sup>f</sup> Even if they are separated from one another by their bodies, they are nevertheless united by mind and thought, <sup>g</sup> and they share together the divine sacrifices and victims, being brought from estrangement to community <sup>h</sup> and to the concord <sup>i</sup> of distinguished blood.

36. (Ex. xxiv. 8b) Why does he say further, "Behold the blood of the covenant which the Lord commanded you concerning all these words" <sup>j</sup>?

(He does so) because the blood is a symbol <sup>k</sup> of family kinship. <sup>l</sup> And the form <sup>m</sup> of kinship is twofold <sup>n</sup>: one is that among men, which has its origin in ancestors, while that among souls <sup>o</sup> has its origin in wisdom. <sup>p</sup> Now he did not mention the kinship of ancestors and offspring, because

<sup>a</sup> See QE ii. 33 on Ex. xxiv. 6.

<sup>b</sup> LXX λαβὼν δὲ Μωυσῆς τὸ αἷμα κατεσκεδάσεν τοῦ λαοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> τὴν συγγένειαν.

<sup>d</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>e</sup> μιᾷ ψυχουῦσθαι ἰδέα καὶ φύσει.

<sup>f</sup> ἐν μέρει τῆς ψυχῆς. Cf. Lev. xvii. 14 (et al.) "the blood of it is its life."

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "by the mind of thoughts": Aucher "per consilia mentis."

<sup>h</sup> ἐξ ἀλλοτριώσεως εἰς κοινωνίαν.

<sup>i</sup> Or "sincerity" or "singleness": Aucher "concordiam."

<sup>j</sup> LXX καὶ εἶπεν, Ἰδοὺ τὸ αἷμα τῆς διαθήκης ἧς διέθετο (Heb. "cut," i.e. "made") κύριος πρὸς ὑμᾶς περὶ πάντων τῶν λόγων τούτων.

<sup>k</sup> σύμβολον ἢ σημεῖον.

<sup>l</sup> συγγενικῆς οἰκειότητος.

<sup>m</sup> Or "species"—εἶδος.

<sup>n</sup> Lit. "of two faces": Aucher "duplex."

<sup>o</sup> ψυχῶν.

<sup>p</sup> σοφίαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

it is also common to irrational animals, but from the other (kind of kinship) as from a root grew wisdom.<sup>a</sup> Now wisdom is the font of words and the voluntary laws <sup>b</sup> which the teacher has proclaimed and taught to lovers of learning as being most necessary, (namely) concord and community.<sup>c</sup> But this cannot be acquired by polytheists,<sup>d</sup> because they put forth variant opinions distinguished for difference and diversity,<sup>e</sup> and they become the cause of quarrelling and fighting. But an harmonious adjustment to one (opinion) is the agreement of all who are ministers and servants of the work.

*37. (Ex. xxiv. 10) What is the meaning of the words, "They saw the place where the God of Israel was standing, and under His feet (was something) like the work of a plinth of sapphire and like the form of the firmament of heaven in purity" <sup>f</sup>?

All this is, in the first place, most suitable to and worthy of the theologian,<sup>g</sup> for no one will boast of seeing the invisible God, (thus) yielding to arrogance.<sup>h</sup> And holy and

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. translator may have misunderstood the Greek here. One expects "but the other (kind of kinship) grew from wisdom as from a root."

<sup>b</sup> τῶν ἐκουσίων νόμων, cf. De Mut. Nom. 26.

<sup>c</sup> ὁμόνοιαν καὶ κοινωνίαν vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> τῶν πολυθέων.

<sup>e</sup> The construction is not wholly clear but Aucher is wrong, I think, in rendering, "quia honoratae huic distinctioni disjunctiores opiniones oppositas faciunt."

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ εἶδον τὸν τόπον οὗ εἰστήκει ὁ θεὸς τοῦ Ἰσραήλ· καὶ τὰ ὑπὸ τοὺς πόδας αὐτοῦ ὡσεὶ ἔργον πλίνθου (v.l. λίθου) σαφείρου καὶ ὡσπερ εἶδος στερεώματος τοῦ οὐρανοῦ (Heb. "and like the very heaven") τῇ καθαριότητι. Philo quotes the first clause (to Ἰσραήλ) in De Somniis i. 62 and ii. 222, and the rest of the verse in De Confus. Ling. 96 ff., where the mss. of Philo read λίθου for πλίνθου but the commentary (as in this section of the Quaestiones) requires πλίνθου (see also notes below).

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ θεολόγου, i.e. Moses.

<sup>h</sup> The brief Greek frag. (which contains only this clause) reads similarly οὐδεὶς ἀυγήσει τὸν ἀόρατον θεὸν ἰδεῖν, εἴξας ἀλαζονεία.

EXODUS, BOOK II

divine is this same place alone in which He is said to appear, for He Himself does not go away or change His position but He sends the powers,<sup>a</sup> which are indicative of His essence.<sup>b</sup> And if it is right (to say so, we may) say that this place is that of His Logos,<sup>c</sup> since He has never given a suspicion of movement but of always standing, for the nature of the Father remains fixed and unchanged<sup>d</sup> and more lucid and simpler<sup>e</sup> than the (number) one which alone is a form of likeness.<sup>f</sup> Now he has represented the unchanged and immutable nature of God (as) the oneness of unity because of His substance.<sup>g</sup> And the whole heaven altogether was under His feet, for its colour indeed was rather like a sapphire. And the "plinth" is a figure<sup>h</sup> of the stars as one group,<sup>i</sup> harmoniously arranged in an order of numbers, <sup>a</sup> τὰς δυνάμεις.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "essentiam." Although Arm. ζουτ'ιυν renders both ουσία and υπαρξις, the context favours the rendering "essence" rather than "existence" in spite of Philo's statement in De Poster. Caini 169 αἱται γὰρ (sc. αἱ δυνάμεις) οὐ τὴν οὐσίαν, τὴν δ' ὑπαρξιν ἐκ τῶν ἀποτελουμένων αὐτῷ παριστάσι. Philo here (in QE) seems to mean that God's powers merely indicate His essence but do not make this fully known to man. The rendering "essence" seems preferable to "existence" also because of the Heb. 'esem in this verse (see above, note f on p. 78), which means something like "essence."

<sup>c</sup> Arm. βαναωροουτ'ιυν = λογιότης rather than λόγος (Aucher renders, "rationalitatis"), but other passages in Philo, e.g. De Confus. Ling. 96, show that the Logos is meant here.

<sup>d</sup> βεβαία καὶ ἄτρεπτος.

<sup>e</sup> ἀπλουστέρα.

<sup>f</sup> Variant "simpler than (the number) one to which unity is a form of likeness": Aucher "simplicior unitate, quae unica est forma similitudinis."

<sup>g</sup> The construction and meaning are not wholly clear: Aucher "unam autem unitatis invariabilem immutabilemque naturam Dei propter substantiam indicavit."

<sup>h</sup> The original was πλυνθιον or πλυνθίς: Aucher "laterculus." I have here rendered it by "figure" rather than "small brick" because Philo seems to be playing on the metaphorical meaning of πλυνθιον, "musical scale."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "at one time": Aucher "simul."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

proportions and progressions,<sup>a</sup> that is, (as) a constant likeness and image of an incorporeal form.<sup>b</sup> For it is a very holy and lucid sense-perceptible type-form<sup>c</sup> of the intelligible heaven and is a worthy portion of the divine essence, of which I have spoken earlier.<sup>d</sup> Therefore is it said, "Like the form of the firmament<sup>e</sup> in purity," for incorporeal forms are most lucid and pure inasmuch as they have obtained a share of unmixed essence and of that which is most simple. Accordingly, he says that the sense-perceptible heaven, which he calls "firmament," is distinct from the intelligible form because of its purity.

*38. (Ex. xxiv. 11a) Why does (Scripture) say, "Of the chosen seeing ones<sup>f</sup> there differed<sup>g</sup> not even one"<sup>h</sup>?

The literal text has a clear interpretation, (namely) that

<sup>a</sup> ἀριθμῶν καὶ λόγων καὶ ἀναλογιῶν: Aucher "numerorum, rationum et collationum."

<sup>b</sup> ἀσωμάτου εἶδους.

<sup>c</sup> τύπος εἰδῶν.

<sup>d</sup> Text slightly emended (by removal of superfluous verb εἶ "is"): Aucher "siquidem intelligibilis caeli sensibile hoc typus est purus et lucidus omnino, illius, quam jampridem dixi divinam essentiam ac portionem meruisse."

<sup>e</sup> In the quotation from Scripture in the heading of this section we read "of the firmament of heaven."

<sup>f</sup> Philo here, as often elsewhere, substitutes "the seeing one(s)" for "Israel."

<sup>g</sup> More literally "was separated": variant (as in Arm. O.T.) "was consumed," see next note.

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ τῶν ἐπιλέκτων τοῦ Ἰσραὴλ οὐ διεφώνησεν οὐδὲ εἰς (Heb. reads quite differently "and upon the nobles of the Israelites He laid not His hand"). Although the LXX translators meant διεφώνησεν as "perished," Philo took it to mean "differed" or "was discordant," as is shown by the rest of this section and also by the parallel in De Confus. Ling. 56 γένος γὰρ ἔσμεν τῶν ἐπιλέκτων τοῦ τὸν θεὸν ὀρώντος Ἰσραὴλ ὧν διεφώνησεν οὐδὲ εἰς, ἵνα . . . ὁ κόσμος πᾶς ταῖς ἀρμονίαις μουσικῶς μελωδῆται. R. Reitzenstein, Die Vorgeschichte der christlichen Taufe (Leipzig, Berlin, 1929), p. 116, concludes too hastily that Philo here took διεφώνησεν to mean "perished."

EXODUS, BOOK II

all were preserved whole.<sup>a</sup> But as for the deeper meaning, immortal in soul is the chosen race to which has come wisdom<sup>b</sup> and every virtue<sup>c</sup> and, above all, piety, the queen of the virtues.<sup>d</sup> For dissonance from decency<sup>e</sup> and disharmony are death to the soul. Therefore it is well said that "no one differed," (meaning) that as in an all-musical chorus with the blended voices of all<sup>f</sup> one should play music in harmonious measures of modulation and with skilled fingers, seeking to show (this harmony) not so much in sound as in mind.

39. (Ex. xxiv. 11b) What is the meaning of the words, "They appeared to God in the place<sup>g</sup> and they ate and drank"<sup>h</sup>?

Having attained<sup>i</sup> to the face of the Father, they do not <sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., τὸ μὲν ῥήτὸν διήγημα φανερὰν ἔχει τὴν ἀπόδοσιν ὡς ἀπάντων σώων διατηρηθέντων.

<sup>b</sup> σοφία.

<sup>c</sup> πᾶσα ἀρετή.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. summarizes this sentence and the rest of the section very briefly, τὸ δὲ πρὸς διάνοιαν τὸ πάντας περὶ τὴν εὐσέβειαν συμφώνους εἶναι καὶ ἐν μηδενὶ τῶν ἀγαθῶν διαφωρεῖν. See also Reitzenstein, op. cit. p. 117, note 4.

<sup>e</sup> πρὸς καλοκάγαθίαν vel sim. : Aucher "ad probitatem."

<sup>f</sup> ἐν παμμουσῶν χορείᾳ καὶ πάντων συμφωνίᾳ.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "apparuerunt Deo in eo loco." For a possible different rendering see the next note.

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ ὠφθησαν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τοῦ θεοῦ (so Arm. O.T. : Heb. "and they saw God") καὶ ἔφαγον καὶ ἔπιον. Although the Arm. reflects ὠφθησαν τῷ θεῷ ἐν τῷ τόπῳ (as Aucher and I have rendered), it is possible that, with a change in word-order, it agrees with LXX in reading "they appeared in the place of God," since the Arm. astouacoy may be either genitive or dative. I suspect that the Arm. translator inadvertently wrote "God" after "they appeared," and that Philo originally agreed with the LXX in reading ὠφθησαν ἐν τῷ τόπῳ τοῦ θεοῦ and did not read ὠφθησαν τῷ θεῷ ἐν τῷ τόπῳ, as the Arm. suggests.

<sup>i</sup> The text is slightly uncertain but the variant (hasanin for hanen) does not change the meaning greatly.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

remain in any mortal place at all, for all such (places) are profane and polluted, but they send and make a migration <sup>a</sup> to a holy and divine place, which is called by another name, Logos. <sup>b</sup> Being in this (place) through the steward <sup>c</sup> they see the Master <sup>d</sup> in a lofty and clear manner, envisioning <sup>e</sup> God with the keen-sighted eyes of the mind. <sup>f</sup> But this vision <sup>g</sup> is the food of the soul, <sup>h</sup> and true partaking <sup>i</sup> is the cause of a life of immortality. <sup>j</sup> Wherefore, indeed, is it said, "they ate and drank." For those who are indeed very hungry and thirsty did not fail <sup>k</sup> to see God become clearly visible, but like those who, being famished, find an abundance of food, they satisfied their great desire.

*40. (Ex. xxiv. 12a) What is the meaning of the words, "Come up to Me to the mountain and be there" <sup>l</sup>?

This signifies that a holy soul <sup>m</sup> is divinized <sup>n</sup> by ascending not to the air or to the ether or to heaven (which is) higher than all but to (a region) above the heavens. And <sup>a</sup> ἀποικίαν.

<sup>b</sup> A similar idea is expressed in a passage from Procopius cited by R. Reitzenstein, op. cit. (see preceding section), p. 117, note 4, τὸ δὲ φαγεῖν ἐκεῖ καὶ πιεῖν τὴν ἀποκειμένην τοῖς εἰς οὐρανὸν ἀνωθεὶς ὑποσημαίνει τρυφήν.

<sup>c</sup> διὰ τοῦ οἰκονόμου (ὁρ ἐπιτρόπου ἢ διοικητοῦ): Aucher "per dispensatorem," cf. Reitzenstein, op. cit. p. 119.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "leader" or "chief": Aucher "principalem."

<sup>e</sup> φανταζόμενοι: Aucher "invisentes." (Incidentally, Aucher's punctuation in the Arm. text differs from that in his Latin rendering). <sup>f</sup> τοῦ νοῦ.

<sup>g</sup> φαντασία: Aucher "apparentia."

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "souls"—ψυχῶν.

<sup>i</sup> κοινωνία.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher disregards the word-order in rendering, "et vera participatio vitae causa est immortalitatis" instead of "et vera participatio vitae immortalitatis causa est."

<sup>k</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "non fuerunt prohibiti."

<sup>l</sup> LXX (καὶ εἶπεν κύριος πρὸς Μωυσῆν) Ἀνάβηθι πρὸς με εἰς τὸ ὄρος καὶ ἴσθι ἐκεῖ. <sup>m</sup> ψυχὴν ἁγίαν.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher "deificari." Arm. astouacanal usu. renders θεοῦσθαι, a word that seems not to occur elsewhere in Philo. Perhaps the original here was θεοφορεῖσθαι.

EXODUS, BOOK II

beyond the world <sup>a</sup> there is no place but God. And He determines <sup>b</sup> the stability of the removal <sup>c</sup> by saying "be there," (thus) demonstrating the placelessness <sup>d</sup> and the unchanging habitation of the divine place. For those who have a quickly satiated passion for reflexion fly upward for only a short distance under divine inspiration <sup>e</sup> and then they immediately return.<sup>f</sup> They do not fly so much as they are drawn downward, I mean, to the depths of Tartarus.<sup>g</sup> But those who do not return from the holy and divine city, to which they have migrated, have God as their chief leader in the migration.<sup>h</sup>

41. (Ex. xxiv. 12b) Why are the commandments written on "tablets of stone" <sup>i</sup> ?

Tablets and written documents are hand-made things,<sup>j</sup> and what is written in them is easily destroyed, for in tablets there is wax, which is easily rubbed away, and in papyrus-rolls <sup>k</sup> the writing is sometimes spread out <sup>l</sup> and

<sup>a</sup> μετὰ τὸν κόσμον : Aucher "post mundum."

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "seals" : Aucher "decernit."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "constantiam transmigrationis."

<sup>d</sup> Arm. antel lit. = ἄτοπον : Aucher "loco carentem."

<sup>e</sup> From the reading of the Greek frag. (which begins with this sentence, see next note) it appears that the Arm. phrase "fly upward . . . under divine inspiration" takes the ptc. ἀναπτεροφορηθέντες as a combination of ἀναπτεροῦντες and θεοφορηθέντες.

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. reads ἐνίοις ἀψίκωρος ἐγγίνεται λογισμός, οἱ πρὸς ὀλίγον ἀναπτεροφορηθέντες αὐτίκα ὑπενόστησαν.

<sup>g</sup> So the Greek frag., οὐκ ἀναπτάντες μᾶλλον ἢ ὑποσυρέντες εἰς ταρτάρου, φησίν, ἐσχατίας.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "in habitationem constantem." The Greek frag. reads more briefly εὐδαίμονες δὲ οἱ μὴ παλινδρομοῦντες.

<sup>i</sup> LXX (καὶ δώσω σοι) τὰ πυξία τὰ λίθινα, τὸν νόμον καὶ τὰς ἐντολάς (ἂς ἔγραψα νομοθεῆσαι αὐτοῖς).

<sup>j</sup> χειροποίητα.

<sup>k</sup> ἐν στήλαις . . . ἐν χαρτιδίοις, cf. Quod Omnis Probus 46, De Spec. Leg. iv. 149 et al.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "spargitur." Possibly Philo means that the writing is so erratic or cursive as to be illegible.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

sometimes seems obscure.<sup>a</sup> But stones are the work of nature and are easily converted into tablets ; and also the forms on polished stone tablets <sup>b</sup> and the writings on them are permanent and fixed because of the strength of the material. In the second place, it was not possible for the divine commandments to remain concealed in any recess and to avoid meeting those who were eager to see and learn (them), but (they had) to be published abroad and to be openly circulated. But those things which were to be proclaimed abroad were in need of hard material because of the burning heat of the sun and the falling of rain, so that later the stone tablets were placed in the ark. In the third place, the tablets were of stone, for stone signifies permanence, while a tablet (signifies) impermanence, for a tablet is written on and erased with ease.<sup>c</sup> And this is a symbol <sup>d</sup> of the preservation <sup>e</sup> and dissolution of the law. What is written (is a symbol) of preservation, what is erased (is a symbol) of dissolution, since for those who transgress commandments, one would truly say that there is no law at all.

42. (Ex. xxiv. 12c) Does God write the Law ? <sup>f</sup>

Since God is a legislator <sup>g</sup> in the highest sense of the term,<sup>h</sup> it is necessary that the best law, which is called the true Law,<sup>i</sup> should be laid down by Him and be written in writing, not of hands, for He is not of human form, but at His command and nod. For if at His word <sup>j</sup> the heaven and earth and the entire world were created and the whole of substance received its form from the divine principles

<sup>a</sup> ἀμυδρά vel sim. : Aucher "subobscuré."

<sup>b</sup> ἐν πλαξί vel sim. : Aucher "in lapidibus."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "nam tabula tam facile scribitur quam deletur."

<sup>d</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>e</sup> Or "observance."

<sup>f</sup> LXX τὸν νόμον καὶ τὰς ἐντολὰς ἃς ἔγραψα νομοθετῆσαι αὐτοῖς.

<sup>g</sup> νομοθέτης.

<sup>h</sup> κατὰ τὸν ἀνωτάτω λόγον vel sim. : Aucher "secundum supremam rationem."

<sup>i</sup> ὁ ἀψευδὴς νόμος : Aucher "infallibilis lex."

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "saying."

EXODUS, BOOK II

(as) fashioners,<sup>a</sup> then when God says that the Law should be written, were not the writings immediately to be obeyed ?<sup>b</sup> In the second place, this world is a great city<sup>c</sup> and is a legal one.<sup>d</sup> And it is necessary for it to use the best law of state.<sup>e</sup> And it is fitting that it should have a worthy author<sup>f</sup> of law and legislator,<sup>g</sup> since among men He appointed the contemplative race<sup>h</sup> in the same manner (as the Law) for the world.<sup>i</sup> And rightly does He legislate for this race, also prescribing (its Law) as a law for the world,<sup>j</sup> for the chosen race<sup>k</sup> is a likeness<sup>l</sup> of the world, and its Law (is a likeness of the laws) of the world.

43. (Ex. xxiv. 13) Why does Moses, who has been summoned alone,<sup>m</sup> go up not alone but with Joshua ?<sup>n</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἐκ τῶν θείων λόγων (v.l. = τοῦ θεοῦ λόγου) τῶν συμπλεκτικῶν vel ἀρμοστώντων : Aucher "a verbo divino efficaci."

<sup>b</sup> I render freely, since the Arm. lit. = "were not the writings immediately obedient" (or "ministering"). Evidently the Arm. translator should have written spasaworescēn instead of spasawor linēin. Aucher, too, renders freely, as the context requires, "obsequi debet liber."

<sup>c</sup> Cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 34 τὴν ὡς ἀληθῶς μεγαλόπολιν, τόνδε τὸν κόσμον.

<sup>e</sup> πολιτείας.

<sup>d</sup> νόμμος.

<sup>f</sup> κτίστης.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "atque aequum est et conveniens ut sit ei legislator ac legisdator."

<sup>h</sup> i.e. Israel.

<sup>i</sup> The syntax and meaning are not clear. Aucher renders, "et cum hominem (sic) genti contemplativae legem daret, daret quoque ipsi mundo," adding in a footnote "Sic explicavimus locum incertum." The Arm. glossator takes it to mean "gentem Dei videntem (sive, Israel) tamquam legem alteram Deus mundo dedit."

<sup>j</sup> καὶ κοσμικὸν νόμον διαγράφων vel sim. : Aucher "delineans etiam legem mundi."

<sup>k</sup> τὸ ἐκλεκτὸν γένος.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "forma."

<sup>m</sup> See QE ii. 40 on Ex. xxiv. 12a.

<sup>n</sup> LXX καὶ ἀναστὰς Μωυσῆς καὶ Ἰησοῦς ὁ παρεστηκὼς αὐτῷ (Heb. "his servant") ἀνέβησαν (Heb. "and Moses went up") εἰς τὸ ὄρος τοῦ θεοῦ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The two are potentially <sup>a</sup> one, since no one would say that those who are of like mind and like sentiments with one another are the same single (person) except in respect of another species.<sup>b</sup> For "Joshua" <sup>c</sup> is to be interpreted as "salvation."<sup>d</sup> But is being saved by God more appropriate <sup>e</sup> to anyone else than the inspired soul, in which prophecy resounds,<sup>f</sup> since even in (Moses') lifetime he was over the rulers<sup>g</sup> and at (Moses') death he was his successor.<sup>h</sup> ? Rightly, therefore, does he go up as an assurance <sup>i</sup> of two most necessary things: one, of the election of the contemplative race,<sup>j</sup> and the other, that the Law should be considered not as an invention of the human mind but as a divine command and divine words.<sup>k</sup> But perhaps, according to the unspoken meaning of what is said,<sup>l</sup> Joshua too was openly summoned (to go) up and was not <sup>a</sup> δυνάμει.

<sup>b</sup> The meaning is not altogether clear: Aucher "etenim nemo est qui eundem solum dixerit sibi invicem unanimes ac concordēs, verum etiam secundum aliam speciem."

<sup>c</sup> Arm. Yisūs (Heb. Y'hōšū'a).

<sup>d</sup> Cf. De Mut. Nom. 121 τὸν Ὡσηε μετονομάζει Μωυση̄ς εἰς τὸν Ἰησοῦν, τὸν ποιὸν εἰς ἕξιν μεταχαράττων. Ὡσηε μὲν ἐρμηνεύεται ποιὸς οὗτος, Ἰησοῦς δὲ σωτηρία κυρίου, ἕξεως ὄνομα τῆς ἀρίστης.

<sup>e</sup> μᾶλλον οἰκέϊον.

<sup>f</sup> ἐν ἣ ἕξηχει ἡ προφητεία: Aucher "et inflatae ipsi prophetiae," in his footnote, "flaveritque in eum prophetia." Apparently Philo means that Joshua is the sounding-board of Moses' prophecies.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. of Israel.

<sup>h</sup> Cf. De Virtutibus 68 (on Num. xxvii. 18-23) ὁ δὲ τῆς . . . ἐπιτροπῆς διάδοχος οὗτός ἐστιν αἰρεθεὶς ὑπὸ θεοῦ.

<sup>i</sup> εἰς πίστιν: Aucher "ad fidem faciendam."

<sup>j</sup> i.e. Israel.

<sup>k</sup> Cf. De Decalogo 15 ἐπειδὴ γὰρ ἔδει πίστιν ἐγγενέσθαι ταῖς διανοίαις περὶ τοῦ μὴ εὐρήματα ἀνθρώπου τοὺς νόμους ἀλλὰ θεοῦ χρησμοὺς σαφεστάτους εἶναι, πορρωτάτω τῶν πόλεων ἀπήγαγε τὸ ἔθνος εἰς ἐρήμην κτλ.

<sup>l</sup> κατὰ τὰ ἡσυχασθέντα τῶν εἰρημένων vel sim.: Aucher "sub silentio intelligendum in dictis."

EXODUS, BOOK II

thought worthy of being called earlier to go up because (God) deemed the prophet <sup>a</sup> worthy of this honour and great prerogative.<sup>b</sup>

44. (Ex. xxiv. 14) Why did he leave Aaron and Hur <sup>c</sup> below with the elder judges? <sup>d</sup>

Just as a navy,<sup>e</sup> if it has no commander,<sup>f</sup> is in need of commanders from time to time for taking care of and equipping the entire fleet, so also to an infantry force, which has no commander-in-chief, the secondary officers, such as company-commanders and squadron-commanders,<sup>g</sup> being in second place,<sup>h</sup> supply necessary and useful things.<sup>i</sup> And when nations have been reduced to obedience by the great king,<sup>j</sup> he grants them many things for whatever lawful purposes may be fitting, and in the various states appoints those whom it is customary to call satraps.<sup>k</sup> And as the prophet, who was about to go on an ethereal and heavenly journey, was well and rightly concerned about such things, he was careful to leave in his place overseers and supervisors. And (as) a sign of victory for those who were in doubt he offered the just man as an arbitrator

<sup>a</sup> i.e. Moses.

<sup>b</sup> προνομίας. The text seems not to be in good order, but the general meaning seems to be that God left it to be understood that Joshua was to go up with Moses, although originally He specifically commanded only Moses to go up (in Ex. xxiv. 12).

<sup>c</sup> Arm. Օր.

<sup>d</sup> LXX *καὶ τοῖς πρεσβυτέροις εἶπεν, Ἐσυχάζετε αὐτοῦ ἕως ἀναστρέψωμεν πρὸς ὑμᾶς· καὶ ἰδοὺ Ἰααρὼν καὶ Ἰϋρ (Heb. Hur) μεθ' ὑμῶν ἐάν τι συμβῆ κρίσις, προσπορευέσθησαν αὐτοῖς.*

<sup>e</sup> στρατῶ νηυτικῶ vel sim.: Aucher "navi classicae."

<sup>f</sup> ναύαρχος.

<sup>g</sup> λοχαγοὶ καὶ ταξίταρχοι.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "praesentes." The text appears to be corrupt.

<sup>i</sup> For a rather remote parallel to the preceding see De Decalogo 14.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. of Persia.

<sup>k</sup> σατράπας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of the laws.<sup>a</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>b</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>c</sup> there are two brothers in one—the mind and the word.<sup>d</sup> Now Moses, who is called by another name, mind, has obtained the better part, (namely) God, whereas the word, which is called Aaron, (has obtained) the lesser (part, namely) that of man. And the word of an unrighteous and wicked man is very dark, for even if it reaches great men,<sup>e</sup> it is obscured.<sup>f</sup> But (the word) of him who is of the Lord is very lucid,<sup>g</sup> even though there is no very well adapted instrument<sup>h</sup> in his mouth and tongue.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The meaning of this sentence is far from clear, partly because of the plurality of senses of the word aristē, which renders such diverse Greek terms as πρόξενος, μεσίτης, πρύτανις, ὑπόθεσις and ἀφορμή. Aucher renders, “atque victoriae signum adhibens dubio animo haerentibus, conciliat legitime justum.” Possibly the original of “those who were in doubt,” τοῖς ἀμφιβαλλομένοις, meant “for matters in dispute” or was a corruption of τοῖς ἀμφισβητούμενοις. At any rate the “victory” seems to have been a judicial victory, not a military one as the Arm. glossator explains.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς (ὁ ἢ διάνοια) καὶ ὁ λόγος.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. “greatly,” but Arm. meçapes seems to reflect μεγάλους corrupted to μεγάλως.

<sup>f</sup> The text is probably not in order: Aucher “verbum autem vilioris ac improbi obscurius est, quamvis enim magnifice consecutus fuerit (verbum), obnubilatum est.” The general sense seems to be that ordinary speech or reason is obscure unless it is illuminated by the light of truth (symbolized by Hur, see the following).

<sup>g</sup> Aucher “Domini vero (verbum) lucidissimum est.” But he ignores the word oroγ, which is the gen. case of the rel. pron. If my rendering is correct, Philo means that in contrast to ordinary or wicked men Aaron, who is the word of Moses, the man of God, is enlightened. See also next note but one.

<sup>h</sup> ὄργανον οὐ σφόδρα εὐάρμοστον.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher, construing wrongly, I think, renders, “etsi in ore sit atque lingua instrumentis haud nimis coaptatis.” If my rendering is correct, Philo means that in Aaron Moses had a worthy interpreter, even though he (Moses) had a defect of speech, cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 4 on Ex. iv. 10.

EXODUS, BOOK II

Indeed <sup>a</sup> it is because of this that he associates Hur, who is to be interpreted as "light," <sup>b</sup> with the wise man, <sup>c</sup> showing through a symbol <sup>d</sup> that the word of the wise man is luminous, <sup>e</sup> for he reveals his beauty not in words but in deeds performed. <sup>f</sup>

*45. (Ex. xxiv. 16a) What is the meaning of the words, "And the glory of God came down upon Mount Sinai" <sup>g</sup>?

(Scripture) clearly puts to shame those who whether through impiety or through foolishness believe that there are movements of place or of change in the Deity. <sup>h</sup> For, behold, what is said to come down is clearly not the essence of God, which is understood only as to its being, but His glory. <sup>i</sup> And the notion of glory (doxa) is twofold. <sup>j</sup> On the one hand, it denotes the existence of the powers, for the armed force of a king is also called "glory." <sup>k</sup> On the other hand, (it denotes) only a belief in and counting on

<sup>a</sup> Arm. kam = ἡ, which here seems to be a corruption of ἦ.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. Leg. All. iii. 45 στηρίζονται ὑπό τε Ἁραράν, τοῦ λόγου, καὶ Ὄρ, ὃ ἐστὶ φῶς. The etymology is based on Philo's fanciful equation of Ὄρ with Heb. 'ôr "light."

<sup>c</sup> τῷ σοφῶ. <sup>d</sup> διὰ συμβόλου. <sup>e</sup> φωτοειδῆ.

<sup>f</sup> ἔργοις ἐνεργουμένοις vel sim.: Aucher "in rebus expositis."

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ κατέβη (Heb. "dwelt") ἡ δόξα τοῦ θεοῦ ἐπὶ τὸ ὄρος τὸ Σινά.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag. from the *Catena*e, ἐναργέστατα δυσωπεῖ τοὺς ἐγγύς [?] ὑπὸ ἀσεβείας εἴτε ἡλιθιότητος οἰομένους τοπικὰς καὶ μεταβατικὰς κινήσεις εἶναι περὶ τὸ θεῖον. Procopius briefly paraphrases, ἐλέγχει τοὺς οἰομένους μεταβατικὰς δυνάμεις εἶναι περὶ θεόν.

<sup>i</sup> So the *Catena*e and Procopius, ἰδοὺ γὰρ ἐμφανῶς οὐ (Procopius οὐ γὰρ) τὸν οὐσιώδη θεὸν τὸν κατὰ τὸ εἶναι μόνον ἐπινοούμενον κατεληλυθῆναι φησὶν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ.

<sup>j</sup> So the *Catena*e (Procopius omits), Διττὴ δὲ ἡ περὶ τὴν δόξαν ἐκδοχή.

<sup>k</sup> So the *Catena*e and Procopius, ἡ μὲν παρουσίαν ἐμφαίνουσα τῶν δυνάμεων (Procopius ἡ δυνάμειων παρουσίαν ἐμφαίνων), ἐπεὶ καὶ βασιλέως λέγεται δόξα ἡ στρατιωτικὴ δύναμις (Procopius δύναμις στρατιωτικῆ).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the divine glory,<sup>a</sup> so as to produce in the minds of those who happen to be there an appearance of the coming of God,<sup>b</sup> Who was not there,<sup>c</sup> as though He were coming for the firmest assurance of things about to be legislated.<sup>d</sup> The mountain, moreover, is most suitable to receive the manifestation<sup>e</sup> of God, as the name "Sinai" shows, for when it is translated into our language,<sup>f</sup> it means "inaccessible."<sup>g</sup> Now the divine place is truly inaccessible and unapproachable, for not even the holiest mind is able to ascend such a height to it<sup>h</sup> so as merely to approach and touch it.<sup>i</sup>

*46. (Ex. xxiv. 16b) Why is the mountain covered with

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "altera, quatenus opinionem causat solam putandi videre gloriam divinam." The Catenae read ἡ δὲ τῇ δοκήσει αὐτοῦ μόνου καὶ ὑπολήψει δόξης θείας: Procopius ἡ δόκησιν αὐτὸ μόνον καὶ δόξης θείας ὑπόληψιν.

<sup>b</sup> So the Catenae, ὡς ἐνεργάσθαι (sic) ταῖς τῶν παρόντων διανοίας φαντασίαν ἀφίξεως θεοῦ. Procopius paraphrases, ἡ τῶν παρόντων ὡς ἐπὶ τοιούτῳ τὴν φαντασίαν ἐτύπωσεν.

<sup>c</sup> This clause is missing from the Catenae and Procopius.

<sup>d</sup> So the Catenae and Procopius (which end here), ὡς ἤκοντος (Procopius adds θεοῦ) εἰς (Procopius πρὸς) βεβαιοτάτην πίστιν τῶν μελλόντων νομοθετεῖσθαι.

<sup>e</sup> τὴν ἐπιφάνειαν vel sim.: Aucher "apparitionem."

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders freely, "aliam linguam."

<sup>g</sup> ἄβατον vel sim. Philo does not elsewhere etymologize the name "Sinai." I imagine that the present etymology is based upon a fanciful connexion between Sinai and Heb. sēneh (the "burning bush" of Ex. iii. 2), which is translated βάτος in LXX. In De Fuga 161-162 Philo plays on the words βάτος and ἄβατος (-ον); commenting on the biblical phrase, ὁ βάτος καίεται, he writes, . . . τὸν γὰρ ἄβατον οὐ πολυπραγμονεῖ χῶρον, θείων ἐνδιαίτημα φύσεων.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher, construing differently (and failing to recognize a genitive absolute construction), renders, "ita ut neque purissimi intellectus tanta celsitudo ad eum ascendere queat."

<sup>i</sup> So the Greek frag. from John of Damascus, ἄβατος καὶ ἀπροσπέλαστος οὕτως ἐστὶν ὁ θεῖος χῶρος, οὐδὲ τῆς καθαρωτάτης διανοίας τοσοῦτον ὕψος προσαναβῆναι δυναμένης ὡς θίξει μόνον ἐπιψαῦσαι.

EXODUS, BOOK II

a cloud for six days, and Moses called above on the seventh day? <sup>a</sup>

The even <sup>b</sup> number, six, He apportioned both to the creation of the world and to the election of the contemplative nation, <sup>c</sup> wishing to show first of all that He had created both the world and the nation elected for virtue. <sup>d</sup> And in the second place, because He wishes the nation to be ordered and arrayed in the same manner as the whole world so that, as in the latter, it may have a fitting order in accord with the right law and canon of the unchanging, placeless and unmoving nature of God. <sup>e</sup> But the calling above of the prophet is a second birth better than the first. <sup>f</sup> For the latter is mixed with a body and had corruptible parents, while the former is an unmixed and simple soul of the sovereign, <sup>g</sup> being changed from a productive to an unproductive <sup>h</sup> form, <sup>i</sup> which has no mother but only a

<sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ ἐκάλυψεν αὐτὸ ἢ νεφέλη ἕξ ἡμέρας καὶ ἐκάλεσεν κύριος (Heb. "He") τὸν Μωυσῆν τῇ ἡμέρᾳ τῇ ἐβδόμῃ ἐκ μέσου τῆς νεφέλης. <sup>b</sup> Lit. "equal."

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag., τὸν ἴσον ἀριθμὸν ἀπένειμε καὶ τῇ τοῦ κόσμου γενέσει καὶ τῇ τοῦ ὀρατικοῦ γένους ἐκλογῇ, τὴν ἐξάδα. On "the contemplative nation," i.e. Israel, see QE ii. 43 et al.

<sup>d</sup> Somewhat different is the reading of the Greek frag. βουλόμενος ἐπιδείξει ὅτι αὐτὸς καὶ τὸν κόσμον ἐδημιούργησε καὶ τὸ γένος εἴλετο.

<sup>e</sup> κατὰ τὸν ὀρθὸν νόμον καὶ κανόνα τῆς ἀτρέπτου καὶ τόπον μὴ ἐχούσης (vel sim.) καὶ ἀκινήτου φύσεως τῆς τοῦ θεοῦ. This sentence is not found in the Greek fragment.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., ἢ δὲ ἀνάκλησις τοῦ προφήτου δευτέρα γένεσις ἐστὶ τῆς προτέρας ἀμείνων.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "ista vero incommixta simplexque anima principalis (vel, spiritus principis)." The wording of the original Greek (this sentence and the next are missing from the Greek frag.) was probably "the former is an unmixed and simple sovereign part of the soul," i.e. the mind, since Moses symbolizes the pure mind, and is elsewhere called ὁ καθαρῶτατος νοῦς.

<sup>h</sup> Prob. ἄγονον rather than ἀγένητον "unproduced": Aucher "ingenitam."

<sup>i</sup> εἶδος vel sim.: Aucher takes the noun "animam" to be understood.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

father, who is (the Father) of all. Wherefore the calling above or, as we have said, the divine birth happened to come about for him in accordance with the ever-virginal nature of the hebdomad.<sup>a</sup> For he is called on the seventh day,<sup>b</sup> in this (respect) differing from the earth-born first moulded man,<sup>c</sup> for the latter came into being from the earth and with a body, while the former (came) from the ether<sup>d</sup> and without a body.<sup>e</sup> Wherefore the most appropriate number, six, was assigned to the earth-born man, while to the one differently born (was assigned) the higher nature of the hebdomad.<sup>f</sup>

*47. (Ex. xxiv. 17) What is the meaning of the words, "The form of the glory of the Lord (was) like a fire burning before the sons of the seeing one"<sup>g</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> On the ἀειπάρθετος ἑβδομάς or ἑβδόμη of the Pythagoreans see Leg. All. i. 15, De Vita Mosis ii. 210 et al.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "For he (or "it") is called the seventh day" (pred. nominative), an obvious error. The Greek frag. reads ἑβδόμη δὲ ἀνακαλεῖται ἡμέρα.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly ταύτη διαφέρων τοῦ πρωτοπλάστου. On the creation of the earth-born "moulded" man on the sixth day, and that of the heavenly man, created in God's image on the seventh day, see Leg. All. i. 5, 31, 88 et al.

<sup>d</sup> This detail is omitted in the Greek frag., see next note.

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. reads only slightly differently ὅτι ἐκεῖνος μὲν ἐκ τῆς γῆς καὶ μετὰ σώματος συνίστατο· οὗτος δὲ ἄνευ σώματος.

<sup>f</sup> Again the Greek frag. differs slightly, διὸ τῶ μὲν γηγενεῖ ἀριθμὸς οἰκείος ἀπενεμήθη ἑξάς· τούτῳ δὲ ἡ ἱερωτάτη φύσις τῆς ἑβδομάδος.

<sup>g</sup> Philo omits one phrase of the biblical text, LXX τὸ δὲ εἶδος τῆς δόξης κυρίου ὡσεὶ πῦρ φλέγον (Heb. "devouring" or "consuming") ἐπὶ τῆς κορυφῆς τοῦ ὄρους ἐναντίον τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραήλ. On the substitution of "the seeing one" for "Israel" see the preceding sections. Note, too, that below Philo has in mind the Heb. text "fire consuming" although he quotes the LXX πῦρ φλέγον.

EXODUS, BOOK II

(This is said) because, as has been said before,<sup>a</sup> the glory of God is the power<sup>b</sup> through which He now appears; the form of this power is like a flame or rather, it is not but appears (to be so) to the spectators,<sup>c</sup> for God showed not that which pertained to His essence<sup>d</sup> but what He wished to seem to be to the amazement of the spectators.<sup>e</sup> And so, (Scripture) adds, "before the sons of the seeing one," indicating most clearly that there was an appearance of flame, not a veritable flame.<sup>f</sup> In the second place,<sup>g</sup> because He showed<sup>h</sup> the mountain (to be) inaccessible and unapproachable<sup>i</sup> to the people, He extended the appearance of a flame-like fire around it<sup>j</sup> in order that no one, even if he wished, might be able to come near in disregard of his own safety.<sup>k</sup> For they are silly and at the same time frivolous in belief<sup>l</sup> who believe that the fire<sup>m</sup> is the essence

<sup>a</sup> In QE ii. 45.

<sup>b</sup> ἡ δύναμις: Aucher "virtus."

<sup>c</sup> Slightly different is the wording of the Greek frag. from the Catenae, τὸ δὲ εἶδος τῆς δόξης κυρίου φησὶν ἐμπεφέστατον εἶναι φλογί, μᾶλλον δὲ οὐκ εἶναι ἀλλὰ φαίνεσθαι τοῖς ὄρωσι.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. translator here uses two nouns to render οὐσίαν: Aucher "essentiam."

<sup>e</sup> Here again the wording of the Greek frag. is slightly different, τοῦ θεοῦ δεικνύντος ὅπερ ἐβούλετο δοκεῖν εἶναι πρὸς τὴν τῶν θεωμένων κατάπληξιν, μὴ ὦν τοῦτο ὅπερ ἐφαίνετο.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., ἐπιφέρει γοῦν τὸ "ἐνώπιον τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ," ἐνεργέστατα μηνύων ὅτι φαντασία φλογὸς ἦν ἀλλ' οὐ φλόξ ἀληθής. Procopius briefly paraphrases the preceding two sentences, εἰδείκνυε δὲ πῦρ θεός, οὐχ ὅπερ ἦν ἀλλ' ὅπερ ἐβούλετο δοκεῖν ὁ δηλῶν ἐπήνεγκεν "ἐνώπιον τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ."

<sup>g</sup> The following sentences, down to "just as the flame consumes," are missing from the Greek frag. and Procopius.

<sup>h</sup> One expects "in order that He might show."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher condenses the two adjectives into one, "inaccessum."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher, construing a little differently, renders, "flammi-formis ignis apparitionem extendebat circa eum."

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "of his taking care": Aucher "visitatione."

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "faciles putandi."

<sup>m</sup> I follow Aucher in reading hour "fire" with the margin of Cod. A rather than hawr "father" with Codd. A and C.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

of God when (Scripture) clearly proclaims that it is the form of the glory and power of God which appears but not the truly existing One,<sup>a</sup> and that the fire is not His power but only His glory<sup>b</sup> and that in the opinion of the spectators it appeared to their eyes not to be what it was,<sup>c</sup> because of the reasons mentioned. That is the literal meaning.<sup>d</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>e</sup> just as the flame consumes all the material that comes its way, so, too, when the thought of God clearly reaches the soul, it destroys all the heterodox thoughts of piety,<sup>f</sup> bringing the whole mind<sup>g</sup> into (a state of) holiness.<sup>h</sup>

48. (Ex. xxiv. 18a) Why does Moses enter into the midst of the cloud?<sup>i</sup>

He had been called from its midst and therefore he rightly followed the voice.<sup>j</sup> In the second place, it was

<sup>a</sup> τὸν ὄντως ὄντα: Aucher "veri Entis."

<sup>b</sup> Philo seems to mean that God's power was only like His glory (symbolized by the flame) but not identical with it, and that neither God's essence nor His power actually appeared.

<sup>c</sup> The syntax of the last clause is not wholly clear to me: Aucher "at videntibus phantastice apparens sicut non est qui est."
<sup>d</sup> τὸ ῥητόν. <sup>e</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. translator read εὐσεβείας in place of ἀσεβείας, which is the reading of the Greek frag., see below. Aucher tacitly corrects the Arm. by rendering, "omnem cogitationem a pietate alienam."
<sup>g</sup> Lit. "mind of thought(s)."

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. from the Catena reads similarly but more smoothly Ὡσπερ δὲ ἡ φλόξ πάσαν τὴν παραβληθείσαν ὕλην ἀναλίσκει, οὕτως, ὅταν ἐπιφοιτήσῃ εἰλικρινῆς τοῦ θεοῦ ἔννοια τῇ ψυχῇ, πάντα τοὺς ἑτεροδόξους ἀσεβείας λογισμοὺς διαφθείρει, καθοσιούσα τὴν ὅλην διάνοιαν. Procopius, as before, briefly paraphrases the last sentence, τὸ δὲ σύμβολον ὅτι δαπανητικὸν τὸ θεῖον λογισμῶν ἀσεβῶν, ὡς καὶ τῆς ὕλης τὸ πῦρ.

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ εἰσῆλθεν Μωυσῆς εἰς τὸ μέσον τῆς νεφέλης καὶ ἀνέβη εἰς τὸ ὄρος.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. God had called him from the midst of the cloud (a detail not commented on by Philo in QE ii. 46 on Ex. xxiv. 16), and therefore it was right for him to follow God's voice into the midst of the same cloud.

EXODUS, BOOK II

natural that a division was made in that part of the cloud by the noise of the speech, and when the two sides had been condensed,<sup>a</sup> it was easy to pass through.

*49. (Ex. xxiv. 18b) Why does Moses remain on the mountain forty days and the same number of nights? <sup>b</sup>

Concerning the number forty and its place in nature <sup>c</sup> a detailed account was given earlier,<sup>d</sup> so that one need not speak further of this at length. Perhaps, however, it is necessary to add that the migrant generation was about to be condemned and waste away in corruption for forty years in all after receiving many benefactions and showing ingratitude in many ways.<sup>e</sup> And so, he remains there above for the same number of days as these years, reconciling the Father to the nation <sup>f</sup> by prayers and intercessions,<sup>g</sup> especially at the very time when the laws were given by God and there was constructed in words <sup>h</sup> the portable temple, which is called the Tent of Testimony.<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> πυκνωθέντων.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ἦν ἐκεῖ ἐν τῷ ὄρει τεσσαράκοντα ἡμέρας καὶ τεσσαράκοντα νύκτας. In De Somniis i. 36 and De Vita Mosis ii. 70 Philo alludes to this verse and adds the unscriptural detail that Moses was without food and drink during his forty-day stay on the mountain. <sup>c</sup> πῶς ἐν τῇ φύσει ἔχει.

<sup>d</sup> In QG i. 25, ii. 14, iv. 154.

<sup>e</sup> So (with only slight differences) the Greek frag. from the Catena, ὅτι ἔμελλε κατάκριτος ἔσσεσθαι ἢ ἀποικισθεῖσα γενεὰ καὶ ἐπὶ τεσσαράκοντα ἔτια φθείρεσθαι μυρία μὲν εὐεργετηθεῖσα, διὰ μυρίων δὲ ἐπιδειξαμένη τὸ ἀχάριστον. Procopius paraphrases, τεσσαράκοντα δὲ μένει τὰς πάσας ἡμέρας ἐν ὄρει Μωυσῆς ὅσα ἔμελλεν ἔτη τῶν εὐπαθόντων ἢ ἀγνώμων φθείρεσθαι γενεά.

<sup>f</sup> The phrase "to the nation" is omitted in Aucher's rendering.

<sup>g</sup> Procopius condenses, ὑπὲρ ὧν ἐν ἰσαριθμοῖς ἡμέραις ἰκέτευε τὸν πατέρα.

<sup>h</sup> The original prob. read "at His word."

<sup>i</sup> ἡ σκηνὴ τοῦ μαρτυρίου, see LXX Ex. xxvi-xl. Procopius again condenses, καὶ μάλιστα παρὰ τοιοῦτον καιρὸν, ἐν ᾧ δίδονται νόμοι καὶ φορητὸν ἱερόν, ἡ σκηνή.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

For whom, then, were the laws (given)? Was it, indeed, for those who were to perish? And for whose sake were the oracles <sup>a</sup> (given)? Was it for those who were to be destroyed a little later? <sup>b</sup> It seems to me, however, that someone may say, "Is it possible that <sup>c</sup> he had foreknowledge of the judgment that was to come upon it <sup>d</sup>?" But he who says this should bear in mind that every prophetic soul is divinely inspired <sup>e</sup> and prophecies <sup>f</sup> many future things not so much by reflecting as through divine madness and certainty.<sup>g</sup>

*50. (Ex. xxv. 1-2) Why does He command (them) to take first-offerings <sup>h</sup> from all those of willing heart? <sup>i</sup>

In the present passage <sup>j</sup> (Scripture) uses "heart" instead of <sup>k</sup> "sovereign (mind)." <sup>l</sup> Accordingly, it wishes to introduce the first-offerings (as) the willing dispositions of those

<sup>a</sup> Procopius (see next note) has θυσίαι.

<sup>b</sup> So (except for the word noted) Procopius, Τίσι γὰρ οἱ νόμοι; ἀρά γε τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις; Ὑπὲρ τίνων δὲ αἱ θυσίαι; ἀρα τῶν μικρὸν ὕστερον φθαρησομένων;

<sup>c</sup> μήποτε vel sim.: Aucher "ne" (though "num" seems to be required).

<sup>d</sup> Here the pronoun apparently refers to the nation. Procopius reads more briefly προήδει γὰρ ὡς προφήτης τὰ ἐσόμενα. (According to Wendland, Procopius does not make use of Philo beyond this point.)

<sup>e</sup> πᾶσα προφητικὴ ψυχὴ ἐπιθειάζει.

<sup>f</sup> προθεσπίζει: Aucher "praescribit."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "divino oestro securus."

<sup>h</sup> ἀπαρχάς, as in the LXX, see next note.

<sup>i</sup> LXX Καὶ ἐλάλησεν κύριος πρὸς Μωυσῆν, λέγων, Εἰπὸν τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραὴλ καὶ λάβετε (v.l. ἀναλαβέτωσάν μοι) ἀπαρχάς παρὰ πάντων οἷς ἂν δόξη τῇ καρδίᾳ· καὶ (v.l. omits καὶ) λήμψεσθε τὰς ἀπαρχάς μου. Philo quotes the LXX text verbatim in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 113 and allegorizes it at some length.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "now."

<sup>k</sup> i.e. "in the sense of."

<sup>l</sup> Similarly the first Greek frag. (from Cod. Vat. 1553), τὴν καρδίαν ἀντὶ τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ παρείληφεν ἢ γραφῆ.

EXODUS, BOOK II

who bring them,<sup>a</sup> for the Deity is in need of nothing.<sup>b</sup> But he who unwillingly brings an offering is forgotten and deceives himself, for even if he offers silver or something else, he does not bring first-offerings, in the same way as he who unwillingly makes a sacrifice is thought to offer unsacrificed meat to the fire rather than a (real) sacrifice.<sup>c</sup>

51. (Ex. xxv. 7 [Heb. 8]) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt make for Me a sanctuary, and I shall appear among you" <sup>a</sup>?

Clear indeed is the literal meaning,<sup>e</sup> for the shrine is spoken of (as) the archetype of a sort of shrine, (namely, as) the tent.<sup>f</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>g</sup> God always appears in His work, which is most sacred; by this I mean the world.<sup>h</sup> For His beneficent powers<sup>i</sup> are seen and move around in all its parts, in heaven, earth, water, air and in <sup>a</sup> Aucher renders differently, "vult ergo primitias voluntaria indole oblatas introduci." Similar in thought but different in wording is the (misplaced) last sentence of the second Greek frag. (from John Monachus), οὐ γὰρ ἐν ὑλαῖς ἀλλ' ἐν εὐσεβείῃ (Mangey's correction of εὐσεβείᾳ) διαθέσει τοῦ κομιζόντος ἢ ἀληθῆς ἀπαρχῆς. (Harris is mistaken in thinking the Greek to be a gloss.) <sup>b</sup> ἀπροσδεής.

<sup>c</sup> Considerably different is the wording of the Greek frag., ὁ μὴ ἐκ προαιρέσεως ἀπαρχῶν θεῶ, καὶ ἂν τὰ μεγάλα (μέταλλα conj. Harris) πάντα κομίζῃ μετὰ τῶν βασιλικῶν θησαυρῶν, ἀπαρχὰς οὐ φέρει. In favour of the partial genuineness of the Greek is the reference to precious metals, stones, etc., in Ex. xxv. 3-7.

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις (Heb. "make"—imperative plural) μοι ἅγιασμα καὶ ὀφθήσομαι ἐν ὑμῖν. <sup>e</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>f</sup> This is a literal rendering of the Arm., which is evidently corrupt: Aucher "quoniam templum (Graecus, sanctuarium vel sacellum, ἱερόν) dicitur templi prototypus quidam tabernaculum." The original may have been "for the tent (of testimony, see above, QE ii. 49) is spoken of in a certain sense as an archetypal shrine," see next note but one.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> Cf. De Plantatione 50 τὸ τὸν κόσμον εὐτρεπῆ καὶ ἔτοιμον αἰσθητὸν οἶκον εἶναι θεοῦ . . . τὸ ἅγιασμα, οἶον ἀγίων ἀπαύγασμα, μίμημα ἀρχετύπου. <sup>i</sup> αἱ εὐεργετικαὶ δυνάμεις.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

what is in these. For the Saviour <sup>a</sup> is beneficent and kind,<sup>b</sup> and He wishes to except the rational race <sup>c</sup> from all living creatures. He therefore honours them with an even ampler gift, a great benefaction in which all kinds of good things are found, and He graciously grants <sup>d</sup> His appearance, if only there be a suitable place, purified with holiness and every (kind of) purity. For if, O mind,<sup>e</sup> thou dost not prepare thyself of thyself, excising desires, pleasures, griefs, fears, follies,<sup>f</sup> injustices and related evils,<sup>g</sup> and dost (not) change and adapt thyself to the vision of holiness, thou wilt end thy life in blindness, unable to see the intelligible sun.<sup>h</sup> If, however, thou art worthily initiated <sup>i</sup> and canst be consecrated <sup>j</sup> to God and in a certain sense <sup>k</sup> become an animate <sup>l</sup> shrine of the Father, (then) instead of having closed eyes,<sup>m</sup> thou wilt see the First (Cause) <sup>n</sup> and in wakefulness thou wilt cease from the deep sleep in which thou hast been held. Then will appear to thee that manifest One,<sup>o</sup> Who causes incorporeal rays <sup>p</sup> to shine for thee, <sup>a</sup> ὁ σωτήρ.

<sup>b</sup> Slightly emending the text (in which the second adjective has the article). Aucher renders more literally, "propitius est salvator et benefactor."

<sup>c</sup> τὸ λογικὸν γένος, i.e. Israel, or perhaps, pious men in general.

<sup>d</sup> χαρίζεται.

<sup>e</sup> ὦ νοῦ or διάνοια : Aucher "O anime."

<sup>f</sup> Before "follies" the Arm. repeats the participle "excising."

<sup>g</sup> ἐκτέμνων ἐπιθυμίας, ἡδονάς, λύπας, φόβους, ἀφροσύνας, ἀδικίας καὶ τὰ συγγενῆ κακά.

<sup>h</sup> τὸν νοητὸν ἥλιον, i.e. the divine light, cf. De Spec. Leg. iv. 231 et al.

<sup>i</sup> εἰάν δ' ἀξίας τελεσθῆς τελετάς vel sim.

<sup>j</sup> Or "initiated" (bis): Aucher "consecrari."

<sup>k</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>l</sup> Or "spiritual"—ἔμφυχον or πνευματικόν : Aucher "animatum (vel, spirituale)."

<sup>m</sup> ἀντὶ τοῦ καταμύειν vel sim.

<sup>n</sup> Variant "the first (things)"; Aucher "primum."

<sup>o</sup> ὁ ἐπιφανής vel sim. : Aucher "visibilis," adding in a footnote "vel, qui appariturus est aut mirabilis ille."

<sup>p</sup> ἀσωμάτους ἀγάς.

EXODUS, BOOK II

and grants visions of the unambiguous and indescribable things of nature <sup>a</sup> and the abundant sources of other good things. For the beginning and end of happiness is to be able to see God. But this cannot happen to him who has not made his soul, as I said before, a sanctuary and altogether a shrine of God.

52. (Ex. xxv. 8 [Heb. 9]) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt make, according to all that I shall show thee on the mountain, the patterns of the tent and the vessels" <sup>b</sup> ?

That every sense-perceptible likeness has (as) its origin an intelligible pattern in nature (Scripture) has declared in many other passages as well as in the present one.<sup>c</sup> Excellently, moreover, has it presented (as) the teacher of incorporeal and archetypal things <sup>d</sup> not one who is begotten and created but the unbegotten and uncreated God.<sup>e</sup> For it was indeed proper and fitting to reveal to an intelligent man the forms <sup>f</sup> of intelligible things and the measures of all things in accordance with which the world

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders more freely, "datis etiam visionibus naturae inexpectatis ac inenarrabilibus."

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις μοι (Heb. omits the first three words) κατὰ πάντα ὅσα (v.l. + ἐγώ) δεικνύω σοι ἐν τῷ ὄρει (Heb. omits "on the mountain"), τὸ παράδειγμα (v.l. hic et infra υπόδειγμα) τῆς σκηνῆς καὶ τὸ παράδειγμα πάντων τῶν σκευῶν αὐτῆς οὕτως ποιήσεις (Heb. "ye shall make"). Philo alludes to this verse in De Vita Mosis ii. 74-75.

<sup>c</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 74 ἔδει καθάπερ ἀπ' ἀρχετύπου γραφῆς καὶ νοητῶν παραδειγμάτων αἰσθητὰ μιμήματα ἀπεικονισθῆναι.

<sup>d</sup> διδάσκαλον ἀσωμάτων καὶ ἀρχετύπων: Aucher "magistrum incorporeorum et a principio existentium."

<sup>e</sup> τὸν ἀγέννητον καὶ ἀγέννητον θεόν. Aucher inadvertently writes "patrem" instead of "Deum." The same thought is differently expressed in De Vita Mosis ii. 74 σκηνὴν . . . ἧς τὴν κατασκευὴν θεοφάτοις λογίοις ἐπὶ τοῦ ὄρους Μωυσῆς ἀνεδιδάσκετο.

<sup>f</sup> Or "ideas"—εἰδη or ἰδέας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

was made.<sup>a</sup> For these reasons also the prophet <sup>b</sup> alone was called and taken above, in order not to deprive the race of mortals of an incorruptible vision <sup>c</sup> and not to spread abroad and publish to the multitude these divine and holy essences.<sup>d</sup> And he was taken up to a high mountain, ascent to which was vouchsafed to no others. And a dense and thick cloud covered the whole place, hindering reception <sup>e</sup> through these places, not as if the nature of invisible things could be seen by corporeal eyes but because the multi-symbolism <sup>f</sup> of intelligible things is described through the clear vision of the eyes, (namely) how one who learns by seeing rather figuratively <sup>g</sup> can, by attributing certain forms to certain symbols, achieve a correct <sup>h</sup> apprehension of them.<sup>i</sup>

53. (Ex. xxv. 9 [Heb. 10]) Why is the ark of " undecaying wood " <sup>j</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> Aucher, construing differently, renders, " quoniam conveniens utique erat ut intelligens referret ideas intellectualium mensurasque universorum, ad quarum formam mundus factus fuit." In support of the rendering which makes " the intelligent man " (Moses) the indirect object of the infinitive " to reveal," one can cite the parallel in De Vita Mosis ii. 75 προσῆκον γὰρ ἦν τῷ ὡς ἀληθῶς ἀρχιερεὶ καὶ τὴν τοῦ ἱεροῦ κατασκευὴν ἐπιτραπήναι κτλ.

<sup>b</sup> ὁ προφήτης.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher " facie."

<sup>d</sup> οὐσίας.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher " perceptionem."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. " much symbol " : Aucher " multum signum."

<sup>g</sup> τροπικώτερον vel sim. : Aucher " utcumque typice."

<sup>h</sup> The two Arm. adjectives prob. render the single Greek adjective ὀρθήν.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher " potest secundum symbolum aliquam formam adaptando, directe et apposite eorum rationem attingere."

<sup>j</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις κιβωτὸν μαρτυρίου ἐκ ξύλων ἀσήπτων : Heb. " and make (imperative plural) an ark of šittim (" acacia ") wood." Both LXX and Heb. proceed to give the dimensions of the ark, to which Philo does not refer here, but see De Vita Mosis ii. 96.

EXODUS, BOOK II

In the same manner in which the head is the principal (part) of living creatures is the ark (the principal kind) of divine vessels, wherefore it has merited the best and holiest places, being placed alone and by itself within the inner sanctuary,<sup>a</sup> wherefore also it was natural that the material of which it was made should by some necessity<sup>b</sup> be unlikely to decay and be corrupted,<sup>c</sup> since the Law, of which it was the repository,<sup>d</sup> was also incorruptible. In the second place, the sanctuary<sup>e</sup> and all the order of things arranged in it were ordained not for a limited time but for an infinite age.<sup>f</sup> For this reason the artificer, (namely) the divine Logos,<sup>g</sup> chose the most lawful<sup>h</sup> material, especially that which could remain permanently with it.<sup>i</sup> That is the literal meaning.<sup>j</sup> But this is the deeper meaning.<sup>k</sup> In reality nothing terrestrial is undecaying or incorruptible. Accordingly, when (Scripture) says "undecaying wood," it alludes symbolically<sup>l</sup> to the parts of the world attached to one another, of which it consists and is compacted and which hold fast to one another. To me it seems that (this property is found) also in the rational virtues of the soul,<sup>m</sup> each of which happens to be unwithered and unaging and incorruptible.

<sup>a</sup> ἐν τῷ ἁδύτῳ.

<sup>b</sup> ἀνάγκη τιμί.

<sup>c</sup> Both Arm. adjectives are compounded with dzowar = Gr. δυσ-: Aucher "imputridam ac incorruptibilem."

<sup>d</sup> ἀποθήκη vel sim.

<sup>e</sup> τὸ ἱερόν, i.e. "the tent of testimony."

<sup>f</sup> οὐ πρὸς ὀρισμένον χρόνον ἀλλ' ἄπειρον αἰῶνα vel sim.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ τεχνίτης, ὁ θεῖος λόγος.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "magis convenientem." Arm. ὄριναwor usu. = νόμιμος, but here the context calls for a different adjective in the original.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. with the Law.

<sup>j</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>k</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>l</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>m</sup> Or "in the virtues of the rational soul(s)"—the original may have been either ἐν ταῖς λογικαῖς τῶν ψυχῶν ἀρεταῖς or ἐν ταῖς τῶν λογικῶν ψυχῶν ἀρεταῖς (Arm. adjectives are not inflected in agreement with their nouns): Aucher "in rationalibus animi virtutibus."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

54. (Ex. xxv. 10a [Heb. 11a]) Why does he overlay (the ark) with pure gold within, and with gold without? <sup>a</sup>

Others falsify the external appearance with deceit, while they leave the inside concealed and without care or attention. Moreover, they adorn the outside with variegated adornment for the sake of magnificence or to cause astonishment among spectators. But the divine (and) holy Moses adorns the inside before the outside with due adornment, (namely) with gold, the prime material and the most precious of all, and furthermore with gold that is pure, cleansed and refined for purity of substance. That is the literal meaning.<sup>b</sup> But this is the deeper meaning.<sup>c</sup> In nature there is a species<sup>d</sup> which is invisible and one which is visible. The invisible and unseen one consists of incorporeal things,<sup>e</sup> and this (species) is in the intelligible world.<sup>f</sup> But the visible one is made of bodies, and this is the sense-perceptible world.<sup>g</sup> These two (species) are the inner and the outer. The one who created them made the incorporeal inner (species) and the corporeal outer (species) undecaying and incorruptible,<sup>h</sup> and, in addition, also seemly and noble<sup>i</sup> and precious. Accordingly, the precious gold is allegorically used<sup>j</sup> of the human structure and,

<sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ καταχρυσώσεις αὐτήν χρυσίῳ καθαρῷ ἔσωθεν καὶ ἔσωθεν (v.l. ἔσωθεν καὶ ἔξωθεν : Heb. "within and without") χρυσώσεις αὐτήν. Philo obviously took the text to mean that pure gold was used inside the ark and ordinary gold outside. In parallel allusions to this verse, although he follows the reading ἔσωθεν καὶ ἔξωθεν as here, he does not stress the difference between inside and outside, see De Ebrietate 85, De Mut. Nom. 43-44, and De Vita Mosis ii. 95, where he says, ἡ δὲ κιβωτός . . . κεχρυσωμένη πολυτελῶς ἔνδοθεν τε καὶ ἔξωθεν.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>d</sup> εἶδος.

<sup>e</sup> ἐξ ἄσωμάτων.

<sup>f</sup> ἐν τῷ νοητῷ κόσμῳ.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ αἰσθητός κόσμος.

<sup>h</sup> The syntax is not altogether clear : Aucher "interna, incorporea ; et externa, corporea ; quas qui fecit, imputridas efficit" (sc. "species").

<sup>i</sup> The two Arm. adjectives prob. render the single Greek adj. σεμνός.

<sup>j</sup> ἀλληγορεῖται.

EXODUS, BOOK II

as is proper, of the soul.<sup>a</sup> But this is invisible and with every virtue, as with gold, it adorns the dispositions<sup>b</sup> and the movements of the visible body. For that way of life<sup>c</sup> is perfect<sup>d</sup> which consists of two (kinds of things), of a pure mind,<sup>e</sup> which is invisible, and of irreproachable and blameless deeds, of which there are many spectators.

*55. (Ex. xxv. 10b [Heb. 11b]) What is the "wreathed wave" which He commands (them) to construct round the ark?<sup>f</sup>

By the "wave" He indicates<sup>g</sup> the stars, for they circle and roll around, some in the same way as<sup>h</sup> the whole heaven, and others with a particular motion which has been assigned to them as peculiarly their own.<sup>i</sup> For in the same way as a rotating axle does not change its position and, as it goes around by itself, does not move away, so also does the heaven revolve without change of place. In the second place, the "wreathed wave" is similar to the corruption of the soul<sup>j</sup> and the body, for the mind<sup>k</sup> keeps turning in different directions and does not possess stability, and the body, which is always flowing like a stream at (various) stages<sup>l</sup> and with the (various) illnesses that over-

<sup>a</sup> Again the syntax is not clear: Aucher "sicut oportet esse animam."

<sup>b</sup> τὰς ἕξεις: Aucher "habitus."

<sup>c</sup> βίος or διαγωγή.

<sup>d</sup> τέλειος.

<sup>e</sup> νοῦ or διανοίας.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις αὐτῇ κυμάτια στρεπτὰ χρυσᾶ (Heb. "wreath of gold": A.V. "crown of gold") κύκλω.

<sup>g</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "by themselves together with." Evidently the Arm. translator read κατὰ ἑαυτὰ instead of κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ as does the Greek frag., see next note.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. from John Monachus (the first of two belonging to this section) reads only slightly differently Οἱ ἀστέρες στρέφονται καὶ εἰλοῦνται κύκλον· οἱ μὲν κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ τῷ σύμπαντι οὐρανῷ, οἱ δὲ καὶ κινήσειν ἰδίαις <ᾶς> ἔλαχον ἑξαιρέτοις.

<sup>j</sup> τῆς ψυχῆς.

<sup>k</sup> ὁ νοῦς or ἡ διάνοια.

<sup>l</sup> ἡλικίας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

take it, is wont to undergo change. In the third place, the course of human life is to be likened to a broad sea (which) experiences storms and rolling disturbances of all kinds in accordance with (varying) fortunes.<sup>a</sup> For nothing on earth is stable but (everything) vacillates this way and that and is tossed about like a ship sailing the sea against contrary winds.<sup>b</sup>

56. (Ex. xxv. 11 [Heb. 12]) Why does he fit four rings to <sup>c</sup> the ark, two on one side and two on the other side? <sup>d</sup>

It so happens that there are two sides in existing things,<sup>e</sup> one the intelligible and one the sense-perceptible (side),<sup>f</sup> each of which (in turn) is sealed with two seals.<sup>g</sup> For there are two sections of the intelligible (side), one being a sign of immortal things, and one a sign of mortal things. The sense-perceptible (side), moreover, is divided into two (parts), one of which is light and of an upward-tending <sup>a</sup> One Arm. ms. has "not good fortunes," the other "good fortunes." The Greek frag. (see rest of note) prob. has the correct reading. The second Greek frag. (preserved in three different sources: Dam. Par., Anon. Flor. Cod. Barocc. and Cod. Reg.) reads similarly ὁ τῶν ἀνθρώπων βίος, ὁμοιούμενος πελάγει, κυματώσεις καὶ στροφὰς παντοίας προσεπιδέχεται (v.l. προσδέχεται, προσενδέχεται) κατὰ τε εὐπραγίας καὶ κακοπραγίας (Cod. Barocc. om. καὶ κακοπραγίας).

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. agrees closely, ἴδρυται γὰρ οὐδὲν τῶν γηγενῶν ἀλλ' ὧδε καὶ ἐκεῖσε διαφέρεται, ὅσα σκάφος θαλαττεύον ὑπ' ἐναντίων πνευμάτων (Dam. Par. πραγμάτων).

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "upon."

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ ἐλάσεις αὐτῇ τέσσαρας δακτυλίου χρυσοῦς καὶ ἐπιθήσεις ἐπὶ τὰ τέσσαρα κλίτη (Heb. "feet" or "corners") δύο δακτυλίου ἐπὶ τὸ κλίτος τὸ ἓν, καὶ δύο δακτυλίου ἐπὶ τὸ κλίτος τὸ δεύτερον (v.l. ἕτερον).

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "in the ears," which cannot be the reading of the Greek original. Evidently the Arm. translator read ὡσί instead of (original) οὔσι.

<sup>f</sup> τὸ μὲν νοητόν, τὸ δ' αἰσθητόν.

<sup>g</sup> Philo says "sealed" because of the LXX δακτυλίου, which can mean "seal-rings."

EXODUS, BOOK II

substance,<sup>a</sup> to which the air and ether belong, and the other heavy and extending downward, to which earth and water belong. In the second place, some take the two sides (to represent) the equinoxes,<sup>b</sup> of which the four seasons are divisions. There are two warm and fair <sup>c</sup> (seasons), summer and autumn; and two are cold, winter and spring. These <sup>d</sup> have the status <sup>e</sup> of perfect and stable acts <sup>f</sup> in the sense-perceptible world, while (they have that) of signs and hints <sup>g</sup> in the intelligible (world).

57. (Ex. xxv. 12 [Heb. 13]) What were the "bearing-poles," which were of "undecaying wood" <sup>h</sup> ?

(This statement) indicates two divine principles <sup>i</sup>: one, the pillar and base and stability <sup>j</sup> of the intelligible world,<sup>k</sup> and the other (those) of the sense-perceptible,<sup>l</sup> on which, as if on a foundation, it <sup>m</sup> is set up with stability. For each of these bears its own arrangement <sup>n</sup>; although it is very heavy, the heaviness is, as it were, very light. The principles,<sup>o</sup> moreover, are undecaying, since they are the utterances of God.

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "naturae."

<sup>b</sup> τὰς ἰσημερίας, here taken to include the solstices as subdivisions.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "ethereal": Aucher "pro sereno."

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the two sets of rings.

<sup>e</sup> Or "reckoning"—λόγον: Aucher "calculum."

<sup>f</sup> Or "works"—ἔργων: Aucher "operum."

<sup>g</sup> αἰνιγμάτων vel sim., i.e. symbols.

<sup>h</sup> LXX ποιήσεις δὲ ἀναφορεῖς ἐκ ξύλων ἀσήπτων (v.l. ξύλα ἀσηπτα) καὶ καταχρυσώσεις αὐτὰ χρυσίῳ: Heb. "and thou shalt make staves of šittim (acacia)-wood, and overlay them with gold."

<sup>i</sup> λόγους: Aucher "verba," in footnote, "vel, . . . rationes."

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "columnnam ac fulcrum constantiae."

<sup>k</sup> τοῦ νοητοῦ κόσμου.

<sup>l</sup> τοῦ αἰσθητοῦ.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. each of the two worlds.

<sup>n</sup> κόσμον or διακόσμησιν: Aucher "ornamentum."

<sup>o</sup> οἱ λόγοι: Aucher "verba."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

58. (Ex. xxv. 13 [Heb. 14]) Why are the bearing-poles fitted to the rings for lifting the ark? <sup>a</sup>

There are two principles <sup>b</sup> of the two worlds, <sup>c</sup> which (Scripture) calls "bearing-poles." Being attached by seals, <sup>d</sup> they show the fated and necessary order of events, <sup>e</sup> which is the harmonious nexus <sup>f</sup> of things integrating single (events) into order. Accordingly, in the visible world they <sup>g</sup> are a likeness and form, but in the intelligible (world they are) signs and archetypes of rank and orders of things which progress and retrogress in accordance with the consistent order of nature. <sup>h</sup>

59. (Ex. xxv. 15 [Heb. 16]) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt put into the ark the testimony which I shall give thee" <sup>i</sup>?

Now since the ark is a symbol of the incorporeal world, <sup>j</sup> and it is necessary that this world be a sign of the laws <sup>k</sup> which He has called "testimonies," rightly and fittingly has He said that in word they should be placed in the ark

<sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ εἰσάξεις τοὺς ἀναφορεῖς εἰς τοὺς δακτυλίους τοὺς ἐν τοῖς κλίτεσι τῆς κιβωτοῦ αἶρειν τὴν κιβωτὸν ἐν αὐτοῖς.

<sup>b</sup> λόγοι.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the intelligible and the sense-perceptible worlds.

<sup>d</sup> Here again, as in QE ii. 56, Philo plays on the LXX word δακτυλίους, which can mean "seal-rings."

<sup>e</sup> Slightly emending the Arm. text, which has "events of orders." The original was something like τὴν εἰμαρμένην καὶ ἀναγκαίαν τάξιν τῶν συμβαινόντων. Aucher renders more briefly, "praescriptum ac necessarium eventum."

<sup>f</sup> εἰρμός.

<sup>g</sup> Although the verb is singular, the context requires a plural pronoun to be supplied, referring to the two bearing-poles.

<sup>h</sup> κατὰ τὰς τῆς φύσεως ἀκολουθίας vel sim.: Aucher "secundum naturae concinnationem."

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ ἐμβαλεῖς εἰς τὴν κιβωτὸν τὰ μαρτύρια ἃ ἂν δῶ σοι. Philo briefly alludes to this verse in De Vita Mosis ii. 97 εἰς γὰρ ταύτην κατατίθεται τὰ χρησθέντα λόγια.

<sup>j</sup> σύμβολον τοῦ ἄσωμάτου κόσμου.

<sup>k</sup> τῶν νόμων.

EXODUS, BOOK II

but in deed <sup>a</sup> in the intelligible world <sup>b</sup> in order that it <sup>c</sup> may be attached to them <sup>d</sup> in all its parts and extend (throughout).<sup>e</sup>

60. (Ex. xxv. 16a [Heb. 17a]) What is the "mercy-seat" <sup>f</sup> and why did He call it a "cover" <sup>g</sup>?

The "mercy-seat" is mentioned as a symbol of the propitious and beneficent power.<sup>h</sup> And it is called "cover" because it stands over and is established over the intelligible world.<sup>i</sup> But since the perfect form <sup>j</sup> is above, rightly is the propitious power (said to be) up above, since all things are established and stand firm upon it.

61. (Ex. xxv. 16b [Heb. 17b]) Why does the mercy-seat have only length and breadth but not depth? <sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> λόγῳ μὲν . . . ἔργῳ δέ.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν τῷ νοητῷ κόσμῳ.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the intelligible world.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the laws.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, I think, "ut cunctis suis partibus illic jacens perseverabit."

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "propitiatory (instrument)" = LXX ἱλαστήριον, see next note; "mercy-seat" is here used because it is the familiar A.V. term.

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις ἱλαστήριον ἐπίθεμα χρυσοῦ καθαροῦ. The two Greek nouns render the single Heb. noun kappōret, which means both "cover" and "propitiation" or "atonement." It seems to have been a gold plate fastened to the top of the ark and serving as a floor for the Cherubim, as Philo assumes in De Vita Mosis ii. 97 τὸ δ' ἐπίθεμα τὸ προσαγορευόμενον ἱλαστήριον βάσις ἐστὶ πτηνῶν δυοῖν, see also De Fuga 100.

<sup>h</sup> τῆς ἰλέω καὶ εὐεργετικῆς δυνάμεως σύμβολον.

<sup>i</sup> διὰ τοῦ στήναι αὐτὸ καὶ ἰδρῆσθαι ὑπὲρ τοῦ νοητοῦ κόσμου vel sim. Aucher renders, "quia superpositus est firmiter intelligibilis mundus," but in a footnote he gives an alternative and better rendering, "vel, super intelligibilem mundum positum est." <sup>j</sup> Prob. εἶδος: Aucher "visione."

<sup>k</sup> i.e. why does Scripture give only two of its dimensions? LXX δύο πήχεων καὶ ἡμίσεος τὸ μῆκος, καὶ πήχεος καὶ ἡμίσεος τὸ πλάτος. In De Vita Mosis ii. 96, Philo allegorizes this question somewhat differently, see last note on this section.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

A magnitude lacking depth and seen only in length and breadth is called a "surface" <sup>a</sup> by geometricians. And the "surface" <sup>b</sup> of the Existent One <sup>c</sup> is seen also through other powers, <sup>d</sup> especially through the propitious and beneficent ones. <sup>e</sup> But those who receive good, immediately thereupon see the Benefactor appear before their eyes together with His virgin daughters, the graces. <sup>f</sup>

*62. (Ex. xxv. 17a [Heb. 18a]) What are the cherubim? <sup>g</sup> ("Cherubim") is to be interpreted as "great recognition," in other words, <sup>h</sup> "knowledge poured out in abundance." <sup>i</sup> But they are symbols of the two powers, the

<sup>a</sup> ἐπιφάνεια.

<sup>b</sup> Philo plays on the double meaning of ἐπιφάνεια as "surface" and "(divine) manifestation." <sup>c</sup> τοῦ ὄντος.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "other virtues and powers," but the two Arm. nouns prob. render the single Greek noun δυνάμειον: Aucher "per alias virtutes."

<sup>e</sup> διὰ τῆς ἕλεω καὶ εὐεργετικῆς, see the preceding section.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. acts of divine grace. The "virgin graces" of God are also mentioned in De Poster. Caini 32. The general idea of this section is partially paralleled in De Vita Mosis ii. 96 ὅπερ ἔοικεν εἶναι σύμβολον φυσικώτερον μὲν τῆς ἕλεω τοῦ θεοῦ δυνάμειος, ἠθικώτερον δὲ διανοίας πάλιν, ἕλεω δ' ἑαυτῆ, τὴν πρὸς ὕψος ἄλογον αἴρουσαν καὶ φυσῶσαν οἴησιν ἀτυφίας ἔρωτι σὺν ἐπιστήμῃ στέλλειν καὶ καθαιρεῖν ἀξιούσης.

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις δύο χερουβείμ (v.l. χερουβεῖν: Heb. kerūbīm). Philo allegorizes the cherubim of the ark in De Vita Mosis ii. 97-100, and the cherubim of the Garden of Eden in De Cherubim 21-29. The whole of the present section has been preserved in Greek (in Cod. Vat. 379).

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "names."

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. reads more smoothly τὰ χερουβείμ ἐρμηνεύεται μὲν ἐπίγνωσις πολλή, ἣ ἐν ἑτέροις ὄνομα ἐπιστήμη πλουσία καὶ κεχυμένη, cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 97 χερουβείμ ὡς δ' ἂν Ἑλληνες εἴποιεν ἐπίγνωσις καὶ ἐπιστήμη πολλή. According to Edmund Stein, Die allegorische Exegese des Philo aus Alexandria (Giessen, 1924), p. 52, Philo's fanciful etymology is based on the combination of the two Heb. words hakkīr "to recognize" and bīn "knowledge," but the second word may be rabbīm "much," "many."

EXODUS, BOOK II

creative and the royal.<sup>a</sup> The creative (power), however, is the elder according to (our) thinking,<sup>b</sup> for though the powers around God are of the same age, still the creative (power) is thought of before the royal one.<sup>c</sup> For one is king not of that which does not exist, but of that which already exists.<sup>d</sup> And the creative (power) has been given the name "God" in the sacred<sup>e</sup> Scriptures, for the ancients<sup>f</sup> spoke of creating as "placing,"<sup>g</sup> while the royal (power) is called "Lord," since "Lord of all" is (the name) consecrated to the king.<sup>h</sup>

*63. (Ex. xxv. 17b [Heb. 18b]) Why is the chasing of gold?<sup>i</sup>

Gold is a symbol of a precious substance,<sup>j</sup> while the <sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag. (except that it adds "of the Existent One" to "powers"), σύμβολα δέ ἐστι δυνεῖν τοῦ ὄντος δυνάμεων ποιητικῆς τε καὶ βασιλικῆς, see also De Vita Mosis ii. 99. On these two chief divine attributes see QG ii. 51, iv. 2, De Cherubim 27 et al.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek frag., πρεσβυτέρα δὲ ἡ ποιητικὴ τῆς βασιλικῆς κατ' ἐπίνοιαν.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. reads slightly more fully ισήλικες γὰρ αἱ γε περὶ τὸν θεὸν ἅπαναι δυνάμεις, ἀλλὰ προεπινοεῖται πως ἡ ποιητικὴ τῆς βασιλικῆς.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag., βασιλεὺς γὰρ τις οὐχὶ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος ἀλλὰ τοῦ γεγονότος.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "sacred and divine," but the two Arm. adjectives prob. render the single Greek adjective ἱεροῖς, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. the ancient Greeks.

<sup>g</sup> So the Greek frag., ὄνομα δὲ ἔλαχεν ἐν τοῖς ἱεροῖς γράμμασιν ἡ μὲν ποιητικὴ θεός, τὸ γὰρ ποιῆσαι θεῖναι ἔλεγον οἱ παλαιοί. Philo makes the same etymological connexion between θεός and θεῖναι in De Vita Mosis ii. 99 et al.

<sup>h</sup> The Greek frag. reads only slightly differently ἡ δὲ βασιλικὴ κύριος, ἐπειδὴ τὸ κύριος ἀπάντων ἀνακεῖται τῷ βασιλεῖ.

<sup>i</sup> So the Greek frag., Διατί χρυσοῦ τορευτά: LXX (καὶ ποιῆσεις δύο χερουβείμ) χρυσᾶ τορευτά (v.l. χρυσοτορευτά).

<sup>j</sup> The Greek frag. has the superlative form of the adjective, ὁ μὲν χρυσὸς σύμβολον τῆς τιμιωτάτης οὐσίας.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

chasing (is a symbol) of an artful and skilled nature.<sup>a</sup> For it was proper that the chief powers of the Existent One should be ideas of ideas and partake of a substance that is most pure and unmixed and most precious and, in addition, most skilful.<sup>b</sup>

*64. (Ex. xxv. 17c-18 [Heb. 18c-19]) Why did He fit the cherubim to the two sides of the altar? <sup>c</sup>

(This indicates that) the bounds of the whole heaven and the world are fortified by the two highest guards, one being that (power) by which God created all things, and the other that by which He is ruler of existing things.<sup>d</sup> For (each power) was destined to look out for (the world) as its most proper and related possession, the creative (power seeing to it) that the things made by it should not be destroyed,<sup>e</sup> and the royal power that nothing be in excess, mediating the victory by law as a sign of equality,

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., ἡ δὲ τορεία τῆς ἐντέχνου καὶ ἐπιστημονικῆς φύσεως.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. differs only slightly, ἔδει γὰρ τὰς πρώτας τοῦ ὄντος δυνάμεις ιδέας ιδεῶν ὑπαρχούσας καὶ τῆς καθαρωτάτης καὶ ἀμιγροῦς καὶ τιμαλφεστάτης καὶ προσέτι τῆς ἐπιστημονικωτάτης φύσεως μεταλαχεῖν.

<sup>c</sup> Apparently the Arm. translator has erred in using selan "altar" instead of hashtaran "mercy-seat." The Greek frag. reads Διατί ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρων τῶν κλιτῶν τοῦ ἱλαστηρίου τὰ χερουβίμ ἤρμωττε: LXX καὶ ἐπιθήσεις αὐτὰ ἐξ ἀμφοτέρων τῶν κλιτῶν τοῦ ἱλαστηρίου ποιηθήσονται χερουβ εἰς ἕκ τοῦ κλίτους τούτου καὶ χερουβ εἰς ἕκ τοῦ κλίτους τοῦ δευτέρου τοῦ ἱλαστηρίου καὶ ποιήσεις τοὺς δύο χερουβεῖμ ἐπὶ τὰ δύο κλίτη.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag., τοὺς ὄρους τοῦ παντὸς οὐρανοῦ καὶ κόσμου δυσὶ ταῖς ἀνωτάτω φρουραῖς ὠχυρῶσθαι, τῇ τε καθ' ἣν ἐποίηε τὰ ὅλα θεός, καὶ τῇ καθ' ἣν ἄρχει τῶν γεγονότων. On the cherubim as symbols of the two highest divine attributes, corresponding to the names "God" and "Lord," see above, QE ii. 62, notes.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., ἔμελλε γὰρ ὡς οἰκειοτάτου καὶ συγγενεστάτου κτήματος προκῆδεσθαι, ἡ μὲν ποιητικὴ ἵνα μὴ λυθείη τὰ πρὸς αὐτῆς γενόμενα.

EXODUS, BOOK II

by which things eternally endure.<sup>a</sup> For through excess and inequality (come) occasions for war, the destroyers of existing things.<sup>b</sup> But good order and equality are the seeds of peace and the causes of salvation and perpetual survival.<sup>c</sup>

*65. (Ex. xxv. 19a [Heb. 20a]) Why does He say that the cherubim shall extend their wings to overshadow (the mercy-seat) ?<sup>d</sup>

All the powers of God are winged, striving for and desiring the path upward to the Father.<sup>e</sup> And that, like wings, they overshadow the parts of the universe indicates that the world is protected by guards, (namely) by the two powers (already) mentioned,<sup>f</sup> the creative and the royal.<sup>g</sup>

*66. (Ex. xxv. 19b [Heb. 20b]) Why do the faces of the

<sup>a</sup> Here apparently the Arm. translator has clumsily rendered the original which, according to the Greek frag., read ἡ δὲ βασιλικὴ ὅπως μηδὲν μήτε πλεονεκτῆ μήτε πλεονεκτῆται, νόμῳ βραβευόμενα τῷ τῆς ἰσότητος, ὑφ' ἧς τὰ πράγματα διαιωνίζεται.

<sup>b</sup> Here again the Greek frag. reads more smoothly πλεονεξία μὲν γὰρ καὶ ἀνισότης ὀρμητήρια πολέμου, λυτικά τῶν ὄντων.

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag., τὸ δὲ εὐνομον καὶ τὸ ἴσον εἰρήνης σπέρματα, σωτηρίας αἴτια καὶ τῆς εἰσάπαν διαμονῆς.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag., Διατί φησιν “ ἐκτείνει τὰς πτέρυγας τὰ χερουβὶμ ἵνα συσκιάζῃ ”; LXX ἔσονται οἱ χερουβὶμ ἐκτείνοντες τὰς πτέρυγας ἐπάνωθεν, συσκιάζοντες ἐν ταῖς πτέρυξιν αὐτῶν ἐπὶ τοῦ ἰλαστηρίου.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., αἱ μὲν τοῦ θεοῦ πᾶσαι δυνάμεις πτεροφυοῦσαι, τῆς ἄνω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ὁδοῦ γλιχόμεναί τε καὶ ἐφείμεναι.

<sup>f</sup> See above, QE ii. 62 and notes.

<sup>g</sup> Only slightly different is the wording of the Greek frag., συσκιάζουσι δὲ οἱ πτέρυξι τὰ τοῦ παντός μέρη· αἰνίττεται δὲ ὡς ὁ κόσμος σκέπαις καὶ φυλακτηρίοις φρουρεῖται, δυσὶ ταῖς εἰρημέναις δυνάμεσι τῇ τε ποιητικῇ καὶ βασιλικῇ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

cherubim look at each other, and both (look) at the mercy-seat? <sup>a</sup>

Most excellent in a way and seemly is the form of what is said, <sup>b</sup> for it was proper that the powers, the creative and the royal, <sup>c</sup> should look in the direction of each other, beholding their own beauty and at the same time both conspiring together for the advantage of created things. <sup>d</sup> In the second place, since God is one (and is) both Creator and King, <sup>e</sup> rightly did they receive divided power. <sup>f</sup> For they were indeed usefully divided in order that one might create and the other rule, for they are distinct. <sup>g</sup> And they were joined together in another way by the eternal attachment of names to one another, <sup>h</sup> in order that the creative (power) might be a spectator of <sup>i</sup> the royal, and the royal

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., Διατί τὰ πρόσωπα τῶν χερουβιμ εἰς ἄλληλα ἐκνεύει καὶ ἄμφω πρὸς τὸ ἰλαστήριον; LXX καὶ τὰ πρόσωπα αὐτῶν εἰς ἄλληλα· εἰς τὸ ἰλαστήριον ἔσονται τὰ πρόσωπα τῶν χερουβείν. In De Cherubim 25 Philo paraphrases Scripture as follows, καὶ γὰρ ἀντιπρόσωπά φησιν εἶναι νέοντα πρὸς τὸ ἰλαστήριον πτεροῖς, ἐπειδὴ καὶ ταῦτα ἀντικρὺ μὲν ἔστιν ἀλλήλων, and he adds the brief comment νένευκε δὲ ἐπὶ γῆν τὸ μέσον τοῦ παντός, ὧ καὶ διακρίνεται.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek frag., παγκάλῃ τίς ἐστι καὶ θεοπρεπῆς ἢ τῶν λεχθέντων εἰκῶν. <sup>c</sup> See the preceding sections.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag., ἔδει γὰρ τὰς δυνάμεις, τὴν τε ποιητικὴν καὶ βασιλικὴν, εἰς ἀλληγορίαν (l. cum edd. ἀλλήλας) ἀφορᾶν, τὰ σφῶν κάλλη κατανοούσας καὶ ἅμα πρὸς τὴν ὠφέλειαν τῶν γεγονότων συμπνεούσας.

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., δεύτερον ἐπειδὴ ὁ θεός, εἰς ὧν, καὶ ποιητῆς ἐστι καὶ βασιλεύς.

<sup>f</sup> Here the Arm. translator either had a different text or misunderstood the original. The Greek frag. reads εἰκότως αἱ διαστάσαι δυνάμεις πάλιν ἔνωσιν ἔλαβον, "rightly did the divided powers again receive unity."

<sup>g</sup> So the Greek frag. (except for the pronoun added at the end), καὶ γὰρ διέστησαν ὠφελίμως ἵνα ἡ μὲν ποιῆ, ἡ δὲ ἄρχῃ· διαφέρει γὰρ ἑκάτερον.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag. (except for the phrase "to one another" added in the Arm.), καὶ ἡρμόσθησαν ἑτέρῳ τρόπῳ κατὰ τὴν τῶν ὀνομάτων αἰδίων προσβολήν.

<sup>i</sup> Greek frag. (see next note) "might hold to."

EXODUS, BOOK II

of the creative.<sup>a</sup> For both rightly look at each other and at the mercy-seat,<sup>b</sup> for if God were not propitious to those things which exist together,<sup>c</sup> He would not have made anything through the creative (power) nor would He have been a lawgiver<sup>d</sup> through the royal (power).<sup>e</sup>

*67. (Ex. xxv. 21a [Heb. 22a]) What is the meaning of the words, "I shall be made known to thee from there" ' ?

The most lucid and most prophetic mind receives the knowledge and science of the Existent One not from the Existent One Himself, for it will not contain His greatness, but from His chief and ministering<sup>g</sup> powers.<sup>h</sup> And it is admirable<sup>i</sup> that from these His splendour should reach the soul in order that through the secondary splendour<sup>j</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The Greek frag. differs in the verb, ὅπως καὶ ἡ ποιητικὴ τῆς βασιλικῆς καὶ ἡ βασιλικὴ τῆς ποιητικῆς ἔχρηται.

<sup>b</sup> Again the Greek frag. differs slightly (omitting "at each other and"), ἀμφότεραι γὰρ συννεύουσιν εἰς τὸ ἰλαστήριον εἰκότως.

<sup>c</sup> The Arm. translator evidently read τοῖς συνοῦσιν, instead of τοῖς νῦν οὔσιν, as in the Greek frag. (see next note but one).

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "neque disposuisset."

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. differs slightly (see also note c), εἰ μὴ γὰρ ἦν τοῖς νῦν οὔσιν ἰλεως ὁ θεός, οὔτ' ἂν εἰργάσθη τι διὰ τῆς ποιητικῆς οὔτ' ἂν εὐνομήθη διὰ τῆς βασιλικῆς.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., τί ἐστι "γνωσθήσομαί σοι ἐκεῖθεν"; LXX καὶ γνωσθήσομαί σοι ἐκεῖθεν (Heb. "there").

<sup>g</sup> The Greek frag. reads more concretely "body-guard," see next note.

<sup>h</sup> So (except for the word mentioned in the preceding note) the Greek frag., γνώσιν καὶ ἐπιστήμην ὁ εἰλικρινέστατος καὶ προφητικώτατος νοῦς λαμβάνει τοῦ ὄντος οὐκ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ τοῦ ὄντος, οὐ γὰρ χωρήσει τὸ μέγεθος, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ τῶν πρώτων αὐτοῦ καὶ δορυφόρων δυνάμεων.

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "loved," but this prob. renders the same word as in the Greek frag., ἀγαπητόν.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. translator uses the same word to render φέγγους here as he used to render αὐγάς above, see next note.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

it may be able to behold the more splendid (splendour).<sup>a</sup>

*68. (Ex. xxv. 21b [Heb. 22b]) What is the meaning of the words, "I will speak to thee <sup>b</sup> above from <sup>c</sup> the mercy-seat, between the two <sup>d</sup> cherubim" <sup>e</sup> ?

By this He shows first of all that the Deity is above the propitious and the creative and every (other) power.<sup>f</sup> Next, (He shows) that He speaks rightly <sup>g</sup> in the midst of the creative (power).<sup>h</sup> And this the mind conceives somewhat as follows.<sup>i</sup> The divine Logos, inasmuch as it is

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., καὶ ἀγαπητὸν ἐκείθεν εἰς τὴν ψυχὴν φέρεσθαι τὰς αὐγὰς ἵνα δύνηται διὰ τοῦ δευτέρου φέγγους τὸ πρῶτον καὶ ἀγνοεῖσθαι θεάσασθαι.

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. omits "to thee," which is found in LXX and Heb. and in other passages of Philo, see below.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. "from above."

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. omits "two," which is found in LXX and Heb. and in other passages of Philo, see next note.

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. reads slightly more briefly τί ἐστι. "λαλήσω ἄνωθεν τοῦ ἰλαστηρίου ἀνά μέσον τῶν χερουβίμ"; LXX καὶ λαλήσω σοι ἄνωθεν τοῦ ἰλαστηρίου ἀνά μέσον τῶν δύο χερουβείν τῶν ὄντων ἐπὶ τῆς κιβωτοῦ τοῦ μαρτυρίου καὶ (v.l. omits καὶ with Heb.) κατὰ πάντα ὅσα ἂν ἐντείνωμαι σοὶ πρὸς τοὺς υἱοὺς Ἰσραὴλ. In Quis Rer. Div. Heres 166 and De Fuga 101 Philo quotes part of the LXX in the same wording as here, and comments more briefly than here. On the symbolism of the cherubim see the preceding sections in QE ii.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., ἐμφαίνει διὰ τοῦτο (l. τούτου) πρῶτον μὲν ὅτι καὶ τῆς ἰλεω καὶ τῆς ποιητικῆς καὶ πάσης δυνάμεως ὑπεράνω τὸ θεῖον ἐστι.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "quasi." The word, which is missing in the Greek frag., is perhaps the Armenian translator's device for conveying the force of the superlative ending in μεσαίτατον,<sup>h</sup> see next note.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. text is apparently defective. The Greek frag. reads more intelligibly ἔπειτα ὅτι λαλεῖ κατὰ τὸ μεσαίτατον τῆς τε ποιητικῆς καὶ βασιλικῆς.

<sup>i</sup> So the Greek frag., τοῦτο δὲ τοιοῦτον ὑπολαμβάνει νοῦς.

EXODUS, BOOK II

appropriately <sup>a</sup> in the middle, leaves nothing in nature empty, <sup>b</sup> but fills all things and becomes a mediator and arbitrator for the two sides which seem to be divided from each other, bringing about friendship and concord, <sup>c</sup> for it is always the cause of community and the artisan of peace. <sup>d</sup> Now the particular features of the ark have been spoken of, <sup>e</sup> but we must also summarily resume and review for the sake of finding out what things these are symbols of. <sup>f</sup> Now these symbols are the ark and the ordinances stored in it and the mercy-seat upon it and, upon the mercy-seat, the cherubim, as they are called in the Chaldaean <sup>g</sup> tongue, and directly above them, in their midst, the voice and the Logos and, above it, the Speaker. <sup>h</sup> And so, if one can accurately view and understand <sup>i</sup> the natures of these, it seems to me that one should renounce all the other things that are eagerly sought after, being captivated by their godlike beauty. <sup>j</sup> But let us consider what

<sup>a</sup> Or "chances to be": Aucher "est conveniente."

<sup>b</sup> The Greek frag. reads slightly more briefly ὁ τοῦ θεοῦ λόγος μέσος ὧν οὐδὲν ἐν τῇ φύσει καταλείπει κενόν.

<sup>c</sup> The Greek frag. reads similarly but a little more smoothly τὰ ὅλα πληρῶν καὶ μεσιτεύει καὶ διαιτᾷ τοῖς παρ' ἑκατέρα διεστάναι δοκοῦσι, φιλίαν καὶ ὁμόνοιαν ἐργαζόμενος.

<sup>d</sup> The Greek frag. reads more briefly ἀεὶ γὰρ κοινωνίας αἴτιος καὶ δημιουργός (Grossmann add. εἰρήνης).

<sup>e</sup> So the Greek frag., τὰ μὲν οὖν περὶ τὴν κιβωτὸν κατὰ μέρος εἴρηται.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., δεῖ δὲ συλλήβδην ἄνωθεν ἀναλαβόντα τοῦ γνωρίσαι χάριν τίνων ταῦτά ἐστι σύμβολα διεξελεθῆναι.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. Hebrew.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag., ἦν δὲ ταῦτα συμβολικά: κιβωτὸς καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ θησανριζόμενα νόμιμα καὶ ἐπὶ ταύτης τὸ ἱλαστήριον καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ τοῦ ἱλαστηρίου Χαλδαίων γλώττῃ λεγόμενα χερουβίμ, ὑπὲρ δὲ τούτων κατὰ τὸ μέσον φωνὴ καὶ λόγος καὶ ὑπεράνω ὁ λέγων.

<sup>i</sup> The Greek frag. omits "and understand," see next note.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher, taking the participle, here rendered "being captivated," to agree with "all the other things" rather than with the impersonal subject of the verb "should renounce" (infinitive in the Arm. text), renders, "caetera omnia quaecumque aemulationem merent deiformi pulchritudine circum-

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

each (of these things) is like.<sup>a</sup> In the first place (there is) He Who is elder than the one and the monad and the beginning.<sup>b</sup> Then (comes) the Logos of the Existent One, the truly <sup>c</sup> seminal substance of existing things.<sup>d</sup> And from the divine Logos,<sup>e</sup> as from a spring, there divide and break forth two powers.<sup>f</sup> One is the creative (power), through which the Artificer placed <sup>g</sup> and ordered all things; this is named "God."<sup>h</sup> And (the other is) the royal (power), since through it the Creator rules over created things<sup>i</sup>; this is called "Lord."<sup>j</sup> And from these two data." The Greek frag. agrees closely with the Arm. as rendered above (except for the omission mentioned in note <sup>i</sup> on p. 115), εἰ δὲ τις ἀκριβῶς δυνηθείη κατανοῆσαι τὰς τούτων φύσεις, δοκεῖ μοι πᾶσι τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀποτάξασθαι ὅσα ζηλωτά, κάλλεσι θεοειδεστάτοις περιληφθεῖς.

---

<sup>a</sup> So the Greek frag., σκοπῶμεν δὲ ἕκαστον οἶόν ἐστι.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek frag., τὸ πρῶτον ὁ καὶ ἐνὸς καὶ μονάδος καὶ ἀρχῆς πρεσβύτερος.

<sup>c</sup> The adverb (= Gr. ὄντως) is missing in the Greek frag., and may reflect a mistaken repetition of ὄντος or ὄντων in the Arm. translator's Greek text, see next note.

<sup>d</sup> So the Greek frag. (except for the omission mentioned in the preceding note), ἔπειτα ὁ τοῦ ὄντος λόγος, ἡ σπερματικὴ τῶν ὄντων οὐσία.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. yēn (= ἐκ τοῦ ὄντος) is prob. a corruption of the usual contraction, ayin, of the adjective astouacayin "divine." Aucher renders, "ex ente vero Verbo," adding in a footnote the theological comment "Judaeus noster Philo Entem fassus est ipsum Verbum, sicut Patrem suum, etc."

<sup>f</sup> The Greek frag. reads slightly more briefly ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ θείου λόγου, καθάπερ ἀπὸ πηγῆς, σχίζονται δύο (αἱ δύο edd.) δυνάμεις.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. "created." Philo uses ἔθηκε for the sake of explaining the etymology of θεός, the name of the creative power, see QE ii. 62 notes.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag., ἡ μὲν ποιητικὴ, καθ' ἣν ἔθηκε τὰ πάντα καὶ διεκόσμησεν ὁ τεχνίτης, αὕτη θεὸς ὀνομάζεται.

<sup>i</sup> Variant "He rules over things created by the Creator."

<sup>j</sup> So the Greek frag., ἡ δὲ βασιλικὴ, καθ' ἣν ἄρχει τῶν γεγονότων ὁ δημιουργός, αὕτη καλεῖται κύριος.

EXODUS, BOOK II

powers have grown the others.<sup>a</sup> For by the side of the creative (power) there grows the propitious, of which the name is "beneficent," while (beside) the royal (power there grows) the legislative, of which the apt name is "punitive."<sup>b</sup> And below these and beside them (is) the ark; and the ark is a symbol of the intelligible world.<sup>c</sup> And the ark symbolically contains all things established in the innermost sanctuary, (namely) the incorporeal world and the ordinances which He has called "testimonies" (and) the legislative and punitive powers (and) the mercy-seat<sup>d</sup> (and) the propitious and beneficent (powers and), up above, the creative (power), which is the source<sup>e</sup> of the propitious and beneficent (powers), and the royal (power), which is the root of the punitive and legislative (powers).<sup>f</sup> But there appears<sup>g</sup> as being in their midst the divine Logos and, above the Logos, the Speaker.<sup>h</sup> And the <sup>a</sup> So (except for omission of the article before "others") the Greek frag., ἀπὸ δὲ τούτων τῶν δυεῖν δυνάμεων ἐκπεφύκασι ἕτεραι.

<sup>b</sup> So the Greek frag., παραβλαστάνει γὰρ τῇ μὲν ποιητικῇ ἢ ἱλεως, ἧς ὄνομα εὐεργέτις, τῇ δὲ βασιλικῇ ἢ νομοθετικῇ, ὄνομα δὲ εὐθύβολον ἢ κολαστήριος.

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag., ὑπὸ δὲ ταύτας καὶ περὶ ταύτας ἢ κιβωτός· ἔστι δὲ κιβωτός κόσμον νοητοῦ σύμβολον.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. haštakan "propitious" is an obvious miswriting of haštaran "mercy-seat."

<sup>e</sup> The Greek frag. has πίστις, an obvious corruption of πηγή (so the Arm.), which occurs in the same connexion earlier in this section.

<sup>f</sup> So (with the exception of the word mentioned in the preceding note) the Greek frag., ἔχει δὲ τὰ πάντα ἰδρυμένα ἐν τοῖς ἐσωτάτοις ἀγίοις συμβολικῶς ἢ κιβωτός, τὸν ἀσώματον κόσμον, τὰ νόμιμα ἃ ἐκέκληκε μαρτύρια, τὴν νομοθετικὴν καὶ κολαστήριον δύναμιν, τὸ ἱλαστήριον, τὴν ἱλεω καὶ εὐεργέτιν, τὰς ὑπεράνω τῆν τε ποιητικὴν, ἧτις ἐστὶ πίστις (l. πηγή) τῆς ἱλεω καὶ εὐεργέτιδος, καὶ τὴν βασιλικὴν, ἧτις ἐστὶ ρίζα τῆς κολαστηρίου καὶ νομοθετικῆς.

<sup>g</sup> Arm. araweleal ē "there is multiplied" is evidently a corruption of ereweli ē "there appears," as in the Greek frag., see next note.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag., ὑπεμφαίνεται δὲ μέσος ὧν ὁ θεῖος λόγος, ἀνωτέρω δὲ τοῦ λόγου ὁ λέγων. Philo here repeats an earlier part of this section.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

number of the things here enumerated amounts to <sup>a</sup> seven, (namely) the intelligible world and the two <sup>b</sup> related powers, the punitive and beneficent <sup>c</sup>; and the two other ones preceding these, the creative and the royal, have greater kinship to the Artificer than what is created <sup>d</sup>; and the sixth is the Logos, <sup>e</sup> and the seventh is the Speaker. <sup>f</sup> But if you make the beginning <sup>g</sup> from the upper end, (you will find) <sup>h</sup> the Speaker first, and the Logos second, and the creative power third, and the ruling (power) fourth, and then, below the creative, the beneficent (power) fifth, and, below the royal, the punitive (power) sixth, and the world of ideas seventh. <sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "is filled up," see the next note but one.

<sup>b</sup> The Arm. lit. = δι' οδ, an obvious error for δύο, as in the Greek frag.

<sup>c</sup> So the Greek frag., ἔστι δὲ καὶ ὁ τῶν κατελεγεμένων ἀριθμὸς ἑβδομάδι συμπληρούμενος νοητὸς κόσμος, καὶ δυνάμεις δύο συγγενεῖς ἢ τε κολαστήριος καὶ εὐεργέτις.

<sup>d</sup> Here we must emend the Arm. on the basis of the clearly better readings of the Greek frag., καὶ ἕτεραι πρὸ τούτων δύο ἢ τε ποιητικὴ καὶ ἡ βασιλική, συγγένειαν ἔχουσαι μᾶλλον πρὸς τὸν δημιουργὸν ἢ τὸ γεγονός. The Arm. lit. = συγγένειαν ἔχει μᾶλλον ὁ δημιουργὸς καὶ τὸ γένος, which makes no sense.

<sup>e</sup> Here again we must correct the Arm. from the Greek frag., which reads καὶ ἔκτος ὁ λόγος. The Arm. = καὶ ἕκαστος ὁ λόγος, which is meaningless.

<sup>f</sup> So the Greek frag., καὶ ἕβδομος ὁ λέγων. With this list of seven cosmic symbols compare the list of ten cosmic parts in QG iv. 110.

<sup>g</sup> The Armenian translator appears to have read καταρχήν instead of καταρίθμῳ, as in the Greek frag., see next note but one.

<sup>h</sup> The Arm. lacks a verb to govern the following nouns, which are in the accusative case.

<sup>i</sup> So (except for the two variants mentioned in the preceding two notes) the Greek frag., εἰάν δὲ ἀνωθεν τὴν καταρίθμῳ ποιῆ, εὐρήσεις τὸν μὲν λέγοντα πρῶτον, τὸν δὲ λόγον δεύτερον, τρίτην δὲ τὴν ποιητικὴν δύναμιν, τετάρτην δὲ τὴν ἀρχήν, εἶτα δὲ ὑπὸ μὲν τῇ ποιητικῇ πέμπτην τὴν εὐεργέτιν, ὑπὸ δὲ τῇ βασιλικῇ ἕκτην τὴν κολαστήριον, ἕβδομον δὲ τὸν ἐκ τῶν ἰδεῶν κόσμον.

EXODUS, BOOK II

69. (Ex. xxv. 22 [Heb. 23]) What is "the table" and why is it "of pure gold" <sup>a</sup>?

Having spoken symbolically of incorporeal things, <sup>b</sup> when He was discoursing divinely <sup>c</sup> about the ark in the inner sanctuary, <sup>d</sup> He now begins to speak of those things which are in sense-perception, <sup>e</sup> rightly and appropriately beginning with the table. Since the table is a vessel <sup>f</sup> for food and (since) nothing intelligible <sup>g</sup> is given food but only those who have been allotted the nature of corporeality, He makes the table a symbol of sense-perceptible and body-like substance. <sup>h</sup> Not only that but also because the table indicates a kind of communion <sup>i</sup> among those who receive a common share <sup>j</sup> of salt and sacrifices. For (this) leads to loving one's fellow <sup>k</sup> for one's own sake. <sup>l</sup> But there is nothing anywhere so lovable as the parts of the world made from their own substance. <sup>m</sup> For one who is about to eat and to be made glad by the Father, (Who is) the begetter of these (foods), is taught from above to give in exchange

<sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις τράπεζαν χρυσῆν (v.l. omits χρυσῆν) χρυσοῦ καθαροῦ, δύο πήχεων τὸ μήκος καὶ πήχεος τὸ εὖρος καὶ πήχεος καὶ ἡμίσεως τὸ ὕψος. Instead of "a table of gold" Heb. has "a table of šiffim (acacia)-wood," but adds "and thou shalt overlay it with pure gold."

<sup>b</sup> περὶ ἀσωμάτων διαλεξάμενος συμβολικῶς.

<sup>c</sup> ἐθεολόγει.

<sup>d</sup> ἐν τοῖς ἀδύτοις.

<sup>e</sup> ἐν τῇ αἰσθήσει (v.l. ἐν ταῖς αἰσθήσεσι).

<sup>f</sup> σκεῦος: Aucher "receptaculum."

<sup>g</sup> νοητόν.

<sup>h</sup> αἰσθητῆς καὶ σωματοειδοῦς οὐσίας.

<sup>i</sup> κοινωνίαν τινά.

<sup>j</sup> Here the Arm. uses a different word for κοινωνίαν.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "one's like."

<sup>l</sup> The syntax and meaning are not clear: Aucher "si-quidem est adducens similem in dilectionem propter (vel, per) se."

<sup>m</sup> This sentence is also obscure. Aucher in a footnote cites the interpretation of the Arm. glossator, who takes "their own" to mean "one another's," and thinks that Philo is referring to the changing of the four elements into one another.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and return the benefit as if to brothers by the same father and the same mother.<sup>a</sup> Moreover, the table was of pure gold because the entire substance of the world was of the tested and chosen part, for everything, whatever it was by its own substance and nature, was about to receive even greater perfection.<sup>b</sup>

70. (Ex. xxv. 23 [Heb. 24]) Why are there "wreathed waves" around the table?<sup>c</sup>

The corporeal substance<sup>d</sup> of all things undergoes turning<sup>e</sup> and change<sup>f</sup> for the genesis of the parts of which the world was constituted.

71.<sup>g</sup> (Ex. xxv. 28 [Heb. 29]) Why are there, upon the table, cups and censers and libation-bowls and ladles?<sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. glossator takes this sentence to mean that the elements of the world have been taught to give parts of themselves to one another in gratitude to the divine powers from which their substance is derived.

<sup>b</sup> τελειότητα.

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις αὐτῇ στρεπτὰ κυμάτια χρυσᾶ (v.l. στρεπτὸν κυμάτιον χρυσοῦν): Heb. "And thou shalt make for it a wreath (A.V. "crown") of gold around." See above, QE ii. 55 (= Ex. xxv. 10) on the "wreathed waves" around the ark.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ σωματικὴ οὐσία.

<sup>e</sup> στροφὴν.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders both nouns by the single word "mutationem," but this obscures Philo's point, which is that the "turning" (i.e. twisting) of the "wreathed waves" symbolizes the changing of the elements into one another, mentioned in the preceding section.

<sup>g</sup> The four verses of Scripture here passed over in silence speak of the gold rings to be made for holding the staves by which the table is to be carried, see above, QE ii. 56 (= Ex. xxv. 11) on the gold rings made for the ark.

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις τὰ τρύβλια αὐτῆς καὶ τὰς θύσκας καὶ τὰ σπόνδια (sic) καὶ τοὺς κιάθους, ἐν οἷς σπείσεις ἐν αὐτοῖς χρυσοῦ καθαροῦ ποιήσεις αὐτά.

EXODUS, BOOK II

The cups were symbols of foods, and the ladles of banqueting, since unmixed wine <sup>a</sup> is measured by them, and the censers are vessels of incense, and the libation-bowls are for wine which is poured as a libation. Accordingly, through the food and the unmixed wine (Scripture) indicates <sup>b</sup> the graciousness <sup>c</sup> of the greatness and munificence of God, Who gives not only necessities <sup>d</sup> but also whatever pertains to the abundant and ample enjoyment of munificence. And through the incense and libation (Scripture indicates) the pleasure of those to whom good things happen. For those who are nourished by visible food <sup>e</sup> in the form of allegory <sup>f</sup> also say that every soul desirous of moral excellence <sup>g</sup> is a libation, that is if one first pours out and dedicates one's virtue <sup>h</sup> to God.<sup>i</sup> And this is an act desirable and agreeable <sup>j</sup> and pleasing to the heart of the Father, just as is the most sweet-smelling incense by its fragrance.

72. (Ex. xxv. 29 [Heb. 30]) Why does He say, "Thou shalt place upon the table bread before Me continually" <sup>k</sup> ?
The loaves of bread <sup>l</sup> are symbolical of necessary foods, <sup>a</sup> τὸ ἄκρατον.

<sup>b</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>c</sup> τὰς χάριτας.

<sup>d</sup> τὰ ἀναγκαῖα.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "constantibus cibis."

<sup>f</sup> ἀλληγορίας.

<sup>g</sup> καλοκάγαθίας : Aucher "probitatis."

<sup>h</sup> ἀρετήν.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher, construing slightly differently, renders, "libamen est, profundens dedicansque virtutem Deo." A similar idea is expressed by Philo in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 184 τῆς ψυχῆς τὸ μὲν ἀμυγῆς καὶ ἄκρατον μέρος ὁ ἀκραιφνέστατος νοῦς ἐστίν, ὅς . . . ὅλος εἰς ἱερὰν σπονδὴν ἀναστοιχειωθείς ἀνταποδίδοται.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "to the mind."

<sup>k</sup> LXX καὶ ἐπιθήσεις ἐπὶ τὴν τράπεζαν ἄρτους ἐνωπίους (Heb. "bread of face" : A.V. "showbread") ἐναντίον μου διὰ παντός. Philo refers to the showbread briefly in De Congressu 168, De Vita Mosis ii. 104 and De Spec. Leg. ii. 161.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "the breads."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

without which there is no life ; and the power <sup>a</sup> of rulers and peasants <sup>b</sup> by the ordering of God (consists) in the necessities of nature, (namely) in food and drink. Wherefore He adds, " before Me continually thou shalt place the loaves of bread," for " continually " means that the gift of food is continual and uninterrupted, while " before " (means) that it is pleasing and agreeable to God both to be gracious <sup>c</sup> and to receive gratitude.<sup>d</sup>

73. (Ex. xxv. 30a [Heb. 31a]) Why is the lampstand " turned " (and) of pure gold " <sup>e</sup> ?

The lampstand is a symbol of the purest substance, (namely) the heaven.<sup>f</sup> For this reason it is said later <sup>g</sup> that it was made of one (piece of) gold. For the other parts of the world were wholly made through the four elements, earth, water, air, and fire, but the heaven of (only) one, (this being) a superior form,<sup>h</sup> which the moderns <sup>i</sup> call " the quintessence."<sup>j</sup> And rightly has (heaven) been

<sup>a</sup> Variant " equality."

<sup>b</sup> Or " commoners " : Aucher " villicorum."

<sup>c</sup> χαρίζεσθαι.

<sup>d</sup> εὐχαριστίαν.

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις λυχνίαν (Heb. m<sup>e</sup>nôrāh : A.V. " candlestick ") ἐκ χρυσοῦ καθαροῦ, τορευτήν (v.l. τορνευτήν, which seems to have been Philo's reading, see below) ποιήσεις τὴν λυχνίαν. The cosmic symbolism of the lampstand is also dealt with in De Vita Mosis ii. 102-103, cf. Josephus, Ant. iii. 182 and B.J. v. 217.

<sup>f</sup> σύμβολον τῆς καθαρωτάτης οὐσίας τοῦ οὐρανοῦ.

<sup>g</sup> At the end of this verse, see the following section.

<sup>h</sup> εἶδος.

<sup>i</sup> οἱ νεώτεροι, perhaps the Aristotelians, but see next note.

<sup>j</sup> Or " fifth substance," τὴν πέμπτην οὐσίαν. Curiously enough, in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 283 Philo ascribes the notion of the quintessence to " the ancients," πέμπτη γάρ, ὡς ὁ τῶν ἀρχαίων λόγος, ἔστω τις οὐσία κυκλοφορητική, τῶν τεττάρων κατὰ τὸ κρεῖττον διαφέρουσα, ἐξ ἧς οἱ τε ἀστέρες καὶ ὁ σύμπας οὐρανὸς ἔδοξε γεγενῆσθαι.

EXODUS, BOOK II

likened to the lampstand in so far as it is altogether full of light-bearing stars. And rightly does He describe it <sup>a</sup> as "turned," for the heaven was made and illuminated <sup>b</sup> by a certain turner's art <sup>c</sup> in accordance with periodic cycles,<sup>d</sup> each of which is accurately and clearly <sup>e</sup> turned,<sup>f</sup> and the natures of the stars are all described by divine skill.<sup>g</sup>

74. (Ex. xxv. 30b [Heb. 31b]) Why is it that the shaft and the branches and the bowls <sup>h</sup> (and) the knops and the lilies were all "of that" <sup>i</sup>?

(Since) the theologian <sup>j</sup> was all-wise,<sup>k</sup> he clearly knew in his wisdom that the heaven itself is a harmony and union and bond <sup>l</sup> of all those things which are in heaven, just as the limbs which are arranged in the body are all adapted (to one another) and grow together.<sup>m</sup>

<sup>a</sup> i.e. the lampstand.

<sup>b</sup> Or "adorned": Aucher "illustratum."

<sup>c</sup> Prob. τορνευτικῆ τινι τέχνῃ rather than τορευτικῆ τινι τέχνῃ "by a certain chaser's art," although LXX and Heb. refer to chasing or embossing (A.V. "beaten work") rather than lathe-turning.

<sup>d</sup> The Arm. apparently uses two nouns to render περιόδους.

<sup>e</sup> The latter adverb also means "accurately." Aucher renders both adverbs by the single word "accurate."

<sup>f</sup> τορνοῦται.

<sup>g</sup> θεία ἐπιστήμη.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "holders" but here reflecting LXX κρατῆρες. Below, in QE ii. 76, a different Arm. word is used, meaning "water-jar."

<sup>i</sup> LXX ὁ καυλὸς αὐτῆς καὶ οἱ καλαμίσκοι καὶ οἱ κρατῆρες καὶ οἱ σφαιρωτῆρες καὶ τὰ κρίνα (Heb. "flowers") ἐξ αὐτῆς ἔσται. Apparently Philo took ἐξ αὐτῆς to mean "all of a piece" or the like.

<sup>j</sup> ὁ θεολόγος, i.e. Moses.

<sup>k</sup> πάνσοφος, an adjective elsewhere applied by Philo to the patriarchs as well as Moses.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher renders the three Arm. nouns by only two, "conjunctio colligatioque."

<sup>m</sup> Aucher "sicut connexa in corpore membra coaptata sunt naturaliter."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

75. (Ex. xxvi. 31 [Heb. 32]) What were the six branches which went out from either side, three equally <sup>a</sup> ? <sup>b</sup>

Since it is not in a straight line but obliquely <sup>c</sup> that the zodiac <sup>d</sup> lies over and glancingly comes near the summer and winter solstices, <sup>e</sup> He says that the approach <sup>f</sup> to them is from the side, (and) the middle place is that of the sun. <sup>g</sup> But to the other (planets) He distributed three positions <sup>h</sup> on the two sides ; in the superior (group) <sup>i</sup> are Saturn, <sup>j</sup> Jupiter <sup>k</sup> and Mars, <sup>l</sup> while in the inner (group) <sup>m</sup> are Mercury, <sup>n</sup> Venus <sup>o</sup> and the moon. <sup>p</sup>

<sup>a</sup> i.e. in two identical sets of three. The form of the lampstand (menorah) may be schematically represented as <sup>b</sup> LXX ἐξ δὲ καλαμίσκοι ἐκπορευόμενοι ἐκ πλαγίων, τρεῖς καλαμίσκοι τῆς λυχνίας ἐκ τοῦ κλίτους αὐτῆς τοῦ ἐνός, καὶ τρεῖς καλαμίσκοι τῆς λυχνίας ἐκ τοῦ κλίτους τοῦ δευτέρου. Philo comments on the two "triads" of branches in De Congressu 8, where they represent the two chief attributes of God, see also below, QE ii. 78, 79 on Ex. xxv. 37.

<sup>c</sup> οὐκ εὐθυβόλως ἀλλὰ πλαγίως.

<sup>d</sup> ὁ ζωφόρος (κύκλος), cf. De Opif. Mundi 112.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "quoniam zodiacus non recte sed oblique jacet juxta tropica aestatis et hiemis." Philo is apparently referring to the obliquity of the ecliptic.

<sup>f</sup> ἀγωγή or φορά : Aucher "inductio."

<sup>g</sup> The general sense is that the light on the central shaft of the lampstand represents the sun, while the side-lights represent the planets.

<sup>h</sup> τάξεις : Aucher "ordines."

<sup>i</sup> The "superior" or "outer" planets are those whose orbits are farther from the sun than is the earth's.

<sup>j</sup> Arm. ereveli, lit. "visible" or "bright" = Gr. φαίνων.

<sup>k</sup> Arm. lousnt'ag, lit. "light-crowned" = Gr. φαέθων.

<sup>l</sup> Arm. hravor, lit. "fiery" = Gr. πυρόεις.

<sup>m</sup> Aucher "inferius" (possibly a misprint for "interius"). The "inferior" or "inner" planets are those whose orbits are nearer the sun than is the earth's.

<sup>n</sup> Arm. p'aylol, lit. "coruscating" = Gr. στίλβων.

<sup>o</sup> Arm. arousek, lit. "dawn-bearer" = Gr. φωσφόρος.

<sup>p</sup> The ancients counted the moon (and sun) among the seven planets.

EXODUS, BOOK II

76. (Ex. xxv. 32 [Heb. 33]) Why are there, on each of the three branches, bowls <sup>a</sup> modelled into the form of nuts and knops and lilies? <sup>b</sup>

At each season of the year the sun completes (its course) through three zodiacal signs,<sup>c</sup> which He has called "mixing-bowls," since three powers,<sup>d</sup> distinct and separate from one another, undergo a unified mixing to make up the time of one year. For example, the spring (consists of) Aries,<sup>e</sup> Taurus,<sup>f</sup> Gemini<sup>g</sup>; and, again, in the summer (we have) Cancer,<sup>h</sup> Leo,<sup>i</sup> Virgo<sup>j</sup>; and in the autumn, Libra,<sup>k</sup> Scorpio,<sup>l</sup> Sagittarius<sup>m</sup>; and in the winter, Capricorn,<sup>n</sup> Aquarius,<sup>o</sup> Pisces.<sup>p</sup> And He likens the form and nature of the zodiacal signs to those of a nut, perhaps because a nut first sends out a bud<sup>q</sup> and afterwards flowers. It seems that (this comparison is made) also because harmonious sounds are set in motion, for I am not unaware that the name of the nut is mentioned in (the festival of) Heralds,<sup>r</sup> for its shell is wont to make a sound of rattling.

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "water-jars," but here = κρατῆρες, see above, QE ii. 74 note h.

<sup>b</sup> lxx καὶ τρεῖς κρατῆρες ἐκτετυπωμένοι καρύσκους (Heb. m<sup>e</sup>šuyqādīm "almond-shaped" [?]) ἐν τῷ καλαμίσκῳ σφαιρωτῆρ καὶ κρίνον (Heb. "flower"): οὕτως τοῖς ἐξ καλαμίσκοις τοῖς ἐκπορευομένοις ἐκ τῆς λυχνίας. <sup>c</sup> ζωδίων.

<sup>d</sup> δυνάμεις: Aucher "virtutes."

<sup>e</sup> Arm. woy "ram." <sup>f</sup> Arm. çoul "bull."

<sup>g</sup> Arm. erkaworeakk' "twins."

<sup>h</sup> Arm. wexgeti "crab."

<sup>i</sup> Arm. ariuc "lion."

<sup>j</sup> Arm. koyš "virgin."

<sup>k</sup> Arm. louc "yoke."

<sup>l</sup> Arm. karič "scorpion."

<sup>m</sup> Arm. alełnawor "archer."

<sup>n</sup> Arm. ayceljiurn "goat-horn."

<sup>o</sup> Arm. jrhos "water-pourer."

<sup>p</sup> Arm. zkounk' "fishes."

<sup>q</sup> βλαστόν.

<sup>r</sup> Since no such festival seems to be known, one may suppose that the Arm. translator mistook Καρνατείας for a noun derived from κηρύττειν "to herald," and that Philo actually

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

And (the bowls) are modelled in the form of spheres,<sup>a</sup> since whatever is in heaven is wholly spherical, being given a perfect form just as is the world.<sup>b</sup> And the lily (is mentioned), perhaps because of its whiteness—since it is luminous,<sup>c</sup> and the stars, moreover, are brilliant—perhaps also because there are radiant axes around a lily<sup>d</sup>—since each of the stars gives off radiance. The statement<sup>e</sup> also contains a description of character.<sup>f</sup> The lily has a certain contrariety to other flowers, for (of these) some send out buds in winter, and (some) in spring, but the lily (buds) with the coming of summer, when other (flowers) wither. And (it is) a symbol<sup>g</sup> of the distinction between the human and the divine, and between profane or polluted and holy sacrifices, and between the imperfect and the perfect. For (other flowers) blossom when they are irrigated by streams of water, but the lily (blossoms) with the dog-star and after the dog-star, when the sun is flaming-hot. Wherefore some prophet says that the contemplative nation<sup>h</sup> shall blossom like the lily,<sup>i</sup> indicating<sup>j</sup> that it does not enjoy referred to the festival of Artemis Karyatis, celebrated at Karyai on the border of Arcadia and Laconia, where Artemis was associated with a nut-tree, cf. Lactantius on Statius, Theb. iv. 225 (cited by M. P. Nilsson, Griechische Feste von religiöser Bedeutung, Leipzig, 1906, p. 196).

<sup>a</sup> LXX σφαιρωτήρες (A.V. "knops").

<sup>b</sup> ὁ κόσμος.

<sup>c</sup> φωτειδές.

<sup>d</sup> Or "they are circling axes of lily-like radiance": Aucher "propter axes splendoris instar lilium circumdantes."

<sup>e</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>f</sup> ἠθοποιῖαν.

<sup>g</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>h</sup> τὸ ὀρατικὸν (or θεωρητικὸν) γένος, i.e. Israel, so referred to in several other passages of Philo.

<sup>i</sup> Hosea xiv. 5, LXX ἔσομαι ὡς δρόσος τῷ Ἰσραὴλ, ἀνθήσει ὡς κρίνον καὶ βαλεῖ τὰς ρίζας αὐτοῦ ὡς ὁ λίβανος. Philo quotes from Hosea three times, from Isaiah four times, from Jeremiah three times, from Ezekiel twice, from Zechariah once, and in only one passage does he refer to the prophet (Jeremiah) by name.

<sup>j</sup> αἰνιττόμενος.

EXODUS, BOOK II

prosperity at the same time (as other nations) but that at the time when others have passed their prime, (Israel) begins (to flower) without the things it ought to have as inducements,<sup>a</sup> for its flowering without water, when the sun is flaming, is not to be compared with what is usual.<sup>b</sup>

77. (Ex. xxv. 33-36 [Heb. 34-36]) Why are there four (mixing-)bowls on the lampstand? <sup>c</sup>

Each branch constitutes <sup>d</sup> one season of the year through three zodiacal signs,<sup>e</sup> as has been said,<sup>f</sup> while the lampstand (represents) the seasons of the year, which are four. Now these undergo a certain mixing to produce a year, for a year is nothing else than the completion of four seasons, of which it is mixed and consists. For the nature <sup>g</sup> of the seasons is not unmixed and inharmonious but has a harmony of mixture and a community <sup>h</sup> of interchanging (elements). For the completion of the preceding (season) happens to be the beginning of that which follows it.

78. (Ex. xxv. 37a) Why are there seven lamps on the lampstand? <sup>i</sup>

It is clear to all that the seven lamps are symbols <sup>j</sup> of

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "without convenient things and persuasions"; Aucher "sine convenientibus expectatisque mediis."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher, in a footnote, renders, "sive, praeter opinionem est, vel, vix credi potest."

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ ἐν τῇ λυχνίᾳ τέσσαρες κρατῆρες ἐκτετυπωμένοι καρυσκοῦς . . . καὶ ἐν τῇ λυχνίᾳ τέσσαρες κρατῆρες ἐκτετυπωμένοι καρυσκοῦς (sic: many LXX mss. and Heb. omit the repeated half-verse). These four "bowls" (i.e. ornaments shaped like almond-blossoms) were distinct from the "bowls" placed at the ends of the six branches and on top of the central shaft to hold the lamps.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "completes": Aucher "perficit."

<sup>e</sup> ζῳδίων.

<sup>f</sup> In QE ii. 76.

<sup>g</sup> ἡ φύσις.

<sup>h</sup> κοινωνίαν.

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις τοὺς λύχνους αὐτῆς ἑπτὰ.

<sup>j</sup> σύμβολα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

the planets, for the holy hebdomad belongs to those things reckoned as divine.<sup>a</sup> And the movement and revolution of these through the zodiacal signs<sup>b</sup> are the causes, for sublunary beings,<sup>c</sup> of all those things which are wont to take place in the embrace of concord,<sup>d</sup> in the air, in the water, on the earth and in all mixtures<sup>e</sup> from animals to plants.<sup>f</sup>

79. (Ex. xxv. 37b) Why does He say that the lampstand shall give light "from one side"<sup>g</sup>?

The planets do not travel around all parts and sides of the celestial sphere but only in one part, in the south, for their motion is, as it were, near our zone,<sup>h</sup> whence the

<sup>a</sup> Text slightly emended: Aucher "septenario numero in connumerationem cum divinorum sacro calculo conscriptorum." For the thought cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 225 ἐπίγειον οὖν βουλευθεὶς ἀρχετύπου τῆς κατ' οὐρανὸν σφαίρας ἑπταφειγγοῦς μίμημα παρ' ἡμῖν ὁ τεχνίτης γενέσθαι πάγκαλον ἔργον προσέταξε τὴν λυχνίαν δημιουργηθῆναι, but in the latter passage Philo also makes the lampstand a symbol of the soul.

<sup>b</sup> ζωδίων.

<sup>c</sup> τοῖς μετὰ σελήνην.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "causa . . . conciliandi in osculum concordiae."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "temperamentis."

<sup>f</sup> Text slightly emended, reading minç (= ἕως) instead of mišt (= ἀεί): Aucher "animalium plantarumque semper."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "ex una regione": LXX καὶ ἐπιθήσεις τοὺς λύχνους (v.l. adds αὐτῆς), καὶ φανοῦσιν ἐκ τοῦ ἐνὸς προσώπου (v.l. adds αὐτῆς): Heb. "and thou shalt make its lamps seven, and they shall put up its lamps and cause it to give light over against its face." Philo understands the last obscure phrase to mean that the lampstand was to be placed in one part (the south) of the tabernacle, see next note.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher notes that his text represents a conflation of the two mss. in this sentence, but he does not give their separate readings. For the thought cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 102 τὴν δὲ λυχνίαν ἐν τοῖς νοτίοις, δι' ἧς αἰνίττεται τὰς τῶν φωσφόρων κινήσεις ἀστέρων· ἥλιος γὰρ καὶ σελήνη καὶ οἱ ἄλλοι πολὺ τῶν βορείων ἀφροστῶτες νοτίους ποιοῦνται τὰς περιπολήσεις.

EXODUS, BOOK II

shadow <sup>a</sup> falls not on the southern but on the northern side. For this reason He has said not ineptly that the lampstand shall give light from one part, indicating (thereby) that the revolution of the planets is in the southern regions.

80. (Ex. xxv. 38) What are the "uplifters" <sup>b</sup> of the lampstand, and the "bases" <sup>c</sup> ?

The "uplifters" are so named from "lifting up," <sup>d</sup> for the oil, which kindles the light, is lifted upon the lamps, <sup>e</sup> while to the light-bearing stars all their light happens to be brought from the celestial sphere. <sup>f</sup> For just as whatever is luminous in the eyes is irrigated <sup>g</sup> by the soul, for souls are most luminous, so is the radiance of light in the stars wont to receive its illumination from the most pure ether. <sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Cast by the noon-day sun in the northern hemisphere.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "tegmina": Arm. verarkouk' usu. = ἀναβολαί, περιβόλαια and the like: LXX ἐπαρυστήρα "vessels for pouring (oil)": Old Lat. "suffusorium": Heb. malqāhēhā "its snuffers" (A.V. "tongs"): Arm. O.T. bazamkakals = ἐπαρυστήρας. Apparently Philo read ἐπαρυστήρα and fancifully took it to be connected with ἐπαίρειν "to lift up" as well as ἐπαρύειν "to draw a liquid from above." It should be noted, moreover, that in the papyri ἀρυστήρ means "dipping-pail" or the like, such as was used in irrigation-machines, cf. Claire Préaux in Chronique d'Égypte, xxv. (1950), p. 352.

<sup>c</sup> LXX τὰ ὑποθέματα: Heb. mahtôtēhā "its coal-pans" (A.V. "snuff dishes"): Arm. O.T. neçouks = τὰ ὑποθέματα.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders freely, "Tegmina seu Anabola nomen sortita sunt ab ἀναβάλλειν, supermittere."

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "eoquod sicut lucernis ad lumen excitandum oleum supermittitur."

<sup>f</sup> See above, QE ii. 78, on the cosmic symbolism of the lamps.

<sup>g</sup> ἄρδεται (with a play on ἐπαρύειν), cf. Leg. All. i. 28 πηγῆς δὲ τρόπον ἄρδει τὰς αἰσθήσεις ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>h</sup> ἐκ τοῦ καθαρωτάτου αἰθέρος.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

81. (Ex. xxv. 39) Why did He assign to the lampstand the weight of "a talent of pure gold" <sup>a</sup>?

The ark, the table and the censers He described by giving their dimensions but in the case of the lampstand He does not mention the dimensions but indicates the weight, <sup>b</sup> for the reason that, as I said a little while ago, <sup>c</sup> it is a symbol <sup>d</sup> of the whole heaven. Now heaven, (being) a sphere, <sup>e</sup> is unprovided with work-tools and unequal measures, <sup>f</sup> being adapted to the rule of equality <sup>g</sup> in accordance with its figure and the rest of its nature. <sup>h</sup> But it does have weight, since everything ponderable is after it. <sup>i</sup> For nothing sublunary <sup>j</sup> (stands) by itself, but everything small or large is wont to be elastic, <sup>k</sup> as if (affected) by the wonderful artificer, the invisible Logos in heaven. <sup>l</sup> And the talent

<sup>a</sup> LXX πάντα τὰ σκεύη ταῦτα τάλαντον (Heb. kikkār) χρυσοῦ καθαροῦ.

<sup>b</sup> τὴν ὀγκήν.

<sup>c</sup> In QE ii. 73-80.

<sup>d</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>e</sup> σφαίρα.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. lit. = ὀργανικῶν σκευῶν καὶ ἀνίσων μέτρων ἀμέτρος ἐστὶ but is apparently a misunderstanding of the Greek. The original may have been ὀργάνων καὶ ἀνισοτήτων, as Prof. I. A. Post suggests, citing Plato, Tim. 33.

<sup>g</sup> ἰσότητος κανόνι, as in De Aeternitate Mundi 108.

<sup>h</sup> κατὰ τὸ σχῆμα καὶ κατὰ τὴν ἄλλην φύσιν vel sim.: Aucher "secundum figuram et diversam naturam."

<sup>i</sup> Apparently this means that the weight of objects on earth is determined by the weight of heaven.

<sup>j</sup> μετὰ σελήνην.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "sinew-stretching"—νευροτενές. Prof. Post thinks that this refers to the commutation of the four elements, as in Stoic doctrine; he cites Dio Chrysostom, Or. xxxvi. 50-53.

<sup>l</sup> Syntax and meaning not clear: Aucher "sed omne quidquam pusillum ac magnum, tamquam ab admirabili artifice secundum caeli rationem invisibilem, vigorem praeferre consuevit." The Arm. glossator, cited in Aucher's footnote, paraphrases, "sicut oculorum delusores mira quaedam apparentia figurant, sic et luminaria invisibiliter demutant elementa mundi: nec non Verbum divinum prae manibus gerens universum, sicut auriga habenas."

EXODUS, BOOK II

is likened to unity (because) the heaven is one and is not like anything else in its shape or powers.<sup>a</sup> For the four elements<sup>b</sup> have a kinship<sup>c</sup> to one another both in substance and in their movement<sup>d</sup>—in substance when they are transformed into one another, and in their movement in that fire and air are confined to a rectilinear motion upwards from the centre, while water and earth (move) downwards from the centre.<sup>e</sup> But heaven moves not in a straight line but in a circle, having a figure that is equal on all sides and most perfect. May it not be, then, since the parts of the earth, according to those who study astrology,<sup>f</sup> are said to measure sixty,<sup>g</sup> that He appointed the talent (to be) its form, for the talent consists of sixty minas?

32. (Ex. xxv. 40) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt make (them) according to the pattern which has been shown to thee on the mountain"<sup>h</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> δυνάμεις: Aucher "vires."

<sup>b</sup> στοιχεῖα.

<sup>c</sup> συγγένειαν or possibly οἰκείωσιν, cf. F. C. Robbins in Loeb Ptolemy, Tetrabiblos, p. 65 n. 3.

<sup>d</sup> καὶ κατ' οὐσίαν καὶ κατὰ περιφορὰν (?).

<sup>e</sup> Arm. kēt = both κέντρον and στιγμή: Aucher "centro," adding in a footnote, "proprie punctum sonat." For the upward movement of the two lighter elements and the downward movement of the two heavier elements (ἡ ὁδὸς ἄνω and ἡ ὁδὸς κάτω) see, among other passages in Philo, De Aeternitate Mundi 110.

<sup>f</sup> κατὰ τοὺς τῆ μαθηματικῆ σχολάζοντας, here meaning philosophical astronomers like Plato in the Timaeus.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. QG iv. 164, where, however, Philo speaks of the sixty parts of the cosmos rather than of the earth.

<sup>h</sup> LXX ὅρα ποιήσεις (v.l. + πάντα) κατὰ τὸν τύπον (Heb. "their form") τὸν δεδειγμένον (Heb. "which thou art shown") ἐν τῷ ὄρει. The verse is quoted in Leg. All. iii. 102 in slightly different wording κατὰ τὸ παράδειγμα τὸ δεδειγμένον σοι ἐν τῷ ὄρει πάντα ποιήσεις. There Philo quotes it to show that Moses was the artificer of the archetypes, while Bezaleel was the artificer of the objects made in accordance with these.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Through the "pattern" He again indicates <sup>a</sup> the incorporeal heaven, the archetype of the sense-perceptible,<sup>b</sup> for it <sup>c</sup> is a visible pattern and impression <sup>d</sup> and measure. He testifies to these things by saying "See," <sup>e</sup> (thereby) admonishing (us) to keep the vision of the soul sleepless<sup>f</sup> and ever wakeful in order to see incorporeal forms,<sup>g</sup> since, if it were (merely a question of) seeing the sense-perceptible with the eyes of the body, it is clear that no (divine) command would be needed for this.

83. (Ex. xxvi. 1a) What is the tabernacle? <sup>h</sup>

Having first of all alluded to the incorporeal and intelligible world <sup>i</sup> by means of the ark, and the substance of the sense-perceptible (world) <sup>j</sup> by means of the table, and heaven by means of the lampstand,<sup>k</sup> He begins to represent <sup>l</sup> in order those things which are sublunary,<sup>m</sup> (namely) air, water, fire and earth, making the tabernacle represent their nature and substance. For the tabernacle

<sup>a</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>b</sup> τὸν ἀσώματον οὐρανόν, ἀρχέτυπον τοῦ αἰσθητοῦ.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. heaven.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. seal-impression—σφραγίς: Aucher "signum."

<sup>e</sup> It is not necessary to suppose that the word "see" has accidentally been omitted from the lemma of this section, since Philo occasionally takes it for granted that his readers will be able to supply for themselves words omitted from the verses he quotes.

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis i. 289 τοῖς τῆς ψυχῆς ἀκοιμήτοις ὄμμασι.

<sup>g</sup> εἶδη or ἰδέας: Aucher "species."

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ τὴν σκητὴν ποιήσεις κτλ. Philo refers to the cosmic symbolism of the tabernacle in De Congressu 116-117, cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 74-88. In several other passages, e.g. Leg. All. iii. 46 and Quis Rer. Div. Heres 112, he makes the tabernacle a symbol of wisdom or virtue.

<sup>i</sup> αἰνιζόμενος πρῶτον τὸν ἀσώματον καὶ νοητὸν κόσμον.

<sup>j</sup> τὴν τοῦ αἰσθητοῦ οὐσίαν.

<sup>k</sup> See QE ii. 53-81 on Ex. xxv. 9-40.

<sup>l</sup> ἀπεικονίζεσθαι vel sim.: Aucher "describere." The same verb, ἠμανερούσανελ, is used at the end of the sentence.

<sup>m</sup> τὰ μετὰ σελήνην.

EXODUS, BOOK II

is a portable temple <sup>a</sup> of God and not a stationary or fixed one. And (similarly) those things which are below heaven <sup>b</sup> are mutable and changeable, while heaven alone is unchangeable and self-consistent <sup>c</sup> and similar to itself. But this statement <sup>d</sup> also reveals a certain delineation of character. <sup>e</sup> Since they were passing through a wilderness where there were no courts <sup>f</sup> or houses but (only) tabernacles, <sup>g</sup> which were made for necessary purposes (such as) giving the help of warmth against the cold, he <sup>h</sup> thought it right that there should be a most holy temple to the Father and Creator of all things. Moreover, he showed that the divine name, which is in need of nothing, <sup>i</sup> dwelt together, so far as one might believe, with those who were in need of a tabernacle, to receive piety and worthy holiness. <sup>j</sup> Now, as for those who saw the structure of the divine tabernacle likened to their own dwelling, <sup>k</sup> what would they have been likely to do <sup>l</sup> other than to bow down in return for what was done <sup>m</sup> and bless the Overseer and

<sup>a</sup> φορητὸν ἱερόν, as it is called in De Vita Mosis ii. 73.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "behind heaven"—τὰ μετ' (instead of ὑπ') οὐρανόν, apparently on the analogy of τὰ μετὰ σελήνην.

<sup>c</sup> καθ' ἑαυτόν: Aucher "stante per se."

<sup>d</sup> λόγος. <sup>e</sup> ἤθοποιῶν τινά.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher "porticus." The same Arm. word (srah) is used to render LXX ἀνλαίας "curtains" in the next section. Here it prob. renders ἀνλαί, cf. De Congressu 116.

<sup>g</sup> σκηναί.

<sup>h</sup> Presumably Moses.

<sup>i</sup> ἀπροσδεές.

<sup>j</sup> The syntax is uncertain, and the sense is obscure. More intelligible is the corresponding passage in De Vita Mosis ii. 73 (Colson's translation), "But, as they were still wandering in the desert and had as yet no settled habitation, it suited them to have a portable sanctuary, so that during their journeys and encampments they might bring their sacrifices to it and perform all their other religious duties, not lacking anything which dwellers in cities should have."

<sup>k</sup> Variant "nature."

<sup>l</sup> τί ἔμελλον πράττειν vel sim.

<sup>m</sup> The meaning of the prepositional phrase is not clear: Aucher renders freely, "pro viribus suis (vel, propter similitudinem visam)."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Guardian and Curator of His power? <sup>a</sup> And familiar <sup>b</sup> to God is His power, O ministers! <sup>c</sup>

84. (Ex. xxvi. 1b) Why does the tabernacle have 10 <sup>d</sup> curtains? <sup>e</sup>

Many a time has much been said about the number ten in other places,<sup>f</sup> which for those who wish to prolong the discussion it would be easy to transfer here. But brevity of speech is liked by us, and it is timely and sufficient that whatever has been said be remembered.<sup>g</sup>

*85. (Ex. xxvi. 1c) Why are the curtains (made) of woven linen and of hyacinth and of purple and of woven scarlet? <sup>h</sup>

What is spoken about is the workmanship of the (materials) woven together, which are four in number and are symbols of the four elements,<sup>i</sup> earth, water, air and fire, of which sublunary things<sup>j</sup> are made, while the

<sup>a</sup> τὸν ἔφορον καὶ ἐπίτροπον καὶ ἐπιμελητὴν αὐτοῦ δυνάμεως vel sim.

<sup>b</sup> Or "peculiar," as Prof. Post suggests.

<sup>c</sup> Or "worshippers."

<sup>d</sup> Written as a numeral letter.

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ τὴν σκηνὴν ποιήσεις δέκα αὐλαίας κτλ. Philo comments on the ten curtains as symbols of the perfect number in De Congressu 116 and De Vita Mosis ii. 84.

<sup>f</sup> For various passages on the decad in Philo's writings (including the Quaestiones) see Staehle, pp. 53-58.

<sup>g</sup> The exact sense of the clause is not clear. Aucher renders more smoothly but more freely, "et quod olim dictum fuit, satis juvat ad memoriam."

<sup>h</sup> LXX ἐκ βύσσου κεκλωσμένης καὶ ὑακίνθου καὶ πορφύρας καὶ κοκκίου κεκλωσμένου. The interpretation of the four colours (linen being equated with white by Philo) is also found in De Congressu 116-117 and De Vita Mosis ii. 84-88. There is also a brief paraphrase of this passage in Theodoret's Quaestiones in Exodum (Migne, 248 D).

<sup>i</sup> Cf. De Congressu 117 ἃ τῶν τεττάρων στοιχείων σύμβολά ἐστιν. <sup>j</sup> τὰ ὑπὸ σελήνην.

EXODUS, BOOK II

celestial sphere <sup>a</sup> (is made) of a special substance, <sup>b</sup> of the very most excellent things which have been brought together. <sup>c</sup> For (Scripture) indicates <sup>d</sup> the earth by "linen," for linen <sup>e</sup> is earthly and from the earth; and water by "purple," since water is the producer of this <sup>f</sup>; and air by "hyacinth," for the air is black <sup>g</sup> and has no illumination in itself, wherefore it is illuminated by another light <sup>h</sup>; and fire by "scarlet," for its colour is fiery. <sup>i</sup> And so he <sup>j</sup> thought it right that the divine temple of the Creator of all things should be woven <sup>k</sup> of such and so many things as the world was made of, (being) the universal temple <sup>l</sup> which (existed) before the holy temple. <sup>m</sup>

86. (Ex. xxvi. 1d, 3) Why does He say in addition, "Work of weaving thou shalt make the curtains which are woven together with one another" <sup>n</sup> ?

<sup>a</sup> τῆς κατ' οὐρανὸν σφαίρας.

<sup>b</sup> ἐξ ἐξαιρέτου οὐσίας: Aucher "ex separata substantia."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders less literally, "optimisque rebus constante" (for "constantibus").

<sup>d</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>e</sup> Here the Arm. renders βύσσος by vouš, whereas elsewhere in this section he uses the word behez.

<sup>f</sup> Philo explains this more fully in De Congressu 117 τὸ γὰρ τῆς βαφῆς αἴτιον ἐκ θαλάττης, ἢ ὀμωννουμῶσα κόγχη (prob. the murex).

<sup>g</sup> So De Congressu 117 and De Vita Mosis ii. 88 μέλας γὰρ οὗτος φύσει. By "black" Philo means "dark blue."

<sup>h</sup> This further explanation is omitted in the parallels.

<sup>i</sup> πυροειδῆς vel sim., cf. De Congressu 117 ἐμφερέστατον γὰρ φλογί: De Vita Mosis ii. 88 διότι φοινικοῦν ("bright red," not "purple") ἐκάτερον.

<sup>j</sup> Moses.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. constructed.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ πανίερον.

<sup>m</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 88 ἦν γὰρ ἀναγκαῖον ἱερόν χειροποίητον κατασκευάζοντας τῷ πατρὶ καὶ ἡγεμόνι τοῦ παντός τὰς ὁμοίας λαβεῖν οὐσίας αἷς τὸ ὄλον ἐδημιούργει.

<sup>n</sup> Philo here combines the last clause of vs. 1 and vs. 3, and paraphrases: LXX χερουβείμ ἐργασία ὑφάντου ποιήσεις αὐτὰς (sc. τὰς αὐλαίας) . . . πέντε δὲ αὐλαῖαι ἔσονται ἐξ ἀλλήλων ἐχόμεναι ἢ ἑτέρα ἐκ τῆς ἑτέρας καὶ πέντε αὐλαῖαι ἔσονται συνεχόμεναι ἑτέρα τῇ ἑτέρα.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

It <sup>a</sup> has such a nature as to be perfected <sup>b</sup> (as) one out of many. Such too is the substance of the world,<sup>c</sup> for it was mixed of the four elements,<sup>d</sup> and these were, after a fashion,<sup>e</sup> woven together <sup>f</sup> with one another to produce one completely worked texture.<sup>g</sup>

87. (Ex. xxvi. 2) Why was the length of (each) curtain 28 <sup>h</sup> cubits, and the breadth 4 (cubits)? <sup>i</sup>

The doctrine <sup>j</sup> of the number four is divine and holy and most apt (and) has been allotted the proper praise pertaining to numbers.<sup>k</sup> But at the present time the natural virtue <sup>l</sup> of the number 28 must be set down. Now it is the first perfect number equal to its parts,<sup>m</sup> and it has the matter of its substance from three,<sup>n</sup> and especially for this

<sup>a</sup> i.e. the tabernacle, see QE ii. 88.

<sup>b</sup> τελειοῦσθαι. <sup>c</sup> ἡ τοῦ κόσμου οὐσία.

<sup>d</sup> ἐκ τῶν τεττάρων στοιχείων.

<sup>e</sup> τρόπον τινά.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher "contextus est," apparently taking "world" to be the implied subject of the verb instead of "elements" as the context demands (neut. pl. subj. with sing. verb).

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. = πρὸς ἑνὸς ὑφάσματος τελειουργουμένου γένεσιν vel sim. : Aucher "ad unius staminis perfecti productionem."

<sup>h</sup> This and the following numbers, unless they are otherwise rendered, are numeral letters in the Arm. text.

<sup>i</sup> LXX μῆκος τῆς ἀυλαίας τῆς μιᾶς ὀκτῶ καὶ εἴκοσι πῆχεων, καὶ εὖρος τεσσαρῶν πῆχεων ἡ ἀυλαία ἡ μία ἔσται μέτρον τὸ αὐτὸ ἔσται πάσαις ταῖς ἀυλαίαις. There are parallels to this section in De Vita Mosis ii. 84 and De Spec. Leg. ii. 40, cf. De Opif. Mundi 101. <sup>j</sup> ὁ λόγος.

<sup>k</sup> The meaning is not wholly clear: Aucher "eoquod numerorum condignam benedictionem sortitus fuerit," adding in a footnote "vel, in sermone nostro de numeris laudem propriam."

<sup>l</sup> ἡ φυσικὴ ἀρετὴ, i.e. the philosophical force.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. equal to the sum of its factors,  $1 + 2 + 4 + 7 + 14 = 28$ ; cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 84 τὸν ὀκτῶ καὶ εἴκοσιν ἀριθμὸν τέλειον ἴσον τοῖς ἑαυτοῦ μέρεσι.

<sup>n</sup> Possibly this means that 28 is a cubic number,  $1 \times 4 \times 7$  or  $2 \times 2 \times 7$ .

EXODUS, BOOK II

reason is it concordant with the first six,<sup>a</sup> for six is the first (digit) equal to its parts.<sup>b</sup> Accordingly, this number has one good (quality). And it has still another essence<sup>c</sup> through the number seven, since it is composed of units which go singly from one to seven, as follows : 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, 6, 7, making 28. And the third (property) is that it multiplies the number seven, being four times seven or seven times four. Now the number four is also related in species<sup>d</sup> to the number seven, and there is nothing more perfect.<sup>e</sup> By these numbers the theologian<sup>f</sup> says the tabernacle was erected, making the length of the ten curtains twenty-eight cubits (each) and the total two hundred and eighty, while the (total) breadth was forty.<sup>g</sup> And the power<sup>h</sup> which the number forty brings to living beings<sup>i</sup> has already been spoken of.<sup>j</sup> As for the number two hundred and eighty, it is forty multiplied by seven, and the number seven is dedicated to God.

88. (Ex. xxvi. 6) Why does He say, " And the tabernacle shall be one " ?<sup>k</sup>

Someone may say, " But, Master Theologian,<sup>l</sup> who does not know that many are not one, especially since you<sup>m</sup> have already said,<sup>n</sup> ' The tabernacle shall be made of ten curtains ' but not ' the tabernacles ' ? " May it not be, therefore, that the tabernacle's being " one " is a firmer

<sup>a</sup> i.e. the digit six.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. to the sum of its factors,  $1 + 2 + 3 = 6$ .

<sup>c</sup> οὐσίαν, possibly a corruption of φύσιν.

<sup>d</sup> συγγενῆς εἶδει.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. than the number seven.

<sup>f</sup> ὁ θεολόγος, i.e. Moses.

<sup>g</sup> Each of the ten curtains being four cubits broad.

<sup>h</sup> ἡ δύναμις.

<sup>i</sup> τοῖς οὐσι.

<sup>j</sup> In QG iv. 154.

<sup>k</sup> LXX (end of verse) καὶ ἔσται ἡ σκηνὴ μία.

<sup>l</sup> ὦ κύριε ὁ θεολόγος, i.e. Moses.

<sup>m</sup> Speaking in God's name.

<sup>n</sup> See QE ii. 84 on Ex. xxvi. 1.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

seal indicating <sup>a</sup> the unities of sublunary things? <sup>b</sup> For even though earth is distinct from water, and water from air, and air from fire, and fire from each of these, nevertheless all are adapted to one determined form.<sup>c</sup> For it is natural that the matter <sup>d</sup> which was perfected out of so many things should be one, especially since the interchange of the elements <sup>e</sup> with one another clearly demonstrates their common nature.<sup>f</sup>

89.<sup>g</sup> (Ex. xxvi. 28) What is the meaning of the words, "The middle bar between the pillars shall reach from one side to the other side" <sup>h</sup>?

Above this straight line of the single walls there is a bar between the twenty pillars to take firmer hold of their joining.<sup>i</sup> For by "the bar" He indicates <sup>j</sup> the Logos <sup>k</sup> ascribed to necessity,<sup>l</sup> which in heaven above tends toward

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. = σφραγὶς βεβαιότερα αἰνιττομένη vel sim., meaning "confirms the impression given by (earlier) indications" or the like.

<sup>b</sup> τῶν ὑπὸ σελήνην.

<sup>c</sup> εἰς ἐν ὠρισμένον εἶδος.

<sup>d</sup> τὴν ὕλην.

<sup>e</sup> τῶν στοιχείων.

<sup>f</sup> τὴν κοινωνίαν : Aucher "communioneum."

<sup>g</sup> Ex. xxvi. 7-27, on which Philo does not comment here, describes the covering and framework of the Tabernacle.

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ ὁ μοχλὸς ὁ μέσος ἀνὰ μέσον τῶν στύλων (Heb. "frame" : A.V. "boards") διῦκνείσθω ἀπὸ τοῦ ἐνὸς κλίτους εἰς τὸ ἕτερον κλίτος. Philo seems to allude to this verse in De Vita Mosis ii. 77-79.

<sup>i</sup> The syntax and meaning are uncertain, but cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 78 "for the length (of the tabernacle) the craftsman set up forty pillars, half of them, twenty, on each side, leaving no interval between, but fitting and joining each to the next in order that it might present the appearance of a single wall."

<sup>j</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>k</sup> Aucher "rationem." Arm. ban here prob. means the cosmic Logos rather than the individual reason, cf. QE ii. 90.

<sup>l</sup> So Aucher, "necessitati adscriptam" (the margins of the Arm. mss. have "Fate" for "necessity"), but the meaning escapes me.

EXODUS, BOOK II

heavenly things. For by these <sup>a</sup> everything is held together as by an indissoluble bond.

90.<sup>b</sup> (Ex. xxvi. 30) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt erect <sup>c</sup> the tabernacle according to the pattern shown to thee on the mountain" <sup>d</sup> ?

Again He indicates <sup>e</sup> the paradigmatic essences of the ideas <sup>f</sup> by saying "according to the appearance <sup>g</sup> which was shown to thee on the mountain." But the prophet <sup>h</sup> did not see any corporeal thing there but all incorporeals.<sup>i</sup> And it is said that the tabernacle is to be erected directly before (their) faces,<sup>j</sup> for sublunary things <sup>k</sup> have been granted a lower place <sup>l</sup> but are again raised above and elevated and established and set up upon the divine Logos,<sup>m</sup> for the divine Logoi <sup>n</sup> are the foundations and bars <sup>o</sup> of the security <sup>p</sup> of all things. Do you not see that earth and

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "per istam (i.e. rationem)," but the pron. is plural.

<sup>b</sup> A similarly framed question is asked in QE ii. 82 on Ex. xxv. 40.

<sup>c</sup> Reading yarousces with Codd. A, C : marginal variant arasces "thou shalt make."

<sup>d</sup> LXX καὶ ἀναστήσεις τὴν σκηνὴν κατὰ τὸ εἶδος τὸ δεδειγμένον σοι (Heb. "which thou wast shown") ἐν τῷ ὄρει.

<sup>e</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>f</sup> τὰς παραδειγματικὰς οὐσίας τὰς τῶν ἰδεῶν vel sim. : Aucher "indicativas essentias specierum."

<sup>g</sup> Arm. tesil = εἶδος, ἰδέα, ὄψις, etc. : Aucher "visionem." Note that in the Question a different word (orinak) is used.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ προφήτης, i.e. Moses.

<sup>i</sup> πάντα ἀσώματα.

<sup>j</sup> κατέναντι ἐκ προσώπου vel sim. : Aucher "directe . . . in conspectu."

<sup>k</sup> τὰ ὑπὸ σελήνην.

<sup>l</sup> Lit. "part."

<sup>m</sup> Aucher, construing slightly differently, renders, "elevata fundataque super divinum verbum erectum."

<sup>n</sup> Or "words" : Aucher "verba."

<sup>o</sup> μοχλοί, cf. QE ii. 89.

<sup>p</sup> Aucher "constantiae."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

water, inasmuch as they are in the midst of all air and fire, with the heaven surrounding (them), are not firmly fixed by anything at all other than their holding to each other, as the divine Logos binds them with all-wise art and most perfect adaptation? <sup>a</sup>

91. (Ex. xxvi. 31a) What is "the veil" <sup>b</sup>?

By the veil the inside (of the tabernacle) is set off and separated from the things outside, for the inside is holy and truly divine,<sup>c</sup> while the outside, though it is also holy, does not attain the same nature or a similar one. Moreover, it indicates <sup>d</sup> the changeable parts of the world which are sublunary <sup>e</sup> and undergo changes of direction,<sup>f</sup> and the heavenly (region) which is without transient events <sup>g</sup> and is unchanging. And (it shows) how they are set off and separated from one another, for the ethereal and airy substance is, as it were, a covering.<sup>h</sup>

92. (Ex. xxvi. 31b) Why does He command that the veil be made "of hyacinth and of purple and of scarlet and of woven linen" <sup>i</sup>?

<sup>a</sup> συνδέοντος αὐτὰ τοῦ θείου λόγου πανσόφω τέχνη καὶ τελειοτάτῃ ἁρμονία vel sim. For the thought see Wolfson, Philo, i. p. 338.

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις καταπέτασμα.

<sup>c</sup> ὄντως θεῖον.

<sup>d</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>e</sup> ὑπὸ σελήνην.

<sup>f</sup> Lit. "turnings"—στροφάς or τροπάς: Aucher "variationem."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "caret casu."

<sup>h</sup> ὑπὸ τῆς αἰθερίας καὶ ἀερίας οὐσίας ὡς καλύμματος vel sim.: Aucher "mediante aetherea aereaque essentia." While Arm. aragast can mean "partition" or the like as well as "covering," the latter seems to be indicated by the partial parallel in De Vita Mosi ii. 101 πρόναον εἰργόμενον δυσὶν ὑφάσμασι, τῷ μὲν ἔνδον ὃ καλεῖται καταπέτασμα, τῷ δ' ἔκτος ὃ προσαγορεύεται κάλυμμα.

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις καταπέτασμα ἐξ ὑακίνθου καὶ πορφύρας καὶ κοκκίνου κεκλωσμένου καὶ βύσσου νενησμένης· ἔργον ὑφαντὸν ποιήσεις αὐτὸ χερουβείμ. Here, as in QE ii. 85 on Ex. xxvi. 1, Philo omits any reference to the woven designs of cherubim.

EXODUS, BOOK II

Just as He commands the ten curtains of the tabernacle to be woven of four mixtures, so also (He commands) the veil (to be made). For the curtains are veils in a certain sense,<sup>a</sup> (although they are) not above the entrance but throughout the whole tabernacle. And these, as I have said,<sup>b</sup> are tokens and symbols <sup>c</sup> of the four elements.<sup>d</sup>

93. (Ex. xxvi. 32a) Why does He command the veil to be placed above four pillars at the end of the tabernacle? <sup>e</sup>

The four columns <sup>f</sup> are made solid,<sup>g</sup> but in the tabernacle everything is a symbol of corporeal things,<sup>h</sup> while incorporeal things stand above the tetrad.<sup>i</sup> The point <sup>j</sup> is ordered in accordance with the monad, and the line in accordance with the dyad, and the surface in accordance with the triad, while the solid <sup>k</sup> (is ordered) in accordance

<sup>a</sup> τρόπον τινά or, as in De Vita Mosis ii. 87, σχεδόν.

<sup>b</sup> In QE ii. 85.

<sup>c</sup> The two Arm. words prob. render the single word σύμβολα.

<sup>d</sup> τῶν τεττάρων στοιχείων.

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ ἐπιθήσεις αὐτὸ ἐπὶ τεσσάρων στύλων ἀσήπτων κεχρυσωμένων χρυσίῳ. By "at the end of the tabernacle" Philo means the inner sanctuary at the western end of the tabernacle.

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. translator here uses a different word from that rendered "pillars" in the Question.

<sup>g</sup> Prob. στερεοῦνται, anticipating the reference to the solid (τὸ στερεόν) below: Aucher "firmatae sunt."

<sup>h</sup> σύμβολον σωμάτων.

<sup>i</sup> This may mean that the objects in the inner sanctuary, concealed by the veil over the four columns, are symbols of the heavenly and incorporeal bodies (see the preceding sections) which stand over corporeal and sublunary bodies composed of the four elements.

<sup>j</sup> The Arm. text reads nšanaki "of a symbol" but this word is obviously meaningless here. Either the Arm. translator's eye must have fallen upon the word σύμβολον in the preceding sentence or he must have misread or misinterpreted στίγμα as σημεῖον. Aucher renders, "signum (puncti)."

<sup>k</sup> τὸ στερεόν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

with the tetrad, upon which stands the substance of incorporeal things.<sup>a</sup> Or by solidly drawing the progressions<sup>b</sup> after the intelligible,<sup>c</sup> you will lead to the sense-perceptible form,<sup>d</sup> as<sup>e</sup> all the visible columns of the tabernacle altogether amount to fifty, omitting the two hidden in the corners. And their power is that of a right-angled triangle.<sup>f</sup>

94. (Ex. xxvi. 33b) What is the meaning of the words, "Thou shalt set apart<sup>g</sup> the veil between the Holy of Holies"<sup>h</sup>?

I have said<sup>i</sup> that the simple holy<sup>j</sup> (parts of the tabernacle) are classified with the sense-perceptible heaven,<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ἡ τῶν ἀσωμάτων οὐσία.

<sup>b</sup> ἀναβάσεις (?): Aucher "egressum."

<sup>c</sup> μετὰ τὸ νοητόν.

<sup>d</sup> εἰς τὸ αἰσθητὸν εἶδος. The meaning of the clause escapes me.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "ita ut."

<sup>f</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 79-80, "Thus the whole number of pillars visible in the tabernacle, leaving out the two in the corners hidden from view, amounted to fifty-five. . . . But if you choose to exclude the five in the propylaeum . . . there will be the most sacred number fifty, the square of the sides of the right-angled triangle, the original source from which the universe springs." As Colson notes, " $50 = 3^2 + 4^2 + 5^2$ , and 3, 4, 5 are the sides of the primary form of the right-angled triangle." Cf. also De Spec. Leg. ii. 176.

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "facias dividere," see next note. The Arm. translator seems to have omitted the words "the holy (place) and" after "between," as the present text is obviously defective.

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ διοριεῖ (v.l. διοριεῖς) καταπέτασμα ὑμῖν ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ ἁγίου καὶ ἀνὰ μέσον τοῦ ἁγίου τῶν ἁγίων. Philo briefly alludes to the veil separating (ὅπως διακρίνηται) the Holy of Holies from the "holy place" (the longer chamber of the tabernacle) in De Mut. Nom. 43, 192. The preceding clause in Ex. xxvi. 33 states that the ark is to be placed "within the veil," i.e. in the Holy of Holies. <sup>i</sup> In QE ii. 91.

<sup>j</sup> τὰ ἀπλᾶ ἅγια, i.e. the "holy place," contrasted with the Holy of Holies.

<sup>k</sup> τᾶπτεται κατὰ τὸν αἰσθητὸν οὐρανόν.

EXODUS, BOOK II

whereas the inner (parts), which are called the Holy of Holies, (are classified) with the intelligible world.<sup>a</sup> The incorporeal world is set off and separated from the visible one by the mediating Logos<sup>b</sup> as by a veil. But may it not be that this Logos is the tetrad, through which the corporeal solid<sup>c</sup> comes into being?<sup>d</sup> For this<sup>e</sup> is classified with the invisible intelligible things,<sup>f</sup> while the other (part of the tabernacle)<sup>g</sup> is divided into three<sup>h</sup> and is connected with sense-perceptible things, so that there is between them something (at once) invisible and visible of substance.

95. (Ex. xxvi. 35) Why does He command the table and the lampstand to be placed "outside the veil"?<sup>i</sup>

I have shown earlier<sup>j</sup> that by the table He indicates sense-perceptible substance, and by the lampstand, the sense-perceptible heaven.<sup>k</sup> And they are placed<sup>l</sup> outside the veil because the things in the inner recess<sup>m</sup> are invisible and intelligible,<sup>n</sup> whereas those which are more external are visible and sense-perceptible.

<sup>a</sup> κατὰ τὸν νοητὸν κόσμον.

<sup>b</sup> ὑπὸ τοῦ μεθορίου λόγου, cf. Quis Rer. Div. Heres 205.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ σωματικὸν στερεόν.

<sup>d</sup> See the preceding section.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the Holy of Holies.

<sup>f</sup> τὰ ἀόρατα νοητά.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. the "holy place."

<sup>h</sup> Prob., as the Arm. glossator explains, the table of showbread, the lampstand and the altar of incense.

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ θήσεις τὴν τράπεζαν ἔξωθεν τοῦ καταπετάσματος, καὶ τὴν λυχνίαν ἀπέναντι τῆς τραπέζης ἐπὶ μέρους τῆς σκηνῆς τὸ πρὸς νότον· καὶ τὴν τράπεζαν θήσεις ἐπὶ μέρους τῆς σκηνῆς (Heb. om. "of the tabernacle") τὸ πρὸς βορρᾶν.

<sup>j</sup> In QE ii. 69 and 73.

<sup>k</sup> αἰνίττεται . . . τὴν αἰσθητὴν οὐσίαν καὶ . . . τὸν αἰσθητὸν οὐρανόν.

<sup>l</sup> The Arm. verb is sing.

<sup>m</sup> ἐν τοῖς ἐσωτέροις μυχοῖς vel sim., i.e. in the inner sanctuary or Holy of Holies.

<sup>n</sup> ἀόρατα καὶ νοητά.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

96. (Ex. xxvi. 36) Why does He call the outer (hanging) <sup>a</sup> “ a covering ” and not “ a veil,” as in the case of the inner one ? <sup>b</sup>

Since those things which are within (the sanctuary) incline toward the nature of incorporeal things,<sup>c</sup> which is winged and upward-tending, their substance <sup>d</sup> stands near to God. Now the veil is brought in (as derived) from “ spreading wings.” <sup>e</sup> In the second place, moreover, it has propinquity to the sense-perceptible things outside,<sup>f</sup> and is rightly (called) “ a covering,” for the sense-perceptible hardly ever tends toward flying upward, since it is indeed less winged than incorporeal things, and in the same manner as that which is covered,<sup>g</sup> it has an unclear comprehension.<sup>h</sup> And may (this) not be because every-

<sup>a</sup> i.e. the hanging at the entrance to the sanctuary or “ holy place ” contrasted with the hanging at the entrance to the Holy of Holies. In De Vita Mosis ii. 87 Philo calls the former κάλυμμα, while LXX calls it ἐπίσπαστρον and uses κάλυμμα for the hanging at the entrance to the court of the tabernacle. The Heb., however, uses the same word, māsāk, for the hanging at the entrance to the tabernacle as well as for that at the entrance to the court (Ex. xxvii. 16). The various lists may be seen in this scheme :

1. Hanging at Entrance to Holy of Holies

Heb. pārōket                      LXX καταπέτασμα                      Philo καταπέτασμα

2. Hanging at Entrance to Tabernacle

Heb. māsāk                      LXX ἐπίσπαστρον                      Philo (De Vita Mo- sis) κάλυμμα

3. Hanging at Entrance to Court

Heb. māsāk                      LXX κάλυμμα                      Philo (De Vita Mo- sis) ποικίλον ὕφα- σμα

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις ἐπίσπαστρον (v.l., following Heb., adds τῆ θύρα τῆς σκηνῆς) ἐξ ὑακίνθου κτλ.

<sup>c</sup> πρὸς τὴν φύσιν τῶν ἀσωμάτων.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ οὐσία.

<sup>e</sup> Philo plays on the resemblance between καταπέτασμα and καταπετᾶσθαι vel sim.

<sup>f</sup> τοῖς ἕξωθεν αἰσθητοῖς.

<sup>g</sup> Or “ concealed.”

<sup>h</sup> ἄδηλον κατάληψιν, i.e. it is not clearly apprehended.

EXODUS, BOOK II

thing sense-perceptible is experienced <sup>a</sup> through sense-perception, and sense-perception is unstable and related to false belief, <sup>b</sup> while the intelligible (is related) to reason, <sup>c</sup> and the mind <sup>d</sup> is inerrant and a friend of knowledge? <sup>e</sup>

97. (Ex. xxvi. 37) Why is the "covering" placed upon five columns? <sup>f</sup>

Most excellently and carefully <sup>g</sup> has He assigned the pentad to the second covering <sup>h</sup> since this part (of the tabernacle) looks toward sense-perceptible substance. <sup>i</sup> For the pentad is the number of the senses. <sup>j</sup> But to the former and inner (hanging <sup>k</sup> He has assigned) the tetrad, as I have said, <sup>l</sup> because it touches incorporeal things, <sup>m</sup> and incorporeal things come to an end with the tetrad. <sup>n</sup>

98. (Ex. xxvii. 1a) Why does He call the altar thysias-terion? <sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "receives experience": Aucher "probationem (vel, experimentum) habet." <sup>b</sup> ἀβεβαία καὶ ψευδεῖ δόξῃ συγγενής. <sup>c</sup> λογισμῶ: Aucher "consiliis." <sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς ἢ ἡ διάνοια.

<sup>e</sup> φίλος ἐπιστήμης: Aucher "intelligentiae amantissimus."

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις τῷ καταπέτασματι πέντε στύλους κτλ. The word καταπέτασμα in this verse refers to the same hanging as that called ἐπίσπαστρον in the preceding verse, see the notes to QE ii. 96. In De Vita Mosis ii. 82 Philo refers to the bronze bases of these columns as symbols of the five senses. For other Philonic references to the symbolism of the pentad see Staehle, pp. 31-32. <sup>g</sup> παγκάλως καὶ ἐπιμελῶς.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the hanging at the entrance to the tabernacle, contrasted with the veil (mentioned in the last sentence of this section) at the entrance to the Holy of Holies.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν αἰσθητὴν οὐσίαν.

<sup>j</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 81 ἡ πεντὰς αἰσθήσεων ἀριθμὸς ἐστίν.

<sup>k</sup> i.e. the veil, see note h.

<sup>l</sup> In QE ii. 93.

<sup>m</sup> τῶν ἀσωμάτων.

<sup>n</sup> This prob. means that the tetrad is the boundary between the ethereal and the sublunary regions, see QE, ii. 93, 94.

<sup>o</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις θυσιαστήριον ἐκ ξύλων ἀσήπτων κτλ. On the symbolism of this altar see De Vita Mosis ii. 106 and De Spec. Leg. i. 274.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Only this altar does not consume victims but preserves them.<sup>a</sup> For the flesh is consumed by fire but the holiness of the sacrifice remains, for sacrifice is not flesh but the pure and unstained life of a holy (person).<sup>b</sup>

*99. (Ex. xxvii. 1b) Why was the altar quadrangular,<sup>c</sup> and its length five cubits and its breadth equal?<sup>d</sup>

(This is) because it is made for sense-perceptible and bloody (sacrifices), and the pentad is the number of the sense-perceptible class,<sup>e</sup> as I have said.<sup>f</sup> In the second place, it has equal length and breadth because all the sacrificial victims which are offered by the heart of a pious mind<sup>g</sup> ought to be equal, whether one offers a hundred bulls or brings (merely) roasted wheat. For the Deity does not like wealth nor does He turn away from poverty.<sup>h</sup> In the third place, the quadrangle<sup>i</sup> is a symbol of the fact that he who offers a sacrifice should stand firm in all respects<sup>j</sup> and in no way be deficient or lame in soul but with

<sup>a</sup> Philo fancifully etymologizes θυσιαστήριον as a compound of θυσίας "sacrificial victims" and τηρεῖν "to preserve," cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 106 τὸν δ' ἐν ὑπαίθρῳ βωμὸν εἴωθε καλεῖν θυσιαστήριον ὡσανεὶ τηρητικὸν καὶ φυλακτικὸν ὄντα θυσιῶν τὸν ἀναλωτικόν.

<sup>b</sup> Cf. ibid. αἰνιττόμενος οὐ τὰ μέλη καὶ τὰ μέρη τῶν ἱερουργουμένων, ἅπερ δαπανᾶσθαι πυρὶ πέφυκεν, ἀλλὰ τὴν προαίρεσιν τοῦ προσφέροντος.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. with a square top.

<sup>d</sup> LXX πέντε πήχεων τὸ μῆκος καὶ πέντε πήχεων τὸ εὖρος· τετράγωνον ἔσται τὸ θυσιαστήριον κτλ.

<sup>e</sup> τοῦ αἰσθητοῦ γένους: Aucher "sensibilis generationis" (l. "generis").

<sup>f</sup> In QE ii. 97.

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. lit. = ὑπὸ καρδίας νοῦ (or διανοίας) εὐσεβοῦς.

<sup>h</sup> So the Greek frag. (which begins and ends with this sentence), οὔτε πλοῦτον ἀσπάζεται τὸ θεῖον οὔτε πένιαν ἀποσρέφεται.

<sup>i</sup> Or "square."

<sup>j</sup> βέβαιον παντελῶς vel sim.: Aucher "constanter omnino."

EXODUS, BOOK II

sound and full reason should make a thank-offering of those things which belong to a sound life.<sup>a</sup>

100. (Ex. xxvii. 1c) Why is the height of the altar three cubits? <sup>b</sup>

The literal meaning <sup>c</sup> (refers to) the service of the several priests, that they may easily be able to perform their office by standing on a firm base, hiding their bellies and the things within their bellies, because of that many-headed beast, desire,<sup>d</sup> and the farther <sup>e</sup> (part) around the heart, because of anger, the counsellor <sup>f</sup> of evil,<sup>g</sup> that it may be <sup>h</sup> superior to the head. And the head is the temple of the mind,<sup>i</sup> in which firmly dwell thoughts <sup>j</sup> and the ministering senses.<sup>k</sup> But as for the deeper meaning,<sup>l</sup> the triad is a three-tiered, dense and full number,<sup>m</sup> having no emptiness but filling up whatever is drawn apart <sup>n</sup> in the dyad. And

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders the last clause somewhat freely, I think, "sed integro plenoque consilio, recte tendente ad gratiarum actionem."

<sup>b</sup> LXX καὶ τριῶν πήχεων τὸ ὕψος αὐτοῦ. <sup>c</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>d</sup> διὰ τὸ πολυκέφαλον θηρίον, τὴν ἐπιθυμίαν, cf. De Somniis ii. 14, where ἡδονή is compared with "the many-headed hydra" (cf. Plato, Rep. 588 c). In the present passage Philo seems to mean that the altar is just high enough to conceal the lower part of the priest's body.

<sup>e</sup> Lit. "farthest."

<sup>f</sup> The Arm. uses two words for "counsellor."

<sup>g</sup> Aucher "malum consiliarium."

<sup>h</sup> Apparently the original was "may not be."

<sup>i</sup> τοῦ νοῦ. <sup>j</sup> λογισμοί: Aucher "consilia."

<sup>k</sup> αἱ ὑπηρετίδες αἰσθήσεις, cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 81 αἰσθησις . . . ἀνακάμπτει πρὸς νοῦν ὑπηρετίς οὐσα . . . αὐτοῦ.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>m</sup> τρίβολος (?) καὶ πυκνὸς καὶ πλήρης ἀριθμὸς: Aucher omits the first adjective (ptc. in Arm.) in rendering, "condensus plenusque numerus." For other mystical explanations of the number 3 see Staehle, pp. 25-26.

<sup>n</sup> Aucher "discerptum." I suspect that the Arm. translator has here misinterpreted διαστατόν "having dimensions" as "torn apart" or has confused διαστατόν with διάσπαστον.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

so He symbolically indicates <sup>a</sup> the height of the soul which sacrifices, thinking it right that this should be utterly and completely <sup>b</sup> crowded and full, not having in itself any desert-emptiness which might admit some evil or act of passion. <sup>c</sup> But bear in mind that when the dimensions of the altar are multiplied, (namely) five by five by three, the number seventy-five is produced, concerning which something has been said before. <sup>d</sup>

101. (Ex. xxvii. 2) Why does the altar have horns not attached from above <sup>e</sup> but united (to it) ? <sup>f</sup>

(This is) because it is not proper to sacrifice any of those (animals) which do not have horns, neither those which are offerings nor anything else. <sup>g</sup> Accordingly, those which are to be offered as sacrifices are the following three (kinds): the sheep, the ox and the goat. But beside these there are seven other (kinds permitted) for food : gazelle, deer, wild goat, buffalo, white-rumped antelope, oryx and giraffe <sup>h</sup> ;

<sup>a</sup> συμβολικῶς αἰνίττεται.

<sup>b</sup> πᾶσαν διὰ πάντων.

<sup>c</sup> πάθους.

<sup>d</sup> This may be a reference to Philo's lost book Περὶ Ἀριθμῶν, since there seems to be no reference to the number 75 either in the Quaestiones or in the extant Greek works of Philo.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "supercusa."

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις τὰ κέρατα ἐπὶ τῶν τεσσάρων γωνιῶν ἐξ αὐτοῦ ἔσται τὰ κέρατα, καὶ καλύψεις αὐτὰ χαλκῶ. Philo stresses the words ἐξ αὐτοῦ and takes them to mean that the horns, as it were, grow out of the altar, see the last sentence of this section.

<sup>g</sup> The syntax of the last clause is not clear : Aucher " nec sacrificare neque alio modo offerre."

<sup>h</sup> δορκάς, ἔλαφος, τραγέλαφος, βούβαλος, πύγαργος, ὄρυξ, καμηλοπάρδαλις. This list is based upon Deut. xiv. 5, which names the same animals in slightly different order. In De Spec. Leg. iv. 105 Philo gives a list of ten kinds of animals (quadrupeds) permitted as food, consisting of the above seven plus the three kinds mentioned above (also in Deut. xiv. 4) as sacrificial animals, or rather the young males, the lamb, calf and kid.

EXODUS, BOOK II

each of these has horns. For He wishes to specify <sup>a</sup> those (animals to be used) for food, for even though they are not to be offered as sacrifices, still they are similar to those which are to be sacrificed. Wherefore those who use them for need <sup>b</sup> will not offer anything opposed to or unworthy of or alien to a sacrifice. In the second place, the horns (of the altar) incline and face toward the four sides of the world, toward the east, toward the west, toward the south and toward the Dipper, <sup>c</sup> for it is proper that those who are in all parts (of the world) should all altogether bring their first-fruits and new (offerings) to this one altar, and sacrifice victims to God, the Father of the world. In the third place, (this is said) symbolically, <sup>d</sup> for in place of defensive weapons He has given a crop of horns to animals which grow horns. Just as the (animals) to be sacrificed, (namely) the ram, the ox and the goat, <sup>e</sup> repel their enemies with their horns, so also did He wish to rebuke the impious <sup>f</sup> who presume to offer sacrifices, by teaching that the divine Logos <sup>g</sup> opposes and repels the enemies of truth, goring every soul as if with horns and showing up in their nakedness its unclean and unworthy deeds, which a little while before it had been concealing. For these reasons the horns are not to be placed upon (the altar) from outside but by His command are to be united to the altar itself to extend it, <sup>h</sup> since sacrificial animals have their horns growing out of themselves.

102. (Ex. xxvii. 3) Why does He command all the vessels of the altar to be made of bronze? <sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "distinguere."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits the words "for need" in his rendering. <sup>c</sup> i.e. the north. <sup>d</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>e</sup> Or "the calf and the kid": Aucher "taurus et hircus." Philo uses the name of the young animal interchangeably with that of the full-grown animal.

<sup>f</sup> τοὺς ἀσεβεῖς.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ θεῖος λόγος: Aucher "divinum verbum."

<sup>h</sup> See note f on p. 148.

<sup>i</sup> LXX (end of verse) καὶ πάντα τὰ σκεύη αὐτοῦ ποιήσεις χαλκῶ.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The altar is an altar of bloody offerings,<sup>a</sup> for men give thanks both by sacrificing victims and (by making) offerings of first fruits; and they offer new (portions) of grain together with fine flour,<sup>b</sup> and offerings of wine with oil, in which the fine flour is dipped and mixed,<sup>c</sup> and with a basket of fruit. And all these are of the species<sup>d</sup> of bronze and iron.<sup>e</sup> For gold belongs to incorporeal and intelligible things,<sup>f</sup> while silver belongs to the sense-perceptible heaven,<sup>g</sup> but second bronze<sup>h</sup> belongs to things of earth, where wars are made. For among the ancients bronze was the material of weapons of war. Homer indeed shows this in (his poem about) the Trojan war, introducing (characters) who used weapons of bronze before there was iron.

103. (Ex. xxvii. 20) <sup>i</sup> Why did He command that the <sup>a</sup> θυσιαστήριον ἐναίμων. Here the Arm. uses two different words for "altar," selan and bagin, both of which sometimes render βωμός, sometimes θυσιαστήριον; in addition, selan sometimes renders τράπεζα. In Philo's passages on the altar of the Tabernacle in QE ii. 98 ff. the Arm. translator uses bagin as the more generic term, and selan to designate the altar of the Tabernacle.

<sup>b</sup> σεμιδάλει.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "cui farina tincta immiscetur."

<sup>d</sup> τοῦ γένους.

<sup>e</sup> The Arm. glossator comments, "from where fruits are produced, (namely) the earth, from there come iron and bronze."

<sup>f</sup> ἐν ἀσωμάτοις καὶ νοητοῖς. On the cosmic symbolism of gold see QE ii. 69, 73.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ τὸν αἰσθητὸν οὐρανόν.

<sup>h</sup> I suspect that erkrord, the Arm. word for "second," is here a scribal error for erkat "iron." The original was probably "bronze and iron." The Arm. glossator adds "bronze is second to iron."

<sup>i</sup> The verses of Ex. xxvii (4-19) not commented on by Philo in this work describe the fittings of the altar and hangings of the pillars and gate of the tabernacle's court.

EXODUS, BOOK II

oil in the lamps be (made) from olives and without sediment? <sup>a</sup>

He has ordained that it is not proper to bring near to the holy (place) anything foreign, <sup>b</sup> for He has considered as foreign the manufacture of oil <sup>c</sup> of other kinds, (namely) from sesame, from the date, from the nut or the like. Therefore, as the name shows, <sup>d</sup> the (oil made) from olives is appropriate and natural. <sup>e</sup> For the name elaion is given to every species (of oil), this being derived from elaia, and this conveys the true sense. <sup>f</sup> In the second place, every other (kind), although adulterated <sup>g</sup> with a mixture of other (ingredients) and crushed, is put into the class of olive-oil, whereas olive-oil is distinct by itself, for the olive, when pressed, distils (oil), just as the fruit of the vine makes wine without any admixture. Excellent, moreover, is (His saying) "without sediment" and that the preparation is to be of pure and refined material, for it was fitting and appropriate that everything in the holy (place) should be luminous and shining, especially the oil prepared for the light, since it was of a very pure substance and, in a way, <sup>h</sup> without sediment. For what among existing things can be found more refined and luminous than light? What is more, it illuminates other things, but first of all itself. There you have the literal meaning. <sup>i</sup> But the symbolical meaning <sup>j</sup> of light is wisdom, <sup>k</sup> through which all things

<sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ σὺ σύνταξον τοῖς υἱοῖς Ἰσραὴλ, καὶ λαβέτωσάν σοι ἔλαιον ἐξ ἐλαιῶν ἄτρυγον καθαρὸν (Heb. "pure olive-oil") κεκομμένον εἰς φῶς καῦσαι ἵνα κήγται λύχνος διὰ παντός.

<sup>b</sup> The negative seems to be misplaced in the Arm. which reads lit. "anything foreign not has He ordained that it is proper, etc.": Aucher "alienum quidquam non ordinavit, etc."

<sup>c</sup> τὴν ἐλαιουργίαν.
<sup>d</sup> ἔλαιον "oil" from ἐλαία "olive," as Philo explains in the next sentence.

<sup>e</sup> οἰκείον καὶ κατὰ φύσιν.
<sup>f</sup> ὁ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν κυριολογεῖται.

<sup>g</sup> Arm. pitaceal "being in need" is prob. to be emended to pitakaceal "being adulterated": Aucher "studiose usurpata."

<sup>h</sup> τρόπον τινά: Aucher "quasi."

<sup>i</sup> τὸ ῥήτόν. <sup>j</sup> τὸ συμβολικόν.

<sup>k</sup> σοφία.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

in nature are known,<sup>a</sup> while olive-oil is the material and preparation of wisdom. Such are numbers, geometry, musical art, school studies,<sup>b</sup> the pursuit of philosophy<sup>c</sup> and, in first place, the discipline of the virtuous man,<sup>d</sup> and these have nothing like sediment in them.

104. (Ex. xxvii. 21c) <sup>e</sup> Why does He command that the lamps burn "from evening until morning" <sup>f</sup>?

(He does so) not in order that they may provide light for those who are within (the holy place)—for who was in the holy (place) within the veil? <sup>g</sup>—no one at all remained within—, but because the lamps are symbols of the light-bearing stars.<sup>h</sup> Now the stars shine from evening until morning, serving in the necessary service of the whole world.<sup>i</sup> And He thought it fitting to make the lamps bear a resemblance to the chorus of heavenly stars from evening until morning.<sup>j</sup>

*105. (Ex. xxvii. 21b) <sup>k</sup> Why does He command Aaron and his sons to light the lamps? <sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> πάντα γινώσκειται ὅσα ἐν τῇ φύσει ἐστί.

<sup>b</sup> τὰ ἐγκύκλια, cf. QG iii. 19, 21.

<sup>c</sup> ἡ τῆς φιλοσοφίας σπουδή.

<sup>d</sup> ἡ τοῦ σπουδαίου παιδεία vel sim.: Aucher "honesta disciplina."

<sup>e</sup> According to the order of the three parts of vs. 21 in LXX and Heb., § 104 should come after § 105, and the latter after § 106.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καύσει . . . ἀφ' ἑσπέρας ἕως πρωῆ ἐναντίον κυρίου.

<sup>g</sup> i.e. within the Holy of Holies, see below, § 106.

<sup>h</sup> τῶν φωσφόρων ἀστέρων εἰσὶν οἱ λύχνοι σύμβολα.

<sup>i</sup> τὴν ἀναγκαίαν ὑπηρεσίαν τὴν τοῦ παντὸς κόσμου. Philo uses the phrase ἀναγκαία ὑπηρεσία in De Sacr. Abelis 98 and Quod Omnis Probus 142.

<sup>j</sup> The above is one of three allegorical explanations of the verse given in De Spec. Leg. i. 296-298.

<sup>k</sup> This section belongs after § 106 and before § 104, see note e above.

<sup>l</sup> LXX καύσει (Heb. "shall put in order") αὐτὸν Ἰααρὼν καὶ οἱ υἱοὶ αὐτοῦ.

EXODUS, BOOK II

He represented <sup>a</sup> Aaron as one possessed by God and by the prophetic spirit, <sup>b</sup> (thereby) rebuking and shaming <sup>c</sup> the indolence <sup>d</sup> of the high priests after him, who because of negligence entrusted the performance of the holy service to second and third (assistants), <sup>e</sup> since they themselves did not feel inexpressible pleasure in carrying out all (forms) of the ministerial service. For there is nothing more delightful or pleasant or seemly or noble <sup>f</sup> than to be a servant to God, which surpasses the greatest kingship. <sup>g</sup> And it seems to me that the early kings were at the same time high priests who by their acts showed that those who rule over others should themselves be servants in ministering to God. <sup>h</sup>

106. (Ex. xxvii. 21a) <sup>i</sup> Why does He say that they shall

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "accepted": Aucher "suscepit." Apparently the Arm. translator has confused παραδεικνύναι with παραδέχεσθαι.

<sup>b</sup> ἐνθουσιῶντα (οἱ ἐπιθειάζοντα) καὶ μετὰ τοῦ προφητικοῦ πνεύματος.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher renders the two participles by the single word "reprehendens."

<sup>d</sup> τὸν ὀκνον: Aucher "negligentiam."

<sup>e</sup> Cf. Wolfson, Philo, ii. p. 344 "The reference is undoubtedly to the actual practice in the Temple of Jerusalem, as Philo himself observed it there, of assigning the task of lighting the perpetual lamp to one of the subordinate priests by means of lots." Wolfson cites Mishnah, Tamid iii. 1, 9 and Yoma ii. 3.

<sup>f</sup> The four Arm. adjectives are prob. doublets of the two Greek ones, see next note.

<sup>g</sup> The Greek frag., which begins here, reads slightly more briefly οὐδὲν οὔτε ἥδιον οὔτε σεμνότερον ἢ θεῷ δουλεύειν, ὁ καὶ τὴν μεγίστην βασιλείαν ὑπερβάλλει.

<sup>h</sup> Slightly different (see end of this note) is the reading of the last part of the Greek frag., καὶ μοι δοκοῦσιν οἱ πρῶτοι βασιλεῖς ἅμα καὶ ἀρχιερεῖς γενέσθαι, δηλοῦντες ἔργοις ὅτι χρὴ τοὺς τῶν ἄλλων δεσπόζοντας δουλεύειν τοῖς λατρεύουσι θεῷ. The Arm. translator apparently read δουλεύειν λατρεύοντας.

<sup>i</sup> This section should come before § 105 and § 104, see notes to the latter.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

light the lamps " outside the veil which is over the covenant " ? <sup>a</sup>

May it not be because the things within (the veil) were incorporeal and intelligible <sup>b</sup> and had no need of sense-perceptible light, <sup>c</sup> for they were themselves their own light and more luminous stars than those which are seen ? But the one within the veil He calls " of testimony," <sup>d</sup> symbolically indicating <sup>e</sup> that the covenant of God is the only true one, and that those which (men) write in testaments <sup>f</sup> are permanent and secure in themselves and are similar. <sup>g</sup> And this is the measure of all things in common, the ideas and intelligible forms. <sup>h</sup> Now external things are also secure but still not in the same way, since they have a sense-perceptible and changeable nature and do not have <sup>a</sup> LXX ἐν τῇ σκηνῇ τοῦ μαρτυρίου (Heb. " of meeting ") ἔξωθεν τοῦ καταπετάσματος τοῦ ἐπὶ τῆς διαθήκης (" the testimony ") καύσει κτλ. Scripture here refers to the veil between " the holy place " and the Holy of Holies in which " the ark of testimony " (i.e. the covenant) stood. In De Spec. Leg. i. 296 Philo, in dealing with this verse, speaks of the lampstand being " within " (εἴσω) the veil. If the text there is sound, it would seem that he thinks of two lampstands, one within the veil, the other outside, but see below, note d.

<sup>b</sup> ἀσώματα καὶ νοητά.

<sup>c</sup> αἰσθητοῦ φωτός.

<sup>d</sup> The syntax and meaning are obscure : Aucher " quod autem internum velum testimonii vocat." Among other things it is not clear whether Philo here refers to another lampstand within the veil or to the ark within the veil. That he refers to the veil as a " veil of testimony " seems rather doubtful.

<sup>e</sup> συμβολικῶς αἰνιττόμενος.

<sup>f</sup> The word διαθήκη has in Scripture the meaning " covenant " as well as the secular meaning " testament."

<sup>g</sup> i.e. similar to the covenant associated with the ark in the Holy of Holies.

<sup>h</sup> The last two nouns are nom. plurals but their syntactic relation to the preceding nouns is not clear. The general idea, however, seems to be that all the parts of the world are kept in order by a sort of covenant, which is the work of the Logos, see, e.g., QE ii. 90.

EXODUS, BOOK II

permanence in themselves as do incorporeal things, and they make use of external bonds, some of which are in themselves altogether eternal, but others only dissolve during long periods.

*107. (Ex. xxviii. 2) Why does He say that they shall make a sacred stole <sup>a</sup> for the high priest "for honour and glory <sup>b</sup> " <sup>c</sup> ?

These statements are (made) about the radiant and sumptuous ankle-length stole,<sup>d</sup> not about the linen (garment),<sup>e</sup> for the latter is made not "for honour and glory" but for still greater and more perfect honour and glory. For he <sup>f</sup> wears it when he enters the innermost Holy of Holies, whereas (he wears) the ankle-length (garment) when he performs the service outside in the manner of the sense-perceptible world <sup>g</sup> before man, among whom precious things <sup>h</sup> are considered matters of glory. But those things which are in truth (glorious), being unkempt and unbeautified and adorned (only) by nature, are honoured by the Father. But may it not be that "honour" is to be distinguished from "glory" ? For glory is the

<sup>a</sup> Philo here as elsewhere (e.g. De Ebrietate 85) uses στολή in the generic sense of "garment," as does LXX.

<sup>b</sup> Farther on in this section Philo interprets τιμή as "price" rather than "honour," and δόξα as "opinion" rather than "glory."

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις στολήν ἁγίαν Ἰααρὼν τῷ ἀδελφῷ σου εἰς τιμὴν καὶ δόξαν. Philo treats the cosmic symbolism of the high priest's garments at some length (and somewhat differently) in De Vita Mosis ii. 109-135 and De Spec. Leg. i. 84-97.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the robe which Philo calls ὑποδύτης in De Vita Mosis ii. 109, and ποδήρης χιτῶν in De Spec. Leg. i. 85, cf. Ex. xxviii. 4 where LXX has ποδήρη χιτῶνα κοσμηβωτόν.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the χιτῶν λινοῦς, cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 84.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. the high priest.

<sup>g</sup> κατὰ τὸν αἰσθητὸν κόσμον (possibly, however, κόσμον here = "array").

<sup>h</sup> τίμια, meaning both "honoured" and "expensive."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

being praised by men, while honour is the being received among those who are truly <sup>a</sup> most honourable; and most honourable are divine matters,<sup>b</sup> so that when the high priest is arrayed in the ankle-length (garment), there is a participation <sup>c</sup> in two things, (namely) in proud dignity before God,<sup>d</sup> and in a favourable reception <sup>e</sup> among men. That is the literal meaning.<sup>f</sup> But this is the deeper meaning.<sup>g</sup> The ankle-length (garment) is a symbol<sup>h</sup> of that which is woven of many and various things. But "glory,"<sup>i</sup> as the ancient saying has it, is false opinion, and insecure opinion is by itself alone incomplete.<sup>j</sup> But if opinion is mixed with truth, it becomes true opinion,<sup>k</sup> being converted to honourableness.<sup>l</sup> Accordingly, He wishes to show that the life of the wicked man belongs to opinion, being dominated by and dependent upon <sup>m</sup> false opinion, while (the life) of the wise man and true high priest <sup>n</sup> is honourable because it is productive of truth, by which he changes and adapts falsehood to his better nature.<sup>o</sup>

<sup>a</sup> ὄντως.

<sup>b</sup> θεῖα πράγματα vel sim.

<sup>c</sup> κοινωνία.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "venerationis apud Deum gloriosae." The exact meaning is not clear, partly because the Arm. adj. xrowtali, here rendered "proud," usually means "boastful" or "arrogant," partly because the force of the prep. αρ, here rendered "before," is uncertain. However, the original of the last three words was prob. τῆς περὶ θεὸν σεμνότητος.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher "securae susceptionis."

<sup>f</sup> τὸ ῥητόν.

<sup>g</sup> τὸ πρὸς διάνοιαν.

<sup>h</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>i</sup> δόξα, here meaning "opinion."

<sup>j</sup> The Greek frag., consisting of only one sentence, reads more briefly δόξα, ὡς ὁ παλαιὸς λόγος, ψευδὴς ἐστὶ ὑπόληψις καὶ δόκησις ἀβέβαιος.

<sup>k</sup> ἀληθὴς δόξα (or ὑπόληψις): Aucher "certa opinio."

<sup>l</sup> τιμιότητα: Aucher "honorabile (vel, pretiosum)."

<sup>m</sup> Aucher "pendens acprehendens."

<sup>n</sup> τοῦ σοφοῦ καὶ ὄντως ἀρχιερέως.

<sup>o</sup> εἰς τὴν βελτίονα φύσιν vel sim.

EXODUS, BOOK II

108. (Ex. xxviii. 7) <sup>a</sup> Why are the two shoulder-pieces, <sup>b</sup> which are joined together, attached in two parts? <sup>c</sup>

The shoulder-pieces <sup>d</sup> designate serious labours, <sup>e</sup> for they are a part of the sacred garment, and sacred things are serious. <sup>f</sup> And there are two <sup>g</sup> forms of labour: one is the desire of pleasing <sup>h</sup> God, and of piety <sup>i</sup>; the other is being beneficent to men, which is called kindness and love of man. <sup>j</sup> He therefore exhorts (us) to devote ourselves to every labour and to put our shoulders to it. <sup>k</sup> The theologian <sup>l</sup> wishes (these) two things to be known in order that what has been said in another place <sup>m</sup> may be confirmed by deeds, (namely) "With God thou wast strong <sup>a</sup> In vss. 3-6 (on which see De Vita Mosis ii. 111-126, of which QE ii. 108 is only a partial parallel) Scripture names the high priest's garments and specifies the colours of the ephod.

<sup>b</sup> i.e. of the ephod. LXX uses the word ἐπωμῖς both of the ephod and of each shoulder-piece, while Heb. uses a different word for the latter (kātēph, lit. "shoulder"). Philo seems to be following Heb. in De Vita Mosis ii. 111-112, where he calls the ephod ἐπωμῖς, and the shoulder-pieces ἀκρόμια, see below, note d.

<sup>c</sup> LXX δύο ἐπωμίδες συνέχουσαι ἔσονται αὐτῶ ἐτέρα τὴν ἐτέραν, ἐπὶ τοῖς δυοῖ μέρεσιν (Heb. "ends": A.V. "edges") ἐξηρητισμέναι.

<sup>d</sup> Since the Arm. noun grapank', a plural form, is followed by the verb in the singular number, it is probable that it renders the Greek neuter plural ἀκρόμια, see above, note b.

<sup>e</sup> Prob. ἔργα σπουδαῖα: Aucher "labores honestos."

<sup>f</sup> The two Arm. adjectives used here prob. render the single Greek adj. σπουδαῖα: Aucher "honesta et studium merentia."

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "two twofold."

<sup>h</sup> Or "serving": Aucher "placitum."

<sup>i</sup> εὐσεβείας.

<sup>j</sup> χρηστότης καὶ φιλανθρωπία.

<sup>k</sup> A play on ἐπωμῖς and ἐπ' ὤμοις φέρειν vel sim., cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 130 τὸν γὰρ ὤμον ἐνεργείας καὶ πράξεως ποιεῖται σύμβολον.

<sup>l</sup> ὁ θεολόγος, i.e. Moses.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. of Scripture.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

and with men thou shalt have power.”<sup>a</sup> But of the two shoulder-pieces one must be on the right, and the other on the left. Now the one on the right was given its place for the sake of pleasing God—a labour worthy of zeal, while that on the left (was given its place) for the sake of helpfulness to men and for kindness of thought concerning them.<sup>b</sup>

109. (Ex. xxviii. 9-12) What are the two emerald stones, in which are inscribed the names of the twelve patriarchs?<sup>c</sup>

In each of them are six impressions,<sup>d</sup> of the two hemispheres,<sup>e</sup> of that above the earth and of that below the earth. As evidence of this statement there are three things to cite. One is their shape, for the stones are round, just as the hemispheres are. The second is their colour, for the emerald is similar to the heaven in colour. The third is the number (of the names) engraved in them, for in each of the hemispheres there happen to be six zodiacal signs,<sup>f</sup> some of them above the earth, and some below the earth, (and) the halves of the zodiac<sup>g</sup> give light. And rightly did He call the inscribing “impressions,”<sup>h</sup> for all the immobile stars in the zodiac are types and type-<sup>a</sup> Gen. xxxii. 29 (explaining the name “Israel”), ἐνίσχυσας μετὰ θεοῦ καὶ μετὰ ἀνθρώπων δυνατός (Heb. “thou hast striven with God and with men, and thou hast prevailed”).

<sup>b</sup> Aucher “et suavitatem apud istos opinionis (vel, aestimationis).”

<sup>c</sup> ΙΧΧ καὶ λήμψη τοὺς δύο λίθους, λίθους σμαράγδου (A.V. “two onyx stones”), καὶ γλύψεις ἐν αὐτοῖς τὰ ὀνόματα τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ. ἐξ ὀνόματα ἐπὶ τὸν λίθον τὸν ἕνα καὶ τὰ ἐξ ὀνόματα τὰ λοιπὰ ἐπὶ τὸν λίθον τὸν δεύτερον . . . γλύμμα σφραγίδος διαγλύψεις τοὺς δύο λίθους, κτλ.

<sup>d</sup> σφραγίδες: Aucher “sigilli.”

<sup>e</sup> τῶν δυοῖν ἡμισφαιρίων, symbolized by the two sets of six names. The threefold cosmic symbolism of the two stones is discussed by Philo in De Vita Mosis ii. 122-123 and more briefly in Quis Rer. Div. Heres 176.

<sup>f</sup> ζῳδία.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ ζωοφόρου.

<sup>h</sup> Referring to ΙΧΧ γλύμμα σφραγίδος.

EXODUS, BOOK II

impressions,<sup>a</sup> while the sublunary (bodies)<sup>b</sup> are in movement.

110. (Ex. xxviii. 15)<sup>c</sup> What is the Logeion,<sup>d</sup> and why does He call it "of judgments," and why is the Logeion made after the texture of the shoulder-piece<sup>e</sup> ?<sup>f</sup>

As its very name shows, it is a symbol of logos.<sup>g</sup> And logos is double (in meaning); one (meaning) is that found in natural thoughts,<sup>h</sup> and the other is "utterance."<sup>i</sup> And it is the principle<sup>j</sup> of judgments, since everything is determined and distinguished by logos—intelligible things<sup>k</sup> by that (logos) which is in natural thoughts, and sounds by (the logos of) differentiated speech.<sup>l</sup> Most

<sup>a</sup> The Arm. lit. = τύποι καὶ τυπωθεῖσαι σφραγίδες: Aucher "normae ac typi sunt ut sigilli." <sup>b</sup> τὰ μετὰ σελήνην.

<sup>c</sup> In vss. 13-14, passed over here, Scripture mentions the gold clasps (A.V. "ouches") and gold chains attached to the high priest's garment.

<sup>d</sup> So Philo elsewhere (see below) spells lxx λόγιον.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the ephod; the Arm. translator has taken lxx ἐπωμῖς in the sense of "shoulder-piece" (of the ephod) instead of the ephod itself, see QE ii. 108, note b.

<sup>f</sup> lxx καὶ ποιήσεις λόγιον τῶν κρίσεων (Heb. "ornament (?) of judgment"; A.V. "breastplate of judgment"), ἔργον ποικιλτοῦ, κατὰ τὸν ῥυθμὸν (Heb. "work" or "workmanship") τῆς ἐπωμίδος (Heb. "ephod") ποιήσεις αὐτό· ἐκ χρυσοῦ καὶ ὑακίνθου, κτλ. Philo allegorizes the Logeion similarly in De Vita Mosis ii. 112-115, 127-130, cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 87-88 (see also QE ii. 112-114).

<sup>g</sup> λόγον σύμβολον, cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 88 καλεῖται λογεῖον ἐτύμως ἐπειδὴ τὰ ἐν οὐρανῷ πάντα λόγοις καὶ ἀναλογίαις δεδημιούργηται.

<sup>h</sup> ἐν τοῖς τῆς φύσεως λογισμοῖς vel sim.; Aucher "in naturae consiliis." In De Vita Mosis ii. 128 Philo speaks of ὁ τῆς φύσεως λόγος. The reference is to the λόγος ἐνδιάθετος, as the Stoics called thinking or reason.

<sup>i</sup> Another Stoic term, the λόγος προφορικός or speech, often referred to by Philo. Both terms occur in the parallel, De Vita Mosis ii. 129.

<sup>j</sup> λόγος again: Aucher "verbum." <sup>k</sup> τὰ νοητά.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "vocalia autem sermone privato."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

excellently, moreover, is its workmanship said to be "after the texture of the shoulder-piece," for one ought to form and adorn one's words by deeds (as if) fitting them together,<sup>a</sup> for everything without workmanship <sup>b</sup> is imperfect and lame.

111. (Ex. xxviii. 16) Why is the Logeion <sup>c</sup> square and twofold and a span <sup>d</sup> in length and a span in breadth? <sup>e</sup>

The Logeion is twofold, in the first place because it has two logoi <sup>f</sup>; one, which has the force of a spring, is in natural thoughts, and the other, (namely) utterance, is an effluence thereof.<sup>g</sup> And the latter is twofold, inclining partly to truth and partly to falsehood. And in the second place, (it is twofold) because the mind sees two (kinds of object), divine and mortal. And the voice <sup>h</sup> attempts to be adorned by these two,<sup>i</sup> in interpreting both of them. And the Logeion is square symbolically,<sup>j</sup> for the logos should be stable and immobile in all respects and not <sup>a</sup> Aucher "texendo." Philo means that words and deeds are to be fitted together like threads in a texture.

<sup>b</sup> Lit. "working."

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the high priest's "breastplate of judgment," see QE ii. 110.

<sup>d</sup> Arm. ἑῖς renders both σπιθαμή (as here in LXX) and παλαστή, which is one-third of the σπιθαμή, see notes b and c on p. 161.

<sup>e</sup> LXX τετράγωνον ἔσται, διπλοῦν σπιθαμῆς τὸ μῆκος αὐτοῦ καὶ σπιθαμῆς τὸ εὖρος. The symbolism of the breastplate is discussed by Philo, in part as here, in De Vita Mosis ii. 127-130.

<sup>f</sup> i.e. the λόγος ἐνδιάθετος (reason) and the λόγος προφορικός (speech), see next note.

<sup>g</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 127 ὁ μὲν οἶά τις πηγῆ, ὁ δὲ γεγωνῶς ἀπ' ἐκείνου ῥέων. The phrase "in natural thoughts" corresponds to ὁ τῆς φύσεως λόγος in De Vita Mosis ii. 127-129, cf. QE ii. 110.

<sup>h</sup> Or "speech."

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "et vox his duabus exornari nititur." The sense is not clear, but the original prob. meant that speech attempts to be in harmony with nature and the mind.

<sup>j</sup> συμβολικῶς.

EXODUS, BOOK II

waver,<sup>a</sup> whether in thought or in interpreting by tongue and mouth. And its length is a span and its breadth a span<sup>b</sup> for the reason that the span is a sixth part of a cubit,<sup>c</sup> for the cubit is of six spans, so that it is one-sixth in length and breadth. And this symbol gives this kind of appearance.<sup>d</sup> And the mind<sup>e</sup> is one and is a uniter of different intelligibles,<sup>f</sup> as if a harmony of these same things. And the uttered logos<sup>g</sup> is one, and again is similarly the uniter of different intelligibles, (namely) of letters into syllables, of syllables into words, and of many words into compositions and long discourses.<sup>h</sup> For what is vastly and diffusely extended in these is held together by natural bonds.<sup>i</sup> And the mind too has length and breadth, for it is extended and prolonged to all intelligibles in apprehension, just as speech<sup>j</sup> (has) both (dimensions), for this too is amplified in length and breadth in accordance with the words uttered.<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 128 σχῆμα δ' ἀπέειπεν ὁ τεχνίτης τετράγωνον τῷ λογείῳ, πάνυ καλῶς αἰνιττόμενος ὡς χρῆ καὶ τὸν τῆς φύσεως λόγον καὶ τὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπου βεβηκέναι πάντη καὶ κατὰ μηδ' ὅτιοῦν κραδαίνεσθαι.

<sup>b</sup> Arm. k'îl, like t'îz (see note d on p. 160), renders both σπιθαμή and παλαστή.

<sup>c</sup> Philo must here be using σπιθαμή as the equivalent of παλαστή, unless he is following a system of measurement different from the one used by other Greek writers. The latter commonly reckons the cubit (πήχυς) as = six palms (παλασταί) and twenty-four fingers (δάκτυλοι), whereas the span (σπιθαμή) = twelve fingers. Thus it is the palm, not the span, which is one-sixth of a cubit.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher "symbolum autem hujusmodi praestat argumentum." The sense is not clear. <sup>e</sup> ὁ νοῦς.

<sup>f</sup> ἐνωτικὸς διαφόρων νοητῶν.

<sup>g</sup> ὁ προφορικὸς λόγος.

<sup>h</sup> στοιχείων . . . συλλαβῶν . . . λέξεων εἰς συνθέσεις καὶ μακρολογίας.

<sup>i</sup> φυσικοῖς ἀρμόττεται δεσμοῖς: Aucher "per naturalia adaptatur ligamina." <sup>j</sup> λόγος.

<sup>k</sup> κατὰ τοὺς προφορικοὺς λόγους vel sim. Aucher renders freely, "secundum sermonum varietatem atque vastitatem."

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

112. (Ex. xxviii. 17-20a) Why is there on the Logeion <sup>a</sup> a texture <sup>b</sup> of four rows, and in each row are three (precious) stones placed? <sup>c</sup>

The four rows are an indication of the four seasons of the year,<sup>d</sup> each of which consists of an element.<sup>e</sup> And the three stones are symbolically <sup>f</sup> three months, into which each season is divided.<sup>g</sup> For the zodiac consists of twelve constellations <sup>h</sup> divided into four (seasons) of the year, through which the sun revolves and produces the seasons of the year through the three constellations.<sup>i</sup> And there is a "texture" since all the seasons happen to hasten to one end, inasmuch as the fullness of all (the seasons), which are woven together, is summed up <sup>j</sup> in the year. The passage also contains a certain description of character.<sup>k</sup> Each of the four virtues <sup>l</sup> consists of an element of three things,<sup>m</sup> (namely) habit, the thing had and having,<sup>n</sup> just as is the case with the senses,<sup>o</sup> for example, sight and the

<sup>a</sup> i.e. the high priest's "breastplate of judgment," see QE ii. 110.

<sup>b</sup> ὕφασμα, as in LXX (see next note) = Heb. "setting."

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ καθυφανεῖς ἐν αὐτῷ ὕφασμα κατάλιθον τετράστιχον, κτλ. (there follow the names of the twelve precious stones, three in each of the four rows). The passage is cited in Leg. All. i. 81-82, and explained partly as here, i.e. as symbolical of the zodiac, in De Fuga 184-185 and De Vita Mosis ii. 124-126.

<sup>d</sup> μήνυμα τῶν τεττάρων ἐτησίων ὥρων.

<sup>e</sup> ὧν ἐκάστη <sc. ὥρα> ἐκ στοιχείου συνέστη vel sim. : Aucher "quorum singula <sc. tempora> singula elementa sortita sunt." The "element" here refers to a moral element, see below.

<sup>f</sup> συμβολικῶς.

<sup>g</sup> Slightly emending the Arm. text, which reads "which are divided into the several seasons" and is so rendered by Aucher.

<sup>h</sup> ὁ γὰρ ζωφόρος συνέστη ἐκ δώδεκα ζωδίων.

<sup>i</sup> i.e. of each season.

<sup>j</sup> κεφαλαιοῦται vel sim. : Aucher "reducitur."

<sup>k</sup> ἡθοποιῶν τινά, cf. QE ii. 76.

<sup>l</sup> ἀρετῶν.

<sup>m</sup> i.e. has three aspects.

<sup>n</sup> ἔξεως (in the sense of "state of being") καὶ τοῦ ἔχομένου καὶ τοῦ ἔχειν : Aucher "habitudine, habendo et habere."

<sup>o</sup> αἱ αἰσθήσεις.

EXODUS, BOOK II

thing seen and seeing, and again, audition and the thing heard and hearing. And similarly (there is) knowledge <sup>a</sup> and the thing known and knowing, just as (there is) moderation <sup>b</sup> and the thing moderated and moderating. And again (there is) courage <sup>c</sup> and the thing courageously done and having courage, which is more commonly called "being manly." <sup>d</sup> The same applies to justice <sup>e</sup> and the just act and having justice, which is called "acting justly." <sup>f</sup>

113. (Ex. xxviii. 20b) Why is each of the rows <sup>g</sup> covered and bound with gold? <sup>h</sup>

Thus it is with the four rows which make up <sup>i</sup> the annual seasons in the zodiac. <sup>j</sup> Each (row) has ether <sup>k</sup> around it, setting off the three <sup>l</sup> and, again, bringing them together

<sup>a</sup> Arm. gitout'ion usu. = γνώσις or ἐπιστήμη, but here perhaps φρόνησις, which Philo usually includes among the four cardinal virtues, as enumerated by Plato and the Stoics. Aucher here renders, "scientia."

<sup>b</sup> σωφροσύνη.

<sup>c</sup> ἀνδρεία.

<sup>d</sup> Perhaps ἀνδραγαθίζεσθαι: Aucher "fortificari."

<sup>e</sup> δικαιοσύνη.

<sup>f</sup> δικαιοπραγεῖν: Aucher "justificari (δικαιοπραγία, actio justa)."

<sup>g</sup> i.e. the four rows of precious stones in the high priest's "breastplate of judgment" (Logeion), each of which contained three stones.

<sup>h</sup> LXX περικεκαλυμμένα (v.l. περικεκλωσμένα) χρυσίῳ καὶ συνδεδεμένα ἐν (v.l. om. ἐν) χρυσίῳ, ἐστῶσαν κατὰ στίχον αὐτῶν. Heb. reads more briefly "they shall be woven (i.e. "attached") with gold to their settings."

<sup>i</sup> Lit. "complete": Aucher "perficiunt."

<sup>j</sup> τὰς ἐτησίους ὥρας ἐν τῷ ζωδιακῷ <κύκλῳ>, cf. De Vita Moysis ii. 124-126, QE ii. 112 notes. <sup>k</sup> αἰθέρα.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher amplifies slightly in rendering, "distinguentem tres alios." "The three" seems to mean three constellations. Perhaps, however, it means the three divisions of the year, cf. QG iii. 3, where Philo counts the two equinoxes as one to make up, with the two solstices, "three cycles" of the sun each year.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

with one another. For not only do those stars adhere to one another which are near the termination,<sup>a</sup> when a season terminates and the following one begins, but, as I have said, there is between them an intervening space and interval of clear and pure ether, which surrounds<sup>b</sup> the three and binds (them) with gold, in the likeness of which the ether is represented because of its precious substance.<sup>c</sup>

114. (Ex. xxviii. 21) Why are the stones<sup>d</sup> named after the phylarchs,<sup>e</sup> having seal-engravings of their names?<sup>f</sup>

Because the twelve stones are representations of the twelve animals which are in the zodiac,<sup>g</sup> and are a symbol<sup>h</sup> of the twelve phylarchs, whose names He cuts and engraves in them, wishing to make them stars<sup>i</sup> and, in a certain sense,<sup>j</sup> to apportion one constellation<sup>k</sup> to each, or rather (to make) each patriarch<sup>l</sup> himself become a constellation (and) heavenly image in order that the tribal leaders and patriarchs may not go about on the earth like mortals but

<sup>a</sup> πέρας vel sim.: Aucher "terminum." Here it seems to mean one of the seasonal divisions such as a solstice or equinox.

<sup>b</sup> Correcting the Arm. which lit.= "has around itself," see above.

<sup>c</sup> διὰ τὴν τιμίαν (vel sim.) οὐσίαν: Aucher "propter nobilem essentiam."

<sup>d</sup> i.e. the twelve precious stones of the high priest's breastplate (the Logeion), representing the twelve tribes of Israel.

<sup>e</sup> ἐπώνυμοι τῶν φυλάρχων.

<sup>f</sup> LXX καὶ οἱ λίθοι ἔστωσαν ἐκ τῶν ὀνομάτων τῶν νιῶν Ἰσραὴλ δέκα δύο (v.l. δώδεκα) κατὰ τὰ ὀνόματα (v.l. τὰς γενέσεις) αὐτῶν γλυφαὶ σφραγίδων ἕκαστος (v.l. ἐκάστου) κατὰ τὸ ὄνομα ἔστωσαν εἰς δέκα δύο (v.l. δώδεκα) φυλάς.

<sup>g</sup> τῶν ἐν τῷ ζωοφόρῳ.

<sup>h</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>i</sup> ἀστροποιεῖν vid. (the Arm. is a factitive-denominative verb derived from astl = ἄστρον): Aucher "stellas reddere."

<sup>j</sup> τρόπον τινά: Aucher "quasi."

<sup>k</sup> ζώδιον: Aucher "signum."

<sup>l</sup> πατριάρχην.

EXODUS, BOOK II

become heavenly plants<sup>a</sup> and move about in the ether,<sup>b</sup> being firmly established there. And He says that their names are "seals,"<sup>c</sup> (that is) something unchangeable and unalterable, which always remains in the same likeness. For just as the seal, while stamping many substances with its designs, itself remains imperishable<sup>d</sup> and unchangeable and, while giving a share of its own possession of designs to many other (substances), is not at all affected by anything,<sup>e</sup> so also has He seen fit to immortalize each of the patriarchs as (an ideal) form<sup>f</sup> and make him eternal, so as not to be affected by any accident but, while changing and moving, to be confirmed in the virtues<sup>g</sup> which are similar to the tribe<sup>h</sup> and are apportioned to the (various) ranks of the nation.

115. (Ex. xxviii. 26b [Heb. 30b])<sup>i</sup> Why is the Logeion,<sup>j</sup> on which were the names,<sup>k</sup> upon the breast of the high priest when he enters the sanctuary?<sup>l</sup>

The breast is the place of the heart, and it is there that

<sup>a</sup> Cf. Quod Deterius 85 φυτὸν οὐράνιον ὁ θεὸς ἄνθρωπον εἰργάσατο.

<sup>c</sup> σφραγίδες.

<sup>b</sup> ἐν αἰθέρι.

<sup>d</sup> ἄφθαρτος.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. is not affected by the material upon which it is pressed.

<sup>f</sup> ἀθανατίζειν . . . ὡς εἶδος (or ἰδέαν): Aucher "tamquam formam immortalitate donare."

<sup>g</sup> τὰς ἀρετὰς.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "quae imitantur tribum."

<sup>i</sup> This section belongs after § 116 according to the order of Scripture.

<sup>j</sup> The high priest's breastplate, see QE ii. 110 ff.

<sup>k</sup> Of the twelve tribes, engraved on the precious stones of the breastplate.

<sup>l</sup> LXX καὶ ἔσται ἐπὶ τοῦ στήθους (Heb. "heart") Ἰσραὴλ ὅταν εἰσπορεύηται εἰς τὸ ἅγιον ἐναντίον κυρίου (Heb. "in his entering before YHWH") καὶ οἴσει Ἰσραὴλ τὰς κρίσεις (Heb. "the judgment") τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραὴλ ἐπὶ τοῦ στήθους (Heb. "his heart") ἐναντίον κυρίου διὰ παντός. Philo quotes this passage in part in Leg. All. iii. 118-119 (reading εἰσέρχεται for εἰσπορεύηται).

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

anger <sup>a</sup> dwells, and anger especially has need of the controlling and directing reason. <sup>b</sup> For when it <sup>c</sup> is left without a controller and director, it is borne hither and thither in confusion and tossed about as though by stormy waves, and overturns the entire soul like a ship without ballast, <sup>d</sup> the body being overturned with it. Moreover, it is with care and cautiousness that He says not that the Logeion is to be upon his breast always but (only) when he enters the sanctuary. For the sanctuary is the place of piety and holiness and every virtue, <sup>e</sup> and when the mind <sup>f</sup> reaches this, it altogether acquires perfect reason, <sup>g</sup> which controls and directs and seizes the reins so as to restrain the passions, <sup>h</sup> especially anger, <sup>i</sup> which is wont to be refractory toward it.

116. (Ex. xxviii. 26a [Heb. 30a]) <sup>j</sup> Why are the Revelation and Truth <sup>k</sup> placed upon the Logeion? <sup>l</sup>

Because the reason <sup>m</sup> in it is twofold, one residing in thought, and the other uttered and revealed. <sup>n</sup> And <sup>a</sup> θυμός.

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "rationis regentis et temporantis," cf. Leg. All.

iii. 118 ήνίοχον και κυβερνήτην . . . τόν λόγον .

<sup>c</sup> i.e. the heart.

<sup>d</sup> ανεργάτιστον: Aucher "basi carentem."

<sup>e</sup> θεοσεβείας και αγιότητος και πάσης ἀρετῆς.

<sup>f</sup> ό νοῦς or ή διάνοια. <sup>g</sup> τέλειον λόγον. <sup>h</sup> τὰ πάθη.

<sup>i</sup> Aucher "cupiditates," but Arm. srtmtout'iu = θυμός, not ἐπιθυμία.

<sup>j</sup> According to the order of Scripture this section should come before § 115.

<sup>k</sup> These abstract nouns denote the Urim and Thummim, the oracular device attached to the high priest's breastplate. Philo usually calls them δήλωσις και ἀλήθεια, following LXX, but sometimes σαφήνεια και ἀλήθεια. For other references to them see Leg. All. iii. 132, 140, De Vita Mosis ii. 113, 128-129 and De Spec. Leg. iv. 69.

<sup>l</sup> LXX και ἐπιθήσεις ἐπὶ τὸ λόγιον τῆς κρίσεως τὴν δήλωσιν και τὴν ἀλήθειαν. <sup>m</sup> ό λόγος.

<sup>n</sup> i.e. the λόγος ἐνδιάθετος (reflexion) and the λόγος προφορικός (utterance), see next note.

EXODUS, BOOK II

rightly did He apportion the two virtues, (one) to each of them, (namely) truth to that (form of reason) which is in thought, and revelation to that which is uttered.<sup>a</sup> For the mind of the virtuous man ought not to consider anything to be more appropriate or more related <sup>b</sup> to it than truth,<sup>c</sup> which one must with all power endeavour to find, while speech has no greater necessity than to reveal (things) clearly by making plain in clear speech what is signified.<sup>d</sup>

*117. (Ex. xxviii. 27 [Heb. 31]) Why is the double <sup>e</sup> hyacinthine stole <sup>f</sup> called "undergarment" <sup>g</sup> ? <sup>h</sup>

They say that since the hyacinthine stole is a symbol <sup>i</sup> of the air, because the air is almost black,<sup>j</sup> it was rightly called "undergarment," since it was under <sup>k</sup> the garment which was upon his breast,<sup>l</sup> for the air is placed below heaven and the ether.<sup>m</sup> But I wonder at and am struck with

<sup>a</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 129 δυσὶ λόγοις τοῖς καθ' ἕκαστον ἡμῶν, τῷ τε προφορικῷ καὶ ἐνδιαθέτω, δύο ἀρετὰς ἀπένειμεν οἰκείας, τῷ μὲν προφορικῷ δῆλωσιν, τῷ δὲ κατὰ διάνοιαν ἀλήθειαν.

<sup>b</sup> οἰκειότερον ἢ συγγενέστερον.

<sup>c</sup> Philo phrases the same idea somewhat differently in De Vita Mosis ii. 129 ἀρμόζει γὰρ διανοία μὲν μηδὲν παραδέχεσθαι ψεῦδος.

<sup>d</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, I think, "quam evidententer declarare revelata artificioso apparatu."

<sup>e</sup> Or "second": Aucher "duplex" (in footnote, "aliis torta"), see QE ii. 119.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher "tunica," but see QE ii. 107, notes a and d.

<sup>g</sup> ὑποδύτης.

<sup>h</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις ὑποδύτην ποδήρη (Heb. "the robe of the ephod") ὄλον ἰακίνθινον. Philo alludes to this garment in De Vita Mosis ii. 110 and to its cosmic symbolism in De Spec. Leg. i. 95, cf. De Fuga 110.

<sup>i</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>j</sup> Aucher "subniger." Philo means that it is dark blue, see QE ii. 85, note g.

<sup>k</sup> Lit. "stood after."

<sup>l</sup> i.e. the ephod, to which the "breastplate of judgment" or Logeion was attached, see the preceding sections.

<sup>m</sup> Cf. De Spec. Leg. i. 94 ὁ ἀπὸ μέλας ὦν τὴν μετ' οὐρανὸν δευτέραν τάξιν κεκλήρωται.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

admiration by the theologian's <sup>a</sup> allegorizing of his philosophical beliefs.<sup>b</sup> For he has likened the whole heaven to the breast, wherefore in his statements he has ornamented the breast of the high priest with the two emerald <sup>c</sup> stones which stand on his shoulders,<sup>d</sup> and with the twelve stones on the Logeion, arranged in four rows of three. Now, (he indicates) the air by the second hyacinthine stole (called) "undergarment," and by the other parts <sup>e</sup> he indicates <sup>f</sup> earth and water. ["But where, O theologian," someone may say, "is the head of the world? Teach us, for you have brought us as far as the breast, which you have shown to be a likeness of heaven." To me it seems that he would reply to this with silence, for it is plain to those who are not foolish but are wont to help their minds with well ordered (thoughts). If, however, there is anyone heavy of understanding, let him listen. The head of all things is the eternal Logos of the eternal God,<sup>g</sup> under which, as if it were his feet or other limbs, is placed the whole world, over which He passes and firmly stands.<sup>h</sup> Now it is not because Christ is Lord that He passes and sits over the world, for His seat is with His Father and God, but because for its perfect fullness the world is in need of the care and superintendence of the best ordered dispensation, and for its own complete piety, of the Divine Logos, just as living creatures (need) a head, without which it is impossible to live.]<sup>i</sup>

<sup>a</sup> τὸν θεολόγον, i.e. Moses.

<sup>b</sup> τῆς φιλοσοφίας ἀλληγοροῦντα τὰ δόγματα vel sim. : Aucher "una cum philosophia allegorice usum sententia."

<sup>c</sup> Aucher inadvertently omits rendering of "emerald."

<sup>d</sup> See QE ii. 109 on Ex. xxviii. 9-12.

<sup>e</sup> i.e. the flowers and bells of the robe, see De Vita Mosis ii. 120.

<sup>f</sup> αἰνίττεται.

<sup>g</sup> λόγος αἰώνιος (or ἀίδιος) τοῦ αἰωνίου θεοῦ.

<sup>h</sup> Aucher "super quem transiens constanter stat."

<sup>i</sup> How much of the last part of this section (from "But where, O theologian") is the work of a Christian scribe is not clear. The whole passage has here been bracketed to warn the reader that some part of it, perhaps all, has been revised by Christian hands.

EXODUS, BOOK II

*118. (Ex. xxviii. 28 [Heb. 32]) Why does the opening <sup>a</sup> in the middle of this very same ankle-length garment have a hem <sup>b</sup> "that it may not be ruptured" ? <sup>c</sup>

Of the elements <sup>d</sup> some are by nature heavy, (such as earth and water, and others are by nature light, (such as air and fire. Accordingly, from the beginning the air, which had heaviness, was placed near water.<sup>e</sup> And because of the contrariety of heavy to light there was fear that one (element) might suffer rupture <sup>f</sup> from the other, and the world might be imperfect in harmony and unity if this obstacle were present. For that reason there was need of an opening <sup>g</sup> suitable to the middle region, that is, of the divine Logos as a mediator,<sup>h</sup> for this is the strongest and most stable bond <sup>i</sup> of all things, in order that it might bind and weave together <sup>j</sup> the parts of the universe and their contraries, and by the use of force bring into unity and communion and loving embrace those things which have many irreconcilable differences by their natures. Moreover, this passage also presents a description of character,<sup>k</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "that near the mouth": Aucher (following LXX) "peristomium."

<sup>b</sup> Aucher "gyrum."

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ ἔσται τὸ περιστόμιον ἐξ αὐτοῦ μέσον ὡς ἔχον κύκλω τοῦ περιστομίου, ἔργον ὑφάντου, τὴν συμβολὴν συννυφασμένην ἐξ αὐτοῦ ἵνα μὴ ῥαγῇ: Heb. "and the mouth of its top shall be in its middle, a hem shall be around its mouth, the work of the weaver; like a breastplate it shall be to it that it may not be torn."

<sup>d</sup> τῶν στοιχείων.

<sup>e</sup> The original must have meant that air, the heavier of the two light elements, was placed next to water, the lighter of the two heavy elements.

<sup>f</sup> ῥήξιν, based on LXX μὴ ῥαγῇ: Aucher "ne laedatur unum ab altero."

<sup>g</sup> Lit. "mouth": Aucher "peristomium (sive, oreficium)."

<sup>h</sup> μεσίτου τινός, τοῦ θείου λόγου.

<sup>i</sup> δεσμός.

<sup>j</sup> Lit. "and mix together by weaving." The cosmic weaving reflects the mythology of Plato's Timaeus, see below.

<sup>k</sup> ἡθοποιῖαν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

for the hem is a hard and dense woven work <sup>a</sup> and very compact, <sup>b</sup> and he thought it proper that the opening should be in it in the middle. Now the mouth <sup>c</sup> is an organ of two things, (namely) of food and speech. <sup>d</sup> As Plato says, it has the entrance of mortal things into itself, (namely) food, while speech is the exit of immortal things. <sup>e</sup> And both (functions) must be practised in such a way that they do not suffer a rupture, <sup>f</sup> which is what happens to gluttons and babblers, for out of loquacity they rupture, in a sense, that which ought to be kept quiet, and <sup>g</sup> they pour into the ears (of others) <sup>h</sup> things not fit to be heard. <sup>i</sup> And those who are intent upon wine-bibbing and overindulgence break out into belchings and burst with insatiable fullness. And he admonishes those who philosophize with him <sup>j</sup> to place restraints upon the belly and the tongue.

119. (Ex. xxviii. 29 [Heb. 33]) Why does He command that in the lowest part of this undergarment there shall be

<sup>a</sup> ὕφασμα. In De Spec. Leg. i. 86 Philo describes the ephod, worn over the ankle-length robe of the high priest, as ὕφασμα θωρακοειδές. It is not clear how he thought of the ephod as related to the "opening" and "hem."

<sup>b</sup> Or "compressed": Aucher "rigidus."

<sup>c</sup> Philo plays on the resemblance between περιστόμιον and στόμα.

<sup>d</sup> λόγου.

<sup>e</sup> Cf. De Opif. Mundi 119 στόματι δι' οὗ γίνεται θνητῶν μὲν, ὡς ἔφη Πλάτων, εἴσοδος, ἔξοδος δ' ἀφθάρτων, a paraphrase of Timaeus 75 D-E εἴσοδον τῶν ἀναγκαίων . . . τῆν δ' ἔξοδον τῶν ἀρίστων.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher renders less accurately, I think, "et utrique obsequendum est (vel, ambo observanda sunt) ne laceratur (sic)."

<sup>g</sup> The Arm. has a superfluous indef. pronoun = τινες.

<sup>h</sup> Lit. "pour into the inside," but the Arm. translator obviously misread εἰς ὦτα (see next note) as ἐσώτατα.

<sup>i</sup> Similarly the brief Greek frag., οἱ λάλοι, τὰ ὀφείλοντα ἡσυχάζεσθαι ῥηγγύντες, τρόπον τινὰ ὑπὸ γλωσσαλγίας προχέουσιν εἰς ὦτα ἀκοῆς οὐκ ἄξια.

<sup>j</sup> i.e. Moses: Aucher "hac in parte,"

EXODUS, BOOK II

pomegranate-shaped (tassels) as if from flowering pomegranates? <sup>a</sup>

That the undergarment was a double hyacinthine (robe) and in the likeness of air has been shown. <sup>b</sup> And as water is lower than air, the pomegranate-shaped (tassel) was rightly (placed) in the lowest part of the undergarment, as was the flower of the pomegranate, which is (so) called from "flowing" and "being liquid." <sup>c</sup> Now, as for that which is primarily in (the class of) flowing liquids, what else indeed would it be but water?

120. (Ex. xxviii. 30 [Heb. 34]) Why does He place a bell (and) flower <sup>d</sup> around (the hem) beside the pomegranate-shaped (tassel)? <sup>e</sup>

<sup>a</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις ἐπὶ τὸ λῶμα τοῦ ὑποδύτου κάτωθεν ὡσεὶ ἕξανθούσης ῥόας ῥοῖσκους ἕξ ὑακίνθου καὶ πορφύρας καὶ κοκκίνου διανενησμένου καὶ βύσσου κεκλωσμένης ἐπὶ τοῦ λώματος τοῦ ὑποδύτου κύκλω· τὸ αὐτὸ εἶδος ῥοῖσκους χρυσοῦς καὶ κώδωνας ἀνὰ μέσον τούτων περικύκλω· Heb. "and thou shalt make upon its hem pomegranates of blue and purple and scarlet, upon its hem round about, and bells of gold between them round about." For parallels to Philo's allegorical comment see De Migratione 103, De Vita Mosis ii. 119 and De Spec. Leg. i. 93.

<sup>b</sup> In QE ii. 117, where, however, it is not clear whether Philo means a "second" or a "double" hyacinthine garment.

<sup>c</sup> Philo plays on the resemblance between ῥόα "pomegranate" and ῥεῖν "to flow," or ῥύσις "flowing," cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 119 οἱ δὲ ῥοῖσκοι <σύμβολον> ὕδατος, παρὰ τὴν ῥύσιν λεχθέντες εὐθυβόλως.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "flowering bell" but Philo treats bell and flower separately in his commentary and in the parallels. See also LXX, next note.

<sup>e</sup> LXX παρὰ ῥοῖσκον χρυσοῦν κώδωνα καὶ ἄνθινον ἐπὶ τοῦ λώματος τοῦ ὑποδύτου κύκλω· Heb. "a gold bell and a pomegranate, a gold bell and a pomegranate (sic, bis) upon the hem of the robe round about." Philo allegorizes this verse similarly (see below) in De Migratione 103, De Vita Mosis ii. 119 and De Spec. Leg. i. 93.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

In the earlier (passages) <sup>a</sup> He has represented heaven by the shoulder-piece <sup>b</sup> and the (object) on the breast, which He has called "pectoral," <sup>c</sup> and (has represented) the lower region, <sup>d</sup> (namely) the air, by the double hyacinthine (robe), <sup>e</sup> and then water, which is below the air, by the symbol <sup>f</sup> of the pomegranate-shaped (tassel). Now, however, He mentions the flowers in addition to the pomegranate-shaped (tassels), and by them He indicates <sup>g</sup> the earth, since everything flowers and grows from the earth. <sup>h</sup> But the bell has an intermediate position between the pomegranate-shaped (tassel) and the flower, and indicates the harmony and community of the elements. <sup>i</sup> For if there had not been produced in the world the harmonious blending into a symphony of antiphonal voices as if of a choir sounding as one, it would not have received its full perfection. <sup>j</sup> But since there are four elements, <sup>k</sup> He has spoken very circumspectly <sup>l</sup> in distinguishing and separating the bell from fire and air, for the movement of the soul is only from itself, as is generally agreed, especially by the philosophers of the Stoa. But it <sup>m</sup> has united earth with water, for earth and water are themselves the body of the

<sup>a</sup> Aucher "imprimis."

<sup>b</sup> ἐπωμίδος, see QE ii. 110.

<sup>c</sup> περιστήθιον.

<sup>d</sup> Lit. "the following (region)."

<sup>e</sup> See the preceding three sections.

<sup>f</sup> συμβόλον.

<sup>g</sup> αἰνιττόμενος.

<sup>h</sup> Cf. De Vita Mosis ii. 119 τὰ μὲν ἄνθηνα σύμβολον γῆς, ἀνθεῖ γὰρ καὶ βλαστάνει πάντα ἐκ ταύτης.

<sup>i</sup> In De Migratione 103 the bells symbolize the sense of hearing, in De Vita Mosis ii. 119 they symbolize the harmony of earth and water, in De Spec. Leg. i. 93 they symbolize the harmony of the parts of the world (ἁρμονίαν καὶ συμφωνίαν καὶ συνήχησιν τῶν τοῦ κόσμου μερῶν). In the present passage Philo combines the three kinds of symbolism.

<sup>j</sup> τελεσιουργίαν: Aucher "perfectionem."

<sup>k</sup> στοιχεῖα.

<sup>l</sup> Aucher "accurate."

<sup>m</sup> i.e. the bell as a symbol of the unity of earth and water.

EXODUS, BOOK II

world.<sup>a</sup> Now, the body itself is inanimate and unmoving,<sup>b</sup> and it was in need of that Logos,<sup>c</sup> which, by the art of music,<sup>d</sup> adapted and reformed it into a harmony and oneness of all things.<sup>e</sup>

121. (Ex. xxviii. 32a [Heb. 36a]) What is "the leaf" of pure gold?<sup>f</sup>

The leaf has a fine<sup>h</sup> construction and also lacks depth, and so it appears to be a surface.<sup>i</sup> Now, a surface is incorporeal.<sup>j</sup> And may it not be that it is called "leaf" from "flying,"<sup>k</sup> so that it may be a symbol of incorporeal and intelligible forms of substance?<sup>l</sup> That which is always borne upward becomes winged and never turns toward a downward course. Wherefore He has also called it "pure," as being unmixed and luminous, for sense-perceptible things<sup>m</sup> are mixtures which are brought together from many things. For the forms which weave <sup>a</sup> τὸ τοῦ κόσμου σῶμα.

<sup>b</sup> ἄψυχον καὶ ἀκίνητον.

<sup>c</sup> Aucher "rationis illius."

<sup>d</sup> τῆ μουσικῆ τέχνη.

<sup>e</sup> Aucher renders more briefly, "in harmoniam reduceret illud pro concordia universorum."

<sup>f</sup> i.e. the plate (πέταλον) on the forehead of the high priest.

<sup>g</sup> LXX καὶ ποιήσεις πέταλον χρυσοῦν καθαρόν. Philo briefly discusses its symbolism in De Migratione 103 and De Vita Mosis ii. 114-116.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. thin or light: Aucher "subtilem." But note that in De Vita Mosis ii. 114 Philo says that it "is wrought into the form of a crown."

<sup>i</sup> ἐπιφάνεια.

<sup>j</sup> ἀσώματος.

<sup>k</sup> Philo plays on the resemblance between πέταλον "leaf" and πέτεσθαι "to fly."

<sup>l</sup> σύμβολον ἀσωμάτων καὶ νοητῶν ἰδεῶν οὐσίας. Although Arm. niut' usu. = ὕλη, I have rendered the last word as if the original were οὐσίας rather than ὕλης "of matter," since the former is not only required by the context but is also confirmed by the parallel in QE ii. 124, where the Arm. translator uses gougout' iun = οὐσία.

<sup>m</sup> τὰ αἰσθητά.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

together things not (previously joined) with one another <sup>a</sup> also have purity, being like a lamb.<sup>b</sup>

122. (Ex. xxviii. 32b [Heb. 36b]) Why does He say, "Thou shalt express <sup>c</sup> in it <sup>d</sup> the expression of a seal-impression, 'Holiness to the Lord' " <sup>e</sup> ?

It pleases Him that the incorporeal and intelligible substance <sup>f</sup> should be unimpressed by itself and without shape but be formed and shaped like a seal-impression by the Logos of the eternally Existing One.<sup>g</sup> Excellently, therefore, has He represented the seal-impression as an "expression," <sup>h</sup> for there are expressed in them in part <sup>i</sup> the forms which the patterns <sup>j</sup> had. But the divine Logos, which is established over all things, is immaterial,<sup>k</sup> being, as it were, not impressed upon them but expressed,<sup>l</sup> for

<sup>a</sup> Aucher renders more literally, "quae non sunt invicem."

<sup>b</sup> The sense escapes me. Perhaps the last phrase "being like a lamb" is a scribal addition.

<sup>c</sup> i.e. "engrave" or the like. I have rendered literally in order to make clearer Philo's allegorical interpretation.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. in the gold plate worn on the high priest's forehead.

<sup>e</sup> LXX καὶ ἐκτύπώσεις ἐν αὐτῷ ἐκτύπωμα σφραγίδος ἀγίασμα κυρίου (v.l. κυρίῳ : Heb. "to YHWH"). Philo briefly discusses this half-verse in De Migratione 103 (reading κυρίῳ) and De Vita Mosis ii. 114-115, 132, where he deals with the mystical number of the letters of the Tetragrammaton.

<sup>f</sup> τὴν ἀσώματον καὶ νοητὴν οὐσίαν, cf. QE ii. 121, note l.

<sup>g</sup> τῷ τοῦ αἰὶ (vel sim.) ὄντος λόγῳ. The idea is more clearly and fully expressed in De Migratione 103 ἐκείνη μὲν ἢ σφραγὶς ἰδέα ἐστὶν ἰδεῶν καθ' ἣν ὁ θεὸς ἐτύπωσε τὸν κόσμον, ἀσώματος δῆπου καὶ νοητῆ.

<sup>h</sup> ἐκτύπωμα.

<sup>i</sup> The original prob. referred to the various parts of the cosmos.

<sup>j</sup> οἱ τύποι, i.e. the archetypes.

<sup>k</sup> ἄυλος.

<sup>l</sup> οὐκ ἐντυπωθεῖς ἀλλ' ἐκτυπωθεῖς, but contrast De Vita Mosis ii. 132 τῶν τεττάρων αἰ γλυφαὶ γραμμάτων ἐνεσφραγίσθησαν. Philo has slightly modified his allegorical interpretation to make it conform more closely to the literal meaning.

EXODUS, BOOK II

it is external to all substances and to all corporeal and incorporeal elements.<sup>a</sup>

123. (Ex. xxviii. 33a [Heb. 37a]) Why is the leaf <sup>b</sup> placed over the double hyacinthine (robe) ? <sup>c</sup>

Because the double hyacinthine (robe) is almost black,<sup>d</sup> and black is the colour of ink and is opaque. But the forms <sup>e</sup> are not visible, and the leaf presents a symbol <sup>f</sup> of the forms, since it is the substance of the invisible and intelligible.<sup>g</sup>

124. (Ex. xxviii. 33b-34 [Heb. 37b-38]) Why is the leaf <sup>h</sup> (placed) upon the forehead of the high priest but not upon his head ? <sup>i</sup>

The head is an assemblage of hair, skin and bones, while the place of the brain <sup>j</sup> is in the front of the head. Now, the theologians <sup>k</sup> say that the sovereign part (of the mind) <sup>l</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Aucher " quae excellet omnes materias corporeas et incorporeas."

<sup>b</sup> i.e. the gold plate (πέταλον) on the high priest's forehead.

<sup>c</sup> LXX καὶ ἐπιθήσεις αὐτὸ (sc. τὸν πέταλον) ἐπὶ ὑακίνθου κεκλωσμένης (Heb. " braid of blue "), κτλ. On the problem of the " double " hyacinthine robe see QE ii. 117, notes.

<sup>d</sup> i.e. dark blue, see QE ii. 85, 117.

<sup>e</sup> αἱ ἰδέαι ἢ τὰ εἶδη.

<sup>f</sup> σύμβολον.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ ἀοράτου καὶ νοητοῦ οὐσία ἐστίν, cf. QE ii. 121.

<sup>h</sup> i.e. the gold plate (πέταλον).

<sup>i</sup> LXX καὶ ἔσται ἐπὶ τῆς μίτρας· κατὰ πρόσωπον τῆς μίτρας ἔσται. καὶ ἔσται ἐπὶ τοῦ μετώπου Ἰααρῶν, κτλ. Contrast De Migratione 103, where Philo says that the gold plate is on the high priest's head, ἐπὶ μὲν τῆς κεφαλῆς. Here, as in some of the preceding sections, Philo's allegorical interpretation is based upon a more literal reading of Scripture than are the interpretations in his fuller and earlier commentary on the Pentateuch.

<sup>j</sup> τοῦ ἐγκεφάλου.

<sup>k</sup> οἱ θεολόγοι, i.e. the Greek philosophers.

<sup>l</sup> τὸ ἡγεμονικόν.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

has its settled habitation <sup>a</sup> in the brain.<sup>b</sup> For this reason it was in the front of <sup>c</sup> the principal and sovereign (part) of the soul, to which the mind and the reason <sup>d</sup> have been allotted, that the leaf was placed (as) a symbol of intelligible substance <sup>e</sup> (and as) <sup>f</sup> a likeness of the divine Logos and (as) an expressed seal-impression,<sup>g</sup> (namely) the form of forms.<sup>h</sup>

<sup>a</sup> Lit. "constancy of habitation": Aucher "constantem habitationem."

<sup>b</sup> Philo sometimes follows Aristotle and the Stoics in locating the mind in the heart, but more often follows Plato in locating it in the brain, as, e.g., in QG i. 5, ii. 5, QE ii. 100. See, for the various passages, Helmut Schmidt, Die Anthropologie Philons von Alexandria (Würzburg, 1933), pp. 51, 143.

<sup>c</sup> Lit. "before": Aucher "in regione."

<sup>d</sup> ὁ νοῦς (or ἡ διάνοια) καὶ ὁ λόγος.

<sup>e</sup> σύμβολον νοητῆς οὐσίας, cf. QE ii. 121, note l.

<sup>f</sup> Aucher inserts "praeseferens."

<sup>g</sup> ἐκτυπωθεῖσα σφραγίς, cf. QE ii. 122.

<sup>h</sup> ἰδέα ἰδεῶν, cf. De Migratione 103, QE ii. 122.

APPENDIX A

APPENDIX A

GREEK FRAGMENTS OF THE QUAESTIONES

Although Philo's Quaestiones in Genesin et Exodum has survived as a whole (or in large part) only in the ancient Armenian version, the original Greek text of parts of about two hundred sections has been preserved in the works of some of the Church Fathers like John of Damascus or Byzantine chroniclers like Leo Grammaticus or antiquarians like Johannes Lydus or the anonymous authors of catenae arranged in the order of Scriptural verses. A number of these fragments (some of them being rather paraphrastic than literal) were collected by Mangey in his edition of Philo's works published in 1742. Since that time other scholars have added to their number. While it may be expected that future research will discover more fragments of the Quaestiones as well as of other lost works of Philo, it still seems worth while at the present time to bring together the fragments of the Quaestiones which have been collected by various scholars and published in half a dozen separate works. It should be noted in passing that Dr. Ludwig Früchtel of Ansbach, Germany, to whom we owe the identification of several fragments (published by Harris) formerly unlocated in the Quaestiones, proposes to bring out a more complete collection of the fragments of Philo's various lost works and has, as he informed me in 1949, already located a few more hitherto unidentified fragments of the Quaestiones.

The fragments (or paraphrases) reproduced from the various modern collections listed below are here given without an English translation, partly because the differences between them and the Armenian have already been mentioned in the footnotes to the translation of that version, and partly because many of the fragments are such free quotations of the original that it might be misleading to translate them and thus make them appear to be of equal weight with the translation of the Armenian version.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

The six modern works from which the Greek texts are reproduced are herewith listed in order of publication.

Harris, J. Rendel, Fragments of Philo Judaeus. Cambridge, 1886 (includes fragments earlier published by Mangey, Mai, Pitra and Tischendorf).

Wendland, Paul, Neu entdeckte Fragmente Philos. Berlin, 1891 (consists mostly of selections from Procopius, including those published earlier by Mai).

Praechter, Karl, "Unbeachtete Philonfragmente," Archiv für Geschichte der Philosophie, N.F. 9 (1896), 415-426 (gives nine fragments from Leo Grammaticus and Pseudo-Polydeuces with parallels in other Byzantine chroniclers).

Stahle, Karl, Die Zahlenmystik bei Philon von Alexandria. Leipzig-Berlin, 1931 (gives about a dozen fragments from Johannes Lydus).

Lewy, Hans, Neue Philontexte in der Uebearbeitung des Ambrosius mit einem Anhang: Neu gefundene griechische Philonfragmente. Berlin, 1932 (gives about a dozen fragments from the Sacra Parallela of John of Damascus and the Catena).

Früchtel, Ludwig, "Griechische Fragmente zu Philons Quaestiones in Genesin et in Exodum," Zeitschrift für die alttestamentliche Wissenschaft, N.F. 14 (1937), 108-115 (locates several fragments listed by Harris as "unidentified").

Three of Harris' "unidentified" fragments have been located by Emile Bréhier, Les Idées philosophiques et religieuses de Philon d'Alexandrie, 2nd ed., Paris, 1925.

The reader is asked to overlook some inconsistencies in abbreviations, forms of citation, etc., in the following pages. They are largely due to the fact that I have in most cases followed the style set by the modern authorities listed above.

GENESIS, BOOK I

1. (Gen. ii. 4) Διὰ τί τὴν κοσμοποιῖαν ἐπιλογιζόμενος φησὶ Μωϋσῆς· “ αὐτὴ ἡ βίβλος γενέσεως οὐρανοῦ καὶ γῆς, ὅτε ἐγένετο ”; Ἐὐὐ μὲν “ ὅτε ἐγένετο ” ἀόριστον<sup>α</sup> ἔοικε χρόνον ἐμφαίνειν τοῦτο δ’ ἐστὶν ἔλεγχος δυσωπῶν τοὺς συγκεφαλαιουμένους ἀριθμὸν ἐτών, ἀφ’ οὗ τὸν κόσμον οἶονται γενέσθαι· τὸ δὲ “ αὐτὴ ἡ βίβλος γενέσεως ” ἤτοι δεικτικὸν ἐστὶ τοῦ ὑποκειμένου τεύχους, ὃ τὴν κοσμοποιῖαν περιέχει· <ἐν ἐκείνῳ γὰρ> ἡ ἀναφορὰ τῶν εἰρημένων περὶ τῆς κοσμοποιίας πρὸς τὰ ἐπ’ ἀληθείας γεγονότα.

Lewy, p. 55, from Sacra Parallela of John of Damascus, Cod. Hierosolymitanus S. Sep. fol. 124<sup>r</sup> and Cod. Constantinopolitanus Metochion 274, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

17. (Gen. ii. 18)

Φίλους ἡγητέον τοὺς βοηθεῖν καὶ ἀντωφελεῖν ἐθέλοντας καὶ ἂν μὴ δύνωνται. φιλία γὰρ <οὐκ> ἐν τῷ χρειώδει μᾶλλον ἢ κράσει καὶ συμφωνίᾳ βεβαίῳ τῶν ἡθῶν, ὡς ἕκαστον τῶν συνελθόντων εἰς φιλικὴν κοινωνίαν τὸ Πυθαγόρειον ῥῆμα ἐπιφθέγξασθαι, ὅτι “ ἀρά ἐστὶ φίλος ἕτερον ὡς ἐγώ.”

Harris, p. 12, from Dam. Par. 788 (Cod. Rupef. f. 275) ἐκ τοῦ α’ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων. “ The first sentence (with change to the singular number) in Maximus (ii. 548) and Anton Melissa, col. 849.”

20. (Gen. ii. 19)

Ἄνδρὸς δὲ ἐπιστημονικωτάτου καὶ φρονήσει διαφέροντος οἰκειότατον τοῦτο τὸ ἔργον· οὐ σοφῶ μόνον ἀλλὰ καὶ τῷ πρώτῳ γηγενεῖ<sup>δ</sup> τῶν ὀνομάτων ἡ θέσις· ἔδει γὰρ ἡγεμόνα μὲν τοῦ ἀνθρωπίου, βασιλέα δὲ τῶν γηγενῶν πάντων καὶ τοῦτο λαχεῖν γέρας ἐξαίρετον <sup>α</sup> ἀόριστον ex Arm. Lewy : ἄριστον codd.

<sup>δ</sup> γηγενεῖ ex Arm. Harris : εὐγενεῖ codd.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ἵνα, ὡσπερ πρῶτος ἦδει τὰ ζῶα, καὶ πρῶτος ἀξιωθῆ τῆς ἐπὶ πᾶσιν ἀρχῆς καὶ πρῶτος εἰσηγητῆς καὶ εὐρετῆς γένηται τῶν ἐπωνυμιῶν. Ἄτοπον γὰρ ἦν ἀνώνυμα αὐτὰ καταλειφθέντα ὑπό τινος νεωτέρου προσονομασθῆναι ἐπὶ καταλύσει τῆς τοῦ πρεσβυτέρου τιμῆς τε καὶ εὐκλείας.

Harris, pp. 12-13, from Dam. Par. 748 (Cod. Rupef. f. 21 b)
 "with reference to the questions on Genesis."

21. (Gen. ii. 19) Ἦγαγεν ὁ θεὸς τὰ ζῶα πρὸς τὸν Ἀδάμ, ἰδεῖν τί καλέσει αὐτά.

Οὐ γὰρ ἐνδύαζει θεός· ἀλλ' ἐπειδὴ νοῦν ἔδωκε τῷ ἀνθρώπῳ τῷ πρωτογενεῖ καὶ σπουδαίῳ καθ' ὃ ἐπιστημονικὸς ὢν πέφυκε λογί-ζεσθαι, καθάπερ ὑφηγητῆς γνώριμον κινεῖ πρὸς ἐπίδειξιν οἰκίαν καὶ ἀφορᾷ τὰ ἄριστα αὐτοῦ τῆς ψυχῆς ἔγγονα. Φανερώς δὲ πάλιν καὶ διὰ τούτου πᾶν τὸ ἐκούσιον καὶ ἐφ' ἡμῖν διατυποῖ, τοὺς πάντα κατ' ἀνάγκην εἶναι λέγοντας δυσωπῶν. Ἦ ἐπεὶ ἔμελλον οἱ ἀνθρωποι χρῆσθαι, διὰ τοῦτο ἀνθρωπον αὐτὰ θέσθαι προσέταττεν.

Harris, p. 13, from Dam. Par. p. 748 (Cod. Rupef. f. 21 b), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητούμενων.

24. (Gen. ii. 21)

Ὁ ὕπνος κατὰ τὸν προφήτην ἔκστασις ἐστίν, οὐχὶ κατὰ μανίαν, ἀλλὰ κατὰ τὴν τῶν αἰσθήσεων ὕφεισιν καὶ τὴν ἀναχώρησιν τοῦ λογισμοῦ. Τότε γὰρ αἱ μὲν αἰσθήσεις ἐξίστανται τῶν αἰσθητῶν,<sup>a</sup> ὃ δὲ οὐκέτι νευροσπαστῶν οὐδὲ παρέχων κίνησιν αὐταῖς ἡρεμεῖ, αἱ δὲ τὰς ἐνεργείας ἀποτετμημένοι τῷ διεξεῦχθαι τῶν αἰσθητῶν ἀκίνητοι καὶ ἀργαὶ ὑπεκκλύονται.

Harris, pp. 13-14, from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 667 = Cod. Rupef. f. 265), and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 342 b.

27. (Gen. ii. 21)

Ἀποικίαν στέλλεται γυνὴ τὴν ἀπὸ γονέων πρὸς τὸν ἄνδρα· διὸ προσήκει τὸν μὲν ὑποδεξάμενον ἀντιλαβεῖν τὴν τῶν δεδωκότων εὐνοίαν, τὴν δὲ μετελθοῦσαν, ἣν τοῖς σπείρασι τιμὴν παρείχε, τῷ λαβόντι διδόναι· παρακαταθήκην γὰρ ἀνὴρ ἐγχειρίζεται γυναικᾶ παρὰ γονέων, γυνὴ δὲ τὸν ἄνδρα παρὰ τῶν νόμων.

Lewy, p. 55, from Dam. Par. Rec. Rupef. f. 243<sup>v</sup>, Φίλωνος.

<sup>a</sup> Post αἰσθητῶν verba καὶ ὁ λογισμὸς ἀναχωρεῖ ἐκ τῶν αἰσθήσεων ex Arm. suppl. Harris.

GENESIS, BOOK I

28. (Gen. ii. 23)

Ὡς προφήτης φησίν, οὔτε γεγονέναι ἐκ συνομιλίας οὔτε ἐκ γυναικός, ὡς οἱ μετέπειτα, ἀλλὰ τινα φύσιν ἐν μεθορίῳ καθάπερ ἀπὸ ἀμπέλου κληματίδος ἀφαιρεθείσης εἰς ἑτέρας ἀμπέλου γένεσιν.

Harris, p. 14, from Dam. Par. 748 (Cod. Rupef. f. 21 b), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητουμένων.

29. (Gen. ii. 24) Διό φησιν “Ἐνεκεν τούτου καταλείψει ἄνθρωπος τὸν πατέρα καὶ τὴν μητέρα αὐτοῦ καὶ προσκολληθήσεται πρὸς τὴν γυναῖκα αὐτοῦ· καὶ ἔσονται δύο εἰς σάρκα μίαν”;

. . . τὸ εὐαφέστατον καὶ αἰσθητικώτατον, ἐν ᾧ καὶ τὸ ἀλγεῖν καὶ τὸ ἡδεσθαι.

Harris, p. 14, from Dam. Par. 748 (Mangey ii. 654 = Cod. Rupef. f. 21 b), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητουμένων.

31. (Gen. iii. 1)

Φρόνιμος δὲ ἐκλήθη ὁ ὄφης ὅτι τὸ λογικὸν ζῶον τὸν ἄνθρωπον καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ἀγγινοῖα διαφέροντα ἕξαπατᾶν ἔμελλεν.

Praechter, p. 420, from Ps.-Polydeuces, pp. 30, 25-32, 1 (cf. Theod. Mel. p. 7, 31-32, Cedr. p. 10, 10-12).

32. (Gen. iii. 1)

*Ἄρα δὲ καὶ ὁ ὄφης τῷ κατὰ προφορὰν λόγῳ ἐχρήσατο; οὐ πάντως, ἀλλ’ οἱ πρωτόπλαστοι ἅτε κακίας ὄντες ἀμιγεῖς ἀκριβεστάτας εἶχον τὰς αἰσθήσεις καὶ πολὺ τῶν ἡμετέρων διαλλατούσας ὥστε τὴν ἀκοὴν αὐτῶν πάσης ὑπάρχειν φωνῆς ἀκουστικὴν.

Praechter, pp. 416-417, from Ps.-Polydeuces, p. 32, 8-12 (cf. Sym. Log. p. 910, 16-20, Theod. Mel. p. 8, 4-8, Cedr. p. 10, 12-16).

41. (Gen. iii. 7)

Ὡς γὰρ ἡδὺς ὁ καρπὸς τῆς συκῆς, τραχὺ καὶ πικρότατον τὸ φύλλον, οὕτως πᾶσα ἁμαρτία ἐν τῇ πράξει δείκνυται ἡδεῖα, μετὰ δὲ ταῦτα ὀδύνην παρέχει τῷ πεπραχότι.

Praechter, p. 417, from Ps.-Polydeuces, p. 36, 13-16 (cf. Sym. Log. pp. 911, 28-912, 2, Theod. Mel. p. 9, 10-13, Cedr. p. 14, 19-21—“stark verflacht”).

51. (Gen. iii. 19) Τί ἐστίν “ἕως τοῦ ἐπιστρέφαι σε εἰς τὴν γῆν

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ἐξ ἧς ἐλήφθησ'"; οὐ γὰρ ἐκ γῆς διεπλάσθη μόνον ὁ ἄνθρωπος ἀλλὰ καὶ θείου πνεύματος.

Ἐπειδὴ δὲ οὐ διέμεινεν ἀδιάστροφος, προστάξεως θείας ἠλόγηκε καὶ τοῦ κρείττονος μέρους ἀποτεμνόμενος οὐρανομίμητον πολιτείαν ὄλον αὐτὸν προσένευε τῇ γῇ. Εἰ μὲν γὰρ ἀρετῆς, ἣτις ἀθανατίζει, ἐραστῆς ἐγένετο, πάντως ἂν ἐλάμβανε κλήρον τὸν οὐρανόν· ἐπειδὴ δὲ ἡδονὴν ἐζήτησε, δι' ἧς ψυχικός θάνατος ἐπιγίνεται, τῇ γῇ προσενημήθη.

Harris, p. 15, from Dam. Par. 748 (Cod. Rupef. f. 20 b), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητουμένων.

55. (Gen. iii. 22)

Οὔτε ἐνδυσασμὸς οὔτε φθόνος περὶ θεόν· χρήται δὲ πολλάκις ὀνόμασιν ἐνδυσαστικαῖς ἢ διανοητικοῖς κατ' ἀναφορὰν ἐπὶ τὸ "ὡς ἄνθρωπος" κεφάλαιον. Διτὰ γάρ, ὡς πολλάκις ἔφην, ἐστὶν τὰ ἀνωτάτω κεφάλαια· τὸ μὲν "οὐκ ὡς ἄνθρωπος ὁ θεός," τὸ δὲ "ὡς ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει τὸν υἱόν." Τὸ μὲν πρότερον ἐξουσίας, τὸ δὲ δεύτερον παιδείας καὶ εἰσαγωγῆς ἐστίν.

Harris, p. 15, from Parallels of Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 669=Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τῶν αὐτῶν=ἐκ τοῦ β' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

"Ἄλλος δὲ φησὶν ὡς οὐκ ἐνδοιάζει τὸ θεῖον καὶ ἐνδοιαστικοῖς ὀνόμασι χρήται. Διτὰ γάρ ἐστὶ τὰ ἀνωτάτω κεφάλαια, τὸ μὲν "οὐκ ὡς ἄνθρωπος ὁ θεός," τὸ δὲ "ὡς ἄνθρωπος παιδεύει τὸν υἱόν, οὕτως κύριος ὁ θεὸς παιδεύσει σε." Τὸ μὲν οὖν πρότερον ἐξουσίας ἐστίν, τὸ δὲ δεύτερον παιδείας καὶ ἐξαγωγῆς, ἵνα καὶ τὸ ἐκούσιον παρεισέλθῃ. Τὸ γὰρ "μήποτε" οὐκ ἐστὶν ἐπαμφοτερισμὸς τοῦ θεοῦ ἀλλ' ἀναφορὰ πρὸς ἄνθρωπον τὸν ἐπαμφοτεριστὴν τῇ φύσει καὶ μῆνυμα τοῦ περὶ ἐκείνον πάθους· ὅταν γὰρ προσπέσῃ τινὸς φαντασία, τρία εὐθὺς ἐπιγίνεται, ἄφορμὴ ἐκ τοῦ φανέντος, ὁρμὴ πρὸς τὸ φανέν, τρίτον ἐνδοιασμὸς ἀμφικλινῆς ἀντισπωμένης τῆς ψυχῆς, εἴθ' αἰρετέον εἶτε μῆ. Πρὸς δὴ τοῦτο τὸ τρίτον τὸ "μήποτε" ἀναφέρεται.

Wendland, pp. 36-37, from Procopius 225 B.

59. (Gen. iv. 2)

"Ὅρα δὲ πῶς ἐν μὲν τῇ γενέσει τὸν Κάιν προέταξε κατὰ τάξιν

GENESIS, BOOK I

τὴν χρονικὴν, ἐν δὲ τοῖς ἐπιτηδεύμασι προτάττει τὸν δίκαιον· τὰ γὰρ ἐμφυχα τῶν ἀψύχων τῷ τῆς φύσεως λόγῳ διαφέρει, καὶ ἡ ποιμαντικὴ προοιμιάζεται τὴν ἑαυτοῦ τε καὶ ἄλλων ἀρχὴν. Οὐκ ἐρρήθη δὲ γεωργός ὁ Κάιν, ἀλλ' ἐργαζόμενος τὴν γῆν. Οὐ γὰρ ἦν ἀστείως κατὰ τὸν Νῶε, ὅστις γεωργός, οὐκ ἐργάτης εἴρηται.

Wendland, p. 37, from Procopius 233 v, “. . . aber Pr. oder sein Gewährsmann benutzt vielleicht am Schluss ein verlorenes Stück der Quaest.”

60. (Gen. iv. 34)

“Ορα τοίνυν φιλαύτου καὶ φιλοθέου διαφορὰν· ὁ μὲν μεθ' ἡμέρας ἀλλ' οὐκ εὐθύς καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν καρπῶν, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ τῶν πρώτων καὶ τούτων ἐστὶ διανομεὺς πρὸς θεόν· τοιαύτη γὰρ ἡ θυσία· ὁ δὲ τὰ πρωτότοκα μηδὲν μελλήσας καθιεροῖ καὶ τοῦ προσενεχθέντος παντός παραχωρεῖ τῷ θεῷ· ἐπεὶ δὲ<sup>α</sup> γὰρ ὁ θεὸς ἐπὶ τοῖς δώροις αὐτοῦ δωρητικὸς, οὐ διανομεὺς γεγονώς. “Ορα δὲ καὶ ὅτι ὅσον ἐκ τῆς τάξεως ἀρξαμένου πρώτου, τοῦ Κάιν δευτέρου μέμνηται λέγων “ἐπεὶ δὲν ὁ θεὸς ἐπὶ “Ἀβελ, ἐπὶ δὲ Κάιν καὶ ταῖς θυσίαις αὐτοῦ οὐ προσέσχεν.”

Wendland, p. 38, from Procopius 236 λ.

Οὕτως οἶμαι τὰ πρωτότοκα καθιερώων ὁ “Ἀβελ<sup>β</sup> φιλόθεον μᾶλλον ἢ φίλαντον τὴν ἑαυτοῦ συνίστησι προαίρεσιν. Ἐαυτῷ δὲ ὁ Κάιν ἀπονέμων τὰ γεννήματα καὶ τῶν δευτεριῶν<sup>γ</sup> ἀσεβῶς τὸν θεὸν ἀξιῶν τῷ καὶ μεθ' ἡμέρας ἀλλὰ μὴ εὐθέως προσενεγκεῖν φίλαντος μᾶλλον ἢ φιλόθεος ἐξελέγχεται.

Praechter, p. 418, from Leo Grammaticus, pp. 244, 34–245, 21 (cf. Theod. Mel., pp. 11, 18–12, 13, Ps.-Polydeuces, pp. 44, 8–46, 11).

61. (Gen. iv. 4-5)

Οὕτως οὐχ ἡ τάξις τὸ πρωτεῖον ἀλλ' ἡ γνώμη χαρίζεται.

Wendland, p. 38, from Procopius 236 λ.

<sup>α</sup> ἐπεὶ δὲ Wendland : ἐπεὶ δὲ codd.

<sup>β</sup> καθιερώων ὁ “Ἀβελ edd. : καθιεροῦν(τα) τὸν “Ἀβελ codd. : καθιέρωσεν “Ἀβελ Sym. Log., Cod. Vind. 91.

<sup>γ</sup> δευτεριῶν corr. Praechter.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

62. (Gen. iv. 4-5)

Ζητῶν τίνοι διαφέρει δῶρον θυσίας, εὐρίσκω ὅτι ὁ μὲν θύων ἐπιδιαιρεῖ, τὸ μὲν αἷμα τῷ βωμῷ προχέων, τὰ δὲ κρέα οἴκαδε κομίζων· ὁ δὲ δωρούμενος ὄλον ἔοικε παραχωρεῖν τῷ λαμβάνοντι· ὁ μὲν οὖν φίλαντος διανομεὺς οἶος ὁ Κάιν, ὁ δὲ φιλόθεος δώρηται οἶον<sup>a</sup> ὁ Ἄβελ.

Harris, p. 15, from Cramer, Catena in Heb., p. 580 (Cod. Paris, 238).

Διαφέρει δὲ δῶρον θυσίας, ὅτι ὁ μὲν θύων ἐπιδιαιρεῖ τὸ μὲν αἷμα τῷ βωμῷ προσχέων, τὰ δὲ κρέα οἴκαδε κομίζων, ὁ δὲ δωρούμενος ὄλου<sup>b</sup> ἔοικε παραχωρεῖν τῷ λαμβάνοντι.

Wendland, p. 38, from Procopius 237 B (cf. Gennadius, Cat. Lips. 108).

Ἔοικε γὰρ ἐπιδιαιρεῖν ὁ θύων καὶ τὸ μὲν αἷμα τῷ θυσιαστηρίῳ προχέειν,<sup>c</sup> τὰ δὲ κρέα οἴκαδε ἀποκομίζειν,<sup>d</sup> ὁ δὲ δωρούμενος πάντη<sup>e</sup> τῷ λαμβάνοντι παραχωρεῖ τὸ δῶρον.

Praechter, p. 418, from Leo Grammaticus, pp. 244, 34-245, 21 (cf. Theod. Mel. pp. 11, 18-12, 13, Ps. - Polydeuces, pp. 44, 8-46, 11).

64. (Gen. iv. 7)

(a) Ὁρθὴ δὲ διαίρεσις καὶ τομῆ<sup>f</sup> οὐδὲν ἕτερόν ἐστιν ἢ τάξις καθ' ἣν ὁ κόσμος δεδημιούργηται. Καὶ ταύτην δεῖ κατὰ πάντα τοῦ βίου μιμεῖσθαι τὰ πράγματα καὶ μάλιστα ἐν χαρίτων ἀμοιβαῖς.

Wendland, p. 39, from Procopius 237 D.

(b) Τὸ μὲν οὖν εὐχαριστεῖν τῷ θεῷ καθ' ἑαυτὸ<sup>g</sup> ὀρθῶς ἔχον ἐστὶ, τὸ δὲ μήτε πρῶτον μήτε ἐκ τῶν πρῶτων ἀπαρχόμενον ψεκτόν. Οὐ γὰρ δεῖ τὰ μὲν πρεσβεῖα τὴν γένεσιν ἑαυτῇ, τὰ δὲ δεύτερα τῷ ἀγενήτῳ προσ-

Τὸ εὐχαριστεῖν θεῷ καθ' ἑαυτὸ ὀρθῶς ἔχον ἐστὶ· τὸ δὲ μήτε πρῶτον μήτε ἐκ τῶν πρῶτων ἀπαρχόμενον ψεκτόν. Οὐ γὰρ δεῖ τὰ μὲν πρεσβεῖα ἐν τῇ γενέσει τιθέναι,<sup>h</sup> τὰ δὲ δεύτερα τῷ δωρησαμένῳ θεῷ προσ-

<sup>a</sup> δωρητικός οἶος con. Harris.

<sup>b</sup> ὄλον Mai.

<sup>c</sup> προσχέων Theod. Mel. et Cod. Vat. 163.

<sup>d</sup> κομίζειν Ps.-Polydeuces.

<sup>e</sup> edd. : παντὶ codd.

<sup>f</sup> τομῆ Wendland : τὸ μὴ codd.

<sup>g</sup> ἑαυτὸ Wendland : ἑαυτὸν codd.

<sup>h</sup> ἑαυτῷ τιθέναι con. Harris.

GENESIS, BOOK I

νέμειν, ὅπερ ἐξ ἀληθείας οὐκ ἔστιν εὐχαριστέιν.

Wendland, p. 39, from Procopius 237 D (continuing frag. (a)).

65. (Gen. iv. 7)

Τὸ μὴ ἀμαρτάνειν μηδὲν τὸ παράπαν μέγιστον ἀγαθόν· τὸ ἀμαρτάνοντα ἐντραπήναι συγγενές ἐκείνου, νεώτερον, ὡς ἂν τις εἴποι, παρὰ πρεσβύτερον. Εἰσὶ γὰρ οἱ ἐπὶ ἀμαρτανομένοις ὡς ἐπὶ κατορθώμασι ἀγαλλόμενοι δυσίατον, μᾶλλον δὲ ἀνίατον νόσον ἔχοντες.

Harris, p. 16, from Dam. Par. 751 (=Cod. Rupef. f. 46 b), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζήτουμένων.

φέρειν. Ἦδε ἐστὶν ἐπίληπτος διαίρεσις, ἀταξίαν τινὰ τάξεως εἰσηγουμένη.

Harris, p. 16, from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 668 = Cod. Rupef. f. 269 b).

Μέγιστον μὲν γὰρ ἀγαθὸν τὸ μηδὲν ἀμαρτεῖν, δεύτερον δὲ τὸ ἐντραπήναι τοῖς ἀμαρτήμασιν· ὁ δὲ διὰ τὴν ἀτιμίαν, οὐ τὴν ἀμαρτίαν λελύπητο.

Wendland, p. 39, from Procopius 237 D.

66. (Gen. iv. 7)

Οἷς ἀντιλέγοντες ἕτεροι οὐ περὶ τοῦ θεοσεβοῦς λέγειν φασίν, ἀλλὰ περὶ τοῦ πραχθέντος ἔργου. Φησὶ γὰρ αὐτῶ ὅτι τούτου τοῦ ἀσεβήματος ἡ ἀποστροφή καὶ ἡ ἀναφορὰ πρὸς σέ ἐστίν, ἵνα τὸ ἐκούσιον παραστήσῃ· “καὶ σύ,” φησίν, “ἄρξεις αὐτοῦ,” πρῶτος γὰρ ἀσεβεῖν ἤρξεν<sup>a</sup>. ἔπεται δὲ ὡς κρηπίδι τῇ ἀσεβείᾳ καὶ τὰ λοιπὰ πλημμελήματα ὡς ἔξαρχον καὶ ἡγεμόνα παντὸς ἀδικήματος ἐκουσίου τούτου<sup>b</sup> εἶναι.

Wendland, p. 40, from Procopius 240 B.

68. (Gen. iv. 9) Πυνθάνεται θεός· ποῦ Ἄβελ ὁ ἀδελφός σου;

Οὐχ ὡς ἀγνοῶν· τοιγαροῦν ἀρνούμενον ἠλεγξεν· ἀλλ' ἐπισκοπῆς πρὸς ἰατροίαν αὐτὸν ἀξιώων καὶ ἐφιστῶν αὐτὸν τῷ μεγέθει τοῦ πλημμελήματος καὶ πρόφασιν μετανοίας διδοῦς καὶ δεικνὺς δι' ὅλης τῆς νομοθεσίας ὡς παρ' ἡμᾶς ἐστὶ τὰδικήματα· ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἄκων πρᾶξας ὁμολογεῖ συγγνώμην αἰτῶν, ὁ δὲ ἐκὼν ἀρνεῖται.

Wendland, pp. 40-41, from Procopius 240 D (“Das philo-nische Original ist zum Teil erhalten in Barberinus VI 8 f. 82 unter dem falschen Titel φίλωνος επισκόπου: οὐχ ὡς ἀγνοῶν τοιγαροῦν τὸν ἀρνούμενον bis διδούς ohne Abweichungen vom Texte des Pr.”).

<sup>a</sup> ἤρξας ex Arm. con. Wendland.

<sup>b</sup> τοῦτο Cod. Aug.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

69. (Gen. iv. 9) Ὡς δὲ τῆς μετανοίας ἠλλάξατο τὴν ἀναίδειαν εἰπὼν ἀγνοεῖν καὶ μὴ φύλαξ εἶναι τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ.

Καίτοι τεττάρων ὄντων ἀνθρώπων, οὐς εἰκὸς ἦν μηδὲ πόρρω λίαν ἀλλήλων καθίσασθαι, καὶ παντὸς μᾶλλον τὸν ἀδελφὸν φυλάττειν ὀφείλοντος, ἔτι δὲ καὶ ἄθεον δεικνύντος ὑπόληψιν τῷ μὴ νομίζειν πάντα τὸν θεῖον ἐφορᾶν ὀφθαλμόν.

Wendland, p. 41, from Procopius 241 A.

70. (Gen. iv. 10)

Τί δ' ἐστὶν “ φωνὴ αἵματος τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου βοᾷ πρὸς με ἐκ τῆς γῆς ”;

Δογματικώτατόν ἐστιν τὸ γὰρ θεῖον ὁσίων μὲν ὑπακούει, καὶ τελευτήσωσι, ζῆν αὐτοὺς ὑπολαμβάνον τὴν ἀσώματον ζωὴν, εὐχὰς δὲ φαύλων ἀποστρέφεται, καὶ εὐεξία χρήσονται, νομίζον αὐτοὺς τὸν ἀληθῆ βίον τεθνάναι, τὸ σῶμα οἶον τύμβον περιφέροντας, ᾧ τὴν πανάθλιον ψυχὴν ἐγκατώρυξαν.

Lewy, p. 55, from Dam. Par., Cod. Len. f. 27v, Φίλωνος Ἑβραίου (cf. Cod. Barb. f. 82<sup>v</sup>, Cod. Mosqu. 124<sup>r</sup>).

188

Φησὶν ὁ θεός· “ φωνὴ αἵματος τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ σου βοᾷ πρὸς με.”

Δυνατὸν δὲ καὶ τὸ αἶμα ἀντὶ τῆς ψυχῆς ἐνταῦθα εἰρῆσθαι, καὶ ἔστι δογματικώτατον τὸ γὰρ θεῖον ὁσίων μὲν ὑπακούει, καὶ τελευτήσωσι, ζῆν αὐτοὺς ὑπολαμβάνον τὴν ἀθάνατον ζωὴν, εὐχὰς δὲ φαύλων ἀποστρέφεται, καὶ εὐεξία χρήσονται, νομίζον αὐτοὺς τὸν ἀληθῆ βίον τεθνάναι.

Wendland, p. 41, from Procopius 241 A.

Δικαίων γὰρ ἐπακούει (sc. ὁ θεός), καὶ τελευτήσαντες ὦσιν, ἀδίκων δὲ καὶ αὐτὰς ἀποστρέφεται τὰς εὐχὰς· τοὺς μὲν γὰρ καὶ τεθνεώτας νενόμικε ζῆν, τοὺς δὲ καὶ ζῶντας τὴν ἀληθῆ κέκρικε τεθνηκέναι ζωὴν.

Praechter, p. 419, from Leo Grammaticus, p. 245, 27-30 (cf. Theod. Mel. p. 12, 18-20, Ps.-Polydeuces, p. 46, 15-17).

GENESIS, BOOK I

72. (Gen. iv. 12)

Λόγιον δέ, φασίν, ἐστὶ καὶ τοῦτο καθολικώτατον· παντὶ γὰρ φαύλω τῶν κακῶν τὸ μὲν ἤδη πρόσσεσι, τὰ δὲ μέλλει· τὰ μὲν οὖν μέλλοντα φόβους, τὰ δὲ παρόντα λύπας ἐργάζεται.<sup>a</sup>

Wendland, pp. 41-42, from Procopius 241 D ("Das philonische Original ist erhalten in Barb. VI 8 f. 83").

73. (Gen. iv. 13)

Οὐκ ἔστι συμφορὰ μείζων ἢ τὸ ἀφεθῆναι καὶ καταλειφθῆναι ὑπὸ θεοῦ.

Wendland, p. 42, from Procopius 243 B.

74. (Gen. iv. 14) Τίνα δὲ δέδοικεν ὁ Κάϊν μηδενὸς ὄντος πλὴν αὐτοῦ καὶ τῶν γονέων;

Προσεδόκα δέ, φασί, καὶ τὴν ἐκ τῶν μερῶν τοῦ κόσμου ἐπίθεσιν ἄπερ ἐπ' ὠφελείᾳ γενόμενα<sup>b</sup> οὐδὲν ἤττον ἀμύνεται τοὺς πονηροὺς, εἶτα καὶ τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν θηρίων καὶ ἐρπετῶν ἐπιβουλήν, ἄπερ ἢ φύσις ἐπὶ τιμωρίᾳ τῶν ἀδίκων ἐγέννησεν.<sup>c</sup> Ἴσως δὲ καὶ τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν γονέων τίσιν ὑπονοεῖ, οἷς κοινὸν πένθος προσέβαλεν ἀγνοοῦσι τὸν θάνατον.

Wendland, p. 42, from Procopius 245 A.

76. (Gen. iv. 15)

Τὸ μὲν γὰρ τελευτῆσαι τῶν ἐν τῷ βίῳ πονηρῶν ἐπάγει τὴν κατάπαυσιν· τὸ δὲ ζῆν ἐν φόβῳ καὶ λύπῃ μορίου ἐπάγει τοὺς συν αἰσθήσει<sup>d</sup> θανάτους.

Praechter, p. 419, from Leo Grammaticus, p. 246, 11-13 (cf. Theod. Mel. p. 13, 10-12).

77. (Gen. iv. 23)

Ὁ μὲν Κάϊν,<sup>e</sup> ἐπειδὴ τὸ μέγεθος τοῦ ἄγους ἠγνόησε, τοῦ μηδέποτε περιπεσεῖν θανάτῳ, τιμωρίας δίδωσιν ἀπλουστέρας. Ὁ

<sup>a</sup> ἀπεργάζεται Cod. Barb.

<sup>b</sup> γενόμενα Wendland : γινόμενα codd.

<sup>c</sup> τίνα . . . ἐγέννησεν, cf. Cat. Lips. 112, Ἀδήλου.

<sup>d</sup> συναισθήσει Theod. Mel. : ἐν συνεσθήσει Sym. Log., Cod. Vind. : ἐν αἰσθήσει con. Praechter.

<sup>e</sup> add. ἴσως Cod. Reg.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

δὲ μιμητῆς ἐκείνου, μὴ δυνάμενος εἰς τὴν αὐτὴν<sup>a</sup> ἀπολογίαὶν τῆς ἀγνοίας συμφυγεῖν,<sup>b</sup> δεκαπλᾶς<sup>c</sup> εἰκότως ὑπομένει δίκας. . . . Διὰ τοῦτο “ ἐκ δὲ Λάμεχ ἐβδομηκοντάκις ἑπτὰ ”· διὰ τὴν εἰρημένην αἰτίαν, καθ’ ἣν ὁ δευτέρος ἀμαρτῶν καὶ μὴ σωφρονισθεὶς τῆ τοῦ προηδικηκότος τιμωρία τὴν τε ἐκείνου παντελῶς ἀναδέχεται ἀπλουτέραν οὖσαν, καθάπερ ἐν ἀριθμοῖς αἱ μονάδες ἔχουσι, καὶ πολυπλασιωτέραν,<sup>d</sup> ὁμοιουμένην ταῖς ἐν ἀριθμοῖς δεκάσιν. ἦν γνωσιμαχῶν Λάμεχ καθ’ ἑαυτοῦ.<sup>e</sup>

Harris, p. 17, from Dam. Par. 776 (Cod. Rupef. and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 356 b).

79. (Gen. iv. 26)

Ἐλπίς ἐστὶ προπάθειά τις χαρᾶς<sup>f</sup> πρὸ χαρᾶς, ἀγαθῶν οὖσα προσδοκία.

Harris, p. 17, from Anton Melissa (Patr. Gr. 136, col. 789).

81. (Gen. v. 3)

Καὶ τὸ μὲν ἐκ Κάιν γένος μέχρι τούτου μνήμης τῆς ἐν βίβλοις ἠξίεται, τοῦ δὲ<sup>g</sup> ἀριθμοῦ τῶν πατέρων<sup>h</sup> ἀποκεκήρυκται, ἵνα μηδὲ τοῖς πρώτοις εἶη συνταττόμενος μηδὲ τῶν ἐξῆς ἀφηγουμένοις,<sup>i</sup> διὰ δὲ τὸ τῆς προαιρέσεως ἄγριον ὥσπερ ἐπὶ τὴν ἄλογον ἐκ τῆς λογικῆς φύσεως ἐξώριται.

Praechter, pp. 419-420, from Ps.-Polydeuces, p. 54, 9-14 (cf. Leo Grammaticus, p. 246, 26-29, Theod. Mel. p. 13, 24-27).

85. (Gen. v. 23-24)

Ἦδη τινὲς ἀψίκοροι γευσάμενοι καλοκάγαθίας καὶ ἐλπίδα παρασχόντες ὑγείας εἰς τὴν αὐτὴν ἐπανέστρεψαν νόσον.

Harris, p. 17, from Dam. Par. 784 (“ apparently as ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων, an easy confusion ”).

<sup>a</sup> αὐτὴν om. Cod. Reg.

<sup>b</sup> καταφυγεῖν Cod. Rupef.

<sup>c</sup> διπλᾶς Cod. Rupef.

<sup>d</sup> τιμωρία . . . πολυπλασιωτέραν] τιμωρία οὐ μόνον τῆ ἐκείνου παντελῶς ἀναδέχεσθαι ἀλλὰ καὶ πολὺ πλειότεραν Cod. Reg.

<sup>e</sup> ἦν . . . ἑαυτοῦ susp. Harris.

<sup>f</sup> Harris: χαρὰ codd.

<sup>g</sup> τοῦ δὲ Praechter cum par.: καὶ τοῦ Ps.-Polydeuces.

<sup>h</sup> πρώτων Sym. Log. et Leo Grammaticus.

<sup>i</sup> ἀφηγούμενος mal. Praechter cum Sym. Log. et Leo Grammatico.

GENESIS, BOOK I

89. (Gen. vi. 1)

Ἄει φθάνουσι τὴν δίκην αἱ τοῦ θεοῦ χάριτες. Ἔργον γὰρ αὐτῶ προηγούμενον τὸ εὐεργετεῖν, τὸ δὲ κολάζειν ἐπόμενον. Φιλεῖ δέ, ὅταν μέλλῃ μεγάλα συνίστασθαι κακά, μεγάλων καὶ πολλῶν ἀγαθῶν ἀφθονία προγενέσθαι.

Harris, p. 18, from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 670), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητουμένων.

92. (Gen. vi. 4)

Πνευματικαὶ τῶν ἀγγέλων οὐσαί· εἰκάζονται δὲ πολλάκις ἀνθρώπων ἰδέαις, πρὸς τὰς ὑποκειμένας χρείας μεταμορφούμενοι.

Harris, p. 18, from Dam. Par. 309, 772, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητουμένων.

93. (Gen. vi. 6)

Ἔνιοι νομίζουσι μεταμέλειαν ἐμφαίνεσθαι περὶ τὸ θεῖον διὰ τῶν ὀνομάτων· οὐκ εὖ δὲ ὑπονοοῦσι. χωρὶς γὰρ τοῦ μὴ τρέπεσθαι τὸ θεῖον, οὔτε τὸ “ἐνεθυμήθη” οὔτε τὸ “ἐνενόησεν” δηλωτικὰ μεταμελείας ἐστίν—τὸ δὲ θεῖον ἄτρεπτον—ἀλλ' ἀκραίφνους λογισμοῦ περιεσκεμμένου τὴν αἰτίαν, ἧς ἔνεκα ἐποίησεν τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς.

Harris, p. 18, from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 669), ἐκ τῶν β' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

94. (Gen. vi. 7)

Διὰ τί ἄνθρωπον ἀπειλῶν ἀπαλεῖψαι καὶ τὰ ἄλογα προσδιαφθείρει;

Διότι οὐ προηγούμενως δι' ἑαυτὰ γέγονε τὰ ἄλογα ἀλλὰ χάριν ἀνθρώπων καὶ τῆς τούτων ὑπηρεσίας, ὧν διαφθειρομένων εἰκότως καὶ ἐκεῖνα συνδιαφθείρεται, μηκέτι ὄντων δι' οὓς γέγονε. [Ἐκ τούτου δηλον ὅτι διὰ τὸν ἄνθρωπον πάντα τὰ

Διὰ τί ἀπειλῶν τὸν ἄνθρωπον ἀπαλεῖψεν<sup>a</sup> καὶ τὰ ἄλογα<sup>b</sup> προσδιαφθείρει;

Ἔτι οὐ προηγούμενως δι' ἑαυτὰ γέγονεν τὰ ἄλογα ἀλλὰ χάριν ἀνθρώπων καὶ τῆς τούτων ὑπηρεσίας, ὧν διαφθειρομένων εἰκότως καὶ ἐκεῖνα συνδιαφθείρεται, μηκέτ' ὄντων τῶν δι' οὓς γέγονε, συμμετροῦντος τοῦ θεοῦ τὸν ἀριθμὸν τῶν σωθησομένων

<sup>a</sup> e Cod. Barb. Wendland : ἀπαλεῖψαι vulg.

<sup>b</sup> λοιπὰ Mai, Aug.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ζῶα ἐγένετο· διὸ καὶ ἀπολλυμένου τοῦ δεσπότου συναπόλλυται καὶ αὐτά, συμμετροῦντος τοῦ θεοῦ τὸν ἀριθμὸν τῶν σωθησομένων ζώων πρὸς τὴν χρείαν τῶν φυλαχθησομένων
ἀνθρώπων ὡσπερ οὖν καὶ ἀπ’
ἀρχῆς δύο δύο ἔκτισεν.]<sup>a</sup>

Harris, pp. 18-19, from
Cat. Ined. Cod. Reg. 1825
(Mangey ii. 675), and Cat.
Mus. Britt. Cod. Burney 34,
f. 35, Φίλωνος Ἑβραίου, cf.
Cat. Lips. 1, col. 141, “where it is attributed to Procopius.”

ἀνθρώπων, ὡσπερ οὖν καὶ ἀπ’
ἀρχῆς δύο δύο ἔκτισεν.

Wendland, p. 47, from Procopius 272 B (cf. Theo-doret, Quaest. in Gen. 1, Chrys. Cat. Lips. 142).

95. (Gen. vi. 7)

Ὅτι δὲ τῆς κακίας κολαζομένης ἡ ἀρετὴ διασώζεται Νῶε δεδήλωκεν.

Wendland, pp. 49-50, from Procopius 292 A.

96. (Gen. vi. 8) . . . ὃς λέγεται χάριν εὐρεῖν παρὰ τῷ θεῷ.

Ὡς τῶν ἄλλων δι’ ἀχαριστίαν ἀπολωλότων οὐ γὰρ ὡς χάριν λαβῶν ἐκ θεοῦ—κοινὸν γὰρ τοῦτο πάντων ἀνθρώπων—ἀλλ’ ἐπεὶ μόνος εὐχάριστος διεφάνη. Ἔδει δὲ καὶ χάριτος ἀξιωθῆναι θείας τὸν τοῦ νέου γένους κατάρξαντα· μεγίστης γὰρ χάριτος ἀρχὴν καὶ τέλος ἀνθρώπων γενέσθαι. Διὸ καὶ ἀπὸ τῶν ἀρετῶν αὐτὸν γενεαλογεῖ· τοῦ γὰρ σπουδαίου τὸ πρὸς ἀλήθειαν γένος ἐστὶν ἀρετῆ.
Πρὸς ὃν καὶ φησι· “καιρὸς παντὸς ἀνθρώπου ἦκει ἐναντίον ἐμοῦ.”
Ὅντως γὰρ οὐδὲν ὡς ἀδικία πρὸς τὸν θεὸν ἐναντίον.

Wendland, p. 50, from Procopius 292 A.

99. (Gen. vi. 12)

Καλῶς δὲ καὶ σάρκα κινουμένην λέγει τὴν ἐν φθορᾷ· κινεῖ γὰρ τὰς ἡδονὰς ἢ τὰς σαρεῖς καὶ κινεῖται ὑπὸ τῶν ἡδονῶν, ἧτις κινήσεις αἰτία γίνεται φθορᾶς ταῖς ψυχαῖς ὡς ἡ ἐγκράτεια σωτηρίας.

Wendland, pp. 55-56, from Procopius 269 D.

<sup>a</sup> Ἐκ τούτου . . . ἔκτισεν] e Cod. Barb. vi. 8 add. Wendland.

GENESIS, BOOK I

100. (Gen. vi. 13)

(a) Οὐδὲν ἐναντίον καὶ μαχόμενον ταῖς ὀσιωτάταις τοῦ θεοῦ δυνάμεσιν ἔστιν οὕτως ὡς ἀδικία.

Harris, p. 70 (identified by Früchtel), from Dam. Par. 787 (Cod. Rupef. f. 238), ἐκ τοῦ β' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

(b) Ὁ καιρὸς παρὰ τοῖς φανλοτέροις νομίζεται εἶναι θεὸς τὸν ὄντα ὄντως παρακαλυπτομένοις . . . καὶ θεοπλαστούντων καὶ ἐξ ἐναντίας τιθέντων τῷ ἀληθεῖ θεῷ τὸ λέγειν τὸν καιρὸν αἴτιον τῶν ἐν τῷ βίῳ πραγμάτων εἶναι. Τοῖς γὰρ εὐσεβέσι οὐ καιρὸν ἀλλὰ θεὸν παρ' οὗ καὶ οἱ καιροὶ καὶ οἱ χρόνοι· πλὴν αἴτιον οὐ πάντων ἀλλὰ μόνων ἀγαθῶν καὶ τῶν κατ' ἀρετήν· ὡς γὰρ ἀμέτοχος κακίας, οὕτω καὶ ἀναίτιος.

Harris, p. 19, from Cod. Rupef. f. 193, Φίλωνος περὶ κοσμοποιίας. "The last sentence also in Pitra (Anal. Sacr. ii. 307), from Cod. Coislin. 276, f. 238, and again in Rupef. 222 b."

Ἐπάγει δὲ καὶ τὸ τῆς ἐναντιώσεως αἴτιον τὸ πλησθῆναι τὴν γῆν ἀδικίας. Καὶ ἐπεὶ θεὸς ὁ καιρὸς παρὰ τοῖς φανλοῖς νομίζεται, δείκνυσιν ὡς καιρῶν καὶ χρόνων αὐτὸς ποιητῆς καὶ τούτοις ὄρον ἐντίθησιν, ὥστε καὶ ἀλλαχοῦ φησιν "ἀφέστηκεν ὁ καιρὸς ἀπ' αὐτῶν, ὁ δὲ κύριος ἐν ἡμῖν."<sup>a</sup> Τὸ δὲ "καιρὸς ἦκει" σημαίνει τὴν οἰονεὶ συμπλήρωσιν τῶν ἡμαρτημένων, μεθ' ἣν ὁ τῆς δίκης καιρὸς.

Wendland, pp. 50-51, from Procopius 292 A (Wendland adds a passage as "vielleicht . . . auch aus Philo," but this seems doubtful).

<sup>a</sup> Num. xiv. 9.

GENESIS, BOOK II

5. (Gen. v. 15)

(a) Ὅτι ὁ τριάκοντα ἀριθμὸς φυσικώτατός ἐστιν, ὃ γὰρ ἐν μονάσι τριάς, τοῦτο ἐν δεκάσι τριακοντάς. . . . Συνέστηκεν ἐκ τεσσάρων τῶν ἀπὸ μονάδος ἐξῆς τετραγώνων ἀ' δ' θ' ις'.

Staehele, p. 63, from Joh. Lydus, p. 55, 10-13.

(b) Δυνατὸν ἐν τριακοστῷ ἔτει αὐτὸν ἄνθρωπον πάππον γενέσθαι ἢ βῆαν μὲν περὶ τὴν τεσσαρεσκαίδεκάτην ἡλικίαν, ἐν ἣ σπείρει, τὸ δὲ σπαρὲν ἐντὸς ἐνιαυτοῦ γενόμενον, πάλιν πεντεκαίδεκάτῳ ἔτει τὸ ὅμοιον ἑαυτῷ γενῆαν.

Harris, p. 20, from Dam. Par. 314.

9. (Gen. vi. 17)

Cf. QG i. 94.

10. (Gen. vi. 18)

Ἄνθρωποι μὲν κληρονομοῦνται ὅταν μηκέτι ὦσιν ἀλλὰ τεθνώσιν,<sup>a</sup> ὁ δὲ θεὸς αἰδῖος ὢν μεταδίδωσι τοῦ κλήρου τοῖς σοφοῖς [ζῶν ἀεὶ]<sup>b</sup> εὐφραϊνόμενος αὐτῇ τῇ περιουσίᾳ.<sup>c</sup>

Lewy, p. 56, from Dam. Par. Cod. Rupef. f. 136<sup>v</sup>, Φίλωνος.

11. (Gen. vii. 1)

(a) Πρῶτων ἐναργῆς πίστις ὅτι δι' ἓνα ἄνδρα δίκαιον καὶ ὅσιον πολλοὶ ἄνθρωποι σώζονται. Δεύτερον ἐπαινεῖ τὸν δίκαιον ἄνδρα ὡς μὴ μόνον ἑαυτῷ περιπεποιηκότα ἀρετὴν, ἀλλὰ καὶ παντὶ τῷ οἴκῳ, δι' ἣν αἰτίαν καὶ σωτηρίας ἀξιοῦνται. Παγκάλως δὲ τουτὶ προσετέθη ὅτι “σε εἶδον δίκαιον ἐνώπιον ἐμοῦ.” Ἐτέρως γὰρ

<sup>a</sup> ἀλλὰ τεθνώσιν ex Arm. et Ambros. ins. Lewy.

<sup>b</sup> ζῶν ἀεὶ (ex marg. ad αἰδῖος) recte secl. Lewy.

<sup>c</sup> αὐτῇ τῇ περιουσίᾳ] αὐτῶν τῇ κτίσει ex Arm. con. Lewy.

GENESIS, BOOK II

ἄνθρωποι δοκιμάζουσι τοὺς βίους καὶ ἑτέρως τὸ θεῖον, οἱ μὲν ἐκ τῶν φανερῶν, ὁ δὲ ἐκ τῶν κατὰ ψυχὴν ἀοράτων λογισμῶν.

Wendland, p. 48, from Procopius 280 B-C, Cod. Barb. vi. 8, f. 101.

(b) Καὶ τὸ “ ἐν τῇ γενεᾷ ταύτῃ,” ἵνα μήτε τὰς πρότερον κατακρίνειν δοκῇ μήτε τὰς αὐθις ἀπογινώσκειν.

Wendland, p. 52, from Procopius 293 B.

12. (Gen. vii. 2-3)

(a) Ὁ γὰρ κατ’ αὐτὴν ἀριθμὸς ἀμιγῆς ἐστὶ καὶ ἀμήτωρ, μήτε γεννῶν μήτε γεννώμενος ὡς ἕκαστος τῶν ἐν τῇ δεκάδι ἀριθμῶν. Ὅθεν καὶ οἱ Πυθαγόρειοι Ἀθηνᾶ τὴν ἐπτάδα ἀνατίθενται.

Staehele, p. 36, from Joh. Lydus, p. 43, 2-5.

(b) Ὡστε ὁ δύο ἀριθμὸς οὐ καθαρὸς, πρῶτον μὲν ὅτι κενός ἐστι καὶ οὐ ναστός, τὸ δὲ μὴ πλήρες οὐ καθαρὸν . . . ἀρχὴ δὲ ἀπειρίας καὶ ἀνισότητος, ἀπειρίας μὲν διὰ τὴν ὕλην, ἀνισότητος δὲ διὰ τοὺς ἑτερομήκεις. . . Ὅθεν οἱ παλαιοὶ ὡς ὕλην καὶ ἑτερότητα τὴν δυάδα παραλαμβάνουσι.

Staehele, p. 23, from Joh. Lydus, p. 24, 7-12.

(c) Ἡ ἐν τῷ φαύλῳ κακία διδυμοτοκεῖ. Διχόνους γὰρ <καὶ> ἐπαμφοτερῆς ὁ ἄφρων, τὰ ἄμικτα μίγνυς, καὶ φύρων καὶ συγχέων τὰ διακρίνεσθαι δυνάμενα, τοιαῦτα ἐν ψυχῇ χρώματα ἐπιφέρων, οἷάπερ ὁ λεπρὸς ἐν τῷ σώματι, μιαίνων καὶ τοὺς ὑγιεῖς λογισμοὺς ἀπὸ τῶν θανατούντων ἅμα καὶ φωνώντων.

Harris, p. 20, from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 663 = Cod. Rupef. f. 125 and 138 b).

(d) . . . Τὸ<sup>a</sup> τὴν ἡμετέραν τοῦ σώματος οὐσίαν γεώδη ὑπάρχουσαν μὴ εἰσάπαν περιοραθῆναι χρῆ πνευματικῆς καὶ σωζούσης ἐπιμελείας<sup>b</sup> οἰνοφλυγίαις μὲν γὰρ καὶ ὀψοφαγίαις καὶ λαγνεῖαις καὶ συνόλωσ ὑγρῶ καὶ διαρρέοντι βίῳ χρώμενοι νεκροφοροῦμεν σὺν τῇ ψυχῇ καὶ τὸ σῶμα, ἐὰν δὲ ἀποστραφῶμεν τῶν παθῶν τὸν βομβυσμόν, ζωηφοροῦμεν καθ’ ἑκάτερον.<sup>c</sup>

Lewy, p. 57, from Dam. Par. Cod. Const. f. 501<sup>v</sup>, Φίλωνος (“ mit christlicher Tendenz überarbeitet ”).

<sup>a</sup> ἠθικώτατον γὰρ τὸ ἐξ Arm. con. Lewy.

<sup>b</sup> περιοραθῆναι ὡσπερ ζῶων ἔρημον ἐξ Arm. con. Lewy.

<sup>c</sup> ἐὰν δὲ ὁ θεὸς ἐλεήσας ἀποστρέψῃ τῶν παθῶν τὸν κατακλυσμόν καὶ ξηρὰν ἀπεργάσῃται τὴν ψυχὴν, ἄρξεται ζωογονεῖν καὶ ψυχῶν τὸ σῶμα καθαρωτέρα ψυχῇ, ἧς ἡ σοφία κυβερνήτης ἐστὶν ἐξ Arm. con. Lewy.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

13. (Gen. vii. 4, 10)

Μεθ' ἑπτὰ δὲ τοῦ εἰσελθεῖν ἡμέρας ὁ κατακλυσμὸς γίνεται, τοῦ φιλανθρώπου θεοῦ διδόντος αὐτοῖς ἀναχώρησιν εἰς μετάνοιαν ἀμαρτημάτων ὁρώσιν αὐτόχρομα πλήρη τὴν κιβωτὸν ἀντίμιμον γῆς· καὶ τὸ ἐπιεικὲς δείκνυται τοῦ θεοῦ τὴν πολυετῆ μοχθηρίαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐπιλυομένου τοῖς μετανοοῦσιν ἡμέραις ὀλίγαις. Ἔστι δὲ ὁ ἑπτὰ ἀριθμὸς ὑπόμνημα τῆς τοῦ κόσμου γενέσεως, ἐναργῶς δηλοῦντος τοῦ θεοῦ ὅτι αὐτὸς εἰμι καὶ τότε κοσμοποιῶν καὶ τὰ μὴ ὄντα ἄγων εἰς τὸ εἶναι καὶ τὰ νῦν ὄντα διαφθεῖρων. Ἀλλὰ τοῦ μὲν αἴτιον ἀγαθότης ἐμῆ, τοῦ δὲ τῶν εὐεργετηθέντων ἀσέβεια.

Wendland, p. 53, from Procopius 296 v.

Διὰ τί μετὰ τὸ εἰσελθεῖν ἑπτὰ ἡμέρας διαγιγνσκονται, μεθ' ἃς ὁ κατακλυσμὸς;

Πρῶτον ἀναχώρησιν δίδωσιν ὁ Ἰλωσ εἰς μετάνοιαν ἀμαρτημάτων, ἵνα θεασάμενοι τὴν κιβωτὸν ἀντίμιμον γῆς ἔνεκα τοῦ καιροῦ γενομένην καὶ τὰ τῶν ζώων γένη ταμειύουσαν, ὧν ἔφερεν ἡ γῆ τὰ κατὰ μέρος εἶδη, πιστεύσωσι μὲν τῷ περὶ τοῦ κατακλυσμοῦ κηρύγματι τὴν διαφθορὰν εὐλαβηθέντες, καθέλωσι δὲ ἀσέβειαν καὶ κακίαν ἅπασαν. Δεύτερον τὴν ὑπερβολὴν τῆς ἐπιεικείας τοῦ σωτήρος καὶ εὐεργέτου παρίστησιν ἐναργῶς τὸ λόγιον τὴν πολυετῆ μοχθηρίαν τῶν ἀνθρώπων ἐπιλυομένου τοῖς μετανοοῦσιν ἡμέραις ὀλίγαις.

Wendland, p. 53, from Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 103<sup>v</sup>, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

14. (Gen. vii. 4, 12)

Ὁθεν καὶ Ἄρτεμις λέγεται ἀπὸ τοῦ ἄρτιου καὶ ὕλικου ἀριθμοῦ (sc. δευτέρα ἡμέρα). Τὸ γὰρ ἄρτιον μέσον διασπᾶται διαιρουμένον τοῦ ἐνός. Μόνος δὲ ἀδιαίρετος ὁ περιττός. Ὁ μὲν γὰρ ἄρρην ἀριθμὸς . . . τετράγωνος, αὐγὴ καὶ φῶς ἐξ ἰσότητος πλευρῶν συνεστῶς, ὁ δὲ θῆλυς ἑτερομήκης, νύκτα καὶ σκότον ἔχων διὰ τὴν ἀνισότητα. Ὁ δὲ ἑτερομήκης τὴν μὲν ἐλάττονα πλευρὰν ἐλάττονα ἔχει ἐνί, τὴν δὲ μείζω περιττοτέραν ἐνί.

Staeble, p. 23, from Joh. Lydus, pp. 23, 21–24, 7.

15. (Gen. vii. 4)

(a) Τί ἐστι· “ἐξαλείψω πᾶσαν τὴν ἐξανάστασιν ἣν ἐποίησα ἀπὸ προσώπου τῆς γῆς”;

GENESIS, BOOK II

Τί φασι οὐκ “ ἀπὸ τῆς γῆς ” ἀλλ’ “ ἀπὸ τοῦ προσώπου τῆς γῆς ”; τουτέστι τῆς ἐπιφανείας ἵνα ἐν τῷ βάθει ἡ ζωτικὴ δύναμις τῶν σπερμάτων ὄλων οὕσα φυλάττηται σῶα καὶ ἀπαθῆς παντὸς τοῦ βλάπτειν δυναμένου τῆς γὰρ ἰδίας προθέσεως οὐκ ἐπιλέλησται ὁ ποιητῆς· ἀλλὰ τὰ μὲν ἄνω καὶ κατ’ αὐτὴν τὴν ἐπιφανείαν κινούμενα φθείρει, τὰς δὲ ρίζας βυθίου<sup>a</sup> ἔᾶ πρὸς γένεσιν ἄλλων.

Harris, p. 21, from Cat. Burney, f. 35 b and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 144, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

(b) Θεοπρεπῶς γὰρ τὸ “ ἐξαλείψω ” ὡσπερ τῶν ἀπαλειφομένων τὰ μὲν γράμματα ἀπαλείφονται, αἱ δέλτοι δὲ διαμένουσιν· ἢ μὲν γὰρ ἀσεβῆς γενεὰ ἐξήλειπται, τὸ δὲ κατὰ διαδοχὴν τῆς οὐσίας γένος διετηρήθη, ὡς δίκαιον.

Harris, p. 21 (= Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 313), from Cod. Vat. 748, f. 23 and Cod. Vat. 1657, f. 23.

Θεοπρεπῶς γὰρ τὸ “ ἐξαλείψω ” γέγραπται. Συμβαίνει γὰρ ἐπὶ τῶν <ἀπ>αλειφομένων τὰ μὲν γράμματα ἀφανίζεσθαι, τὰς δὲ δέλτους ἢ βίβλους διαμένειν. Ἐξ οὗ παρίστησιν ὅτι τὴν μὲν ἐπιπολάζουσαν γένεσιν διὰ τὴν ἀσέβειαν ἀπαλείψει δίκην γραμμάτων, τὴν δὲ χώραν καὶ τὴν οὐσίαν τοῦ γένους τῶν ἀνθρώπων διαφυλάξει πρὸς τὴν αὐθις σποράν.

Wendland, p. 54, from Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 105.

<sup>a</sup> βυθίας Cat. Lips.

Πᾶσαν δὲ τὴν ἀνάστασιν οὐκ ἀπὸ γῆς ἐξαλείψειν ἀλλ’ “ ἀπὸ προσώπου,” λέγει, “ τῆς γῆς,” τοῦτ’ ἐστὶ τῆς ἐπιφανείας, ἵνα ἐν τῷ βάθει ἡ ζωτικὴ δύναμις τῶν σπερμάτων ὄλων φυλάττηται.

Τὰς γὰρ ρίζας βυθίου ἔᾶ πρὸς γένεσιν ἄλλων.

Wendland, p. 54, from Procopius 296 c.

“ Ἀπαλείψω ” δέ φησιν, ἐπεὶ καὶ τῶν ἀπαλειφομένων τὰ γράμματα μὲν ἀφανίζεται, αἱ δέλτοι δὲ διαμένουσιν· ὅθεν ἐκτρίβων τὴν ἀσεβῆ γενεὰν τῆς οὐσίας τοῦ γένους ἐφέισατο.

Wendland, p. 54, from Procopius 296 c.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

(c) Διὸ καὶ “ τὴν ἀνάστασιν ” φησιν· ἀναστάσει δὲ ἀντίπαλον καθαίρεισι, τὸ δὲ καθαιρεθὲν οὐκ εἰς ἅπαν ἀπόλλυται.

Wendland, p. 54, from Procopius 296 c.

16. (Gen. vii. 5)

Ἐπαινος δὲ τοῦ δικαίου τὸ πάντα ποιῆσαι τὰ προσταχθέντα, δεύτερον τὸ ἐντέλεσθαι μᾶλλον ἐθέλειν ἢ κελεύειν αὐτῷ τὸν θεόν· ἐντέλλονται μὲν γὰρ φίλοι, κελεύουσι δὲ δεσπότες· ὑπερβάλλει γὰρ ἐπὶ θεοῦ τὸ πρῶτον, εἰ καὶ μέγα τὸ δεύτερον.

Wendland, p. 55, from Procopius 296 c.

Μέγας ἔπαινος τοῦ δικαίου ὅτι τὰ προσταχθέντα πάντα ἐπετέλεσεν ἰσχυρογνώμονι λογισμῷ καὶ θεοφιλεῖ διανοίᾳ· δεύτερον δὲ ὅτι οὐκ ἐθέλει κελεύειν αὐτῷ μᾶλλον ἢ ἐντέλεσθαι. Κελεύουσι μὲν γὰρ καὶ προστάττουσι δούλοις δεσπότες, ἐντέλλονται δὲ φίλοι. Θαυμασὴ μὲν οὖν δωρεὰ καὶ τὸ ταχθῆναι τὴν ἐν δούλοις καὶ θεράπουσι παρὰ τοῦ θεοῦ τάξιν, ὑπερβολὴ δὲ εὐεργεσίας ἐστὶ τὸ καὶ φίλον γενηθῆναι γενητὸν ἀγενήτῳ.

Wendland, p. 55, from Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 101, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

17. (Gen. vii. 11)

Κατὰ τὸν τῆς ἰσημερίας καιρὸν ἐπισκῆπτει ὁ κατακλυσμός ἐν ἧ καὶ τὸν τοῦ γένους ἀρχηγέτην διαπεπλάσθαι φασίν· ὁ δὲ ἔβδομος μὴν λέγεται καὶ πρῶτος καθ' ἑτέραν καὶ ἑτέραν<sup>a</sup> ἐπιβολήν· διὸ καὶ ἡ

Πλησίον δὲ τοῦ τῆς ἰσημερίας καιροῦ γέγονεν ὁ κατακλυσμός ἐν τῇ πάντων αὐξήσει καὶ γενέσει τῶν ζώων φοβερωτέραν τὴν ἀπειλήν ἐπάγοντος τοῦ θεοῦ τῆς ἀσειβείας εἰς ἔλεγχον. Τότε δὲ καὶ γε-

Εὐλογον γὰρ καὶ τὸν τοῦ ἀνθρώπων γένους ἀρχηγέτην<sup>b</sup> Ἄδὰμ διαπεπλάσθαι τῷ καιρῷ τῆς ἔαρινῆς ἰσημερίας.<sup>c</sup> Ἰσημερία δ' ἔαρινῆ γίνεται καὶ τῷ ἔβδῳ μῆνι· ὁ δ' αὐτὸς λέγεται καὶ πρῶτος καθ' ἑτέραν

<sup>a</sup> καθ' ἑτέρας καὶ ἑτέρας Cod. Burney.

<sup>b</sup> ἢ γενάρχην ἢ πατέρα ἢ ὅπως δεῖ καλεῖν τὸν πρεσβύτατον ἐκείνον ex Arm. add. Lewy.

<sup>c</sup> ὅτ' ἦν κατάπλεως ἡ γῆ φυτῶν ex Arm. add. Lewy.

GENESIS, BOOK II

τοῦ Νῶε πρόσοδος ἐξομοιοῦται τῷ πρώτῳ γηγενεὶ ὡς ἀρχὴ συστάσεως δευτέρου κόσμου.

Harris, p. 22, from Cod. Burney, f. 36 a, Φίλωνος, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 149.

γονέαι τὴν δημιουργίαν εἰκὸς καὶ πεπλάσθαι τὸν ἄνθρωπον. Τῷ οὖν Ἀδάμ ἐξομοιοῦται καὶ Νῶε, γενεᾶς ἀνθρώπων δευτέρας ἀρχόμενος.

Wendland, p. 55, from Procopius 296 D.

καὶ ἑτέραν ἐπιβολήν. Ἐπεὶ οὖν<sup>a</sup> ἀρχὴ γίνεται δευτέρας ἀνθρώπων σποράς, ἐξομοιοῦται τῷ πρώτῳ γηγενεῖ.<sup>b</sup>

Lewy, p. 57, from Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 106<sup>v</sup> and Cat. Mosq. f. 157<sup>v</sup>, Φίλωνος.

26. (Gen. viii. 1) Πῶς δὲ “ τοῦ Νῶε μνησθεῖς ὁ θεὸς καὶ κτηνῶν καὶ θηρίων,” γυναικὸς ἢ τέκνων οὐ μέμνηται;

“ Ὅπου συμφωνία πάντων, ὀνομάτων οὐ χρεία πολλῶν· σὺν δὲ τῷ πρώτῳ καὶ τὸν οἶκον ἀνάγκη συνυπακούεσθαι.

Wendland, p. 56, from Procopius 296 D.

28. (Gen. viii. 1) Καὶ “ ἐπήγαγε,” φησί, “ πνεῦμα εἰς τὴν γῆν καὶ κεκόπακε τὸ ὕδωρ.”

Οὐκ ἀνέμῳ<sup>c</sup> ὕδωρ μειοῦται, κυμαίνει δὲ<sup>d</sup> καὶ ταράττεται· πάλαι γὰρ ἂν τὰ μέγιστα τῶν πελαγῶν ἐξανάλωτο. Πνεῦμα τοίνυν τὸ θεῖον φησιν, ᾧ δὴ πάντα καὶ γίνεται καὶ λωφᾶ· οὐκ ἦν γὰρ εὐλογον ὕδωρ τοσοῦτον ἀνέμῳ παυθῆναι, ἀοράτῳ δὲ καὶ θεία δύναμις.<sup>e</sup>

Wendland, p. 56, from Procopius 296 D, with variants of Cat. Lips. p. 148, Ἀδήλου.

29. (Gen. viii. 2)

Δῆλον δὲ ἔστιν ὡς ταῖς μὲν πρώταις μ' ἡμέραις ἄλεκτος<sup>f</sup> ἢ τῆς ρύμης τῶν ὑδάτων ὑπῆρχε φορά, ταῖς δὲ ἄλλαις ρ' καὶ ν' ἔχουσα

<sup>a</sup> καὶ Νῶε μετὰ τὴν τοῦ κατακλυσμοῦ φθορὰν πρώτη τοῦ γένους ex Arm. add. Lewy.

<sup>b</sup> καθ' ὅσον δυνατόν ex Arm. add. Lewy.

<sup>c</sup> ἀνέμοις Cat. Lips.

<sup>d</sup> κυμαίνεται Cat. Lips.

<sup>e</sup> πάλαι . . . δύναμις] ἀλλὰ τοῦτο ἦν τὸ τοῦ θεοῦ πνεῦμα, ὃ ἐξ ἀρχῆς ἐπεφέρετο ἐπάνω τοῦ ὕδατος Cat. Lips.

<sup>f</sup> Wendland: ἄλεκτος codd.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

πρῶως οὐκέτι πρὸς αὐξήσιν, πρὸς διαμονὴν δὲ τῆς ἀνακαλύψεως<sup>a</sup> καὶ τοῦ ὕψους συνεβάλλετο. “μεθ’ ἡμέρας” γάρ φησιν, “ρὺ ἐπικαλυφθῆναι τὰς τε πηγὰς καὶ τοὺς καταράκτας”. ἐνήργουν ἄρα πρὸ τῆς ἐπισχέσεως. Μετὰ ν’ δὲ καὶ ρ’ ἡμέρας ἤλαττοῦτο τὸ ὕδωρ. Ἄρα τὰς προειρημένας, ἐν αἷς ὑψοῦτο τὸ ὕδωρ ἢ μετὰ τοσαύτας ἐτέρας οὐκ εὐδηλον.

Wendland, pp. 56-57, from Procopius 296 D.

34. (Gen. viii. 6)

Αἱ αἰσθήσεις θυρίσιν εἰκόασι. Διὰ γὰρ τούτων ὡσανεὶ θυρίδων ἐπιεσέρχεται τῷ νῷ ἢ κατάληψις τῶν αἰσθητῶν καὶ πάλιν ὁ νοῦς ἐκκύπτει δι’ αὐτῶν. Μέρος δὲ ἐστὶ τῶν θυρίδων, λέγω δὴ τῶν αἰσθήσεων, ἢ ὄρασις, ἐπεὶ καὶ ψυχῆς μάλιστα συγγενής, ὅτιπερ καὶ τῷ καλλίστῳ τῶν ὄντων φωτὶ οἰκεία, καὶ ὑπέρτης τῶν θείων. Ἦτις καὶ τὴν εἰς φιλοσοφίαν ὁδὸν ἔτεμε τὴν πρώτην. Θεασάμενος γὰρ ἡλίου κίνησιν καὶ σελήνης καὶ τὰς τῶν ἀστέρων περιόδους καὶ τὴν ἀπλανῆ περιφορὰν τοῦ σύμπαντος οὐρανοῦ καὶ τὴν παντὸς τοῦ λόγου κρείττονα τάξιν τε καὶ ἁρμονίαν καὶ τὸν τοῦ κόσμου μόνον ἀψευδέστατον κοσμοποιόν, διήγγελλε τῷ ἡγεμόνι λογισμῶ ἃ εἶδεν. Ὁ δὲ ἐν ὄμματι ὀξυδερκεστέρῳ θεασάμενος καὶ παραδειγματικὰ εἶδη τούτων<sup>b</sup> ἀνωτέρω καὶ τὸν ἀπάντων αἰτιον, εὐθύς εἰς ἔννοιαν ἦλθε θεοῦ καὶ γενέσεως καὶ προνοίας, λογισάμενος ὅτι ὅλη φύσις οὐκ αὐτοματιθεῖσα γέγονεν,<sup>c</sup> ἀλλ’ ἀνάγκη ποιητὴν εἶναι καὶ πατέρα, κυβερνήτην τε καὶ ἡγίοχον, ὃς καὶ πεποίηκε καὶ ποιήματα αὐτοῦ σώζει.<sup>d</sup>

Harris, pp. 22-23, from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 665 = Cod. Rupef. f. 221), ἐκ τοῦ Περὶ κοσμοποιίας. The two variants in the footnotes, printed by Harris on p. 70 among “unidentified fragments” and located by Früchtel, also come from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 669), ἐκ τοῦ α’ τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητημ.

<sup>a</sup> ἀναλύσεως Cod. Aug.

<sup>b</sup> παραδειγματικὰ . . . τούτων con. Mangey : παραδείγματι καὶ εἶδει διὰ τούτων codd.

<sup>c</sup> ὅτι . . . γέγονεν] ἀμήχανον ἁρμονίαν καὶ τάξιν καὶ λόγον καὶ ἀναλογίαν καὶ τοσαύτην συμφωνίαν καὶ τῷ ὄντι εὐδαιμονίαν ἀπαντομοτιθεῖσαν γενέσθαι Joh. Monach. in alio loco.

<sup>d</sup> ἀλλ’ . . . σώζει] ἀνάγκη γὰρ εἶναι ποιητὴν καὶ πατέρα, κυβερνήτην τε καὶ ἡγίοχον, ὃς γεγέννηκεν καὶ γεννηθέντα σώζει Joh. Monach. in alio loco.

GENESIS, BOOK II

39. (Gen. viii. 9)

Σύμβολα δὲ κακίας καὶ ἀρετῆς ὅ τε κόραξ καὶ ἡ περιστέρα. Εἰ γὰρ αὕτη δευτέρα ἐξεληθοῦσα οὐχ εὗρεν ἀνάπαυσιν, πῶς ὁ κόραξ; Οὐδὲ γὰρ τὸ ζῶον ἔστιν ὑδρόβιον. Ἄλλὰ γὰρ ἡ κακία τοῖς κυμαίνουσιν ἐφήδεται, ἡ δὲ ἀρετὴ τούτων ἀποπηδᾷ πρὸς τὴν πρώτην δυσχεράνασα θεάν, ἀνάπαυσιν καὶ βάσιν ἐν τούτοις οὐχ ἔχουσα.

Wendland, pp. 57-58, from Procopius 297 c (cf. Cat. Lips. 150, Ἀδήλου).

41. (Gen. viii. 10)

Ὁ καλὸς καὶ ἀγαθὸς τοῦ διδασκάλου τρόπος καὶ ἂν ἐν ἀρχῇ σκληραύχενας ἴδη φύσει, οὐκ ἀπογινώσκει τὴν ἀμείνω μεταβολὴν ἀλλ' ὥσπερ ἀγαθὸς ἰατρός οὐκ εὐθύς ἐπιφέρει τὴν θεραπείαν ἅμα τῷ κατασκήψαι τὴν νόσον ἀλλ' ἀναχώρησιν τῇ φύσει δούς ἵνα προανατέμῃ τὴν εἰς σωτηρίαν ὁδόν, τηνικαῦτα χρῆται τοῖς ὑγιεινοῖς καὶ σωτηρίοις φαρμάκοις, οὕτω καὶ σπουδαῖος λόγοις κατὰ φιλοσοφίαν καὶ δόγμασιν.

Harris, p. 100, from Cod. Rupef. f. 137 (located by Früchtel).

47. (Gen. viii. 14)

Ἡ μὲν οὖν ἀρχὴ τοῦ κατακλυσμοῦ γέγονεν ἐβδόμῃ καὶ εἰκάδι τῆς ἔαρινῆς ἰσημερίας, ἡ δὲ μείωσις ἐβδόμῃ μετὰ ταύτην μηνὶ τῇ μετοπωρινῇ ἰσημερία, ἐβδόμῃ καὶ εἰκάδι τοῦ μηνός. Οὗτος γὰρ πέρασ μὲν τῆς πρώτης ἰσημερίας, ἀρχὴ δὲ τῆς δευτέρας, ὥσπερ ὁ ἀπὸ τούτου ἕβδομος πέρασ τῆς δευτέρας, ἀρχὴ δὲ τῆς πρώτης, ἐν ᾧ καὶ τοῦ κόσμου ἡ γένεσις.

Wendland, p. 57, from Procopius 296 d.

48. (Gen. viii. 15-16)

Εὐλαβῆς ὧν ὁ Νῶε ἀκόλουθον ἠγήσατο μετὰ τὸ κοπάσαι τὸ ὕδωρ ἀναμείναι τὴν τοῦ θεοῦ πρόσταξιν ἰν', ὥσπερ χρησιμοῖς εἰσελήλυθεν εἰς τὴν κιβωτόν, χρησιμοῖς πάλιν ὑπεξέλεθη, εἶπεν γὰρ κύριος ὁ θεὸς τῷ Νῶε· “ἐξελθε σὺ καὶ ἡ γυνὴ σου” καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς.

Wendland, p. 58, from Procopius ap. Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 108, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

54. (Gen. viii. 21)

(a) Ἡ πρότασις ἐμφαίνει μεταμέλειαν, ἀνοίκειον πάθος θείας δυνάμεως. Ἀνθρώποις μὲν γὰρ ἀσθενεῖς αἰ γινῶμαι καὶ ἀβέβαιοι, ὡς τὰ πράγματα πολλῆς γέμοντα ἀδηλότητος. Θεῶν δὲ οὐδὲν ἀδηλον, οὐδὲν ἀκατάληπτον· ἰσχυρογνωμονέστατος γὰρ καὶ βε-

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

βαιότατος. Πῶς οὖν τῆς αὐτῆς ὑπόουσης αἰτίας, ἐπιστάμενος ἐξ ἀρχῆς ὅτι ἐγκτεται ἢ διάνοια τοῦ ἀνθρώπου ἐπιμελῶς ἐπὶ τὰ πονηρὰ ἐκ νεότητος, πρῶτον μὲν ἔφθειρεν τὸ γένος κατακλυσμῶ, μετὰ δὲ ταυτὰ φησιν μηκέτι διαφθεῖρειν, καίτοι διαμενούσης ἐν τῇ ψυχῇ τῆς αὐτῆς κακίας; Λεκτέον οὖν ὅτι πᾶσα ἢ τοιαύδε τῶν λόγων ἰδέα περιέχεται ἐν τοῖς νόμοις πρὸς μάθησιν καὶ ὠφέλειαν διδασκαλίας μᾶλλον ἢ πρὸς τὴν φύσιν τῆς ἀληθείας. Διττῶν γὰρ ὄντων κεφαλαίων ἃ κείται διὰ πάσης τῆς νομοθεσίας· ἐνὸς μὲν καθ' ὃ λέγεται, “οὐχ ὡς ἄνθρωπος ὁ θεός”. ἐτέρου δὲ καθ' ὃ “ὡς ἄνθρωπος” παιδεύειν λέγεται νίον. Τὸ μὲν πρότερον τῆς ἀληθείας ἐστὶν ὄντως γὰρ ὁ θεὸς οὐχ ὡς ἄνθρωπος ἀλλ' οὐδὲ ὡς ἥλιος οὐδὲ ὡς οὐρανὸς οὐδὲ ὡς κόσμος αἰσθητὸς ἢ νοητὸς ἀλλ' ὡς θεός, εἰ καὶ τοῦτο θέμις εἶπειν. Ὁμοιότητα γὰρ ἢ σύγκρισιν ἢ παραβολὴν οὐκ ἐπιδέχεται τὸ μακάριον ἐκεῖνο, μᾶλλον δὲ μακαριότητος αὐτῆς ὑπεράνω. Τὸ δὲ ὕστερον τῆς διδασκαλίας καὶ ὑφηγήσεως, τὸ “ὡς ἄνθρωπος,” ἔνεκα τοῦ παιδεῦσαι τοὺς γηγενεῖς ἡμᾶς ἵνα μὴ τὰς ὀργὰς καὶ τὰς τιμωρίας μέχρι παντὸς ἀποτείνωμεν ἀσπόνδως καὶ ἀσυμβάτως ἔχοντες.

Harris, pp. 23-24, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 304 (e Cod. Coislin. 276, f. 220 b), Φίλωνος ἐκ τοῦ Περὶ κοσμοποιίας γ' κεφαλαίου (also in Cod. Rupef. f. 205 b, Φίλωνος, “with much variation”).

(b) Τὸ οὖν “διενόθη” ἐπὶ θεοῦ οὐ<sup>a</sup> κυριολογεῖται, τοῦ τὴν γνώμην καὶ τὴν διάνοιαν βεβαιότατου.

Harris, p. 24, from same source as Frag. (a) above.

(c) Ἡ τυχοῦσα τῆς κακίας γένεσις δουλοὶ τὸν λογισμὸν καὶ ἂν μῆπω τέλειον αὐτῆς ἐκφυτῆσθαι τὸ γέννημα. Ἴσον γὰρ ἐστὶ τῷ κατὰ τὴν παροιμίαν λεγομένῳ “πλίνθον πλύνειν ἢ δικτύῳ ὕδωρ κομίζειν” τὸ κακίαν ἐξελεῖν ἀνθρώπου ψυχῆς. “Ὅρα γὰρ αἰς ἐγκεχάρακται πάντων ἢ διάνοια, ὡς φησιν, “ἐπιμελῶς” καὶ οὐ παρέργως· τοιούτων συγκεκόλληται καὶ προσήρμοσται. Τὸ δὲ σὺν ἐπιμελείᾳ καὶ φροντίδι κατεσκευασμένον ἐστὶ καὶ διηγορευμένον<sup>b</sup> εἰς ἀκρίβειαν, καὶ τοῦτο οὐκ ὀψὲ καὶ μόλις ἀλλ' “ἐκ νεότητος”. μονονουχὶ λέγων, “ἐξ αὐτῶν τῶν σπαργάνων,” ὡσπερ τι μέρος ἠνωμένον.<sup>c</sup>

Harris, pp. 24-25, from Joh. Monachus (Mangey ii. 663 = Cod. Rupef. f. 138 a, ἐκ τοῦ Περὶ μετονομαζομένων).

<sup>a</sup> οὐ om. Cod. Coislin. vid.

<sup>b</sup> διηρευνημένον ex Arm. conieci.

<sup>c</sup> ἠνωμένον ex Lat. con. Mangey : τεινόμενον Codd.

GENESIS, BOOK II

59. (Gen. ix. 4) Τί ἐστίν· “ ἐν αἵματι ψυχῆς κρέας οὐ φάγεσθε ”;

Ἔοικεν διὰ τούτου δηλοῦν ὅτι ψυχῆς οὐσία αἱμά ἐστίν· ψυχῆς μέντοι τῆς αἰσθητικῆς<sup>a</sup> οὐχὶ τῆς κατ’ ἐξοχὴν γενομένης ἧτις ἐστὶν λογικὴ τε καὶ νοερά. Τρία γὰρ μέρη ψυχῆς· τὸ μὲν θρεπτικόν, τὸ δὲ αἰσθητικόν, τὸ δὲ λογικόν. Τοῦ μὲν οὖν λογικοῦ τὸ θεῖον πνεῦμα οὐσία κατὰ τὸν θεόλογον, φησὶν γὰρ ὅτι ἐνεφύσησεν εἰς τὸ πρόσωπον αὐτοῦ πνοὴν ζωῆς· τοῦ δὲ αἰσθητικοῦ καὶ ζωτικοῦ τὸ αἷμα οὐσία, λέγει γὰρ ἐν ἑτέροις ὅτι ψυχὴ πάσης σαρκὸς τὸ αἷμά ἐστίν· καὶ κυριώτατα ψυχὴν σαρκὸς αἷμα εἴρηκεν, περὶ δὲ σάρκα ἢ αἰσθησις καὶ τὸ πάθος οὐχ ὁ νοῦς καὶ ὁ λογισμὸς. Οὐ μὴν ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ ἐν αἵματι ψυχῆς μνηνύει ὅτι ἕτερόν ἐστιν ψυχὴ καὶ ἕτερον αἷμα, ὡς εἶναι ψυχῆς μὲν ἀψευδῶς οὐσίαν πνεῦμα, μὴ καθ’ αὐτὸ δὲ χωρὶς αἵματος τόπον ἐπέχειν ἀλλ’ ἐμφέρεσθαι καὶ συγκεκράσθαι αἵματι.

Harris, pp. 25-26, from Cod. Reg. 923, f. 376 b and Cod. Rupef. f. 279 b.

62. (Gen. ix. 6) Διατί, ὡς περὶ ἑτέρου θεοῦ, φησι τὸ “ ἐν εἰκόνι θεοῦ ἐποίησα τὸν ἄνθρωπον ” ἀλλ’ οὐχὶ τῇ ἑαυτοῦ;

Παγκάλως καὶ σοφῶς τουτὶ κεχρησμώδηται. Θνητὸν γὰρ οὐδὲν ἀπεικονισθῆναι πρὸς τὸν ἀνωτάτω καὶ πατέρα τῶν ὄλων ἐδύνατο, ἀλλὰ πρὸς τὸν δεῦτερον θεόν, ὃς ἐστὶν ἐκείνου λόγος. Ἔδει γὰρ τὸν λογικὸν ἐν ἀνθρώπου ψυχῇ τύπον ὑπὸ θεοῦ λόγου χαραχθῆναι, ἐπειδὴ ὁ πρὸ τοῦ λόγου θεὸς κρείσσων ἐστὶν ἢ πᾶσα λογικὴ φύσις· τῷ δὲ ὑπὲρ τὸν λόγον ἐν τῇ βελτίστη καὶ τινι ἐξαιρέτῳ καθεστῶτι ἰδέα οὐδὲν θέμις ἦν γεννητὸν ἐξομοιοῦσθαι.

Harris, p. 26, from Eusebius, Praep. Evang. vii. 13, ἐκ τοῦ πρώτου μοι κείσθω τῶν Φίλωνος ζητημάτων καὶ λύσεων.

64. (Gen. ix. 13-17)

(α) Τινὲς δὲ φασι· μήποτε παρὰ τὴν Ἰριν ἕτερα ἄττα μνηνύει, τουτέστιν ἀνεσις καὶ ἐπίτασις τῶν ἐπιγείων μήτε τῆς ἀνέσεως εἰς ἔκλυσιν ὑφιεμένης παντελῆ καὶ ἀναρμοστίαν μήτε τῆς ἐπιτάσεως ἄχρι ῥήξεως ἐπιτεινομένης ἀλλὰ μέτροις ὠρισμένοις ἐκατέρας δυνάμεως σταθμηθείσης. Ὁ γὰρ μέγας κατακλυσμὸς ῥήξει γέγονεν, ὡς καὶ αὐτὸς φησιν· “ ἐρράγησαν αἱ πηγαὶ τῆς ἀβύσσου ” ἀλλ’ οὐκ

<sup>a</sup> αἰσθητικῆς καὶ τῆς ζωτικῆς ex Lat. con. Harris.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ἐπιτάσει ποσῆ τινι.<sup>a</sup> "Ἄλλως τέ φασιν· οὐκ ἔστιν ὄπλον τὸ τόξον ἀλλ' ὄργανον ὄπλου, βέλους τιτρώσκοντος, ὅπερ καθικνεῖται τοῦ πόρρω, τοῦ πλησίον ἀπαθοῦς διαμένοντος. Οὕτως οὖν, φησί, οὐ πάντες κατακλυσθήσονται, κἄν τοῦτό τις ὑπομένειν συμβῆ. Τὸ οὖν τόξον συμβολικῶς θεοῦ δύναμις ἐστὶν ἀόρατος ἐκάτερον κυβερνώσα, καὶ τὴν ἐπίτασιν καὶ τὴν ἄνεσιν, τῷ ἀέρι ἐκ θεοῦ ἐνυπάρχουσα.

Wendland, pp. 59-60, from Procopius 300 c-d.

(b) "Ἔστιν οὖν θεοῦ δύναμις ἀόρατος συμβολικῶς τὸ τόξον, ἣτις ἐνυπάρχουσα τῷ ἀέρι ἀνειμένω κατὰ τὰς αἰθρίας καὶ ἐπιτεινομένη κατὰ τὰς νεφώσεις οὐκ ἐὰν τὰ νέφη δι' ὄλου εἰς ὕδωρ ἀναλύεσθαι τῷ μὴ γενέσθαι καθόλου κατακλυσμόν. Κυβερῶν γὰρ καὶ ἡνιοχεῖ τὴν πύκνωσιν τοῦ ἀέρος, πεφυκός μάλιστα τότε ἀπαυχενίζει καὶ ἐνυβρίζει διὰ πλησμονῆς κόρου.

Harris, pp. 26-27, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 160, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου, "also in Cod. Burney, fol. 37 b, with frequent inaccuracy of transcription."

65. (Gen. ix. 18-19)

Εἰ δὲ μνησθεῖς τετάρτου τοῦ Χαναὰν ἐπήνεγκε· "τρῆς οὗτοι υἱοὶ τοῦ Νῶε," δέον, φασίν, εἰπεῖν τέσσαρες, οὐκ ἀλόγως. Διὰ γὰρ τὴν ὁμοιοτροπίαν εἰς ἓν συλλαμβάνει τῷ πατρὶ τὸν υἱόν. Οἱ καὶ φασιν ὡς εἰκότως νῦν τοῦ Χάμ ὑπογράφει τὴν γενεὰν εἰς ἔμφασιν τοῦ ὅτι πατὴρ ἤδη γεγωνῶς τὸν ἑαυτοῦ πατέρα οὐκ ἐτίμησεν οὐδὲ μετέδωκε τῷ γεννήσαντι ὧν ἂν παρὰ τοῦ παιδὸς ἡξίου τυχεῖν, καὶ ὡς νεωτεροποιὸν πρὸς ἁμαρτίαν ἐκάλεσεν εἰκότως νεώτερον. Ἐπίτηδες δὲ ἴσως ἐμνήσθη καὶ τοῦ Χαναὰν τοῦ τῶν Χανααίων οἰκιστοῦ πόρρωθεν ἐλέγχων τὸ δυσγενές, ὧν τὴν γῆν ἀφελὼν τῷ θεοφιλεῖ παρέσχε λαῶ.

Wendland, p. 61, from Procopius 301 d, 304 a.

66. (Gen. ix. 20)

Ἐξομοιοῖ δὲ τὸν Νῶε τῷ πρώτῳ διαπλασθέντι ἀνθρώπῳ. Ἐξῆλθε γὰρ ἐκάτερος, ὁ μὲν τοῦ παραδείσου, ὁ δὲ τῆς κιβωτοῦ. Ἄρχι γεωργίας ἐκάτερος μετὰ κατακλυσμόν· καὶ γὰρ ἐν τῇ τοῦ κόσμου γενέσει τρόπον τινα κατεκέκλυστο ἡ γῆ. Οὐ γὰρ ἂν ἔλεγε· "συναχθήτω τὸ ὕδωρ εἰς τὴν συναγωγὴν μίαν καὶ ὀφθήτω ἡ ξηρά."

Wendland, p. 63, from Procopius 305 a.

<sup>a</sup> ποσῆ τινι] περιττῆ con. Wendland.

GENESIS, BOOK II

68. (Gen. ix. 20)

Εἶποι δ' ἂν τις ἐκ τῶν ῥητῶν ὡς οὐδὲ τὸν οἶνον ὄλον ἀλλ' ἐκ τοῦ οἴνου πίνει δι' ἐγκράτειαν, δι' ἣν ἐμέτρει τὴν χρῆσιν, τοῦ ἀκρατοῦς οὐκ ἀπαλλαττομένου τῶν συμποσίων πρὶν <ἂν> ὄλον ἐκτίη τὸν ἀκρατον· εἶτα καὶ τῷ μεθύειν ἢ γραφή νῦν ἀντὶ τῆς οἰνώσεως κέχρηται. Διττὸν γὰρ τὸ μεθύειν, ἢ τὸ παρ' οἶνον ληρεῖν, ὅπερ ἀμάρτημα καὶ φαύλου ἴδιον, ἢ τὸ οἰνοῦσθαι, ὅπερ καὶ εἰς σοφὸν πίπτει.<sup>a</sup>

Wendland, p. 63, from Procopius 305 A. The variant to the last sentence, given in the footnote, is printed by Harris, p. 27, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 104, from Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

71. (Gen. ix. 22)

Τοῦ δὲ Χάμ αὔξει τὸ ἔγκλημα, πρῶτον μὲν ἐκ τοῦ ὑπεριδεῖν, δεύτερον δ' ἐκ τοῦ εἰπεῖν καὶ οὐχ ἐνὶ μόνῳ τῶν ἀδελφῶν<sup>b</sup> ἀλλ' ἀμφοτέροις· εἰ δὲ καὶ πλείους ἦσαν, ἅσασιν ἐξέλαλησεν ἂν διαχλευάζων πρᾶγμα οὐ γλεύης ἀλλ' αἰδοῦς καὶ εὐλαβείας ἄξιον ὄν. Εἶτα οὐκ ἔνδον ἀλλ' ἔξω διήγγειλεν ὅπερ ἐμφαίνει τὸ μὴ ἀκηκοῦναι μόνον τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς ἔξω περιεστῶτας ἄνδρας τε καὶ γυναῖκας.<sup>c</sup>

Wendland, p. 62, from Procopius 304 C. The variant to the last sentence, given in the footnote, is printed by Harris, p. 27, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 163, also from Cat. Burney, f. 37 b, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

72. (Gen. ix. 23)

Ὁ εὐχερῆς καὶ ἀπερίσκεπτος τὰ ἐπ' εὐθείας καὶ πρὸς ὀφθαλμῶν μόνον ὄρα· ὁ δὲ φρόνιμος καὶ τὰ κατόπιν, τουτέστι τὰ μέλλοντα ὡς περ γὰρ τὰ ὀπίσω τῶν ἔμπροσθεν ὑστερίζει, οὕτω καὶ τὰ μέλλοντα τῶν ἐνεστῶτων. Ὡν τὴν θεωρίαν ὁ ἀστείος μέτεισιν, αὐγαίως<sup>d</sup> πάντοθεν ὀμματωθεῖς· πᾶς οὖν σοφὸς οὐκ ἄνθρωπος

<sup>a</sup> Διττὸν . . . πίπτει] Διττὸν τὸ μεθύειν· ἐν μὲν τὸ ληρεῖν παρ' οἶνον, ὅπερ ἐστὶ φαύλου ἴδιον ἀμάρτημα· ἕτερον δὲ τὸ οἰνοῦσθαι, ὅπερ εἰς σοφὸν πίπτει Cod. Vat.

<sup>b</sup> Post ἀδελφῶν verba τὸ τοῦ πατρὸς ἀκούσιον ἀμάρτημα ex Arm. suppl. Wendland.

<sup>c</sup> τὸ μὴ ἀκηκοῦναι . . . γυναῖκας] οὐ μόνον τοὺς ἀδελφοὺς ἀκηκοῦναι ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς περιεστῶτας ἄνδρας ἔξω ὁμοῦ καὶ γυναῖκας Cat. Lips.

<sup>d</sup> Λυγκέως <δίκη> ex Arm. con. Harris : Ἄργος ὡς con. Post.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ἀλλὰ νοῦς καταθεώμενος καὶ περιθρῶν περιπέφρακται πρὸς τὰ ἐνεστώτα καὶ τὰ ἀδοκῆτως κατασπιλάζοντα.

Harris, p. 28, from Cod. Rupef. f. 142, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

77. (Gen. ix. 27) Καὶ πῶς Χάμ καὶ αὐτὸς ὢν ἀσεβῆς οὐ τῆς αὐτῆς μετέσχε κατάρας;

Ἄλλοι δέ φασιν ὡς ὁ μὲν Χαναὰν ἔλαβε τὴν κατάραν οὐκ ὢν ἀλλότριος τῆς πατρικῆς προαιρέσεως, ὁ δὲ Χάμ εἰς πατέρα ἀμαρτήσας εἰς υἱὸν κατηράθη ἄξιον ὄντα καὶ τῶν ἰδίων κακῶν τῆς κατάρας. Ἄλλὰ καὶ μειζόνως ἤλγει διὰ τοῦ παιδὸς τιμωρούμενος· μείζω γὰρ ὢν <αὐτοῖ> πάσχομεν τὰ τῶν παίδων ἐστὶν εἰς συμφορὰν, καὶ<sup>α</sup> μάλιστα ἤνίκα γινώσκομεν ὡς ἀρχηγοὶ καὶ διδάσκαλοι τῶν κακῶν αὐτοῖς βουλευμάτων γεγόναμεν.

Wendland, pp. 60-61, from Procopius 301 c-d and Theodoret, Quaest. lviii. (cf. Cat. Lips. 165-166).

<sup>α</sup> Post καὶ lacuna est quam per verbum ἀνώμεθα suppl. Wendland.

GENESIS, BOOK III

3. (Gen. xv. 9)

Ἀτόπως δρῶσιν ὅσοι ἐκ μέρους τινὸς κρίνουσι τὸ ὅλον ἀλλὰ τὸ ἐναντίον<sup>α</sup> ἐκ τοῦ ὅλου τὸ μέρος. Οὕτω γὰρ ἄμεινον καὶ σῶμα<sup>β</sup> καὶ πρᾶγμα δογματίζοιτο ἄν. Ἔστιν οὖν ἡ θεία νομοθεσία τρόπον τινὰ ζῶον ἠνωμένον, ἦν ὅλον δι' ὅλου χρή μεγάλους ὄμμασι περισκοπεῖν, καὶ τὴν βουλὴν τῆς συμπάσης γραφῆς ἀκριβῶς καὶ τηλαυγῶς περιαθρεῖν, μὴ κατακόπτοντας τὴν ἁρμονίαν, μηδὲ τὴν ἔνωσιν διαρτῶντας. Ἐτερόμορφα γὰρ καὶ ἑτεροειδῆ φανέεται τῆς κοινω- νίας στερούμενα.

Harris, p. 29, from Dam. Par. 774, from Cod. Rupef.

7. (Gen. xv. 11a)

Πᾶσα ἡ ὑπὸ τὴν σελήνην φύσις μεστὴ πολέμων καὶ κακῶν ἐμφυλίων ἐστὶ καὶ ξένων.

Harris, p. 29, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 98, from Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ γ' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

8. (Gen. xv. 11b)

Ἔνεκα μὲν τῶν φαύλων οὐδεμία πόλις ἠρέμησεν ἄν. Δια- μένουσι δὲ ἀστασίαστοι δι' ἐνὸς ἢ δευτέρου δικαιοσύνην ἀσκοῦντος<sup>α</sup> οὐ ἡ ἀρετὴ τὰς πολιτικὰς<sup>α</sup> νόσους ἰᾶται, γέρας ἀπονέμοντος τοῦ φιλαρθροῦ<sup>α</sup> θεοῦ καλοκάγαθίας<sup>α</sup> τοῦ μὴ μόνον αὐτὸν ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς πλησιάζοντας ὠφελείσθαι.<sup>α</sup>

Harris, pp. 29-30, from Mangey ii. 661, from Joh.

<sup>α</sup> οὐ τὸ ἐναντίον con. Harris.

<sup>β</sup> ὄνομα con. Harris.

<sup>α</sup> οἰκοῦντος Cod. Rupef. : συνοικοῦντος Anton Melissa.

<sup>α</sup> πολεμικὰς Joh. Monachus.

<sup>α</sup> φιλανθρώπου Joh. Monachus.

<sup>α</sup> καλοκάγαθῶν Cod. Rupef.

<sup>α</sup> ὠφελεῖν Anton Melissa.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

Monachus (=Cod. Rupef. f. 33 b), and from Anton Melissa, col. 1105.

11. (Gen. xv. 15)

Ἐναργῶς ἀφθαρσίαν ψυχῆς αἰνίττεται μετοικιζομένης ἀπὸ τοῦ θνητοῦ σώματος. Τὸ<sup>α</sup> γὰρ τῷ τελευτῶντι φάσκειν “ἀπελεύση <πρὸς τοὺς> πατέρας σου” τί ἕτερον ἢ ζῶν ἕτεραν παρίσθησι τὴν ἄνευ σώματος, καθ’ ἣν ψυχὴν μόνην συμβαίνει ζῆν. Πατέρας δὲ Ἄβραάμ οὐ δῆπου τοὺς γεννήσαντας αὐτὸν πάππους καὶ προγόνους παρείληφεν· οὐ γὰρ πάντες ἐπαινετοὶ γεγονόασιν· ἀλλ’ ἔοικεν αἰνίττεσθαι πατέρας οὓς ἑτέρωθι καλεῖν ἀγγέλους εἴωθεν. Εἰ δὲ καὶ τοὺς περὶ τὸν Ἀβελ καὶ Ἐνῶς καὶ Σήθ καὶ Ἐνῶχ καὶ Νῶε φήσεις, οὐχ ἁμαρτήσῃ<sup>β</sup> τοῦ πρέποντος . . . μακρὸν γὰρ αἰῶνα τείνουσι<sup>γ</sup> μυρίοι τῶν ἀφρόνων, καλὸν δὲ καὶ σπουδαῖον μόνος ὁ φρονήσεως ἐραστής.

Wendland, pp. 67-68, from Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 128, Φίλωνος Ἐβραίου . . . φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου (cf. Cat. Lips. 209, Ἀδήλου).

12. (Gen. xv. 16)

Καὶ οὕτω μὲν ἐπὶ τοῦ νοητοῦ, οὐδὲν δὲ ἦττον καπὶ τοῦ αἰσθητοῦ ἐστὶ συνιδεῖν ἐν ταῖς τῶν ζώων γενέσεσι· πρῶτον μὲν γὰρ ἐστὶ σπέρματος καταβολή, δεύτερον δὲ ἢ εἰς τὰ γένη διανομή, τρίτον αὐξήσις, καὶ τέταρτον τελείωσις.

Staeble, p. 30, from Joh. Lydus, p. 29, 7-11.

18. (Gen. xvi. 1)

Στείρα ἢ τοῦ ἔθνους μήτηρ εἰσάγεται, πρῶτον μὲν<sup>α</sup> ἵνα παράδοξος ἢ τῶν ἐγγόνων σπορὰ φαίνηται θαυματουργηθεῖσα, δεύτερον δὲ ὑπὲρ τοῦ μῆ<sup>ε</sup> συνουσία μᾶλλον ἀνδρὸς ἀλλ’ ἐπιφροσύνη<sup>φ</sup> θεία συλλαμβάνειν τε καὶ τίκτειν.<sup>θ</sup> Τὸ γὰρ στείραν οὖσαν ἀποκύειν οὐ γενήσεως ἀλλὰ θείας δυνάμεως ἔργον ἦν.<sup>η</sup>

Wendland, pp. 68-69, from Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 129 (cf. Theodoret, Quaest. lxxv), and Procopius 349 c.

<sup>α</sup> τὸ Wendland : τῷ codd.

<sup>β</sup> Wendland : ἁμαρτήσεις codd.

<sup>γ</sup> Wendland : τίνουσι codd.

<sup>δ</sup> πρῶτον μὲν om. Procopius.

<sup>ε</sup> δεύτερον . . . μῆ] καὶ ἵνα μῆ Procopius.

<sup>φ</sup> ἐπιφροσύνη Cat. Barb.

<sup>θ</sup> θεία . . . τίκτειν] θεοῦ συλλαμβάνη καὶ τίκτηη Procopius.

<sup>η</sup> τὸ γὰρ . . . ἦν om. Procopius vid.

GENESIS, BOOK III

20. (Gen. xvi. 2)

Ὁρᾶς ταύτης τὸ σῶφρον καὶ τὸ ἄφθονον προσέτι καὶ φίλανδρον καὶ τοῦ Ἀβραὰμ τὴν ἀπάθειαν.

Wendland, p. 69, from Procopius 352 A (cf. Cat. Lips. 213, Ἀδήλου).

21. (Gen. xvi. 3)

Οὐχ ὥσπερ οἱ ἀσελεγεῖς ὀλιγωρία τῶν ἀστῶν<sup>α</sup> ἐπὶ τὰς θεραπαίνας ἐκμαίνονται. Ὁ δὲ Ἀβραὰμ τότε βεβαιότερος περὶ τὴν σύνοικον, ὅτε παλλακίδι χρῆσθαι παρήγγελλον οἱ καιροί, καὶ τότε ταύτην εὔρε γυναικα παγιωτέραν, ὅτε παρεισῆλθεν ἑτέρα. Πρὸς μὲν γὰρ τὴν παλλακίδα μίξις ἦν σωμάτων ἕνεκα παίδων γενέσεως, πρὸς δὲ τὴν γαμετὴν ἔνωσις ψυχῆς ἀρμοζομένης ἔρωτι θείῳ.

Wendland, p. 69, from Procopius 352 A (cf. Cat. Lips. 215, Εὐσεβίου: "Philonische Gedanken sind durch eine vermittelnde Quelle, Eusebius, übergegangen").

22. (Gen. xvi. 4)

Κατὰ καιρὸν κυρίαν ἐκάλεσεν, ὅτε τῆς παρὰ τῆς θεραπαίνης<sup>β</sup> ἠλάττωται. Τοῦτο δὲ καὶ εἰς πάντα διατείνει τοῦ βίου τὰ πράγματα: κυριώτερος<sup>γ</sup> γὰρ ὁ φρόνιμος πένης ἄφρονος πλουσίου καὶ ὁ ἄδοξος ἐνδόξου καὶ ὁ νοσῶν ὑγιαίνοντος. Τὰ μὲν γὰρ σὺν φρονήσει πάντα κύρια, τὰ δὲ ἐν ἀφροσύνῃ δοῦλα καὶ ἄκυρα. Οὐκ εἶπε δὲ "ἠτίμασε τὴν κυρίαν αὐτῆς" ἀλλ' "ἠτιμάσθη ἡ κυρία." Οὐ γὰρ ἐθέλει κατηγορεῖν, δηλῶσαι δὲ τὸ συμβεβηκός.

Wendland, pp. 69-70, from Procopius 352 B (cf. Cat. Lips. 215, Ἀδήλου).

23. (Gen. xvi. 5)

Τὸ "ἐκ σοῦ" οὐκ ἀντὶ τοῦ "ὑπὸ σοῦ" . . . ἀλλ' ἔστι χρονικὸν τῷ ἐξῆς συναπτόμενον: ἐξ οὗ σοι καὶ ἀφ' οὗ χρόνου ἐγὼ "δέδωκα τὴν παιδίσκην μου." Οὐ γὰρ γυναικα εἶπεν ἢ γαμετὴν τὴν ἐξ αὐτοῦ κύουσαν.

Wendland, p. 70, from Procopius 352 B (the next two sentences in Procopius do not belong here).

<sup>α</sup> ἀστείων ex Arm. con. Wendland.

<sup>β</sup> θεραπαίνης τιμῆς con. Wendland.

<sup>γ</sup> κυριώτερον Mai.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

24. (Gen. xvi. 6)

Ἐπαινον ἔχει τὸ ῥητὸν τοῦ σοφοῦ μήτε γυναῖκα μήτε γαμετὴν ἀλλὰ παιδίσκην εἰπόντος τῆς γαμετῆς τὴν ἐξ αὐτοῦ κύουσαν.

Wendland, p. 70, from Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 130, Φιλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

26. (Gen. xvi. 6)

Οὐ γὰρ<sup>a</sup> πᾶσα ψυχὴ δέχεται νουθεσίαν ἀλλ' ἡ μὲν ἴλεως ἀγαπᾷ τοὺς ἐλέγχους καὶ τοῖς παιδεύουσι μᾶλλον οἰκειοῦται, ἡ δὲ ἐχθρὰ μισεῖ καὶ ἀποστρέφεται<sup>b</sup> καὶ ἀποδιδράσκει τοὺς πρὸς ἡδονὴν λόγους, τῶν ὠφελεῖν δυναμένων προκρίνουσα.

Wendland, pp. 70-71, from Procopius 352 v = Harris, p. 30, from Cat. Lips. col. 216, Προκοπίου.

29. (Gen. xvi. 8)

Καὶ τὸ εὐγνωμον δὲ αὐτῆς παρίσταται ἐκ τοῦ λέγειν Σάρραν κυρίαν καὶ μηδὲν περὶ αὐτῆς φαῦλον εἰπεῖν. Καὶ τὸ τοῦ ἠθους δὲ ἀνυπόκριτον πῶς οὐκ ἐπαινετόν; ὁμολογεῖ γὰρ ὁ πέπονθεν, ὅτι τὸ πρόσωπον, λέγω δὲ τὴν φαντασίαν τῆς ἀρετῆς καὶ σοφίας, καταπέπληκται καὶ τὸ τῆς ἐξουσίας βασιλικόν οὐ γὰρ ὑπομένει τὸ ὕψος καὶ μέγεθος θεωρεῖν ἀλλ' ἀποδιδράσκει ἔνιοι γὰρ οὐ μίσει τῷ πρὸς ἀρετὴν φεύγουσιν αὐτήν, ἀλλ' αἰδοῖ κρίνοντες ἑαυτοὺς ἀναξίους συμβιοῦν τῇ δεσποίνῃ.

Wendland, p. 71, from Procopius 354 v.

30. (Gen. xvi. 9)

Τὸ ὑποτάττεσθαι τοῖς κρείττοσιν ὠφελιμώτατον. Ὁ μαθὼν ἄρχεσθαι καὶ ἄρχειν εὐθὺς μαθάνει. Οὐδὲ γὰρ εἰ πάσης γῆς καὶ θαλάττης τὸ κράτος ἀνάψοιτό τις, ἄρχων ἂν εἴη πρὸς ἀλήθειαν, εἰ μὴ μάθοι καὶ προπαιδευθεῖ τὸ ἄρχεσθαι.

Harris, p. 30, "The first sentence from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 103, e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ πρώτου τῶν ἐν τῇ Γενέσει ζητημάτων. Also Dam. Par. 359 and Cod. Reg. 923, fol. 74, in each case referred to Greg. Nazianz. The last part in Dam. Par. 359 as from Philo, and in Cod. Reg. l.c., ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων."

<sup>a</sup> γὰρ om. Cat. Lips.

<sup>b</sup> καὶ ἀποστρέφεται om. Procopius.

GENESIS, BOOK III

38. (Gen. xvi. 16)

(a) Ὁ γὰρ ἐξ ἀριθμὸς γεννητικώτατός ἐστιν ὡς ἀρτιοπέριττος, μετέχων καὶ τῆς δραστικῆς οὐσίας κατὰ τὸν περιττὸν καὶ τῆς ὑλικῆς κατὰ τὸν ἄρτιον. Ὅθεν καὶ ἀρχαῖοι γάμον καὶ ἀρμονίαν αὐτὸν ἐκάλεσαν.

Staehele, p. 33, from Joh. Lydus, p. 32, 4-8.

(b) Μακαρία φύσις ἢ ἐπὶ παντὶ χαίρουσα καὶ μηδενὶ δυσαρροστοῦσα τῶν ἐν τῷ κόσμῳ τὸ παράπαν,<sup>a</sup> ἀλλ' εὐαρροστοῦσα<sup>b</sup> τοῖς γινομένοις ὡς καλῶς καὶ συμφερόντως γινομένοις.

Harris, p. 97 ("unidentified," but located by Früchtel), from Dam. Par. 372 and 675, also Cod. Reg. 923, f. 38 b, and Georgius Monachus, col. 1116.

40. (Gen. xvii. 1-2)

Ἡ ὡς μήπω ἀμέμπτω ἢ ὡς τοιούτῳ μὲν, δεομένῳ δὲ αἰεὶ ἐνεργεῖν τὸ ἀμεμπτον, ὡς ἂν διὰ παντὸς ἀμεμπτος ᾦ. Τὸ δὲ "θήσομαι τὴν διαθήκην μου" ὡς περὶ ἄθλου ἐπαγγελία, καὶ αὐτῆς διδομένης τῷ εὐαρροστούντι ἐναντίον αὐτοῦ καὶ γενομένῳ ἀμέμπτῳ. Ἐπάγει δὲ καί: "πληθυνῶ σε σφόδρα."

Wendland, p. 71, from Procopius 353 c ("die philonische Vorlage hat Pr. wohl auch hier . . . nicht selbst benutzt; denn die Uebereinstimmung ist keine wörtliche").

41. (Gen. xvii. 3)

Τὸ δὲ μέγεθος τῶν ἐπαγγελιῶν καὶ τὸ τὸν θεὸν ἀξιοῦν αὐτοῦ θεὸν εἶναι καταπλαγεῖς ἔπεσεν ἐπὶ τὸ πρόσωπον.

Wendland, p. 72, from Procopius 356 b, "passt durchaus in philonische Gedankenkreise."

48. (Gen. xvii. 12)

Οἴησις, ὡς ὁ τῶν ἀρχαίων λόγος, ἐστὶν ἐκκοπή προκοπῆς· ὁ γὰρ κατοϊόμενος βελτίωσιν οὐκ ἀνέχεται.

Harris, p. 99 ("unidentified," but located by Früchtel), from Dam. Par. 704 ("note that on p. 629 this is given to Cyril, and so in Cod. Reg. 923, f. 36 b").

<sup>a</sup> τῶν . . . παράπαν om. Georg. Mon.

<sup>b</sup> εὐχαριστοῦσα Georg. Mon.: τῶν . . . εὐαρροστοῦσα om. Cod. Reg.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

52. (Gen. xvii. 14)

Οὐδὲν τῶν ἀκουσίων ἔνοχον ἀποφαίνει ὁ νόμος, ὅποτε καὶ τῷ φόνον ἀκούσιον δρᾶσαντι συγγινώσκει. . . . Τὸ δὲ ὀκτῶ ἡμερῶν μετὰ γέννησιν βρέφος εἰ μὴ περιτέμνηται, τί ἀδικεῖ ὡς καὶ θανάτου τιμωρίαν ὑπομένειν; Ἔνιοι μὲν οὖν φασι ἀναφορικὸν εἶναι τὸν τῆς ἐρμηθείας<sup>a</sup> τρόπον ἐπὶ τοὺς γονεῖς, καὶ ἐκείνους κολάζεσθαι οἴονται δεινῶς, ὡς ὀλιγωρηκότας τῆς τοῦ νόμου διατάξεως. Ἔνιοι δὲ ὅτι ὑπερβολῇ χρώμενος κατὰ τοῦ βρέφους, ὅσα τῷ δοκεῖν, ἡγανάκτησεν, ἵνα τοῖς τελείοις καταλύσασι<sup>b</sup> τὸν νόμον ἀπαράιτητος ἐπάγηται τιμωρία<sup>c</sup>· οὐκ ἐπειδὴ τὸ ἔργον τῆς περιτομῆς ἀναγκαῖον ἀλλ' ὅτι ἡ διαθήκη ἀθετεῖται, τοῦ σημείου, δι' οὗ γνωρίζεται, μὴ πληρουμένου.

Harris, p. 31, from Cat. Ined. Cod. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 675), and Cat. Burney, f. 45, Φίλωνος Ἑβραίου, also Cat. Lips. 1, col. 225 ("the last sentence looks like an added gloss").

Οὐδὲν τῶν ἀκουσίων ἔνοχον ἀποφαίνει ὁ νόμος, ὅποτε καὶ τῷ φόνον ἀκούσιον δρᾶσαντι συγγινώσκει. Τί οὖν ἀδικεῖ τὸ ὀκτῶ ἡμερῶν βρέφος, εἰ μὴ περιτεμνῆσεται; ἀλλ' ἢ τὴν ἀναφορὰν ἐπὶ τοὺς γονεῖς ἐκληπτέον κολαζομένους, εἰ μὴ περιτέμοιεν τὸ παιδίον, ἢ γοῦν ὑπερβολικῶς κατὰ τοῦ βρέφους, ὅσα τῷ δοκεῖν, ἡγανάκτησεν, ἵνα τοῖς τελείοις ἀπαράιτητος γίνηται.

Wendland, pp. 72-73, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 98<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 357 A).

58. (Gen. xvii. 19) Καὶ ἰδοὺ Σάρρα ἡ γυνὴ σου τέξεται σοι υἱόν.

Ἡ ὁμολογία, φησὶν, ἡ ἐμὴ κατάφασίς ἐστὶν ἀκραιφνῆς, ἀμυγῆς ἀρνήσεως καὶ ἡ σὴ πίστις οὐκ ἀμφίβολος ἀλλ' ἀνευδοκίματος, αἰδοῦς καὶ ἐντροπῆς μετέχουσα. Ὅθεν ὁ προεὶληφας γενησόμενον διὰ

<sup>a</sup> τιμωρίας Catt. Lips., Burney.

<sup>b</sup> καταλύουσι Cat. Lips.

<sup>c</sup> ἀπαραιτήτως ἐπάγηται τιμωρίας Cat. Burney.

GENESIS, BOOK III

τὴν πρὸς ἐμὲ πίστιν, γενήσεται πάντως· τοῦτο γὰρ μηνύει τὸ “ναί.”

Wendland, p. 73, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 98<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 358).

61. (Gen. xvii. 24-25)

Ὁ γὰρ τῶν δεκατριῶν ἀριθμὸς συνέστηκεν ἐκ τῶν πρώτων δυοῖν τετραγώνων, τοῦ τέσσαρα καὶ τοῦ ἐννέα, ἀρτίου τε καὶ περιτ-τοῦ, πλευρᾶς ἐχόντων τοῦ μὲν ἀρτίου τὸ ὑλικὸν εἶδος δυάδα, τοῦ δὲ περιττοῦ τὴν δραστήριον ιδέαν τριάδα. Οὗτος οὖν ὁ ἀριθμὸς ἢ μεγίστη καὶ τελειοτάτη τῶν ἐορτῶν γέγονε τοῖς ἀρχαίοις<sup>a</sup> ἐπι-τήρησις.

Staeble, p. 59, from Joh. Lydus, 45, 12-18.

<sup>a</sup> ἀρχαῖος Staeble.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

8. (Gen. xviii. 6-7)

(a) Μεγίστη δὲ ἡ τῆς τριάδος καὶ κατ' αἰσθησιν δύναμις. Ὁ γὰρ κατ' αὐτὴν ἀριθμὸς τοῖς γενητοῖς ἐπιδέδωκε γένεσιν, αὔξησιν, τροφήν, καὶ οὐχ ἀπλῶς εἶρηται "τριχθὰ δὲ πάντα δέδασται." . . . Διὰ μὲν τοῦτο οἱ Πυθαγόρειοι τριάδα μὲν ἐν ἀριθμοῖς, ἐν δὲ σχήμασι τὸ ὀρθογώνιον τρίγωνον ὑποτίθενται στοιχείον τῆς τῶν ὄλων γενέσεως. Ἐν μὲν οὖν μέτρον ἐστί, καθ' ὃ συνέστη ὁ ἀσώματος καὶ νοητὸς κόσμος. Δεύτερον δὲ μέτρον, καθ' ὃ ἐπάγη ὁ αἰσθητὸς οὐρανός, πέμπτην λαχὼν καὶ θειοτέραν οὐσίαν, ἄτρεπτον καὶ ἀμετάβολον. Τρίτον δὲ καθ' ὃ ἐδημιουργήθη τὰ ὑπὸ σελήνην, ἐκ τῶν τεσσάρων δυνάμεων, γένεσιν καὶ φθορὰν ἐπιδεχόμενα.

Staeble, pp. 25-26, from Joh. Lydus, pp. 25, 12-16 and 28, 8-16.

(b) Οὐ θέμις τὰ ἱερά μυστήρια ἐκλαλεῖν ἀμνήτοις ἄχρι ἂν καθαρθῶσιν<sup>a</sup> τελεία καθάρσει, ὃ γὰρ ἀνοργίαστος καὶ εὐχερής, ἀσώματον καὶ νοητὴν φύσιν ἀκούειν ἢ βλέπειν ἀδυνατῶν, ὑπὸ τῆς φανερᾶς ὄψεως ἀπατηθεὶς μωμῆσεται τὰ ἀμώμητα. Τοῖς ἀμνήτοις ἐκλαλεῖν μυστήρια καταλύοντός ἐστι τοὺς θεσμοὺς τῆς ἱερατικῆς τελετῆς.

Harris, p. 69 ("unidentified," but located by E. Bréhier), from Dam. Par. 533 (cf. Dam. Par. 782 = Cod. Rupef. f. 189, and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 25 b, "by the last two expressly referred to II. Quaest. in Gen.").

10. (Gen. xviii. 8) Αὐτὸς δὲ παρειστήκει αὐτοῖς ὑπὸ τὸ δένδρον.

Αὐτουργῶν δὲ τὴν ὑπηρεσίαν ὃ τῆ' καὶ δέκα κεκτημένος οἰκογενεὶς καὶ πολλοὺς ἀργυρωνήτους τὴν θείαν ὑπόνοιαν περὶ αὐτῶν δείκνυσιν οὐ συγχωρῶν οἰκέταις τὴν ἱερατικὴν θεοῦ διακονίαν, αὐτὸς δὲ ταύτην, εἰ καὶ πρεσβύτης, ἀναδεχόμενος.

Wendland, p. 74, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 100<sup>v</sup> (cf. Ἀκακίου, Cat. Lips. 234).

<sup>a</sup> ἄχρι καθαρσῶσι Cod. Reg.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

20. (Gen. xviii. 16)

Μόλις διαζεύγνυται δυσασπασίτως ἔχων, ὡς βούλεσθαι καὶ ἀποδημῆν. Ἄμεινον δὲ τοῦ πέμπειν κοινωνικώτατον ἦθος ἐμφαίνον.
Wendland, p. 74, from Procopius 368 B.

24. (Gen. xviii. 21)

Ἡμᾶς τοίνυν διδάσκει μὴ ἐπιτρέχειν πίστει κακῶν μέχρις ἂν πεισθῶμεν τῇ θεᾷ.

Wendland, p. 74, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 101<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 368 c, cf. Cat. Lips. 239 B-Γ).

30. (Gen. xix. 1)

Τῷ μὲν Ἀβραὰμ φαίνονται τρεῖς, καὶ μεσημβρίας· τῷ δὲ Λὼτ δύο, καὶ ἐσπέρας. Φυσικώτατα διάφορον εἰσηγείται ὁ νόμος τελείου καὶ προκόπτοντος· ὁ μὲν οὖν τέλειος τριάδα φαντασιούται ἐν ἀσκήῳ φωτὶ καὶ μεσημβρινῷ, μεστήν διηλεκτῆ καὶ πληρεστάτην οὐσίαν· ὁ δὲ δυνάδα, διαίρεσιν καὶ τομῆν καὶ κενὸν ἔχουσαν ἐν ἑσπερινῷ σκότει.

Harris, p. 32, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 23 e Cod. Coislin. 276 (?), f. 10 "with heading, φησὶ γὰρ τοῦτο ὁ ἐν λόγοις ἐξαιρέτος Φίλων."

Πρὸς μὲν Ἀβραὰμ οἱ τρεῖς ἄνδρες καὶ μεσημβρίας, εἰς Σόδομα δὲ οἱ δύο ἄγγελοι καὶ ἐσπέρας.

Wendland, p. 74, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 102<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 370 c = Cat. Lips. 241-242, Ἀδῆλου).

33. (Gen. xix. 2)

(a) Τῷ μὲν Ἀβραὰμ εὐχερῶς ἐπέισθησαν, τῷ δὲ Λὼτ μετὰ βίας.
Wendland, p. 75, from Procopius 370 D.

(b) Στενοχωρεῖται πᾶς ἄφρων, θλιβόμενος ὑπὸ φιλαργυρίας καὶ φιλοδοξίας καὶ φιληδονίας καὶ τῶν ὁμοιοτρόπων ἅπερ οὐκ εἶ τὴν δianoian ἐν εὐρυχωρίᾳ διάγειν.<sup>a</sup>

Harris, p. 32, from Dam. Par. 362, ἐκ τοῦ β' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει, and Cod. Reg. 923, ἐκ τῶν δ', "also Cod. Barocc. 143 . . . (Mangey ii. 674), and in Cod. Rupef. f. 73 b without a title."

<sup>a</sup> διαβαίνειν Cod. Barocc.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

40. (Gen. xix. 10)

Νόμος ἔστω κατὰ τῶν σεμνὰ καὶ θεία οὐ<sup>α</sup> σεμνῶς καὶ θεοπρεπῶς ὁρᾶν ἀξιούντων, κόλασιν ἐπιφέρειν ἁρασιᾶς.

Harris, pp. 32-33, from Dam. Par. 341, "where it is ascribed to Clem. Alex.," and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 62 b, ἐκ τοῦ δ' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

43. (Gen. xix. 14)

Οἱ ἐν ταῖς ἀφθόνοις χορηγίαις πλούτου καὶ δόξης καὶ τῶν ὁμοιοτρόπων ὑπάρχοντες, καὶ ἐν ὑγιείᾳ καὶ εὐαισθησίᾳ σώματος καὶ εὐεξίᾳ ζωῆς καὶ τὰς διὰ πασῶν τῶν αἰσθήσεων ἡδονὰς καρπούμενοι<sup>β</sup> νομίζοντες τῆς ἄκρας εὐδαιμονίας ἀφίχθαι,<sup>γ</sup> μεταβολὴν οὐ προσδοκῶσιν, ἀλλὰ καὶ τοὺς λέγοντας ὅτι πάντα περὶ τὸ σῶμα καὶ ἐκτὸς ἐπικαίρως ἔχει, γέλωτα καὶ χλεύην τίθενται.

Harris, p. 33, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 101 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῶν δ' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

44. (Gen. xix. 16)

. . . τῆς χειρὸς αὐτοῦ· οὐκ ἄρα λόγοις μόνον ἡμᾶς παρακαλεῖ πρὸς ἁμαρτίας ἀποφυγῆν, ἀλλὰ καὶ ἐνεργὸν τὴν ἐπικουρίαν χαρίζεται.

Wendland, p. 75, n. 1, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 102<sup>v</sup> = Migne, p. 371 B ("wahrscheinlich geht auf Philons Einfluss zurück").

47. (Gen. xix. 18-20)

Ὁ σοφὸς ἡρεμίαν καὶ ἀπραγμοσύνην καὶ σχολὴν μεταδιώκει<sup>α</sup> ἵνα τοῖς θείοις θεωρήμασιν ἐν ἡσυχίᾳ ἐντύχη. Ὁ φαῦλος πόλιν τε καὶ τὸν κατὰ πόλιν ὄχλον τε καὶ φυρμὸν ἀνθρώπων ὁμοῦ καὶ πραγμάτων μεταδιώκει. Φιλοπραγμοσύναι γὰρ καὶ πλεονεξίαι, δημοκοπίαί τε καὶ δημαρχίαι τῷ τοιοῦτῳ τιμαί, τὸ δὲ ἡσυχάζειν ἀτιμώτατον.

Harris, p. 33, "the first sentence is Dam. Par. 376, also Cod. Reg. 923, f. 85, where it is ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει, and Maximus ii. 599 . . . the last part is found in Anton Melissa (Migne, Patr. Gr. 136, col. 1193 . . .)."

<sup>α</sup> μὴ Cod. Reg.

<sup>β</sup> Harris (p. 110): κρατούμενοι codd.

<sup>γ</sup> Harris: ἠφίχθαι codd.: ἐφικέσθαι prop. Harris.

<sup>α</sup> καὶ σχολὴν μεταδιώκει] διώκει Maximus.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

51. (Gen. xix. 23)

(a) Διὰ τί, “ ἐξῆλθεν ὁ ἥλιος ἐπὶ τὴν γῆν, καὶ Λὼτ εἰσῆλθεν εἰς Σηγῶρ ”;

Καὶ φησιν· Ὁ αὐτὸς χρόνος γίνεται καὶ τοῖς προκόπτουσιν εἰς σωτηρίαν, καὶ τοῖς ἀνιάτως ἔχουσι πρὸς κόλασιν. Καὶ ἐν ἀρχῇ δὴ ἡμέρας εὐθὺς ἀνατείλαντος τοῦ ἡλίου τὴν δίκην ἐπάγει, βουλόμενος δεῖξαι ὅτι ἥλιος καὶ ἡμέρα καὶ φῶς καὶ ὅσα ἄλλα<sup>a</sup> ἐν κόσμῳ καλὰ καὶ τίμα μόνοις ἀπονέμεται τοῖς ἀστείοις, φαύλῳ δὲ οὐδενὶ τῶν ἀθεράπευτον κακίαν ἔχόντων.

Harris, p. 34, from Cat. Ined. Cod. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 675), Cat. Burney, f. 37 and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 251.

(b) Ἐκ τοῦ οὐρανοῦ, ἐξ οὗ γίνονται οἱ ἐτήσιοι χειμῶνες καὶ ἕτοι πρὸς αὔξησιν τῶν φυομένων, ὅσα σπαρτὰ καὶ δένδρα πρὸς γένεσιν καρπῶν εἰς ἀνθρώπων καὶ τῶν ἄλλων ζῶων τροφάς, καταραγῆναί φησι τὸ θεῖον καὶ τὸ πῦρ ἐπὶ φθορᾷ τῶν κατὰ γῆν ἀπάντων ἢ ἐπιδείξεται ὅτι καὶ τῶν καιρῶν καὶ τῶν ἐτησίων ὥρων αἴτιος οὐθ' ὁ οὐρανὸς οὐθ' ὁ ἥλιος οὐθ' αἱ τῶν ἄλλων ἀστέρων χορεῖαι καὶ περιπολήσεις, ἀλλ' ἡ τοῦ πατέρος δύναμις.<sup>b</sup> Δηλοῖ δὲ καὶ ἡ τεθραυματοουργημένη πρᾶξις οὐ

<sup>a</sup> ἄλλα om. Cat. Burney.

<sup>b</sup> ἐφεδρεύοντος μὲν ὡς ἄρματι πτηνῷ σύμπαντι τῷ κόσμῳ, ἡνιοχοῦντος δ' αὐτὸν ὡς βέλτιστ' ἂν νομίσειεν ex Arm. add. Lewy.

Οὐ μεσημβρίας γίνεται ὁ τοῦ πυρὸς ἕτερος, ἀλλ' ὄρθρου ὅτε καταψύχει πως ὁ ἀήρ . . . ὅρα δὲ πάλιν ἱστορικώτερον, ὡς ὁ αὐτὸς χρόνος γίνεται καὶ τοῖς προκόπτουσιν εἰς σωτηρίαν καὶ τοῖς ἀνιάτοις εἰς κόλασιν. Ἡλίου γὰρ ἀνατείλαντος ἐκάτερον γέγονεν.

Wendland, p. 75, from Procopius 373 A and Cod. Aug. f. 104<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 375).

Ἐξ οὐρανοῦ δὲ τὸ πῦρ πρὸς φθοράν, ὅθεν ἕτοι πρὸς ζωήν, ὡς ἂν δευχθῆ μὴ τῶν καρπῶν αἴτιος ὑπάρχων οὐρανὸς καὶ ἀστέρες ὡς οὐδὲ τῶν ὄμβρων, ἀλλ' ὁ πέμπων τούτους θεός, ὅς γε καὶ τὸ πῦρ ἀντὶ τούτων ἀπέστειλε παρὰ φύσιν ἐπὶ τὰ κάτω πεμφθέν.

Wendland, p. 75, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 104<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 375).

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

τὸ καθεστὸς<sup>a</sup> ἐπὶ τῶν στοιχείων ἔθος ἀλλὰ τινα δύναμιν αὐτοκρατῆ καὶ αὐτεξούσιον μεταστοιχειοῦσαν, ὡς ἂν προέλθῃται, τὰ σύμπαντα.

Lewy, p. 58, from Catt. Len. f. 63<sup>r</sup>, Barb. f. 141<sup>v</sup>-142<sup>r</sup>, Mosq. f. 217<sup>r-v</sup>, Φιλ. ἐπισκ.

(c) Φύσει μὲν γὰρ κοῦφα θεῖον καὶ πῦρ ἐστὶν καὶ διὰ τοῦτο ἄνω φοιτᾷ· τὸ δὲ τῆς ἀρᾶς κεκαιουρρημένον ἤλλαξε πρὸς τούναντίον τὴν κίνησιν ἄνωθεν κάτω βιαζόμενον ἐνεχθῆναι τὰ κουφότατα ὡς τὰ τῶν ὄντων βαρύτερα.

Lewy, p. 58, from Catt., as in (b) above.

Φύσει μὲν κοῦφα θεῖον καὶ πῦρ· τὸ δὲ τῆς ἀρᾶς κεκαιουρρημένον ἤλλαξε πρὸς τούναντίον τὴν κίνησιν.

Harris, p. 34, from Cat. Burney, f. 46 b, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου, and Cat. Lips. col. 252, Ἀδῆλου.

52. (Gen. xix. 26)

Οἱ δὲ ἄγγελοι παραγγέλλουσι μὴ ἀποκλίνειν ὀπίσω. "Ἦιδεσαν γὰρ ὅτι οἱ μὲν ἴσως ἐφροσθήσονται ταῖς συμφοραῖς ἰδόντες—χαίρειν δὲ ἐπὶ ταῖς τῶν ἐτέρων<sup>b</sup> ἀτυχίαις εἰ καὶ δίκαιον, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀνθρώπινον· τὸ γὰρ μέλλον ἀδηλον—, οἱ δὲ ἴσως μαλακισθήσονται καὶ πλέον τοῦ μετρίου δυσανασχετήσουσι περιαλοῦντες ἠττώμενοι φίλων καὶ συνηθείας. Καὶ πάλιν αὕτη τρίτη αἰτία· θεοῦ γάρ, φησὶν, ὧ<sup>c</sup> ἀνθρώποι, κολάζοντος μὴ κατανοεῖτε. Ἀπόχρη γὰρ ὑμῖν τοῦτο γνῶναι, ὅτι ὑπέμειναν τιμωρίαν οὐς ἔχρη<sup>d</sup>. τὸ δὲ πῶς ὑπέμειναν<sup>e</sup> περιεργάζεσθαι προπετείας καὶ θράσους, οὐκ εὐλαβείας ἂν εἴη.

Wendland, p. 76, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 104<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 375). The phrase χαίρειν . . . ἀνθρώπινον is also in Harris, p. 34, from Dam. Par. 509, ascribed to Nilus, and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 154 b, ascribed to Philo, and Mai, Script.

<sup>a</sup> ex Arm. Lewy : καθ' ἕκαστον codd.

<sup>b</sup> ἐχθρῶν Cod. Reg.

<sup>c</sup> ὡς Catt. Lips., Burney.

<sup>d</sup> ἀπόχρη . . . ἔχρη] ὅτι μὲν γὰρ τιμωροῦνται ἔχρη γνῶναι Catt. Lips., Burney.

<sup>e</sup> ὑπέμειναν om. Catt. Lips., Burney.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

Vet. vii. 102, from Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ γ' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων. The last part, θεοῦ γάρ . . . εὐλαβείας (ἂν εἴη), is also in Harris, pp. 34-35, from Cat. Lips. col. 248 and Cat. Burney, f. 46 b, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

54. (Gen. xix. 29) Ἐμνήσθη δὲ ὁ θεὸς τοῦ Ἀβραάμ καὶ ἐξαπέστειλε τὸν Λῶτ.

Ὡστε διὰ τὸν Ἀβραάμ διασέσωσται (καὶ αὐτὸς τι μέρος εἰσ-ενεγκῶν).

Wendland, p. 76, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 104<sup>r</sup>.

56. (Gen. xix. 31-32) Ἐπότισαν δὲ τὸν πατέρα αὐτῶν οἶνον ἐν νυκτί.

. . . δι' ὧν δέ φασι “ καὶ οὐδεὶς ἐστὶν ἐπὶ τῆς γῆς ὃς εἰσελεύ-σεται πρὸς ἡμᾶς,” δεικνύουσιν ὡς οὐ πάθος ἀκολασίας ἤλασεν αὐτὰς ἐπὶ τοῦτο ἀλλὰ φειδῶ τοῦ γένους, ὅθεν εὐσύγγνωστοι. . . .
Οὕτως οἰκονομία τις ἦν καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν θυγατέρων τοῦ Λῶτ, ἐπειδὴ μὴ δι' ἀκολασίαν καὶ παίδων ἐπιθυμίαν τὸ γεγονός.

Wendland, p. 77, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 104<sup>v</sup>
(Migne, p. 378 A, cf. Theodore, Cat. Lips. 255) and Procopius 474 A.

64. (Gen. xx. 4-5)

Οὐχ ὡς τὸ ἐκουσίως ἀμαρτάνειν ἐστὶν ἄδικον, οὕτω τὸ ἀκουσίως καὶ κατ' ἀγνοίαν εὐθὺς δίκαιον, ἀλλὰ τάχα που μεθόριον ἀμφοῖν, δικαίου καὶ ἀδίκου, τὸ ὑπὸ τινων καλούμενον ἀδιάφορον. Ἀμάρ-τημα γὰρ οὐδὲν ἔργον δικαιοσύνης.

Harris, p. 35, from Dam. Par. 520 and Cod. Reg. 923. See also Wendland, p. 78, who prints a brief paraphrase from Procopius 380 A, ὁ μὲν δίκαιος οὐκ ἐν ἀγνοίᾳ ἀλλ' ἐπιστήμη.

67. (Gen. xx. 10-11)

Οὐ πάντα ἀληθῆ λεκτέον ἅπασιν ὅθεν καὶ νῦν ὁ ἀστείος ὄλον οἰκονομεῖ τὸ πρᾶγμα μεταθέσει καὶ ἀπαλλαγῆ τῶν ὀνομάτων.

Harris, p. 35, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106 = Cod. Vat.
1553, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

69. (Gen. xx. 16)

Τὸ δὲ “ πάντα ἀλήθευσον ” ἀφιλοσόφου καὶ ἰδιώτου παράγγελμα·

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

εἰ μὲν γὰρ ὁ μὲν ἀνθρώπων βίος εὐώδει μηδὲν παραδεχόμενος ψεῦδος, εἰκὸς ἦν ἐπὶ παντὶ πρὸς πάντας ἀληθεύειν· ἐπειδὴ δὲ ὑπόκρισις ὡς ἐν θεάτρῳ<sup>a</sup> δυναστεύει καὶ τὸ ψεῦδος παραπέτασμα τῆς ἀληθείας ἐστί, τέχνης δεὶ τῷ σοφῷ πολυτρόπου, καθ' ἣν ὠφελῆσει μιμούμενος τοὺς ὑποκριτὰς οἱ ἄλλα λέγοντες ἕτερα δρῶσιν ὅπως δασύσωσιν οὓς δύνανται.

Harris, p. 35, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106 = Cod. Vat. 1553.

73. (Gen. xxiii. 2-3)

Προπάθεια καὶ οὐ πάθος τοῦ Ἀβραάμ διὰ τούτων δεδήλωται. Οὐ γὰρ εἴρηται ὅτι ἐκόψατο, ἀλλ' ὅτι ἦλθε κόψασθαι. Τοῦτο δηλοῖ καὶ τὸ "ἀνέστη Ἀβραάμ ἀπὸ τοῦ νεκροῦ," μὴ προλεχθέντος τοῦ "ἐκόψατο."

Wendland, p. 78, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 110<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 394, cf. Cat. Lips. 285, Εὐσεβίου).

74. (Gen. xxiii. 4)

Οὕτως γὰρ ὁ σοφίας ἐραστῆς οὐδενὶ τῶν εἰκαιστέρων, καὶ ἂν συμπεφυκῶς τυγχάνη, σύνεστιν ἢ συνδιατρίβει πονηροτάτῳ, διεζευγμένους τῶν πολλῶν διὰ λογισμῶν, δι' οὓς οὔτε συμπλεῖν οὔτε συμπολιτεύεσθαι οὔτε συζῆν λέγεται.

Harris, p. 69 ("unidentified," but located by Früchtel), from Dam. Par. 754 (Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τοῦ ε' τῶν αὐτῶν.

76. (Gen. xxiii. 5-6)

Τῶν μὲν ἀφρόνων βασιλεὺς οὐδεὶς, καὶ ἂν τὸ πάσης γῆς καὶ θαλάσσης ἀνάψῃται κράτος· μόνος δὲ ὁ ἀστεῖος καὶ θεοφιλῆς, καὶ ἂν τῶν παρασκευῶν καὶ τῶν χορηγιῶν ἀμοιρῆ, δι' ὧν πολλοὶ κρατύνονται τὰς δυναστείας. Ὡσπερ γὰρ τῷ κυβερνητικῆς ἢ ἰατρικῆς ἢ μουσικῆς ἀπείρω παρέλκον πρᾶγμα οἶακες καὶ φαρμάκων σύνθεσις καὶ αὐλοὶ καὶ κιθάραι, διότι μηδενὶ τούτων χρῆσθαι πρὸς ὁ πέφυκε, κυβερνήτῃ δὲ καὶ ἰατρῷ καὶ μουσικῷ λέγοιτο ἂν ἐφαρμόζειν· δεόντως οὕτως, ἐπειδὴ τέχνη τίς ἐστι βασιλική καὶ τεχνῶν ἀρίστη, τὸν μὲν ἀνεπιστήμονα χρήσεως ἀνθρώπων ἰδιώτην νομιστέον, βασιλέα δὲ μόνον τὸν ἐπιστήμονα.

Harris, p. 36, the first few lines (to θεοφιλῆς) from Dam. Par. 396 and 776 = Cod. Rupef. f. 115 b, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν <sup>a</sup> ex Arm. Harris: ἐκατέρω codd.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

Γενέσει ζητημάτων, and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 97, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει, the rest of the passage from Dam. Par. 776.

80. (Gen. xxiii. 9, 11)

Τὸ σπήλαιον τὸ διπλοῦν δύο εἰσὶν ἀνθρώδεις ὑπωρείαι· ἡ μὲν ἐκτός, ἡ δὲ εἴσω· ἡ δὴ δύο περίβολοι· ὁ μὲν περιέχων, ὁ δὲ περιεχόμενος.

Harris, p. 36, from Cat. Lips. col. 288, Προκοπίου.

81. (Gen. xxiii. 11)

Τοῦ δὲ Ἀβραὰμ μόνον τὸ σπήλαιον αἰτοῦντος ὁ Ἐφρών ὀρώων αὐτοῦ τὴν σοφίαν καὶ τὸν ἀγρὸν ἐπιδίδωσιν, οἰόμενος δεῖν ἀφθόουως ἐπιδαμνιλέεσθαι χάριτας.

Wendland, p. 78, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 110<sup>r</sup> = Cat. Lips. 288, Ἀδήλου.

86. (Gen. xxiv. 2)

Λεχθείη δ' ἂν καὶ ὅτι ἐπὶ μνηστείαν καὶ γάμον πέμπων τὸν παῖδα ὁ Ἀβραὰμ κατὰ τῶν γαμικῶν ὀργάνων ἐξώρκισε, καθαρὰν ὀμιλίαν καὶ γάμον ἀνεπίληπτον, αἰνιττόμενος οὐχ ἡδονὴν τὸ τέλος ἀλλὰ γνησίους ἔχοντα παῖδας.<sup>a</sup>

Wendland, pp. 78-79, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 110<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 365, cf. Theodoret, Quaest. lxxiv).

88. (Gen. xxiv. 3) Διατί δὲ μὴ τῷ υἱῷ παραγγέλλει μὴ λαβεῖν Χανανίτιν, ὡς περ ὕστερον τῷ Ἰακώβ οἱ γονεῖς, ἀλλὰ τῷ παιδί;

. . . καίτοι τελείου τυγχάνοντος Ἰσαὰκ καὶ ἡλικίαν ἔχοντος γάμου . . . καὶ εἰ μὲν ἤμελλε πείθεσθαι, εἰκὸς ἦν αὐτῷ μᾶλλον παρεγγυᾶν· εἰ δὲ ἀπειθεῖν, περιττὴ τοῦ παιδὸς ἡ διακονία. Τὸ γὰρ εἰπεῖν ὅτι, χρησμῶ τῆς γῆς ἐξελθὼν, πέμπειν εἰς αὐτὴν οὐκ ἤξιον τὸν υἱόν, [εἰ καὶ εὐλογον, ὅμως ἀπαρέσκει τισί] διὰ τὸ μηδ' ἂν τὸν Ἰακώβ, εἰ τοῦτο ἦν ἀληθές, ὑπὸ τῶν γονέων ἐνταῦθα πεμφθῆναι.

Harris, p. 37, from Cat. Lips. col. 292, Προκοπίου.

99. (Gen. xxiv. 16)

(a) Διαγράφει τὸ κάλλος ἵνα μᾶλλον τὴν σωφροσύνην θαυμάσωμεν. Οὐ τὸ κάλλος γὰρ πάντως ἀσελγές, ὡς οὐδὲ σῶφρον ἡ

<sup>a</sup> γνησίων παιδῶν γένεσιν scripsisse Philonem ex Ambr. De Abr. i. 83 con. Wendland.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ἀμορφία. Οὐ σῶμα γὰρ τούτων ἀλλ' ἡ προαίρεσις αἴτιον. Διπλασιάζει δὲ τὸ "παρθένος ἦν," τὸ κατ' ἄμφω σῶφρον ἐμφαίνουσα. "Ἔστι γὰρ ἀσελγείαις διεφθάρθαι ψυχὴν, ἀκραίου τοῦ σώματος μένοντος.

Wendland, p. 79, from Procopius 398 B ("zum guten Teile philonisch erscheint mir die Stelle").

(b) Ἄναιδὲς βλέμμα καὶ μετέωρος αὐχὴν καὶ συνεχῆς κίνησις ὀφρῶν<sup>a</sup> καὶ βάδισμα σεσοβημένον καὶ τὸ ἐπὶ μηδενὶ τῶν φαύλων ἐρυθριᾶν σημειᾶ ἔστι ψυχῆς αισχίστης, τοὺς ἀφανεῖς τῶν οικείων ὀνειδῶν τύπους<sup>b</sup> ἐγγραφούσης τῷ φανερῷ σώματι.

Harris, p. 37, from Dam. Par. 658 and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 292, ἐκ τοῦ ε' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει, also Cramer, Anec. Oxon. iv. 254 e Cod. Bodl. Clark, f. 11 b, Maximus ii. 633, Anton Melissa (Patr. Gr. 136, col. 1225), referring to Greg. Nazianz., and Tischendorf, Philonea, p. 154 e Cod. Cahirino.

100. (Gen. xxiv. 16)

Φυσικώτατα ταῦτα δέδεικται κατὰ βᾶσιν μὲν ψυχῆς τὴν δι' οἴσσεως ἀνάβασιν, ἀνοδὸν δὲ καὶ ὕψος τὴν ἀλαζονείας ὑπονόστησιν.

Harris, p. 102 ("unidentified," but located by Früchtel), from Cod. Rupef. f. 264.

102. (Gen. xxiv. 17)

Ἄξιον ἀποδέχεσθαι τὸ μηδενὸς ὀρέγεσθαι τῶν ὑπὲρ δυνάμιν· πᾶν γὰρ τὸ συμμετρίαν ἔχον, ἐπαινετόν . . . ἀναγκαῖον οὖν τῷ μὲν εὐφυεῖ πλείους εἶναι τὰς διδασκαλίας, ἐλάττους δὲ τῷ ἀφυεῖ διὰ τὴν ἐν ταῖς ἀνάγκαις<sup>c</sup> ἀρίστην ἰσότητα . . . καὶ τοῦτό γέ ἔστι τὸ βιωφελέστατον ἴσον.

Harris, p. 38, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106, from Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

104. (Gen. xxiv. 18)

Οὐχ ὡς δύναται διδάσκειν ὁ διδάσκαλος, οὕτω καὶ μαθάνειν ὁ γνῶριμος, ἐπειδὴ ὁ μὲν τέλειος, ὁ δὲ ἀτελής ἔστιν. "Ὅθεν προσήκει στοχαζέσθαι τῆς τοῦ παιδευομένου δυνάμεως.

Harris, p. 38, from Dam. Par. 435 and Cod. Reg. 923, f.

<sup>a</sup> ὀφθαλμῶν Dam. et Cod. Reg.

<sup>b</sup> τόποις Dam. et Cod. Reg.

<sup>c</sup> ἀναλογίαις ex Arm. conieci.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

116 b, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῆς ἡ' τῶν νόμων ἱερῶν ἀλληγορίας, also Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 99, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ θ' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

110. (Gen. xxiv. 22)

(a) Ἀκοῦσαι δεῖ πρῶτον, εἶτα ἐργάσασθαι· μανθάνομεν γὰρ οὐ τοῦ μαθεῖν χάριν ἀλλὰ τοῦ πράξει.

Harris, p. 38, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 99.

(b) Διαφέρει δὲ μονὰς ἐνὸς ἢ διαφέρει ἀρχέτυπον εἰκόνας· παράδειγμα μὲν γὰρ ἢ μονάς, μίμημα δὲ τῆς μονάδος τὸ ἐν.

Stahle, p. 19, from Joh. Lydus ii. 6, p. 23, 6.

(c) . . . ἢ ἀπὸ τοῦ διακεκρίσθαι καὶ μεμονῶσθαι ἀπὸ τοῦ λοιποῦ πλήθους τῶν ἀριθμῶν καλεῖται μονάς.

Stahle, p. 19, from Theon of Smyrna, p. 19, 12 f. (cf. Joh. Lydus, p. 21, 20 and Moderatus ap. Stob. Ecl. i. i. 8).

130. (Gen. xxiv. 52-53)

Δεῖ γὰρ πάσης πράξεως καθαρῶς ἀρχὴν [εἶναι] ἤτην πρὸς θεὸν εὐχαριστίαν καὶ τιμὴν· διὰ τοῦτο ὁ παῖς προσκυνεῖ πρότερον, εἶτα χαρίζεται τὰ δῶρα.

Harris, p. 38, from Cod. Vat. 746, f. 53, Φίλωνος, cf. Pitra, Analecta Sacra ii. 314.

131. (Gen. xxiv. 55-56)

Μετανοήκασιν οἱ πρὸ μικροῦ λέγοντες· “Ἴδου Ῥεβέκκα ἐνώπιόν σου λαβὼν ἀπότρεχε.”

Lewy, p. 59, from Cat. Barb. f. 146<sup>v</sup>, Φιλ. ἐπ., and Cat. Len. f. 93<sup>v</sup>, Φίλωνος.

144. (Gen. xxiv. 66) Διὰ τί δὲ ὁ παῖς ὑφ' ἑτέρου πεμφθεὶς ἐπὶ τὴν πρεσβείαν ἑτέρῳ ἀποπροσβεύει; “διηγήσατο γάρ,” φησί, “τῷ Ἰσαάκ.”

Εὐαγγελίζεται τούτῳ δι' ὃν ἐπέμφθη. Καὶ προτέρῳ δὲ ἐνέτυχε κατὰ τὴν ὁδόν. Πάντως δὲ καὶ τῷ Ἀβραάμ εἶπεν, εἰ καὶ μὴ γέγραπται.

Wendland, p. 79, from Procopius 404 A.

145. (Gen. xxiv. 67) Διὰ τί δὲ<sup>a</sup> οὐκ εἰς τὸν τοῦ πατρὸς οἶκον ἀλλ' εἰς τὸν τῆς μητρὸς εἰσέρχεται λέγεται Ἰσαάκ ἐπὶ γάμῳ;

<sup>a</sup> δὲ om. Cat. Barb.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

᾽Οτι ὁ μὲν πατὴρ πλείους ἀγαγόμενος γυναῖκας, δυνάμει<sup>α</sup> καὶ πλείους<sup>β</sup> ἔσχεν οἴκους. Οἶκος γὰρ οὐ μόνον λέγεται<sup>γ</sup> τὸ οἰκοδόμημα ἀλλὰ καὶ τὸ ἐκ γαμικῆς συζυγίας<sup>δ</sup> καὶ τέκνων σύστημα.<sup>ε</sup> ἥ<sup>ς</sup> δὲ μέχρι τελευταίης ἐπέμεινε τῷ κουριδίῳ, ὡς διὰ τοῦτο καὶ ἓνα οἶκον ἔσχηκέναι δοκεῖν.<sup>ϛ</sup>

Wendland, p. 80, from Procopius 404 A, and Cat. Barb. vi. 8, f. 166<sup>v</sup>, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου; also, in part, Harris, p. 39, from Cat. Lips. col. 305, Προκοπίου.

148. (Gen. xxv. 5-6)

Διαφορὰν δὲ φασιν ὑπαρχόντων καὶ δομάτων. τὸ μὲν γὰρ σημαίνει τὰ κτήματα καὶ ὅσα βέβαια τῶν κειμηλίων, δόματα δὲ τὰ χειρόδοτα καὶ ὧν ἡ χρῆσις ἐφήμερος.

Wendland, p. 80, from Procopius 405 B.

152. (Gen. xxv. 8)

Οὐδεὶς κενὸς πλήρης εἶναι μεμαρτύρηται ἡμερῶν.

Wendland, p. 80, from Procopius 405 B and Cat. Lips.

153. (Gen. xxv. 8)

Οὐδεὶς γὰρ προστίθεται τοῖς μὴ οὖσιν, ἄλλος δὲ προστίθεται, φησί, λέγεται λαῶ μήπω γεγονότι. Ἄρχῃ γὰρ αὐτὸς καὶ προπάτωρ τοῦ γένους ἐστί. Τὸν οὖν μέλλοντα δι' αὐτὸν γενέσθαι ὡς ἤδη γεγονότα χαριζόμενος αὐτοῦ τῷ θεοπροπέι τῶν ἀρετῶν ιδρύεται ᾧ<sup>η</sup> καὶ λέγεται<sup>ι</sup> προστίθεται.

Wendland, p. 81, from Procopius 406 C.

165. (Gen. xxv. 27)

Ἰακώβ δὲ ἄνθρωπος “ ἄπλαστος οἰκῶν οἰκίαν,” τουτέστι μηδὲν

<sup>α</sup> δυνάμει om. Cat. Lips.

<sup>β</sup> πλείστους Cat. Barb.

<sup>γ</sup> λέγεται om. Procopius.

<sup>δ</sup> ἐκ γαμικῆς συζυγίας] ἐξ ἀνδρὸς καὶ γυναικὸς Cat. Barb.

<sup>ε</sup> οἶκος . . . σύστημα] λέγεται γὰρ οἶκος καὶ τὸ ἐκ γυναικὸς καὶ τέκνων σύστημα Cat. Lips.

<sup>ς</sup> ὁ Cat. Barb.

<sup>ζ</sup> ὁ δὲ . . . δοκεῖν om. Cat. Lips.

<sup>η</sup> ὡς Nicephorus.

<sup>ι</sup> Wendland : λέγεσθαι codd.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

ἔχων ἐπίπλαστον ἢ ἐπίσακτον κακόν . . . καὶ τὴν αἰτίαν τοῦτου τοῦ ἀπλάστου ἤθους διδάσκει λέγων ὅτι οὐκ ἐρέμβετο ἕξω.
Ἴσως δὲ καὶ ἀντιδιαστέλλει τῷ κυνηγέτῃ Ἡσαῦ καὶ ἐν ὑπαίθρῳ διάγοντι.

Wendland, p. 81, from Procopius 410 A, cf. Cyril ap. Cat.
Lips. 315 and Theodoret, Quaest. lxxvi.

166. (Gen. xxv. 28)

Τίς δ' ἂν οὐκ ἀγάσαιτο τὸ “ἠγάπησε τὸν Ἡσαῦ· ἡ δὲ Ῥεβέκκα ἠγάπα τὸν Ἰακώβ”; Τὸ μὲν γὰρ παρελήλυθε· τὸ δὲ πάρεστιν αἰεὶ· ἡ μὲν γὰρ ἀποδοχὴ τοῦ φαύλου κἂν συμβῆ ποτε, ὀλιγοχρόνιός ἐστι καὶ ἐφήμερος· ἡ δὲ τοῦ σπουδαίου ἀθανατί-ζεται.

Harris, p. 39, from Cat. Lips. col. 315, Προκοπίου.

167. (Gen. xxv. 28)

Καὶ τὸ μὲν σπουδαῖον οὐ δι' ἕτερόν τι ἀγαπᾶται· τὸ δὲ μὴ τοιοῦτον, ἐκ τῶν χρειῶν ἠγάπησε γὰρ φησιν ὅτι ἡ θήρα αὐτοῦ βρώσις αὐτῷ.

Harris, p. 39, from Cat. Lips. col. 315, Προκοπίου.

168. (Gen. xxv. 29)

Καὶ τὸ ῥητὸν τῆς διηγῆσεως ἔλεγχον ἔχει ἀκολάστου πρὸς νο-θεσίαν τῶν θεραπεύεσθαι δυναμένων· ὁ<sup>a</sup> γὰρ τοῦ τυχόντος ἕνεκα προεφήματος<sup>b</sup> ἐκστὰς τῶν πρεσβείων τῷ νεωτέρῳ καὶ δούλος γαστρὸς ἡδονῆς ἀναγραφεῖς εἰς ὄνειδος προκείσθω τῶν μήποτε ζῆλον ἐγκρατείας λαβόντων.

Harris, pp. 39-40, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 318, Φίλωνος ("but the editor remarks ἴσως τοῦ ἐπισκόπου· ἐν γὰρ τοῖς τοῦ Ἑβραίου οὐχ εὑρίσκεται"), also Cat. Burney, f. 55, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου, and Cod. Palat. 203, f. 110 ap. Pitra, Anal. Sacr.
ii. 311.

169. (Gen. xxv. 29)

Ἐπὶ μὲν τῶν σπουδαίων ἡ ἔκλειψις εἶναι λέγεται πρόσθεσις· ἐκλείποντες γὰρ τὸν θνητὸν βίον ἀθανάτῳ ζωῇ προστίθενται· ὁ δὲ

<sup>a</sup> οὐ Arm.

<sup>b</sup> προεφημένων Cat. Burney : προσλήμματος Cod. Palat.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

φαῦλος ἔκλειψιν ἀναδέχεται μόνον<sup>a</sup> λιμὸν ἀρετῆς ὑπομένων ἀδιάστατον μᾶλλον ἢ σίτων καὶ ποτῶν.

Wendland, p. 82, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 115<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 410).

172. (Gen. xxv. 31)

Τὸ μὲν ῥῆτὸν οἶα τῷ δοκεῖν ἐμφαίνει πλεονεξίαν νεωτέρου σφετερίζεσθαι<sup>b</sup> ἀδελφοῦ δίκαια ποθοῦντος. Ὁ δὲ σπουδαῖος οὐ πλεονέκτης ἄτε ὀλιγοδείας καὶ ἐγκρατείας ἐταῖρος. Σαφῶς οὖν ὁ ἐπιστάμενος ὅτι αἱ ἄφθονοι περιουσίαι τῶν φαύλων χορηγοὶ τῶν ἀμαρτημάτων καὶ ἀδικημάτων αὐτοῖς εἰσιν, ἀναγκαιότατον ἡγείται τὴν προσαναφλέγουσαν ὕλην, ὡς πυρός, τῆς κακίας ἀφαιρεῖν εἰς βελτίωσιν ἡθῶν ὅπερ οὐ βλάβην ἀλλὰ μεγίστην ὠφέλειαν περιποιεῖ τῷ ζημιουῦσθαί δοκοῦντι.

Harris, p. 40, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 316, and Cat. Burney, f. 55, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

Δοκεῖ δὲ τὸ ῥῆτὸν πλεονεξίαν ἐμφαίνειν τοῦ Ἰακώβ, ὅπερ ἄλλότριον σπουδαίου, εἴπερ ὀλιγοδείας καὶ ἐγκρατείας ἐταῖρος καὶ ὠφελητικὸς ἐστὶν ἐν τοῖς μάλιστα. Σαφῶς οὖν ἐπιστάμενος ὅτι αἱ ἄφθονοι περιουσίαι παντὶ φαύλῳ χορηγοὶ τῶν ἀμαρτημάτων καὶ ἀδικημάτων εἰσίν, ἀναγκαιότατον ἡγείται τὴν προσαναφλέγουσαν ὕλην, ὡς πυρός, τῆς κακίας ἀφαιρεῖν εἰς βελτίωσιν ἡθῶν ὅπερ οὐ βλάβην ἀλλὰ μεγίστην ὠφέλειαν περιποιεῖ τῷ ζημιουῦσθαί δοκοῦντι.

Wendland, pp. 82-83, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 115<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 412).

173. (Gen. xxv. 32) Ἴδοῦ ἐγὼ πορεύομαι τελευτᾶν. Λόγιόν ἐστι τὸ εἰρημένον. Ὅντως γὰρ ὁ τοῦ φαύλου βίος ἐπὶ θάνατον σπεύδει. Οὐ φησὶ δὲ “ἵνα τί μοι πρωτοτόκια,” μετὰ προσθήκης δὲ τοῦ “ταῦτα,” ὃ ἐστὶ τὰ πρὸς ἀρετὴν ἄγοντα καὶ εὐδαιμονίαν. Ἐχω γάρ, φησὶ, ἑξαιρέτα ἕτερα τὸ ἡδεσθαι, τὸ ἐπιθυμεῖν, τὸ ἀκολασταίνειν, τὸ πλεονεκτεῖν καὶ ὅσα τούτων ἀδελφά.

Wendland, p. 83, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 115<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 411).

174. (Gen. xxv. 34) Καὶ ἐφάυλισεν Ἡσαῦ τὰ πρωτοτόκια.

Κακίζει γὰρ ὡσπερ ὁ ἀστείος τὰ τοῦ φαύλου, καὶ ὁ φαῦλος τὰ

<sup>a</sup> μόνον om. Nicephorus.

<sup>b</sup> + ἀδικῶς Cat. Burney.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

τοῦ ἀστέιου καὶ βουλευματα καὶ πράξεις καὶ λόγους. Ἄσύμφωνον γὰρ ἁρμονία πρὸς ἀναρμοστίαν.

Wendland, p. 83, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 115<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 411).

179. (Gen. xxvi. 3)

Μεῖζον ἀνθρώπῳ κακὸν ἀφροσύνης οὐδέν ἐστι, τὸ ἴδιον τοῦ λογιστικοῦ γένους, τὸν νοῦν, ζημιωθέντι.

Harris, p. 69 ("unidentified," but located by E. Bréhier), from Dam. Par. 363 and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 76, "in both cases as from the sixth book of the Questions on Genesis."

180. (Gen. xxvi. 36)

(a) Ἀδιαφοροῦσιν ὄρκων λόγοι θεοῦ· καὶ κατὰ τίνος ἂν ᾤμοσεν ὁ θεός, ὅτι μὴ ἑαυτοῦ; λέγεται δὲ ὁμνῦναι διὰ τὴν ἡμετέραν ἀσθένειαν τῶν ὑπολαμβάνοντων ὡς ἐπ' ἀνθρώπου διαφέρειν λόγων ὄρκους, οὕτως ἐπὶ θεοῦ. . . .

Harris, pp. 40-41, from Cat. Lips. col. 319, Προκοπίου.

(b) Ἐπαινεῖ δὲ καὶ τὸν υἱὸν ὡς πατρώας ἄξιον εὐεργίας. Οὐ γὰρ ἂν βεβαιοτέρων ἰδρύετο τὰς μεθ' ὄρκων γεγενημένας ἐπὶ τοῦ πατρὸς εὐλογίας τῷ υἱῷ, εἰ μὴ καὶ τούτῳ τὴν αὐτὴν ἀρετὴν προσεμαρτύρει.

Wendland, p. 84, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. 117<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 414 A).

184. (Gen. xxvi. 5)

Διαφέρει δικαιώματα νομίμων· τὰ μὲν γὰρ πως δύναται συνίσθασθαι (sic) φύσει, τὰ δὲ νόμιμα θέσει· πρεσβύτερα δὲ τῶν θέσει τὰ φύσει, ὥστε καὶ τὸ δίκαιον νόμου.

Lewy, p. 59, from Cod. Rupef. 148<sup>r</sup>, τοῦ αὐτοῦ (sc. Φίλωνος).

188. (Gen. xxvi. 8)

Ἐβραῖοι δὲ φασιν εὐσχημόνως εἰρήσθαι τὸ "παίζειν" ἀντὶ τοῦ σπουδαίου.

Wendland, p. 84, from Procopius 416 B.

189. (Gen. xxvi. 12)

Μαρτυρεῖ δὲ τὸ παρὸν ὅτι τῷ σπουδαίῳ καὶ τὰ κατὰ γεωργίαν

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

καὶ τὰλλα <τὰ> περὶ βίον εὐοδεῖ καὶ τὰ ἐπιγινόμενα πολλαπλάσια τῶν ἐξ ἀρχῆς γίνεται.

Wendland, p. 84, from Procopius 416 v.

191. (Gen. xxvi. 15)

(a) Τοῖς γὰρ ἀβούλοις ἔθος ἐστὶ μήτε στήλας μήτε μνημείον τι ἀπολιπεῖν τῶν καλῶν εἰς εὐδοξίαν συμβαλλόμενον, ἢ ὅτι ῥηγνύμενοι φθόνῳ καὶ βασκανία τῆς τε περὶ ἐκείνους<sup>a</sup> εὐπραγίας ὀλιγωροῦσι καὶ τῆς αὐτῶν ὠφελείας ἄμεινον ἡγούμενοι βλάπτεσθαι μᾶλλον ἢ ὑφ' ὧν οὐκ ἔτι<sup>b</sup> θέλουσιν εὐεργετῆσθαι.

Harris, p. 41, from Cat. Burney, f. 55 b, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 323, Φίλωνος ἐπισκόπου.

Οἱ δὲ ἐμπαθεῖς καὶ τὰ μνημεία τῶν ἀγαθῶν ἐξαλείφουσι, κἂν τύχωσιν ἐξ αὐτῶν ὠφελούμενοι, προτιμῶντες βλάβην μᾶλλον ἢ τὴν ἐξ ὧν μὴ θέλουσιν εὐεργέσιαν. Ὡφέλου γὰρ αἱ πηγαὶ καὶ τῶν Φυλιστιέμ τοὺς βουλομένους κεχρησθαι.

Wendland, p. 84, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 118<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 415).

(b) Τί γὰρ ἐκώλυεν, εἴποι τις ἂν, ὃ πάντων ἡλιθιώτατοι, τὰς πηγὰς εἶσαι, ἃς ἕτερος εὗρεν πρὸς τὴν τῶν παρ' ὑμῖν αὐτοῖς δεομένων χρῆσιν; Ἄλλ' ἀποκρίνεται τις: "Μὴ ζήτηε παρὰ βασκάνων ἀπολογία εὐγνώμονα,<sup>c</sup> ζημίαν ὑπολαμβανόντων τὰς ὑπὸ τῶν βελτίστων προτεινομένης χάριτας."

Lewy, p. 59, from Cat. Len. 124, f. 76<sup>v</sup>.

193. (Gen. xxvi. 18) Τὰ ἐμφραγέντα φρέατα πάλιν ὤρυξεν.<sup>d</sup>

Ἔστι φύσει φιλόανθρωπος ὁ ἀστεῖος καὶ εὐμενὴς καὶ συγγνώμων, οὐδενὶ μνησικακῶν τὸ παράπαν, ἀλλὰ νικᾷν τοὺς ἐχθροὺς ἀξιών ἐν τῷ ποιεῖν εὖ μᾶλλον ἢ βλάπτειν.

Harris, p. 41, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 323, and Cat. Burney, f. 55 b.

Ἰσαὰκ ὡς πᾶσιν ἂν εὐμενὴς καὶ πρὸς τῷ μὴ μνησικακεῖν, ἐν τῷ εὐεργετῆσαι σπουδάζων νικᾷ τὴν ἐκείνων κακίαν.

Wendland, p. 85, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 118<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 415).

<sup>a</sup> ἐκείνων Harris.

<sup>b</sup> εὖ Cat. Burney: del. Wendland.

<sup>c</sup> εὐγενῆ Arm.

<sup>d</sup> ὀρύσσει ὁ Ἰσαὰκ Catt. Lips. et Burney.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

194. (Gen. xxvi. 18)

Καὶ τὰ αὐτὰ ὀνόματα τίθεται, τιμῶν αὐτοῦ τὸν πατέρα καὶ μὴ συγχωρῶν εἰσάπαν τῷ φθόνῳ νικᾶν.

Wendland, p. 85, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 118<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 415).

[195, see Appendix B.]

198. (Gen. xxvii. 3-4)

Δυοῖν ὄντων υἱῶν, τοῦ μὲν ἀγαθοῦ, τοῦ δὲ ὑπαίτιου, τὸν μὲν ὑπαίτιον εὐλογῆσειν φησὶν· οὐκ ἐπειδὴ τοῦ σπουδαίου προκρίνει τοῦτον ἀλλ' ὅτι ἐκείνον οἶδε δι' αὐτοῦ κατορθοῦν δυνάμενον, τοῦτον δὲ τοῖς ἰδίῳις τρόποις ἀλυσκόμενον, μηδεμίαν δὲ ἔχοντα σωτηρίας ἐλπίδα, εἰ μὴ τὰς εὐχὰς τοῦ πατρός· ὧν εἰ μὴ τύχοι, πάντων ἂν εἴη κακοδαίμονέστατος.

Harris, p. 43, from Cat. Ined. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 676), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 330, Φίλωνος, ἴσως ἐπισκόπου, and Cat. Burney, f. 56 b, Φίλωνος ἑβραίου. (Harris also gives two Latin fragments, one from Cat. Zephyri, p. 83, the other from Cat. Lippomani, f. 288 b).

Ὁ δὲ Ἰσαὰκ οὐ προτιμῶν τοῦ Ἰακώβ τὸν Ἡσαῦ αὐτὸν ἠθέλησεν εὐλογεῖν. Πῶς γὰρ ὧν σπουδαῖος προτιμῶν ἀνείχετο τὸν ὑπαίτιον; ἀλλ' εἰδὼς ὡς ἐκείνος μὲν ἐκ τῶν οἰκείων τρόπων ἔχει τὴν εὐμένειαν οὗτος δὲ μίαν ἔχει σωτηρίας ἐλπίδα τὰς εὐχὰς τοῦ πατρός.

Wendland, p. 86, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 118<sup>v</sup>.

200. (Gen. xxvii. 8-10)

(a) Ἐντεῦθεν ἐστὶ μαθεῖν τὸ τοῦ σώματος μέγεθος καὶ τὴν ἐκ κατασκευῆς φυσικὴν εὐεξίαν· ὁ γὰρ ἐν γήρᾳ δύο πίοσιν ἐρίφοις κεκρημένος προσηγήμασι, τίς ἂν ὑπῆρχεν ἐν τῇ νεότητι; καὶ ταῦτα ὧν ἐγκρατὴς καὶ οὐκ ἄπληστος.

Harris, p. 44, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 331, Προκοπίου.

(b) Οὐ διαμάχονται δὲ κατὰ τοὺς οὕτω νομίσαντας τῶν γονέων αἱ γνῶμαι, πρὸς ἐν δὲ τέλος ἐπείγονται, τῆς μὲν βουλομένης τὸν

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ἀγαθὸν τυχεῖν ὦν ἄξιος ἦν, τοῦ δὲ τοῦ σκαιοῦ, τὴν ἀπορίαν ἐπαποροθώσασθαι τῷ ἑλέω τῷ εἰς αὐτόν.

Wendland, pp. 86-87, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 118<sup>v</sup> = Cat. Lips. 331 Γ, Ἀδῆλου (cf. Ambros. De Jacob. ii. 7).

202. (Gen. xxvii. 12-13)

Ἄξιον καὶ τὴν μητέρα τῆς εὐνοίας θαυμάσαι, τὰς κατάρας ὁμολογοῦσαν εἰσδέξασθαι<sup>a</sup> τὰς ὑπὲρ ἐκείνου. Καὶ τὸν υἱὸν τῆς εἰς ἀμφοτέρους τοὺς γονεῖς<sup>b</sup> τιμῆς. Ἀνθέλκεται γὰρ ὑπὸ τῆς πρὸς ἐκάτερον εὐσεβείας· τὸν μὲν γὰρ πατέρα ἐδεδίει, μὴ δόξῃ φενακίζειν καὶ ὑφαρπάζειν ἑτέρου γέρας, τὴν δὲ μητέρα, μὴ καὶ ταύτης νομισθῇ παρακούειν λιπαρῶς ἐγκειμένης· ὅθεν ἄγαν εὐλαβῶς καὶ ὁσίως φησὶν οὐχ “ὁ πατήρ με καταράσεται” ἀλλ’ “ἐγὼ τὰς κατάρας ἐπ’ ἐμαυτὸν ἄξω.”<sup>c</sup>

Harris, p. 44, from Cat. Inedit. Reg. 1825, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 331, and Cat. Burney, f. 56 b.

Θαυμαστὸς τῆς πρὸς ἄμφω τοὺς γονεῖς εὐσεβείας, τὸν μὲν ἵνα μὴ κινήσῃ, τῆς δὲ μὴ παρακούσῃ. Καλῶς δὲ τὸ “ἐπ’ ἐμαυτὸν ἄξω.” Κἂν γὰρ ἡσυχάζῃ φιλοστοργία τῇ πρὸς ἐμέ, τὸ συνειδὸς ἐπιμέμψεται ὡς ἄξια κατάρας ἐργασάμενον. Θαυμαστὴ δὲ καὶ τῆς εὐνοίας ἡ μήτηρ.

Wendland, p. 87, from Procopius 418 v.

204. (Gen. xxvii. 16)

Ὡσπερ τὰς ἄλλας ἀρετὰς ὁ ἀστείος, οὕτως καὶ τὴν ἀνδρείαν καθαρῶς ἐπιτετηθευκῶς, ἐάν ποῦ ταύτην ἐπισκιάζῃ χάριν, καιρῶν οἰκονομία χρῆται, μένων μὲν ἐν ὁμοίῳ καὶ τῆς ἐξ ἀρχῆς προθέσεως οὐκ ἀναχωρῶν, διὰ δὲ τῶν ἀβουλήτων συντυχίας ἐναλλάττων ὥσπερ ἐν θεάτρῳ μορφήν ἑτέραν ὑπὲρ ὠφελείας τῶν ὀρώντων· ἰατρὸς γὰρ τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον πραγμάτων ὁ ἀστείος, ὃς ἕνεκα τῶν καιρῶν φρονίμως ἐνεργεῖ τὰ ἀφροσύνης, καὶ σωφρόνως τὰς ἀκολασίας καὶ τὰς δειλίαις ἀνδρείως καὶ δικαίως τὰς ἀδικίας· καὶ γὰρ ἐρεῖ ποτε τὰ ψευδῆ οὐ ψευδόμενος καὶ ὑβρίσει μὴ ὦν ὑβριστής.

Harris, p. 45, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ δ’ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

<sup>a</sup> Harris: ἐκδέξασθαι Cat. Reg.

<sup>b</sup> τοὺς γονεῖς add. Harris.

<sup>c</sup> ἄξω Cat. Lips.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

206. (Gen. xxvii. 18-19)

(a) Πάλιν ἀπατεῶν εἶναι δόξει τοῖς μὴ τὴν κατ' ἀρετὴν σκοποῦσιν οἰκονομίαν. Ἡ δὲ οἰκονομία πρὸς τὸ μὴ τοῖς ἀναξίοις δίδουσθαι τὰ καλά. Λεγέτω καὶ κατὰσκοπος συλληφθεῖς οὐκ εἰμὶ πολέμιος ἢ ὡς ἡὔτομολῆκα.

Wendland, pp. 87-88, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 118<sup>v</sup>.

(b) Λεγέτω καὶ ὁ στρατηγὸς ἢ τὰ πολεμοποιούντα εἰρήνην πραγματευόμενος ἢ τὰ εἰρήνης πολεμῆν διανοούμενος· ὑποδύσθω καὶ βασιλεὺς ἰδιώτου σχῆμα εἰ μὴ δύναιτο ἑτέρως τὸ συμφέρον τῇ τε ἀρχῇ καὶ τοῖς ὑπηκόοις λαβεῖν καὶ ὁ δεσπότης δούλου, εἵνεκα τοῦ μηδὲν ἀγνοῆσαι τῶν κατὰ τὴν οἰκίαν δρωμένων.

Harris, p. 45, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ δ' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

Λεγέτω καὶ στρατηγὸς τὰ πολεμοποιούντα εἰρήνην πραγματευόμενος ἢ τὰ εἰρηναῖα πολεμῆν ἐγνωκῶς. Οὐδὲν κωλύσει καὶ βασιλέα ἰδιώτου σχῆμα λαβεῖν τοῖς ὑπηκόοις τὸ συμφέρον θηρώμενον καὶ τὸν δεσπότην οἰκέτου μηδὲν ἀγνοεῖν ἐθέλοντα τῶν κατὰ τὸν οἶκον δρωμένων.

Wendland, p. 88, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 118<sup>v</sup>.

207. (Gen. xxvii. 20)

Οὐ γὰρ ἔφθασε χρόνον προσήκοντα κυνηγέτη.

Wendland, p. 88, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 119<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 419).

208. (Gen. xxvii. 20)

Ὁ δὲ θεοφιλῆς ἐπὶ θεὸν τὴν αἰτίαν ἀνάγει διὰ τῆς ἀποκρίσεως.

Wendland, p. 88, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 119<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 419).

210. (Gen. xxvii. 22)

Τὴν εὐσεβῆ φωνὴν οὐκ ἂν λεχθεῖσαν ὑπὸ τοῦ Ἡσαῦ τὴν “ὁ παρέδωκεν ὁ θεὸς ἐναντίον μου” ἐπιγνοὺς Ἰσαὰκ εἶπε τὸ προκείμενον, ᾧ καὶ μαρτυρεῖν εἴκειν ἢ γραφῇ φάσκουσα περὶ μόνων τῶν χειρῶν ὅτι “ἦσαν αἱ χεῖρες τοῦ Ἰακώβ ὡς αἱ χεῖρες Ἡσαῦ τοῦ ἀδελφοῦ αὐτοῦ δασεῖαι,” οὐκέτι δὲ καὶ περὶ φωνῆς τὸ ὅμοιον· οὐ γὰρ ἐν ἰδιότητι προφορᾶς ἀλλ' ἐν τοῖς λεχθεῖσιν ἦν ἡ φωνή.

Wendland, pp. 88-89, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 119<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 419).

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

211. (Gen. xxvii. 23)

Τὰ αὐτὰ καθήκοντα<sup>a</sup> πολλάκις ἐνεργούσιν ὃ τε ἀστεῖος καὶ ὁ φαῦλος, ἀλλ' οὐκ ἀπὸ τῆς αὐτῆς διανοίας ἀμφότεροι<sup>b</sup>. ὁ μὲν γὰρ κρίνων ὅτι καλόν, ὁ δὲ μοχθηρὸς<sup>c</sup> μνώμενός τι τῶν εἰς πλεονεξίαν.

Harris, p. 70 ("unidentified," but located by E. Bréhier), from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 100 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῶν δ' ἐν Γεν. ζητημ., and from Cod. Rupef. f. 337 b.

227. (Gen. xxvii. 34)

Οὐκ ἐπὶ τῷ μὴ τυχεῖν<sup>d</sup> τῶν εὐλογιῶν οὕτω δυσχεραίνει ὡς ἐπὶ τῷ τὸν ἀδελφὸν αὐτοῦ<sup>e</sup> ἀξιωθῆναι. Βάσκανος γὰρ ὢν ἐπιμελέστερον προκρίνει τῆς ἰδίας ὠφελείας τὴν ἐκείνου ζημίαν. Ταῦτα γὰρ ἐμφαίνεται διὰ τοῦ μέγα καὶ πικρὸν ἀνοιμῶσαι<sup>f</sup> καὶ ἐπιλέγειν "Εὐλόγησον δὴ<sup>g</sup> καὶ ἐμέ, πάτερ."

Harris, p. 46, from Cat. Ined. Regia, 1825 (Mangey ii. 676), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 339, Προκοπίου, and Cat. Burney, f. 57 b, Φίλωνος ἐβραίου, also in Wendland, pp. 89-90, from Procopius 421 c.

228. (Gen. xxvii. 35)

'Ἄλλ' εἶ γε μετὰ δόλου ἔλαβεν, εἴποι τις ἄν,<sup>h</sup> οὐκ ἐπαινετός. Τί οὖν φησί: "Καὶ εὐλογημένος ἔσται<sup>i</sup>"; 'Ἄλλ' ἔοικεν αἰνίττεσθαι διὰ τοῦ λεχθέντος ὅτι οὐ πᾶς δόλος ὑπαίτιός ἐστιν, ἐπεὶ καὶ ληστὰς νυκτοφύλακες, καὶ πολεμίους στρατηγούς, οὓς ἀδόλως συλλαβεῖν οὐκ ἔστιν, ἐνεδρεύοντες κατορθοῦν δοκοῦσι. Καὶ τὰ λεγόμενα στρατηγήματα τοιοῦτον λόγον ἔχει καὶ τὰ τῶν ἀθλητῶν ἀγωνίσματα· καὶ γὰρ ἐπὶ τούτων ἡ ἀπάτη νενόμισται

Πῶς οὖν ἐπιφέρει: "Καὶ εὐλογημένος ἔσται"; Αἰνίττεται τοίνυν ὡς οὐ πᾶς δόλος ὑπαίτιος. Τοιαῦτα γὰρ καὶ τὰ λεγόμενα στρατηγήματα, καὶ ἐπὶ τῶν ἀθλητῶν ὁμοίως οἱ μετὰ δόλου νικῶντες θαυμάζονται στεφανούμενοι· οἷς ἰσοδυναμεῖ τὸ "μετὰ δόλου" τῷ "μετὰ τέχνης." Οὐδὲν δὲ ἀτέχνως ὁ σπουδαῖος ποιεῖ.

Wendland, p. 90, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 121<sup>v</sup>.

<sup>a</sup> καθηκόντως Cod. Rupef.

<sup>b</sup> ἀμφότεροι om. Cod. Rupef.

<sup>c</sup> μοχθηρῶς Cod. Rupef.

<sup>d</sup> + φασί Procop.

<sup>e</sup> αὐτῶν Procop.

<sup>f</sup> ἐκβοῆσαι Cat. Lips. : βοῆσαι Cat. Burney.

<sup>g</sup> δὲ Procop.

<sup>h</sup> εἴποι τις ἄν] ἴσως εἴποι τις Catt. Lips. et Burney.

<sup>i</sup> ἔστω Catt. Lips. et Burney.

GENESIS, BOOK IV

τίμιον, καὶ οἱ δι' ἀπάτης περι-γενόμενοι<sup>a</sup> τῶν ἀντιπάλων, βραβείων ἀξιοῦνται καὶ στεφάνων.
Ὡστε οὐ διαβολὴ τὸ “μετὰ δόλου” ἀλλ' ἐγκώμιον ἰσοδυνα-μοῦν τῷ “μετὰ τέχνης.” Οὐδὲν γὰρ ἀτέχνως πράττει ὁ σπουδαῖος.

Harris, p. 46, from Cat.
Ined. Regia, 1825 (Mangey ii. 676), and Cat. Lips. 1, col.
340, Ἀδήλου, and Cat. Burney,
f. 57 b.

<sup>a</sup> περιγινόμενοι Catt. Lips. et Burney.

UNIDENTIFIED FRAGMENTS FROM QUAESTIONES IN GENESIN<sup>a</sup>

1. Τῶν φαύλων πλούσιος οὐδεὶς καὶ ἂν τὰ πανταχοῦ μέταλλα κέκτηται· ἀλλ' εἰσὶ πάντες οἱ ἄφρονες πένητες.

Harris, p. 69, from Dam. Par. 362 and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 76, "in each case with reference to II Quaest. in Gen."

2. Μελέτη τροφὸς<sup>b</sup> ἐπιστήμης.

Harris, p. 69, from Dam. Par. 405, and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 105, and Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 99 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

3. Ὡσπερ κίονες οἰκίας ὄλας ὑπερίδουσιν, οὕτω καὶ αἱ θεῖαι δυνάμεις τὸν σύμπαντα κόσμον καὶ τοῦ ἀνθρωπείου τὸ ἄριστον καὶ θεοφιλέστατον γένος.

Harris, p. 69, from Dam. Par. 749 = Cod. Rupef. f. 29, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

4. 'Εάν τις κατ' οἰκίαν ἢ κώμην ἢ πόλιν ἢ ἔθνος γένηται φρονήσεως ἐραστής, ἀνάγκη τὴν οἰκίαν καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἐκείνην ἀμείνوني βίῳ χρήσασθαι· ὁ γὰρ ἀστεῖος κοινὸν ἀγαθὸν ἐστὶν ἅπασιν, ἐξ ἐτοίμου τὴν ἀφ' ἑαυτοῦ προτείνων ὠφελείαν.

Harris, p. 69, from Dam. Par. 750 = Cod. Rupef. f. 33 b, "from I Quaest. in Gen."

5. Ἀνθρώποις τὸ εὐμετάβλητον διὰ τὴν ἐν τοῖς ἐκτὸς ἀβε-

<sup>a</sup> Omitting the six fragments located by Früchtel and Bréhier, and printed above. The unidentified fragments, which are unnumbered in Harris, have been numbered by me.

<sup>b</sup> + ἐστὶν Codd. Reg. et Vat.

GENESIS, UNIDENTIFIED

αιότητα συμβαίνει ανάγκη. Οὕτω γοῦν φίλους ἐλόμενοι πολλάκις καὶ βραχύν τινα αὐτοῖς διατρίψαντες χρόνον, οὐδὲν ἐγκαλεῖν ἔχοντες ἀπεστράφημεν ὡσεὶ ἐχθρῶν.

Harris, pp. 69-70, from Dam. Par. 776 (Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητουμένων.

6. Τὸ ἐπαισθάνεσθαι τῶν ἐσφαλμένων καὶ ἑαυτοῦ καταμέμφεσθαι πρὸς δικαίον ἀνδρός· τὸ δὲ ἀνεπαισθήτως διακείσθαι—ἀργαλεώτερα ποιεῖ τῇ ψυχῇ τὰ δεινά—πρὸς κακοῦ ἀνδρός.

Harris, p. 70, from Dam. Par. 777 (Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τῶν αὐτῶν (sc. τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων).

7. Ἐπειδὴ πρὸς πολλὰ τῶν κατὰ τὸν βίον τυφλὸς ὁ τῶν μὴ πεφιλοσοφηκότων νοῦς, χρηστέον<sup>α</sup> τοῖς βλέπουσι τὰς τῶν πραγμάτων ιδέας πρὸς ὁδηγίαν.

Harris, p. 70, from Dam. Par. (Cod. Reg. 923, f. 315 b), “referred to Philo on Genesis,” and John Monachus (Mangey ii. 667)=Cod. Rupef. f. 256 b, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητ.

8. Ἐν θεῷ μόνον τὸ τέλειον καὶ ἀενδεές, ἐν δὲ ἀνθρώπῳ<sup>β</sup> τὸ ἐπιδεές καὶ ἀτελές. Διδασκὸς γὰρ ὁ ἄνθρωπος, καὶ ἂν γὰρ σοφώ-τατος ἄλλος ἀπ’ ἄλλου,<sup>γ</sup> ἀλλ’ οὐ ἀδιδάκτως οὐδὲ αὐτοφυῶς· καὶ εἰ ἐπιστημονικώτερος ἕτερος ἐτέρου, οὐκ ἐμφύτως ἀλλὰ μεμαθη-μένως.

Harris, p. 70, from Dam. Par.=Cod. Reg. 923, f. 335,
“from Quaest. in Gen.,” and John Monachus (Mangey ii.
667)=Cod. Rupef. f. 262 b.

9. Εἰώθασιν οἱ ἄνθρωποι ἐκ πλουσίων γενόμενοι πένητες ἐξαίφνης ἢ ἐξ ἐνδόξων καὶ μεγάλων ἄδοξοι καὶ ταπεινοὶ ἢ ἐξ ἀρχόντων ιδιωταὶ ἢ ἐξ ἐλευθέρων δούλοι, ταῖς τύχαις συμμεταβάλλειν τὰ φρονήματα, φάσκοντες οὐ προνοεῖσθαι τῶν ἀνθρωπίνων πραγμάτων τὸ θεῖον, οὐ γὰρ ἂν χρῆσασθαι μεγάλας καὶ ἀπροσδοκήτοις μεταβολαῖς καὶ κακοπραγίαις· ἀγνοοῦντες πρῶτον μὲν ὅτι τούτων οὐδὲν ἐστὶ κακὸν οὐδὲ γὰρ τάναντία ἀγαθὰ, ὅτι μὴν τὸ

<sup>α</sup> χρητέον Cod. Reg.

<sup>β</sup> ἀνθρώποις Cod. Reg.

<sup>γ</sup> σοφώτατος . . . ἄλλου] σοφώτερος ἄλλος ἀλλήλου Cod.
Reg.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

δοκεῖν οὐκ ἀλήθεια· δεύτερον δὲ ὅτι πολλάκις ταῦτα συμβαίνει διὰ νοουθεσίαν, ἕνεκα τῶν ἀδιαφόρων ἐξυβριζόντων· οὐ γὰρ πάντες φέρειν τὰ ἀγαθὰ δύνανται· τρίτον δέ, ὡς ἔφη, πρὸς ἀπόπειραν ἡθῶν· ἀκριβεστάτη γὰρ βάσανος οἱ πρὸς ἐκάτερα καιροί.

Harris, p. 70, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 101 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητημ.

10. Τὸ ἐπιорκεῖν ἀνόσιον καὶ ἀλυσιτελέστατον.

Harris, p. 70, from Dam. Par. 784 (Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων, "also Dam. Par. 751 (Cod. Rupef.), apparently referred to the Questions on Exodus."

11. Οἱ ἑαυτῶν μόνον ἕνεκα πάντα πράττοντες φιλαυτίαν,<sup>a</sup> μέγιστον κακόν, ἐπιτηδεύουσιν, ὃ ποιεῖ τὸ ἄμικτον, τὸ ἀκοινώνητον, τὸ ἄφιλον,<sup>b</sup> τὸ ἄδικον, τὸ ἀσεβές. Τὸν γὰρ ἄνθρωπον ἢ φύσιν κατεσκεύασεν οὐχ ὡς τὰ μονωτικὰ θηρία ἀλλ' ὡς ἀγελαῖα καὶ σύννομα, κοινωνικώτατον, ἵνα μὴ μόνῳ ἑαυτῷ ζῆῃ ἀλλὰ καὶ πατρὶ καὶ μητρὶ<sup>c</sup> καὶ ἀδελφοῖς καὶ γυναικὶ καὶ τέκνοις καὶ τοῖς ἄλλοις συγγενέσι καὶ φίλοις, καὶ δημόταις καὶ φυλέταις<sup>d</sup> καὶ πατρίδι καὶ ὁμοφύλοις καὶ πᾶσιν ἀνθρώποις, ἔτι μέντοι καὶ τοῖς μέρεσι τοῦ παντός, καὶ τῷ ὅλῳ κόσμῳ<sup>e</sup> καὶ πολὺ πρότερον τῷ πατρὶ καὶ ποιητῇ· δεῖ γὰρ εἶναι, εἶγε ὄντως ἐστὶ λογικὸς, κοινωνικόν, φιλόκοσμον, φιλόθεον ἵνα γένηται καὶ θεοφιλῆς.<sup>f</sup>

Harris, p. 71, from John Monachus (Mangey ii. 662), and Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 108 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ β' τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητημάτων, and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 20 b, Φίλωνος. "Maximus (ii. 686) gives the first sentence . . . Further in Dam. Par. 721 the whole passage is ascribed to the Abbot Isaiah."

12. Τρεπτοὶ πολύτρεπτον διαπερῶντες βίον, καὶ συμφορὰς καθήμεραν ἐνειλούμενοι, ἤκιστα τῆς εὐδαιμονίας ἠφίχθαι<sup>g</sup> τινα πρὸ τέλους ὑπολαμβάνομεν.

Harris, p. 71, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 102 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητημ.

<sup>a</sup> φιλαυτία τὸ Cod. Vat. : φιλαυτίας Maximus.

<sup>b</sup> τὸ ἄφιλον om. Cod. Vat. <sup>c</sup> καὶ μητρὶ om. Cod. Vat.

<sup>d</sup> καὶ φίλοις . . . φυλέταις om. Cod. Vat.

<sup>e</sup> ἔτι . . . κόσμῳ om. Cod. Vat.

<sup>f</sup> δεῖ γὰρ . . . θεοφιλῆς om. Cod. Vat.

<sup>g</sup> ἀφίχθαι con. Harris.

GENESIS, UNIDENTIFIED

13. Συγκρίπτεται διὰ φιλίαν νόθου πράγματος καὶ ἀδόκιμον<sup>a</sup> τὸ γνήσιον καὶ δοκιμώτατον.

Harris, p. 71, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 103, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ δ' τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητημ.

14. Τοὺς ἄρξαντας εἶτε τῶν ἀγαθῶν εἶτε καὶ πονηρῶν βουλευμάτων, καὶ μάλιστα ὅταν ἐφαρμόσῃ τοῖς βουλεύμασι τὰ ἔργα, ἴσους ἡγητέον τοῖς καὶ τελειώσασι αὐτά· τὸ μὲν γὰρ μὴ φθάσαι πρὸς τὸ πέρας ἔλθειν, ἕτερα καὶ πολλὰ αἷτια· ἡ δὲ γνώμη καὶ σπουδὴ τῶν προελομένων ἐφθακεν δυνάμει καὶ πρὸς τὸ πέρας.

Harris, p. 71, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 105 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ β' τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητημ.

15. Ὁ εὐλαβέστερος τρόπος οὐχ οὕτως ἐπὶ τοῖς ἰδίοις ἀγαθοῖς γέγηθεν ὡς ἐπὶ τοῖς τοῦ πέλας κακοῖς ἀνιᾶται ἢ φοβεῖται· ἀνιᾶται μὲν ὅτ' ἀνάξιος ὢν ἀτυχῆ, φοβεῖται δὲ ὅτ' ἂν ἐπιτηδέως κακοπαθῆ.

Harris, p. 71, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 107, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ δ' τῶν ἐν Γεν. ζητημ.

16. Τί οὖν ἐνεθυμήθη; ὅτι διὰ τὸ εὐαρεστεῖν πεποιήται ὁ ἄνθρωπος, οὐ κατ' ἀντιστροφήν, διότι ἐποίησεν, ἀλλ' ὡς μὴ ἐμμεῖναν τὸ ποίημα τῇ εἰς εὐαρέστησιν ποιήσει. Πρὸς οὖν τὸ ποίημα ὁ λόγος, ὡσπερ σοφιστῆς διαλογεῖται, οὐ διότι πεφύτευκεν ὁ θεὸς ἀλλ' ὅτι προελθὼν διὰ ῥαθυμίαν διαμαρτάνει τῆς ἐγχειρήσεως.

Harris, p. 71, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 307 = Cod. Coislin. 276, f. 221, ἐκ τῶν εἰς Γεν. ζητημ.

17. Τὰ γὰρ τοῦ πολέμου ἀριστεία δίδωσι τῷ ἱερεῖ καὶ τὰς τῆς νίκης ἀπαρχάς. Ἱεροπρεπεστάτη δὲ καὶ ἀγνωτάτη πασῶν ἀπαρχῶν ἡ δεκάτη διὰ τὸ παντέλειον εἶναι τὸν ἀριθμὸν, ἀφ' οὗ καὶ τοῖς ἱερεῦσι καὶ νεωκόροις αἱ δεκάται προστάξει νόμον καρπῶν καὶ θρεμμάτων ἀποδίδονται, ἄρξαντος τῆς ἀπαρχῆς Ἀβραάμ, ὅς καὶ τοῦ γένους ἀρχηγέτης ἐστίν.

Harris, pp. 71-72, from Cramer, Catena in Heb. p. 580, e Cod. Paris 238, “. . . seems to belong to the Questions on Genesis xiv. 18, being found in a codex which quotes the Questions on Gen. iv. 4 and seems to have no other Philonea. This part of the Questions is lost in the Armenian.”

<sup>a</sup> 1. ἀδοκίμου (?).

EXODUS, BOOK I

1. (Ex. xii. 2)

“Όταν οἱ τῶν σπαρτῶν καρποὶ τελειωθῶσιν, οἱ τῶν δένδρων γενέσεως ἀρχὴν λαμβάνουσιν ἵνα δολιχεύωσιν αἱ τοῦ θεοῦ χάριτες τὸν αἰῶνα, παρ’ ἄλλων ἄλλαι διαδεχόμεναι καὶ συνάπτουσαι τέλη μὲν ἀρχαῖς, ἀρχὰς δὲ τέλεσιν, ἀτελεύτητοι ὦσιν.

Harris, p. 47, from Dam. Par. 789 = Cod. Rupef. f. 142 b, ἐκ τοῦ α’ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ.

6. (Ex. xii. 4b)

Ἵπερβολαὶ καὶ ἐλλείψεις ἀνισότητα ἐγέννησαν. Ἴανισότης δέ, ἵνα αὐτὸς μυθικώτερον χρῆσωμαι<sup>a</sup> τοῖς ὀνόμασιν, μητῆρ ἀδικίας ἐστίν, ὡς ἐμπαλιν ἰσότης δικαιοσύνης· ὑπερβολῆς δὲ καὶ ἐλλείψεως μέσον τὸ αὐταρκές· ἐν ᾧ τὸ ἱερόν γράμμα περιέχεται τὸ “μηδὲν ἄγαν.”

Harris, p. 47, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ α’ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

7. (Ex. xii. 5a)

(a) Λέγεται ὑπὸ φυσικῶν ἀνδρῶν, οὐδὲν ἕτερον εἶναι θῆλυ ἢ ἀτελές ἄρσεν.

Harris, p. 47, from Dam. Par. 777 = Cod. Rupef. f. 134, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων, and Anton Melissa, Migne, col. 1088.

(b) Ἐνιοὶ προκόψαντες ἐπ’ ἀρετὴν ὑπενόστησαν πρὶν ἐφικέσθαι τοῦ τέλους, τὴν ἄρτι φυομένην ἀριστοκρατείαν ἐν ψυχῇ καθελούσης τῆς παλαιᾶς ὀλιγοκρατείας,<sup>b</sup> ἢ πρὸς ὀλίγον ἡρεμήσασα πάλιν ἐξ ὑπαρχῆς μετὰ πλείονος δυνάμεως ἀντεπέθετο.<sup>c</sup>

Harris, pp. 47-48, from Dam. Par. 343, and Cod. Reg. 913, <sup>a</sup> edd. : χρῆσωμαι Cod. Vat.

<sup>b</sup> παλαιᾶς ὀλιγοκρατείας] ὀχλοκρατίας Anton Melissa.

<sup>c</sup> ἐναπέθετο Dam.

EXODUS, BOOK I

f. 84, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξαγω [sc. Ἐξαγωγῆ = Ἐξόδῳ] ζητημάτων, and Anton Melissa (Migne, col. 1117).

19. (Ex. xii. 11)

Αἱ μὲν γὰρ ζῶναι στάσιν ἐμφαίνουσι καὶ συναγωγὴν ἡδονῶν καὶ τῶν ἄλλων παθῶν ἃ τέως ἀνείτο καὶ κεχάλαστο· οὐκ ἀπὸ δὲ σκοποῦ προσέθηκε τὸ δεῖν ζώνυσθαι κατὰ τὴν ὁσφύν· ὁ γὰρ τόπος ἐκεῖνος εἰς φάτνην ἀποκέκριται πολυκεφάλῳ θρέμματι τῶν ἐν ἡμῖν ἐπιθυμιῶν.

Harris, p. 48, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 313 e Cod. Vat. 1611, f. 181.

21. (Ex. xii. 17)

Ἄνδρες ἀγαθοί, τροπικώτερον εἰπεῖν, κίονές<sup>a</sup> εἰσι δήμων ὄλων, ὑπερείδοντες, καθάπερ οἰκίας μεγάλας, τὰς πόλεις καὶ τὰς πολιτείας.

Harris, p. 48, from John Monachus (Mangey ii. 661) = Cod. Rupef. f. 33 b, ἐκ τοῦ Περὶ μέθης, and Cod. Rupef. f. 200 b, and Anton Melissa (Migne, col. 1105).

<sup>a</sup> κρείττονές Cod. Rupef.

EXODUS, BOOK II

1. (Ex. xx. 25b) Τί ἐστι “τὸ γὰρ ἐγχειρίδιόν σου” καὶ τὰ ἐξῆς;

Οἱ τὴν φύσιν παρεγχειρεῖν τολμῶντες καὶ τὰ ἔργα τῆς φύσεως ἐγχειρήμασιν ἰδίοις μεταμορφοῦντες τὰ ἀμίαντα μαινοῦσι. Τέλεια γὰρ καὶ πλήρη τὰ τῆς φύσεως, προσθήκης οὐδεμιᾶς δεόμενα.

Harris, p. 49, from Cat. Ined. Regia, 1825 (Mangey ii. 677), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 785, Φίλωνος ἑβραίου.

2. (Ex. xxii. 21 [Heb. 20])

Ἐμφανέστατα παρίστησιν ὅτι προσήλυτός ἐστιν, οὐχ ὁ περιτμηθεὶς τὴν ἀκροβυστίαν ἀλλ’ ὁ τὰς ἡδονὰς καὶ τὰς ἐπιθυμίας καὶ τὰ ἄλλα πάθη τῆς ψυχῆς. Ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ γὰρ τὸ Ἑβραῖον γένος οὐ περιτέμνητο, κακῶθεν δὲ πάσαις κακώσεσι τῆς παρά τῶν ἐγχωρίων περὶ τοὺς ξένους ὠμότητος, ἐγκρατεῖα καὶ καρτερία συνεβίον οὐκ ἀνάγκη μᾶλλον ἢ ἐθελουσίῳ γνώμῃ διὰ τὴν ἐπὶ τὸν σωτήρα θεὸν καταφυγὴν, ὃς ἐξ ἀπόρων καὶ ἀμηχάνων ἐπιπέμψας τὴν εὐεργέτιν δύναμιν ἐρρύσατο τοὺς ἰκέτας.<sup>a</sup> Διὰ τοῦτο προστίθῃσιν “Ἵμεῖς γὰρ οἶδατε τὴν ψυχὴν τοῦ προσηλύτου.” Τίς δὲ προσηλύτου διάνοια ἐστίν; Ἀλλοτρίωσις τῆς πολυθέου δόξης, οἰκείωσις δὲ τῆς πρὸς τὸν ἕνα καὶ πατέρα τῶν ὄλων τιμῆς. Δεύτερον ἐπήλυδας ἔνιοι καλοῦσι τοὺς ξένους. Ξένοι δὲ καὶ οἱ πρὸς τὴν ἀλήθειαν αὐτομοληκότες, τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον τοῖς ἐν Αἰγύπτῳ ξενιτεύσασιν. Οὗτοι μὲν γὰρ ἐπήλυδες χώρας, ἐκείνοι δὲ νομίμων καὶ ἐθῶν εἰσι,<sup>b</sup> τὸ δὲ ὄνομα κοινὸν ἑκατέρων “ἐπηλύδων” ὑπογράφεται.

Harris, pp. 49-50, from Cat. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 677), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 810, Φίλωνος ἑβραίου, and Cat. Burney, f. 13 b. The variant reading is in Wendland, p. 95, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 217<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 622).

<sup>a</sup> οἰκέτας Cat. Lips.

<sup>b</sup> οὗτοι μὲν . . . εἰσι] οὐ τὸν αὐτὸν τρόπον, αὐτοὶ μὲν γὰρ χώρας, οἱ δὲ πρὸς αὐτοὺς ἰόντες νόμων καὶ πολιτείας Procopius.

EXODUS, BOOK II

3. (Ex. xxii. 22 [Heb. 21])

(a) Οὐδένα μὲν, οὐδέ<sup>a</sup> τῶν ἄλλων, οὔτε ἄρρενα οὔτε θήλειαν, ἀφήσιν ἀδικεῖν ὁ νόμος.<sup>b</sup> Ἐξαιρέτου δὲ προνοίας μεταδίδωσιν χήραις καὶ ὀρφανοῖς,<sup>c</sup> ἐπειδὴ τοὺς ἀναγκαίους βοηθοὺς καὶ κηδεμόνας ἀφήρηνται, χήραι μὲν ἄνδρας, ὀρφανοὶ δὲ γονεῖς.<sup>d</sup> Βούλεται γὰρ τῇ φυσικῇ κοινωνίᾳ χρωμένους τὰς ἐνδείας ὑπὸ τῶν ἐν περιουσίᾳ ἀναπληροῦσθαι.<sup>e</sup>

Harris, p. 50, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 104 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος ἐκ τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων, and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 32 b, and Cod. Rupef. f. 220 b, and Cat. Ined. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 678), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 805, and Cat. Burney, f. 136. The variant to the first part of the second sentence is in Wendland, p. 95, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 217<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 622).

(b) Ψυχαὶ δέ, ὅταν προσκολληθῶσι θεῷ, ἐκ γυναικῶν γίνονται παρθένοι, τὰς μὲν γυναικῶδες ἀποβάλλουσαι φθορὰς τῶν ἐν αἰσθήσει καὶ πάθει· τὴν δὲ ἄψευστον<sup>f</sup> καὶ ἀμιγῆ παρθένον, ἀρέσκειαν θεοῦ, μεταδώκουσι· κατὰ λόγον οὖν αἱ τοιαῦται ψυχαὶ χηρεύουσι, ἄνδρα τὸν τῆς φύσεως ὀρθὸν νόμον προσσυμβιοῦσιν καὶ πατέρα τὸν αὐτόν, ἃ χρὴ πράττειν παραγγέλλοντα καθάπερ ἐγγόνους μετὰ τῆς ἀνωτάτω κηδεμονίας.

Harris, p. 51, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 308 e Cod. Coislin. 276, f. 183.

4. (Ex. xxii. 23 [Heb. 22])

Καὶ κακοῦν ἀπαγορεύει οὐ τοσοῦτον τὴν σωματικὴν κάκωσιν ὅσον τὴν ψυχικὴν. Ὀρφανοῖς γὰρ γινέσθω μηδεὶς ἀφροσύνης ἢ ἀκολασίας διδάσκαλος, ἀλλὰ τῶν ἐναντίων, ἐν ὧσιν τὰς ψυχὰς ἔχουσιν ἀπαλὰς πρὸς τὴν τῶν θείων χαρακτήρων ὑποδοχὴν.

Wendland, p. 95, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 217<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 622).

6. (Ex. xxii. 28b [Heb. 27b])

(a) Προνοεῖται τῶν ἰδιωτῶν ὡς μὴ περιπίπτουεν ἀνηκέστοις

<sup>a</sup> οὐδένα . . . οὐδέ] οὐ δυναμένου δὲ Cod. Vat.

<sup>b</sup> οὐδένα . . . νόμος om. Codd. Reg., Rupef., et Catt. Ined. Reg., Lips., Burney.

<sup>c</sup> ἐξαιρέτου . . . ὀρφανοῖς] ἐξαιρέτου δὲ προνοίας διὰ τὴν ἐρημίαν μεταδίδωσιν ὀρφανοῖς τε καὶ χήραις Procopius.

<sup>d</sup> ἐπειδὴ . . . γονεῖς om. Catt. Lips., Burney.

<sup>e</sup> βούλεται . . . ἀναπληροῦσθαι om. Cod. Vat.

<sup>f</sup> ex Arm. Pitra : ἄψευστον Cod. Coislin.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

τιμωρίας· οἱ γὰρ κακῶς ἀκούσαντες ἄρχοντες τοὺς εἰπόντας<sup>a</sup> οὐ μετὰ δίκης ἀμνούνται· καταχρήσονται δυναστείαις εἰς πανωλεθρίαν. Ἐπεὶ, φησὶν, οὐ περὶ παντός ἄρχοντος ἔοικε νομοθετεῖν ἀλλ' ὡσανεὶ τοῦ λαοῦ τοῦδε ἢ ἔθνους ἡγεμόνα σπουδαῖον ὑποτίθεται,<sup>b</sup> διὰ πλειόνων, καταχρηστικῶς δὲ δυνατοὺς ἢ ἱερεῖς ἢ προφήτας ἢ ἀγίους ἄνδρας ὡς Μωϋσέα. “Ἴδου γάρ, ἔθηκά σε θεὸν Φαραῶ,” ἐλέχθη πρὸς Μωϋσῆν.

Harris, p. 51, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 805, Φίλωνος ἑβραίου, and Cat. Burney, f. 136.

(b) Τῷ ἀγαθῷ ἀνδρὶ βλασφημία μὲν ἀλλότριον, ἔπαινος δὲ οἰκειότατον· οὐδὲν γὰρ οὕτως εὐάγωγον εἰς εὐνοίαν ὡς εὐφημία.

Lewy, pp. 59-60, from Dam. Par. = Cod. Const. Metoch. 274, Φίλωνος.

Οὐδὲν οὕτως εὐάγωγον εἰς εὐνοίαν ὡς ἢ τῶν εὐεργετημάτων εὐφημία.

Harris, p. 51, from Anton Melissa (Migne, col. 1149).

9. (Ex. xxiii. 1a)

Μάταιον φησιν οὔτε ἀκοαῖς οὔτε ἄλλη τινὶ τῶν αἰσθήσεων προσεῖόν· ἐπακολουθοῦσι γὰρ ταῖς ἀπάταις αἱ μεγίσται ζημίαι. Διὸ καὶ παρ' ἐνόις νομοθέταις ἀπείρηται μαρτυρεῖν ἀκοῆ,<sup>c</sup> ὡς τὸ μὲν ἀληθὲς ὄψει πιστευόμενον,<sup>d</sup> τὸ δὲ ψεῦδος<sup>e</sup> ἀκοῆ.

Harris, pp. 51-52, from Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 807, and Cat. Burney, f. 136 b. The second sentence is in Wendland, pp. 95-96, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 218<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 623).

10. (Ex. xxiii. 3)

Πενία καθ' ἑαυτὴν μὲν ἐλέου χρήζει εἰς ἐπανόρθωσιν ἐνδείας, εἰς δὲ κρίσιν ἰούσα βραβευτῆ χρῆται τῷ τῆς ἰσότητος νόμῳ. Θεῖον γὰρ ἢ δικαιοσύνη καὶ ἀδέκαστον· ὅθεν καὶ ἐν ἑτέροις εὖ εἴρηται ὅτι<sup>f</sup> “ἢ κρίσις τοῦ θεοῦ δικαία<sup>g</sup> ἐστίν.”

Harris, p. 52, from Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825, and Cat. Lips. 1, <sup>a</sup> ἀπόντας Cat. Burney.

<sup>b</sup> ὑπερτίθεται Cat. Burney.

<sup>c</sup> διὸ . . . ἀκοῆ] διὸ παρ' ἐνόις ἀπείρηται νομοθέταις ἀκοῆν μαρτυρεῖν Procopius.

<sup>d</sup> πιστούμενον Procopius.

<sup>e</sup> ψευδὲς Procopius.

<sup>f</sup> ὅθεν . . . ὅτι] διὸ καὶ εἴρηται Procopius.

<sup>g</sup> δικαία om. Procopius, cf. Wendland ad loc., “fehlt in fast allen mss. der Cat. Lips.”

EXODUS, BOOK II

col. 807, and Cat. Burney, f. 136 b. The second sentence is in Wendland, p. 96, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 218<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 623).

11. (Ex. xxiii. 4)

Ἡμερότητος ὑπερβολή πρὸς τὸ μὴ βλάπτειν τὸν ἐχθρὸν ἔτι καὶ συνωφελεῖν πειρᾶσθαι δευτερον δὲ παραίτησις πλεονεξίας<sup>a</sup>. ὁ γὰρ μὴδ' ἐχθρὸν ζημιοῦν ὑπομένων τίνα τῶν ἄλλων ἐθέλησειεν ἂν βλάπτειν ἐπ' ὠφελείᾳ ἰδία;

Lewy, p. 60, from Dam. Par.=Cod. Const. Metoch. 274, Φίλωνος.

Ἡμερότητος ὑπερβολή πρὸς τῷ μὴ βλάπτειν τὸν ἐχθρὸν ἔτι καὶ ὠφελεῖν πειρᾶσθαι. Τίνα δὲ καὶ ἀδικήσειεν <ἂν> ὁ μὴδὲ τὸν ἐχθρὸν ζημιῶν; Ἔτι δὲ καὶ στάσιν καθαιρεῖ καὶ δυσμένειαν προκατάρχων εἰρήνης. Φιλικὸν γὰρ τὸ ἔργον καὶ πρὸς ἀμοιβὴν ἐφέλκει τὸν μὴ λίαν ἀγνώμονα. Διδαχθεῖς δὲ τις μὴδὲ βοσκήματων ὑπερορᾶν πρὸς τίνα τῶν ἀνθρώπων οὐκ ἂν εἴη φιλάνθρωπος;

Wendland, p. 96, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 218<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 623).

13. (Ex. xxiii. 20-21)

(a) Οἱ ἀφυλάκτως ὁδοιποροῦντες διαμαρτάνουσι τῆς ὀρθῆς καὶ λεωφόρου ὡς πολλάκις εἰς ἀνοδίας καὶ δυσβάτους καὶ τραχείας ἀτραποὺς ἐκτρέπεσθαι. Τὸ παραπλήσιόν ἐστι ὅτε καὶ αἱ ψυχαὶ τῶν νέων<sup>b</sup> παιδείας ἀμοιροῦσιν,<sup>c</sup> καθάπερ ρεῦμα ἀνεπίσχετον<sup>d</sup> ὅπη μὴ λυσιτελὲς ρεμβεύονται.

Harris, p. 52, from Cod. Reg. 923, f. 302 b, "from the Quaest. in Exod."

(b) Ὁ πεινῶν καὶ διψῶν ἐπιστήμης καὶ τοῦ μαθεῖν ἂ μὴ οἶδεν, τὰς ἄλλας μεθιέμενος φροντίδας, ἐπείγεται πρὸς ἀκρόασιν, καὶ νύκτωρ καὶ μεθ' ἡμέραν θυρωρεῖ τὰς τῶν σοφῶν οἰκίας.

Harris, p. 52, from Dam. Par. 613=Cod. Reg. f. 230.

<sup>a</sup> δευτερον . . . πλεονεξίας ex Arm. con. Lewy.

<sup>b</sup> νεῶν Harris.

<sup>c</sup> Harris: ἀμοιρῶσιν Cod. Reg.

<sup>d</sup> Harris: ἀνεπίσχετο Cod. Reg.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

14. (Ex. xxiii. 18a)

Ἐναντίον τοῦ οὐ δεῖ ζυμωτὸν παρῆναι ἐπὶ τῶν θυσιαζομένων ἀλλὰ πάντα τὰ προσαγοόμενα εἰς θυσίαν ἢ ποσφορὰν ἄζυμα δεῖ εἶναι, αἰνίττεται διὰ συμβόλου δύο τὰ ἀναγκασιότατα· ἐν μὲν τὸ καταφρονεῖν ἡδονῆς, ζύμη γὰρ ἡδυσμα τροφῆς, οὐ τροφή· ἕτερον δὲ τὸ μὴ δεῖν ἐπαίρεσθαι φυσωμένους διὰ κενῆς<sup>a</sup> οἰήσεως. Ἄνιερρον γὰρ ἐκάτερον, ἡδονή τε καὶ οἰήσις, μητρὸς μιᾶς ἀπάτης ἔγγονα. Τὸ αἷμα τῶν θυσιῶν δείγμα ψυχῆς ἐστὶ σπενδομένης θεῶ, μιγνύναι δὲ τὰ ἄμικτα οὐχ ὄσιον.

Harris, p. 53, from Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825 (Mangey ii. 678), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 816, and Cat. Burney, f. 138.

15. (Ex. xxiii. 18b)

(a) Κελεύει τὰ στέατα αὐθήμερον ἀναλίσκεσθαι γινόμενα ὑλὴν ἱερᾶς φλογός.

Harris, p. 53, from Cat. Burney, f. 138, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 816, Ἀδῆλου.

(b) Ψυχὴ πᾶσα ἦν εὐσέβεια λιπαίνει τοῖς ἰδίοις ὀργίοις, ἀκοιμήτως ἔχει πρὸς τὰ θεῖα καὶ διανίσταται πρὸς τὴν θείαν τῶν θεῶν ἀξίω. Τοῦτο γὰρ τὸ πάθος τῆς ψυχῆς ἐν ἑορτῇ μεγίστη καὶ καιρὸς ἀψευδῆς εὐφροσύνης.

Harris, p. 101 ("unidentified," but located by Früchtel), from Cod. Rupef. f. 153 b.

16. (Ex. xxiii. 22)

Φωνὴν θεοῦ τὸν πρὸ μικροῦ λεχθέντα ἀγγελον ὑπονοητέον

Αἰνίττεται δὲ διὰ συμβόλου καταφρονεῖν ἡδονῆς—ζύμη γὰρ ἡδυσμα τροφῆς, οὐ τροφή—, καὶ τὸ μὴ δεῖν ὑπὸ κενῆς φυσωμένους οἰήσεως αἰρεσθαι. Τὸ δὲ αἷμα τῶν θυσιῶν δείγμα ψυχῆς ἐστὶ σπενδομένης θεῶ. Μιγνύναι δὲ τὰ ἄμικτα οὐχ ὄσιον.

Wendland, pp. 96-97, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 220<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 627).

Ἐπὶ τῆς ἱερᾶς γινέσθω φλογός.

Wendland, p. 97, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 220<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 627).

Τὸν προφήτην φασὶ τινες καὶ τὴν ἐν αὐτῷ τοῦ λαλοῦντος

<sup>a</sup> καινῆς Cat. Lips.

EXODUS, BOOK II

μηνύεσθαι. Τοῦ γὰρ λέγοντος ὁ προφήτης ἄγγελος κυρίου ἐστίν. Ἀνάγκη<sup>α</sup> γὰρ τὸν ἀκοῆ ἀκούοντα, τοὔτέστι τὸν τὰ λεγόμενα βεβαίως παραδεχόμενον, ἔργοις ἐπιτελεῖν τὰ λεχθέντα. Λόγου γὰρ πίστις ἔργον· ὁ δὲ καὶ τοῖς εἰρημένοις καταπειθῆς καὶ ἐνεργῶν τὰ ἀκόλουθα, σύμμαχον καὶ ὑπερασπιστὴν ἐξ ἀνάγκης ἔχει τὸν διδάσκαλον, ὅσα μὲν τῷ δοκεῖν, βοηθοῦντα τῷ γνωρίμῳ, τὸ δὲ ἀληθὲς τοῖς αὐτοῦ δόγμασι καὶ παραγγέλμασιν, ἅπερ οἱ ἐναντίοι καὶ ἐχθροὶ βούλονται καθαιρεῖν.

Harris, p. 54, from Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825 (Mangey ii. 678), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 818, and Cat. Burney, f. 139, "glossed by a Christian commentator."

17. (Ex. xxiii. 24c)

Στῆλαί εἰσι τὰ δόγματα συμβολικῶς, ἅπερ ἐστάναι καὶ ἐρρηεῖσθαι δοκεῖ. Τῶν δὲ κατεστηλιτευμένων δογμάτων ἀστείά ἐστιν, ἃ καὶ θέμις ἀνακεῖσθαι καὶ βεβαίαν ἔχειν τὴν ἴδρυσιν· τὰ δὲ ἐπίληπτα, ὧν τὴν καθαίρεισιν ποιεῖσθαι λυσιτελές. Τὸ δὲ "καθαίρων καθελεῖς" καὶ "συντρίβων συντρίψεις" τοιοῦτον ὑποβάλλει νοῦν. Ἐνιά τινες καθαιροῦσιν ὡς ἀναστήσοντες, καὶ συντρίβουσιν ὡς ἀθῆς ἀρμοσόμενοι· βούλεται δὲ τὰ καθαιρεθέντα φωνήν, οὗ παρακελεύεται εἰσακούειν. Λόγου δὲ πίστις ἔργον. Ὁ δὲ καὶ πεισθεὶς καὶ πράξας ἔξει πάντως ὑπερασπιστὴν τὸν διδάσκαλον συμμαχοῦντα δι' αὐτοῦ τοῖς δόγμασιν, ἅπερ οἱ ἐναντίοι βούλονται καθαιρεῖν.

Wendland, p. 97, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 221<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 630).

Τὰ δόγματα συμβολικῶς, ἅπερ ἐστάναι καὶ ἐρρηεῖσθαι δοκεῖ. Τῶν δὲ κατεστηλιτευμένων<sup>β</sup> δογμάτων τὰ μὲν ἀστεία θέμις ἀνακεῖσθαι καὶ βεβαίαν ἔχειν τὴν ἴδρυσιν, τὰ δὲ ἐπίληπτα καθαιρεῖσθαι ὡς μὴ πάλιν ἀναστησόμενα μηδὲ ἀρμοσόμενα. Τοιαύτη γὰρ ἔμφασις ἢ τοῦ "καθαίρων καθελεῖς" καὶ "συντρίβων συντρίψεις."

Wendland, pp. 97-98, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 221<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 630).

<sup>α</sup> 1. ἀνάγκη.

<sup>β</sup> Wendland : κατεστηλευμένων Cod. Aug.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

ἅπαξ καὶ συντριβέντα μηκέτι τυχεῖν ἀνορθώσεως ἀλλ' εἰς ἅπαν ἠφανίσθαι τὰ ἐναντία τοῖς ἀγαθοῖς καὶ καλοῖς.

Harris, pp. 54-55, from Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825 (Man-gey ii. 678), and Cat. Lips.
1, col. 820, and Cat. Burney,
f. 139.

18. (Ex. xxiii. 25b)

Τροφήν καὶ ὑγίειαν αἰνίττεται τροφήν μὲν δι' ἄρτου καὶ ὑδατος ὑγίειαν διὰ τοῦ μαλα-κίαν ἀποστρέφειν. Δεύτερον, ἐγκράτειαν εἰσηγεῖται, τὴν τῶν ἀναγκαίων μετουσίαν, μόνον ἐπειπών . . . πρὸς δὲ τούτοις, μάθημα ἡμᾶς αἰσιώτατον ἀνα-διδάσκει, δηλῶν ὅτι οὔτε ἄρτος οὔτε ὕδωρ καθ' ἑαυτὰ τρέφουσιν ἀλλ' ἔστιν ὅτε καὶ βλά-πτουσι μᾶλλον ἢ ὠφελοῦσιν, ἐὰν μὴ θεῖος λόγος καὶ τούτοις χαρίσῃται τὰς ὠφελητικὰς<sup>a</sup> δυ-νάμεις ἧς χάριν αἰτίας φησὶν “εὐλογῆσω τὸν ἄρτον σου καὶ τὸ ὕδωρ,” ὡς οὐχ ἰκανὰ καθ' ἑαυτὰ τρέφειν ἄνευ θείας<sup>b</sup> καὶ ἐπιφροσύνης.

Harris, p. 55, from Cat.
Lips. 1, col. 820, Ἀθήλου.

19. (Ex. xxiii. 26a)

Ἄγωνίαν<sup>c</sup> καὶ στείρωσιν ἐν κατάραις τάττων Μωϋσῆς οὐ φησὶν ἔσσεσθαι παρὰ τοῖς τὰ δίκαια καὶ νόμιμα δρῶσιν· ἄθλον γὰρ τοῖς τὸ ἱερὸν γράμμα τοῦ νόμου φυλάττουσι παρέχει τὸν ἀρχαιότερον

<sup>a</sup> Wendland : ἀφελητικὰς Cat. Lips.

<sup>b</sup> post θείας lacunam esse stat. Harris.

<sup>c</sup> Harris : ἀγωνίαν Cod. Vat.

Τροφήν καὶ ὑγίειαν ἐπαγγέλλεται, καὶ τῶν ἀναγκαιοτάτων μόνων μνησθεῖς ἐδίδαξε τὴν ἐγκράτειαν. Καὶ μάθημα δὲ παρέδωκεν αἰσιώτατον, ὡς οὐδὲν τούτων τρέφει καθ' ἑαυτό, βλάπτει δὲ μᾶλλον ἢ ὠφελεῖ,
μὴ τοῦ θεοῦ δύναμιν ὠφελητικὴν διὰ τῆς εὐλογίας παρέχοντος.

Wendland, p. 98, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 221<sup>r</sup>
(Migne, p. 630).

EXODUS, BOOK II

νόμον τῆς ἀθανάτου φύσεως, ὅς ἐπὶ σπορᾷ καὶ γενέσει τέκνων ἐτέθη πρὸς τὴν τοῦ γένους διαμονήν.

Harris, p. 55, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 105 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ β' τῶν ἐν Γενέσει [sic] ζητημάτων.

20. (Ex. xxiii. 26b)

Πάγκαλον δέ φασὶ τὸ μήτε μῆσι μήτε ἐνιαυτοῖς καταριθμῆσθαι τὸν βίον τῶν ἱκετῶν. Τῶ γὰρ ὄντι ἐκάστου σοφοῦ ἡμέρα ἰσότημός ἐστιν αἰῶνι. Εὖ δὲ καὶ τὸ “ἀναπληρώσω” διὰ τὰ κενὰ φρονήσεως καὶ ἀρετῆς ἐν ψυχῇ διαστήματα τοῦ προκόπτοντος, ὃν βούλεται καθάπερ μουσικὸν ὄργανον διὰ πάντων ἡρμόσθαι πρὸς μίαν συμφωνίαν βουλημάτων καὶ λόγων καὶ πράξεων.

Wendland, pp. 98-99, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 221<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 629).

21. (Ex. xxiii. 27a)

Καὶ τὸν φόβον ἀποστελῶ ἡγούμενόν σου.

Τὸ μὲν ῥητὸν ἐμφανές· εἰς κατάπληξιν ἐχθρῶν ἰσχυρὰ δύναμις ὁ φόβος, ὑφ' οὗ μᾶλλον ἡ τῆς τῶν ἀντιπάλων ἐφόδου ῥώμη ἀλίσκεται. Τὸ δὲ πρὸς διάνοιαν οὕτως· δυοῖν οὐσῶν αἰτιῶν, ὧν ἕνεκα τὸ θεῖον ἀνθρώποι τιμῶσιν, ἀγάπης καὶ φόβου, τὸ μὲν ἀγαπᾶν ἐστὶν ὀψίγονον· τὸ δὲ φοβεῖσθαι συνίσταται πρότερον, ὥστε οὐκ ἀπο σκοποῦ λελέχθαι τὸ ἡγεῖσθαι τὸν φόβον, τῆς ἀγάπης ὕστερον καὶ ὀψὲ προσγενομένης.

Harris, p. 56, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 313 e Cod. Palat. Vat. 203, f. 261, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 822, and Cat. Burney, f. 139 b.

Καὶ τὸν φόβον μου ἀποστελῶ ἡγούμενόν σου, ὑφ' οὗ μᾶλλον ἡ τῆς τῶν ἀντιπάλων ῥώμης οἱ πολέμιοι ἀλίσκονται. Προηγείται δὲ τῆς ἀγάπης ὁ φόβος, ἡ τοῖς τελείοις ἐγγίνεται. Δι' ἀμφοῖν γὰρ τιμᾶται θεός.

Wendland, p. 99, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 222<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 629).

24. (Ex. xxiii. 28)

Σύμβολον δὲ ὑποληπτέον εἶναι τοὺς σφῆκας ἀνελπίστου δυνάμειως θεία πομπῇ σταλησο-

Οἱ σφῆκες ἐξ ἀφανοῦς οὗ προειδομένους τιτρώσκουσι τὰ καιριώτατα, κεφαλὴν τε καὶ τὰ

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

μένης, ἥτις ἀφ' ὑψηλοτέρων κατὰ κράτος ἐπιφέρουσα<sup>a</sup> τὰς πληγὰς, εὐστοχῆσει πᾶσι τοῖς βλήμασι, καὶ διαθείσα οὐδὲν ἀντιπέσεται<sup>b</sup> τὸ παράπαν.

Harris, p. 56, from Cat.
Reg. Ined. 1825 (Mangey ii.
679), and Cat. Lips. I, col.
823, and Cat. Burney, f. 139 b.

ἐν αὐτῇ . . . σημαῖνοι δ' ἂν καὶ θείαν πομπὴν ἀνεπίστου δυνάμεως στελλομένης ἐξ οὐρανοῦ.

Wendland, p. 99, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 222<sup>r</sup>
(Migne, p. 629).

25. (Ex. xxiii. 29)

(a) Ἐὰν τοῦ ἄρτι πρῶτον εἰσαγομένου καὶ μανθάνοντος σπουδᾶσης, πᾶσαν τὴν ἀμάθειαν ἐκτεμῶν, ἀθρόαν ἐπιστήμην εἰσοικίσει τὸναντίον οὐ διανοῆ πράξεις· οὔτε γὰρ τὴν ἀφαίρεσιν ἐνὶ καιρῷ γινομένην ὑπομενεῖ, οὔτε τὴν ἀφθονον ρύμην καὶ φορὰν τῆς διδασκαλίας χωρήσει, ἀλλὰ καθ' ἑκάτερον τὸ τε ἐκ-τεμνόμενον καὶ προστιθέμενον ὀδυνηθεῖς καὶ περιαλγῆσας ἀφηνιάσει.<sup>c</sup> Τὸ δὲ ἥσυχῆ καὶ με-τρίως ἀφαιρεῖν μὲν τι<sup>d</sup> τῆς ἀπαιδεύσιας, προστιθέναί δὲ τῆς παιδείας τὸ ἀνάλογον ὠφελείας γένουτ' ἂν ὁμολογουμένης αἰτίον.

Harris, pp. 56-57, from John Monachus (Mangey ii.
663)=Cod. Rupef. f. 137, and Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 312 e Cod. Palat. 203, f. 261, and Cod. Vat. 1553, f. 129. "The latter ms. seems to be the one used by Mai, Script. Vet.
vii. 100. . . ."

Τὰ γὰρ θηρία φεύγει τὰς τῶν πλειόνων ἀνθρώπων οἰκήσεις ὡς ἡγεμόνων τῇ φύσει καὶ τὰς ἐρήμους πληροῖ. Ἄλλ' οὐδὲ τὰς τῶν εἰσαγομένων ψυχὰς ἔστιν ὑφ' ἐν ἀπαλλάττειν ἀγνοίας καὶ πληροῦν ἐπιστήμης. Οὐ φέρουσι γὰρ οὔτε τὴν ἐκείνης ἀφαίρεσιν οὔτε τὴν ἀφθονον τῆς διδασκαλίας φορὰν.

Wendland, p. 100, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 222<sup>r</sup>
(Migne, p. 629).

<sup>a</sup> κατὰ κράτος ἐπιφέρουσα ex Arm. conieci: κατ' ἄκρον τὸ οὐς ὑποφέρουσα codd. <sup>b</sup> Mangey: ἀντιπεσείται codd.

<sup>c</sup> ἀπεράσει Cod. Vat. (vid.) ap. Mai.

<sup>d</sup> τι] κατ' ὀλίγον Mai.

EXODUS, BOOK II

(b) Ὁ δὲ ἀγαθὸς ἰατρὸς οὐ μᾶ ἡμέρα τῶ νοσοῦντι πάντα ἀθρόα τὰ ὑγιεινὰ προσφέρειν<sup>a</sup> ἢ ἐθελήσειεν, εἰδὼς βλάβην ἐργαζόμενος μᾶλλον ἢπερ ὠφέλειαν,<sup>b</sup> ἀλλὰ διαμετρησάμενος τοὺς καιροὺς ἐπιδιανέμει τὰ σωτήρια καὶ ἄλλοτε ἄλλα προστιθεὶς πρᾶως ὑγίειαν ἐμποιεῖ.

Harris, pp. 57-58, from Cod. Rupef. f. 137, and Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 100 e Cod. Vat. 1553, f. 129 (vid.), and Dam. Par. 567, and Cod. Reg. f. 210 b.

26. (Ex. xxiii. 33b)

Ὡσπερ οἱ προσπταίσαντες, ἀρτίοις βαίνειν ποσὶν ἀδυνατοῦντες, μακρὰν τοῦ κατὰ τὴν ὁδὸν τέλους ὑστερίζουσι προκάμνοντες<sup>c</sup>. οὕτω καὶ ἡ ψυχὴ τὴν πρὸς εὐσέβειαν ἀγούσαν ὁδὸν ἀνύειν κωλύεται, προεντυχάνουσα ταῖς ἀσεβέσιν ἀνοδίαις. Αὗται γάρ εἰσιν ἐμπόδιοι καὶ προσπταισμάτων αἰτίαι, δι' ὧν κυλλαίνων ὁ νοῦς ὑστερίζει τῆς κατὰ φύσιν ὁδοῦ. Ἡ δὲ ὁδὸς ἐστὶν ἢ ἐπὶ τὸν πατέρα τῶν ὄλων τελευτῶσα.

Harris, p. 58, from Dam. Par. 774=Cod. Rupef., ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

Τοῦτο γὰρ παθὼν ὁδοιπόρος προκάμνει, πρὶν εἰς τὸ τέλος ἐλθεῖν τῆς ὁδοῦ, καὶ ψυχὴ πρὸς θεὸν ὁδεύειν ἐθέλουσα δυσσεβέσιν ἀνοδίαις τῆς εὐθείας ἀπείργεται.

Wendland, p. 101, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 222<sup>v</sup> (Migne, p. 631).

28. (Ex. xxiv. 1b)

Οὐχ ὀρᾶς ὅτι τοῦ πυρὸς ἡ δύναμις τοῖς μὲν ἀφεστηκόσι μεμετρημένον διάστημα παρέχει φῶς, κατακαίει δὲ τοὺς ἐγγίζοντας; Ὅρα μὴ τοιοῦτόν τι πάθης τῇ διανοίᾳ, μὴ σε ὁ πολὺς πόθος ἀδυνάτου πράγματος ἀναλώσῃ.

Harris, p. 58, from Dam. Par. 748=Cod. Rupef. f. 22 b.

<sup>a</sup> ἐπιφέρειν Dam. et Cod. Reg.

<sup>b</sup> ὑγίειαν Mai.

<sup>c</sup> προκάμνοντες ex Arm. et Procop. conieci : προσκάμνοντες Cod. Rupef.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

37. (Ex. xxiv. 10)

Οὐδείς αὐχῆσει τὸν ἀόρατον θεὸν ἰδεῖν, εἷζας ἀλαζονεία.<sup>a</sup>

Harris, p. 59, from John Monachus (Mangey ii. 662) = Cod. Rupef. f. 55.

38. (Ex. xxiv. 11a)

Τὸ μὲν ῥητὸν διήγημα φανερὰν ἔχει τὴν ἀπόδοσιν ὡς ἀπάντων σώων διατηρηθέντων, τὸ δὲ πρὸς διάνοιαν τὸ πάντα περὶ τὴν εὐσέβειαν συμφώνους<sup>b</sup> εἶναι καὶ ἐν μηδενὶ τῶν ἀγαθῶν διαφωρεῖν.

Harris, p. 59, from Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825 (Mangey ii. 679), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 829, and Cat. Burney, f. 141.

40. (Ex. xxiv. 12a)

Ἐνίοις ἀψίκωρος ἐγγίνεται λογισμὸς, οἱ πρὸς ὀλίγον ἀναπτεροφορηθέντες αὐτίκα ὑπενόστησαν, οὐκ ἀναπτάντες μᾶλλον ἢ ὑποσυρέντες εἰς ταρτάρου, φησὶν, ἐσχατίας. Εὐδαίμονες δὲ οἱ μὴ παλινδρομοῦντες.

Harris, p. 59, from Dam. Par. 784 = Cod. Rupef., Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζήτημάτων.

45. (Ex. xxiv. 16a)

(a) Ἐναργέστατα δυσωπεῖ τοὺς ἐγγὺς ὑπὸ ἀσεβείας εἴτε ἡλιθιότητος οἰομένους τοπικὰς καὶ μεταβατικὰς κινήσεις εἶναι περὶ τὸ θεῖον. Ἴδου γὰρ ἐμφανῶς οὐ τὸν οὐσιώδη θεὸν τὸν κατὰ τὸ εἶναι μόνον ἐπινοούμενον κατεληλυθέναι φησὶν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ. Διττὴ δὲ ἡ περὶ τὴν δόξαν ἐκδοχὴ ἢ μὲν παρουσίαν ἐμφαίνουσα τῶν δυνάμεων, ἐπεὶ καὶ βασιλέως λέγεται δόξα ἢ στρατιωτικὴ δύναμις· ἢ δὲ τῇ δοκῆσει αὐτοῦ μόνου καὶ ὑπολήψει δόξης θείας, ὡς ἐνεργᾶσθαι ταῖς τῶν παρόν-

Ἐλέγχει τοὺς οἰομένους μεταβατικὰς δυνάμεις εἶναι περὶ θεόν. Οὐ γὰρ τὸν οὐσιώδη θεὸν τὸν κατὰ τὸ εἶναι μόνον ἐπινοούμενον κατεληλυθέναι φησὶν, ἀλλὰ τὴν δόξαν αὐτοῦ, ἢ δυνάμεων παρουσίαν ἐμφαίνων—ἐπεὶ καὶ βασιλέως λέγεται δόξα δύναμις στρατιωτικὴ—, ἢ δόκησιν αὐτὸ μόνον καὶ δόξης θείας ὑπόληψιν, ἢ τῶν παρόντων ὡς ἐπὶ τοιούτῳ τὴν φαντασίαν ἐτύπωσεν ὡς ἡκοντος θεοῦ πρὸς βεβαιοτάτην πίστιν τῶν μελλόντων νομοθετεῖσθαι.

Wendland, p. 101, from

<sup>a</sup> ἀλογιστία Mangey.

<sup>b</sup> σύμφωνος Cat. Reg.

EXODUS, BOOK II

των διανοίαις φαντασίαν ἀφίξεως θεοῦ, ὡς ἤκοντος εἰς βεβαιοτάτην πίστιν τῶν μελλόντων νομοθετεῖσθαι.

Harris, p. 60, from Cat. Reg. Ined. 1825 (Mangey ii. 679), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 382.

Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 224<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 633 ?).

(b) Ἄβατος καὶ ἀπροσπέλαστος ὄντως ἐστὶν ὁ θεῖος χώρος, οὐδὲ τῆς καθαρωτάτης διανοίας τοσοῦτον ὕψος προσαναβῆναι δυναμένης ὡς θίξει μόνον ἐπιψαῦσαι.

Harris, p. 60, from Dam. Par. 748 = Cod. Rupef. 22 b, ἐκ τοῦ αὐτοῦ ἦτοι τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητουμένων.

46. (Ex. xxiv. 16b)

Τὸν ἴσον ἀριθμὸν ἀπένειμε καὶ τῇ τοῦ κόσμου γενέσει καὶ τῇ τοῦ ὀρατικοῦ γένους ἐκλογῇ, τὴν ἐξάδα βουλόμενος ἐπιδείξει ὅτι αὐτὸς καὶ τὸν κόσμον ἐδημιούργησε καὶ τὸ γένος εἴλετο. Ἡ δὲ ἀνάκλησις τοῦ προφήτου δεύτερα γένεσις ἐστὶ τῆς προτέρας ἀμείνων. Ἐβδόμη δὲ ἀνακαλεῖται ἡμέρα, ταύτη διαφέρων τοῦ πρωτοπλάστου ὅτι ἐκεῖνος μὲν ἐκ γῆς καὶ μετὰ σώματος συνίστατο· οὗτος δὲ ἄνευ σώματος· διὸ τῷ μὲν γηγενεῖ ἀριθμὸς οἰκείος ἀπενεμήθη ἐξάς· τούτῳ δὲ ἡ ἱερωτάτη φύσις τῆς ἐβδομάδος.

Harris, pp. 60-61, from Cat. Lips 1, col. 832, Προκοπίου.

47. (Ex. xxiv. 17)

Τὸ δὲ εἶδος τῆς δόξης κυρίου φησὶν ἐμφερέστατον εἶναι φλογί, μᾶλλον δὲ οὐκ εἶναι ἀλλὰ φαίνεσθαι τοῖς ὀρώσι· τοῦ θεοῦ δεικνύντος ὅπερ ἐβούλετο δοκεῖν εἶναι πρὸς τὴν τῶν θεωμένων κατάπληξιν, μὴ ὦν τοῦτο ὅπερ ἐφαίνετο. Ἐπιφέρει γοῦν τὸ “ἐνώπιον τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραήλ,” ἐναργέστατα μηνύων ὅτι φαντασία φλογὸς ἦν ἀλλ’ οὐ φλόξ ἀληθής. Ὡσπερ δὲ ἡ φλόξ

Ἐδείκνυε δὲ πῦρ θεός, οὐχ ὅπερ ἦν ἀλλ’ ὅπερ ἠβούλετο δοκεῖν ὁ δηλῶν ἐπήνεγκεν “ἐνώπιον τῶν υἱῶν Ἰσραήλ.” Τὸ δὲ σύμβολον ὅτι δαπανητικὸν τὸ θεῖον λογισμῶν ἀσεβῶν, ὡς καὶ τῆς ὕλης τὸ πῦρ.

Wendland, p. 102, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 224<sup>r</sup> vid.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

πάσαν τὴν παραβληθεῖσαν ὕλην ἀναλίσκει, οὕτως, ὅταν ἐπιφοιτήσῃ εἰλικρινῆς τοῦ θεοῦ ἔννοια τῇ ψυχῇ, πάντας τοὺς ἑτεροδόξους ἀσεβείας λογισμοὺς διαφθείρει, καθοσιούσα τὴν ὄλην διάνοιαν.

Harris, p. 61, from Cat. Ined. Reg. 1825, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 832 (Mangey ii. 679).

49. (Ex. xxiv. 18b)

(a) Ὅτι ἔμελλε κατάκριτος ἔσσεσθαι ἢ ἀποικισθεῖσα γενεὰ καὶ ἐπὶ τεσσαράκοντα ἔτεα φθείρεσθαι μυρία μὲν εὐεργετηθεῖσα, διὰ μυρίων δὲ ἐπιδειξαμένη τὸ ἀχάριστον.

Harris, p. 61, from Cat. Ined. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 680), and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 833.

Τεσσαράκοντα δὲ μένει τὰς πάσας ἡμέρας ἐν ὄρει Μωϋσῆς, ὅσα ἔμελλεν ἔτη τῶν εὐπαθόντων ἢ ἀγνώμων φθείρεσθαι γενεά.

Wendland, p. 102, from Procopius (Migne, p. 635 a).

(b) Ὑπὲρ ὧν ἐν ἰσαριθμοῖς ἡμέραις ἰκέτευε τὸν πατέρα καὶ μάλιστα παρὰ τοιοῦτον καιρόν, ἐν ᾧ δίδονται νόμοι καὶ φορητὸν ἱερόν, ἢ σκηνή. Τίσι γὰρ οἱ νόμοι; ἀρά γε τοῖς ἀπολλυμένοις; Ὑπὲρ τίνων δὲ αἱ θυσίαι; [ἀρα] τῶν μικρὸν ὕστερον φθαρσομένων; προῆδαι γὰρ ὡς προφήτης τὰ ἐσόμενα.

Harris, p. 62, from Cat. Lips. 1, col. 834, Προκοπίου. (Cf. Wendland, p. 102, " Von hier an folgt Pr. dem Philo nicht mehr als Quelle ").

50. (Ex. xxv. 2)

(a) Τὴν καρδίαν ἀντὶ τοῦ ἡγεμονικοῦ παρείληφεν ἢ γραφή.

Harris, p. 62, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 103 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

(b) Οὐ γὰρ ἐν ὕλαις ἀλλ' ἐν εὐσεβεῖ<sup>a</sup> διαθέσει τοῦ κομίζοντος ἢ ἀληθῆς ἀπαρχῆ. Ὁ μὲν ἐκ προαιρέσεως ἀπάρχων θεῶ, καὶ ἂν τὰ

<sup>a</sup> Mangey : εὐσεβεία codd.

EXODUS, BOOK II

μεγάλα<sup>a</sup> πάντα κομίζη μετὰ τῶν βασιλικῶν θησαυρῶν, ἀπαρχὰς οὐ φέρει.

Harris, p. 62, from John Monachus (Mangey ii. 670), ἐκ τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων. (I have transposed the order of the two sentences to agree with the Armenian. This makes it unnecessary to accept Harris' suggestion that the last sentence [οὐ γὰρ . . . ἀπαρχή] is a gloss.)

55. (Ex. xxv. 10b [Heb. 11b]).

(a) Οἱ ἀστέρες στρέφονται καὶ εἰλοῦνται κύκλον· οἱ μὲν κατὰ τὰ αὐτὰ τῷ σύμπαντι οὐρανῷ, οἱ δὲ καὶ κινήσειεν ἰδίαις <ἀς> ἔλαχον ἐξαιρέτοις.

Harris, p. 63, from John Monachus (Mangey ii. 670), ἐκ τοῦ β' ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

(b) Ὁ τῶν ἀνθρώπων βίος, ὁμοιούμενος πελάγει, κυματώσεις καὶ στροφὰς παντοίας προσεπιδέχεται<sup>b</sup> κατὰ τε εὐπραγίας καὶ κακοπραγίας.<sup>c</sup> Ἰδρῦται γὰρ οὐδὲν τῶν γηγενῶν ἀλλ' ὥδε καὶ ἐκείσε διαφέρεται, οἷα σκάφος θαλαττεῦον ὑπ' ἐναντίων πνευμάτων.<sup>d</sup>

Harris, p. 63, from Anon. Coll. Florilega Cod. Barocc. 143 (Mangey ii. 674), and Dam. Par. 506, "ascribed to Nilus," and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 156 b, "ascribed to the ii. Quaest. in Genesisim [sic]."

62. (Ex. xxv. 17a [Heb. 18a]) Τίνα τὰ χερουβίμ;

Τὰ χερουβίμ ἐρμηνεύεται μὲν ἐπίγνωσις πολλή, ἧ<sup>e</sup> ἐν ἑτέροις ὄνομα ἐπιστήμη πλουσία καὶ κεχυμένη. Σύμβολα δέ ἐστι δυνεῖν τοῦ ὄντος δυνάμεων ποιητικῆς τε καὶ βασιλικῆς. Πρεσβυτέρα δὲ ἡ ποιητικὴ τῆς βασιλικῆς κατ' ἐπίνοιαν. Ἰσηλικες γὰρ αἶγε<sup>f</sup> περὶ τὸν θεὸν ἅπασαι δυνάμεις, ἀλλὰ προεπινοεῖται πως ἡ ποιητικὴ τῆς βασιλικῆς· βασιλεὺς γάρ τις οὐχὶ τοῦ μὴ ὄντος ἀλλὰ τοῦ γεγονότος· ὄνομα δὲ ἔλαχεν ἐν τοῖς ἱεροῖς γράμμασιν ἡ μὲν ποιητικὴ

<sup>a</sup> μέταλλα con. Harris.

<sup>b</sup> προσδέχεται Dam. : προσενδέχεται Cod. Reg.

<sup>c</sup> καὶ κακοπραγίας om. Cod. Barocc.

<sup>d</sup> πραγμάτων Dam.

<sup>e</sup> ἧ ins. Harris.

<sup>f</sup> Harris : αἶτε eodd.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

θεός, τὸ γὰρ ποιῆσαι θεῖναι ἔλεγον οἱ παλαιοί· ἡ δὲ βασιλικὴ κύριος, ἐπειδὴ τὸ κύριος ἀπάντων ἀνακεῖται τῷ βασιλεῖ.

Harris, pp. 63-64, from Tischendorf, Philonea, p. 144 e Cod. Vat. 379, f. 385 ("This and the following passages [to § 99] were first edited by Grossmann in an inaugural dissertation, Leipsic, 1856").

63. (Ex. xxv. 17b [Heb. 18b]) Διατί χρυσοῦ τορευτά;

Ὁ μὲν χρυσὸς σύμβολον τῆς τιμιωτάτης οὐσίας, ἡ δὲ τορεία τῆς ἐντέχνου καὶ ἐπιστημονικῆς φύσεως· ἔδει γὰρ τὰς πρώτας τοῦ ὄντος δυνάμεις ἰδέας ἰδεῶν ὑπαρχούσας καὶ τῆς καθαρωτάτης καὶ ἀμιγυῶς καὶ τιμαλφειστάτης καὶ προσέτι τῆς ἐπιστημονικωτάτης φύσεως μεταλαχεῖν.

Harris, p. 64, from Tischendorf, Philonea, p. 144.

64. (Ex. xxv. 17c-18 [Heb. 18c-19]) Διατί ἐπ' ἀμφοτέρων τῶν κλιτῶν τοῦ ἰλαστηρίου τὰ χερουβὶμ ἤρμωτε;

Τοὺς ὄρους τοῦ παντὸς οὐρανοῦ καὶ κόσμου δυσὶ ταῖς ἀνωτάτω φρουραῖς ὠχυρῶσθαι, τῇ τε καθ' ἡν ἐποίει τὰ ὅλα θεός, καὶ τῇ καθ' ἣν ἄρχει τῶν γεγονότων. Ἐμελλε γὰρ ὡς οἰκειοτάτου καὶ συγγενεστάτου κτήματος προκῆδεσθαι, ἡ μὲν ποιητικὴ ἵνα μὴ λυθεῖ τὰ πρὸς αὐτῆς γενόμενα, ἡ δὲ βασιλικὴ ὅπως μηδὲν μῆτε πλεονεκτῆ μῆτε πλεονεκτῆται, νόμῳ βραβευόμενα τῷ τῆς ἰσότητος, ὑφ' ἧς τὰ πράγματα διαιωνίζεται<sup>α</sup>. Πλεονεξία μὲν γὰρ καὶ ἀνισότης ὀρηγνῆρια πολέμου, λυτικὰ τῶν ὄντων· τὸ δὲ εὖνομον καὶ τὸ ἴσον εἰρήνης σπέρματα,<sup>β</sup> σωτηρίας αἷτια καὶ τῆς εἰσάπαν διαμονῆς.

Harris, p. 64, from Tischendorf, Philonea, "ut supra."

65. (Ex. xxv. 19a [Heb. 20a]) Διατί φησιν "ἐκτείνει τὰς πτέρυγας τὰ χερουβὶμ ἵνα συσκιάζῃ";

Αἱ μὲν τοῦ θεοῦ πᾶσαι δυνάμεις πτεροφνοῦσι, τῆς ἄνω πρὸς τὸν πατέρα ὁδοῦ γλιχόμεναί τε καὶ ἐφιέμεναι· συσκιάζουσι δὲ οἷα πτέρυξι τὰ τοῦ παντὸς μέρη· αἰνίττεται δὲ ὡς ὁ κόσμος σκέπαις καὶ φυλακτηρίοις φρουρεῖται, δυσὶ ταῖς εἰρημέναις δυνάμεσι τῇ τε ποιητικῇ καὶ βασιλικῇ.

Harris, p. 65, from Tischendorf, Philonea, p. 146. "John Monach. (Mangey ii. 656), referring to ii. Quaest. in Gen., gives the first sentence, as also Pitra, Anal. Sac. ii. p. xxiii e Cod. Coislin. (?), f. 60, with the same reference."

<sup>α</sup> διαμονίζεται Grossmann.

<sup>β</sup> τέρματα Grossmann.

EXODUS, BOOK II

66. (Ex. xxv. 19b [Heb. 20b]) Διατί τὰ πρόσωπα εἰς ἄλληλα ἐκνεύει καὶ ἄμφω πρὸς τὸ ἱλαστήριον;

Παγκάλῃ τίς ἐστὶ καὶ θεοπρεπῆς ἡ τῶν λεχθέντων εἰκὼν· ἔδει γὰρ τὰς δυνάμεις, τὴν τε ποιητικὴν καὶ βασιλικὴν, εἰς ἀλλήλας<sup>a</sup> ἀφορᾶν, τὰ σφῶν κάλλη κατανοούσας καὶ ἅμα πρὸς τὴν ὠφέλειαν τῶν γεγονότων συμπνεούσας· δεύτερον ἐπειδὴ ὁ θεός, εἰς ὧν, καὶ ποιητής ἐστὶ καὶ βασιλεύς, εἰκότως αἱ διαστάσαι δυνάμεις πάλιν ἔνωσιν ἔλαβον· καὶ γὰρ διέστησαν ὠφελίμως ἵνα ἡ μὲν ποιητὴ, ἡ δὲ ἄρχῃ. Διαφέρει γὰρ ἑκάτερον· καὶ ἡρμόσθησαν ἑτέρῳ τρόπῳ κατὰ τὴν τῶν ὀνομάτων αἰδίων προσβολὴν ὅπως καὶ ἡ ποιητικὴ τῆς βασιλικῆς καὶ ἡ βασιλικὴ τῆς ποιητικῆς ἔχῃται. Ἀμφότεραι γὰρ συννεύουσιν εἰς τὸ ἱλαστήριον εἰκότως· εἰ μὴ γὰρ ἦν τοῖς νῦν οὖσιν ἕλωσ ὁ θεός, οὐτ' ἂν εἰργάσθη τι διὰ τῆς ποιητικῆς οὐτ' ἂν ἐνομήθη διὰ τῆς βασιλικῆς.

Harris, p. 65, from Tischendorf, Philonea, p. 147.

67. (Ex. xxv. 21a [Heb. 22a]) Τί ἐστὶ “γνωσθήσομαί σοι ἐκεῖθεν”;

Γνώσιν καὶ ἐπιστήμην ὁ εἰλικρινέστατος καὶ προφητικώτατος νοῦς λαμβάνει τοῦ ὄντος οὐκ ἀπ' αὐτοῦ τοῦ ὄντος, οὐ γὰρ χωρήσει τὸ μέγεθος, ἀλλ' ἀπὸ τῶν πρώτων αὐτοῦ καὶ δορυφόρων δυνάμεων. Καὶ ἀγαπητὸν ἐκεῖθεν εἰς τὴν ψυχὴν φέρεσθαι τὰς αὐγὰς ἵνα δύνῃται διὰ τοῦ δευτέρου φέγγους τὸ πρεσβύτερον καὶ αὐγοειδέστερον θεάσασθαι.

Harris, p. 66, from Tischendorf, Philonea, p. 148.

68. (Ex. xxv. 21b [Heb. 22b]) Τί ἐστὶ “λαλήσω ἄνωθεν τοῦ ἱλαστηρίου ἀνὰ μέσον τῶν χερουβὶμ”;

Ἐμφαίνει διὰ τοῦτο πρῶτον μὲν ὅτι καὶ τῆς ἕλωσ καὶ τῆς ποιητικῆς καὶ πάσης δυνάμεως ὑπεράνω τὸ θεῖόν ἐστίν· ἔπειτα δὲ ὅτι λαλεῖ κατὰ τὸ μεσαίτατον τῆς τε ποιητικῆς καὶ βασιλικῆς· τοῦτο δὲ τοιοῦτον ὑπολαμβάνει νοῦς<sup>b</sup>. ὁ τοῦ θεοῦ λόγος μέσος ὧν οὐδὲν ἐν τῇ φύσει καταλείπει κενόν, τὰ ὅλα πληρῶν καὶ μεσιτεύει καὶ διαιτᾷ τοῖς παρ' ἑκατέρω διεστάναι δοκοῦσι, φιλίαν καὶ ὁμόνοιαν ἐργαζόμενος· αἶε γὰρ κοινωνίας· αἴτιος καὶ δημιουργὸς εἰρήνης. Τὰ μὲν οὖν περὶ τὴν κιβωτὸν κατὰ μέρος εἴρηται· δεῖ δὲ συλλήβδην ἄνωθεν ἀναλαβόντα τοῦ γνωρίσαι χάριν τίνων ταῦτά ἐστι σύμβολα διεξελεθῆναι ἦν δὲ ταῦτα συμβολικά. Κιβωτὸς καὶ τὰ ἐν αὐτῇ θησαυριζόμενα νόμιμα καὶ ἐπὶ ταύτης τὸ ἱλαστήριον καὶ τὰ ἐπὶ <sup>a</sup> edd. : ἀλληγορίαν codd.

<sup>b</sup> νοῦν Grossmann.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

τοῦ ἱλαστηρίου Χαλδαίων γλώττη λεγόμενα χερουβίμ, ὑπὲρ δὲ τούτων κατὰ τὸ μέσον φωνή και λόγος και ὑπεράνω ὁ λέγων. Εἰ δέ τις ἀκριβῶς δυνηθεῖη κατανοῆσαι τὰς τούτων φύσεις, δοκεῖ μοι πᾶσι τοῖς ἄλλοις ἀποτάξασθαι ὅσα ζηλωτά, κάλλεσι θεοειδεστάτοις περιληφθεῖς. Σκοπῶμεν δὲ ἕκαστον οἶόν ἐστι. Τὸ πρῶτον ὁ και ἐνός και μονάδος και ἀρχῆς πρεσβύτερος. Ἔπειτα ὁ τοῦ ὄντος λόγος,<sup>a</sup> ἡ σπερματικὴ τῶν ὄντων οὐσία: ἀπὸ δὲ τοῦ θείου λόγου, καθάπερ ἀπὸ πηγῆς, σχίζονται αἱ<sup>b</sup> δύο δυνάμεις. Ἡ μὲν ποιητικὴ, καθ' ἣν ἔθηκε τὰ πάντα και διεκόσμησεν ὁ τεχνίτης, αὕτη θεός ὀνομάζεται: ἡ δὲ βασιλικὴ, καθ' ἣν ἄρχει τῶν γεγονότων ὁ δημιουργός, αὕτη καλεῖται κύριος. Ἀπὸ δὲ τούτων τῶν δυεῖν δυνάμεων ἐκπεφύκασιν ἕτεροι παραβλαστάνει γὰρ τῇ μὲν ποιητικῇ ἡ ἴλεως, ἥς ὄνομα εὐεργέτις, τῇ δὲ βασιλικῇ ἡ νομοθετικὴ, ὄνομα δὲ εὐθύβολον ἡ κολαστήριος: ὑπὸ δὲ ταύτας και περὶ ταύτας ἡ κιβωτός: ἐστὶ δὲ κιβωτός κόσμον νοητοῦ σύμβολον. Ἔχει δὲ τὰ πάντα ἰδρυμένα ἐν τοῖς ἐσωτάτοις ἀγίοις συμβολικῶς ἡ κιβωτός, τὸν ἀσώματον κόσμον, τὰ νόμιμα ἃ κέκληκε μαρτύρια, τὴν νομοθετικὴν και κολαστήριον δύναμιν, τὸ ἱλαστήριον, τὴν ἴλεω και εὐεργέτιν, τὰς ὑπεράνω τὴν τε ποιητικὴν, ἥτις ἐστὶ πίστις<sup>c</sup> τῆς ἴλεω και εὐεργέτιδος, και τὴν βασιλικὴν, ἥτις ἐστὶ ρίζα τῆς κολαστηρίου και νομοθετικῆς. Ὑπεμφαίνεται δὲ μέσος ὢν ὁ θεῖος λόγος, ἀνωτέρω δὲ τοῦ λόγου ὁ λέγων: ἐστὶ δὲ και ὁ τῶν κατειλεγμένων ἀριθμὸς ἑβδομάδι συμπληρούμενος νοητὸς κόσμος, και δυνάμεις δύο συγγενεῖς ἡ τε κολαστήριος και εὐεργέτις, και ἕτεροι πρὸ τούτων δύο ἡ τε ποιητικὴ και ἡ βασιλικὴ, συγγένειαν ἔχουσαι μᾶλλον πρὸς τὸν δημιουργὸν ἢ τὸ γεγονός: και ἕκτος ὁ λόγος και ἑβδομος ὁ λέγων: εἰ δὲ ἄνωθεν τὴν καταριθμῆσιν ποιῆ, εὐρήσεις τὸν μὲν λέγοντα πρῶτον, τὸν δὲ λόγον δεύτερον, τρίτην<sup>d</sup> δὲ τὴν ποιητικὴν δύναμιν, τετάρτην δὲ τὴν ἀρχὴν, εἶτα δὲ ὑπὸ μὲν τῇ ποιητικῇ πέμπτην τὴν εὐεργέτιν, ὑπὸ δὲ τῇ βασιλικῇ ἕκτην τὴν κολαστήριον, ἑβδομον δὲ τὸν ἐκ τῶν ιδεῶν κόσμον.

Harris, pp. 66-68, from Tischendorf, Philonea, pp. 148-152.

85. (Ex. xxvi. 1c)

Τὸ μὲν γὰρ ἦν ἀλουργικόν, τὸ δὲ ῥοδοειδὲς ἡ κοκκοβαφές, τὸ δὲ ὑάκινθω προσεικός, ἡ δὲ βύσσος τὴν λευκὴν εἶχε χροιάν. Καὶ ταῦτα δὲ τῶν τεσσάρων στοιχείων ἦν αἰνίγματα. Ὁ μὲν γὰρ ὑάκινθος τῷ ἀέρι προσέοικε, τὸ δὲ ῥοδοειδὲς ἡ κοκκοβαφές τῷ πυρί, τὸ δὲ ἀλουργικόν μηνύει τὴν θάλατταν—ἐκείνη γὰρ τρέφει

<sup>a</sup> λόγου Grossmann.

<sup>c</sup> πηγῆ ex Arm. coniecti.

<sup>b</sup> αἱ add. Tischendorf.

<sup>d</sup> τρίτος Harris.

EXODUS, BOOK II

τὸν κόχλον, ἐξ οὗ τὸ τοιοῦτον γίνεται χρώμα—, ἣ δὲ βύσσος τὴν γῆν ἐκ ταύτης γὰρ φύεσθαι λέγεται.

Wendland, pp. 107-108, from Theodoret, Quaest. in Exodum, Migne, p. 284 d.

99. (Ex. xxvii. 1b)

Οὔτε πλοῦτον ἀσπάζεται τὸ θεῖον οὔτε πενίαν ἀποστρέφεται.

Harris, p. 68, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 308 e Cod. Coislin. 276, f. 208.

105. (Ex. xxvii. 21b)

Οὐδὲν οὔτε ἥδιον οὔτε σεμνότερον ἢ θεῷ δουλεύειν, ὃ καὶ τὴν μεγίστην βασιλείαν ὑπερβάλλει. Καὶ μοι δοκοῦσιν οἱ πρῶτοι βασιλεῖς ἅμα καὶ ἀρχιερεῖς γενέσθαι, δηλοῦντες ἔργοις ὅτι χρὴ τοὺς τῶν ἄλλων δεσπόμενους δουλεύειν τοῖς λατρεύουσι θεῷ.

Harris, p. 68, from Dam. Par. 775=Cod. Rupef. f. 113, ἐκ τοῦ β' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

107. (Ex. xxviii. 2)

Δόξα, ὡς ὁ παλαιὸς λόγος, ψευδῆς ἐστὶ ὑπόληψις καὶ δόκησις ἀβέβαιος.

Harris, p. 68, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 102 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

117. (Ex. xxviii. 27 [Heb. 31]).

Διά τοι τοῦτο γὰρ τοῦ ἀέρος ὁ ποδῆρης εἶχε τὸ χρώμα. Ὑάκωθος δὲ ἦν, ὡς ἂν καὶ εἰς τοῦτο ἀφορῶν μετάρσιος γένηται.

Wendland, p. 108, from Theodoret, Quaest. in Exodum, Migne, p. 285 v.

118. (Ex. xxviii. 28 [Heb. 32])

Οἱ λάλοι, τὰ ὀφείλοντα ἠσυχάζεσθαι ῥηγνύντες, τρόπον τινὰ ὑπὸ γλωσσαλγίας προχέουσι εἰς ὧτα ἀκοῆς οὐκ ἄξια.

Harris, p. 68, from Dam. Par. 576, and Cod. Reg. 923, f. 231, "in each case headed Φίλωνος."

UNIDENTIFIED FRAGMENTS FROM QUAESTIONES IN EXODUM<sup>a</sup>

1. Ἀμήχανον ἀνθρωπίνη φύσει τὸ τοῦ ὄντος πρόσωπον θεάσασθαι. Τὸ δὲ πρόσωπον οὐ κυριολογεῖται, παραβολὴ δὲ ἐστὶν εἰς δήλωσιν τῆς καθαρωτάτης καὶ εὐκρινεστάτης τοῦ ὄντος ιδέας, ἐπειδὴ καὶ ἀνθρώπος οὐδενὶ γνωρίζεται μᾶλλον ἢ προσώπῳ κατὰ τὴν ἰδίαν ποιότητα καὶ μορφήν. Οὐ γὰρ φησιν ὁ θεὸς ὅτι “οὐκ εἰμι ὁρατὸς τὴν φύσιν”—τίς δὲ μᾶλλον ὁρατὸς ἢ ὁ τὰ ἄλλα πάντα γεννήσας ὁρατὰ;—“πεφυκῶς δὲ τοιοῦτος εἰς τὸ ὁρᾶσθαι ὑπ’ οὐδενὸς ἀνθρώπων ὁρώμαι” φησι. Τὸ δὲ αἴτιον ἢ ἀδυναμία τοῦ γενητοῦ. Καὶ ἵνα μὴ περιπλέκων μηκύνω θεὸν γενέσθαι δεῖ πρότερον—ὅπερ οὐδὲ οἷόν τε—ἵνα θεὸν ἰσχύσῃ τις καταλαβεῖν. Ἐὰν δὲ ἀποθάνῃ μὲν τις τὸν θνητὸν βίον, ζήσῃ δὲ ἀντιλαβὼν τὸν ἀθάνατον, ἴσως ὁ μηδέποτε εἶδεν ὄψεται. Αἱ φιλοσοφίαι πᾶσαι κατὰ τε τὴν Ἑλλάδα καὶ βάρβαρον ἀκμάσασαι, ζητοῦσαι τὰ φύσεως, οὐδὲ τὸ βραχυτάτον ἠδυνήθησαν τηλαυγῶς ἰδεῖν. Σαφῆς δὲ πίστις αἱ διαφωνίαι, αἱ διαμάχαι καὶ ἑτεροδοξίαι τῶν ἐκάστης αἰρέσεως ἀνασκευαζόντων καὶ ἀνασκευαζομένων μέρη· καὶ πᾶσιν ὀρμητήρια πολέμων γεγόνασιν αἱ τῶν αἰρεσιομάχων σκιαί,<sup>b</sup> τυφλοῦσαι τὸν δυνάμενον βλέπειν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν ταῖς ἀντιλογικαῖς ἔρισι, ἀμηχανοῦντα τίνα δεῖ προσέσθαι<sup>c</sup> καὶ τίνα διώσασθαι. Δεῖ τὸν βουλόμενον φαντασιωθῆναι τὸν τῶν ὄλων ἄριστον, στήναι τὸ πρῶτον κατὰ ψυχὴν, ἰδρυνθέντα παγίως γνώμῃ μιᾷ, καὶ μηκέτι πρὸς πολλὰ πλάζεσθαι, ἔπειτα δὲ στήναι ἐπὶ φύσεως καὶ γνώμης ξηρᾶς καὶ ἀγόνου πάντων,<sup>d</sup> ὅσα φθαρτά· ἐὰν γὰρ προσήσεται τι τῶν μαλακωτέρων, σφαλῆσεται τῆς προθέσεως. Ἀδυνατήσῃ καὶ τὸ ὀξύπεστατον βλέπον ἰδεῖν τὸ ἀγένητον, ὡς τυφλωθῆναι πρότερον ἢ θεάσασθαι διὰ τὴν ὀξυαύγειαν καὶ τὸν ἐπεισερόντα<sup>e</sup> χεῖμαρρον τῶν μαρμαρυγῶν.

Harris, pp. 72-73, from Dam. Par. 748=Cod. Rupef. f. 22 b, ἐκ τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἑξόδῳ ζητουμένων.

<sup>a</sup> The sections have been numbered by me.

<sup>b</sup> Harris: οἰκίαι codd.

<sup>c</sup> Mangey: προσέσθαι codd.

<sup>d</sup> Harris: παντός codd.

<sup>e</sup> Mangey: ἀπεισερόντα codd.

EXODUS, UNIDENTIFIED

2. Ἡ φορὰ τῶν κακιῶν ἀνακυκᾶ καὶ στροβεῖ τὴν ψυχὴν, ἔλιγγον αὐτῇ περιτιθεῖσα τὸν καλύπτοντα καὶ καμμύνει ἐκβιαζόμενον τὴν φύσει μὲν πρόπουσαν ὄψιν, ἐπιτηδεύσει δὲ τυφλουμένην.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 751 (Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

3. Λί περι τῶν τοῦ θεοῦ ἀρετῶν ἐναγώνιοι ζητήσεις βελτιοῦσι τὴν διάνοιαν καὶ ἀθλοῦσιν ἄθλους ἡδίστους ἅμα καὶ ὠφελιμωτάτους, καὶ μάλιστα ὅταν μή, ὡς οἱ νῦν, τὴν ψευδῶνυμον κλήσιν ὑποδύομενοι μέχρι τοῦ δοκεῖν ὑπερμαχοῦσι τῶν δογμάτων, ἀλλὰ πάθει γνησίῳ μετ' ἐπιστήμης ἰχηλατοῦσιν ἀλήθειαν.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 774 (Cod. Rupef.), "referred . . . to the first . . . book of the Questions on Exodus."

4. Τὸ ἐμμελὲς καὶ εὐρυθμον οὐκ ἐν φωνῇ μᾶλλον ἢ διανοίᾳ ἐπιδείκνυσθαι πειρωμένους. Ὁ τοῦ σοφοῦ λόγος οὐκ ἐν ῥήμασι ἀλλ' ἐν τοῖς δηλουμένοις πράγμασιν ἐπιδείκνυσιν τὸ κάλλος.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 774 (Cod. Rupef.), "referred . . . to the second . . . book of the Questions on Exodus."

5. Τοὺς ἐντυγχάνοντας τοῖς ἱεροῖς γράμμασιν οὐ δεῖ συλλαβομαχεῖν ἀλλὰ πρὸ τῶν ὀνομάτων καὶ ῥημάτων τὴν διάνοιαν σκοπεῖν, καὶ τοὺς καιροὺς καὶ τρόπους, καθ' οὓς ἕκαστα λέγεται. Πολλάκις γὰρ αἱ αὐταὶ λέξεις ἐτέροις καὶ ἐτέροις πράγμασιν ἐφαρμολοῦσιν, καὶ κατὰ τὸ ἐναντίον διαφέρουσαι λέξεις ἐπὶ τοῦ αὐτοῦ τιθέμεναι πράγματος συνάδουσιν.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 774 (Cod. Rupef.), "referred . . . to the last book of the Questions on Exodus."

6. Περιέχει τὰ πάντα, ὑπ' οὐδενὸς περιεχόμενος. Ὡς γὰρ ὁ τόπος περιεκτικὸς σωμάτων ἐστὶ καὶ καταφυγή, οὕτω καὶ ὁ θεῖος λόγος περιέχει τὰ ὅλα καὶ πεπλήρωκεν.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 752 (Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

7. Ἐντὸς φέρει τὸν ὄλεθρον ὁ τῇ κακίᾳ συζῶν ἐπεὶ σύνοικον ἔχει τὴν ἐπίβουλον καὶ πολέμιον. Ἰκανὸς γὰρ πρὸς τιμωρίαν ἢ

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

τοῦ φαύλου συνείδησις, οἴκοθεν ὡς ἐκ πληγῆς δειλίαν προτείνουσα τῇ ψυχῇ.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 782 (Cod. Rupef.), ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητουμένων.

8. Τοῦ φαύλου ὁ βίος ἐπίλυτος καὶ περιδεής, καὶ ὅσα κατὰ τὰς αἰσθήσεις ἐνεργεῖ φόβοις καὶ ὀδύναις ἀνακέκρται.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 782 (Cod. Rupef.), "referred to Quaest. in Exod."

9. Αἱ τοῦ θεοῦ χάριτες οὐ μόνον ἀναγκαῖα παρέχονται ἀλλὰ καὶ πρὸς περιττὴν καὶ δαιμιλεστέραν ἀπόλαυσιν.

Harris, p. 73, from Dam. Par. 789 = Cod. Rupef. f. 277, "from ii. Quaest. in Exod."

10. Μυρία γε, οὐ λέγω τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἀλλὰ καὶ τῶν βραχυτάτων εἶναι δοκούντων, ἐκφεύγει τὸν ἀνθρώπινον νοῦν.

Harris, p. 73, from John Monachus (Mangey ii. 662), ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητ.

11. Μία ἀνάπαυσις ψυχῆς ἐστὶν ἡ κρατίστη εἰς τὸ ἱερόν τοῦ ὄντος πόθον, ἡγεμόνι χρῆσθαι θεῷ καὶ βουλευμάτων καὶ λόγων καὶ πράξεων. . . . Πέρασ εὐδαιμονίας τὸ ἀκλινῶς καὶ ἀρρεπῶς ἐν μόνῳ θεῷ στήναι.

Harris, pp. 73-74, from John Monachus (Mangey ii. 669) = Cod. Rupef. f. 178 b, ἐκ τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημ.

12. Πολλὰ ἀσωμένοις καὶ ἀδημονοῦσιν ἔθος ἐστὶ ψεύδεσθαι, τῶν παθῶν οὐκ ἐπιτροπευόντων ἀληθεύειν εἰ τὸ ψεῦδος οἰκεῖόν ἐστιν.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 96 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

13. Τὸ τῶν φαύλων ἄκριτον καὶ ἀνίδρυτον ἐν γνώμασι διασυνίστησιν μαχομένους μὲν λόγους ἀλλήλοις, μαχομένας δὲ πράξεις καὶ μηδέποτε συμφωνοῦσας ἑαυταῖς.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 100 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημ.

EXODUS, UNIDENTIFIED

14. Τὰ βουλήματα τῶν ἀγαθῶν δεῖ βεβαιοῦσθαι τελευτησάντων οὐδὲν ἦττον ἢ ζώντων.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 101 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημ.

15. Τὸ μὲν “ πρωτότοκον ” πρὸς τὸ μητρῶον γένος, τίκτει γὰρ γύνη· τό τε “ πρωτογενές ” πρὸς τὸ πατρῶον, γεννᾷ γὰρ ἄρρεν· τὸ δὲ “ διανοίγον πᾶσαν μήτραν ” ἵνα μὴ γενομένης πρωτοτόκου θυγατρὸς, εἴθ' ὕστερον ἐπιγενομένου υἱοῦ, τὸν υἱὸν ἐν πρωτοτόκοις καταριθμήσει τίς, ὡς τῆς ἄρρενος ἄρχοντα γενεᾶς· ὁ γὰρ νόμος φησὶν, οὐ διοίγνυσι τὴν μήτραν ὁ τοιοῦτος τὴν εὐθύς ἐκ παρθενίας.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 105 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ δ' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημ. “ The passage evidently belongs to Exod. xiii. 2.”

16. Τὰ μέτρα πλεονάζοντα τὸν ὄρον ὑπερβαίνει ὡς γίνεσθαι τὴν μὲν ἄμετρον φρόνησιν, πανουργίαν· τὴν δὲ σωφροσύνην, φειδωλίαν· τὴν δὲ ἀνδρίαν, θρασύτητα.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημ.

17. Ἡ εὐφυΐα πλεονάζουσα τῇ ρύμη τῆς φορᾶς πρὸς πολλὰ δὴ τῶν ἀλυσιτελῶν εἴωθε χωρεῖν· ἐν δὲ ταῖς διδασκαλίαις οὐκ ἐλάττω τὰ οὐκ ἀναγκαῖα τῶν ἀναγκαίων ἐστί· διὸ προσήκει τὸν ἔφορον καὶ ψυχῆς ὑψηγητήν, ὡσπερ γεωργὸν ἀγαθόν, τὰ ὑπερβάλλοντα περικόπτειν.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 108 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

18. Ὁ σοφιστικός, γνώμης ὦν ἐτέρας, λόγοις οὐ συνάδουσι χρῆται· διέξεισι μὲν γὰρ ἀπνευστὶ τοὺς ἀρετῆς ἐκάστης ἐπαίνους, οἷα λόγῳ πολὺς ἐπὶ θήρα τῶν ἀκουόντων· ὁ δὲ βίος ἐστὶν αὐτῶν πάντων ἀνάπλευς ἀμαρτημάτων· καὶ μοι δοκεῖ τῶν ἐπὶ σκηναῖς ὑποκριτῶν διαφέρειν οὐδέν, οἱ πολλάκις ἡμελημένοι καὶ ἄφρονες, ἄνθρωποι διεφθαρμένοι· τινὲς δὲ καὶ θεραπεύοντες, εἰς ἥρωας ἀσκοῦνται· μικρὸν δὲ ὕστερον ἀποθέμενοι τὴν σκευήν, τὰ τῆς ἰδίας ἀδοξίας ἀναφαίνουσι σημεῖα.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 106 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

APPENDIX A, GREEK FRAGMENTS

19. Ὅρασις παρὰ τὰς ἄλλας αἰσθήσεις καὶ ταύτη διαφέρει ὅτι αἱ μὲν ἄλλαι τοῖς αἰσθητοῖς ἐγκαταμίνυνται, ὅσον ἢ γεύσις ἀνακιρνᾶται τοῖς χυμοῖς καὶ ἡ ὄσφρησις τοῖς ἐπαναδιδομένοις ἀτμοῖς καὶ αἱ ἀκοαὶ ταῖς φωναῖς ἐκδυομέναις εἰς τὰ ὕψα· οὔτε γὰρ αὐτὴ διὰ τοῦ βάθους τῶν σωμάτων χωρεῖ, ψαύει δὲ τῶν ἐπιφανειῶν μόνον κατὰ τὴν προσβολήν, οὔτε τὰ σώματα εἰς τὴν ὄψιν εἰσδύεται.

Harris, p. 74, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 109 e Cod. Vat. 1553, ἐκ τοῦ α' τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων.

20. Οὐ πάντων κοινωνητέον πᾶσιν οὔτε λόγων οὔτε πραγμάτων καὶ μάλιστα ἱερῶν· πολλὰ γὰρ προϋπάρξαι δεῖ τοῖς ἐφιεμένοις τῆς μετουσίας τούτων· πρῶτον μὲν, τὸ<sup>α</sup> μέγιστον καὶ ἀναγκαιότατον, πρὸς τὸν ἓνα καὶ ὄντως<sup>β</sup> ὄντα θεὸν εὐσέβειαν καὶ ὀσιότητα, τὴν ἐπὶ τοῖς ἀγάλμασι καὶ ξοάνοις καὶ συνόλως ἀφιδρύμασι, τελεταῖς τε ἀτελέστοις καὶ μυστηρίοις ἀνοργιάστοις, ἀνήνυτον πλάνην ἀπωσαμένους· δεύτερον δὲ καθαρθῆναι τὰς ἀγνευτικὰς<sup>γ</sup> καθάρσεις κατὰ τε σώμα καὶ ψυχὴν διὰ νόμων πατριῶν καὶ ἡθῶν· τρίτον ἀξιόπιστον τοῦ συνασμενισμοῦ παρασχέιν ἐνέχυρον ἵνα μὴ τραπέζης<sup>α</sup> μεταλαβόντες ἱεράς, ἀσώτων μειρακίων τρόπον, ὑπὸ κόρου καὶ πλησμονῆς ἐναλλοιωθῶσιν ἐμπαρουνοῦντες, οἷς οὐ θέμις.

Harris, p. 75, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 308 e Cod. Coislin. 276, f. 205, ἐκ τοῦ πρώτου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων, and Dam. Par. 782 (Cod. Rupef.).

21. Φθαρτὸν καλῶ τὸν μὴ ἐφιεμένον ἀφθαρσίας ἀλλ' ὄστρέου τρόπον ἐνειλούμενον ὄστρακοδέρμῳ, ὅπερ ἐστὶν ὁ σωματικὸς ὄγκος καὶ ὁ τῶν θνητῶν βίος.

Harris, p. 75, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 308 e Cod. Coislin. 276, f. 245, ἐκ τοῦ τελευταίου τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητημάτων, and Cod. Rupef. f. 240.

22. Μάταιον οὐδὲν οὔτε ἀκοαῖς οὔτε ἄλλῃ τινὶ τῶν αἰσθήσεων προσιτέον· ἐπακολουθοῦσι γὰρ ταῖς ἀπάταις μάλιστα τῶν ψυχῶν αἱ ζημίαι.

Harris, p. 75, from Cod. Rupef. f. 45, ἐκ τῶν ἐν Ἐξόδῳ ζητουμένων.

23. Πρὸς τούτοις, εἶποι τις Ἐθέλει δὲ μηδὲ χωρὶς ἀγῶν, οὐκ ἐβούλετο αὐτοὺς κατανων τὴν κτῆσιν αὐτοῖς ἐγγενέ-

<sup>α</sup> καὶ Dam.

<sup>γ</sup> ἀγνευούσας Dam.

<sup>β</sup> ὄντως om. Dam.

<sup>α</sup> τροφῆς Dam.

EXODUS, UNIDENTIFIED

πεσεῖν εἰς τὸ ῥάθυμον καὶ τῆς ἐπαγγελίας κατακληρονομήσαι τὴν γῆν ἀγώνων χωρὶς<sup>a</sup>. τὰ γὰρ πόνω κτηθέντα παρὰ τοῖς ἔχουσι τίμια· τὰ ἀπόνως κτηθέντα καταφρονεῖται ῥαδίως· ὅθεν βουλόμενος αὐτοὺς νήφειν καὶ ἐργηγορέναι καὶ ὡς ἔχοντας ἐχθροὺς πρὸς τε τὸν θεὸν ἐπιστρέφειν καὶ τῆς παρ' αὐτοῦ ἐπικουρίας δεῖσθαι, τοῦτο ποιεῖν ἐπαγγέλλεται,<sup>b</sup> ὁμοῦ καὶ γυμνίζων<sup>c</sup> αὐτοὺς πρὸς ἀντίστασιν ἐχθρῶν. Τοῦτο δὲ καὶ νοητῶς ὀρώμεν γινόμενον· ψυχὴ γὰρ διὰ τῆς θείας συνεργείας ἀπαλλαγείσα παθῶν, εἰ πρὸς τὸ ῥάθυμον ὀλισθήσει, ὡς μηκέτι παθεῖν ὑποπτεύουσα, ὑπὸ τῶν ἀοράτων καὶ πονηρῶν πνευμάτων περιστοιχίζεται δίκην κυνῶν<sup>d</sup> αὐτῇ ἐπιθρῶσκόντων καὶ σφοδρότερον πολεμούντων· ὅθεν καὶ λόγιον ἡμᾶς διδάσκει μὴ πιστεύειν ἐχθρῶ.<sup>e</sup>

Harris, pp. 103-104, from Pitra, Anal. Sacr. ii. 312 (vid.) e Cod. Pal. 203, f. 261, Cod. Vat. 1553, f. 129, Cat. Lips. 1, col. 823, Cat. Burney, f. 140. "The previous passage is found attached to an extract from ii. Quaest. in Exod. xxv."

<sup>a</sup> χωρὶς τινων Cat. Burney.

<sup>b</sup> ποριεῖν ἐπαγγέλλεται Cat. Burney.

<sup>c</sup> γυμνάζων Cat. Burney.

<sup>d</sup> κυνῶν e Cat. Barb. iv. 56 add. Wendland.

<sup>e</sup> cf. Ecclesiasticum xii. 10. post ἐχθρῶ add. Cat. Burney: ἐπὶ τὰ γὰρ πονηρίαὶ εἰσὶν ἐν αὐτῷ (cf. Prov. xxvi. 25, Luc. xi. 26).

<sup>f</sup> ὄρα August. (vid.).

<sup>g</sup> cf. Wendland, "Es folgt eine Beziehung auf Luc. 11, 26."

σθαι τῆς γῆς. Τὰ γὰρ πόνω κτηθέντα παρὰ τοῖς ἔχουσι τίμια, καὶ πρὸς θεὸν ἐπιστρέφει πᾶς ἐναγώνιος ἐκ τῶν ἐχθρῶν σωθῆναι δεόμενος. Καὶ ψυχὴ δὲ ἀκονιτὶ γινομένη παθῶν ἐλευθέρα πρὸς ῥαθυμίαν ὄρμα<sup>f</sup> καὶ τοῖς ἀοράτως πολεμοῦσι περιστοιχίζεται.<sup>g</sup>

Wendland, p. 100, from Procopius, Cod. Aug. f. 222<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 629) vid.

APPENDIX B

APPENDIX B

ADDITIONS IN THE OLD LATIN VERSION

Selected Bibliography :

Cohn, Leopold in L. Cohn and P. Wendland, Philonis Alexandrini Opera, etc. (Berlin, 1896), pp. l-lij, "De antiqua versione latina."

Conybeare, Fred. C., Philo About the Contemplative Life (Oxford, 1895), pp. 139-145, "The Old Latin Version."

Pitra, J. B., Analecta Sacra Spicilegio Solesmensi Parata (Florence, 1884), Tom. ii, pp. 319-320, "De vetere Philonis interprete Latino."

Wendland, Paul, Neu entdeckte Fragmente Philos (Berlin, 1891), p. 85, n. 2.

In the year 1520 there appeared in Paris a volume entitled Philonis Iudaei centum et duae quaestiones et totidem responsiones morales super Genesin. Beside the Old Latin version of the Quaestiones in Genesin iv. 154-245, the volume contained the Old Latin version of the De Vita Contemplativa (by the same translator, according to Conybeare), Jerome's Latin translation of the De Nominibus Hebraicis, Budaeus' translation of the De Mundo, and the Liber Antiquitatum of Pseudo-Philo. A second and improved edition of this work was published in Basel in 1527 and was reprinted there in 1538, 1550 and 1599. It is from the edition of 1538 that Aucher took the text of the version of QG iv. 154-245, which is printed at the bottom of pp. 362-443 of his edition of the Armenian version of the Quaestiones.

The date and character of this Old Latin version have been carefully studied by the scholars mentioned above. They agree that it was made in the fourth century A.D. and that in spite of its uncouthness and freedom it is a useful check on the ancient Armenian version, which is more faithful and more intelligible throughout.

APPENDIX B

This Old Latin version is of further interest because it contains several Quaestiones missing in the Armenian, namely eleven sections on Gen. xxvi. 19-35, which appear at the end of QG iv. 195, and three fragments added to the translation of QG iv. 203, 210 and 232 (beside a few glosses to other sections, which are not included here). That this group of eleven sections contains genuine material from Philo's Quaestiones is clear from their contents and from the fact that three of these sections (vii, viii and ix) have parallels in the Greek fragments from Procopius and the *Catena*e, where they are ascribed to Philo. Wendland, in particular, calls attention to the "echt philonisch" character of sections iv, vi, vii and xi; he identifies the discussion of the number four in section ii as an interpolation from Philo's lost work Περὶ ἀριθμῶν.

The additional sections are reproduced below from Aucher's reprinting of the 1538 edition. Considerably more work should be done on the text of the Old Latin version throughout, but here, as in the footnotes to the translation, I have corrected only a few of the more obvious misprints or scribal errors.

ADDITIONS TO QG IV. 195 (AUCHER, PP. 395-398)

i. (Gen. xxvi. 19-22) Quare in primo dimicantur, secundo judicantur, in tertio cessant. Et primum vocatur injuria, secundum inimicitia, tertium spaciositas? <sup>a</sup>

Haec pignora sunt industriae utpote aliquo in studiosam inducto disciplinam. Est enim dimicatio, dum amatores doctrinae ad institutores conferunt opposcentes magistros torpori animae. Cum autem fuerit obstinatissima perseverantia, et studiosa exercitatio, jam non litigium, sed judicium est, cessante laesura congrue rationis est altius examen requirere. Profecto nanque amatore disciplinarum, infirmantur alienigenae moris eruditionis abdicato litigio atque judicio, ac per hoc merito prima momenta pro injuriis accepta sunt. Patimur enim injuriam desiderantes, amor obtinet firmitatem. In secundo autem inimicos sentimus eos, non l. speciositas.

OLD LATIN ADDITIONS

praevalentibus nocere alienigenarum moribus, inanem exaggerantibus inimicitiam. Tertia igitur speciositas et quia perfecta melioratio confusionem affert inimicis, inanis enim revelata est et pravitas injuriarum, et inimicitiarum insolentia.

ii. (Gen. xxvi. 23) Quid est : Ascendit inde ad puteum, sed suspensum ?

Qui enim adhuc docetur, licet promoverit et creverit, nihilominus religionis moras<sup>a</sup> sortitur. Cur autem perfectis approximaverit, altiores facit commemorationes. Ait enim. Puteus quaterni numeri, et in ipso numero fallit.<sup>b</sup> Puteus enim juramenti filia septima est, quod Hebraice legitur Bersabace<sup>c</sup> Berfilia Sabeae septima. Jam pervide quanta est unitas in Mathematico tractatu, et hic in prioribus translatis libris ex aperto dicente Philone quarta in omnibus corporibus et incorporalibus preciosa est pro numero quidem qui accensus est decem : in figuris autem quod secundum eam soliditatis natura constat, post signum et elogium, secundum Musicos vero omnes armonias continet, quadrilateralitatem pertinacitate, in dimidialitatem et per omnes in duplicitate et bis per omnes in quadruplicatione haec inquit in incorporalibus. Corporalibus vero elementa mundi quatuor totidem anni momenta, debuit prius corporalia pandere, postmodum incorporalia. Hic enim ipse pro incorporalibus prosequendo coitum viri et mulieris quatuor habere vices, quod turpissimum est interpretare, ne forte quidam servi dei amatores esse eorum existiment.<sup>d</sup> Videtur mihi Philo ritum Judeorum sectavisse, linguam imprauisse. Si enim septimum composuisset, viginti et octo metas pacis invenisset. Denique post momenta lamentationis titulum pacis enixa est Bersabee. Quapropter inquit Moses, laudando quartum numerum sanctum et gloriosum protestatur. Ut quid autem juramentum dicitur, in opere ipso declarabo post modicum in familiari capitulo, totus liber translatus nihil tale continuit, sed coetus<sup>e</sup> effugere conatur.

iii. (Gen. xxvi. 24) Ut quid in nocte dominus visitatur, et ait : Ego sum deus patris tui, ne timeas, tecum enim sum ?

<sup>a</sup> l. mores (?).

<sup>b</sup> marg. verba sunt interpretis, quisquis hic tandem fuerit.

<sup>c</sup> l. Bersabaeae vel sim.

<sup>d</sup> l. existimentur (?).

<sup>e</sup> marg. coactus.

APPENDIX B

Familiarissimum tempus animae speculatoriae, nox vagis erroribus meridianis, et vanis aspectibus liberata, ac per hoc nec metus pulsatur, nec vacillat cogitatus absente timore, caret autem timore pacatissima mens, cum divinitati pervigilat perseveranter. Habet tamen lectio necessarium modum, ne quis procerum praesumat facile occasionibus, sed prioris acquirit meritis, digne enim dicendo: Ego sum deus patris tui, generis censuram declaravit. Tecum autem sum pro tua et ipsi vigilantia, cujus causa non indignatur universorum pater indignum visitare eum invisibilis animarum medicus.

iv. (Gen. xxvi. 24) Quare Dominus<sup>a</sup> visitatus ostendit semetipsum deum?

Dominus quidem regni et dominatoris nomen est. Deus autem appellatur pro beneficiis, quibus certius manifestatur, quoniam sapientiam non inter subjectos ut rex, sed inter amicos benefaciendo dinumerat. Poterat Philo pluribus invehere, nisi computo uteretur Mathematico.

v. (Gen. xxvi. 24) Quare dicendo benedixi te, adjecit, et multiplicabo semen tuum propter patrem tuum?

Spontaneae disciplinae titulus perfectus, ob nullam aliam causam divinam promeretur gratiam, nisi pro se ac pro sua suavitate. Juvenior autem moribus et adhuc erudiens non propter se, sed pro meritis provecta doctrinae, cujus sapientia pro principali exemplo discentibus praeponitur, ad nanciscendam spem meliorem. Possunt enim hac aemulatione parentibus simulari.

vi. (Gen. xxvi. 25) Quare aedificando illic altarium, non obtulit sacrificium, sed invocato nomine domini fixit tabernaculum suum?

Sacrificia prae omnibus bonis sine sanguine, et victima animalium pronorum participatio sapientiae alienarum esse credunt, qui puro pectore placere deo desiderant, cujus gratia sufficere credit invocationis auctoris virtutem, qua princeps atque dominator est universitatis, nullius egens. Ita illic figere dicitur tabernaculum suum, suam nempe virtutem, in <sup>a</sup>  marg. Dominus Deus.

OLD LATIN ADDITIONS

qua puritas illa animae inhabita commoratur,<sup>a</sup> firmiter sciens, dominum universorum principem sine ulla esse penuria. O pura credulitas, quae factas pridem frugum centesimas ex-cellit.

vii. (Gen. xxvi. 26)

Quare post quartam putei fossuram a pueris factam, exiit Abimelech ad eum, et Acho<sup>b</sup> thalami praepositus, et Phicho princeps militiae?

Videntur mihi exploratores potius, quam pro foedere amicitiarum advenisse, in utroque parati ad praelium, si infirmum viderint: ad pacem, si potentiorum. Sensu tamen subtiliori intelligitur quartus, ut tamen in numeris insignis est, in quo constitutus studiosus per omnem felicitatem provehitur. Sequitur tamen etiam valde perfecto contraria virtus praestolanti et observanti ad incurrendum. Et est hujus fortitudo tres animae partes: mentis acumen ratio-

Ἐκπορεύεται δὲ πρὸς αὐτὸν Ἀβιμέλεχ καὶ οἱ μετ' αὐτοῦ, κατάσκοποι μᾶλλον ἢ ἑνσπονδοὶ γενησόμενοι καὶ πρὸς ἑκάτερον παρεσκευασμένοι, πόλεμον μὲν, εἰ ἀσθενούντα κατίδοιεν, εἰρήνην δέ, εἰ δυνατώτερον ἑαυτῶν.

Wendland, pp. 85-86, from Procopius, f. 118<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 415); also, except for beg. (ἐκπορεύεται . . . αὐτοῦ), in Harris, p. 42, from Cat. Ined. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 675), and Cat. Burney, f. 56, Φίλωνος ἑβραίου, and Cat. Lips. 1, col. 325 "with the remark that this and the three following passages are not among the edita of Philo and do not seem to belong to him."

nabile, et animositas, et desiderium. Pro acumine quidem<sup>c</sup> rex, animositate princeps militiae, concupiscentia Phichol, qui libidinis videtur esse provisor. Ocholach quidem regna parentur<sup>d</sup> ex utraque manu stipatus, hinc atque hinc suo protectu prohibendus, obtinente enim iracundia ut princeps militiae operatur, eo amplius pandimus dictum ex nominum translatione, est Abimelech Alido,<sup>e</sup> Phichol iracundia.

viii. (Gen. xxvi. 29-30) Quare dicentibus et nunc benedictus a domino facit coenam; et manducaverunt et biberunt?

<sup>a</sup>  marg. inhabitare commemoratur.

<sup>b</sup>  marg. Acoza.

<sup>c</sup>  marg. ergo.

<sup>d</sup>  marg. parenter.

<sup>e</sup>  marg. Ocholach.

APPENDIX B

Non pro laude sua hospitio rogat, nec novit blandire strenuus, aut procacem medelam sapiens affectatur, sed propositis iracundiis quibus exagitati praesidere terrens sortiti sunt, nunc confitetur unum universitatis deum, benedictum eum confitentur, sed continuatione sermonis etiam praeteritum aevum declarant, quoniam et nunc et a principio ipse est sine immutatione, vel diminutione benedictionis, quem nos ipsi suspectum habuimus, nunc vero absit omnis invidia. Suscepta igitur eorum poenitentia, mensura participantur dulcedines pro existimatione, pro veritatis autem allegoriae, pro hospitio quid ipse facit convocando esse trans vos,<sup>a</sup> qui non perdurant in delictis, ut pote propitialis et clementissimae naturae, hoc modo eos suscipiendo pro cibis et potis disciplinae, atque sapientiae spectaculis saginant, quarum esuriam et sitim confessi, jam nunc fruniscuntur, ut qui destinati perrexerunt, cum salute venerunt. Quidam adversarii mores ad animam nocendam, sed ex contagio virtutis sine dispendio etiam profecerunt, unde cum salute liberatos, a plurimis vitiorum nexibus insinuat curatos, praecipue et uno medicamentorum remedio pietatis.

ix. (Gen. xxvi. 32) Quare pergentibus pueris Isaac, venientes qui quartum puteum foderunt, dixerunt non invenisse aquam?

<sup>a</sup> margin. strenuos.

<sup>b</sup> φιλοφρονείται . . . αὐτοὺς om. Catt.

<sup>c</sup> ἀλῶν . . . μεταδίδωσι om. Catt.: v rba σωτηρίαν τὴν ἀπὸ τῶν ὄρκων (ἀνθρώπων Bur.) ἔχοντες add. Catt. Lips. et Burney.

Φιλοφρονείται δὲ ταῖς εὐωχίαις αὐτοῦς<sup>b</sup> οὐ διὰ τὸν ἔπαινον· οὐ γὰρ κολακείαν ἢ τὴν ἄμουσον θεραπείαν ὁ σοφὸς ἀσπάζεται ἀποδεξάμενος δὲ αὐτῶν τὴν μετάνοιαν ἀλῶν καὶ τραπέζης μεταδίδωσι.<sup>c</sup>

Wendland, p. 86, from Procopius, f. 118<sup>r</sup> (Migne, p. 415); also in Harris, p. 42 (with omissions and variants indicated in footnotes), from Cat. Reg. 1825 (Mangey ii. 675), and Cat. Lips. coll. 326-327, and Cat. Burney, f. 56.

Harris adds a Latin frag. from Cat. Zephyri, p. 82 (= beg. of section):

Non quod laudaretur ab illis; nullo enim obsequio vel adulatione sapiens commovetur, sed illorum poenitentiam amplexatus.

OLD LATIN ADDITIONS

Quod et juramentum vocat, et civitatem, puteum juramenti, fallit. Post juramenta auctoris, quicquid agit justus, hoc foedere firmari sperat secundum quadrinitatis virtutem. Unde etiam valde ait severissimam vocamus virtutem, spectatissimam ad capessendum intellectum: obscure autem sensuality occupantem pro incertis eorum momentis, cunctantur enim, et immutationem capiunt variis conditionum nutibus. Nuntiat itaque divinus sermo post nativitatem quarti filii, stabilitatem non sterilitatem in creatione maxime incorporalis et intelligibilis substantiae: haec etenim ad quartum usque tenditur. Sensualis vero quinione incipit, quam non sine mercede nominavit. Naturaliter itaque quoniam finis incorporalium usque in quarto est, totius autem rei, et totius disciplinae terminus hominum incertus est, deo autem manifestus, ideo in quarto puteo non inveniunt aquam. Sicut enim puteum fodientes aquam requirunt, ita enim disciplinam sectantes finem explorant, quod est impossibile hominibus revelari. Et quidem superbi metientes, solent affirmare se summos esse Musicos, summos grammaticos, transisse vero et Philosophiae grumos, et sapientiae et totius disciplinae et virtutis metas. Astutus vero, et non sui cultor vel sui laudator, confitetur ex aperto quantum deest a fine, et juratus tali foedere conscientiam commendat, quod nihil perfecte homo nosse potest. Hic aliena loquitur qui tot capitulis se existimat tantum scire, finis enim scientiae deo tantum recondita est. Quem etiam testem animae vocat, quoniam pura conscientia confitetur suam ignorantiam. Sola enim novit anima, quoniam nihil novit firmiter. Juramentum igitur nihil est aliud: testimonium dei fidele, atque solidissimum. Si fidele est, certum est, nec placet illi incerta credulitas.

Ἀμήχανον ὑπὸ φύσεως ἀνθρωπίνης τῆς οἰασοῦν ἐπιστήμης τὸ τέλος· οὐδὲν γὰρ ἄνθρωπος ἄκρως οἶδεν ἀλλ' οἶεται μόνον εἰδέναι· τὸ δὲ τέλος τῆς γνώσεως ἀνάκειται μόνῳ θεῷ.

Harris, p. 43, from Mai, Script. Vet. vii. 107 e Cod. Vat. 1553, Φίλωνος· ἐκ τῶν ἐν Γενέσει ζητημάτων.

x. (Gen. xxvi. 34) Quare Esau quadragenarius accepit uxorem Judith filiam Beher Cethei, et Barhatnath filiam Elom Heuaei?

Nulla quaestio requiritur ex dicto, relatio autem intelligi-

APPENDIX B

bilis<sup>a</sup> naturaliter continet. Primo quod aequiparatus annorum numerus nuptiis aptus est, et in hoc festinat pervenire. Quis enim non optabit usque ad verbum vel ad quantum videtur imitare potiora. Ut ita similitudinem rerum attingat, ita in hoc pravus et commentis eruditus subornatur insignium rerum titulis, cum sit denotationis non extraneus. Primus gradus ambitur per fallaciam deferendo, et utpote ignorando insipiens lucem et tenebras, nigrum et splendidum, bonum et malum, et alia hujuscemodi aequa ipse per numerum, possibilitate vero non solum disparia, verum etiam contraria. Et haec quidem digna zelo<sup>b</sup> tartareo. Inde putans prima sua commenta dirigi, et altera superducit consilia, quorum reatum verborum suffragio caelat. Accepit ergo duas uxores, quas Chaldaei vocant Judith et Basemath. Quarum una interpretatur laudatrix, secunda nominata. Vides qua festinat viri similitudo? Se laudari atque nominari. Ego non negabo Hebraica lingua, et Syrorum loquela Basemath, suaviter interpretari. Nominata autem Sema dicitur, non Basemath. Hoc ergo pravus ambitur, non veritate, sed fictis alatus argumentis. Nigrae enim generationis est Cetheus qui excessus interpretatur, cujus merita sectando, nomine scilicet tantum et vanae gloriae, digno domicilio habetur bestiarum. Hevet enim serpens interpretantur, excelsus atque mentis Cetheus et bestiarum merita figurae sunt ferarum, quibus cari sunt famuli iracundiae et concupiscentiae, adeo aptissimae interpretantur imas atque inferiores sortitus concupiscentiae regiones. Alterius autem uxoris nominatae pater Elom arietis est impetus, pro auspicio furiae.

xi. (Gen. xxvi. 35) Quare has ipsas dixit contendere Isaac et Rebeckae?

Non utique ex consensu, nec enim consonat pondus figurae et concupiscentiae auctori mentis. Veruntamen consistere conantur litigia adversus bonorum perseverantiam, quae est Rebecka, et turbelas et contentiones opponant, scientes illorum regimen suam esse dissipationem.

Addition to QG iv. 203 on Gen. xxvii. 15 (Aucher, pp. 406-407).

Quos solet philosophia summos vocare secundum malitiam et virtutem. Videtur ergo de industria dixisse, et ex aperto :

<sup>a</sup> l. intelligibilia.

<sup>b</sup> margin. caelo illo.

OLD LATIN ADDITIONS

rurali vero stolam aptam non esse, ideo apud matrem fuit, necdum illi donata, sed justo reservata. Tu si unam habere speciem laudabilem quasi spectabilem aut pretextam, vel urbanam censuram caeteris omnibus vituperabilis constitutus. Fautrix vero mater animae perseverantia, decernens nequando imbrui depereat, simul et unifaria contingat ruina, apud se reservando et custodiendo stolam asseverantur, qua accepta ornat palaesticum quem sollicite applicat ut patri. Et sicut est familiarissima res musicae cithara, gubernatori temonum retinaculum et medico collyrium non tempeloxii plenum,<sup>a</sup> qui cupiunt etiam naves aureas habere, et medicamentorum horrea plena, ita certa censura est, et elegans pulchritudo, quasi non quidem proprium praedium alterius, sed proprium artificis digne et prospere utentes.<sup>b</sup>

Addition to QG iv. 210 on Gen. xxvii. 22 (Aucher, pp. 412-413).

Manus autem possunt esse indocti ad effecturam, multa enim inofficiose tentant agere, non ex integritate cordis, aliquoties enim et religata sibi pravi resistunt, et senectuti deferunt, et amicitiae jura conservant. Sed haec pro sua avaritia gerunt, ut captata opportunitate quosdam amplius decipiant. Ita falluntur minus sobrii modico testimonio seducti, et frivola mirantes. Cautus autem et gerendorum causas, et consilia rerum requirit, vituperabilia reprehendo, doctus et responsis divinae scripturae quae permittit justitiarum titulos juste sectari quam injuste.

Addition to QG iv. 232 on Gen. xxvii. 38 (Aucher, p. 430).<sup>c</sup>

Ego me confiteor legisse in Hebraeo compunctionem et taciturnitatem eiisdem literis declaratam: et aliud incredibile in psalmoza lxiiii. Non habet tibi dicit hymnus, sed tibi silet hymnus deus in Sion. Et aliud mirum non est dictum soli stare, sed tacere ejisdem aspibus quibus etiam hymnus tacet. Vide quantam allegoriam compunctio requirit.

<sup>a</sup>  marg. in utroque exemplari ita legebatur; forte non tantopere locupletum erat legendum.

<sup>b</sup>  l. utentis.

<sup>c</sup>  Aucher: "Addit Interp. ex se."

INDEX

References are to Book and Section

ABBREVIATIONS

E = Quaestiones in Exodum

fig. = figurative

G = Quaestiones in Genesin

gen. = general

lit. = literal

misc. = miscellaneous

n. = note

sym. = symbolizes, is symbolized

- Aaron, sym. joy, G iv. 16 ;
sym. word, E ii. 27, 44 ;
is possessed by prophetic spirit, E ii. 105
- Abel, name = "brought and offered up," G i. 78 ;
sym. good man, G i. 59-68
- Abihu, name = "truth from God," E ii. 27 ; sym. help from God, E ii. 27
- Abimelech, name = "father-king," G iv. 176 ; sym. foolish man, G iv. 61-70 ;
sym. progressive man, G iv. 188
- Abraham, name = "elect father of sound," G iii. 43 ; sym. wise and virtuous man, G iii-iv pas-
- sim* ; sym. knowledge acquired through teaching, G iv. 144 ; founder of race of Israel, G iii. 3, iv. 2, 60 ; friend of God, G iv. 33
- Abram, name = "uplifted father," G iii. 43
- Academics, G iii. 3
- Active and Passive, G iii. 3, 18, iv. 160, 177, E i. 8, ii. 33 (see also Number-symbolism, Woman)
- Ada, G i. 77
- Adam, see Man
- Aelian, E ii. 28 n.
- Aetiology, G iv. 22
- Age, see Life
- Agriculture. G ii. 66, 67, iv. 90, 189, E i. 6

INDEX

- Air, G i. 64, ii. 64, 81, iv. 5, E ii. 34, 56, 85, 88, 90, 117-120 (see also Elements)
- Alienation from God, virtue, etc., G ii. 44, iv. 4, 8, 18, 44, 179, 214, 242, 245, E i. 23
- Allegory, see Symbolism
- Allinson, P. G., G iv. 120 n.
- Altar, gen., E i. 10, 12; at Sinai, E ii. 90; of Tabernacle, sym. sense-perceptible things, E ii. 98-102
- Ammon, name = "from the people," G iv. 58; sym. sense-perception, G iv. 58
- Anarchy and Authority, G iv. 218, 226
- Angels, sym. two chief powers of God, G iii-iv passim; incorporeal beings, G i. 92, iii. 11, 27, iv. 188, E ii. 13; as Logos, see Logos; sons of God, G i. 92; as word of God, G iv. 90, 91; misc. G iii. 34
- Anger, counsellor of evil, E ii. 100; needs reason, E ii. 115
- Animals, contrasted with men, G i. 18, 23, 74, 80, 94, ii. 9, 27, 58, 60, iv. 42, 165, 198, E i. 16, ii. 25, 51; kindness to, E ii. 11, 12
- Antelope, permitted for food, E ii. 101
- Apathy, G iv. 15, 217, 228
- Appearance and Reality, G iv. 213, 229, 232, 243, E i. 23
- Aquarius, E ii. 76
- Arabs, practise circumcision, G iii. 48
- Arbok (Bibl. Kirjath Arba), name = "of four," G iv. 72
- Archery, a prop to the cowardly, G iv. 197
- Archetypes, G i. 54, iii. 42, iv. 1, 19, 110, 115 n., 128, E i. 10, ii. 51, 52, 58, 82, 90 (see also Incorporality)
- Aries, E ii. 76
- Aristotle, Aristotelians, G i. 100 n., iii. 16, E i. 7 n. (De Gen. An. 775 a), ii. 73 n., 124 n.
- Arithmetic, E ii. 103
- Ark of Noah, construction and parts, G ii. 2-34; as counterpart of human body, G ii. 7, 19, 25, 27, 39, 46
- Ark of Tabernacle, sym. intelligible world, E ii. 41, 53-68; mercy-seat of ark sym. beneficent power of God, E ii. 60-68; poles of ark sym. order of nature, E ii. 57, 58; rings of ark, E ii. 56; testimonies (laws) in ark, E ii. 59; wreathed wave of ark sym. change, E ii. 55 (see also Cherubim)
- Ark of Temple, G ii. 4
- Armenia, G i. 12

INDEX

- Arrogance, see Pride
- Arts and Crafts, G iv. 228, 238, E ii. 3, 73, 110
- Ashes, sym. soul, G iv. 28
- Ass, sym. body, E ii. 12
- Assyria, language, G i. 13
- Astrology, Astronomy, G iii. 1, 43, iv. 88, E i. 1, ii. 81 (see also Chaldaeans)
- Atheism, G i. 69, iv. 45
- Athletic Contests and Training, lit. and fig., G iii. 20, iv. 29, 129, 140, 228, 240, E i. 1
- Atonement, Day of, G iv. 110 n.
- Aucher, J. B., notes passim
- Autumn, see Equinox, Time
- Babylonians, inhabit Mesopotamia, G iv. 243
- Bar between pillars of Tabernacle, sym. Logos, E ii. 89
- Barley, sym. character, G iv. 189, E i. 1 n.
- Barrenness, lit. and fig., G iii. 54, iv. 209, E ii. 19
- Bases of lampstand in Tabernacle, see Lampstand
- Bearing-poles of ark, see Ark
- Belief, see Faith, Opinion
- Bell, see High Priest
- Belly, G i. 77, E ii. 100, 118
- Bethuel, name = "daughter of her God," G iv. 17, 243; sym. wisdom, G iv. 17, 243
- Bezaleel, inspired by God, G i. 90
- Birth, second birth of Moses, E ii. 46
- Birth-right, see Primogeniture
- Bitter Herbs of Passover, sym. psychic change, E i. 15
- Bitumen on Noah's ark, G ii. 4
- Black, sym. air, E ii. 85, 117, 123
- Blessing, G iv. 123, 135, 196, 212, 214, 215, 219, 226, 234, E ii. 83 (see also God)
- Blindness, lit. and fig., G iv. 21, 40, 41, 121, 147, 168, 192, 196, 231, 245, E ii. 51; sym. by Sodom, G iv. 23, 31 (see also Eye, Sight)
- Blood, G i. 67, ii. 59, E i. 12, ii. 14, 33; sym. kinship of soul, E ii. 35, 36
- Body, structure and function, G i. 28, 48, 50, 53, ii. 2-7, 19, 20, 46, 55, 59, iii. 5, 48, 99, 200, E ii. 33, 74; body contrasted with soul, G ii. 69, iii. 10, iv. 1, 11, 36, 45, 74, 75, 77, 78, 80, 83, 91, 152, 153, 175, 178, 186, 188, 231, E i. 19, 46, 54, 55, 120 (see also Blood, Brain, Eye, Face, Head, Heart, Nose, Tongue)
- Boiling, see Food
- Bond of the universe, G ii. 4, E ii. 74, 89, 90, 118 (see also Logos, Nature)
- Bow, G ii. 64
- Bowls of lampstand in Tabernacle, see Lampstand

INDEX

- Bracelet, sym. decad, G iv. 118; sym. memory, G iv. 109
- Brain, as seat of mind, G ii. 3, E ii. 124
- Branches of lampstand in Tabernacle, see Lampstand
- Bread, sym. frugality, G iv. 205; sym. health, E ii. 18; sym. necessary food, E ii. 72
- Breast, as seat of heart, E ii. 115
- Breastplate of judgment (Lo-geion), see High Priest
- Bréhier, E., G iv. 211 n., Appendix A passim
- Bronze vessels of altar, see Altar
- Buffalo, permitted for food, E ii. 101
- Building, G i. 26
- Bulls, for sacrifice, E ii. 99
- Bury, R. G., G iv. 164 n.
- Cain, sym. wickedness, G i. 58-81, iv. 4
- Calf, as sacrifice, E ii. 32
- Camel, sym. memory, G iv. 92, 94, 106, 109, 136, 141
- Canaan, name="being out of their minds," G iv. 88; name="merchant" or "mediator," G ii. 65, 77; name="their appearance," G iv. 72
- Cancer (constellation), E ii. 76
- Capricorn, E ii. 76
- Caution, E ii. 13
- Cave, sym. mind, G iv. 80
- Censers of table in Tabernacle, see Table
- Centre of universe, G i. 10
- Chaldaeae, sym. astrology, G iii. 1, iv. 88
- Chaldaeian Language (i.e. Hebrew), G iii. 38, 43, 49, iv. 1, 17, 97, 147, 239, E ii. 68
- Chaldaeans, inhabit Mesopotamia, G iv. 243
- Chance, G i. 78, iii. 3, iv. 43, 76, E ii. 55
- Change, see Rest and Movement
- Chariot-driving, G iv. 218
- Cherubim in Paradise, G i. 57
- Cherubim on ark of Tabernacle, name="great recognition" or "knowledge poured out in abundance," E ii. 62; sym. two chief powers of God, E ii. 62-68
- Chosen Race, see Israel
- Cicero, G ii. 7 n.
- Circumcision, lit. and fig., G iii. 46-52, E ii. 2
- City, sym. soul, G iv. 192
- City-life and Civilization, G iv. 47, E i. 1, ii. 25
- Clans, E i. 3
- Clean and Unclean, G ii. 12, 52, iii. 48, E i. 18
- Clothing, lit. and fig., G iv. 203, 213
- Cloud at Sinai, see Sinai
- Colson, F. H., G iii. 48 n., 56 n., iv. 8 n., 159 n., E ii. 4 n., 13 n., 20 n., 93 n.

INDEX

- Column, see Pillar
- Commandments, gen., G, E passim; contrasted with precepts, rights, laws, G iv. 184; written on tablets of stone, E ii. 41
- Communion, E ii. 39, 69, 118
- Community, E ii. 35, 36, 78
- Conception of children, G i. 25, ii. 7, 14, iii. 47, 56, iv. 27, 154 (see also Procreation)
- Concord, see Community
- Congregation, E i. 10
- Conscience, G iv. 202, E ii. 13
- Consecration, E ii. 51, 71
- Consent, sym. by Lot's daughter, G iv. 55-58
- Consolation, G iv. 146
- Consonants, G iii. 43, iv. 117 (see also Vowels)
- Constancy, sym. by Rebekah, G iv. 92-205, 239-241
- Contemplative Life, G iv. 31, 47, 138-140, 146, 187, 193, E ii. 40
- Contemplative Race, see Israel
- Continencc, sym. by Jacob's wife, G iv. 243 (see also Virtue)
- Convention, contrasted with nature, G iv. 184
- Conviction, see Conscience
- Cosmopolitanism, G iii. 39
- Counsel, sym. by Lot's daughter, G iv. 55-58, 121; sym. by Rebekah, G iv. 239
- Courage, see Virtue
- Covenant between God and man, G ii. 10, iii. 40, 42, 60, E ii. 34, 106
- Covering, see Veils
- Creation of world, G i. 1-3, 19, ii. 13, 16, 31, iii. 39, 49, iv. 51, 110, 164, E i. 1, 23, ii. 42, 46, 52, 70, 73; took place in spring, E i. 1 (see also God)
- Cube, see Number-symbolism
- Cubit, E ii. 111 and n.
- Cups of table in Tabernacle, see Table
- Curse, G iv. 219, E ii. 5, 6
- Curtains of Tabernacle, sym. four elements, E ii. 84-88, 92
- Cush, name = "sparse earth," G ii. 81; son of Ham and father of Nimrod, G ii. 81, 82
- Death, lit. and fig., G i. 16, 45, 51, 56, 70, 74-76, ii. 7, 9, 12, 23, 45, 57, iii. 52, iv. 45, 46, 73, 77, 78, 95, 152, 173, 235, 238, 240, E i. 3, 38
- Deception, E ii. 54; is sometimes justified, G iv. 206, 228
- Dedication, see Consecration
- Deer, permitted for food, E ii. 101
- Desert, see Wilderness
- Desire, see Sensual Pleasure
- Dew, sym. Logos, G iv. 215
- Didrachm (Heb. shekel), G iv. 110
- Dio Chrysostom, E ii. 81 n.
- Dipper, used for "north," E ii. 101

INDEX

- Discipline, see Education, Training
- Disease, see Health, Medicine
- Divination, G iv. 90
- Divinization, of soul, E ii. 40
- Division, in nature, G i. 64, iii. 5, 6, 15, 23
- Door, sym. mind's escape from sense, E i. 22
- Door-posts, sym. reason, E i. 12
- Doubt, see Faith
- Dove, sym. reason and virtue, G ii. 38-44, iii. 3, 7
- Drink, see Food
- Drinking-trough, sym. learning, G iv. 234
- Drunkness, lit. and fig., G ii. 68, 69, 73, iv. 218, 225, E ii. 15, 118
- Dryness and Moisture, E i. 8
- Duality, see Number-symbolism
- Dyad, see Number-symbolism
- Ear, G i. 77, ii. 3, 13, iii. 32, iv. 110, 118, 239, E ii. 34 (see also Hearing)
- Ear-ring, sym. learning, G iv. 109; sym. monad, G iv. 118
- Earth, gen., G i. 64, ii. 18, iii. 3-6, 49, iv. 87, 215, E ii. 56, 85, 88, 90, 117-120; divided into sixty parts by astrologers, E ii. 81; sym. body, G ii. 66, iv. 193; sym. desire, G iv. 191; sym. good and evil, G ii. 81; sym. soul, G iv. 28 (see also Elements)
- East, G i. 7, iv. 149, E ii. 101
- Ecstasy, see Inspiration, Sleep
- Eden, name = "delicacies," G i. 7, 56
- Edom, name = "flame-coloured" or "earthy," G iv. 171; sym. wickedness, G iv. 171
- Education, gen., G iii. 26, 27, 30, 35, 50, iv. 16, 39, 45, 95, 98, 100-110, 114, 118, 123, 137, 144, 154, 156, 175, 191, 195, 208, 210, 217, 242-245, E i. 4, ii. 3, 4, 13, 16, 19, 25, 34, 36; encyclical or school studies, G iii. 19-24, 31, 35, 59, 60, iv. 203, E i. 5, ii. 103; threefold method of education through instruction (sym. by Abraham), self-teaching (sym. by Isaac) and practice (sym. by Jacob), G iii. 50, 51, 59, 88, iv. 91, 93, 122, 123, 127-129, 144, 175, 238, E i. 5
- Egypt, name = "oppressing," G iv. 177; sym. external goods and senses, G iii. 16, 19, iv. 177; Israel's exodus from Egypt, E i. passim
- Egyptians, G iii. 47, 48, E i. 1, 8, 10, 18, ii. 2
- Einarson, B., G iv. 159 n.
- Elders, seventy, E ii. 27, 31, 44

INDEX

- Election of Israel, see Israel
- Elements, four elements (fire, air, water, earth) gen., G i. 64, 71, iii. 3, 6, 15, 49, iv. 8, 51, E i. 4, ii. 56, 73, 81, 86, 117-120; sym. by curtains of Tabernacle, E ii. 84-88; sym. by garment of high priest, E ii. 107-124; sym. by veil of Holy of Holies, E ii. 92-94; fifth element (quintessence), G iii. 6, iv. 8, E ii. 73, 85; sublunary elements (air, water, earth), G iii. 3, 15, iv. 8, E ii. 33, 78, 81, 90, 91, 109
- Elijah, ascends to heaven, G i. 86
- Emerald Stones, see High Priest
- Encyclical Studies, see Education
- Enemies, see Foreigners
- Ennead, see Number-symbolism
- Enoch, G i. 82-86
- Enosh, name="man," G i. 79
- Envy, G iv. 101, 103, 107, 142, 191-194, 226, 227, 239
- Ephod, see High Priest
- Ephron, name="dust," G iv. 79; sym. corporeal natures, G iv. 79
- Epicharmus, quoted on sin, G iv. 203
- Equality and Inequality, G ii. 5, 12, iii. 49, iv. 35, 157, 216, E i. 10, 15, ii. 10, 33, 64, 81; as mother of justice, E i. 6; proportioned equality, G iv. 102, 125, E i. 6 n. (see also Justice, Number-symbolism)
- Equinox and Solstice, G ii. 17, 31, 33, 45, 47, iii. 3, E ii. 56, 75, 113 n.; vernal and autumnal equinoxes contrasted, E i. 1
- Esau, name="thing made," G iv. 161; name="oak," G iv. 161, 206, 207; sym. ignorance and evil, G iv. 161-238 passim
- Eternity, E ii. 20, 114 (see also Immortality)
- Ether, see Heaven
- Ethiopians, practise circumcision, G iii. 48
- Euphrates, sym. growth, justice, spirituality, G i. 12, 13; sym. pleasantness, G iv. 243
- Euripides, quoted on good and evil, G iv. 203; referred to (?) as "tragic poet," G iv. 211
- Evening, as time for sacrifice, E i. 11
- Evil, see Good
- Exodus from Egypt, E i. passim; speed of, E i. 14
- External Goods, G ii. 55, 71, 76, 80, iii. 43, iv. 33, 43, 77, 80, 82, 108, 121, 131, 147-149, 186, 192, 215, 217, E ii. 4, 106

INDEX

- Eye, of body or soul, G i. 39, 113, iv. 2, 5, 8, 21, 22, 32, 40, 129, 138, 141, 196, 239, E ii. 3, 24, 39, 52, 80, 82 (see also Sight)
- Face, G i. 5, iii. 29, 40, 55, iv. 32, 99, E ii. 13, 24
- Faith and Doubt, G iii. 58, iv. 17, 91, 184, E i. 12
- Family, law, life, morality of, G ii. 26, 60, iii. 20, 21, 23, 48, 52, 61, iv. 56, 61, 66, 86, 88, 132, 145, 154, 165, 200, 202, 218, 243, 245, E i. 10, ii. 3, 8, 35, 36
- Fate, G i. 100, iii. 13 (see also Chance, Necessity)
- Fatherhood, see Family
- Fatness, sym. external goods, G iv. 215; sym. piety, E ii. 15
- Fear, G i. 72, 76, ii. 56, iii. 9, 10, iv. 15, 16, 19, 51, 197, 230, E i. 15, 22, ii. 21, 22, 51; fear of God, E ii. 21
- Fertility, see Growth, Procreation
- Festivals, gen., E i. 1, 5, 9 (see also Passover)
- Field, lit. and fig., G iv. 214
- Finger (measure), E ii. 111 n.
- Fig-tree, sym. pleasure, G i. 41
- Fire, G iii. 49, iv. 51-53, E i. 18, ii. 28, 47, 85, 90, 98, 118 (see also Elements)
- Firmament, as sense-perceptible heaven, E ii. 37
- First-fruits and First-offerings, G iv. 110, 118, E i. 1, ii. 7, 31, 51, 101, 102
- Flesh, see Body, Sacrifice, Sensual Pleasure
- Flight, lit. and fig., E i. 23, ii. 40
- Flood, Noah's, G ii. 13-64
- Flour, as offering to God, E ii. 102
- Flowers, see High Priest
- Food and Drink, lit. and fig., G ii. 58, 67, iv. 1, 6, 9, 35, 82, 109, 124, 140, 168, 170, 175, 191, 192, 198, 205, 213, 222, 239, E i. 14, ii. 8, 12, 14, 18, 39, 69, 71, 72, 118; animals permitted for food listed, E ii. 101
- Foot, sym. soul, E i. 19
- Force, sym. piety, E i. 21
- Foreigners, proper treatment of, G iii. 62, iv. 2, 8-10, 20, 61, 67, 124, E i. 5, ii. 2, 3, 11, 12, 22
- Forgiveness, G iv. 70, 110
- Forms, see Incorporeality
- Fortune, see Chance
- Fountain, lit. and fig., G i. 3, ii. 29, 64, 67, iii. 27, iv. 59, 94, 100, 138, 191-195, 231, E ii. 111
- Freedom and Slavery, lit. and fig., G iii. 10, 22, 39, 50, iv. 15, 76, 103, 114, 120, 185, 206, 216, 229, 236, 237, E i. 4, 10, 15; freedom of speech E ii. 13
- Früchtel, L., G iii. 38 n.,

INDEX

- 48 n., iv. 74 n., 100 n., E ii. 15 n.
- Frugality, see Virtue
- Furnace, sym. passion, G iv. 53
- Games, sym. joy, G iv. 188
- Garments, see Clothing
- Gazelle, permitted for food, E ii. 101
- Gentiles, sym. wicked, G iii. 17 ; time of, G iii. 60
- Geometry, Geometricians, E ii. 61, 93, 103
- Gerar (Gerara), name = "hedge," G iv. 176, 185 ; name = "region of God-loving thoughts," G iv. 59 ; name = "sojourn," G iv. 195 ; sym. external goods, G iv. 185
- Giants, G i. 92, ii. 82
- Gifts, made to God, G i. 62, iv. 148, E ii. 7, 72 ; given by God, see God
- Gihon, sym. moderation, G i. 12, 13
- Ginzberg, Louis, G ii. 56 n.
- Girdle, sym. drawing together of passions, E i. 19
- Glory, E ii. 45 ; distinguished from honour, E ii. 107
- Goat, as sacrifice, E ii. 101 ; sym. repentance, E i. 8 ; sym. water, G iii. 3, 7
- God: (a) attributes and functions :
 above all things, G iv. 2, 3, 140, 214, E ii. 40, 68 accommodates human nature, G iv. 24 active, E ii. 33
 all-knowing, G i. 69, iv. 22, 24, 130 all-powerful, G ii. 47, iii. 1, 56, iv. 1, 17, E i. 7 almighty, G i. 100, iv. 130
 artificer, artist, G i. 28, ii. 7, iv. 80, 196, E ii. 68 benefactor, beneficent, benevolent, G i. 55, 91, 96, ii. 10, 13, 17, 25, 50, 51, 53, 60, 75, iii. 41, 42, 45, iv. 8, 19, 25, 26, 53, 101, 127, 179, E i. 1, 3, 4, 7, 22, 23, ii. 2, 13, 32, 51, 61, 66 best, E i. 20
 blessed and happy, G ii. 54, iv. 19, 130, 180, 188, 214 blesses man, G ii. 212, 214 cause (of all), G i. 78, 100, iii. 34, iv. 8, 25, 87, 160, E ii. 51 certain, E ii. 5 champion, E i. 8
 charioteer, G ii. 34, iv. 51 creator, G i. 28, 55, 58, 64, ii. 5, 7, 13, 15, 32, 34, 47, 75, iii. 1, 5, 39, 48, 49, iv. 1, 2, 8, 42, 80, 87, 89, 114, 130, 138, 188, E i. 1, 19, 20, ii. 33, 66, 83, 85
 elder than monad, E ii. 68 eternal, G ii. 10, 12, E ii. 122 existent (ὁ ὢν, ὁ ὄντως ὢν), G i. 54, 55, 100, ii. 53, 54, 62 n., iii. 41, iv. 1, 2, 4, 8, 22, 138, E i. 20, ii. 5, 47, 61, 63, 67, 68, 122 father of graces, E ii. 61

INDEX

- father of universe or mankind, G i. 54, 58, 60, 99, ii. 13, 25, 34, 41, 52, 62, iii. 40, 42, 45, 48, 49, iv. 1, 12, 20, 29, 30, 42, 51, 54, 68, 70, 87-89, 99, 102, 111, 114, 130, 152, 153, 188, 200 (?), E i. 1, ii. 2, 3, 26, 28, 30-32, 37, 39, 46, 49, 51, 64, 69, 71, 83, 101, 107
 father of wisdom, G iv. 140 fills the soul with light, virtue, etc., G iv. 4, 18, 102, 107, 115, 130, 152, E ii. 51 first cause, E ii. 7, 20, 40, 47 foreknowing, G iv. 212 (?)
 good, G ii. 13, 43, 54, 60, iv. 1 gracious, bestowing grace, G ii. 10, 13, 15, 16, 43, 50, 54, 63, iii. 3, 4, 56, iv. 19, 47, 65, 70, 96, 102, 121, 180, 189, 231, E i. 1, 12, 23, ii. 51, 61, 71, 72 holy, G iv. 130
 host, G iv. 8
 housemaster of wisdom, G iv. 59 husband (of soul), E ii. 3 immutable and stable, G i. 42, 93, ii. 54, iii. 41, 55, iv. 1, 53, 127, E ii. 37, 40, 45, 46 impartial to rich and poor, E ii. 99 incomprehensible (in essence), G iii. 42, iv. 1, 2, 8, E ii. 37, 45, 47, 67 invisible, G iii. 48, iv. 140, E ii. 37 judge, G i. 89, 94, ii. 11, 14-16, 54, 60, iii. 10, 42, iv. 23, 25, 49, 52, 53, 180, E i. 10, 22, 23, ii. 10 (see also power) just, E i. 3 kind, see gracious
 king and ruler, G ii. 16, 51, 75, iii. 2, 34, 39, 43, iv. 1, 3, 24, 25, 53, 87, 184, E i. 23, ii. 62, 66 (see also power) lawgiver, G iii. 47, iv. 24, E ii. 42, 66 liberator, E i. 10
 lord, G iii. 43, iv. 118, 214, E i. 20 (see also (d) below) lover of mankind, G ii. 54, 60, 75, E i. 7, ii. 18 lover of virtue, G ii. 13, iii. 8 measure of all things, G iv. 8 (see Logos) mediator, G iv. 23 (see Logos) merciful, G i. 76, 84, 89, iv. 180, 233 most high, G ii. 62, iii. 34 near to virtuous souls, G iv. 18, 20, 26, 140, E ii. 28, 29, 39, 96 not (direct) cause of evil, G i. 68, 78, 89, 100, E i. 23 not of human form, E ii. 42 one (simple and unique), G ii. 54, 62, iii. 55, iv. 2, 8, E ii. 2, 33, 37, 66, 68

INDEX

- overseer, G ii. 27, 60, iv. 42, 65 philanthropic, see lover of mankind physician, G ii. 29 pilot, G ii. 34
 preserver and sustainer, G ii. 34, iv. 23 protector, G ii. 67, iv. 42, 51, 76, E i. 8, ii. 24, 69, 71, 72 providence, G iii. 3, 18, 43, iv. 25, 29, 42, 65, 87, 88 quiet, G iv. 140
 reformer, G iv. 12, 65
 saviour, G ii. 13, 25, 60, iii. 10, 15, iv. 54, 90, 131, 233, E i. 10, 23, ii. 2, 51 sower of spiritual seed, G iv. 17, 68, 99, 189, E ii. 3 speaker, G iv. 140, E ii. 68 splendid, E ii. 67
 standing, E ii. 37
 teacher, G ii. 16, 49, iii. 43, iv. 21, 24, 45, 101, 118, 121, 140, 184, 208, 209, E ii. 13, 52 triune in appearance, G iv. 2, 4, 8, 30 truth, God of, G iv. 130 unbegotten and uncreated, G i. 54, ii. 12, 16, iv. 1, E ii. 32 unbribable, G iv. 23, 76, E ii. 32 unknown, see incomprehensible unmixed, E ii. 33
 visible to virtuous souls, G iv. 1, 2, 4, E i. 20, ii. 32, 39, 45, 47, 51, 61, 67 without envy, G i. 55, iv. 101 without malice, G ii. 13 without need, G iv. 188, E i. 22 without passion, G i. 95
 (b) glory of God, E ii. 45, 47
 (c) Logos of God, see Logos
 (d) names of God (i.e. God and Lord), G i. 57, ii. 16, 51, 53, 75, iii. 1, iv. 21, 53, 87, E ii. 62, 68 (see also (f))
 (e) nature and God, see Nature
 (f) power of God, esp. two chief powers or attributes, creative and royal (expressed by names "God" and "Lord," and sym. by cherubim on ark), G i. 54, 57, 89, ii. 16, 51, 53, 75, iii. 39, 42, 48, iv. 2, 4, 8, 9, 10, 12, 20, 25, 26, 30, 33, 53, 87, E i. 23 n., ii. 37, 47, 51, 61-68, 83; creative power older than royal power, E ii. 62; two chief powers subdivided into four powers, E ii. 68
 (g) voice of God, E ii. 16, 48
 (h) Word of God, see Logos
 Gods of Gentiles, G i. 36, iv. 2, E i. 8, 20, ii. 5, 26 n. (see also Polytheism)
 Gold, lit. and fig., E ii. 51, 63, 69, 73; sym. incor-

INDEX

- poreal things, E ii. 102, 113
 Gomorrah, name="measure," G iv. 23; sym. barrenness, G ii. 43; sym. Logos, G iv. 23
 Good and Evil, G i. 36, 44, 66, 70, 78, 81, ii. 12, 54, 68, 71, 81, 82, iii. 10, 11, 18, 22, 26, 40, 43, iv. 4, 23, 26, 39, 41, 51, 61, 66, 77, 126, 149, 155, E i. 23, ii. 17, 21, 22; sym. by Jacob and Esau, G iv. 157-245; good, evil and the morally indifferent, G i. 88, ii. 71, 79, iv. 31, 64, 147, 148
 Grace, see God
 Grain, as offering to God, E ii. 11, 102
 Gratitude, see Thanksgiving
 Great Sea (i.e. Atlantic), G ii. 28
 Greed, E ii. 11, 12
 Grief, G i. 72, 76, ii. 56, 57, iii. 10, iv. 15-19, 52, 230, E ii. 51
 Growth, lit. and fig., G ii. 15, 24, iii. 12, iv. 189, E i. 1, 8, ii. 76, 120
 Habit, E ii. 112
 Hagar, name="sojourning," G iii. 19, iv. 147; sym. encyclical studies, G iii. 19, 21-25
 Hairiness, sym. savagery, G iv. 160, 201, 204, 206
 Ham, name="heat," G ii. 65, 77; sym. evil, G i. 88, ii. 65, 70, 74, 79, 81
 Hand, sym. labour, G iv. 210
 Hanging, see Veils
 Happiness, see Joy
 Haran, name="openings," G iv. 239; sym. sense-perception, G iv. 239
 Harmony, in music, see Music; in nature, see Nature; of soul, see Soul
 Harris, J. R., G iii. 48 n., 52 n., iv. 43 n., 51 n., 74 n., 88 n., 100 n., 145 n., 211 n., E ii. 15 n., 50 n., Appendix A passim
 Harvest, in spring, E i. 1
 Haste, G iv. 124, 129, E i. 14, 15, 18, 19
 Havilah, sym. prudence, G i. 13
 Head, lit. and fig., G i. 3, 10, ii. 5, E i. 1, 17, 24, ii. 33, 53, 124; as seat of brain, E ii. 124; as temple of the mind, E ii. 100
 Healing, see Medicine
 Health and Sickness, lit. and fig., G iv. 26, 45, 200, E i. 23, ii. 18, 25
 Hearing, G i. 77, ii. 3, 21, iii. 5, 32, 51, iv. 1, 11, 110, E ii. 16, 34, 112 (see also Ear)
 Hearsay, E ii. 9
 Heart, G ii. 13, iii. 48, E i. 12, ii. 50, 100; as seat of anger, E ii. 115
 Heaven, gen. (incl. ether, planets, stars), G i. 57, 64, ii. 8, 18, iii. 3, 6, 15, 45, iv. 1, 8, 46, 51, 87,

INDEX

- 97, 110, 111, 164, 188, 215, E i. 1, 23, ii. 33, 37, 40, 46, 56, 64, 73-81, 104, 109, 113, 114, 117; immutable, E ii. 83, 91; one and unique, E ii. 81; proper place of soul, G iv. 74, 178; revolves without change of place, E ii. 55; source of wisdom, G iv. 101; spherical, E ii. 81; unsharing in evil, G iv. 157
- Hebdomad, see Number-symbolism
- Hebrew Language, G i. 13, ii. 45, iv. 97, 102, 122, 147, 163, 191, 245 (see also Chaldaean)
- Hebrew Nation, E ii. 6, 22 (see also Israel)
- Hebron, name="joined with women," G iv. 72, 83; name="union," G iv. 83
- Heifer, see Ox
- Heir, of God, G iii. 60
- Heracleitus, on ages of man, G ii. 5; on nature, G iii. 5, iv. 1; on life and death, G iv. 152; on the soul, G iv. 52 n.; plagiarizes Moses, G iv. 152
- Heracles, (=Haik), G i. 92
- Heralds, festival of, E ii. 76(?)
- Heterodox Persons, G iv. 217, E ii. 22, 47
- High Priest, gen., E i. 10, ii. 107-124; sym. joy, G iv. 16; sym. wise man, E ii. 107; laziness of post-Aaronic high priest, E ii. 105
- Clothing and ornaments of high priest:
- bells, sym. harmony of elements, E ii. 120
  - emerald stones of shoulder-pieces, sym. two hemispheres, E ii. 109, 117
  - ephod, E ii. 117 n., 118 n.
  - flowers, sym. earth, E ii. 120
- hyacinth robe, see undergarment
- leaf of gold on forehead, sym. purity, E ii. 121, 123, 124
- linen garment, E ii. 107
- Logeion (breastplate), sym. logos (thought and speech), E ii. 110-116
- pomegranate-shaped tassels, sym. water, E ii. 119, 120
- Revelation and Truth (Urim and Thummim), E ii. 116
- shoulder-pieces, sym. labour and heaven, E ii. 108, 120
- stole of ankle-length, sym. true opinion, E ii. 107
- twelve stones of Logeion, sym. seasons and virtue, E ii. 112-114, 117
- undergarment, sym. air, E ii. 117, 119, 120
- Hippocrates, G iv. 35 n.
- Hittites, name="being beside oneself," G iv. 79, 241; sym. folly, G iv. 79, 241

INDEX

- Holiness and Pollution, G iv. 2, 51, 63-66, 80, 95, 111, 118, 158, 186, 221, 242, E i. 7, 10, 12, ii. 31, 33, 45, 47, 51, 76, 83, 91, 98, 115
- Holy of Holies in Tabernacle, E ii. 68, 91, 95; sym. intelligible world, E ii. 94, 96, 104, 106, 107, 115
- Holy Place in Tabernacle, sym. sense-perceptible world, E ii. 91, 95, 103
- Homer, quoted by name or as "the poet," G i. 76 (Od. xii. 118), iii. 3 (Od. xii. 39-45), 16 (Od. xiv. 258), iv. 2 (Od. xvii. 485-488), 8 (Il. xv. 189), 20 (Od. xv. 74), 183 (Il. iii. 179), 238 (passim), E ii. 102 (Il. passim)
- Homonyms, G iv. 243
- Honour, distinguished from glory, E ii. 67
- Hope, G i. 79, 80, iii. 55
- Horns, (a) on sacrificial animals, sym. battle for truth, E ii. 101
(b) of altar, see Altar
- Hospitality, see Foreigners
- House, sym. desire, E i. 12
- Household Management, G iv. 218, 236
- Humaneness, see Love of Mankind
- Humility, see Pride
- Hunger, lit. and fig., G iv. 169, 170
- Hunter, sym. uncleanness, G iv. 165
- Hur, name = "light," E ii. 44
- Husbandman, see Agriculture
- Hyacinth (colour), sym. air, E ii. 85, 117
- Hypocrisy, G iv. 165
- Ideas, see Incorporeality
- Identity and Difference, E ii. 33
- Idols, E i. 20
- Ignorance, see Knowledge
- Imitation of God or heaven by man, soul, etc., G iv. 29, 53, 115, 147, 151, 164, 181, 188, 196, 200(?), 215, E i. 23, ii. 42, 46, 51, 85, 104, 124
- Immoderateness, see Sensual Pleasure
- Immortality, G i. 45, 51, 55, 70, 76, 85, 86, iii. 27, 53, 57, iv. 46, 66, 103, 152, 153, 164, 169, 244, E i. 15, 23, ii. 38, 39, 56, 114, 118
- Impiety, see Piety
- Impressions, G iv. 1, 20, 24, 30, 94, 117, E ii. 13, 82, 109, 122, 124 (see also Seals)
- Impulse, G iii. 3, 28, 52, iv. 66, 73, 78, 129, 206, 241, E i. 16
- Incense in Tabernacle, E ii. 71
- Incorporeality, of angels, G i. 92, iii. 11, E ii. 13; of forms, principles, etc., G ii. 4, 56, iii. 3, 22, 40, 42, 43, 49, 53, iv. 1, 8, 22, 32, 35, 73, 80, 88, 99, 110, 115, 138, 146, 160,

INDEX

- 168, 170, 188, E i. 8, 22, ii. 33, 37, 52-58, 63, 68, 69, 82, 83, 90, 93-97, 106, 114, 121-123; of souls, G i. 70, 76, 90, ii. 46, 69, iii. 3, 10, 11, 40, 52, 53, iv. 37, 95, 111, 122, 130, 138, 152, 153, E i. 11
- Indifferent, morally, see Good
- Initiation, E ii. 51
- Injustice, see Justice
- Inspiration, G iii. 9, iv. 29, 76, 90, 95, 140, 143, 196, E ii. 3, 29, 33, 40, 43, 49, 105 (see also Prophecy)
- Intelligible World, see Incorporality
- Intention, G iv. 211, 221, 238
- Intermediaries between God and world, G i. 55, 58 (see also God, Logos)
- Involuntary Acts, see Voluntary Acts
- Iron, E ii. 102
- Isaac, sym. joy or laughter, G iii. 38, 53, iv. 17, 122, 138, 147, 148; sym. self-taught or natural virtue, G iii. 59, 88, iv. 91, 122, 123, 127, 129, 144; birth was unique, G iii. 60; founder of nation, G iv. 200; motherless, G iv. 153; prophet, G iv. 196
- Isaiah, quoted as "disciple of Moses," G ii. 43
- Ishmael, name="hearing" or "hearing God," G iii. 32, 59, iv. 147, 245; sym. sense, G iii. 32, iv. 245; sym. sophist, G iii. 33; sym. one taught, G iii. 59
- Israel, name="one who sees" or "seeing God," G iii. 49, iv. 233, E ii. 22 n., 38 n., 47; is chosen nation, G iii. 49, E ii. 38, 42, 43, 46, 76; as nation of priests, E i. 10
- Jacob, name="supplanter," G iv. 163; sym. asceticism, practice, training, G iv. 162-244 passim; sym. orderliness, G iv. 199
- Japheth, name="breadth," G ii. 80; sym. the indifferant, G i. 88, ii. 79
- Jews, practise circumcision, G iii. 48
- Johansson, N., G iii. 44 n.
- John Lydus, Appendix A passim
- John Monachus, Appendix A passim
- John of Damascus, Appendix A passim
- Josephus, E ii. 73 n.
- Joshua, name="salvation," E ii. 43; sym. inspired soul, E ii. 43
- Joy, G i. 79, ii. 25, 27, iv. 8, 16, 18, 19, 92, 101, 116, 140, 147, 175, 188, 243, E i. 3, 15, 23, ii. 15; sym. by Isaac, see Isaac
- Jubilee Year, G iii. 39, iv. 27
- Judah, tribe of, G iv. 123
- Jupiter (planet), E ii. 75

INDEX

- Justice and Injustice, G i. 12, 49, 97, 98, 100, ii. 11, 36, 45, 48, 60, 67, 71, iii. 49, iv. 23, 26, 27, 64, 66, 68, 114, 115, 194, 235, E i. 3, 6, 12, ii. 4, 10, 19, 51, 112 (see also Equality); justice of God, see God
- Kadesh, name="holy" or "sacred," G iii. 36, iv. 59
- Keturah, name="incense-burning," G iv. 147; sym. smell, G iv. 147
- Kid, as sacrifice, E ii. 32; sym. character-traits, G iv. 200, E i. 8
- Kingship, G iv. 76, 140, 182, 206, E ii. 6, 72, 105
- Kinship, among men, E i. 2, ii. 35, 36; with God, E ii. 29
- Knops, see Lampstand
- Knowledge and Ignorance, G ii. 49, 69, iii. 2, 3, 27, 31-33, iv. 5, 14, 19, 22, 24, 46, 64, 68, 103, 138, 161, 168, 175, 226, 227, 232, 243, 244, E i. 16, ii. 7, 19, 25, 36, 51, 96; knowledge contrasted with thing known and act of knowing, E ii. 112 (see also Education, Wisdom)
- Kor (measure), G iii. 39
- Laban, name="whiteness," G iv. 117, 239, 243; sym. sense-perception, G iv. 117, 239
- Labour, two forms of (piety and humaneness), E ii. 108 (see also Training)
- Ladder, Jacob's, sym. ascent of soul, G iv. 29
- Ladles, see Table
- Lamb, sym. purity, E ii. 121; paschal, E ii. 32 (see also Paschal Sheep)
- Lamech, G i. 77
- Lamps, see Lampstand
- Lampstand in Tabernacle, sym. sense-perceptible heaven, E ii. 73-81, 83, 95, 103-106; its bases, E ii. 80; its branches, E ii. 74-77; its knops, E ii. 74; its lamps sym. planets or stars, E ii. 78, 104; its lilies sym. stars, E ii. 74, 76; its oil sym. wisdom, E ii. 103; its uplifters sym. stars, E ii. 80; weight of, E ii. 81
- Laughter, see Isaac, Joy
- Laws of Gentiles, E ii. 22
- Laws of Moses, gen., G, E passim; extend throughout nature, E ii. 59; incorruptible, E ii. 53; preservation and dissolution of, E ii. 41; world-wide purpose of, E ii. 42; written at God's command, E ii. 42, 43
- Laws of Nature, see Nature
- Leaf, see High Priest
- Learning, see Education
- Leaven, sym. pride, E i. 15, ii. 14

INDEX

- Lechery, see Sensual Pleasure
- Left Side, G iv. 126
- Leisegang, H., G iv. 138 n.,
E ii. 22 n.
- Leo, E ii. 76
- Levites, E i. 10
- Lewy, H., G ii. 68 n., 82 n.,
iv. 33 n., 51 n., Appendix
A passim
- Libation, lit. and fig., E ii. 71
- Libation-bowls, see Table
- Libra, E ii. 76
- Life, gen., G i. 52, 57, iii. 15, 57, iv. 1, 165, E i. 8, ii.
18, 20, 55; two forms of (contemplative and practical), E ii. 31; three forms of (contemplative, active, pleasurable), G
iv. 47; age and youth,
G iii. 11, 16, iv. 14, 84, 108, 120, 146, 152, 188, 196, 232, 236, E i. 4,
ii. 31, 32
- Light, lit. and fig., G ii. 42, 44, 72, 82, iii. 43, iv. 1, 4, 14, 18, 22, 30, 93, 94,
147, 149, 157, 193, 243,
E i. 13, 22, E ii. 7, 32, 44, 80, 103, 106
- Lightness, see Weight
- Lilies, see Lampstand
- Linen, sym. earth, E ii. 85, 107
- Lintel, sym. heart, E i. 12
- Logeion, see High Priest
- Logos of God : administrator of world, G
iv. 110, 111
all-powerful, E ii. 13
angel, G iv. 90, 91, E ii.
13, 16
- artificer, E ii. 53, 81, 122
blesses food, E ii. 18 bond of world, E ii. 89 (?), 118 curator of God's power,
E ii. 83 (?)
cutter of world, G iii. 23 disciplines wicked, G iii.
28, 30, iv. 62, E ii. 101
eternal, E ii. 117 (?)
form of forms, E ii. 124 foundation of world, E ii.
90 guardian of God's power,
E ii. 83 (?)
harmonizer of world, G iv.
110, 196, E ii. 68, 81, 90,
120
head of all things, E ii.
117 (?)
immaterial, E ii. 122 instrument in creation, G
ii. 62, E ii. 42, 94
intercessor, G iv. 114 (?)
invisible, E ii. 81
judge of world, G iii. 27,
E ii. 13
measurer of world, G i. 4,
iv. 23
mediator, E ii. 13, 68, 94, 118 minister of God, G iii. 34,
iv. 114 (?)
model of human mind, G
ii. 62
overseer of God's power,
E ii. 83 (?)
physician, G ii. 29 n., iii.
28, 51
place of God, E ii. 39 profits the mind, G iv. 215 prophet of God, E ii. 16

INDEX

- seminal substance, E ii. 68 source of two chief powers of God, E ii. 68 steward of God, E ii. 39 teacher, G iv. 91
 tetrad, E ii. 94
 unity of, G iv. 60
 wise, E ii. 13
 word of God, G iii. 15, iv.
   49, 51, 59, 108, 196, 223,
   E i. 14, 15, ii. 13, 68 (?), 111
- Lord, see God
 Lot, sym. progressive man,
   G iv. 31-55 passim
 Lot's Daughters, sym. consent or counsel, G iv. 55 Lot's Wife, sym. sense-perception, G iv. 52 Love, erotic, E ii. 13; of fellow-man, G i. 17, iv.
   2, 29, 52, 142, 193, 200,
   219, E i. 5, ii. 11, 12, 69,
   108; of God, G iii. 21,
   iv. 20, 139, E ii. 12
   (as implied in adjective
   "God-loving" passim);
   maternal, E ii. 8; of self, G i. 62, iv. 194, E ii.
   3; of virtue, see Virtue;
   of wisdom, see Wisdom
 Lynceus, G ii. 72
- Macedonian Empire, G iv. 43 Mahalath, name="from the beginning," G iv. 245;
   sym. sensual pleasure,
   G iv. 245
 Male and Female, see Active, Number-symbolism,
   Woman Mambre (Bibl. Mamre), name="from sight," G
   iv. 1; sym. mind, G iv. 1 Man, contrasted with animals, see Animals; contrasted with God, G ii.
   54, 62, E ii. 33, 76; contrasted with woman, see Woman; earthly man,
   moulded by God, G i.
   4, 8, 28, 51, 87, ii. 17, 56,
   66, iv. 164, E ii. 46;
   heavenly man, made in God's image, G i. 4, 8, 93, ii. 56, iv. 164, E ii.
   47; mixture of opposites, G iv. 203, 206, 220;
   sym. mind, see Mind;
   "rational, mortal animal," G iii. 43; "tame
   animal by nature," E i.
   16
 Manna, sym. spiritual food,
   G iv. 102
 Marriage, see Family, Number-symbolism
 Mars (planet), E ii. 75
 Matter, gen., G, E passim;
   "mother of created things," G iv. 160; of sublunary elements is one, E ii. 88
 Measure and Measuring, G
   iv. 8, 102, E ii. 33, 52,
   82; sym. by Logos, see Logos
 Medicine and Medical Care,
   G ii. 41, 79, iii. 25, 48,
   iv. 35, 45, 47, 76, 147,
   200, 201, 204, 218, E ii.
   25
 Megalopolis, i.e. the world,
   E i. 1, ii. 42

INDEX

- Memory, G iv. 45; sym. by camel, see Camel
- Menander, quoted, G iv. 120
- Mercury (planet), E ii. 75
- Mercy of God, see God
- Mercy-seat, see Ark of Tabernacle
- Mesopotamia, sym. external causes, G iv. 93; boundary between virtue and vice, G iv. 243
- Methuselah, G i. 82
- Middle Way, G iv. 177, 239, E i. 6, 15
- Migration of the soul, see Soul
- Mind, usu. presented as sovereign part of soul, contrasted with sense-perception and passion, G i. 11, 21, 25, 46, 50, 79, 94, ii. 18, 27, 34, 49, 54, 56, 59, 66, iii. 3, 42, 43, 46, 52, 57, iv. 1, 8, 14, 15, 22, 26, 29, 32, 44, 45, 52, 53, 56-58, 73, 74, 82, 85, 90, 92, 94, 96, 98, 112, 117, 121, 129, 140, 157, 163, 179, 183, 189, 191, 198, 215, 216, 218, 234, 242, 244, E i. 3, 8, 12, 22, ii. 3, 27, 50, 55, 96, 100, 111, 115, 124; sym. by Moses, E ii. 27-49 passim; unites intelligibles, E ii. 111
- Mishnah, E ii. 105 n.
- Mixing-bowls of Tabernacle, sym. mixed natures, E ii. 33, 76
- Mixture of elements, etc., E ii. 14, 33, 37, 63, 76, 88, 121
- Moab, name="from my father," G iv. 57; sym. products of mind, G iv. 57, 58
- Moderation, see Sensual Pleasure, Virtue
- Monad, archetype of one, G iv. 110; as one, see Number-symbolism
- Moon, G ii. 33, iv. 27, 151, E i. 1, 9, ii. 75
- Morning, sym. light, E i. 22
- Moses, sym. God-loving mind, E ii. 27-49 passim; ascends Mt. Sinai, G i. 86, iv. 29, E ii. 27-49; mediates between God and Israel, E ii. 49
- Attributes:
- all-wise, E ii. 74
  - chief messenger, G iv. 8
  - divine, E ii. 54
  - holy, E ii. 54
  - holy father, G iv. 132 (?)
  - interpreter, G iii. 10
  - legislator, G ii. 64, iii. 48, iv. 90, 172, 244
  - prophet, G i. 86 ("proto-prophet"), iii. 10, iv. 8 ("chief prophet"), 29, 90, 123, 245, E i. 12, 43, 44, 46, 52, 67, 90
  - teacher, G iii. 8, iv. 167 (of Greek philosophers), 218 (of humaneness)
  - theologian, G ii. 33, 59, 64, 81, iii. 5, 20, 38, iv. 137, E ii. 37, 74, 87, 88, 108, 117
- Motherhood, see Family
- Mount Sinai, see Sinai

INDEX

- Mountains, sym. senses, G ii. 21; sym. wisdom, G iv. 46, 49
- Mourning, G iv. 73, E i. 3
- Mouth, organ of food and speech (q.v.), E ii. 118
- Muses, G i. 6
- Music and Musical Harmony, G iii. 3, 38, 48, iv. 27, 29, 76, 95, E ii. 37, 38, 93 (?), 103, 120
- Mysteries, G iv. 8, 35 (?), 110, E i. 13 n., ii. 52
- Nadab, name = "voluntary," E ii. 27; sym. voluntary vision, E ii. 27
- Nahor, name = "rest of light," G iv. 93; sym. wisdom, G iv. 93
- Nakedness, lit. and fig., G i. 30, 40, ii. 69, 70, 72, iv. 22
- Names, gen., G i. 20-22, iii. 43, 67, iv. 194, 243, E ii. 66
- Nature, beauty of, G iv. 245; conceals itself, G iv. 1, 21, 22; contemplation of, E ii. 31; convention and nature, G iv. 184; female and passive, G iii. 3; God and nature, G iii. 41, iv. 21, 42, 51, 87, 88, E ii. 51, 68; harmony and order in nature, G ii. 55, iii. 5, 15, 38, iv. 23, 29, 46, 110, 114, E ii. 58, 59, 68, 74, 76, 78, 118, 120; healer, G ii. 41; law of nature, G iv. 90, 152, 184, 205, E ii. 19, 59 (?); mother and provider, G ii. 60, 80, E ii. 12; perfection of, E ii. 1; self-producing, G iii. 39; teacher, G iii. 27, 54, 59; two species of (corporeal and incorporeal), E ii. 54
- Navigation, G iv. 76, 90, 218, 236, E ii. 44, 55
- Necessity, G i. 21, 68, ii. 45, 50, iv. 29, 34, 74, 133, 162, 222, E ii. 58, 89 (?)
- Night, as time for sacrifice, E i. 11, 13, 18
- Nilsson, M. P., E ii. 76 n.
- Nimrod, name = "Ethiopian," G ii. 82; sym. evil, G ii. 82
- Noah, name = "rest," G i. 87; name = "righteous," G ii. 45; birthday of, G i. 87, ii. 33; drunkenness of, G ii. 69-73; as husbandman, G ii. 66 (see also Ark of Noah)
- Nocturnal Emission, E ii. 15 (?)
- Nose, G i. 77, ii. 3, iii. 5, 32, 239 (see also Smell)
- Number-symbolism, angular and oblong, G i. 83, 91, ii. 5, 45, iii. 49, 56, E ii. 93, 111; digits, G i. 83; equal and unequal, G i. 91, ii. 5, 14, iii. 49; odd and even (or male and female), G i. 83, 91, ii. 14, iii. 38, 49, 56, 61, E ii. 33, 46; ratio, G iv. 27; salutary, G iv. 27

INDEX

Symbolism of individual numbers :

one, G i. 15, 91, ii. 5, 45, iii. 43, 56, iv. 110, 118, 144, E ii. 29, 68, 81, 93 two, G i. 15, ii. 12, iv. 30, 110, E ii. 29, 93, 100 three, G ii. 5, iii. 3, 61, iv. 8, 30, 93, E ii. 100 four, G i. 12, 83, iii. 12, 49, 56, iv. 195, E ii. 27, 87, 93, 97, 99 five, G iv. 110, 151, E ii. 97, 99 six, G i. 91, ii. 17, 42, 45, 46, iii. 38, 49, iv. 164, E ii. 46, 87 seven, G i. 77, ii. 12, 41, 47, 56, 78, iii. 39, 49, iv. 71, 151, E ii. 27, 46, 68, 78, 87 eight, G i. 91, ii. 5, iii. 49, 52 nine, G iv. 110 ten, G i. 77, 87, ii. 32, 40, iii. 12, 17, 39, 56, iv. 27, 93, 110, 118, 189, E ii. 27, 84 twelve, G iii. 59 thirteen, G iii. 61
fifteen, G i. 91, ii. 21
twenty, G iv. 27, 71 twenty-four, G ii. 5
twenty-five, G iv. 151
twenty-eight, E ii. 87 thirty, G i. 91, ii. 5, iv. 27
thirty-six, G iii. 49, 56 forty, G i. 25, ii. 14, iv. 154, E ii. 49, 87
forty-five, G iv. 27
fifty, G ii. 5, 78, iv. 27, E ii. 93

fifty-six, G i. 91
sixty, G ii. 17, iv. 164, E ii. 81 sixty-four, G i. 91, iii. 49, 56 seventy, G i. 77, iv. 151, E ii. 27 seventy-five, E ii. 100 eighty, G ii. 14, iii. 38 ninety, G iii. 56
ninety-nine, G iii. 39, 61
one hundred, G i. 83, iii. 39, 56, 61, iv. 71, 151, 189 one hundred and twenty, G i. 91 two hundred and eighty, E ii. 87 three hundred, G ii. 5 three hundred and sixty-five, G i. 84 six hundred, G ii. 17
ten thousand, G iii. 56
Nut, sym. zodiac, E ii. 76

Oak, sym. health, G iv. 1 ; sym. pride, G iv. 161, 206, 207 Oath, G iv. 86, 88, 180
Obedience, E ii. 13, 16
Oil, olive-oil sym. virtue, G ii. 42, iv. 1 ; olive-oil alone suitable for temple-service, E ii. 33, 103
Olympians, G iv. 6
Opinion, as opposed to knowledge and truth, G i. 39, iii. 31, 33, 47, iv. 24, 25, 32, 100, 121, 131, 139, 155, 185, 213, E i. 20, ii. 5, 14, 17, 36, 96, 107, Oracles, of pagans, E i. 20
Orators, G iii. 43, iv. 104, 152

INDEX

- Order, in age, nature, number, rank, time, G i. 64, ii. 45, 47, 74, iii. 49, iv. 12, 84, 122, 157, 199, 215, 218, 230, E i. 1, ii. 27, 46, 58
- Orphans, E ii. 3, 4
- Oryx, permitted for food, E ii. 101
- Ox, as sacrifice, E ii. 101; sym. earth, G iii. 3, 7
- Pain, see Pleasure
- Painting, G iv. 243
- Palm (measure), E ii. 111 n.
- Papyrus, E ii. 41
- Paradise, G i. 6-15, 34, 56; sym. immortal virtues, G iv. 51
- Pascha, name = "pass over," E i. 4
- Paschal Lamb or Sheep, E i. 3, 7-18; sym. spiritual change, E i. 4
- Pascher, J., G iv. 110 n.
- Passion, see Fear, Grief, Sensual Pleasure
- Passover, E i. 1-23; of the soul, E i. 4
- Patriarchs (phylarchs), sym. by stones of Logeion, E ii. 14; sym. constellations, E ii. 14
- Patterns, see Archetypes, Incorporality
- Peace and War, lit. and fig., G iii. 8, iv. 90, 197, 206, 218, 228, 229, 235, E ii. 11, 21, 44, 64, 68, 102
- Pederasty, G iv. 37
- Pentad, see Number-symbolism
- Pentecostal Year, see Jubilee Year
- Perfection, G i. 97, iii. 10, 12, 20, 32, iv. 30, 34, 47, 60, 66, 133, 164, 175, 177, 191, 205, 213, E i. 1, 8, ii. 60, 69, 76; sym. by Abraham in contrast to Lot, the progressive man, G iv. passim (see also Progress)
- Peripatetics, G iii. 16 (see also Aristotle)
- Perseverance, see Constancy
- Persians, empire of, G iv. 43
- Pharan (Bibl. Bered), name = "hail" or "dots," G iii. 36
- Philistines, name = "foreigners" (cf. LXX allophylōi), G iv. 177, 191
- Philosophy (Gr. philosophia), G i. 57, ii. 41, iii. 5, 33, 43, iv. 1, 21, 22, 42, 76, 87, 89, 93, 97, 104, 167, 191, 192, 241, E ii. 13, 20, 103, 117, 118, 124 n. (see also Wisdom)
- Phylarchs (patriarchs), E ii. 14
- Piety and Impiety, G i. 10, 55, 66, 76, 100, ii. 13, 18, 23, 43, 48, 61, 70, 82, iii. 1, 28, 43, iv. 1, 2, 10, 12, 19, 29, 42, 44, 49, 51, 53, 60, 67, 84, 133, 200, E i. 1, 7, 10, 12, 21, ii. 15, 26, 27, 31, 45, 47, 83, 99, 101, 105, 115; piety as queen of virtues, E ii. 38
- Pillar, sym. opinion, E ii. 17;

INDEX

- pillars of Tabernacle, E ii. 88, 93, 97
- Pillars of Heracles, G ii. 28
- Pisces, E ii. 76
- Pishon, name = "frugality," G i. 12; sym. prudence, G i. 13
- Pity, G iv. 233
- Place, gen., G iv. 187, E ii. 39, 40
- Planets, see Earth, Heaven, Moon, Sun
- Plato, quoted or paraphrased, G i. 6 (Tim. 92 c), iii. 3 (Phaedr. 246 E), iv. 51 n. (Phaedr. 246 E), 90 n. (Ion 534 B), 159 n. (Phaedo 60 B), 104 n. (Tim. 55 c), E i. 7 n. (Tim. 90 A ff.), 12 n. (passim), ii. 81 n. (Tim. 33), ii. 118 (Tim. 75 D-E), 124 n.
- Pleasure and Pain, G i. 41, 56, 77, ii. 46, iii. 51, iv. 81, 101, 225, 238, E ii. 71, 105
- Plinth, E ii. 37
- Polytheism, G iv. 2, E ii. 2, 36
- Pomegranates, see High Priest
- Possession (of property), G iii. 37, iv. 121, 134, 148, 172, 230 (in sense of possession by spirit, see Inspiration)
- Post, L. A., G iv. 120 n., 151 n., 152 n., E ii. 81 n., 83 n.
- Poverty and Riches, lit. and fig., G iv. 230, E ii. 10
- Powers of God, see God
- Practiser, see Jacob
- Praechter, K., Appendix A passim
- Praise, E ii. 6, 107
- Prayer, G i. 70, iv. 19, 25, 26, 28, 53, 70, 73, 185, 198, 218, 233, E ii. 2, 49
- Préaux, C., E ii. 80 n.
- Prediction, see Prophecy
- Pride and Humility, G ii. 24, iii. 25, 30, 47, 48, 56, iv. 15, 19, 28, 48, 100, 133, 142, 149, 156, 161, 224, 237, E i. 6, 13, 15, ii. 14, 25, 37, 54
- Priests, E i. 10, ii. 100, 105; Israel as nation of priests, E i. 10
- Primogeniture, G i. 81, iii. 49, iv. 153, 160, 168, 172, 206 n., 224, 229
- Princes, sym. sensual men, G iv. 217
- Procopius, Appendix A passim
- Procreation, lit. and fig., G ii. 49, 56, iii. 18, 21, 47, 48, 56, 61, iv. 56, 86, 154, 210 (?), 214, E ii. 8, 19 (see also Conception)
- Progress, Progressive Man, G iii. 18, 27, 31, 48, iv. 12, 30, 31, 34, 46, 47, 49, 51-55, 66, 101, 108, 137, 175, 188, 190, 191, 198, 200, 215, 229, 243, E i. 3, 7-18, ii. 20; sym. by Abimelech, G iv. 188; sym. by Jacob, G iv. passim; sym. by Lot, G iv. 31-55 passim; sym.

INDEX

- by paschal lamb or sheep, E i. 3, 7-18
- Progression (in music), see Music
- Promise of God, G iii. 55-58
- Prophecy, Prophets, G iv. 90, 125, 138, 196, 212, E ii. 27, 29, 43, 49, 67; prophetic souls, E i. 4 (see also Inspiration, Logos)
- Prostration before God, G iv. 3, 78, 113, 130, E ii. 83
- Providence, see God
- Prudence, see Virtue
- Ptolemy, Claudius, E ii. 81 n.
- Punishment for Sin, G i. 35, 77, ii. 14, 43, 54, 77, iii. 52, 56, iv. 4, 8, 25, 26, 50-52, 70, E i. 4
- Puppet-show, G iii. 48
- Purity, see Holiness, Mixture
- Purple, sym. water, E ii. 85
- Pythagoras, Pythagoreans, G i. 17, 99, iii. 16, 49, iv. 8, 27 n., E i. 23 n., ii. 33 n. (see also Number-symbolism)
- Quality and Quantity, G iv. 181
- Quintessence, see Elements
- Rainbow, G ii. 64
- Ram, as sacrifice, E ii. 101; sym. air or reason, G iii. 3, 7
- Ram (constellation), head of zodiac, E i. 1
- Raven, sym. wickedness, G ii. 36-39
- Raw Meat, sym. savagery, E i. 16
- Reason, see Mind
- Rebekah, name = "constancy," G iv. 97, 188, 199; sym. constancy or perseverance, G iv. 92-188 passim
- Red, sym. shameful passion, G iv. 170
- Reformation of Character, G iv. 12, 233, 245, E i. 8, 13, 15, 16, ii. 107
- Refuge, Cities of, G iii. 52
- Reitzenstein, R., E ii. 38 n., 39 n.
- Relaxation, see Tension
- Repentance, G i. 82, 91, ii. 42, 43, 54, iv. 180, 233, E i. 13, 15, 16
- Rest and Movement (incl. Change), G i. 87, iii. 39, 62, iv. 1, 93, E ii. 55, 70, 83, 91, 106
- Reuben (tribe), G iv. 123
- Revelation and Truth (Urim and Thummim), see High Priest
- Revenge, E ii. 11.
- Reverence, see Piety, Prostration
- Righteousness, see Justice
- Rivers of Paradise, G i. 12
- Road to Virtue, G iii. 27, iv. 108, 125, 131, 226, 242, E i. 19, ii. 13, 26
- Roasting, see Food
- Robbins, F. E., G ii. 5 n., E ii. 81 n.
- Royal Highway, see Road to Virtue
- Ruddiness, sym. savagery (in Esau), G iv. 160

INDEX

- Sabbath, E i. 9
 Sabbatical Year, G iii. 39
 Sacrifice, lit. and fig., G i. 62,
 ii. 52, iii. 3, 48, 102, E i.
 3, 7, 10, 12, 17, 18, ii. 14, 31, 32, 35, 50, 99, 101 ;
 sym. communion, E ii.
 69 ; sym. soul, G iv. 28,
E i. 11, 98, 100 ; equality of, E ii. 99 (see also Altar, Paschal Lamb)
 Sagittarius, E ii. 76
 Salt, sym. communion, E ii.
 69 ; sym. unfruitfulness,
G iv. 52
 Salutory Offerings (Bibl.
 "peace-offerings"), see
 Sacrifice
 Salvation, G i. 71, ii. 11, 22,
 25, 27, iii. 52, 57, iv. 7, 26, 27, 44, 45, 49-51, 54,
 130, 198, 233, E ii. 43,
 64
 Sanctuary, see Holy of Holies
 Sapphire, as colour of heaven,
E ii. 37
 Sarah, name="ruler," G
 iii. 52, iv. 122 ; sym.
 virtue and wisdom, G ii.
 26, iii-iv passim
 Saturn (planet), E ii. 75
 Scarlet, sym. fire, E ii. 85
 Schmidt, Helmut, E ii. 124 n.
 School-studies, see Education
 Science, see Knowledge
 Scorpio, E ii. 76
 Scriptures, gen., G, E passim ; beauty of, G iv.
 196, 223 ; truth of, G
 iv. 168
 Scylla, G i. 76
- Seals, lit. and fig., E ii. 114, 122, 124 (see also Impressions)
 Seasons, see Time
 Sediment in Temple-oil, sym.
 impurity, E ii. 103
 Seeing, see Sight
 Seminal Principle or Substance, G ii. 16, 42, E ii.
 68 (see also God, Logos)
 Sense-perception, G i. 25, 35, 37, 38, 47-49, 52, 77, 94,
 ii. 3, 21, 29, 34, iii. 3, 5, 22, 32, 41, 51, iv. 1, 3, 11, 52, 88, 110, 117-121,
 189, 203, 215, 239, 240,
 243, E i. 4, 8, 22, ii. 3, 13, 16, 52-59, 69, 82, 93-100, 106, 112, 121 ; good senses v. bad senses, G
 iv. 147 ; sense as servant
 of mind, G iv. 215-216 ;
 (see also Hearing, Sight, Smell, Taste, Touch) Sensual Pleasure (Gr. hēdonē, vel sim.), G i. 31, 41, 44,
 46, 51, 99, ii. 7, 8, 12,
 18, 22, 29, 37, 46, 49, 56, 57, 59, 61, 68, 69,
 iii. 10, 21, 27, 48, 51, 52,
 61, iv. 15, 16, 33-42, 53,
 66, 77, 79, 80, 86, 90,
 99, 112, 135, 152, 154,
 159, 168, 170, 173, 182,
 183, 185, 191, 198, 201,
 206, 210, 224, 230, 234,
 238, 240, 241, 245, E i.
 8, 15, 19, ii. 2, 3, 12, 14,
 18, 31, 51, 100, 118
 Serpent, sym. sensual pleasure, G i. 31-36, 47, 48,
 ii. 56, 57

INDEX

- Servants and Masters, see Freedom
- Seth, name = "one who drinks water," G i. 78 ; sym. virtuous soul, G i. 78, 81
- Sheep, as sacrifice, E i. 7, ii. 32, 101 ; Paschal sheep sym. progress, E i. 3, 7-18
- Shem, sym. good, G i. 88, ii. 79
- Shoes, sym. road to virtue, E i. 19
- Shoulder, sym. labour, G iv. 98, E ii. 108
- Shoulder-pieces, see High Priest
- Shur, name = "wall," G iii. 27, iv. 59
- Sight, G i. 77, ii. 3, 21, 34, iii. 5, 32, 51, iv. 1, 3, 11, E ii. 3, 39, 51, 52, 82, 112 (see also Eye)
- Silence, G iv. 108, E ii. 118
- Silenus, G iv. 99
- Silver, sym. sense-perception, E ii. 102
- Similarity and Dissimilarity, E ii. 33
- Sin, G i. 65, 68, 73, ii. 14, iii. 40, 41, iv. 60, 65, 66, 70, 73, 92, 152, 190, 245, E i. 8, 15, 32, ii. 41
- Sinai, name = "inaccessible," E ii. 45 ; as scene of revelation, E ii. 27-49
- Sin-offering, see Sacrifice
- Sirens, G iii. 3
- Skeptics, G iii. 33
- Slavery, see Freedom
- Sleep and Sleeplessness, lit. and fig., G i. 24, iii. 9, 55, iv. 2, 62, 94, E ii. 15, 82
- Smell, G ii. 3, 21, iii. 5, 51, iv. 1, 11, 52, 214 (see also Nose)
- Smoothness, of Jacob's skin, sym. frugality, virtue, G iv. 201, 204, 206
- Sobriety, see Drunkenness
- Socrates, quoted, G ii. 3, iii. 3 (Phaedr. 246 ε) (see also Plato)
- Sodom, name = "blindness," G ii. 43, iv. 23, 31 ; name = "sterility," G iv. 23, 31 ; sym. sense-perception, G iv. 52
- Sodomites, sym. bad traits, G iv. 36, 38, 51, 52
- Sojourn, usu. of mind or soul in body, G iii. 10, 45, iv. 42, 45, 59, 74, 178, 185, 187, 195, E ii. 2
- Solstice, see Equinox
- Sons of God, see Angels
- Sophists and Sophistry, G iii. 19, 23-25, 27, 33, 35, iv. 87, 88, 92, 95, 104, 107, 221
- Soul, gen., G i. 10, 11, 78, ii. 29, iii. 42, 48, 54, iv. 1, 214, 230, 243, E i. 17, ii. 35, 39, 71, 80 ; body and soul, see Body ; eightfold soul (reason, five senses, organ of reproduction, speech—as in Stoic theory), G i. 75, ii. 12, iii. 4, iv. 110 ; five-fold soul (rational, irascible, appetitive, nutri-

INDEX

- tive, sense-perceptive—
as in Aristotelian theory),
G iv. 186; harmony of soul, E ii. 20, 38; incorporeal soul, see In-corporeality; migration of soul, E ii. 40; moved by itself only, E ii. 120;
origin of soul in wisdom, E ii. 36; threefold soul (rational, appetitive, spirited—as in Platonic theory), G ii. 59, iv. 216,
E i. 12; twofold soul (rational and irrational),
G iv. 112, 117, 159, 218, 220, E i. 23, 33, 53 (see also Mind, Sense-perception)
- South, E ii. 101; south celestial sphere, E ii. 79
- Span (measure), E ii. 111 n.
- Speech (incl. logos prophori-kos), G i. 32, 77, ii. 42,
60, iii. 43, iv. 8, 13, 85,
88-90, 96, 102, 107, 108,
120, 132, 140, 210, 214,
221, E i. 17, ii. 5, 16, 34, 44, 110, 111, 116, 118;
speech as composed of letters, syllables, words, discourses, E ii. 111
- Spirit, divine spirit, G i. 90,
ii. 28, 59, iv. 5, E ii. 33 n.;
holy spirit, E ii. 33 (?);
vital spirit, G ii. 8, iii. 3
- Spring (of water), see Fountain
- Spring (season), see Equinox, Time
- Square, see Number-symbolism
- Staehele, K., G ii. 5 n., iii.
12 n., 38 n., 49 n., iv.
92 n., 110 n., E ii. 84 n.,
97 n., 100 n., Appendix
A passim
- Staff, sym. rule, E i. 19
- Stars, see Heaven
- Statecraft, G iv. 165, 218,
236, E ii. 42, 44
- Statius, E ii. 76 n. (Theb. iv.
225)
- Stein, Edmund, E ii. 62 n.
- Sterility, see Barrenness,
Sodom
- Stoics, G iii. 3 n., iv. 26 n., 46 n., 85 n., 145 n., 196
n., E ii. 110 n., 120,
124 n.
- Stole, see High Priest
- Stone Tablets, E ii. 41
- Stones, of altar at Sinai, E ii.
30; of shoulder-pieces of high priest, see High Priest
- Strabo, G iv. 1 n.
- Strangers, see Foreigners
- Sublunary World, see Elements
- Sulphur, G iv. 51, 52
- Summer, see Equinox and Solstice, Time
- Sun, sym. wisdom, G i. 10, 57, 84, ii. 40, iii. 14, iv.
1, 51, 94, 140, 158, E ii.
32, 51; movements of,
G iii. 3, E i. 1, ii. 75, 76, 112
- Supplanter, see Jacob
- Surface (in geometry), E ii.
61, 121
- Sword, G i. 57
- Symbolism, gen., G, E pas-

INDEX

- sim* ; nature of, E ii. 52, 71
- Sympathy, see Nature, harmony in
- Tabernacle, sym. corporeal and sense-perceptible world, E ii. 49-106 ; eternity of, E ii. 53 ; parts and furniture, see Altar, Ark, Bar, Curtains, Holy of Holies, Holy Place, Lampstand, Pillar, Table, Veils
- Table in Tabernacle, sym. corporeality and sense-perception, E ii. 69-72, 83, 95 ; its censers, E ii. 71 ; its ladles, sym. drink, E ii. 71 ; its cups, sym. food, E ii. 71 ; its libation-bowls, E ii. 71 ; its wreathed wave, sym. change, E ii. 70
- Tablets, for writing, E ii. 41
- Talent (weight), sym. unity, E ii. 81
- Tartarus, G iv. 234, E ii. 40
- Tassels, see High Priest
- Taste, G i. 35, 77, ii. 3, 21, iii. 5, 51, iv. 1, 11, 52
- Taurus, E ii. 76
- Teaching, see Education
- Temple and Temple-service, G iv. 151, E i. 10, 12, ii. 30, 83, 105
- Tenses of Verbs, G iv. 166
- Tension and Relaxation, G iv. 29
- Tent of Testimony, see Tabernacle
- Testament, E ii. 106 (see also Covenant)
- Testimonies, placed in Ark, E ii. 59, 68, 106
- Testimony, in court, E ii. 9
- Tetrad, see Number-symbolism
- Thanksgiving to God (incl. Thank-offering), G i. 64, ii. 50, 53, iv. 26, 113, 130, 194, E i. 7, ii. 31, 69, 72, 83, 99, 102
- Theatre, G iv. 69, 172, 201, 204
- Theodoret, Appendix A passim
- Theologians, see Philosophy
- Thigh, sym. stability, G iv. 86
- Thought (Gr. logos endiathetos), E ii. 110, 111, 116 (see also Mind)
- Tigris, sym. rage, G i. 12, 13, iv. 243
- Time, gen., G i. 100, ii. 47, iii. 60, iv. 122, 189, E ii. 20 ; came into being with creation of world, E i. 1 ; as measured by days, months, years, seasons, G ii. 14, 17, 33, 55, iii. 3, 5, 13, iv. 1, 12, 30, 51, 90, 150, 189, E i. 1, 8, ii. 56, 73, 76, 77, 112, 113 ; various systems of chronology, E i. 1
- Titans, G ii. 82
- Tithes, G iii. 39, 56, iv. 110 n.
- Tongue, G iii. 32, E ii. 118 (see also Speech, Taste)
- Touch, G i. 77, ii. 3, 21, iii. 5, 51, iv. 1, 11

INDEX

- Training of Body, G ii. 63, iii. 12, iv. 29, 210, 238, E i. 6, ii. 103 (see also Athletic Contests)
- Trance, see Sleep
- Tree of Knowledge, G i. 11
- Tree of Life, G i. 10, 55
- Triad, see Number-symbolism
- Tribes of Israel, E ii. 30 (see also Patriarchs)
- Trojan War, E ii. 102
- Truth, G iv. 69, 115, 125, 172, 194, 204, 206, 224, E i. 20, ii. 5, 9, 101, 107, 111, 116; truth of Scripture, G iv. 168 (see also Opinion)
- Tunic, of Adam and Eve, G i. 53
- Turner's Art, see Arts
- Unbounded, E i. 23
- Undergarment of high priest, see High Priest
- Understanding, see Mind
- Unity and Separateness, E ii. 33, 88, 118
- Unleavened Bread, sym. humility, E i. 15; festival of E i. 1 n.
- Uplifters, see Lampstand
- Urim and Thummim, see High Priest
- Valley, sym. state of soul, G iv. 195
- Veils of Tabernacle, veil between Holy Place and Holy of Holies, sym. four elements, E ii. 91-95, 106; veil at entrance to Tabernacle (called "covering"), E ii. 96, 97
- Venison, sym. character, G iv. 167, 222
- Venus (planet), E ii. 75
- Virginity, lit. and fig., G iv. 95, 99, 111, 119, 132, 143, 242, E ii. 3; virginity of number seven, see Number-symbolism
- Virgo, E ii. 76
- Virtue and Virtuous Man, gen., G i. 51, 75, 97, 100, ii. 12, 38-40, 59, 71, 76, 79, iii. 1, 8, 19-22, 27, 30, 40, 48, 51, 54, 60, 61, iv. 2, 6-16, 20, 22, 45, 61, 63, 69, 73, 80, 84, 92, 116, 129, 133, 134, 144-148, 152, 157, 166, 167, 172, 204, 206, 215, 217, 222, 225, 228, 231, 241, 243, E i. 6, 7, ii. 13, 23, 27, 38, 53, 54, 71, 103, 116; cardinal virtues (incl. two or more), G i. 12, 13, 99, ii. 23, iii. 53, iv. 11, 157, 159, 214, E i. 4, 8, ii. 12, 17, 112; beauty of virtue, G iv. 99; is motherless, G iv. 68; is older than vice, G iv. 51; is sister or brother of wisdom, G iv. 60, 66, 162
- Vision of God, see Sight
- Voice, see Speech; voice of God, see God
- Voluntary and Involuntary Acts, G i. 21, 66, 68, ii. 45, 50, 69, 79, iii. 51, 56, iv. 1, 34, 37, 64, 65, 70,

INDEX

- 73, 133, 180, 204, 211,
231, E i. 4, ii. 27, 36, 50
- Vowels, G iii. 43, iv. 117
- Wall, sym. protection, G iii.
27 (see also Shur)
- War, see Peace
- Wasp, sym. divinely sent power, E ii. 24
- Water, gen., E ii. 56, 85, 88, 90, 117-120; sym.
icosahedron, G iii. 49;
sym. health, E ii. 18;
sym. passion, G ii. 37;
sym. purification, G iv.
5; sym. wisdom, G iv.
94, 98, 102, 104-107 (see also Elements)
- Water-jar, sym. education,
G iv. 98, 100, 107; sym.
grace, G iv. 102
- Weaving, sym. elements, E
ii. 86
- Weight, E ii. 56, 57, 81, 118
- Wells, see Fountain
- Wendland, P., G ii. 64 n., iv.
68 n., 88 n., 145 n., E ii.
21 n., 49 n., Appendix
A passim
- West, G i. 7, E ii. 101
- Wheat, for sacrifice, E ii.
99
- Whiteness, see Laban
- Whole Burnt-offering, see Sacrifice
- Widows, E ii. 3, 4
- Wild Goat, permitted for food, E ii. 101
- Wilderness, E ii. 83; sym.
search for virtue, G iii.
27, iv. 31, E ii. 100
- Will, see Voluntary Acts
- Wine, G ii. 67, 68, iv. 9, 82,
E ii. 15, 18, 71, 118; as offering to God, E ii.
102 (see also Drunkenness)
- Wings, of powers of God,
E ii. 64
- Winter, see Equinox, Time
- Wisdom, gen., G i. 11, 56, 57,
90, ii. 12, 23, 40, 41, 44,
72, 75, 76, iii. 1, 21, 23-
25, 28, 29, 33, 35, 39,
42-44, 61, iv. 1, 2, 6, 8, 11, 14, 25, 28, 29, 33, 35, 41, 46, 47, 51, 53, 59, 60,
62, 66-68, 70, 73-76, 91,
93, 94, 101, 103, 104,
108, 116, 121, 125, 134,
138-140, 143, 158, 159,
165, 172, 182, 184, 188,
193, 194, 198, 201, 217,
218, 232, 233, 243, E i.
4, 8, 15, 23, ii. 12, 13, 15,
23, 36, 38, 44, 103, 108;
is beautiful, G iv. 99;
is daughter of God, G
iv. 97; is motherless,
G iv. 145; is mother of all things, G iv. 47; is spiritual light, E ii. 7;
is virgin, E ii. 3
- Wolfson, H. A., G i. 100 n., iv. 90 n., 125 n., 137 n., 147 n., 160 n., E i. 23 n., 90 n., 105 n.
- Woman, contrasted with man as symbol of sense contrasted with symbol of mind, G i. 25-29, 33, 37,
43, 45, 47, 52, ii. 14, 26,
49, iii. 3, 18, 47, iv. 15,
38, 52, 148, 160, E i. 7,

INDEX

- 8 ; female as imperfect male, E i. 7
- Wood, of ark, sym. incorruption, E ii. 53, 57
- Word of God, see God, Logos
- World, see Creation, Elements, Nature
- Wreathed Wave, see Ark, Table
- Writing, E ii. 41
- Year, name = "contains everything within itself," E i. 8, ii. 67 (see also Time)
- Youth, see Life
- Zillah, G i. 77
- Zodiac, G iv. 164, E ii. 75-78, 109, 112-114 (see also under names of Constellations)
- Zoor (Bibl. Zoar), name = "mountain," G iv. 50 : sym. salvation or destruction, G iv. 50